We appreciate the opportunity to comment on the Securities and Exchange Commission's Shareholder Report Simplification and Semi-Annual Reporting Option for Issuers proposal1 to permit public issuers to optionally elect semiannual financial reporting via Form 10-S (Proposal).
Nareit serves as the worldwide representative voice for real estate investment trusts (REITs) and real estate companies with an interest in U.S. income-producing real estate. Nareit members are REITs and other real estate companies throughout the world that own, operate, and finance income-producing real estate, as well as those firms and individuals who advise, study, and service those businesses.2
This comment letter has been prepared by a task force of Nareit members (task force), including members of Nareit's Accounting Committee and Best Financial Practices Council.
Nareit and its members are pleased to support this voluntary framework that would permit, but not require, REITs and other issuers to determine their optimal reporting frequency, aligning market disclosure with specific business cycles and capital structures. Nareit members strongly support the Proposal's explicit recognition that "one size does not fit all," which would permit REITs and other issuers to annually elect the reporting frequency best suited to their needs.
In our comments below, we elaborate on our reasons for supporting this Proposal and offer some suggestions we believe would help ensure its success if adopted as written.
1 Semiannual Reporting, Release No. 33-11414 (May 5, 2026); 91 Fed. Reg. 24968, 24987.
2 REITs of all types collectively own more than $4.5 trillion in gross assets across the U.S., with public REITs owning roughly $2.5 trillion in assets. U.S.-listed REITs have an equity market capitalization of approximately $1.6 trillion.
[Type here]
I. Nareit Members Support Optional Semiannual Reporting and the Proposal's Flexible Architecture
Nareit is pleased to endorse the Commission's Proposal to modernize the public company disclosure framework by creating an optional semiannual reporting track. The Proposal would permit, but not require, REITs and other issuers to eliminate two of their traditional quarterly Form 10-Q filings and introduce a single semiannual report on Form 10-S, alongside the annual Form 10-K. The Proposal would also permit REITs and other issuers to evaluate their reporting needs and annually elect whether to report quarterly or semiannually. Nareit's members believe that the Proposal's optionality and flexible, non-binding architecture are important and useful features that would enable REITs and other issuers to navigate changing capital requirements and shifting macroeconomic environments, and to manage other contingencies.
Like many other issuers, REITs would face competing considerations when choosing whether to opt for semiannual reporting or maintain quarterly reporting. Semiannual reporting may offer some REITs distinct advantages over quarterly reporting. The business of acquiring, owning, and operating real estate rarely aligns with strict 90-day windows. Semiannual reporting would permit some REITs to better focus on executing long-term strategies. Reducing the administrative and legal burdens of preparing two Form 10-Q filings in a year would not only free up management time but also allow some REITs to redirect some cost savings directly into income-producing properties. This could be particularly beneficial for smaller, less-established REITs.

However, we would also expect many REITs to maintain a quarterly reporting schedule. Some REITs, like other corporate issuers, have systems and accounting practices that would make transitioning away from Form 10-Q reporting impractical and/or reduce the cost savings associated with such a change.
Additionally, REITs have some features that add complexity to this decision:
- The REIT 90% Distribution Requirement: The Internal Revenue Rules governing the REIT structure require REITs to distribute at least 90% of their taxable income to shareholders annually3, which limits their ability to accumulate retained earnings. Consequently, many public REITs operate in a capital formation cycle, relying on at-the-market (ATM) equity programs and secondary offerings to fund property acquisitions. Underwriters, rating agencies, and institutional buyers may require, or be habituated to, the traditional Form 10-Q reporting.
- Debt and Credit Covenants: Some public REITs finance their operations with credit facilities, term loans, and unsecured bond indentures that legally mandate the delivery of quarterly financial statements and covenant compliance certificates.

3 Internal Revenue Code § 857(a)(1) (2018).

- Investor Relations and Transparency: REIT investors are often focused on income. These shareholders expect predictable, frequent updates on critical operational and performance metrics.

For these reasons, Nareit believes that by offering REITs and other issuers the option of semiannual reporting together with the flexibility to change course and shift from semiannually to quarterly (or the reverse), the Proposal would, if adopted, meaningfully update the SEC Disclosure regime in a manner that would offer REITs and other issuers many benefits.

II. Additional Nareit Suggestions

As noted above, Nareit's Task Force members also suggest some conforming regulatory changes that would enable more REITs and other issuers to take advantage of the option of semiannual reporting. These are below.

Harmonizing the PCAOB Staleness and Comfort Letter Rules

In response to the question posed in the release4, Nareit urges the SEC to coordinate with the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (PCAOB) to update its auditing standards concurrently with this Proposal. Under current rules, independent auditors may not provide negative assurance on subsequent financial changes if the review date is 135 days from the end of the most recent period for which the accountants have performed an audit or a review.

As noted above, REITs must distribute 90% of their taxable income each year. REITs often access equity and debt markets to fund their property portfolio operations. For some REITs, this 135-day rule would effectively undermine the benefits of the semiannual option. Conforming this PCAOB standard to accommodate the SEC's Proposal's deadlines would support REIT semiannual filers in conducting secondary offerings without delay.
Quarterly Earnings Releases and Maintaining the Furnished Framework
If the Proposal is adopted, we expect many REITs that elect the semiannual Form 10-S track to continue issuing voluntary, quarterly operational updates to their investors. These could take various forms and might cover REIT operational measures such as rental revenue, and metrics like leasing spreads and occupancy rates.
4 See Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; IC-36140 (May 5, 2026), at 41, 42 ("[T]o comport with semiannual reporting, are changes needed to PCAOB Auditing Standard 6101, Letters for Underwriters and Certain Other Requesting Parties, to permit independent public accountants to provide comfort letters expressing negative assurance on changes subsequent to the date and period of the latest financial statements included (or incorporated by reference) in the registration statement?").
1875 I Street, NW, Ste 500
Washington, D.C. 20006-5413
202-739-9400

We urge the Commission to permit issuers to continue to provide voluntary, non-GAAP operational measures (such as Funds From Operations, or FFO) in interim quarters without triggering the full, costly burden of a formal Regulation G reconciliation against unreviewed financial statements.
We note that the Commission has requested comment on whether to require auditor review of voluntary first- and third-quarter earnings releases and whether to require Item 2.02 Form 8-Ks as "filed" rather than "furnished."5 We urge the SEC to maintain the foundational distinction between "furnished" and "filed" financial disclosures for these interim updates. Forcing issuers to file these voluntary updates under Section 18 of the Exchange Act, or requiring full GAAP reconciliations to non-GAAP measures, would expand issuer liability and may either discourage the adoption of semiannual reporting or discourage those who do from communicating with their investors.
Addressing Investor Signaling Concerns
Some market participants in the REIT sector have expressed concern that the ability to switch between quarterly and semiannual reporting could inadvertently create investor confusion or be misconstrued as an adverse "signal."
For instance, an investor-facing REIT that unexpectedly switches from semiannual back to quarterly reporting—or vice versa—might face market speculation regarding its financial health, upcoming asset impairments, or unannounced capital raises. To mitigate this risk and ensure market stability, we suggest that the final rule offer issuers the opportunity to provide an explanation in their Form 10-K when changing their reporting frequency.

Conclusion
With its optional, flexible framework, the Commission's Proposal balances several operational issues that REITs and other issuers face. If adopted, the Proposal would provide REITs and other issuers with the opportunity to elect to focus on a longer-term horizon while preserving the option of quarterly reporting for REITs and other issuers that believe it best serves their companies and investors.
5 See Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; IC-36140 (May 5, 2026), at 37-38 ("…should we amend the Form 8-K requirements so that Item 2.02 Form 8-K submissions are "filed," not "furnished," for semiannual filers thereby subjecting the earnings release to additional liability provisions, such as Exchange Act Section 18 (and Securities Act Section 11 if incorporated into a Securities Act registration statement), given that investors could rely more heavily on earnings releases by semiannual filers due to the less frequent interim reporting by such filers as compared to quarterly filers?").

We commend the SEC for proposing a flexible rule that respects corporate diversity and encourages long-term capital formation.
Respectfully submitted,
Steven A. Wechsler
President & CEO, Nareit
1875 I Street, NW, Ste 500
Washington, D.C. 20006-5413
202-739-9400
July 6, 2026
Page 5

Steven Rothstein, Chief Program Officer & Jim Coburn, Senior Manager, Disclosure and Regulation, Ceres — Jul 6, 2026
July 6, 2026
Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, NE
Washington, DC 20549-1090
Re: File No. S7-2026-15: Semiannual Reporting
Dear Secretary Countryman:
Ceres is writing in opposition to the SEC's proposed rule, Semiannual Reporting, File No. S7-2026-15, because it would reduce disclosure of material financial risks, harming investors. We support investors' views that 10-Q reporting provides valuable material risk information and add additional evidence about climate-related financial impacts that companies already disclose in 10-Q filings.

Ceres is a nonprofit advocacy organization with over 35 years of experience working to accelerate the transition to a cleaner, more just, and resilient economy. Our Investor Network, Company Network, and Policy Network include many large U.S. institutional investors and large companies. Drawing on our decades of expertise, we support companies and investors with integrating responsible business strategies and managing financial sustainability issues critical to protecting portfolio value. The Ceres Accelerator for Sustainable Capital Markets aims to transform the practices and policies that govern capital markets by engaging federal and state regulators, financial institutions, investors, and corporate boards to address weather-driven risk as a systemic financial risk. The comments provided herein represent only the opinions of Ceres, and do not necessarily imply endorsement by each member of our Investor, Company, or Policy Networks.
The SEC's proposed rule is, in effect, proposing a switch from the current minimum quarterly reporting requirement to a minimum requirement of one interim semiannual report on Form 10-S plus an annual report on Form 10-K. The issuer's choice of either semiannual or quarterly reporting would be entirely voluntary. Companies would select their choice for the following fiscal year on their Form 10-K filing.
SEC question no. 22 asks, "Would the option for semiannual reporting result in an overall reduction in material information for investors?"
Yes, the semiannual reporting option would result in an overall reduction in material information for investors, and therefore should not be an option for issuers.
Semiannual reporting would result in fewer mandatory periodic updates in the robust format of Form 10-Q, which includes Financial Statements, Management's Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations (MD&A), Legal Proceedings, Risk Factors, and other important Items. The semiannual option will reduce the ability of investors to compare developments between issuers, since some will be providing information quarterly in a standardized format and others will not. In cases when a company switches from quarterly to semiannual reporting, it will eliminate the ability of investors to compare a single issuers' performance from quarter to previous quarter, and to do a year-over-year quarterly comparison.
Ceres Headquarters: 99 Chauncy Street, Boston, MA 02111 California Office: 369 Pine Street, Suite 620, San Francisco, CA 94104
ceres.org
How semiannual reporting harms investors
We agree with the view of SEC Investor Advisory Committee Investor as Owner subcommittee members that the proposed rule would harm investors. As discussed in their June 4, 2026 draft recommendation, quarterly reporting allows investor reallocation of capital, results in a strong investor response (shown by increase in trading volume), avoids a potential reduction in returns that could result from remaining invested in poorer performing companies, results in a lower cost of capital for companies that perform well.1 Furthermore, research shows that semiannual reporting harms investors: "An extensive body of research shows that reducing the frequency of mandatory public company disclosures negatively impacts investors. Studies find that less frequent reporting increases information asymmetry, which in turn leads to higher trading costs, reduced market liquidity, and a higher cost of capital for public companies."2
Sustainability risks and impacts may cause material financial effects
Ceres approaches the SEC's proposal by focusing on how material climate-, nature- and water-related risks and impacts are disclosed in SEC filings. That is because of investors' views, based on abundant evidence, that climate change and other sustainability issues may cause material financial risks and impacts to companies. Since the founding of Ceres' Investor Network in 2003, investors have said these risks should be disclosed in SEC filings, in the same place where other material financial risks are reported. We have found that the quality of this disclosure varies considerably, and there are high levels of boilerplate disclosure.
Companies disclose material climate change-related and weather-related risks and impacts in 10-Q filings; some examples illustrate how they are disclosed. An electric power company disclosed the financial impacts on the company of the 2024 Smokehouse Creek wildfire: "a total estimated loss of $460 million".3 An electric power holding company stated, "California has experienced unprecedented weather conditions in recent years due to climate change and wildfires in [our] territory [. . .. We] have incurred material losses in connection with the 2017/2018 Wildfire/Mudslide Events (defined below) and other fires, which are described below. [. . .]".4 The company then listed charges of $467 million recorded in 2024 and $90 million recorded in 2023 for these events.5 An insurance company disclosed: "We incurred $760 million of catastrophe losses, or 6.1 loss ratio points, during the third quarter 2022 as a result of Hurricane Ian, compared to $510 million, or 4.5 loss ratio points, for the same period last year from Hurricane Ida."6

These examples illustrate that weather- and climate-related financial impacts often emerge and evolve over the course of a fiscal year. Quarterly reporting provides investors with standardized,

1 See Recommendation of the Investor as Owner Subcommittee of the SEC Investor Advisory Committee Regarding Quarterly vs. Semi-annual Reporting, Draft: May 28, 2026, pp. 8-9.

2 Id., p. 9.

3 Xcel Energy, April 30, 2026, Form 10-Q for the quarter ending March 31, 2026, pp. 18-19.

4 Edison International, Form 10-Q for the quarterly period ended March 31, 2024, p. 47.

5 Id., p. 5.

6 The Progressive Corporation, Form 10-Q For the quarterly period ended September 30, 2022, p. 39.

Ceres Headquarters: 99 Chauncy Street, Boston, MA 02111 California Office: 369 Pine Street, Suite 620, San Francisco, CA 94104

comparable updates regarding the magnitude, timing, and management assessment of those impacts.

Companies also disclose climate change-related and weather-related risks and impacts in Form 8-K filings. For example, one researcher, in a study of 3,752 firms' 8-K filings from 2010 to 2021, found that these filings were useful for evaluating material exposure to disasters such as those related to physical climate risks.7

However, Form 8-K filings are not substitutes for quarterly reporting. Form 8-K disclosures are event-driven and report specific developments as they occur. Form 10-Q, by contrast, provides a comprehensive, standardized periodic update that gives investors a structured, comparable view of a company's condition, which Form 8-K cannot replicate. Form 10-Q filings provide important advantages. They enable quarter to quarter comparisons of financial results, material events, and risks. Regarding weather-related risks and impacts, they put the risks/impacts in context by offering management's discussion of its views of business results and what causes the risks.8

For the reasons stated above, Ceres urges the Commission to withdraw the proposed semiannual reporting option. Thank you for your consideration of our comments. We would be pleased to discuss our feedback. Please contact Jim Coburn (coburn@ceres.org) with any questions.

Sincerely,

Steven Rothstein
Chief Program Officer
Ceres
Jim Coburn
Senior Manager, Disclosure and Regulation
Ceres

7 Glen Gostlow, Predicting Weather Exposure with Historical Evidence from Form 8-K, July 24, 2023, pp. 11, 30.

8 See, e.g., SEC, Investor.gov: How to Read a 10-K/10-Q, Jan. 25, 2021.

Ceres Headquarters: 99 Chauncy Street, Boston, MA 02111 California Office: 369 Pine Street, Suite 620, San Francisco, CA 94104

Sue Davis — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sue Davis Semi-annual reporting would allow companies to hide from their shareholders and the public. With the pace of life now, investors need more frequent information, not less.

Sue Keller DMD, ACC — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sue Keller Sue Keller, DMD, solopreneur, dentist, and life coach As a small business owner, I was accountable for every aspect of my business. I reviewed my financials, understood my numbers, and accepted responsibility for the decisions I made. I expect nothing less from the CEOs of large public companies. Public corporations benefit from limited liability, access to capital markets, and significant legal and tax advantages. Those benefits should come with equally strong responsibilities. Quarterly reporting helps ensure that executives remain informed, accountable, and transparent with the investors who have entrusted them with their capital. “I didn’t know” should never be an acceptable excuse for poor governance.

Sue Mills — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sue Mills I say "No" to changing SEC's proposal to allow optional semiannual reporting (File Number S7-2026-15).

Sullivan & Cromwell LLP — Jul 6, 2026

Susan Calcio — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Calcio A proposed six-month blackout window harms everyday investors. Serious corporate problems—like ballooning debt, failed product launches, or accounting fraud—can develop and remain completely hidden for half the year. The quarterly 10-Q is one of the primary tools for evaluating the financial health of my 401(k) or personal retirement accounts. Maintain the standard of quarterly reporting to protect retail investors from unnecessary market risks.

Susan Daniels None — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Daniels Retain the current 10-Q reporting requirement. Six months is too long for the public to wait for information.

Susan Hamilton — Jul 6, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Hamilton Dear SEC, I oppose making quarterly reporting optional. Here's why: What I've learned from history: Between 1955-1970, when the U.S. only required semi-annual reporting, stock market returns were much lower and valuations were depressed. When the SEC switched to quarterly reporting in 1970, market performance improved significantly. This is not coincidence—transparency matters to valuations. What I'm concerned about: If companies can report only twice per year: I'll have less information to make investment decisions – especially when earnings disappoint, companies can stay quiet for months Small and mid-cap stocks I own will get less analyst coverage – companies will cut costs and fewer analysts will follow them Fraud gets easier – the longer the information gap, the longer bad news can stay hidden Insider trading becomes a bigger problem – management knows company performance for six months before I do Who benefits? The companies (saving money). Who pays? Investors like me (losing information and liquidity). The SEC proposal says companies will still file Form 8-K for "material events." But materiality is defined by the company. Bad earnings guidance is not a "material event" requiring Form 8-K—only the next quarterly report reveals it. That's six-month-old news by then. The U.S. built the world's most transparent and valuable stock market with quarterly reporting. Don't trade investor protection for corporate cost-cutting. Please maintain mandatory quarterly reporting. Respectfully, Susan Hamilton

---

Susan Kirsch, Vice-President and Assistant General Counsel, The Retail Industry Leaders Association (RILA); Christopher Sesay, Government & Legal Affairs Intern, Retail Industry Leaders Association; Michael Levine, Vice-President and Assistant General Counsel, The Retail Leaders Association (RILA) — Jul 6, 2026
RETAIL INDUSTRY LEADERS ASSOCIATION
99 M Street, SE
Suite 700
Washington, DC 20003
www.rila.org
Via E-mail: rule-comments@sec.gov
Ms. Vanessa Countryman, Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street NE
Washington, DC 20549-1090
Re:
Semiannual Reporting
Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140
File No. S7-2026-15 (May 5, 2026)
Dear Ms. Countryman,
The Retail Industry Leaders Association (“"RILA"), on behalf of its members, appreciates the opportunity to submit this letter in response to the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission's ("the "Commission") proposal on semiannual reporting for investors (the "Proposed Rule"). Subject to the comments and conditions below, RILA supports the Commission's efforts to offer publicly held companies an additional reporting option.
By way of background, RILA is a trade association of the world's largest, most innovative, and recognizable retail companies and brands. We convene decision-makers, advocate for the retail industry, and promote operational excellence and innovation. RILA members include more than two hundred retailers, product manufacturers, and service suppliers, who together employ over 42 million Americans and account for $2.7 trillion in annual sales and hundreds of thousands of stores, manufacturing facilities, and distribution centers domestically and abroad.

RILA member companies are predominantly large, publicly traded retailers whose investors actively monitor both quarterly performance trends and year-over-year comparisons. Given that profile, we expect most of our members to continue reporting quarterly regardless of the semiannual option availability. That said, RILA appreciates the Commission's evaluation of issuers' reporting burdens and therefore supports the Commission's decision to introduce reporting framework optionality. Accordingly, RILA supports the Proposed Rule, provided that quarterly reporting remains fully available and that the Commission takes appropriate steps to ensure that companies electing semiannual reporting maintain meaningful transparency with investors.

RILA is pleased to provide the following comments, which highlight the importance of maintaining optionality in the final rule, and recommends changes to further strengthen protections for investors:

Semiannual Reporting, Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368, 39-2563; IC-36140, File No. S7-2026-15 (May 5, 2026), available at htps://www.sec.gov/files/rules/proposed/2026/33-1 1414.pdf.

I.
Offering Optional Semiannual Reporting is an Appropriate Exercise of Regulatory Flexibility

Considerable changes have occurred in the United States capital markets since 1970, when the Commission mandated quarterly reporting. For example, Form 8-K now requires disclosure of various material events bankruptcies, acquisitions, executive departures, and carningsannouncements oftentimes within four business days. Furthermore, earnings releases and investor calls have become the primary method through which markets receive and process company financial information and typically occur before Form10-Q is filed. This makes the Commission's review of issuer reporting frequency both timely and appropriate.

RILA supports the flexible reporting framework that the Commission brings forward in the Proposed Rule. The Commission is right to ask whether a one-size-fits-all quarterly mandate continues to serve investors and issuers best. Arguably, some companies' performance may be better assessed in semiannual reporting. These may include companies with stable operations, limited analyst coverage, or business cycles that do not map neatly to quarterly timelines. Additionally, this option may be a better fit for early stage companies where innovation, investment, and commercialization are still scaling. Alternatively, many other established companies, including RILA members that are publicly traded, will continue to find quarterly reporting invaluable to maintain investor confidence, analyst engagement, and capital market access.

By making semiannual reporting an opt-in election on the cover of Form 10-K, the Commission allows companies and their boards to choose the reporting structure that best serves their individual circumstances and stakeholders, while providing investors with the material information necessary to make informed decisions. Accordingly, RILA supports this approach, subject to the recommendations below.

II. Market Forces Will Naturally Preserve Quarterly Reporting for Most Large Retailers

When considering the Proposed Rule's impact, analysts may be concerned that reduced reporting frequency would deprive investors of critical information. Retail is among the most investor-scrutinized market sectors. Many publicly traded retailers operate in highly seasonal environments. For example, some RILA member companies have back-to-school and holiday quarters that can represent a disproportionate share of annual revenue. Their investors may expect granular, frequent updates on comparable store sales, inventory levels, gross margins, and other metrics that may vary meaningfully from quarter to quarter.

Analyst coverage of major retailers is thorough, institutional ownership is significant, and the market craves quarterly data. Companies may continue to report quarterly if they believe risks from a switch to semiannual reporting exceed the expected savings. Concerns include that

See Semiannual Reporting, supra note 1, at 9-10 (describing the Commission's 1970 adoption of quarterly reporting requirements and rescission of the prior semiannual Form 9-K regime).
See id. at 19-20 (discussing the current Form 8-K Item 2.02 earnings release framework).
R
companies that reduce reporting frequency might face higher costs of capital, receive reduced analyst coverage, and court investor uncertainty. Therefore, market forces may inherently compel RILA members to report quarterly even though the Commission's Proposed Rule offers them a semiannual alternative. While the Proposed Rule does not change this dynamic, it offers meaningful reporting flexibility to companies for which it is appropriate and beneficial. Currently, RILA does not anticipate that the Proposed Rule will produce a wholesale shift away from quarterly reporting by its members. It will, however, enable companies at stages and/or in industries where quarterly reporting may be viewed as adding limited informational value relative to its cost to opt-in and remove two quarters of reporting burden.

III. The Commission Should Ensure that Retail Investors are Adequately Protected Under a Semiannual Reporting Regime

RILA supports the Proposed Rule's optionality framework, but we encourage the Commission to ensure that it is implemented in a manner that protects retail investors. To that end, RILA recommends that the Commission incorporate the following in the Final Rule:

A. Reporting Election Disclosure. When a company elects to shift from quarterly to semiannual reporting, or from semiannual back to quarterly, the company should prominently disclose that election. Investors should not be left to discover a change in reporting cadence when the expected Form10-Q is mnissing. The Commission should require issuers to proactively communicate any change in reporting frequency to the market through a Form 8-K filing, as a step in addition to the Form 10-K checkbox mechanism the Commission has proposed.4

B. Continued Form 8-K obligations. The Commission should emphasize that semiannual filers remain fully subject to all Form 8-K reporting obligations. The real-time disclosure requirements of Form 8-K such as covering material acquisitions, leadership changes, significant agreements, and other consequential events are critical to mitigating the potential effects of reduced frequency of periodic reports. RILA supports retaining these obligations in full for all files regardless of whether they elect quarterly or semiannual reporting.

C. Interim Disclosure Transparency. RILA anticipates that many companies electing semiannual reporting may continue to provide voluntary quarterly updates through earnings releases, investor presentations, and other means. The Commission should provide clear information about how such voluntary disclosures will interact with the proposed reporting framework, particularly with respect to the Regulation FD obligations and Item 2.02 of Form 8-K. This would serve to ensure that companies can maintain investor dialogue without inadvertently creating additional compliance uncertainty.

'See Semiannual Reporting, supra note 1, at 27 (describing the proposed check box on the cover page of Form 10-K as the proposed sole means by which a reporting company would indicate its annual election of semiannual or quarterly reporting)
S See Semiannual Reporting, supra note 1, at 38 (Request for Comment Question 18, asking about the likelihood that semiannual filers will continue to issue quarterly earnings releases).
R

IV. PCAOB Should Harmonize Auditing Standard 6101 With the Proposed Rule

RILA supports the Commission's call for the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (“PCAOB") to revisit Auditing Standard6101 (AS 6101), Letters for Underwriters and Certain Other Requesting Parties, considering the proposed shift to optional semiannual reporting.5 Under AS 6101, auditors generally cannot provide comfort letters on financial information older than 135 days.' In a quarterly reporting environment, that threshold is rarely met because issuers cycle through new financial statements every three months.

Under a semiannual reporting structure, however, the 135 days threshold becomes a more prominent obstacle. A semiannual filer with a fiscal first half ending June 30th would face stale financial statements under AS 6101 by approximately mid-November, well before a company opting-in to the Proposed Rule's next periodic filing would be due. Any capital markets transaction during that window could require the preparation of additional interim financial information solely to satisfy the comfort letter requirement undercutting the cost savings the Proposed Rule is designed to deliver.

Left unresolved, this sets up a regulatory inconsistency in which the SEC deems financial information current for periodic reporting purposes while the PCAOB treats the same information as stale for capital markets purposes. Consequently, RILA recommends the Commission work with the PCAOB to extend the comfort letter threshold to approximately 225 days or another period aligned with the semiannual reporting cycle that allows the two frameworks to operate coherently. This figure, like the existing 15-day threshold under quarterly reporting, reflects approximately the length of one full interim reporting period plus a reasonable buffer, enabling the two frameworks to operate coherently.

CONCLUSION

RILA supports the Commission's Proposed Rule offering an optional, semiannual reporting alternative to the current quarterly reporting mandate. Through the Proposed Rule, the Commission introduces flexibility into a framework that has remained largely unchanged since 1970, recognizing that reporting frequency can be adapted to meet the needs of business, investors, and the markets in which they participate.

Very truly yours,

Michael Levine

Vice-President and Assistant General Counsel

• See Semiannual Reporting, supra note 1, at 42-43 (Request for Comment Question 27, asking whether changes to AS 6101 are needed to comport with semiannual reporting),

7 See PCAOB Auditing Standard 6101, Letters for Underwriters and Certain Other Requesting Parties, .46 (permitting negative assurance as to subsequent changes in specified financial statement items as of a date less than 135 days from the end of the most recent period for which the accountant has performed an audit or review); see also Semiannual Reporting, supra note 1, at 42 n.93.

R

Susan Kirsch
Vice-President and Assistant General Counsel
Christopher Sesay
Government & Legal Affairs Intern
Retail Industry Leaders Association ("RILA")
99 M Street SE, Suite 700
Washington, DC 20003
(202)869-0200

R

Susan Murray — Jul 6, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Murray Please do not reduce the frequency of reports.

Individual investors deserve transparency. This move would decrease it. Quarterly reports allow investors to have an earlier opportunity to identify when a business is in distress. Quarterly reporting allows individual investors more analyst coverage and more accurate earnings forecasts. Nothing that I have read indicates the change in reporting would result in any positive change for individual investors. I haven't seen anything that indicates it would incentivize longer-term thinking. If that is the goal, please find a solution that might actually be successful. A U.K. experiment with this found that reporting frequency had no significant impact on corporate investment behavior. It seems like this change is designed more to protect businesses than to protect individual investors.

Susan O'Sullivan — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan O'Sullivan I have mutual funds. We need to keep PUBLIC eyes on fiscal issues and market movements. KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING !!! WE NEED THE INFORMATION!!! WE NEED TRANSPARENCY!!! FINANCE IS MOVING EVER MORE QUICKLY!!! YOU HAVE COMPUTERS! !!! YOU HAVE THE KNOW HOW!!!!

Susan Thompson — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Thompson I oppose the proposal to allow public companies to reduce their regular reporting from quarterly to semiannual. As an individual investor, I believe transparency is a cornerstone of healthy capital markets. Investing represents ownership, and owners deserve timely, consistent information about the businesses they own. Reducing the frequency of required reports does not reduce uncertainty. It simply leaves investors less informed for longer periods of time. Arguments that fewer reports will reduce short-term thinking are unconvincing. Short-termism is driven by how market participants interpret information, not by the existence of regular disclosure. In contrast, less frequent reporting increases the likelihood of larger information gaps, more significant surprises, and greater market volatility when new information is finally released. Modern reporting tools, automation, and AI have also reduced many of the administrative burdens associated with preparing disclosures, making the case for fewer required reports even less compelling. The SEC's mission includes protecting investors and promoting fair, orderly, and efficient markets. Maintaining quarterly reporting advances those goals by providing investors with regular, transparent access to material information. I respectfully urge the Commission to reject this proposal.

Suzanne Blackburn — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Suzanne Blackburn I think companies should be required to report quarterly, not 2x per year, so the public and individual investors can keep track of the actions of the company with the most up-to-date information.

Suzanne Joel — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Suzanne Joel I am saying no to the semiannual disclosures. I want to know what is happening to the money I have invested

---

Sybil Investor — Jul 6, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sybil I think the more transparent a company is with it's investors and the public the better. Obviously completing the quarterly and annual reports allow investors to have a better idea of the stability of their investments and how their money is being spent. As with all things, the more communication the better. The more companies communicate the more educated their investors and the general public. The more educated we are and the more transparent companies are the more trusted the companies are. Which theoretically should mean more business and investment for the companies. As such, I am not in favor of companies reducing their financial reporting.

T Duffey — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: T Duffey Investors need more visibility into the finances of large companies, not less. This is a disastrous proposal that will further disadvantage individual investors, and clearly favors corporate insiders, investment bankers, and other institutional investors.

T Miles — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: T Miles I am just an average person who is working hard to make sure that I invest enough (and properly) to be able to retire comfortably. Having recently had a new health crisis makes this all the more important. With respect to the SEC's Rule S7-2026-15, I am strongly opposed to changing frequency of reporting. Big businesses are given plenty of advantages over the individual consumer and investors. Reducing from quarterly to semiannual reporting should not be one of them. At face value, one could argue that it makes sense to allow a given company to decide frequency of reporting with shareholders, but how are they maintaining disclosure controls, updating processes and changes to insider trading compliance in a way that is consistent, fair and transparent? People with disabilities, people on fixed incomes and people with emerging health crises rely on solid and timely information to ensure that we have enough money to pay for housing, food and healthcare in years to come. There's more than "saved money and reduced administrative burden for businesses" on the line.

T. Carter — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: T. Carter As a small investor building for retirement, not knowing how my investments are doing for a longer period of time would affect my ability to plan my retirement. With the possibility of Social Security benefit reductions this is important to me so I won't become dependent on government assistance when I retire.

Talita P. — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Talita P. Reducing quarterly reporting to a semiannual format can create a system that precipitates fraud and gives insiders time to dump shares. Without more transparency, it won't reflect the true value of assets and can cause volatility risks for 401K investments.

Tawana Reels Individual investors — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tawana Reels Please keep quarterly reporting so Individual investors like myself can protect my investments and make informed decisions on what I am investing in and get early warning signs.

Terry R. Retired Teacher — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Terry R. I do NOT agree with reporting information every 6 months. People need updated data & transparency to make informed decisions about how to invest their money.

Thad Ackerman — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thad Ackerman Please continue to require quarterly reporting via the 10-Q, as currently done today. To allow companies to choose to report semi-annually will only serve to reduce transparency and increase the chances of dramatic market swings.

The Capital Group Companies, Inc. — Jul 6, 2026
The Capital Group Companies, Inc.
333 South Hope Street
Los Angeles, California 90071-1406 capitalgroup.com
July 6, 2026
VIA ELECTRONIC SUBMISSION
Ms. Vanessa Countryman, Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, N.E.
Washington, DC 20549-1090
Re: Semiannual Reporting (File No. S7-2026-15)
Dear Ms. Countryman:
We appreciate the opportunity to comment on the recent proposal (the “Proposal”) by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (the “SEC” or the “Commission”) to provide public companies with the option of filing interim reports on a semiannual basis, rather than a quarterly basis, to satisfy their reporting obligations under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (the “Exchange Act”). We support, in particular, the Commission’s effort to incentivize companies to go and stay public, and we recognize that the Proposal is but one facet of a “larger, comprehensive effort” in this regard.1
The Capital Group Companies, Inc. (“Capital Group”) is one of the oldest asset management organizations in the United States, with nearly 95 years of investment experience and approximately $3.6 trillion of assets under management. Through our investment adviser subsidiaries, we actively manage equity and fixed income investments across all market sectors in various collective investment vehicles and institutional client separate accounts. The majority of these assets are held in the American Funds family of mutual funds, Capital Group exchange-traded funds and other U.S. registered investment companies.
Vibrant capital markets are crucial to our mission of improving people's lives through successful investing. We believe in the importance of capital formation through public markets, as public offerings provide a reliable and transparent source of capital to companies while offering investors access to potential growth opportunities. We are sensitive to the idea that the costs and burdens associated with being a public company may act as a barrier to accessing public markets. At the same time, Capital Group is an active manager that employs a bottom-up investing approach focused on fundamental analysis and research. We rely on regular access to public information about companies to analyze material risks and opportunities, and ultimately to assess companies’ long-term potential to generate value for our clients.

1 Paul S. Atkins, Chairman, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, “Statement on Proposing Release for Semiannual Reporting” (May 5, 2026), available at https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-statements/atkins-statement-proposing-release-semiannual-reporting-050526 (the “Atkins Statement on Proposing Release”).

We are broadly supportive of the Proposal’s overall objectives, including reducing unnecessary regulatory burdens and promoting long-term decision-making. However, we have concerns regarding the potential impact of the Proposal on the quality, quantity and comparability of information available to investors. As it assesses the impact of reporting frequency, the Commission should consider whether its current Regulation S-K reform efforts would achieve the Commission’s objectives while minimizing adverse effects on investors and capital markets.

I. We support the SEC’s goals of reducing barriers to public markets and promoting long-term decision-making.

Although the Proposal has several objectives, one of its primary goals is to reduce the regulatory burden of Exchange Act reporting companies, incentivizing companies to go public earlier. Indeed, through his public statements on semiannual reporting, Chairman Atkins has made clear the Proposal is part of a larger agenda at the SEC to incentivize companies “to go and stay public.”2 We are supportive of this worthwhile objective. The Commission also notes that the Proposal, if adopted, may reduce managerial short-termism, an objective we also support.

3

A. Reducing barriers to public markets

As one of the world’s largest active asset managers, we believe in the importance of capital formation through public markets. Public offerings provide a reliable and transparent source of capital, helping businesses remain competitive while offering investors access to potential growth opportunities. Strong public markets can also spur economic growth and increase job opportunities. We appreciate the Commission’s effort to explore ways to modernize the reporting framework and reduce burdens on public companies. The Commission asserts that the flexibility to file semiannual reports “could reduce the regulatory burden of being a reporting company, which could potentially influence a company’s decision to become or remain a reporting company and encourage more companies to go or remain public.”4 Although the reduced burden associated with a shift to semiannual reporting may generate relatively modest cost savings,

5 particularly for larger companies, we recognize that the Proposal is the first of several proposals the SEC has published, or plans to publish, to enhance the attractiveness of being a public company. We are supportive of this overall objective.

2 Atkins Statement on Proposing Release.

3 The Proposal defines short-termism as “a focus on short-term results instead of long-term business strategies and short-term actions by a company that can have negative long-term impact on the company.” Proposal at 15 (Footnote 44).

4 Proposal at 7-8.

5 See Proposal at 93.

B. Promoting long-term decision-making

At Capital Group, investing for the long term is core to our approach. Active managers like Capital Group can provide a long-term stable source of capital across market conditions, including during times of market stress. We also believe that investing with a long-term view helps align our goals with those of our clients, many of whom are individuals and families saving for retirement and/or education. Our portfolio managers are discouraged from engaging in short-term thinking.

As many have observed, including Commissioner Uyeda in his statement accompanying the Proposal, quarterly reporting can, at times, create an external cadence that emphasizes near-term performance.6 While many management teams appropriately focus on long-term strategy, the frequency and visibility of quarterly reporting may nonetheless influence how companies communicate progress and prioritize short-term metrics. Providing companies with the flexibility to report on a semiannual basis may help reduce this dynamic by allowing management teams to allocate more time and attention to longer-term strategic initiatives.

In internal discussions regarding the merits of semiannual reporting, Capital Group investment professionals consistently identified the potential elimination of "noise" associated with quarterly earnings releases, as well as the reduction in the time and resources management must devote to the quarterly reporting process, as key benefits for companies adopting a semiannual reporting cadence. The Proposal likewise identifies the following potential benefits of shifting away from a quarterly reporting regime: "less distraction from running the day-to-day business; reallocation of attention from interim reporting to company strategy; additional time spent on new product development; and ability to engage in transactions that might not be possible when management is focused on preparing interim reports."7 Although the empirical data is mixed on whether semiannual reporting in fact leads to improved long-term decision-making by management,8 we support the Commission's efforts to reduce short-termism and emphasize a long-term focus by investors and public companies alike.

II. If adopted, the Proposal may reduce market efficiency.

Active managers like Capital Group make investment decisions based on fundamental, bottom-up research and, in doing so, play a critical role in markets by driving price discovery. Active managers analyze public information, form forward-looking judgments about company-specific fundamentals and determine how securities should be valued relative to alternatives. Portfolio-sizing decisions reflect these judgments, and as fundamentals evolve, capital is reallocated accordingly. These dynamic decisions cause market weights to change over time and are essential to maintaining market efficiency.

Companies reporting on a semiannual basis may opt to furnish earnings releases to inform the market of ongoing developments. Earnings releases differ from Form 10-Q in several

6 Mark T. Uyeda, Commissioner, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, "Statement on Proposing Semiannual Reporting" (May 5, 2026), available at https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-statements/uyeda-statement-proposing-semiannual-reporting-050526.

7 Proposal at 16-17.

8 Proposal at 108.

important respects.9 At a high level, they are inherently less standardized and more discretionary. Earnings releases are furnished rather than filed, they are not required to be reviewed by an independent accountant and they often rely heavily on non-GAAP measures and management-defined metrics.

Form 10-Q, on the other hand, provides the underlying detail that investors use to understand how the company generated the headline numbers reflected in an earnings release—in short, this is the information investors use to deploy their expertise. The structured disclosures, footnotes and required analysis in Form 10-Q provide the raw inputs that allow investors to assess earnings quality and sustainability, understand accounting choices and areas of management judgment, identify potential sources of bias in reported results and reconstruct the economic reality of the business beyond headline metrics. Standardization also allows for better comparisons among companies.

As stated in the Proposal, “the efficiency of financial markets rests on material information becoming public in a timely fashion. In addition to protecting investors, greater availability of material information allows securities prices to better reflect their issuers’ fundamental value and ultimately promotes capital formation.”10 As a result, the Commission must weigh the tradeoff between reducing regulatory burdens and promoting efficient financial markets through timely disclosure. We encourage the Commission to consider whether the negative impacts to capital markets outweigh the benefits to reporting companies in this case.

III. The Proposal may also impact capital flow into private companies.

We are also mindful that changes to public company reporting can have broader implications beyond the immediate disclosure framework. Public market reporting standards often shape expectations across the capital markets more generally. If standardized quarterly disclosure becomes less prevalent, it may affect information practices in other contexts, including private markets. For example, the Proposal states that companies issuing notes or bonds “may face a contractual demand for quarterly financial information during the lifetime of [a] bond or loan, and such demand may persist also under the proposed amendments.”11 The Commission asserts that these contractual obligations may result in a greater number of reporting companies opting to file interim reports on a quarterly basis. This may be the case for Exchange Act reporting companies, but private companies that issue debt may seek to anchor to a semiannual reporting cadence, rather than quarterly, if the Proposal is adopted. Our investment professionals have observed that investors’ best argument for obtaining financial information from private issuers of debt on a quarterly basis, rather than less frequently, is to request that the companies follow public company reporting cadence. If the Proposal were adopted, private companies would be less likely to provide financial statements on a quarterly basis, reducing the amount of information available to investors. Over time, this could influence how capital is allocated and how investors assess risk and perform price discovery across the broader ecosystem. For example, companies in high-yield debt markets often have less analyst coverage than issuers of investment-grade debt. From an investor’s perspective, high-yield debt generally carries greater risk than debt issued by larger, more well-established companies, especially when the issuer is financially distressed. To the extent the Proposal would reduce the information about issuers of high-yield debt in the market, investors may not be able to adequately assess long-term value, material risks and other important factors, thereby increasing the risk of any investment. Moreover, without sufficient access to information, investors may not be able to complete fundamental research and may not be willing to provide capital as freely.

9 See Proposal at 20.

10 Proposal at 66.

11 Proposal at 89.

IV. As an alternative to reducing reporting frequency, the Commission could streamline the disclosure requirements in Form 10-Q.

Commissioner Peirce’s statement accompanying the Proposal expressly asks whether the Commission should focus on “slimming down the Form 10-Q—instead of or in addition to making it optional.”12 We think this is an insightful question.

If the Commission’s principal objective is to reduce unnecessary burdens while preserving investor confidence and market comparability, it could consider retaining a quarterly cadence while streamlining the content required in Form 10-Q. In our view, two of the most decision-useful elements of Form 10-Q are the interim financial statements and Management’s Discussion and Analysis. These elements in particular provide the core framework through which investors can perform their fundamental research. As detailed in our comment letter on Regulation S-K reform, we encourage the SEC Staff to look for ways to recalibrate the requirements of Regulation S-K—including those applicable to Form 10-Q—to elicit clear, concise disclosure grounded in investment materiality.[13] More fundamentally, we would encourage the Commission to consider whether Regulation S-K reform could achieve its objectives of reducing regulatory burden on Exchange Act reporting companies, without needing to adjust the cadence of interim reporting.

V. Conclusion

We support the Commission's objectives of reducing barriers to public markets and promoting long-term decision making, as well as the overall goal of incentivizing companies to go and stay public. We also appreciate the flexibility reflected in the Proposal, which gives companies the option to continue reporting on a quarterly basis. At the same time, we are concerned that a reduction in the quality, quantity and comparability of information available to investors could reduce market efficiency. We encourage the Commission to consider alternatives, such as a streamlined Form 10-Q or broader reforms to Regulation S-K.

* * * *

12 Hester M. Peirce, Commissioner, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, "Quarterly Questions: Statement on the Proposed Amendments to Allow Semiannual Reporting" (May 5, 2026), available at https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-statements/peirce-statement-proposing-semiannual-reporting-050526.

13 See Letter to Ms. Vanessa Countryman, Secretary, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, from Capital Research and Management Company, dated April 13, 2026.

We appreciate the opportunity to provide our comments in response to the Proposal. If you have any questions regarding our comments, please contact either of us at walt_burkley@capgroup.com or casey.solomon@capgroup.com.

Sincerely,

Walter R. Burkley
General Counsel
Capital Research and Management Company
Katherine Z. Solomon
Senior Counsel
Capital Research and Management Company

The Motley Fool Holdings, Inc. — Jul 6, 2026

2000 Duke St.
Suite 300
Alexandria, VA 22314
703.838.3665 / voice
703.254.1999 / fax

Ms. Vanessa Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
Submitted via SEC.gov Public Comment Portal
Re: File No. S7-2026-15
SEC Request for Comment on Semiannual Reporting

Dear Ms. Countryman:

As Chief Legal Officer of The Motley Fool Holdings, Inc., I appreciate the opportunity to comment on the Commission's proposed amendments that would permit companies to satisfy their interim reporting obligations under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 by filing semiannual reports on a new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q. We believe the proposed amendments would reduce the information available to individual investors, among others, and thus harm them and, ultimately, the U.S. securities markets.

The Motley Fool has published investment research and commentary since 1993. Our work relies in part on the information contained in public companies' quarterly disclosures, and we disclose that business interest for transparency. A reduction in mandatory reporting would reduce the information available for our analysis, and we do not claim to be indifferent to that result. Nevertheless, we believe the analysis below stands on its own merits. The empirical evidence we cite comes from independent third-party research, not from The Motley Fool, and we ask the Commission to evaluate those sources on their own terms.

For more than three decades, The Motley Fool has sought to make the world smarter, happier, and richer by championing the interests of individual investors. We therefore submit this comment on behalf of The Motley Fool and its community of millions of investors in strong opposition to a proposal that would substantially reduce the information available to the investing public.

The Commission's objective—reducing excessive short-termism in corporate America—is important. We agree that executives should not sacrifice long-term value merely to satisfy quarterly earnings expectations. Our disagreement is not with that goal, but with the proposed means of achieving it.

Response to Question 17

The available evidence suggests that reducing mandatory reporting frequency will not increase management's focus on long-term business growth.

The proposal rests on the premise that executives prioritize short-term results because they must report quarterly, and that eliminating quarterly reporting will reduce that pressure. That hypothesis has been tested empirically and has not been supported.

2

A study published by the CFA Institute Research Foundation examined the United Kingdom's experience after mandatory quarterly reporting was introduced in 2007 and later eliminated in 2014. The researchers measured corporate investment—including capital expenditures, research and development spending, and net investment in property, plant, and equipment—before and after both regulatory changes. They found no statistically significant change in corporate investment behavior in either direction. Companies that ceased quarterly reporting did not increase long-term investment, and companies that became subject to quarterly reporting did not decrease it.1

The principal drivers of corporate short-termism—executive compensation, incentive structures throughout the investment chain, and governance failures—remain unchanged regardless of the reporting calendar. The proposal therefore appears likely to impose real costs on investors without producing its intended benefit.

Response to Question 22

The proposed amendments would materially reduce the information available to investors.

Quarterly reports provide a comprehensive, standardized, and auditor-reviewed picture of a company's financial condition, including financial statements and Management's Discussion and Analysis under Item 303 of Regulation S-K. That discussion requires management to identify material trends affecting the business, enabling investors to evaluate not merely isolated events but the company's overall direction and performance. This regular cadence of disclosure is one of the principal ways that shareholders remain informed as owners of public companies.

Proponents of the proposal argue that Form 8-K will continue to provide timely disclosure of material developments. We do not believe Form 8-K serves as an adequate substitute.
Whether an event is “material” is among the most contested and fact-intensive questions in securities law. That inherent subjectivity gives management substantial discretion in deciding whether disclosure is required. Quarterly reports significantly reduce that discretion by requiring comprehensive disclosure on a fixed schedule.
Moreover, the two reporting regimes serve fundamentally different purposes. Form 8-K is event-driven and reactive; it informs investors that something significant has occurred. Quarterly reports provide broader context by presenting financial performance, emerging trends, and management’s explanation of developments over an entire reporting period. They are complementary disclosures, not interchangeable ones.
1 Pozen, Nallareddy & Rajgopal, Impact of Reporting Frequency on UK Public Companies, CFA Institute
Research Foundation, March 2017, pp. 5-7.

Response to Question 1
Although the proposal is voluntary, its practical effects deserve careful consideration. The Commission correctly notes that companies may continue quarterly reporting if they choose. The more important question is which companies are most likely to discontinue it.
While some large, mature companies have expressed support for the proposal, we believe the data suggests that companies most likely to opt for semiannual reporting are smaller issuers, 2 and we expect them to include companies followed by relatively few analysts, and businesses operating in volatile industries where conditions may change materially over a six-month period. Those are precisely the companies for which investors have the greatest need for regular disclosure and where management may have the strongest incentive to lengthen the interval between mandatory reports.
We are also concerned that a voluntary disclosure regime may not remain stable over time. Competitive pressures could encourage additional issuers to reduce reporting frequency, creating a race to the bottom rather than a durable equilibrium. The Commission should therefore consider not only the proposal’s immediate effects but also its likely evolution over the coming decade.
Congress enacted the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 to address a market in which corporate insiders possessed vastly more information than public investors. Federal securities regulation has long rested on the principle that mandatory periodic disclosure narrows that information gap and promotes confidence in the capital markets. Reducing mandatory reporting from four times a year to two moves in the opposite direction. While the proposal is presented as a procedural change, it would meaningfully reduce the amount of standardized information available to investors and would do so without persuasive evidence that it will advance the Commission’s stated objective.
For these reasons, we respectfully urge the Commission not to adopt the proposed amendments.
We appreciate the opportunity to comment on the proposed rule and thank the Commission for its consideration.
Sincerely,
Lawrence T. Greenberg
Chief Legal Officer
The Motley Fool Holdings, Inc.
2 See Pozen, Nallareddy & Rajgopal, p. 12 (discussing size and inclination to provide information of “stoppers”).

Thomas Mullin — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Mullin Re: Rule S7-2026-15 – Proposed Amendments to Permit Optional Semiannual Reporting by Public Companies Dear Chairman Atkins and Commissioners: I respectfully submit this comment in strong opposition to the Securities and Exchange Commission's proposal to permit public companies to replace quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q with semiannual reporting on proposed Form 10-S. As a recent retiree, I depend on my investment portfolio to generate income and preserve the assets that my family and I spent decades building. Unlike younger investors, I have limited ability to recover from significant investment losses caused by delayed disclosure of deteriorating financial conditions or other material developments. Timely, reliable, and transparent financial reporting is not simply a convenience—it is essential to my financial well-being and retirement security. One of the SEC's core missions is to protect investors, maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets, and facilitate capital formation. In my view, this proposal undermines the first two objectives by reducing the frequency with which investors receive standardized, audited management disclosures about a company's financial condition and operating performance. Reducing required reporting from four reports per year (three quarterly reports and one annual report) to only two reports per year (one semiannual report and one annual report) would effectively create a six-month period during which retail investors would have significantly less reliable information upon which to base investment decisions. In today's markets, where information is transmitted instantly and stock prices can change dramatically in a single day, a six-month reporting interval is simply too long. Financial conditions can change rapidly because of inflation, interest rates, tariffs, supply chain disruptions, technological changes, cybersecurity incidents, litigation, regulatory actions, or changes in consumer demand. Investors deserve timely updates about these developments. Quarterly reporting has long provided an important mechanism for ensuring that material changes are disclosed on a regular and predictable basis. The proposal would also create a greater information imbalance between institutional investors and individual retail investors. Large investment firms employ teams of analysts, industry specialists, economists, forensic accountants, sophisticated data providers, and proprietary research systems that allow them to gather information continuously. Individual investors do not have those resources. Retail investors instead rely on the SEC's standardized disclosure framework to provide equal access to consistent financial information. Quarterly reporting helps level the playing field by ensuring that every investor—regardless of size—receives meaningful financial information at regular intervals. Reducing that frequency would disproportionately disadvantage retirees and other individual investors who depend on publicly available SEC filings. I am also concerned that less frequent reporting may reduce management accountability. Quarterly reporting requires management to periodically certify the accuracy of financial statements and discuss operating results, risks, liquidity, and known trends. Extending the reporting cycle could reduce management discipline by allowing financial problems to accumulate for longer periods before investors receive comprehensive disclosures. While I do not suggest that most corporate executives intentionally misstate financial results, history demonstrates that accounting irregularities, earnings management, and internal control deficiencies and yes, even fraud, are often discovered only after a series of reporting periods. More frequent reporting provides more opportunities for investors, auditors, analysts, regulators, and boards of directors to identify unusual trends, ask questions, and address problems before they become more serious. For that reason, I believe this proposal could inadvertently increase the risk that financial deterioration, operational challenges, or internal control weaknesses remain undisclosed for longer periods, potentially exposing investors to greater losses. The SEC's press release suggests that permitting semiannual reporting would reduce regulatory burdens and provide companies with additional flexibility. I respectfully question whether those benefits outweigh the costs to investors. Public companies have operated under quarterly reporting requirements for decades. The personnel, accounting systems, disclosure controls, financial reporting processes, external auditors, legal advisers, and internal review procedures necessary to prepare quarterly reports are already embedded within corporate governance and compliance programs. For most established public companies, quarterly reporting is part of normal business operations rather than a new or extraordinary regulatory burden. Moreover, the U.S. capital markets have long been regarded as the most transparent and trusted in the world. That reputation has been built, in part, on robust disclosure requirements that promote investor confidence. Weakening those disclosure standards risks reducing confidence among individual investors at a time when encouraging long-term participation in our capital markets should remain a priority. As a retiree who depends upon these markets, I believe investor confidence is strengthened—not weakened—by regular, transparent reporting. Transparency reduces uncertainty, supports efficient price discovery, lowers the cost of capital over the long term, and encourages continued investment by millions of Americans saving for retirement. Rather than reducing reporting frequency, I encourage the Commission to continue pursuing ways to modernize and streamline disclosure requirements through technology, eliminate duplicative disclosures where appropriate, and simplify compliance for smaller issuers without sacrificing the timely financial information upon which investors rely. In closing, I respectfully urge the Commission to reject this proposal. Quarterly financial reporting has served investors and the U.S. capital markets well for decades. Eliminating mandatory quarterly reporting would reduce transparency, increase information asymmetry between institutional and retail investors, diminish management accountability, and potentially delay the disclosure of material financial developments that investors need to make informed decisions. As one of millions of individual investors whose retirement security depends upon fair, transparent, and efficient markets, I believe the SEC should strengthen—not weaken—the disclosure framework that has made the United States the global leader in investor protection. Thank you for considering my comments and for your continued commitment to protecting America's investors. Respectfully, Thomas Mullin Springfield, PA

Thomas Peterman — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Peterman Keep reporting quartly

---

Thomas Rosera Graduate Student, Johns Hopkins University - Carey School of Business — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Rosera I write to you today in opposition of the changes proposed in S7-2026-15. I believe that a functional and free securities market requires access to timely and reliable information. By striking the requirement for quarterly reports, the SEC potentially weakens the ability of analysts and investors to make informed decisions about the financial health of publicly-owned firms. This could have a detrimental impact on downstream financial products, including the retirement funds of vulnerable citizens, individual investor portfolios, and non-profit trusts. My argument is twofold. First, framing this proposal as a measure which gives companies the "choice" of how frequently to report their finances disregards the role of the SEC as a regulator which should be focused on setting and enforcing expectations in service of a free market, not facilitating company choice. It begs the question of just how many publicly owned companies currently choose to report more frequently than is required by SEC regulations. My research suggests that the answer is a small enough proportion to be considered negligible. This being the case, the proposed regulation change does not constitute giving companies a choice, so much as it gives them license to report only twice per year. Second, considering the power and sophistication of modern tools, quarterly reporting does not constitute an undue burden on companies, particularly those of sufficient size to be listed on major stock indices. At the end of the day, this regulation does not appear to address any salient issues and, in fact, has the potential to create several novel problems. Enough power has already been taken out of the hands of investors and the public. I urge the SEC to maintain the 10-Q quarterly reporting mandate.

Thomas Scott Individual Investor — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Scott Please do not reduce reporting to semi annual. Quarterly reports are individual investors main source of information when choosing investments. Less frequently reports reduces transparency and confidence. When reports do come out, there would be larger surprises. Please reconsider this.

TIAA — Jul 6, 2026
Amy M. O'Brien
Executive Vice President
Head of Responsible Investment
730 Third Avenue
New York, NY 10017
E: amy.obrien@nuveen.com
Yves P. Denizé
Senior Managing Director Division General Counsel
730 Third Avenue
New York, NY 10017
E: yves.denize@nuveen.com
July 6, 2026
Ms. Vanessa A. Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street NE Washington, DC
Submitted Electronically
Re: Semiannual Reporting, RIN 3235–AN58, File No. S7–2026–15
Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association of America ("TIAA") and its asset management arm Nuveen, LLC ("Nuveen") appreciate the opportunity to comment on the Securities and Exchange Commission's (the "SEC" or the "Commission") proposed amendments to permit Exchange Act reporting companies to file semiannual reports on new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q (the "Proposal").
1 We applaud the SEC's efforts to reduce the regulatory burdens and associated compliance costs shouldered by Exchange Act reporting companies and give them greater flexibility in their reporting practices. As a leading provider of retirement services and a significant institutional investor managing over $1 trillion in assets, we have a vested interest in ensuring that financial markets are functioning efficiently and with transparency, which in turn requires that material information be made available to investors in a timely manner. While we recognize the importance of the SEC's work to streamline the reporting process for public companies, we also believe that the current quarterly reporting framework provides important benefits and protections that should not be lost in the Commission's broader reform efforts. In our view, a more selective approach that preserves investor access to critical information while also providing public companies with appropriately scaled reporting relief, would be preferable. Drawing on this perspective, we share our thoughts on the Proposal in more detail below.

I. About TIAA and Nuveen.

Founded in 1918, TIAA is the leading provider of retirement services for those in academic, research, medical, and cultural fields. Over its century-long history, TIAA's mission has always been to aid and strengthen the institutions, retirement plan participants, and retail customers we serve. To carry out this mission, we have evolved to include a range of financial services, including the asset management services offered by Nuveen and its subsidiaries. As TIAA's asset management arm, Nuveen offers a comprehensive array of outcome-focused investment solutions designed to secure the long-term financial goals of institutional and individual investors. The Nuveen organization includes investment advisers that collectively manage over $1 trillion in assets, including in the Nuveen and TIAA-CREF registered fund complexes, as well as in private funds and structured vehicles. Given our organization's history and experience, we care deeply about any potential regulatory changes that could affect investors' ability to access timely, accurate, and meaningful information about the companies in which we invest on behalf of millions of retirement savers.

1 Semiannual Reporting, 91 Fed. Reg. 24968 (May 7, 2026), available at: https://www.govinfo.gov/content/pkg/FR-2026-05-07/pdf/2026-09095.pdf.

II. We applaud the Commission's commitment to reducing unnecessary regulatory burdens on public companies.

TIAA and Nuveen wish to express our sincere appreciation for the Commission's efforts to modernize and streamline the disclosure framework for public companies. The Proposal reflects the kind of thoughtful, deliberate effort to reduce compliance costs and regulatory friction that can help attract and retain vibrant public companies in U.S. markets – and this outcome ultimately benefits investors, including the millions of retirement savers we serve. We recognize the considerable effort and care that the Commission has invested in developing this Proposal, and we commend the Commission for its thorough analysis of the economic tradeoffs involved, its extensive review of both domestic history and international experience, and its commitment to seeking broad public input.

We are particularly encouraged by the Commission's proposal of an optional semiannual reporting framework rather than a mandatory one, and by the Commission's express intention to preserve robust investor protections even as it works to extend new flexibility to reporting companies. The Commission's recognition that "the optimal reporting frequency may differ across reporting companies and industries" reflects a nuanced and investor-sensitive approach to regulatory design that we strongly support.2

We also share the Commission's concern that quarterly reporting compliance burdens, which can require hundreds of hours of employee time and considerable expense to produce, may divert management attention and resources away from business strategy, innovation, and long-term value creation. To the extent that right-sizing reporting obligations can help promising companies enter and remain in the public markets, we believe such reforms serve the long-term interests of investors.

2 Id. at 24988.

III. As long-term institutional investors, we have several concerns with a semiannual reporting structure.

While we strongly support the goals of the Proposal, TIAA and Nuveen have concerns about some of the potential unintended consequences of a semiannual reporting framework. Our participants and clients, whose interests we are duty-bound and dedicated to serve, depend on the continued integrity and transparency of U.S. capital markets to save for a secure retirement.

As Chairman Atkins said in recent remarks, “by any objective measure,” U.S. markets “have prospered without peer. . . But prosperity is not self-sustaining. Each generation must earn it anew by strengthening the structures that make our markets the world standard.”3

A. Less frequent reporting may increase information asymmetry and market volatility.

A cornerstone of our strong U.S. capital markets has long been the timely and transparent flow of information between companies and investors. Quarterly reports provide investors with a regular, structured, and auditor-reviewed window into a company's financial condition and performance. Reducing that cadence to twice per year could leave investors operating in an information vacuum for extended periods – a gap that empirical research suggests may lead investors to over-rely on alternative, less dependable sources of information and overreact to news (whether credible or not) that is released during non-reporting periods. This dynamic can produce increased share price volatility, higher transaction costs, and reduced market liquidity, all of which are harmful to investors, as well as to the companies whose securities may trade less efficiently as a result.

We are also mindful that information asymmetry over an extended period may increase the risk of insider trading. As noted by the Commission itself, academic research consistently demonstrates that more transparent and timely disclosure reduces insider trading.4 A move to semiannual reporting would extend by months the period during which insiders may hold unreleased material information, a dynamic that could undermine investor confidence and market fairness.

Europe’s move away from mandatory quarterly reporting is often cited as positive precedent by advocates of semiannual reporting – but academic research conducted after that shift has shown that a semiannual framework may have meaningful downsides. For example, a 2024 study conducted in Germany found that when quarterly reporting requirements for public companies were relaxed, firms ultimately provided less frequent and less detailed information to investors. Researchers concluded that the move to a semiannual regime increased information

3 Paul S. Atkins, “Remarks at U.S. Chamber of Commerce Center for Capital Markets Competitiveness,”
(Washington DC, Feb. 23, 2026), available at: https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-statements/atkins-remarks-uscoc-invest-act-022326.

4 See the Proposal’s discussion of insider trading in Section V.D.1(b) (“Potential Costs”), 91 Fed. Reg. at 25002.

asymmetry between insiders and investors and was associated with lower firm valuations.5 We respectfully urge the SEC to consider the potential downsides of importing a European-style regulatory framework that could erode the very features that make U.S. markets the strongest in the world, and the destination of choice for investors and issuers alike.

B. Quarterly reporting is especially crucial to fixed income investors.

Quarterly reporting is critically important to many types of investors, including those like Nuveen who invest significantly in fixed-income securities. Fixed-income investors are fundamentally concerned with liquidity, debt serviceability, and cash flow generation, all of which are more accurately captured through balance sheet and cash flow statement analysis provided through quarterly reports. Quarterly reports are especially important in the context of companies that carry significant leverage or those whose businesses are subject to seasonal cash flow variability, where a single snapshot in time may obscure meaningful fluctuations in financial health.

Compounding this concern is the issue of off-balance-sheet financing arrangements, particularly supply chain financing (commonly referred to as reverse factoring). Recognizing the risks that opacity in this area poses to investors, the Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB), in coordination with the SEC, has taken meaningful steps in recent years to strengthen disclosure requirements in this space. That regulatory attention was not without cause; recent incidents like the collapse of First Brands illustrate what is at stake when financial disclosure falls short.

In the First Brands case, investors were left without the timely, granular financial information necessary to detect the warning signs of deteriorating liquidity and hidden leverage, which is precisely the kind of intelligence that more frequent reporting requirements are designed to surface. Had robust quarterly reporting obligations and stronger disclosure standards around supply chain financing arrangements been in place and enforced, investors may have had a meaningful opportunity to reassess their exposure before the situation became irreversible.
While fraud was ultimately at the center of the First Brands failure – and while First Brands is a private company – the broader lesson for public companies is clear. Transparency and reporting frequency are not mere regulatory formalities; they are essential safeguards that protect investors and promote the integrity of the capital markets. Weakening or limiting those requirements, even at the margins, creates information gaps that bad actors can exploit and that even well-intentioned companies can fall through.
5 Behrmann, V., Hornuf, L., Vrankar, D. et al.,
"The deregulation of quarterly reporting and its effects on information asymmetry and firm value," Rev Quant Finan Acc 64, 1221–1259 (2025), available at: https://doi.org/10.1007/s11156-024-01338-5.

C. Semiannual reporting may reduce analyst coverage.
Analyst research is an important tool that asset managers rely on to aggregate and assess information about portfolio companies, identify investment opportunities, and inform investment decisions and risk management strategies. We are concerned that the Proposal could meaningfully reduce the incentive for analysts to cover those issuers that shift to a semiannual filing schedule – particularly smaller and mid-cap companies where analyst coverage is already thinner – as acknowledged in the Proposal itself.
6 Analysts and investors who are faced with the choice between covering companies that provide more information and those that provide less may decide to allocate their finite research resources toward the more transparent quarterly filers, placing semiannual filers at a systematic informational disadvantage. The practical effect of reduced analyst coverage is not merely inconvenient for investors; it can have real consequences for capital markets efficiency. The SEC rightly notes in the Proposal that "to the extent that a reduction in reporting frequency reduces analyst following for an issuer, the incremental information that would have been provided by the discontinuing analysts would be lost as well, further increasing information asymmetry."7 The Commission's own analysis later in the Proposal acknowledges that this information asymmetry could ultimately "decrease the informational efficiency of share prices even for companies that would continue to file quarterly reports,"8 and we believe it merits serious weight in the Commission's final rulemaking calculus.
D. Semiannual reporting may increase the cost of capital.
We are also concerned that a shift to semiannual reporting could result in a higher cost of capital for issuers that shift to a semiannual filing schedule. Reducing the frequency of periodic reporting delays the public disclosure of material information about company performance. This delay makes it more difficult for investors to make well-informed decisions about the companies they hold, increasing the uncertainty they face. In exchange for bearing that uncertainty, investors will demand a higher expected return, thereby raising the cost of capital.
The Commission notes in the Proposal that cost savings from reduced reporting burdens could partially offset any increase in the cost of capital by increasing issuers' expected cash flows.9 While this is a reasonable observation in theory, we are concerned that this potential benefit may be overstated in practice, and that the potential harm from a higher cost of capital likely outweighs any cost-saving benefit for many issuers, particularly smaller companies most likely to elect the semiannual option. As the Commission's own analysis recognizes, higher capital costs reduce company valuations, counteracting the very goal of making public markets more attractive for issuers – and, critically, could negatively affect capital formation by discouraging

6 See 91 Fed. Reg. at 25001, in which the Commission notes that “studies of foreign markets have found a positive correlation between reporting frequency and analyst following.”

7 Id.

8 Id. at 25008.

9 Id. at 24988.

companies from raising funds for new investment.10 This is a particularly important consideration for the retirement savers TIAA and Nuveen serve, for whom long-term investment performance and access to a broad, efficiently priced universe of public equities is essential. We respectfully urge the Commission to weigh these potential valuation and capital formation effects carefully before finalizing the Proposal in its current form.

E. Form 10-Q provides investors with important protections that are distinct from those offered by Form 8-K.

It is important to note that a quarterly earnings release, even if voluntarily issued by a semiannual filer, is not the functional equivalent of a Form 10-Q. Form 10-Q carries legal and procedural protections that a press release or Form 8-K furnishing does not. These include independent auditor review of financial statements, management certifications under Sections 302 and 906 of Sarbanes-Oxley, and formal "filed" status with associated Section 18 liability that enables efficient use by institutional investors and their analytical tools. If companies elect semiannual reporting and cease issuing quarterly earnings releases, investors will lose access to these important protections for two of the four quarters in each fiscal year. Even if some companies continue to issue voluntary quarterly releases, those releases do not carry the same legal weight or standardized structure as a Form 10-Q.

Additionally, while the Commission correctly observes that Form 8-K reporting has grown more timely and robust since quarterly reporting was first introduced, thereby providing investors with faster notification of material corporate events, this improvement should not be mistaken as a substitute for regular, comprehensive financial reporting. Knowing that a significant event has occurred is meaningfully different from understanding its financial consequences. The quantitative impact of a material event on a company's earnings, liquidity position, or balance sheet often takes time to fully emerge, and that information is best captured through structured periodic financial reporting rather than event-driven disclosure alone. Indeed, creating a longer gap between the announcement of a material event and the subsequent financial reporting that quantifies its impact could have the unintended effect of increasing market volatility, as investors are left to speculate about the magnitude of financial consequences in the absence of hard data. In this sense, Form 8-K improvements and quarterly financial reporting via Form 10-Q are complementary mechanisms, not interchangeable ones, and the strength of one should not be used to justify the weakening of the other.

F. Semiannual reporting may reduce accountability and the timeliness of error detection.

Independent auditor reviews of quarterly financial statements serve not just as an informational resource for investors, but as a critical internal check on the quality and accuracy of financial reporting. Less frequent auditor involvement may delay the identification and remediation of accounting misstatements and internal control deficiencies. This concern may be especially acute for smaller reporting companies, which may have less robust internal controls and fewer qualified accounting resources. The Commission's own economic analysis acknowledges this risk,11 and we would encourage the Commission to weigh it carefully.

10 Id. at 24989.

G. Semiannual reporting may impair cross-company comparability.

A disclosure environment in which some public companies report quarterly and others report semiannually (with varying fiscal year-end dates) would make it significantly more difficult for investors to compare companies' performance on a like-for-like basis, as the SEC notes in the Proposal.
12 This fragmentation of reporting frequency could increase analytical costs for institutional investors, reduce the accuracy and consistency of analyst forecasts, and impair the kind of rigorous portfolio monitoring that our fiduciary obligations require us to conduct on behalf of retirement savers.

IV. We urge the SEC to consider alternative approaches.

We recognize that the concerns we've shared above should not stand in the way of meaningful progress toward a more efficient and accessible public reporting regime. TIAA and Nuveen therefore wish to offer several constructive suggestions that we believe could help the Commission achieve its efficiency goals while preserving critical investor protections.

1. Many of the compliance cost concerns that motivate the Proposal are most acutely felt by smaller reporting companies and emerging growth companies, which may have limited accounting staff, tighter financial constraints, and fewer resources to dedicate to quarterly reporting obligations. A carefully calibrated approach might permit the semiannual option only for companies below a certain size threshold, while maintaining quarterly reporting for larger, more widely-held public companies whose disclosure practices more directly affect systemic market transparency. Alternatively, a pilot program limited to defined categories of issuers (e.g., pre-revenue emerging growth companies) could generate meaningful data on the actual effects of semiannual reporting before broader rollout.

2. Alternatively, the SEC itself discusses another potential means of achieving the Proposal's overarching goals – namely, streamlining the content requirements of Form 10-Q rather than reducing its frequency. We believe this alternative deserves serious consideration. Many of the compliance costs associated with quarterly reporting arise not from the cadence itself, but from the volume and complexity of required disclosures. The Commission could meaningfully reduce the burden on issuers (and most especially on smaller companies) by eliminating redundant, overlapping, or less material items from 11 See the Proposal's discussion of auditor reviews in Section V.D.3(b) ("Potential Costs"), Id. at 25004.

12 Id. at 25002.

3. Form 10-Q, or permitting more streamlined MD&A for companies that have recently filed a comprehensive annual report. These reforms would reduce costs without disrupting the quarterly information environment that investors rely upon.

Rather than broadly shifting all public companies from quarterly to semiannual reporting, the SEC might consider adopting a risk-based, tiered disclosure framework modeled on the approach implemented by Singapore Exchange Regulation in 2020. Under this model, quarterly reporting obligations would be preserved – and even strengthened – for companies that pose the greatest concern to investors and regulators, such as those that have received adverse, qualified, or going-concern audit opinions, companies facing material disclosure violations, or issuers under active regulatory scrutiny. All other companies could have the choice to transition to semiannual financial reporting, with the SEC actively encouraging (but not requiring) voluntary interim business updates, including narrative disclosures and interim financial statements, as a bridge to keep investors meaningfully informed between reporting periods. Critically, this framework should be paired with significantly enhanced continuous disclosure requirements, making explicit that issuers must promptly disclose not only materially price-sensitive developments but also any information that could affect market integrity or near-term earnings prospects.

V. Conclusion.

TIAA and Nuveen are grateful for the Commission's thoughtful efforts to modernize the public reporting framework, and we support the Commission's goal of making public markets more accessible and less burdensome for companies of all sizes. We hope the concerns and constructive suggestions set forth above are helpful to the Commission as it works to finalize the Proposal in a manner that reduces regulatory friction while preserving the high-quality, frequent, and reliable disclosure environment that has long been a hallmark of U.S. capital markets – and upon which millions of retirement savers ultimately depend. We stand ready to provide additional input as the Commission's work proceeds.

Sincerely,

Amy M. O'Brien

Yves P. Denizé

Tiffany Higher Education — Jul 6, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tiffany Keep quarterly reporting! Semi annual increases risk to investors and shareholders and keeps the general public in the dark. Please show that we can still trust in our institutions.

Tish Hall Retired — Jul 6, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tish Hall Every six months is too long for retirees that need to keep up with pennies. I already had to have a credit freeze put on for fraud and I sure don't want to wait six months to find problems. They already stopped most mailings so that saved a ton of money. It's just a report and the computers make it so send it to us quarterly. Quarterly reports are important to me. We can't pay our bills semiannually even though it would save us time and money.

Todd Stoeckel — Jul 6, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Todd Stoeckel There's a reason why they have to report Every quarter! I think they should report every month! Stop the stealing, paper trails are harder to bury!

Tom Booker The Motley Fool Community — Jul 6, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tom Booker -Quarterly reporting is a solid "equalizer" for the Retail Investor. We do not have access to in-between analyst conversations. Where tidbits of inflection can be a deciding factor. -I cannot see, nor connect, imperative thesis of a company only 2 times a year. This is the fastest world we have ever lived in when it comes to investing. A greater breadth of time will not open clarity between financial reports, it has higher risk of missing a working connection over Time.. - No doubt the Companies who may be advantaged to miss a bit here or there, will most certainly take advantage of that. Maybe at a politically alarming rate. -In 2000 we on-lined brokers to "democratize" markets. Since then, inequality has jncreased. Some new artifact of opacity will make it tougher. It took some thought and effort to move it along. But, We have been working for the light of day, cutting earnings reporting half will only cast shadows. -Surely you jest. Great companies may not be great companies, because of 2 extra communications?? For me, 27 years at TMF has proven clarity of activity "sharpens" your mental pencil. Choosing transparency will always be the right choice for all who participate. As it has been, so shall it be.

Traci D'Alessio Architect — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Traci D'Alessio Dear Secretary Countryman,I am writing to express my adamant opposition to the proposed rule under File Number S7-2026-15, which seeks to dismantle the mandatory quarterly reporting framework for public companies and move to a semiannual reporting cycle . Eliminating Form 10-Q filings is a massive step backward for market transparency and investor protection. A six-month reporting gap creates a dangerous blind spot for the public. In today's fast-moving economy, a company's financial health, supply chain stability, and operational viability can radically shift in a matter of weeks. Waiting half a year to discover financial distress or operational mismanagement puts capital at unacceptable risk . Furthermore, this rule actively harms retail investors. While institutional firms have the resources to buy alternative data pipelines, individual investors rely heavily on standardized, predictable quarterly filings to make fair investment decisions. Removing quarterly reports tilts the playing field even further against everyday Americans. It forces the market to rely on rumors and speculation, which will inevitably trigger extreme stock price volatility when data drops are finally forced every six months . The SEC's primary mission is to protect investors and maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets. This proposal does the exact opposite by institutionalizing opacity. I strongly urge the Commission to reject this proposal entirely and maintain the mandatory quarterly reporting framework . Thank you for your time and consideration of my comments.

Trevor Cooper none — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Trevor Cooper Allowing public companies to file financial reports twice a year instead of quarterly will no doubt damage individual investors (like me) who rely on timely company reporting in order to make sound investment decisions. Company financials provide by far the most important company data that is available to individual investors for assessing company health and judging leadership. This move will have a disparate and outsized impact on individual investors by facilitating additional opportunities for companies to mislead investors. For these reasons I strongly oppose allowing public companies to file financial reports twice a year instead of quarterly!

Tricia Bernhard Plant Controller — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tricia Bernhard Dear SEC: Reference – Changing the reporting from quarterly to semi-annually I disagree with this proposed rule change. Ultimately it will weaken the USA financial system and more importantly it will project an image of an unstable and an unpredictable market. Many of us in USA are depending on this for part of our retirement, including myself. As an accountant I find that this rule change is irresponsible and does not reflect what the majority of people want or need. Extending the 3month reporting to a 6 month blackout period of financial reporting is reduction in transparency and makes it harder to evaluate investments. I do not understand why a weaker market is the goal of this change, because that seems to be a choice being made by this proposed changed. I say leave the rule as it stands. Sincerely, Tricia Bernhard

---

Trina L. Ray — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Trina L. Ray I am commenting to register by opposition to moving to reporting every 6 months vs every quarter. A lot can happen in 6 months. I feel that the companies keep the books in order all the time and they should report monthly, but quarterly is the current law and it should not be less frequent than that. This is not to the advantage of the market. Hiding information for longer doesn't help anyone.

---

troy henson none — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: troy henson terrible idea. businesses would go out of business if they lived by the proposed policy.

Tyler Gellasch, President and Chief Executive Officer, Healthy Markets Association — Jul 6, 2026
(Failed to load)

Veronica Horstmanshoff — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Veronica Horstmanshoff Public trust in our system is low. Trust and transparency supports individual investors when making investing decisions. Reducing the amount and timing of information available to the individual investor increases uncertainty, which in turn leads to instability. Please to do not limit accessibility to our investment information. This change from quarterly to biannually reports has not proven effective and should not be allowed. Stability, transparency and informed participation is necessary for the sake of our nation’s prosperity.

Victor Juska CPA — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Victor Juska Quarterly reporting is much more transparent for shareholders. Please do not reduce required reporting to only twice per year.

Victoria King — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Victoria King I am writing to express my strong opposition to the SEC’s proposal to reduce corporate reporting frequency. Moving from a quarterly disclosure framework to a semiannual one is a massive step backward for market integrity. It directly harms everyday citizens while favoring corporate insiders. Decreasing the frequency of required disclosures severely damages market transparency. A six-month reporting gap creates a black box where bad corporate actors can hide financial misconduct, inflating balances or masking operational failures for half a year before disclosure is required. This massive window of silence invites corporate fraud. It leaves auditors, whistleblowers, and regulators flat-footed. In the long run, this policy will deeply hurt the broader economy. When transparency decreases, public trust in the financial system erodes. As retail investors realize the game is rigged against them, capital will exit the public markets. This loss of trust increases the cost of capital for honest companies and dampens market liquidity. The U.S. capital markets are the envy of the world precisely because of our rigorous transparency standards, not in spite of them. Downgrading these standards will ultimately weaken our competitive edge . The SEC should protect investors and promote market efficiency. This proposal fails on both counts. I strongly urge the Commission to withdraw this rule and maintain mandatory quarterly reporting.

Vincent Vitiello — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vincent Vitiello Please keep the reporting frequency unchanged. Longer reporting gaps lead to less transparency for investors. Both positive and negative result swings at longer reporting intervals could lead to greater volatility. Public companies have a responsibility to regularly report information to shareholders. This rules change relaxes the responsibility in a negative way.

W Hickey — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: W Hickey Quarterly is best

---

Wendy Emo investor — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wendy Emo I am adamantly opposed to the option for companies to not report quarterly. Under no circumstances should this be allowed.

William Anderson — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Anderson I am writing to express my firm opposition to this rule change. This will put the ordinary Main Street investor at risk by making them less informed about the companies whose stocks they own and might depend on in order to build a nest egg. This will only serve to facilitate corruption at the expense of everyday Americans. Individual investors need to be informed so that they can make the right decisions for themselves and their families. This proposed rule change will leave investors less informed.

William Bomar — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Bomar Keep reporting Quarterly. Biannual reporting would reduce volume by dampening investor interest in the markets. It would leave investors flying blind for 6 months. A lot can go wrong, including failed projects, ballooning debt, lawsuits, and reduced customer base. Biannual reporting allows more time for fraud, waste, and abuse to grow. Quarterly reporting shortens the window in which it can fester before it is noticed by those outside the company and investors. Biannual reporting HURTS the small investor and potentially hurts 401K and retirement income for the average person. Only those who sit in board meetings or get the regular insider reports will benefit. NO Biannual Reporting. Keep Reporting Quarterly.

William Hamilton — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Hamilton Dear Members of the Securities and Exchange

Commission: I respectfully urge the SEC to reject the proposed amendment that would make quarterly reporting optional for domestic public companies. The Historical Record: US Experience (1955–1970) The United States conducted a natural experiment with semi-annual reporting between 1955 and 1970. The evidence is clear and instructive. During this 15-year period: • Real annual stock returns were significantly lower compared to the 56-year period of quarterly reporting that followed (1970–today) • Valuation multiples (P/E ratios) were substantially depressed, sitting at levels comparable to or below current international semi-annual markets • Investors paid the price: the correlation between reduced transparency and reduced valuations is not merely coincidental—it is written into the market's historical record When the SEC corrected course in 1970, restoring mandatory quarterly reporting, it was not an arbitrary choice. The Commission explicitly stated that "the trading markets should have the benefit of quarterly financial information" (SEC Release No. 34-8683, Sept. 15, 1969). The proponents of semi-annual reporting have not explained why this time should be different—why the same reduction in disclosure frequency that coincided with lower valuations and returns would somehow produce better outcomes today. Information Asymmetry and Investor Harm Quarterly reporting is not burdensome transparency—it is essential transparency. The SEC's proposal acknowledges that companies can still file Form 8-K disclosures of material events, but this is a false equivalence: • Form 8-K filings are reactive, not proactive. They disclose events that management deems "material"—but who decides? Companies have every incentive to minimize and delay disclosure of adverse information. • Quarterly earnings reports are independent, verified disclosures. Auditors review the financials. The CEO and CFO must certify them under Sarbanes-Oxley. Audit committees oversee them. There is an institutional framework ensuring that material financial information cannot be indefinitely withheld. • Six-month information gaps create opportunity for concealment. A company performing poorly in Q1 and Q2 can remain silent for six months while making strategic decisions based on information investors do not have. By the time a semi-annual report is filed, management has already acted—adjusted compensation, authorized repurchases, or made capital allocation decisions—based on private knowledge. The Liquidity and Market Efficiency Cost Reduced reporting frequency demonstrably reduces analyst coverage and trading liquidity. International evidence from Europe shows: • When the UK and EU eliminated mandatory quarterly reporting mandates (2013–2014), companies that switched to semi-annual-only reporting experienced measurable declines in analyst coverage relative to peers that maintained quarterly reporting • Liquidity declined for companies adopting semi-annual-only disclosure • While some analyses show valuations remained comparable, this masks an important reality: less visibility and coverage are not benefits to investors—they are costs. A "comparable valuation" achieved with less information and less analyst attention is a warning sign, not a success story. Who Benefits? Who Bears the Risk? The SEC proposes this change to reduce company compliance costs. The SEC's own analysis estimates $198,000 in annual savings per company. But costs are not distributed equally: • Large companies will continue voluntary quarterly reporting to maintain analyst coverage and investor confidence • Smaller and mid-cap companies will adopt semi-annual-only reporting to save money • The cost of this reduced transparency is borne entirely by retail and institutional investors, who will have less information, fewer analysts covering their holdings, and lower market liquidity in those securities This transfers private benefit (company cost savings) to public cost (investor information loss). The Fraud and Concealment Risk The SEC cites Form 8-K and Regulation FD as safeguards. But: • Material misstatement in financial statements is not a "material event" requiring Form 8-K disclosure—it only becomes visible at the next required reporting date • Accounting fraud and earnings manipulation thrive in information gaps. A company can mask deteriorating fundamentals through selective disclosure and accounting choices during a six-month dark period • Enron, WorldCom, and other accounting disasters occurred or were made possible by management's ability to control the flow of information. Semi-annual reporting expands the window during which material facts can remain hidden. Recommendation I urge the SEC to maintain mandatory quarterly reporting for all domestic public companies. If the SEC seeks to reduce compliance burdens, it should consider: • Scaled disclosure requirements for smaller reporting companies (more streamlined Form 10-Q filings) • Optional quarterly reporting for pre-revenue or early-stage companies, not all issuers • Harmonized standards that reduce redundant or boilerplate disclosures without reducing frequency Quarterly reporting is not the cause of myopic corporate decision-making—rigorous quarterly reporting actually enables long-term investors to identify and pressure companies that sacrifice long-term value for short-term results. It is the absence of transparency that enables managerial myopia. The cost savings to companies do not justify the information loss to investors. The SEC was right in 1970, and it should remain right today. Respectfully submitted, William Hamilton (earlier I tried to use your file upload and it was not clear if it worked so I am submitting the comments here. Sorry if they're duplicated)

William Kunick private investor — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Kunick If you switch to semiannual reporting you will be favoring corporate insiders along with anyone with inside information. Please keep quarterly reporting and prove you still care about the middle class of this country.

William Lyman, Lyman Management Group, Corp — Jul 6, 2026
LYMAN MANAGEMENT GROUP CORP
2000 Mallory Lane, Suite 130-272 · Franklin, TN 37067
WLyman@LMG-Corp.com · 770.335.2740
July 4, 2026
Via Electronic Submission
Ms. Vanessa A. Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street NE
Washington, DC 20549-1090
Re: Comment on Proposed Rule — Semiannual Reporting Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140; File No. S7-2026-15
Dear Ms. Countryman:
I write in response to the Commission's request for comment on the above-captioned proposal, which would permit Exchange Act reporting companies to elect semiannual interim reporting on a new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q. I am a Chartered Financial Analyst and the President of Lyman Management Group Corp, through which I provide fractional chief financial officer and financial-advisory services to early-stage and growth-stage private companies, ranging from pre-revenue enterprises to companies with roughly $100 million in annual revenue. I also served for several years as a general partner of an early-stage venture capital fund. That experience — as both an investor in, and a financial officer to, private companies — gives me first-hand familiarity with how such companies are capitalized and with the structural dynamics of the private capital markets, the markets from which the Commission hopes this proposal will draw new entrants to the public markets.
I urge the Commission not to adopt the proposed semiannual reporting election, and to retain quarterly reporting as the mandatory baseline for reporting companies. I write in particular to make a point that, in my review, is largely absent from the comment record: the proposal is unlikely to achieve its central capital-formation objective, because the forces keeping companies private are structural to the private markets and have little to do with the frequency of interim reporting.
I. The proposal is unlikely to achieve its central objective, because the forces keeping companies private are structural to the private capital markets and unrelated to interim-reporting frequency.

The Commission grounds this proposal substantially in the long-term decline in the number of U.S. public companies and in the premise that easing the burdens of being public will encourage more companies to enter and remain in the public markets.1 The decline is real. The number of U.S. exchange-listed companies has fallen from roughly 7,500 in the late 1990s to around 4,000 today, and companies now go public far later in their lives: the median age of firms at IPO, long stable at about seven years, has trended upward, with the average age of companies going public reaching fourteen years in 2024.2 But the drivers of that trend are structural features of the private markets, not the frequency of interim reporting.

Several developments explain why. First, the statutory trigger that once forced companies public has been relaxed: the Jumpstart Our Business Startups Act of 2012 raised the Section 12(g) holder-of-record registration threshold from 500 to 2,000 persons and excluded holders who received their shares under employee compensation plans — the threshold that had historically pushed widely held private companies, including Google and Facebook, toward registration. Companies may now remain private, as a practical matter, for as long as they choose.3 Second, private capital has become both abundant and willing to write very large checks. Assets under management in the private markets reached roughly $13 trillion by mid-2023, having grown at nearly twenty percent per year since 2018,4 and financing rounds once regarded as anomalies — hundreds of millions, and increasingly billions, of dollars — have become routine: the number of private companies valued at $1 billion or more has grown from a few dozen little more than a decade ago to well over a thousand today.5 A company can therefore raise at public-market scale while remaining private and retaining founder and investor control of its board — and while remaining outside the external 1See Semiannual Reporting, Release No. 33-11414 (May 5, 2026); Statement of Chairman Paul S. Atkins on the Proposing Release for Semiannual Reporting (May 5, 2026) (grounding the proposal in the long-term decline in the number of U.S. public companies and the objective of encouraging companies to enter and remain in the public markets).

2The number of U.S. exchange-listed companies has fallen from roughly 7,500 in the late 1990s to approximately 4,000, and the age of companies at IPO has risen — the median age of firms going public, long stable at about seven years, has trended upward, with the average age reaching fourteen years in 2024. See Jay R. Ritter, Initial Public Offerings: Updated Statistics, and the underlying IPO data, Univ. of Fla., Warrington Coll. of Bus., https://site.warrington.ufl.edu/ritter/ipo-data/.

3Jumpstart Our Business Startups Act of 2012, Pub. L. No. 112-106; see 15 U.S.C. 78l(g) (raising the Section 12(g) holder-of-record registration threshold from 500 to 2,000 persons, or 500 persons who are not accredited investors, and excluding holders who received securities under employee compensation plans and in exempt crowdfunding offerings). Because Congress fixed the threshold by statute, the Commission cannot alter the number by rule; it has, however, placed on its agenda changes to how holders of record are counted — for example, looking through investment vehicles to their beneficial owners — that would draw large private companies into the reporting regime.

4Private-markets assets under management reached $13.1 trillion as of June 30, 2023, having grown nearly twenty percent per year since 2018. See McKinsey & Co., Global Private Markets Report 2024 (Mar. 2024), https://www.mckinsey.com/industries/private-capital/our-insights/global-private-markets-report-2024; McKinsey &

Co., Global Private Markets Report (2026), https://www.mckinsey.com/industries/private-capital/our-insights/global-private-markets-report.
5The term “unicorn” — a private company valued at $1 billion or more — was coined in 2013 to describe a then-rare group of thirty-nine such U.S. companies; there are now well over a thousand active unicorns worldwide, and the roughly 830 active U.S. unicorns carry an aggregate valuation of approximately $3.9 trillion, on the order of a tenfold increase over the past decade. Financing rounds of $100 million or more, once regarded as anomalies, have become commonplace. See PitchBook, Unicorn Companies List and Tracker, https://pitchbook.com/news/articles/unicorn-startups-list-trends; PitchBook-NVCA Venture Monitor (the authoritative quarterly report on U.S. venture-capital activity).

accountability that public status imposes, a preference of insiders that, as I discuss below, is itself a reason to preserve mandatory disclosure rather than relax it. Third, the most promising companies increasingly stay private because that is where the value now accrues: rigorous evidence finds that as the supply of venture capital has grown, the highest-quality firms hold back from public issuance to capture the superior valuations available in private markets, leaving public investors to buy in later, at a more mature stage, and to forgo the high-growth phase that now occurs before the IPO.6

Fourth — and here I speak from direct experience as a former general partner — the economics of the private fund model reinforce all of this. A closed-end venture or private-equity fund captures the value created while a portfolio company is private, and its managers have every incentive to prolong that period rather than transfer the remaining appreciation to public shareholders. A well-capitalized private company can, moreover, use its privately valued equity as acquisition currency, removing one of the traditional reasons to pursue a listing — though a liquid public stock has historically been the stronger acquisition currency, so this consideration cuts less sharply than the others.

What ties these drivers together is that not one of them is the frequency of interim reporting — and the conduct of the sophisticated parties the proposal is meant to influence confirms as much. The venture and private-equity investors who control these companies, and the companies themselves, are profit-maximizers. If the risk-adjusted economics of an earlier public listing were favorable, they would list, and they would readily accept a quarterly reporting obligation whose cost is trivial in relation to the sums at stake. That they instead remain private — when a listing is plainly available to companies of this scale — demonstrates that reporting cadence is not the consideration that governs the decision; the companies that dominate the staying-private trend are precisely those large enough to go public at will and choosing not to. Reducing the number of interim reports therefore addresses a cost that is not the binding constraint on the decision to remain private, and is unlikely to reverse the trend the Commission cites, while it would degrade the investor-protection and market-quality functions that quarterly reporting serves. If the Commission’s objective is to rebalance the public and private markets, the operative levers lie on the private-market side — including the holder-of-record counting questions the Commission has itself placed on its agenda — not in diluting the disclosure obligations of companies that have already chosen the public markets.

II. An optional regime routes the interim-reporting decision through management’s agency conflict, which the release’s framing assumes away.

6See Amrita Nain, Jie Ying & Joseph Arthur, The Rise of Venture Capital and IPO Quality, Journal of Empirical

Finance (2025), https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jempfin.2025.101613 (working paper available at https://ssrn.com/abstract=4560514) (finding that an increased supply of venture capital leads the most promising firms to hold back from public issuance in favor of the superior valuations available privately, so that companies go public older and more mature and public investors are left to forgo the high-return phase that occurs while a company is private).

The proposing release frames the reporting-frequency decision as one to be made by "the company and its investors."7 In practice, the election is made by management and the board; investors do not vote on it. Management has private incentives to prefer less frequent reporting that are independent of, and often adverse to, the interests of shareholders — reduced external scrutiny of interim performance, a lighter preparation burden, and diminished visibility of operating results to competitors and potential acquirers. That the insiders who control private companies value the reduced accountability of private status, as noted above, is itself evidence of this divergence. To describe the resulting reduction in transparency as a "choice" made jointly with investors is to assume away the agency conflict that mandatory disclosure exists to constrain.

The downstream consequence — adverse selection — is already well developed in the comment record, and I associate myself with those analyses rather than repeat them: the issuers most likely to drop an interim period are the smaller, weaker-performing, and less-followed companies whose investors most need frequent, verified disclosure, so an optional regime tends to increase information asymmetry rather than reduce it. The Commission's own Investor Advisory Committee and the empirical literature on reporting frequency reach the same conclusion.8

III. The proposal's universal eligibility cannot be reconciled with its narrowly framed justification; any relief should be confined by objective threshold to the small and specialized issuers the Commission invokes.

The Commission justifies the proposal largely by reference to specific hardship cases — for example, development-stage companies, such as clinical-stage biotechnology issuers, whose operations change little between quarters and for which quarterly reporting imposes high fixed costs relative to the limited new information produced.9 The proposed rule, however, extends the semiannual election to all Exchange Act reporting companies that currently file on Form 10-Q, without limitation by filer status, public float, or revenue.10 This is difficult to reconcile with the rationale advanced: as set out above, the companies that dominate the staying-private trend are large, well-capitalized firms for which a listing is an available choice and the reporting burden is immaterial, not the development-stage issuers the Commission invokes.

7Semiannual Reporting, Release No. 33-11414 (May 5, 2026); see also Press Release, U.S. Sec. & Exch. Comm'n,
"SEC Proposes Amendments to Permit Optional Semiannual Reporting by Public Companies" (May 5, 2026).

8See Investor Advisory Committee, Draft Recommendation Regarding Quarterly vs. Semiannual Reporting (2026) (concluding that the issuers least likely to retain quarterly reporting are those with the most decision-useful information, so that an optional regime tends to increase, rather than reduce, information asymmetry); see also, e.g., Renhui Fu et al., Financial Reporting Frequency, Information Asymmetry, and the Cost of Equity, 54 J. Acct. & Econ. 132 (2012); Tobias Bornemann et al., The Consequences of Abandoning the Quarterly Reporting Mandate in the Prime Market Segment (European Accounting Review) (studying the German Prime Market).

9See Semiannual Reporting, Release No. 33-11414 (May 5, 2026) (economic analysis); see also public remarks of Chairman Atkins (citing pre-approval biotechnology issuers as an example of companies for which quarterly reporting imposes disproportionate cost relative to limited operational change).

10Semiannual Reporting, Release No. 33-11414 (May 5, 2026) (the semiannual election would be available to Exchange Act reporting companies that currently file on Form 10-Q, with eligibility not restricted by filer type).

If the Commission's concern is genuinely the disproportionate burden borne by small and development-stage issuers, the remedy should be tailored to that population and should take the large issuers off the table altogether. Any semiannual election should be made unavailable to accelerated filers and large accelerated filers, and confined to non-accelerated filers as that category is presently defined — a class that, through its revenue prong, already encompasses the pre- and low-revenue development-stage companies, including clinical-stage biotechnology issuers, on which the Commission's hardship rationale rests. A universal opt-out available to issuers of every size is overbroad relative to the justification advanced, and its breadth is difficult to square with the representation that the relief is directed at particular hardship situations.
Confining the relief by reference to a filer-status category carries one caveat the Commission should address directly: the relief must be fixed to the thresholds as presently defined, and must not be permitted to expand automatically through the redefinition of those categories in a separate proceeding. The Commission has concurrently proposed, in Simplification of Filer Status, to eliminate the smaller-reporting-company and accelerated-filer categories and to raise the large-accelerated-filer public-float threshold from $700 million to $2 billion, with the result that non-accelerated-filer status would become the default for an estimated 81 percent of reporting companies.11 A semiannual election keyed to non-accelerated-filer status would, under that expanded definition, reach the very large, well-capitalized issuers this comment would exclude, converting a narrow accommodation into a broad deregulation of interim disclosure by operation of a parallel rulemaking. Accordingly, any frequency relief should be confined by reference to the non-accelerated-filer thresholds in effect as of the date of this rulemaking — a public float below $75 million, or annual revenues below $100 million with a public float below $700 million — rather than to that category as it may subsequently be enlarged.
IV. The asserted cost savings are overstated, because the burden lies in the reporting apparatus, which the proposal retains.
Modern accounting and financial-planning functions close the books within days of period end, and the production of the underlying figures is increasingly automated. The cost of interim reporting lies not in generating the numbers but in the external apparatus that surrounds the filing: independent-auditor interim review, legal and disclosure-controls review, Inline XBRL tagging, officer certifications, and internal-control compliance — requirements the proposal expressly retains for semiannual filers.12 These fixed costs do not scale with the frequency of the underlying close, and for the small issuers the proposal ostensibly targets they are the binding constraint. To 11Simplification of Filer Status, Release Nos. 33-11419; 34-105515; File No. S7-2026-18 (May 19, 2026) (proposing to collapse the existing filer-status categories into large accelerated filers and non-accelerated filers, to raise the large-accelerated-filer public-float threshold from $700 million to $2 billion, and to extend scaled-disclosure accommodations to all non-accelerated filers, an estimated 81 percent of reporting companies); comments due July 20, 2026.
12Semiannual Reporting, Release No. 33-11414 (May 5, 2026) (semiannual reports on new Form 10-S would contain the same disclosures as Form 10-Q, would be reviewed by the issuer's independent accountant, would be tagged in Inline XBRL, and would remain subject to existing officer-certification, disclosure-controls, and internal-control-over-financial-reporting requirements).

the extent the Commission seeks to relieve genuine burden, streamlining the content or review requirements of interim reports for smaller issuers would be far better targeted than eliminating an entire reporting period for issuers of every size.
Conclusion
The opportunity to raise capital from the public is extended on the condition of transparency to that public. This Commission's mission expressly includes the protection of investors and the maintenance of fair, orderly, and efficient markets — both of which depend on the timely, comparable, and verified flow of issuer information. For more than fifty years, quarterly reporting has been a low and steadily declining-cost means of discharging that obligation. The case for diluting it has not been made, and the proposal is in any event poorly targeted to the capital-formation goal it invokes. To the extent the proposal also rests on concerns about managerial short-termism, the empirical evidence on that question is contested and is fully addressed elsewhere in the record; I do not rehearse it here.
I therefore respectfully urge the Commission to retain mandatory quarterly reporting for Exchange Act reporting companies. Should the Commission nonetheless proceed, I urge that any semiannual election be (i) made unavailable to accelerated and large accelerated filers and confined to non-accelerated filers as presently defined, pinned to the thresholds now in effect; (ii) conditioned on the continued furnishing of material financial results on Form 8-K within the existing quarterly cadence; and (iii) accompanied by prominent, standardized disclosure of each issuer's reporting frequency, so that investors may price the difference.
I appreciate the opportunity to comment on the proposal and would welcome the chance to discuss these views further.
Respectfully submitted,
William Lyman, CFA
President, Lyman Management Group Corp

WILMA NORSWORTHY RETIRED — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: WILMA NORSWORTHY DO NOT CHANGE THE REPORTING PERIOD FOR FINANCIAL INSTITUTION. KEEEP IT QUARTERLY.

Yatin Patil — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Yatin Patil There should be at least quarterly updates for transparency

---

Youness Afqir — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Youness Afqir 6 months is too much time for individual investors to wait for financial reports. We use these reports to measure the company's success or potential success in order to make better decisions about our investments. The less we measure, the less transparency individual investors have. This is simply not a remedy.

---

zachary reindl bachelors in accounting — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: zachary reindl One reason to change the security laws is to help investors. Reducing from four to two earnings events would increase volitility around those events and give them more significance. Also, once companies select semi-annually, they cannot just flip back to quarterly forth at their pleasure. Maybe set this for an arbitrary amount of time such as 5 years, to promote fair presentation related to consitancy of financial statements. Another reason to change to semiannual reporting would be that it would save a lot of time and money in preparing financial statements by companies. And these days, I reckon the majority of investors are investing in trends and not even reading financial statements. Increasing time between earnings events would increase uncertainty around financial position of a security for those investors who do read financial statements; as any investor should.

Zaine Remus private investor — Jul 6, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Zaine Remus Please keep the corporate financial reporting requirements the same as they are today. We need current information to make investment decisions. Thank you - Zaine Remus

---

Adam Safier Retired. Former IT professional — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adam Safier Dear Sirs, Please maintain quarterly financial reporting requirements on corporations, or increase the frequency to Monthly. In the age of computers, automation and AI there is no reason reduce the frequency of reporting of income and expenditures. Indeed, computerized repots provide automation of the process of generating cash flow reports. As share holders of a company, we deserve to know what is going on. Indeed, monthly reporting would be more appropriate. Do you pay your bills semi-annually? Or do you pay your bills and balance your personal budget monthly? The argument that CEOs are focusing on short term results makes no sense. They focus on annual results and their annual bonus, not quarterly results. The real problem is that they are not focused on results 5 to 10 years down the road, just their annual bonus and options. If you want better long term results pass a ruling that 1/2 of executive options cannot be exercised for a minimum of 5 years and the other half cannot be exercised until 10 years after grant. I don't expect you to do this but if you want to move the needle on executive focus, this would really make the difference that strengthens US economic long term performance. If you are going to reform reporting requirements and corporate governance, let the share holders see the cash flows and financials of the corporations more frequently rather than less.

Alexander Gardea No affiliation to any financial institution — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexander Gardea Hello. I’m firmly against this proposal. The statute was made to prevent a fraud similar to Enron’s, and annual filings don’t tell us the full story, and it simply doesn’t accomplish the goal you are striving for. Simply put, these companies should already be looking to cover their long-term goals while providing full incentives and information to us as stockholders. An annual filing is not going to cover what individual shareholders need to know in order to invest and could result in fraud and abuse by some companies. We want transparency and accountability, and if this burdens the executives or the top management, so be it. If this goes through, the SEC should be liable at some extent if any fraud is committed by using this annual filings. Americans care about their savings and investments, this is very relevant for the commons people and small investors, the ones you call retail investors. Do your job and stop complaining. Regards.

Alison Bober Retired Systems Accountant — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alison Bober It is not burdensome to require companies to continue to report financial data quarterly - they will continue to record it for their own company planning anyway. Changing to reporting semi-annually would just create more opportunities for companies to hide financial problems, or for insiders to benefit from non-public knowledge about upcoming financially-related events or issues. Transparency is often directly related to accountability, which informs and encourages good management. Please do not make it easier for companies to slide into poor or deceitful management. Thank you.

Allison Quinn Parks System Naturalist — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Allison Quinn My name is Allison, I work for the Parks System in New Jersey, and it is a right for the citizens of the United States to be able to view the plans and processes of big business, as, if carried out, they often impact citizens directly and potentially negatively. These impacts do not always stay local, but can impact people across the city, state, and even country. It is our right to know what is impacting us as a community and as citizens, and by removing quarterly reporting you risk taking this right away from us. Do reconsider. Thank you.

Amber Kent Citizen and investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amber Kent I strongly oppose giving publicly traded organizations the opportunity to lower their reporting burden. They are beholden to all of their stakeholders, not just the elite few, and should regularly be providing information on their solvency and recieving feedback from this individual when in a downturn. If they want less accountability, they should remain private.

Andrew McFain Ameren — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew McFain This does not benefit investors in any way. It’s directly reducing the resolution of information available to investors and only serves to limit their ability to make decisions about their investments.

Andrew Mount — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Mount Dear SEC, I am opposed to semi-annual reporting. It advantages large institutions and brokerage firms at the expense of retail traders, limiting investors' ability to monitor risks and financial health in real-time. Quarterly reporting is a foundational component of U.S. capital market efficiency; transitioning to a six-month reporting gap increases information asymmetry. Thank you for taking this comment into consideration.

Andrew Ober — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Ober Designation: File Number S7-2026-15 Proposed Rule: Amendments to Permit Optional Semiannual Reporting by Public Companies Dear Secretary, I am writing to express my strong opposition to the Commission's proposal to permit optional semiannual reporting for public companies. As a retail investor and an active member of an investment club affiliated with BetterInvesting (the National Association of Investors), I believe this shift will severely disadvantage individual investors, degrade market transparency, and impose severe structural costs on educational non-profits. I oppose this rule change for the following critical reasons: Severe Financial Burden on Educational Non-Profits: BetterInvesting is a non-profit organization dedicated to teaching individuals how to become successful long-term investors. Our proprietary stock analysis tools, data feeds, and educational software are hardcoded around quarterly Form 10-Q cycles. Eliminating regular quarterly updates would force a massive, costly overhaul of our software architecture. For a non-profit organization, this unexpected development expense is a tremendous financial hardship. Massive Retraining Disruptions: This change would fundamentally disrupt the educational materials and methodologies we use to train tens of thousands of members and volunteers nationwide. Overhauling our entire curriculum to account for a fragmented "hybrid" system of some companies reporting quarterly and others semiannually would create widespread confusion and drain our limited non-profit resources. Damage to Investment Clubs: Investment clubs rely heavily on uniform, predictable quarterly data to conduct regular stock studies, manage portfolio risk, and make collaborative, democratic purchasing decisions. Moving to a six-month reporting vacuum makes it impossible for everyday citizens to practice safe, data-driven fundamental analysis. Exacerbating Market Information Asymmetry: If public companies drop quarterly filings, institutional investors will bridge the gap by securing private access to corporate management or using costly alternative data streams. Retail investors do not have these resources. This rule will widen the gap between Wall Street and Main Street, leaving individual investors entirely in the dark for six months at a time. The "Voluntary 8-K" Workaround is Insufficient: Relying on voluntary quarterly earnings releases via Form 8-K is not a substitute for a standardized Form 10-Q. Voluntary releases lack the rigorous financial disclosures, standardized balance sheets, and formal legal accountability required in mandatory SEC filings, rendering them unreliable for structural programmatic analysis. For over 50 years, quarterly transparency has been the bedrock of the U.S. capital markets, providing a level playing field for everyday investors. Forcing non-profits and retail clubs to bear the financial and structural costs of reduced corporate transparency is counterproductive to the SEC's core mission of investor protection. I strongly urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain mandatory quarterly reporting. Thank you.

ANN HUMPHREY retired — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: ANN HUMPHREY I strongly urge the Commission to vote against changing the reporting requirements to semi-annual rather than quarterly. Quarterly reporting provides investors with essential information. It also supports the SEC duty to protect investors and maintain a fair and orderly market. The world moves at a much faster pace than it used to, especially the financial and information sectors. Quarterly reporting is a bare minimum requirement. Please retain quarterly reporting.

Annie Garraway None — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Annie Garraway I am strongly opposed to this proposal, S7-2026-15.

Annonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Annonymous Semi annual reporting puts companies at an unfair advantage and investors at a disadvantage .

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Please keep corporate expenditures quarterly, it will continue to allow the general public to make sound decisions on their investment portfolios.

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Transparency from our institutions and businesses of all types—government, public, private, non-profits, etc.—is of the utmost importance and especially so when so many of them are attempting to corral the citizenry into an unconstitutional surveillance system. Keep Quarterly Reporting.

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I would prefer that the SEC to continue the practice of quarterly reporting for all sized companies. Individual investors, professional money managers, and institutions, need to hear from the companies they have invested in. We need to see the financial numbers and hear the context. We need see how our capital is invested and to what end. Quarterly reporting gives us information regarding the financial status of the company. Removing it, or granting permission to lesson the frequency of reporting, reduces our access to information and could grant advantages to larger players in the market who already have significant resources and advantages. Our focus on long-term investing does not mean we do not attention to quarterly results. We need quarterly reporting so we can make insightful, purposeful, informed decisions. Keep quarterly reporting.

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I am oppose to reducing quarterly reporting. As a college student, I am looking for transparency and consistency in data. Removing the requirement for quarterly reporting would create major information gaps, unfair advantages, and elevated risk.

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous To Whom it May Concern, S7-2026-15 appears to be a new avenue for reducing oversight developed to protect investors. I agree with attempting to get a focus on longer term goals, however, it seems many companies use longer term goals as part of the executive compensation packages which is a solid way to keep the focus longer term. As a prior finance employee of a corporation and performing consolidations and reporting functions, I can see where costs for a company would be reduced. On the other hand, as a retired individual investor, allowing companies to voluntarily move to a 6 month reporting schedule concerns me. It’s possible I will simply invest less in companies who choose to follow this path because of less understanding of the trajectory they are on with more uncertainty of when things change for the good or the bad. I do not agree with moving to a 6 month reporting schedule. Transparency is important for all investors to have and the less opportunity for people in the know to act on a downward turn while general investors are not updated is simply not something I agree with. Thank you.

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Please continue with quarterly reporting and do NOT change the rule in favor of semi-annual reporting. (1) Democracies require as much transparency as possible. Moving to less frequent reporting invites greater obfuscation, secrecy and abuse. (2) Problems and shortcomings of quarterly reporting can be addressed creatively in more positive and constructive ways than this proposed change. Thank you.

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous This matters to all Americans with investment retirement funds for the following reasons: 1. The signature is the deterrent. Four times a year, the CEO and CFO must each put their name to the company's books, certifying they've reviewed the report and that it contains no untrue statement of a material fact. Knowingly certify a false one: up to $1 million and 10 years in federal prison. Do it willfully: up to $5 million and 20 years. The proposal cuts those certified filings from four to two. Half as many moments when anyone at the top must stake their freedom on the truth. 02. Enron's defense was "I didn't know." Congress closed it. Enron's executives claimed ignorance of their own books, so Congress made ignorance impossible to claim. Every quarter, the CEO and CFO certify that they personally designed and evaluated the controls that surface bad news, and that they reported any weaknesses or fraud to the auditors. The law claws back executive bonuses even without proof the boss was personally involved. Halve the filings, and you halve the quarters where "I didn't know" is off the table. 03 8-Ks don't come with handcuffs. The SEC says current reports and press releases will fill the gap. Read the fine print: earnings releases ride on Form 8-K as "furnished," not "filed." That category exempts them from the automatic liability filed reports carry. No outside auditor reviews them, and no certification is required even when an 8-K contains financial statements. The SEC's own proposal concedes the problem. The 8-K may contain information, but it lacks any accountability. 04 We watched the signature crack a $2.7 billion fraud. Sarbanes-Oxley became law on July 30, 2002. Six days later, HealthSouth's CFO tried to quit rather than certify numbers he knew were fake: "he just couldn't sign the certifications." Months later he went to federal prosecutors and became the first of fifteen executives to plead guilty in a $2.7 billion fraud. A certification costs an honest executive nothing to sign, it just exposes the fraudsters. Why roll them back?

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous The law was enacted for a reason. Circumstances have not changed. Business operations have. Keep the checks and balances in place.

---

anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: anonymous As an interested personal investor I very much want to encourage the SEC to retain quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. Quarterly reporting is very important to all investors in order for us to be able to make informed investment decisions. For investors, especially retail investors, more information is better information, and more frequent information allows us to be more fully informed as we make investment decisions. Do not change the reporting rules.

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I'll be brief. In this time of economic uncertainty and overall instability, we cannot reduce our visibility into corporate entities. Keep mandatory quarterly reports. Semi-annual is too infrequent. Our economic landscape shifts by the week, by the day even. We need to know (as frequently as possible) how our economic drivers are meeting the moment so we can make informed decisions.

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous The quarterly reporting rule should remain mandatory to retain accountability and oversight. Moving to a semianual reporting rule leaves room for larger corporations to skirt transparency and fail to report altogether. By the time there is an earnings dip investors would be caught unawares. The quarterly reporting rule protects the corporation by enforcing transparency and upholds the mission of the SEC in protecting the investor.

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous We need more transparency, not less. Everyday investors' interests should be protected, not just insiders interests.

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I strongly urge policy makers to reject the proposed change regarding quarterly reporting. The public has a right to information into publicity traded companies. The proposed rule simply removes accountability and clarity from investors, disincentivizing domestic investment. Please reject the proposed rule.

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I respectfully request that the reporting remain quarterly. Companies need more accountability, not less. The public has a right to see changes in information and be able to make informed decisions on their investments.

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I respectfully oppose the proposal because reducing the frequency of required periodic reporting would likely diminish transparency, impair price discovery, and reduce investors' ability to make informed decisions. The SEC's mission includes protecting investors and maintaining fair, orderly, and efficient markets. Timely disclosure is fundamental to achieving those objectives. Quarterly reporting provides investors with regular updates on a company's financial condition, operating performance, liquidity, material risks, and changes in management's outlook. Eliminating one or more interim reports would create substantially longer periods during which investors would have limited standardized financial information. Research suggests that more frequent financial reporting is associated with reduced information asymmetry and improved market efficiency. Regular disclosure helps ensure that all investors—not just sophisticated institutional investors with access to private research, receive material information on a consistent basis. Less frequent reporting may increase uncertainty and contribute to greater reliance on rumors, selective disclosures, analyst estimates, or other non-standardized sources of information. The proposal may also have unintended consequences for market volatility. With fewer required reporting events, more material information could accumulate between reporting periods, resulting in larger price adjustments when reports are ultimately released. More frequent reporting allows markets to incorporate new information incrementally rather than in larger, less predictable intervals. While some have argued that quarterly reporting encourages short-term decision-making, the empirical evidence on this issue is mixed. Academic research has not established that reducing mandatory reporting frequency meaningfully improves long-term corporate investment or innovation. Conversely, there is substantial evidence that timely disclosure lowers information risk and supports market liquidity. In addition, optional reporting frequency could reduce comparability among issuers. If some companies report quarterly while others report semiannually, investors may face greater challenges comparing financial performance, trends, and risk across firms and industries. Such inconsistency could particularly disadvantage retail investors who rely heavily on standardized SEC filings. Finally, the proposal would likely reduce transparency during periods of economic uncertainty or rapidly changing market conditions, precisely when investors most need timely information. For these reasons, I urge the Commission not to adopt the proposed amendments permitting optional semiannual reporting. Thank you for considering these comments.

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous To the Securities and Exchange Commission: Transparency matters in a fair stock market. One of the pillars of a functioning capitalist society is based on education and knowledge of the market. Without transparency, capitalism fails. The potential for fraud, backroom dealings and volitility rises exponentially without frequent, required reporting. This is an appropriate cost of doing business. If anything, we should be moving towards more frequent reporting, not less. Thank you for doing the right thing for our economy and our democratic republic and continuing quarterly reporting.

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Please keep reporting on a quarterly basis. This increases transparency which stockholders and the public need. Thank you!

Anonymous — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I am opposed to the SEC change to make quarterly reporting optional for corporations in the US. By allowing this change to occur this will harm market transparency and negatively impact shareholders/investors. Specifically the financial transparency of corporations to both shareholders and investors. Companies would condense their financial results and may opt not to include or rather exclude detailed reporting as in quarterly reports. The SEC is to protect investors and prevent financial fraud (ENRON remember!) So it is of high importance that corporations continue to provide quarterly reporting and be transparent to investors.

Anonymous 63yrold F/T American citizen on disability — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Even with current regulations regarding filing and reporting; our country has become too comfortable with looking the other way . We need more checks and balances. Not less. Keep quarterly. Stop undoing things that have proven to be helpful for YEARs!!!!

Anonymous Individual Investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Dear Secretary: I am writing as an individual investor to strongly object to the proposed rule to shift public equity reporting to a 6- month interval. Reducing the frequency of financial disclosures directly harms individual investors by creating severe informations. It greatly reduces transparency which is foundational to the effective function of US markets. This significantly increases exposure to market volatility and financial risk. It also widens the gap between institutional insiders and retail investors, who lack the resources to conduct channel checks or otherwise compensate for the dearth of current information. It is the SEC's mission to protect investors and maintain fair and efficient markets. This proposal works against that mission. I urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the current 3-month reporting cadence. Sincerely, Anonymous, Texas retail investor

---

Anonymous RN — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous We are hard working middle class Americans. The only retirement saving options we have are savings accounts and various investment accounts. Allowing public companies to stop reporting earnings results quarterly and only disclosing results twice a year would hinder our ability to invest wisely. We do not support this change. We tried this once as a nation, between 1955 and 1970. Less transparency came with lower returns and lower valuations. For us, ordinary investors, a return to those days could mean losing a third, or even half, of our life savings. This change will harm most Americans and should not happen. Please put citizens over corporations. Thank you.

Anthony Stuckey self — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anthony Stuckey I oppose the change to semiannual reports. Quarterly reports supply better and valuable transparency to investors.

Arthur R Wiese — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Arthur R Wiese I oppose this as written. Quarterly reporting has been used for years and I believe that reducing this makes them less transparent to investors. Regardless of the reporting frequency, every company needs to have a long term strategy and should not use this reporting frequency as an excuse to not have it. If the CEO can't figure that out, get a new CEO. I would not be opposed to this being semiannual for new/emerging small companies for a short period of time. So a new company with a small valuation could be waived from quarterly reporting for the first several years, or something like that.

Austin Segrest Associate Professor of English, Lawrence University — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Austin Segrest Dear SEC, The proposed change to company reporting will do nothing but promote irresponsible trading. The rich have to be held accountable. Austin Segrest Associate Professor of English Lawrence University

---

Ayesha Goudeau — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ayesha Goudeau I respectfully oppose any proposal to reduce public company financial reporting from quarterly to semiannual reporting. As a retail investor, I depend on timely financial disclosures to make informed investment decisions. Moving to semiannual reporting would increase the information gap between corporate insiders, large institutional investors, and everyday investors by leaving the public with outdated financial information for much longer periods. Quarterly reporting promotes transparency, accountability, and fair price discovery. Less frequent reporting would make it more difficult for retail investors to evaluate company performance and respond to changing business conditions, ultimately reducing confidence in the fairness and efficiency of our markets. If the goal is to reduce compliance costs for public companies, I encourage the SEC to simplify reporting requirements rather than reduce the frequency of financial disclosures. The SEC's mission is to protect investors and maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets. Keeping quarterly reporting is an important part of fulfilling that mission. Thank you for considering my comments.

B. Robison Investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: B. Robison I am against the proposed rule change. Investors need timely data to make informed decisions. Well run companies (I assume) have largely automated this long-standing reporting process so it is not a burden. U. S. & world events which impact companies and their stocks occur daily. Having to wait 6 months to learn a firm's operating & financial status will have a large negative impact on the market & especially individual investors. NO change to quarterly reporting please.

Barbara Fuller Tebyani — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Fuller Tebyani The SEC must continue to hold companies and corporations accountable and to complete quarterly reports. I rely on the quarterly information to make investment decisions both for personal and as the trustee of a trust. They show trends in the companies in a timely manner and the resultant decisions by the Boards and the executives, which is vital.

Barbara Liberi, PsyD Retired School Psychologist — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Liberi, PsyD Hold corporations in check with signed quarterly reporting . We need to have oversight to hold corporations accountable and to prevent potential serious problems that impact us all.

Ben Chorpening — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ben Chorpening Keep required reporting quarterly for publicly traded companies.

Bennett W Riegel Security Administrator — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bennett W Riegel I believe quarterly reports are necessary for safe and knowledgeable investing. Getting a report once a quarter gives me enough information to if I want to invest in a company or not. Any less information will hold back what I need to know as an investor. I believe that making quarterly reports not required will only assist insiders. Insiders will maintain more information than outside investors thus weakening the position of outside investors. This could have large implications for the economy since a good portion of the population invests their money based on the information they can gather from quarterly reports. Without the information that is normally provided, investors will make less safe and overall worse investments, which could have ripple effects through the economy with people not making as much money as they otherwise could.

Beth Egan None — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beth Egan Please maintain quarterly reporting requirements so individual investors like myself have accesss to more up-to-date information.

Bill Armstrong President, Commercial RE Resources, Inc. — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Armstrong I run a business. Without regular updates on the company's business outlook and it's financials, my job would impossible. I have updates far more often than quarterly. Quarterly updates on businesses in which I've invested thousands of dollars is not a big ask. I don't like investing blindly. Quarterly reporting is not for the company's convenience, but for the stockholder's benefit. The company should be doing regular internal reporting anyway, more often than quarterly. Information to prepare a quarterly report is already available. What would help is to reduce the reporting threshold. It should not take a bevy of expensive lawyers to prepare a long legalese treatise that few read in its entirety to convey company fundamental financial and operating information. The burden is not quarterly reporting, that information is already available to the company. The objection to quarterly reporting is probably the bureaucratic requirements set for creating the report. Take a good look at that.

Brenda Stringer — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Stringer Why is it that the SEC wants to look out to save money for the corporations and not the small investors? Please keep quarterly reporting so there is less chance for the average investor to get screwed over.

Brendan Zarechian Personal investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brendan Zarechian To the Secretary of the Commission: I am writing as an individual, self-directed investor to express my opposition to the proposed amendments to Exchange Act Rules 13a-13 and 15d-13 that would permit public companies to elect semiannual interim reporting on new Form 10-S in place of quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q. While the proposal is framed as adding “flexibility,” in practice it would reduce the frequency, timeliness, and volume of information available to investors, and it would do so in a way that disproportionately harms retail investors like me. I respectfully urge the Commission not to adopt it. 1. The proposal cuts interim disclosure by half and lengthens the information gap Under current rules, companies file four interim reports per year plus an annual report. Under the proposal, an electing company would file a single interim report plus the annual report, a reduction from three interim disclosures to one. The practical effect is that the interval between reviewed financial statements would roughly double, and once filing deadlines (40–45 days after period-end) are accounted for, investors could go seven months or more between meaningful financial updates. For investors making buy, hold, and sell decisions, that gap is not a technicality. It is the difference between identifying a deteriorating trend within a quarter and discovering it half a year later, after the price has already moved. Less frequent reporting does not make a company’s problems smaller; it simply keeps them out of public view longer. 2. It widens the information gap between institutions and individual investors Large institutional investors are not the ones who depend on Form 10-Q. They have access to management meetings, sell-side research, industry channel checks, and expert networks. Individual investors have the public filing. Quarterly reports are, for retail investors, the primary standardized and freely available window into a company’s performance between annual reports. Reducing public reporting frequency does not reduce the information that exists inside the company, it only lengthens the period during which insiders and well-resourced professionals know things that the investing public does not. That is the opposite of the level playing field the federal securities laws are meant to protect, and it runs against the Commission’s core investor-protection mandate. 3. “Optional” means the company chooses, not the investor The proposing release describes the election as letting companies and investors “determine for themselves” the reporting frequency that best serves them. But the election is made by the company alone, by checking a box on its Form 10-K. Investors are not offered a choice; they simply receive less. A shareholder who values quarterly transparency has no mechanism to opt back in. This also creates a selection concern. The companies most likely to elect reduced reporting may be precisely those that would prefer less frequent scrutiny, for example, firms navigating operational difficulties, elevated leverage, or approaching inflection points. Investors would face a fragmented disclosure landscape that is harder to compare across companies, and the election itself could become a signal that is difficult for ordinary investors to interpret. 4. Small- and mid-cap companies, where public filings matter most, are hit hardest Analyst coverage is thin or nonexistent for many smaller public companies. For those issuers, the periodic report is often the only regular, structured source of independent-quality financial information available to the public. These are also the companies where individual investors are most active and where information asymmetry is already most pronounced. Cutting interim reporting for exactly these issuers would degrade the information environment where it is already weakest. 5. Less frequent reporting can worsen, not smooth, price behavior Concentrating a company’s disclosure into fewer, larger updates tends to pack more surprise into each release, which can increase volatility around report dates while leaving prices staler in between. Evidence from jurisdictions that relaxed mandatory quarterly reporting has been mixed at best, with some research pointing to reduced analyst following and a weaker information environment for smaller firms, hardly a demonstrated benefit that would justify reducing protections for U.S. investors. 6. The stated rationales do not withstand scrutiny • Compliance cost. Form 10-S would require the same disclosures as Form 10-Q, and interim financials in both are auditor-reviewed rather than audited. The incremental cost saved by filing one interim report instead of three is marginal for most reporting companies and is small relative to the informational value those reports provide to the market. The fourth fiscal quarter is already subsumed into the annual report, so the debate concerns just three interim filings. • “Short-termism.” The claim that quarterly reporting drives managerial myopia has weak and contested empirical support. Nothing in current rules forces companies to issue quarterly earnings guidance, a company concerned about short-termism can already stop guiding while continuing to report. Reducing mandatory disclosure to the public is not a necessary or well-targeted remedy for a management-behavior concern. • Capital formation and financial-statement “staleness.” The related amendments to Regulation S-X would allow companies to raise capital on older financial statements. That increases, rather than reduces, the risk that investors transact on information that no longer reflects the business. 7. Conclusion The proposal asks investors to accept materially less information, less often, with a longer lag, and with the timing of that reduction controlled entirely by the companies themselves. The purported benefits are speculative and modest; the costs fall directly on the investors the Commission is charged with protecting, and most heavily on individual investors and holders of smaller companies. I respectfully urge the Commission to withdraw the proposal and to preserve quarterly reporting as the baseline standard for interim disclosure. Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

Brian Evans — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Evans More transparency has ALWAYS been more beneficial to EVERYONE (corporations and investors). We tried the experiment of reducing reporting 70 years ago, and others have tried it even more recently, and it has never benefited anyone. KEEP FINANCIAL REPORTING QUARTERLY!!!

Brian Jacobs — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Jacobs I am an individual accredited investor. Reducing the reporting for public companies to once every six months has to be one of the worst ideas that I’ve ever heard. It’s already difficult enough to make well Informed decisions when investing in equities and this change will serve only to further handicap individual investors who by their nature depend almost entirely on these disclosures to perform analysis. Individual investors are already asymmetrically disadvantage compared to other larger market participants in their access to information and the analytical bandwidth that can be brought to bear before deciding to invest. I suppose if this change goes into effect I can just guess about how a particular company is doing for most of the year and maybe draw conclusions about a companies performance from reading wild speculation on Reddit or Facebook:(. Totally misguided change in policy in search of a problem.

Caleb Williams — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Caleb Williams I respectfully urge the Commission to reject the proposed rule permitting public companies to replace quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q with semiannual reporting on Form 10-S. For decades, quarterly reporting has served as one of the cornerstones of transparent U.S. capital markets. While preparing these reports imposes costs on issuers, those costs are outweighed by the benefits provided to investors and the broader marketplace. Reducing mandatory financial reporting from four disclosures per year to only two would significantly increase the amount of time investors are required to make decisions using stale information. Six months is a long period in today’s economy. Companies can experience material changes in liquidity, leverage, litigation exposure, cybersecurity incidents, customer demand, supply chains, executive leadership, or strategic direction within a single quarter. Investors should not have to wait half a year for standardized disclosure of these developments. The proposal may also unintentionally increase information asymmetry. Large institutional investors possess significant resources, including proprietary research, alternative data, direct engagement with management, and sophisticated analytical capabilities. Retail investors generally rely on publicly available SEC filings as their primary source of reliable, comparable information. Less frequent reporting would disproportionately disadvantage individual investors while increasing the relative informational advantage enjoyed by well-resourced market participants. Quarterly reporting also promotes corporate discipline. The requirement to regularly disclose financial performance encourages robust internal controls, timely accounting processes, and ongoing board oversight. Longer reporting intervals could reduce management accountability and allow operational or financial problems to remain undisclosed for extended periods before investors receive standardized information. Although some argue that quarterly reporting encourages excessive focus on short-term results, eliminating quarterly SEC filings is unlikely to change market expectations. Many companies will continue issuing quarterly earnings releases and holding earnings calls because investors demand timely information. As a result, the proposal may reduce the availability of standardized, regulated disclosures without meaningfully reducing pressure for quarterly performance. The United States has long maintained the world's deepest and most trusted capital markets in part because investors have confidence that material information is disclosed frequently, consistently, and under well-established SEC rules. Weakening those disclosure requirements risks increasing uncertainty, raising the cost of capital for issuers, and reducing investor confidence over time. If the Commission believes reporting requirements should be modernized, it should instead consider targeted measures to reduce unnecessary compliance burdens while preserving quarterly transparency. Examples could include simplifying immaterial disclosure requirements, streamlining filing formats, or providing additional accommodations for smaller reporting companies, rather than reducing the frequency of required reporting for all issuers. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission not to adopt the proposed amendments in File No. S7-2026-15. Thank you for considering my comments.

Carleen Healy Public school teacher — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carleen Healy Keep the quarterly reporting and maintain as much transparency as possible. Why make it easier for companies to be shady? Why empower insider deals? Unless SEC is already in the pockets of owners? Hmm. Carleen Healy, teacher

---

Carolyn Holton — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-26-18 From: Carolyn Holton We need quarterly reporting data to make good investment decisions and to keep companies accountable for their decisions. Please don't roll back any of the very reasonable current requirements.

Carolyn Weber — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carolyn Weber S7-2026-15 - allowing semi-annual reporting only benefits the insiders and companies. The everyday investor trying to stay on top of information so that they can make good choices when investing will be less informed. The insiders and billionaires will make more money while the common people will lose once again. Stop catering to the insiders and large investors, think of the average American trying to better them self.

Catherine B — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine B We need more transparency, not less, in our markets. This proposal would make it more difficult for investors, especially individuals, to understand where their 401ks and other assets are invested, and lead to additional turmoil and volatility, which again would negatively impact individual investors the most. We need to keep quarterly reporting requirements.

Catherine McGurk — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine McGurk Good day and thank you for reading my comments AGAINST S7-2026-15, Semiannual Reporting. Briefly, my comments are to tell you who I am and why S7-2026-15 is a VERY BAD idea for my financial future security. I am a semi-retired 60yo divorced female, solely financial responsible for myself and demographically a member of the seriously endangered middle class. At age 65 I can start to receive a pension of $340/mo. I have a Social Security benefit of $4010/mo in 10 years when I am 70, but HOW can I realistically expect that "benefit" Social Security income in 10 years? a "benefit" that I worked 50 years to EARN, a "benefit" critically vital to me in my future 30+ years of life when I will really need it? THUS I am VERY involved in investing because as far as I can tell MY INVESTMENTS IN MY 401K IS NEARLY ALL of my future financial security. THUS I am asking you to REJECT S7-2026-15 -- it's adoption will DEPRIVE me of VITALLY IMPORTANT information! On the other side of this coin, it's adoption is NOT necessary to save American businesses from being crushed. As Reddit's 18 million-strong WallStreetBets community said "If quarterly reporting is crushing American capitalism, American capitalism is hiding it well." - https : / / www . sec . gov / comments / S7-2026-15 / s7202615-775527-2368994 . html My future financial well being is at stake. I need all the information I can get to make the best investing decisions that I possibly can, thus Quarterly reporting is VITALLY IMPORTANT to me! I take my future financial well being very seriously and ask that you also take it seriously and REJECT S7-2026-15. To repost The Motley Fool Community's key points: - Quarterly reporting protects individual investors. Semiannual reporting doubles the information gap between insiders and ordinary shareholders. That gap is where volatility, uncertainty, and mistrust grow. - The short-termism diagnosis doesn't justify this remedy. Research from the CFA Institute, which studied this exact maneuver in the U.K. market, shows that reporting frequency has no measurable effect on corporate investment behavior. The SEC is accepting a real cost – less transparency for individual investors – for a benefit that the evidence says simply won't materialize. - The companies most likely to opt out are the ones where oversight matters most. Smaller, less-covered businesses operate with less scrutiny. Reducing their reporting requirements makes them harder to monitor, not easier to own. - This is the wrong direction. Reg FD moved toward a more level playing field. This proposal moves away from it. - What, exactly, is the problem? As the WallStreetBets comment letter put it: "The companies we trade are not being held back from greatness by the obligation to file four reports a year. ... The entire S&P 500 files a 10-Q every quarter, and the S&P 500 is at an all-time high. If quarterly reporting is crushing American capitalism, American capitalism is hiding it well."

Catherine OKeefe CSR Insurance — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine OKeefe I'm sure mine and many other's opinions won't matter but they should. I disagree 100% in changing the rule for Public companies/ corporations to disclose their financial results showing how well the company is doing, from Quarterly to Semi-Annually. This will benefit those who have insider knowledge on the company's health and will allow them to hide that information another 3 months in addition to what they already have. It looks like another scheme for companies to put the losses onto those who don't have the information needed to make good decisions, while top brass get to cash out sooner before the storm hits, and then buy again when the prices have declined.

Cathy Harris RN — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cathy Harris Please do not allow this change. The economic environment is far too volatile. Too many get privileged inside information-trading should be illegal for these entities.

CC — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: CC I do not agree with the request to move from quarterly reporting. Semiannual reporting does not give investors adequate time to evaluate the quality of the investment.

Cecil Scott — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cecil Scott Very simply: less information will slow down and chill my investing behavior. This is not good for me or the economy (if others are similarly affected) but we will have little choice.

Charlene Blevins — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charlene Blevins This is just another giveaway to insiders, while small or even moderate investors will suffer losses. The SEC goes on the list of commissions that will need to be purged when we return to democracy.

Charles Beaudoin — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Beaudoin Charles Im a nurse in Texas for over 20 years. I have worked hard toward retirement. I want the SEC to maintain quarterly reporting! This is the only way to maintain accountability. I have to participate in quarterly exams and evaluations to show my competency in safety in patient care. I believe if quarterly reporting was initiated by SEC for accountability it is only right and proper to continue with same.

Charles R Walker None — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles R Walker After Enron, wee need to keep these companies as transparency as possible

---

Cheryl Gabello — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Gabello Thank you SEC Commissioners for allowing comments on the proposal to move from quarterly to semiannual reporting. I am newly retired and a retail investor in 401k and IRA accounts, I oppose this change. Investors and their financial advisors need timely information which is made possible for retail investors by quarterly filings by public companies. The move to a semiannual filing requirement will reduce trust and transparency plus increase the window for catching fraudulent or incorrect financials, possible impacts of lawsuits, and diminishing customer bases. Investors need quarterly updates to remain confident in their investments. Thank you for your consideration.

Chris Altstatt None (individual). — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Altstatt I don’t support semiannual reporting. Quarterly reporting is supported.

Chris McLaughlin President - MacDriller, Inc. — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris McLaughlin Keep reporting quarterly! Part of the risk/reward of being a public company is accountability and transparency- why would that be reduced? One of the advantages of private companies like mine is the ability to keep most business matters confidential. Reducing a public company’s accountability arguably puts them more in competition with small businesses.

Christian Proctor Investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christian Proctor I oppose altering the SEC filing to semi-annual. Quarterly reporting provides greater transparency for investors and the commercial sector. It limits investor ability to know what is occurring in the business sector.

Christine Botosan — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Botosan I strongly oppose the Commission’s proposal to permit companies to substitute semiannual reporting for quarterly reporting. Timeliness is an essential attribute of decision-useful financial information. Because investors in public companies make capital allocation decisions continuously, ideally, financial reporting would be available on a similarly continuous basis. Although the costs of producing, disseminating, and using financial information necessarily constrain reporting frequency in practice, those costs are declining as technology—including AI-enabled tools—improves the efficiency of information preparation and analysis. At the same time, the pace of change in business models, strategies, risks, and operating activities is accelerating, increasing investors’ need for reliable information on a more frequent basis. Taken together, these developments support more frequent, not less frequent, financial reporting. Reducing the frequency of required financial reporting would diminish the relevance of public company disclosures, impair investors’ ability to make informed decisions, and weaken the efficiency and effectiveness of U.S. capital markets.

Clay Fisher — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clay Fisher I object to the Semiannual Reporting proposal now before the SEC. There is no scenario where reducing the visibility that public shareholders have into the stocks they invest in is good for those investors. I rarely see a quarterly report that does not provide some additional insight into a company, even during the quietest quarter. Beyond this, I argue that semiannual reporting is also not good for the corporations themselves. Ideally, the management team would always have an accurate perception of the financial state of there own business. I'm sure this is true for some, but not all public companies. In my experience, the quarterly report process drives a lot of the necessary internal conversations that ensure companies remain focused on shareholder value.

Clifford Loveland — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clifford Loveland As structured, the implementation of this rule would be an incredible disservice to the general public that hold stocks or bonds in the proposed affected companies. Insiders would continue to have invaluable information not available to the general public. This would enable them to abandon companies not doing well, or exploit, via purchasing more stocks and bonds in companies doing well before the general public can act. In short, the rule, if enacted, would create an investment environment favoring a distinct segment of the investment community. Vote no.

Cody Williams — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cody Williams We must maintain quarterly reporting to ensure transparency and availability of information for individual investors, who otherwise may not have access to this vital information. This change would be going in the wrong direction and increase the opportunity for wrong doing and shady practices. This must not be allowed, this is not the right move.

Colin Thomson — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Colin Thomson There is no way, in an era of the some of the worst income inequality in American history, that switching from quarterly to semiannual reporting is a good idea. Regular Americans will have less of the information they need to make sound investment decisions, and insiders will have more time to game their gains. It’s a terrible rule change to consider; please reject it utterly.

Crystal Read — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Crystal Read Quartlery reporting allows companies and investors time to change processes and plans within a timely manner, so if something is not working, it can be fixed before it can have serious effects. As we know, companies can and will hide information from the public, and allowing a full six moths to pass gives them more time to keep shady practices in the dark, and keeps investors from being informed. I strongly object to changing the timing of filings.

Curt M — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Curt M I do not approve of this proposed amendment. I believe this will give corporations who choose to only use semi-annual reporting more opportunities to be secretive about issues, allowing for larger loss of the public with stakes in it, whereas those with insider knowledge of the corporations situation may be able to sell or buy accordingly (which I understand is illegal insider trading, but that brings me to my next point). This may make it harder to prosecute insider trading as those with insider information may be able to make a trade say, one month into the semi-annual period, and it woukd take 5 more months for the public to find out about it. This makes the cause-and-effect harder to trace, as it is easier to say that it was random chance they sold/bought at that time and that the news that came out publicly months later wasn't available when the trade happened. In 3 month reporting periods, it's much easier to trace the cause-and-effect relationship. For those reasons, I think this proposed amendment will do more harm to the public than good, while only serving to truly benefit those who are insiders to large corporations.

Cynthia — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia I am opposed to changing to semiannual reporting. Keeping quarterly reporting allows for more transparency and has been historically shown to have a more positive impact on an individual's savings.

---

d . ferriter — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: d . ferriter Changing from quarterly to semi-annual financial reporting is a spectacularly bad idea. It gives even more money and power to the already rich and powerful. It hides economic trends and potential fraud. If anything, institute a 2-month reporting cycle to give investors more insight.

D henry — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D henry It is vital to maintain quality reporting to ensure transparency and to provide necessary information to investors and the public at large! No more Enrons! Small investors should have a way to measure health of their investments,before they lose their shirts. Quarterly reporting is a must

---

D. C. C. NA — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D. There should be more reporting not less reporting to ensure complete transparency in the marketplace. It is too easy for business of all sizes but especially large international conglomerates to "cook the books" with the current rules as written and enforced by the SEC. Depending on the size of the business reporting should be either 30, 60 or 90 days. This rule change will only favor business and the bigger the business the more they benefit. Small and individual investors deserve better treatment and more respect from business and the SEC.

Damilola Oladoyin — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Damilola Oladoyin We deserve more transparency hence more reports to be provided

---

Dan Polglaze Patent Attorney — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan Polglaze Publicly traded companies have been required to report via the 10-Q filing every three months. This has been the standard for over 50 years. The proposal to allow these important filings only semiannually greatly reduces the ability of the average investor to make decisions on at least how to invest, or whether to invest at all. Industry insiders such as the ultra wealthy and those in positions of power are already in position to know much more than what is even available in the 10-Q reports. Semiannual filings will ether reduce the ability of "the average Joe" to learn about companies, their prospects, their potential rising tides, and their potential falling fortunes. Adoption of the semiannual filing will hurt those with less money and power, and further elevate the powerful and rich. Finally, with the apparently increasing willingness of those “in the know” to game the system, making fit even easier to do so runs counter to good sense.

Daniel Klein — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Klein Quarterly reports are the only way retail investors can review their investments in a timely fashion. Otherwise a companies metrics can be shifting without their knowledge. By the time a semi annual report is released it may be to late to make an informed decision on the positioning of the stock in their portfolio.

---

daniel pollack — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: daniel pollack More transparency in businesses is needed not less. I can’t imagine that with all the new AI that is available, that sending out reports even monthly should be that difficult for publicly traded companies. Who really is benefitting from this proposed change. With celebrating 250 years of this great country and building the best free market system, holding back information for investors does not seem to be the patriotic stand to take.

Daniel Seetin American Academy of Pediatric Dentistry — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Seetin I am strongly against the switch to semiannual. As a small business owner and a person who, like many, are saving what we can into our retirement funds, I don't want companies to be able to shadow their finances for longer periods, this will only hurt the lower and middle class, the vast majority of the US population, while the richest are able to manipulate. Please protect the American People from corporate greed.

Danny Selph Retired — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Danny Selph These public traded companies are owed by millions of Americans. They have the right to inspect what they expect every quarter. History by different quarters has already been established as a measurement ruler. This is how we keep track of our money yes our money! Don’t punish the direct investors or the 401k investors. I owned business for 30 years and each seasonal quarter is always different but is a stand alone guild with history. This rule change is harming and a disadvantage to the actual stock owners of the company the little guy!

Darcy Hartz Retired nurse — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darcy Hartz Comments attached

---

Darrell Flannery Aviation Industry — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darrell Flannery As an investor, keeping the quarterly filings are a good thing as I think it levels the playing field as much as possible for investment dollars and the size of companies. I think changing the rule would tend to favor the biggest corporations most when it comes to how investment dollars flow. I don't like a move that could create an incentive away from investing in smaller companies. While I understand that it comes at a cost, both ways do. We have seen how longer periods have played out in the past. Please keep the quarterly rule.

DARWIN D. DUDLEY — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: DARWIN D. DUDLEY I am an 83- year- old investor and I need timely information to check on mine investment status. I learned about this rule change from The Motley Fool Community. I am opposed to the proposed rule change.

Dave Coffin Self — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dave Coffin I object toand request SEC to withdraw proposed rule providing for semiannual financial reporting. In age of extensive business software systems and even the AI benefits companies are claiming do not see logic of the proposed rule as only lowers transparency of company financials for the regular stock investor, who is unable to avail themselves of the expensive stock and market analysis systems hedge and mutual funds have

---

David J Long — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David J Long Dear Sir or Madam: Re: File Number S7-2026-15 I am writing in opposition to the proposed Rulemaking File Number S7-2026-15 which would reduce the need for registered companies to file financial reports on a quarterly basis to a semiannual basis. As an individual investor who at times takes positions in smaller companies that have higher risk profiles, receiving quarterly information on the company that is certified as being of high quality is important to me. Receiving this information in a timely fashion allows me to manage the risk profiles of my investments and take actions if a company begins to run into what constitutes trouble in my personal opinion more quickly than would receiving this information on a less frequent basis. While receiving this financial and risk information on a more frequent basis as the current Form 10Q filings allow, there is probably some room to tweak the Form 10Q to reduce some of the ancillary information without reducing the ability of the 10Q to provide early warnings of a company trying to get into financial or managerial difficulties. In examining the list of proposed changes to the information being reported in the current Form 10Q, I feel the following items identified in the rulemaking could be reduced to semiannual frequency without damaging the usefulness of the information in the 10Q for risk management of investments by individual investors. Those items are: • Material changes to the procedures by which security holders may recommend nominees to the registrant's board of directors • Disclosure of director or officer adoptions or terminations of certain plans for the purchase or sale of registrant securities • Effectiveness of disclosure controls and procedures (However, changes in material control over disclosures should be disclosed in the 10Q) Further, a number of updates to the information found in the Form 10Q that we see today were made in response to the disastrous collapse of Enron due to extensive fraud and improper behavior by the company. This event gave rise to the Sarbanes – Oxley Act that increased the stringency of financial reporting and controls based on the events that triggered the very rapid collapse of Enron. These controls are generally needed and should not be reduced in stringency. I strongly urge the Securities and Exchange Commission to not move forward discontinuing quarterly reporting and while some tuning of the current 10Q reports may be justified, discontinuing them is not justified and is further not in the spirit of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act that was put in place to protect investors such as myself. Thank you for considering my thoughts on this important matter. David J. Long

---

David Kovac — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Kovac Keep quarterly reporting, don't allow fraud to go unchecked!

David Mouilleseaux — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Mouilleseaux My name is David Mouilleseaux, I have been a self-employed antiques dealer for 35 years. After two major recession causing financial “bubbles” in recent memory my confidence in corporate fiscal responsibility is at a low ebb. Giving corporations another unfair advantage to hide risky behavior is a serious mistake. Making it “optional” is ridiculous because the worst companies will of course “opt in”. As a small investor and business owner I believe the potential damage makes this change not worth the risk. Do not make this change.

Dawn Petersen Retired corporate attorney — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dawn Petersen Quarterly reporting must be required to ensure corporate transparency and protect individual investors.

Dawn R Knepp Retired — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dawn R Knepp I am OPPOSED to the SEC changing the reporting period from Quarterly to semi Annually. This is going to lead to less transparancy for the public and more time for insidertrading. Leave the reporting Quarterly.

Debbie Badessa — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Debbie Badessa rule proposal S7-2026-15 (91 FR 24968 - Semiannual Reporting) This rule reduces the amount of information coming from companies so that average everyday investors are at a disadvantage. It benefits insider trading and allows more time for fraud to pass unnoticed. Reducing the frequency of reporting for companies may be a small cost savings for the company, but also reduces the oversight and transparency for investors. It will mainly benefit company executives. This rule proposal should not be approved.

Deborah Bingham Elementary school teacher — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Bingham This change from quarterly to semi-annual reporting will disguise and abet securities fraud and insider trading. It will impact investment safety and growth for all people who are not directly employed by the securities entities themselves. The proposed change is unfair and must not be adopted.

Deborah Lemon — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Lemon As an individual investor, I am concerned about the proposed change in requirements for businesses to report 4 times per year down to 2 times per year. The primary concern is that companies are less likely to bet held accountable if they don't have to report as often AND, as an individual investor, I have less information to make decisions with. Quarterly reporting protects individual investors. Semiannual reporting doubles the information gap between insiders and ordinary shareholders. That gap is where volatility, uncertainty, and mistrust grow. The short-termism diagnosis doesn't justify this remedy. Research from the CFA Institute, which studied this exact maneuver in the U.K. market, shows that reporting frequency has no measurable effect on corporate investment behavior. The SEC is accepting a real cost – less transparency for individual investors – for a benefit that the evidence says simply won't materialize. The companies most likely to opt out are the ones where oversight matters most. Smaller, less-covered businesses operate with less scrutiny. Reducing their reporting requirements makes them harder to monitor, not easier to own. This is the wrong direction. Reg FD moved toward a more level playing field. This proposal moves away from it. What, exactly, is the problem? As the WallStreetBets comment letter put it: "The companies we trade are not being held back from greatness by the obligation to file four reports a year. ... The entire S&P 500 files a 10-Q every quarter, and the S&P 500 is at an all-time high. If quarterly reporting is crushing American capitalism, American capitalism is hiding it well."

Deborah Simpson Investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Simpson It is important to continue to require publicly traded companies to report quarterly. All financial are computerized. Companies are keeping track of their financials. To generate a report to the SEC is not a burden . Investors should be kept informed of the good, the bad and the ugly. Keep quarterly filings.

Debra Mulvenna — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Debra Mulvenna I oppose the S7-2026-15 proposal to change the reporting requirements from quarterly reporting to semiannual reporting.

Denise Bell — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Denise Bell To whom it may concern: It is extremely important that the SEC NOT make voluntary the reporting of financials quarterly. Investors MUST know what the companies' principals are doing with their money; it's already too easy to hide wrongdoing. Four-times-a-year disclosure should be mandatory to keep investors informed! Don't change the law.

Diane Minor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diane Minor At age 86, my retirement fund is small, and I cannot afford to lose any of it. Those of us in this situation have no resources to increase the amount. Please help us keep what we have worked so hard to save.

Diane Ruhl — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diane Ruhl Quarterly reporting should continue. Ordinary investors like me depend on this reporting to make informed decisions about our investments. Less disclosure is not in the public's best interest. Knowledge is power, and transparency is the key to identifying fraud, malfeasance, excessive debt, lawsuits and other pertinent information about a company. Companies are keeping their books and have the information. Extending their disclosures to semiannually reporting gives an unfair advantage to corporate insiders. Thank you for considering my comments.

Dina Cole — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dina Cole Do not allow semi-annual reporting. Keep quarterly reporting requirements in place for the transparency needed by investors to assure market accountability.

DON L CRAIN None- Private Investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: DON L CRAIN KEEP THE QUARTERLY REPORTS!! IT'S THE ONLY FAIR WAY FOR EVERYONE!!! There is ABSOLUTELY NO NEED TO CHANGE WHAT IS FAIR FOR EVERY TYPE OF INVESTOR!!!

Donna Oswald None,retiree — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Donna Oswald I am writing in opposition to the proposed rule change to allow companies the option to provide financial updates semi-annually in lieu of the current quarterly obligation. The economy is very fluid right now and there can be tremendous swings. A 6 month period is too long in the current economic environment. Presumably they are already providing quarterly updates to their board, letting the public and their investors know quarterly as well does not seem an onerous burden that needs to be lessened. Companies will jump at the opportunity and quarterly reporting will go the way of the dinosaur. If the Enron debacle taught us anything, it’s that we need more timely reporting not less. As a recent retiree, my 401K doesn’t have decades to recover from hidden/suppressed financial mis-management. Timely reporting is a critical component to allow me to access where to Invest. Please leave things as they are. We don’t need these kind of changes now.

Dora Badger n/a — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dora Badger I am urging the SEC to NOT approve S7-2026-15. It can be hard enough to get companies to provide shareholders and the public with important information when they file quarterly. Permitting corporations and other large companies to only report twice a year means that fraud, insider trading, and just plain corporate theft will be MUCH harder to catch in a timely fashion. It also has the potential to cause huge, damaging swings in the market since no one except insiders will have information critical to making good stock picks. S7-2026-15 is likely to cause significant harm to investors and to the public at a time when everyone is already under extreme financial stress. Don't approve this proposed rule.

Dorothy Frisch Retired — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dorothy Frisch Who benefits from this proposed bill? Not individual investors. Not retirement funds. The only win here is for shady corporations, and it provides cover for any shell games they care to rig. Shame on you for even thinking to do this!

Dorothy Rausch Individual Investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dorothy Rausch As an investor, quarterly reporting is essential to my portfolio. Transparence is necessary in order to make sound investing decisions.

Douglas Retired — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Douglas Facebook

Dr. Joseph J. Cicala Educator (Retired) — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dr. Joseph J. Cicala Please maintain quarterly reporting requirements, to protect the interests of the general citizenry.

E Heacker Investors — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: E Heacker We demand real-time transparency.

E. Christine Carpenter — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: E. Christine Carpenter Please keep quarterly reporting. Quarterly reports are helpful to me in making decisions about my portfolio. Thank you.

Edward Tomlinson Motley Fool — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edward Tomlinson Quarterly reporting of corporate performance is the absolute minimum timeframe acceptable. To reduce that to twice a year would make me and other investors less aware of developing problems and less trusting of the communication process

---

Eileen McManus — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eileen McManus I am not in favor of changing the reporting requirements from quarterly to biannually. That change is protective of corporations and not average Americans and policy should be drafted for the benefit of the American people and not the financial institutions, corporations or the financial market. I want transparency with regard to companies performances and I want my retirement investments protected by given me full access on a quarterly basis to the performance of the companies I am invested in or considering investing in. Please do not change this policy.

Elizabeth Kinn — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth Kinn Keep quarterly reports for public companies so we can keep a closer eye on them.

Elizabeth MacPherson None — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth MacPherson We need more transparency for corporate finances, not less. Semi annual reporting has not worked in other countries and there is no reason to believe it would work here. I strongly oppose the move to semiannual reporting since it does not help investors AT ALL and only allows for corporate fraud or financial slight-of-hand to get more deeply entrenched and go on longer. I strongly oppose this new rule

---

ELIZAVETA Y PLOTNIKOV — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: ELIZAVETA Y PLOTNIKOV Keep quarterly reporting. This provides transparency to the public.

Ellen Biemer — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ellen Biemer I am vehemently opposed to this change. Quarterly reporting was implemented as a safeguard for investors, as a reaction to abuses by companies concealing their true profitability. This is not an issue that has disappeared. This reporting is a relatively minor expense, one that is accepted and paid for by investors when they purchase stock in a company. The only ones who benefit by this rule are those with insider information; reducing the reporting requirement enables them to hide what's really happening in their companies, and trade accordingly, while ordinary investors are left holding the bag for any mismanagement.

Emily Hannah — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Emily Hannah Please keep quarterly reporting in place. Thank you!

Erin Christianson Pena — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Erin Christianson Pena Hey, this is a bad idea. All it's going to do is make it easier to hide fraud. The benefits are too small to make it worthwhile.

Erin Hendricks Hughes None — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Erin Hendricks Hughes I am severely opposed to this change in reporting options. I believe it provides opportunities for companies and others that are required to provide information of this type to the public to abuse the system or rule already in place to protect "insiders" from profiteering and benefiting from other corruptive practices and protecting the public from subsequent harm from these practices. Corporations and those that deal in securities must be held accountable during the actions of their businesses and not afterwards trying explain themselves to the proper governance, a time consuming and expensive process. The key word is accountability. Why are they trying to dodge this responsibility? Thank you for your time and consideration.

Fernando J Quintero — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Fernando J Quintero Dear SEC Commissioners,As a retail investor, I strongly oppose Proposed Rule S7-2026-15 . Eliminating mandatory 10-Q quarterly reports directly harms individual investors by widening the information gap between us and Wall Street institutions. Institutional firms possess alternative data networks and direct management access to monitor companies in real-time. Retail investors rely entirely on standardized public disclosures. Going six months without a formal financial report creates a dangerous "dark period" that leaves everyday traders completely in the dark.

Florian Vallecillo Customer Support Operator — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Florian Vallecillo To the Securities and Exchange Commission: Do not pass this new rule. As an investor and a middle class citizen, we need to keep trabsparency in what we invest our money in.

Frank Samples — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Frank Samples Quarterly reporting will give more timely information about the performance and financial status of a business for investment purposes. Semi-annual reporting is not often enough for tracking the performance of a potential investment.

Gary Morgan American Optometric Association — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gary Morgan Do not change it

---

Gary Olson — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gary Olson Keep the reporting quarterly.

Gary Slack Banking Customer Service — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gary Slack I strongly oppose the change in rules to allow companies to report on a semiannual basis rather than a quarterly basis. I review information quarterly to make decisions and allowing companies to do so now semiannually will cause financial harm to me in some situations. I am not a huge hedge fund; I don't have resources to get up to date information. Waiting 6 months for company information will have me flying blind for too long a period. Let's expand on that. Fraud loves to operate in the dark, in the shadows. This new semiannual period just encourages bad behavior and delayed consequences. This is a bad idea; it's bad for everyday investors like me; and not needed. Keep the quarterly reporting requirement.

George B Sibert — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: George B Sibert Comments attached: I do not wish to receive your new SEC ruling of discontinuing quarterly reporting by publicly traded companies.

George C — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: George C I do not agree with the proposed change. The SEC should continue to have quarterly reports of earnings.

George Cooper Sr. manager - The Boeing Company (Retired) — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: George Cooper I have an undergraduate and MBA in Finance & International Business and this proposal for LESS Financial Transparency is ridiculous and harmful to the investing public. It will usher in a new level of corruption in both the equity and bond markets and increase systemic investment risk. Even more problematic is that as professionals and rules makers you know this as well. The comments that this will reduce costs to Corporations is completely false and misleading.

George Stephans — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: George Stephans This is a terrible idea and will cripple individual investors who want to trade stocks using good data. It will benefit only insiders and big institutional investors with access to information hidden from the public.

Gil Estes — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gil Estes I do not want this. Less transparency is a terrible idea. Voters need to know what is happening at all levels.

Grace H. Deputy Dir. of a legal nonprofit — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Grace H. Any new investor or student of the market uses the quarterly reports and finding to learn about market behaviors ABC fluctuations. Semiannual reports will not only cut number of the reports and resources in half but will not represent the market fluctuations and responses in a timely manner. To deprive the public of these often free and public resources places limits on who can be educated on and be participants in the market. There has been no reason given as to why semiannual reporting is more beneficial than quarterly reporting. Who are the SEC and its rules supposed to serve? Is it not a financial regulating body intended to protect investors and the public that may be affected by corporate actions? Please remember the purpose and mission of the SEC before making decision that jeopardize efficiency and fairness, and that may lead to the loss of public confidence in the market.

Greg Adkins Citizen who pays attention! — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Greg Adkins This proposal is Obviously just a way to let corrupt CEO's and CFO's to get away with more falsified book keeping and scams - and Everyone at the SEC Knows it! - Are some of them bribing you to pass this corrupt measure?! - KEEP THE QUARTERLY REPORTS REQUIREMENTS! - Greg Adkins, of Redford, MI.

Haoxiang Zhu, MIT Sloan School of Management; Rodrigo S. Verdi, MIT — Jul 5, 2026
Rodrigo S. Verdi
Nanyang Technological Professor of Accounting
MIT Sloan School of Management
100 Main Street, Cambridge, MA 02142
Haoxiang Zhu
Gordon Y Billard Professor of Finance
MIT Sloan School of Management
100 Main Street, Cambridge, MA 02142
July 5, 2026
Ms. Vanessa A. Countryman
Secretary, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street NE
Washington, DC 20549-1090
Re: Optional Semiannual Reporting for Public Companies (File No. S7-2026-15; Release No. 33-11414)
Dear Ms. Countryman:
Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the Commission's proposal to permit public companies to elect semiannual rather than quarterly interim reporting. We are faculty at the MIT Sloan School of Management who study financial reporting and capital markets; these views are our own and not those of MIT. In light of the extensive research and evidence on this topic, we believe the change as proposed is unlikely to deliver the benefits its proponents anticipate and carries real risks for investors and market quality, risks that fall most heavily on the smaller companies most likely to elect this option and the investors in these firms.
First, the benefits of more frequent reporting are well documented, and these benefits would be reversed under semiannual reporting. A large body of research in leading accounting and finance journals finds that more frequent reporting is associated with lower information asymmetry, greater market liquidity, and a lower cost of equity capital (e.g., Fu, Kraft, and Zhang 2012; Verdi 2012). More frequent reporting also strengthens managerial monitoring and market discipline (Balakrishnan and Ertan 2018) and generates broader analyst coverage (Nallareddy, Pozen, and Rajgopal 2019). Reducing the reporting frequency predictably reverses these effects: wider bid-ask spreads, larger earnings and return surprises around less frequent announcements, higher volatility, thinner analyst coverage, and possibly more fraud and pump-and-dump schemes. These negative outcomes would be especially pronounced for smaller and mid-cap firms.
Second, the principal justifications for reducing reporting frequency are weak. The main argument against frequent reporting is that it can induce short-termism. While there is evidence from the U.S. transition to quarterly reporting, documenting a decline in fixed-asset investments (Kraft, Vashishtha, and Venkatachalam 2018), more recent natural experiments do not support the premise that reduced reporting frequency solves managerial myopia: neither the UK's adoption and later removal of mandatory interim reporting (Nallareddy, Pozen, and Rajgopal 2019) nor Singapore's quarterly-reporting threshold (Kajüter, Klassmann, and Nienhaus 2019) shows a meaningful effect of frequency on real investment. Because R&D and capital-investment decisions have multi-year horizons, a manager inclined to cut investment to meet a quarterly target will do the same to meet a semiannual one; lengthening the reporting cycle does not cure myopia, it merely lengthens the window in which it can operate. Additionally, compliance-cost relief is modest by the Commission's own estimate.

Third, because the proposal is optional, its likely effect is modest for most firms and adverse for the firms that switch. We take seriously that the Commission proposes to permit, not mandate, semiannual

Rodrigo S. Verdi
Nanyang Technological Professor of Accounting
MIT Sloan School of Management
100 Main Street, Cambridge, MA 02142
Haoxiang Zhu
Gordon Y Billard Professor of Finance
MIT Sloan School of Management
100 Main Street, Cambridge, MA 02142

reporting. But optionality does not remove the underlying trade-offs; it relocates them into firms' self-selection. The UK experience is instructive: when quarterly reporting became voluntary in 2014, fewer than 10 percent of firms stopped in the first year, that is, given a free choice, firms that value liquidity and coverage kept the more frequent cadence. The firms most likely to elect semiannual reporting are therefore those for which reduced transparency is most costly to investors—smaller, less-followed firms and firms with weaker governance—so the election itself may operate as a negative signal and concentrate the harm precisely where monitoring benefits are largest.

Finally, even if a firm decides to continue to report quarterly, it can be negatively affected by peers that switch to semiannual reporting. For instance, if a few firms, or a single leading firm, in a (narrow) industry decide to report semi-annually, certain investors may "abandon" or significantly "discount" this (narrow) industry for its deteriorating information quality, which, in turn, could lead to a severe stock price decline for firms that remain a quarterly reporter. Kajüter, Klassmann, and Nienhaus (2019) find information spillovers from quarterly reporters to other firms. Under the Commission's proposal, a negative opacity spillover from self-selected semiannual reporters to quarterly reporters could occur. A mixed composition of reporting frequency also imposes comparability costs on investors reconciling firms that report on different calendars.

Summary. For these reasons, we respectfully suggest that the Commission has not established a problem that this proposal would solve, and that broad optional semiannual reporting is unlikely to benefit investors on net. We would be glad to discuss the underlying research and to elaborate on any of these points.

Respectfully,
Rodrigo S. Verdi
Haoxiang Zhu
References
Balakrishnan, K., and A. Ertan. 2018. Banks' Financial Reporting Frequency and Asset Quality. The Accounting Review 93 (3): 1–24.
Fu, R., A. Kraft, and H. Zhang. 2012. Financial reporting frequency, information asymmetry, and the cost of equity. Journal of Accounting and Economics 54 (2–3): 132–149.
Kajüter, P., F. Klassmann, and M. Nienhaus. 2019. The Effect of Mandatory Quarterly Reporting on Firm Value. The Accounting Review 94 (3): 251–277.
Kraft, A. G., R. Vashishtha, and M. Venkatachalam. 2018. Frequent Financial Reporting and Managerial Myopia. The Accounting Review 93 (2): 249–275.
Nallareddy, S., R. Pozen, and S. Rajgopal. 2019. Consequences of More Frequent Reporting: The U.K.
Experience. Working paper, Duke University, MIT, and Columbia University (also CFA Institute Research Foundation).
Verdi, R. S. 2012. Discussion of "Financial reporting frequency, information asymmetry, and the cost of equity." Journal of Accounting and Economics 54 (2–3): 150–153.

Harvey Pierce — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Harvey Pierce I want to express my strong opposition to changing corporate reporting from quarterly to semi-annual. Six months is too long. It will leave investor flying blind for six Mon at a time. It will allow more time for fraudulent activities to occur without any warning. Even if it's optional smaller corporations will be influenced by the larger and have little choice but to do the same. There's no reason to do this, very few will benefit and many could suffer at the hands of unscrupulous Corporations.

Heard about thru META investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Heard about thru META Singapore tried it and is now reversing course because disclosure quality and trading volume both dropped. Hiding the data doesn't fix the underlying problem; it just hides the consequences…and gives bad actors time to position the public as a financial scapegoat. Do millennials really need another reason to dis-engage from our U.S.A. financial system? I think not!

Heidi Bradley None — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Heidi Bradley Subject: Public Comment on File Number S7-2026-15 (Proposed Semiannual Reporting Alternative. To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I am writing to express my firm opposition to Proposed Rule S7-2026-15. As a private individual investor, I am solely responsible for navigating complex financial goals to ensure my family remains independent, stable, and secure. The proposal to reduce corporate transparency from quarterly to semiannual reporting directly threatens that stability . My primary investment objective is to build a secure lifelong financial foundation for my child with special needs. My explicit goal is to ensure they are self-sufficient and far less reliant on government programs and taxpayer-funded assistance in the future. Achieving this level of private financial security requires meticulous planning and consistent risk management. I must balance this lifelong commitment while simultaneously funding my older children's college educations and building a sustainable retirement fund so I do not become a financial burden to them. To successfully manage these competing, high-stakes priorities, I require timely financial data to ensure I am making appropriate changes to minimize risk. Quarterly Form 10-Q filings are essential for small private investors like myself. They allow me to evaluate corporate health, monitor shifts in company debt, and spot financial distress early. A six-month gap in reporting creates an unacceptable blind spot. In the current political and corporate market, a company's financial health can deteriorate completely in six months. Large institutional investors have alternative pathways to gather market information, but small investors like myself rely entirely on the equal playing field provided by standard quarterly disclosures. If the SEC moves forward and reduces reporting requirements, it shifts corporate risk directly onto the shoulders of family investors. By making it harder for parents to safeguard their portfolios, this rule actively undermines my efforts to build private financial independence for my family. I urge the SEC to withdraw Rule S7-2026-15 and protect the quarterly transparency that self-reliant retail investors depend on. Sincerely, Heidi Bradley Sequatchie, TN

Individual Investor Retired Ford Motor Supervisor , self employed — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Individual Investor I am writing to express my strong opposition to the SEC's proposed rule (File Number S7-2026-15) to allow public companies to switch from quarterly to semiannual reporting . Reducing the frequency of interim financial disclosures to twice a year deprives investors of critical, material information. Quarterly reporting (Form 10-Q) is a foundational pillar of the U.S. capital markets. Moving to a six-month cycle will increase the window during which investors operate in the dark, heightening the risk of market volatility, insider trading, and unexpected corporate crises . Furthermore, making this optional will create an uneven disclosure environment, making it incredibly difficult for retail investors to evaluate and compare companies across industries. To maintain the integrity, transparency, and fairness of our markets, the SEC should preserve the mandatory quarterly reporting requirement.I respectfully urge the Commission to reject this proposed rule change. Sincerely, Individual Investor

---

JA Horst-Martz — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: JA Horst-Martz This is the age of computers and easy-to-edit forms. There is no excuse to allow less transparency by reducing the frequency of required filings from quarterly to semi-annual. People should not be relying in outdated information to make important decisions.

Jackie Say — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jackie Say Corporate reporting needs to be done quarterly in order to maintain transparency to the public, investors & stockholders. Do not allow any changes. Keep it quafterly.

Jaclyn Anderson VP National Recruitment, Per Scholas — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jaclyn Anderson I am writing as an individual investor to oppose the Commission's proposal to let public companies replace quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting on Form 10-S. I'm 36, married, and a mother. I have a good job, and I'm doing the same thing millions of other working parents are doing: setting aside what I can, as consistently as I can, so that my family has options later — for my kid's education, for retirement, for the things that can't be undone if I get them wrong. I'm not a hedge fund. I don't have analysts calling company management for off-cycle updates. The quarterly report is one of the only tools I have that puts me on close to the same footing as institutional investors when it comes to knowing what I actually own. This proposal takes that tool away from people like me, not from the people who can afford to do without it. Large institutional holders can negotiate more frequent disclosure, monitor covenants, or get read-ins that ordinary shareholders never will. If companies move to twice-a-year reporting, the gap between what sophisticated money knows and what I know gets wider, right at the moment I'm relying on public filings to make responsible decisions with money I can't afford to lose. The Commission has direct historical evidence that this isn't a hypothetical risk. The U.S. ran on semiannual reporting from 1955 to 1970, and when the SEC moved to quarterly reporting, the cost of equity capital went down — meaning markets became more efficient and less risky for investors once information came more often. Undoing that isn't modernization. It's returning to a system we already tried and moved away from because it didn't serve investors well. I also don't think this fixes what it claims to fix. If the real target is short-term earnings guidance, companies can already stop giving that guidance voluntarily — no rule change is needed for that. Instead, this proposal removes disclosure that has nothing to do with guidance: the actual financial statements I use to check in on my investments twice as often as this would allow. And because the annual election window lines up close to when first-quarter results would normally come due, a company having a bad quarter has an obvious incentive to elect semiannual reporting right when I'd most want to know. The compliance savings companies would get from this proposal aren't really savings — they're a cost shifted onto people like me. I have to work harder, with less information, updated less often, to protect the same savings I'm trying to build for my family's future. That's a real cost, even if it doesn't show up on a corporate balance sheet. I respectfully ask the Commission to withdraw this proposal and preserve mandatory quarterly reporting under Form 10-Q for all public companies. Respectfully submitted, Jaclyn Anderson VP, National Recruitment Arlington TX

Jacqueline D Truong Physical Therapist — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jacqueline D Truong Jacqueline Truong, Physical Therapist. I rely on quarterly information to make decisions on investments. Longer gaps create an unfair advantage for corporate insiders. We most protect the everyday people, the customers. "Optional" doesn't fix the problem because companies that opt in are often the ones whose investors most need frequent updates. Quarterly reporting is important because it holds companies accountable. The savings to companies aren't worth the cost to me.

James Ballard — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Ballard No. There is no reason to eliminate or render 10Q financial reporting requirements "optional". 10Q reporting is proven to be a successful and necessary requirement to provide consistent transparency into corporate health as well as its operational and growth potential for business, institutional and personal investment decision making. This proposed rule change if enacted will create an open opportunity for corporations to defraud both institutional and private investors and undermine investor faith in fair open market transparency.

Enactment of this rule change to eliminate 10Q reporting will result in a severe reduction in public and private sector trust in the SEC and decrease market investments. End result is investors from all walks will seek out more transparent investment opportunities and corporations will find it more difficult to raise capital or provide shareholder value. Do not enact this rule change.

James Marion None — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Marion The SEC is considering a solution to a problem that, as far as I a am concerned, doesn't exist. I do NOT feel it is necessary to allow large corporations to refuse to let investors know on a quarterly basis how they are doing, and where their expenses are going. As a small investor, I count on these quarterly notifications to keep informed on my investments and how the companies are doing. This has worked well for a very long time and I see absolutely NO reason to change it.

James rode Retired — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James rode This BS get your head out of the corporate a#$ and work for us. I and many others will no longer invest our money if we dont have the info. Watch companies fail and your economy and job with it.

James Williams — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Williams Don't change leave alone

---

Jan Peabody — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jan Peabody The Securities Exchange Act of 1934 was enacted to curtail shady dealings by requiring more regular reporting. The current state of the country has allowed even more insider trading that is even more difficult to track and prosecute. The SEC was created to protect us from those who would do more harm to our country. Please do NOT change the quarterly reporting requirement to 6 months. Changing the rules now would be dangerous and could send us into another recession or worse.

Jane Lorenzen — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jane Lorenzen Shareholders, as owners, have a right to know! Preserve the transparency.

Jason Howard — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jason Howard Bad idea for individual investors to move to semi annual reporting. You guys should know better than this. Totally opposed. I will vote accordingly.

Jay Vatassery N/A — Jul 5, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jay Vatassery Quarterly reporting should not be removed. For publicly traded companies, they should have 95% or more of what they report automated and able to be automatically generated, with what probably amounts to the remaining 5% and a total of a day or two maximum of the CEOs and officers time spent writing additional notes and expectations. Just because we already have a huge gap from funds with often millions of dollars of research, doesn't mean we should be forced to an even longer possible delay.

JD American — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: JD Keep quarterly reporting. Stop reaming the American people. Grow a conscience, and act in the interests of THE PEOPLE.

Jean Redmond — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jean Redmond Dear SEC, I've worked in the private sector for over 35 years and have contributed to my retirement funds in this time period. It would be irresponsible and reckless to eliminate quarterly reports of publicly traded equities. The transparency of corporate behavior would be thrown out and non institutional investors would be at a major disadvantage. Keep the reports quarterly! Respectively, J.M. Redmond

---

Jeanne Griffith Retired Senior Performance and Attribution Consultant, Fidelity Investments — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeanne Griffith This proposal is alarming. Since I started working in the mutual fund industry in 1987 the production of information has become easier and faster, and consequently less of a burden to companies. There is no reason to relax standards. It is important for the public to have timely, accurate information in order to make good investment decisions. This proposal would reduce this flow of information and hurt retail and institutional investors. While portfolio managers are able to meet with companies to review their results, the average retail investor cannot. The 10Q is a valuable tool for investors to review results even though the results are lagged. A six month report would make this information practically irrelevant. Please keep quarterly reporting. There is no good reason to change to six month reporting.

Jennifer Bower Financial Coach and CEO, Fortuna Money, and Master of Accounting Student — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Bower I am writing to express my strong opposition to the Commission's proposed amendments to allow reporting companies to file semiannual reports on the proposed Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q. While I appreciate the Commission's ongoing efforts to reduce regulatory burdens and simplify reporting rules under Regulation S-X, reducing the frequency of interim financial reporting fundamentally undermines investor protection and market transparency. I oppose the proposed rule based on the following key concerns: 1. Increased Information Asymmetry and Risk to Retail Investors Quarterly reporting ensures a continuous, reliable flow of information to the entire market. Moving to a semiannual model creates a six-month information vacuum. This extended dark period disproportionately disadvantages retail investors who rely on public disclosures to make informed decisions. Furthermore, it increases the risk of information asymmetry, giving corporate insiders and sophisticated institutional investors with direct industry access an unfair advantage over the general public. 2. Heightened Market Volatility In modern, fast-moving capital markets, a six-month gap between financial updates is far too long. Significant shifts in a company's financial health, supply chain, or operational risks can occur in a matter of weeks. By compressing a half-year's worth of financial developments into a single semiannual release, the market is highly likely to experience severe price shocks and heightened volatility upon disclosure, rather than the smoother, incremental adjustments facilitated by quarterly updates. 3. Degradation of Corporate Accountability and Governance Quarterly disclosures serve as a vital mechanism for timely corporate accountability. The discipline of preparing quarterly financial statements deters aggressive accounting practices and forces management to remain tightly aligned with operational realities. Extending the reporting period to six months reduces the frequency of independent auditor reviews of interim financial information, which could lead to delayed detection of financial distress, internal control failures, or material misstatements. 4. Impairment of Efficient Capital Allocation For capital markets to allocate resources efficiently, data must be timely. Financial information that is five or six months old is effectively stale in today's macroeconomic environment. Depriving investors of quarterly data complicates accurate forecasting, compromises valuation models, and ultimately increases the risk premium demanded by investors, which could unintentionally raise the cost of capital for compliant companies. Conclusion The current quarterly reporting framework under Form 10-Q is a cornerstone of the integrity, liquidity, and world-class status of U.S. capital markets. The marginal cost savings to public corporations achieved by eliminating two quarters of reporting do not justify the substantial erosion of transparency and investor confidence that would follow. For these reasons, I urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the current quarterly reporting obligations. Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this important matter.

Jennifer Falzerano — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Falzerano Moving away from quarterly reporting is very risky for retirees and others who rely on stocks for their savings. There is no benefit to this change for average people.

Jennifer Gentilcore — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Gentilcore I am writing in opposition to the SEC's proposed rule (File No. S7-2026-15) that would allow public companies to replace quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting. The SEC's mission includes protecting investors, maintaining fair, orderly, and efficient markets, and facilitating capital formation. Timely, standardized financial disclosure is fundamental to achieving those goals. Quarterly reporting provides retail investors, employees, retirees, and anyone with retirement savings the ability to evaluate company performance using consistent and reliable information. Reducing required reporting to every six months would increase the length of time during which significant financial deterioration, governance problems, litigation risks, operational challenges, or other material issues could develop before investors receive comprehensive public disclosure. While some argue that quarterly reporting encourages short-term decision-making, reducing transparency is not the appropriate solution. Companies already have flexibility in how they communicate long-term strategy while continuing to provide investors with regular financial information. Improving incentives for long-term value creation should not come at the expense of investor access to timely information. The proposed rule could also create an uneven playing field. Institutional investors and market participants with direct access to company management may continue receiving information through earnings calls, meetings, and ongoing relationships, while individual investors would have fewer standardized disclosures upon which to base investment decisions. This risks increasing information asymmetry rather than promoting fair markets. The compliance costs associated with quarterly reporting should be weighed against the substantial public benefit of transparency, market confidence, and accountability. Frequent reporting helps deter fraud, supports market efficiency, and allows investors to identify emerging risks before they become major losses. I respectfully urge the Commission to reject the proposed rule and maintain the existing quarterly reporting requirements. If the Commission believes changes are warranted, it should instead consider targeted approaches that reduce unnecessary compliance burdens for smaller issuers without reducing the frequency of financial reporting available to investors. Thank you for considering my comments.

Jennifer Jones — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Jones America rewards ownership more than hard work. Owning stocks is one way young people, who often can't afford a house, can invest. Please don't remove the knowledge sources and disclosures that we use to invest well.

Jessica Conn — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jessica Conn Please do not approve S7-2026-15. Our economy and industries are already under strain.

Jim Greenberg Long time individual investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jim Greenberg I understand that you are considering reducing the number of reports required of publicly traded companies. I oppose this impulse because I believe that longer periods of opacity will make insider trading more likely and increase market volatility, as each statement will contain more information that may have been previously unknown to the public.

JoAnne McLean — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: JoAnne McLean Quarterly reports aid the public and consumer. It can deter fraud and increase public awareness. It holds businesses accountable to shareholders. Insider trading and fraud are increasing exponentially under this administration. This change will further erode the safeguards that are in place to curb corruption and fraud.

Joe Parker — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joe Parker This is wrong! It is difficult enough for individuals to keep track of companies when trying to invest for retirement. This makes it even harder to know where I/we should be putting my/our money. Why are you proposing something that very blatantly caters to the hands of insider trading and closed door deals? If you are making changes to reporting, it should be that they are making monthly updates to their quarterly reports so that the stock holders can see that they are on track or not. Your actions are not acting in behalf of the public and protecting our assets, but in behalf of the corporations that do not want to make their performance public. Thank you, Joe Parker

---

John Delfausse — Jul 5, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Delfausse I believe that in the world of AI assisted information sharing, It would not be a hardship or costly for companies to report 4 times a year on their performance.

John Hemphill — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Hemphill I feel strongly the SEC should keep the existing quarterly reporting for public companies. It's provides more timely updates and insights into company financial position and related disclosures. Reducing the frequency of financial reporting requirements has the potential for public companies to be less timely on providing insights into how the company is doing. Please keep the Q process as it exists today. Thanks, John Hemphill

---

John OGara — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John OGara I'm a hard working veteran who is a savvy investor and have recently retired- relying on good current information to continue to be able to stay retired. Shifting to less information and open books reporting is an awful idea. In 2026 we have MORE info at our fingertips not less. This concept of decreasing the information required from firms is AWFUL and backwards and hurts the small investor the most. Do NOT change the rules!

John V Back Jr CPA — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John V Back Jr I can't believe you would propose giving investors less information. It is counter-intuitive to the great open flow of information that has been the hallmark of the American Marketplace. Please do not proceed with this very bad idea.

Jon Urish Financial Advisor, Thrivent — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jon Urish I am writing to strongly oppose the Commission's proposal to reduce the mandatory reporting frequency for public companies from quarterly to semi annually: * Reduces Market Transparency: Less frequent financial disclosures will create data gaps, leaving retail investors in the dark for six months at a time. * Increases Market Volatility: Reducing regular updates will lead to larger, unpredictable market shocks when data is finally released. * Raises Capital Costs: Information asymmetry naturally increases risks, which prompts investors to demand higher risk premiums. * Harms Retail Investors: Institutional investors possess alternative data sources, whereas public retail investors rely strictly on standard SEC filings for a level playing field. * Weakens Corporate Oversight: Longer gaps between mandatory filings provide more time for corporate mismanagement or financial irregularities to go unnoticed. The current quarterly reporting system has been in place for 50+ years and ensures market integrity, robust liquidity, and investor protection. I urge the Commission to maintain the existing quarterly reporting framework to preserve trust in the U.S. capital markets.

Jonathan Gat — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jonathan Gat I don't see how this can possibly help ordinary investors. How can less disclosure be good or helpful. The US markets are the center of the world financial world due to the current rules. Why risk that?

Joseph A. Pampush CPA (inactive) — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joseph A. Pampush Transparency, accountability, completeness and timeliness of financial information is imperative to make a proper analysis of a company's performance, current and on-going. Companies currently reporting quarterly results already have the necessary infrastructure in place to meet the required SEC guidelines. Reducing the reporting from quarterly to semi-annually will result in no significant savings for the company and will negatively impact one's ability to fairly assess a company in a timely manner as much of the financial information will be stale by the time it is reported. This will especially impact the small investor/ stockholder as they are not privy to financial information that the large investors always seem to have. It will only allow more time for the inevitable "we didn't see this coming" negative report to fester. Any company that believes it is too onerous to report quarterly result should re-think it's core values. For these few reasons and the many others that have been proffered in support of quarterly reporting, I respectfully ask the SEC to continue requiring quarterly reporting for publicly traded companies. Thank you Joseph A. Pampush, CPA (inactive) 45+ years in Financial Services Industry

---

Joseph Gabello — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joseph Gabello Thank you SEC Commissioners for allowing comments on the proposal to move from quarterly to semiannual reporting. I am a retail investor in 401k and IRA accounts, I oppose this change. Investors and their financial advisors need timely information which is made possible for retail investors by quarterly filings by public companies. The move to a semiannual filing requirement will reduce trust and transparency plus increase the window for catching fraudulent or incorrect financials, possible impacts of lawsuits, and diminishing customer bases. Investors need quarterly updates to remain confident in their investments. Thank you for your consideration.

Joshua Jensen Securities Integrator — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joshua Jensen Do not pass this and allow companies to pull more money from American's retirement. It's bad enough that pensions are no longer a retirement path, and Social Security won't be solvent for my children's lifetime. If you pass this, the 401k and the IRA funds would be useless. America would be the 1st, first world country with a homeless rate equal to Cambodia. This rule would only help the top 1% grow wealth, which they don't need to survive,; but would take the last 1% from American's budgets that they desperately need to survive. Be smart, everyone sees that this is a bad choice; and anyone that pursues passing it is obviously corrupt and worth pursuing legal challenges against.

Journey Holland — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Journey Holland This is unacceptable

---

Juan Pablo Suarez — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Juan Pablo Suarez As an individual investor and with the research from the CFA Institute that studied the same maneuver in the UK market, this is a movement that only perjudicate individual investors, less transparency for us. This is the wrong direction

---

Judy Franklin — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Judy Franklin The Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") is proposing amendments to allow companies to file semiannual reports on new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q to meet their interim reporting obligations under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. The Commission is also proposing changes to the financial statement requirements of Regulation S-X to facilitate semiannual reporting and to simplify rules regarding the age of financial statements. Hiding financial data from public investors for 6 months has no purpose except to hide misuse of company investments and returns that investors need to protect themselves and their futures. Companies are already divulging the strengths and weaknesses in their finances quarterly, without undue burden. We must remember the lessons learned from the collapses of Enron and Worldcom and the loss of pensions and 401k investments, especially of employees. From Wikipedia: "The Enron scandal was an accounting scandal sparked by American energy company Enron Corporation filing for bankruptcy after news of widespread internal fraud became public in October 2001, which led to the dissolution of its accounting firm, Arthur Andersen, previously one of the five largest in the world. The largest bankruptcy reorganization in U.S. history at that time, Enron was cited as the biggest audit failure." Also from Wkipedia: "The WorldCom scandal was a major accounting scandal discovered in June 2002 at WorldCom, then the second-largest long-distance telephone company in the United States. Between 1999 and 2002, senior executives led by founder and CEO Bernard Ebbers engaged in accounting fraud to inflate earnings and maintain the company's stock price.[1] The fraud was discovered by the company's internal audit unit under Vice President Cynthia Cooper, who identified over $3.8 billion in fraudulent balance sheet entries. Subsequent investigations revealed that WorldCom had overstated its assets by over $11 billion, making it the largest accounting fraud in American history at that time. WorldCom filed for bankruptcy in July 2002 and CEO Ebbers was sentenced to 25 years in prison in 2005." It is unfortunate that many corporations commit internal fraud and hide it from investors. More scrutiny is necessary, not less. The proposed SEC rule change must not be adopted. The new Form 10-S must not be adopted. Companies must continue to file quarterly reports on Form 10-Q to meet their interim reporting obligations under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Additional proposed changes to the financial statement requirements of Regulation S-X to facilitate semiannual reporting and to simplify rules regarding the age of financial statements must be rejected. We do not need laxer reporting requirements. We need to keep a critical, scrutinizing eye on the financial details of companies that have such broad based effects on our economy and the financial stability of investors.

Julie Day — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Julie Day I oppose allowing companies to not engage in quarterly reporting and only requiring twice per year reporting. More transparency with timely reporting is what is needed — not less.

K Hoopingarner — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: K Hoopingarner Keep reporting quarterly. Today's economy moves at a much faster rate than in the past. With most people's retirement tied up in the market, it makes it harder at 6 months to make decisions before it's too late. There are some people who have information others don't which benefits them only. If anything reporting timeframes should be going the other direction with today's technology.

Kaitlyn Sprague — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kaitlyn Sprague The proposed changes offer less transparency to the average consumer, which is detrimental to making informed decisions about our investments. Information is power and people want to be empowered to make good decisions with their money. Keeping it quarterly!

Karen card Retired — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen card Keep quarterly reporting

---

Karen Cohen — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Cohen Filings amd reporting should be available and mandatory at least quarterly. Investors and the public have a right to know. Deregulation seems to only help a few.

Karen Harrington — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Harrington I am strongly opposed to changing reporting from quarterly to twice annually. Removing the requirement that the chief executive sign attesting that the information is accurate invites the possibility of deception. Corporations seem inclined to push the edge of what is legal—don't make it easy for them to deceive their stockholders. As a private investor I rely on information that is both timely and accurate. I don't seem any legitimate reason to remove the penalty for providing false information nor do I see any reason to reduce the number of filings each year.

Karen Santo-Pietro — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Santo-Pietro I respectfully disagree with the items proposed in Rule S7-2026-15. As a private individual who manages my personal retirement funds online, I am very concerned that publicly traded companies will be most certain to withhold information from smaller investors to benefit their bottomline. As history shows, those within an inner circle tend to share information within their own ranks but withhold important information from outsiders. I foresee a few insiders obtaining bigger profits while transferring bigger risks and losses to small scale investors. This proposal may subsequently push independent investors like myself to sign up our small retirement accounts under large management firms because they have relationships with, and therefore, have information from companies that smaller investors would no longer have access to. Large management firms also come with large management fees which reduces retirement funds for soon-to-be retirees who do not want to depend solely on Social Security. I believe there is also a racial and class discrimination component inherent in this proposal. This proposal appears to benefit large publicly traded companies and large retirement fund management companies who are majority owned by one particular class and race. While some of the items in this proposal may reduce work for large publicly traded companies, it lacks any real benefits to smaller individuals. I believe in a free market that allows both big and small investors to profit. Therefore, I respectfully ask the SEC to rescind this proposal. I hope the SEC will continue to provide a marketplace that assures smaller investors equal and timely access to information, thereby, reassuring us of equal opportunities for success. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Karen Weber — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Weber Please KEEP quarterly reporting. I strongly agree with comments submitted by Jonathan Saweikis, 6/30/2026, please read the entire letter. -Quarterly reports are essential for detecting and deterring fraud. -Investors need timely information to make informed decisions.

Katherine Doyle — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Katherine Doyle I urge the commission to keep the quarterly filing requirement for all companies. Six months is too long; investors need up to date information.

Kathleen King — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathleen King Kathleen King RN. It is important to know how companies are doing financially. They could be the companies taking care of my patients..One day they are there, the next day they are gone, no services for my clients.

Kathleen Medarac — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathleen Medarac Reporting needs to be quarterly. These longer reporting periods create an unfair advantage for corporate insiders and leave the rest of us in the dark who rely on these quarterly reports to make our decisions. Companies have computer programs to complete the reporting so it is not a hardship. If there are any slight potential savings for these companies it is not fair to be at the expense of the investors.

Kathleen Niezgoda Consultant in financial services industry — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathleen Niezgoda I oppose the SEC proposal to move from quarterly to semiannual reporting because there is no benefit to investors. There is actually potential damage to investors from information loss, and in turn will negatively affect the operation of the markets. It's not broken; do not fix it.

Kathryn Wienkes — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathryn The quarterly reports were enacted as a result of poorly managed business decisions where companies were keeping information off the books and were hiding troubles. We do not need to return to this level of deception and the public cannot afford to risk their investments in poorly managed companies (that appear to be much stronger in semi-annual or annual reports). The public demands that companies continue to file the quarterly reports as they are today; requiring internal controls and transparency, auditor oversight, and executive accountability.

Keep it quarterly! — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Keep it quarterly! Keep reporting quarterly. I want to know how in dept Wallstreet is getting and how well companies are doing.

Kelly — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kelly We tried this once, between 1955 and 1970. Less transparency came with lower returns and lower valuations. For an ordinary investor, a return to those days could mean losing a third, or even half, of your life savings. Stop giving corporations and companies free rein to drag this economy and country down further. This does nothing but allow for abuse and fraud, as previously proven. Stop putting profits over the people who hold this economy up.

Kendra Sutherland — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kendra Sutherland Making 6 month reporting optional opens up a back door for corruption. We rely on the SEC to enforce and protect transparency. By making reporting optional you may as well make it not required at all. What company will report if it is not required?!

Kenneth Downs Mostly fool — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kenneth Downs Makes no logical sense to cut back on reports. Keep it same as is.

Kerry Roy Working professional, with a 401K — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kerry Roy The proposed change to move away from quarterly reporting does not look out for the little guy in any way. There is too much corruption as it is, why reduce the amount of transparency that currently exists even further? I've been working for nearly 30 years and remain concerned about retirement and 401K balances because of games played by those that have access to information not available to the rest of us.

Kevin J Tankersley — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin J Tankersley As an investor, I am opposed to the proposed changes in the rules to allow semi-annual reporting. The quarterly reporting requirements provide greater transparency and assurances to investors to be able to see the progress of a company through the course of a year. Much can change in the finances of a company in even one quarter. Quarterly reporting should continue to be required.

Kris — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kris KEEP quarterly reporting. As an investor, we need as much transparency as possible and liability legally tied to leaderships' hands (8-k disclosures have NO TEETH). Reducing reporting requirements would allow insiders to cash out and allow fraud to grow more easily - WE DO NOT NEED ANOTHER ENRON.

Kristal Klehfoth — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kristal Klehfoth Keep accounting quarterly. Protect accountability. Protect investors.

Kristin Investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kristin Maintain Quarterly Reporting. Investors deserve timely information for decision-making.

Laura Menoher — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Menoher I believe the proposal to allow semi-annual corporate reporting (on Form 10-S) instead of the current required quarterly reporting (on Form 10-Q) would leave me less well-informed as an indivual investor. I would like more frequent information about the companies I am investing in, not less. Less frequent information will make me more uneasy as an investor - perhaps prompting me to unwind my investments now. If it were up to me, I would have monthly reports. Please do not make this change.`

Laura Retired pension consulting analyst — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Investors rely on quarterly reporting for decision making. Reducing transparency allows for fraud to get a toe hold. This has been shown in countries that allow less frequent reporting. Insiders will have access to even greater advantages. The SEC needs to continue it's oversight.

Laura Young — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Young I let professionals handle my invested savings but am strongly against businesses having the option of six-month instead of quarterly reporting. The records will be kept, businesses have great assistance with computers now to make quarterly compliance smooth. There is no reason to change this. It is only an invitation to hide details from the public, to enable opportunities for fraud, and to benefit "those in the know" anyway.

Laurence Steven Simon Retired Personal Investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laurence Steven Simon Subject: Public Comment on File Number S7-2026-15: Strong Opposition to Proposed Semiannual Reporting Rule Dear Chairman Atkins, I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposed rule and form amendments regarding Semiannual Reporting (File Number S7-2026-15). As an individual investor, I strongly urge the Commission to maintain the current quarterly reporting framework (Form 10-Q) that has protected market transparency for over 50 years. Investing represents true corporate ownership. When individual investors own a piece of a business, we deserve regular, transparent, and timely communication from management. Reducing the frequency of mandatory reporting from four times a year to just two weakens the essential connection between companies and their owners. While proponents argue that a semiannual timeline reduces administrative costs or eases short-term pressures, these points are highly debatable in an age where artificial intelligence and digital disclosure tools make reporting more efficient than ever. Removing critical touchpoints does not create more patient market participants; it simply creates less-informed owners. Less corporate transparency will not eliminate market uncertainty—it will amplify it. Cutting the informational cadence in half means that when critical corporate updates finally arrive, market surprises will be larger, investor reactions will be sharper, and stock volatility will ultimately be greater. For these reasons, I ask that the SEC reject this rollback and preserve the quarterly reporting protections that ensure a fair, transparent, and informed marketplace for individual investors. Sincerely,Affiliation Name: The Motley Fool Community Laurence Steven Simon Pahrump , Nevada

---

Laurie Harrington on behalf of LEAP (Learn, Earn, and Profit) Investment Club — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laurie Harrington on behalf of LEAP (Learn, Earn, and Profit) Investment Club We are an all-women investment club from Washington State that has been active for over 25 years. We invest in both large and small companies and rely heavily on the quarterly reports of the companies we research and in our decisions to trade. The news that the SEC has proposed allowing public companies to file their financial reports only twice per year instead of quarterly has us very concerned. More than anything, we feel that this action would compromise the perceived integrity of the stock market and perhaps even the U.S. economy itself. As a group of investors, we also believe that when only reporting twice per year, companies can more easily hide downturns from investors, as well as make the cyclical nature of some industries less visible. This action would take away the timeliness of the vital tools we need to evaluate a company's financial strength, its management's actions, and future growth potential. Investors want and need access to timely, thorough, and accurate corporate reports. We strongly oppose the loss of transparency that this action would bring and ask that the SEC retain the requirement for 10-Q financial filings. Sincerely, Members of LEAP (Learn, Earn, and Profit) Investment Club

---

LaVerne Bitsie-Baldwin Educational Advisor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: LaVerne Bitsie-Baldwin Keep quarterly reporting because many of us cannot watch their accounts on a daily basis, the quarterly reports provide confidence in our economy.

Lee Robert — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lee Robert To Whom it May Concern: I am writing to strongly oppose the proposal to allow public companies to report on a semi-annual basis. I understand that preparing the 10-Qs are a lot of work as I was a CFO of a public company. Keeping the reporting quarterly lessens the ability for covering up fraud. Thank you.

Leonid Knyshov — Jul 5, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leonid Knyshov I'll be brief. There is no benefit to investors to be delivered by the proposed rule. More data is always welcome. We have technology to process it. There is expanded opportunity for Exchange Act companies, which have ample capacity for quarterly reporting, to engage in creative accounting. Companies do not need encouragement to become public entities. By the time they are of sufficient size, they can afford to comply with the existing regulations. The discussion about paper filings is laughable. All filings are computer-generated with few if any exceptions. Form 8-K is not a substitute for a 10-Q. 8-K filings are not required to be reviewed by a public accountant. The proposed form 10-S would extend the period for reviewed information for a hypothetical reportable event that occurred on January 1 from middle of April to middle of August. I propose shortening the deadline for 10-Q and 10-K from 45 days that is already too long to match 8-K's. I ask the commission to please explain who actually benefits from this proposed Rule and the motivation for this proposal.

Linda Finkelstein private citizen Stock holder — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Finkelstein KEEP reporting Quarterly! It was instituted for good reason- to Keep Corporate Leaders Accountable & Honest! That is very definitely STILL NEEDED!

Linda Lawrence — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Lawrence Keep quarterly reporting. It is imperative for investors to know what is going on in the market. Less information is not acceptable. Linda Lawrence Lexington Ky

---

Lindsay Shimizu Software Analyst — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lindsay Shimizu I truly don't understand why anyone (other than corrupt billionaires) would think this is a good idea. Transparency is a vital part of our capitalist economy. It encourages competition and benefits both investors and consumers. I refuse to believe that this is being suggested for any reason other than to help the ridiculously wealthy. It is clearly not cumbersome as it's been an easy to fulfill requirement for decades. So why, I wonder, would an agency that is meant to protect the American people from shady business practices be so adamant about changing this long-established precedent now?

Lisa Carpenter — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Carpenter To the SEC: Please do continue quarterly reporting. As an American with investments in the stock market, it is imperative to continue to give investors like me quarterly reports. My family also has IRA investments, and without continued transparency I will also be concerned to not have access to quarterly reporting. Future investors may lose confidence in markets as well.

Lorenda Lillard — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lorenda Lillard I believe this proposal will be harmful to individual investors and will not create significant savings for companies. Historically, reduced reporting resulted in declining market prices. If that pattern repeats the consequences for pensions, retirement accounts and individual portfolios will be dire. Transparency and current, reliable information is important for decision making. Many business taxes are due on a quarterly basis so quarterly financial statements do not create a great burden for businesses. I encourage you to withdraw this proposal.

Lori Proctor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lori Proctor I oppose changing the SEC filing from quarterly to semi-annually. Quarterly reports allow for more transparency for all people who are impacted by and/or involved with the financial sector.

Lorraine Ortiz — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lorraine Ortiz Please do not let companies file semi-annual financial reports for public traded companies. This means the average investor would only see the information twice when many use this information as a guide to invest or not. There would be more room for fraud and graft. I am opposed to this proposal.

Lyn Farmer — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lyn Farmer I am opposed to the proposed Rulemaking to change the reporting requirements. . According to Congress . gov: "Congress passed the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (P.L. 73-291) to create the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) in the wake of the stock market crash in 1929 to help restore confidence in capital markets. The SEC is an independent federal regulatory agency responsible for administering federal securities laws. It has broad regulatory authority over significant parts of the securities industry, including securities offering and trading, asset management, and investment advisory. The SEC oversees federal securities laws broadly aimed at a three-part mission: (1) capital formation; (2) investor protection; and (3) maintaining fair, orderly, and efficient markets. The SEC's regulatory structure provides rules for honest dealing among securities market participants, including disclosure requirements for public companies, oversight of key market intermediaries, and prohibitions of fraud and market manipulation." The only reason given by the SEC for the proposed modification to the frequency of the reporting requirement is: "The flexibility provided under proposed amendments would enable public companies to choose the interim reporting frequency that would best serve the company and its investors." (PRESS RELEASE: SEC Proposes Amendments to Permit Optional Semiannual Reporting by Public Companies FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE 2026-42 Washington D.C., May 5, 2026) The SEC's proposed change would not further any of the 3 Congressional missions. It would only benefit those public companies who wanted to keep potentially time-sensitive information from investors and the public. There is a reason that the SEC regulations may appear to be "rigid" and that is because companies would otherwise be able to manipulate information disclosure and timing in a way that affects the markets and investors. History shows that to be the case. No demonstration has been made that a public company has been harmed under the existing regulation. As an investor and strong believer that sunshine is the best disinfectant, I urge you not to adopt the changes to the regulations. Thank you.

Marcia Fuller NA — Jul 5, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marcia Fuller Less transparency only means it will be easier to cheat!!

Maria Posada — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Maria Posada Re: Proposed Rule S7-2026-15 I strongly oppose the proposal to reduce mandatory public company reporting from quarterly to semiannual. As an individual investor saving for retirement and my children's future, I rely on timely, consistent financial disclosures to make informed investment decisions. Quarterly reporting helps create a more transparent market and gives everyday investors access to current information rather than forcing us to make decisions based on outdated financial results. I am concerned that reducing mandatory reporting to twice a year would increase information gaps between corporate insiders, large institutional investors, and individual investors. Transparency and timely disclosure are fundamental to maintaining confidence in U.S. capital markets and ensuring a level playing field for all investors. While I understand the desire to reduce unnecessary regulatory burdens on companies, I do not believe that reducing the frequency of financial reporting is the right solution. The benefits of transparency, accountability, and investor confidence outweigh the compliance costs. The SEC's mission is to protect investors and maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets. I believe continuing quarterly reporting better serves those goals than allowing companies to report only twice a year. Please keep the existing quarterly reporting requirements in place. Thank you for considering my comments. Maria Posada Brooklyn, New York Individual Retail Investor

---

Marie Boyer — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marie Boyer Quarterly reporting is necessary for individual investors to make informed decisions about their financial futures. Since pensions are few and we the average person, has to save and invest for our future, we need up to date information. This is especially so for those who invest in 401k savings plans. The risk or fraud not being discovered in a timely manner would be decreased with twice yearly reporting. Corporations must keep these financial records anyway, the cost of quarterly filings is minimal compared to the necessity for the more current informant.

Marie pichaske None — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marie pichaske This would be such a disaster. Do not lengthen the time for reporting. I wouldn't trust those companies and I wouldn't trust SEC.

Marilyn Spencer Retired — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marilyn Spencer Quarterly reports were put in place to protect against excesses and fraud not being detected for 6 months or more. These issues are still real. Quarterly reports need to be maintained to protect us from corporate decisions that are harmful.

Marjorie Perry none — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marjorie Perry Your proposed rule changing quarterly to semi-annual reporting would hurt American shareholders and consumers immensly. DO NOT change the current quarterly (signed) reporting. We need to know what is going on in these public companies in a timely manner. Another example of this administrations selling out to big business over citizens.

Mark A. Littlejohn — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark A. Littlejohn Commissioners: Regarding the removal of quarterly reporting. As a Houston resident, I lived through the Enron crisis firsthand. As a telecom industry executive, I witnessed the MCI Worldcom fiasco up close. History can repeat itself. You should be demanding additional audits of publicly traded companies, not fewer. Respectfully, Mark Littlejohn Littlejmark@gmail.com (Retired)

Mark Alexander — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Alexander The quarterly reports are not an undue burden on honest companies, the only ones that will benefit from this change are corporations trying to hide malfeasance. The more time given those dishonest companies, the more harm that will be done to investors relying on the information provided to make financial decisions. The investing environment is already being made more opaque with the Fed reducing their information flow. The regulatory environment is also easing requirements on financial companies. It seems like a lot of these moves are designed to make crime and corruption easier for dishonest players.

Mary Terhaar — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Terhaar Please do not make it easier for companies to obfuscate facts.

Master Alliance Inc None — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Master Alliance Inc I think we should stick with four reports Instead of two

---

Matthew Automotive Engineer — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew As a consumer and as an investor, quarterly reporting is important for my purchasing decisions. Being kept in the dark for six months at a time allows companies to escape scrutiny while customers and investors continue to fund these companies. Companies need to be accountable and quarterly reporting allows for more visibility to their performance so that consumers and investors can make the appropriate decisions.

Matthew Chisholm Self-Directed Investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew Chisholm For the sake of transparency in the markets in an ever increasing world of shady business practices and online influencers pushing particular stocks, I urge you to keep reporting quarterly.

Michael Curran — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Curran Re: File No. S7-2026-15 — Semiannual Reporting Dear Commissioners: Please accept this comment in opposition to the proposed rule change that would allow public companies to reduce interim reporting from quarterly reporting to semiannual reporting. The United States capital markets are respected around the world because they are built on transparency, consistency, and timely disclosure. Investors in stocks and bonds depend on regular financial reporting to evaluate company performance, compare issuers, assess risk, and make informed decisions. Reducing required reporting from quarterly to twice per year would weaken one of the long-standing strengths of the U.S. public markets. Quarterly reporting provides investors with a consistent schedule for reviewing revenue, earnings, cash flow, debt levels, business conditions, and management performance. Moving to semiannual reporting would create longer periods where investors are operating with less complete information. That gap increases uncertainty and could make investing in both stocks and bonds more risky, especially for individual investors who do not have access to the same level of information as large institutions. The current reporting structure also supports market confidence. When investors know that public companies must provide regular updates, they can better judge whether a company is improving, declining, or facing operational or financial stress. Less frequent reporting could lead to wider information gaps, greater speculation, and sharper market reactions when delayed information is finally released. While reducing reporting requirements may lower costs for some companies, investor protection and market transparency should remain the higher priority. Public companies benefit from access to U.S. capital markets, and regular reporting is part of the responsibility that comes with that access. For these reasons, the Commission should not adopt the proposed change allowing public companies to reduce reporting frequency to semiannual reporting. The existing quarterly reporting system should remain in place because it supports investor confidence, market discipline, and the strong reputation of U.S. financial markets. Respectfully submitted, Michael Curran

---

Michael Hoesley — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Hoesley Allowing corporations to file semi-annually corporate results if they so choose is opening up a Pandora's box. They currently do not have a problem filing their corporate results quarterly so I don't see why they should have to go to semi-annually. A fire detected early does not cause too many problems but one is allowed to fester will burn down an entire neighborhood. Although most corporations are honest there will be times where they may be tempted to be devious and let's not allow this to happen. Keep the reporting on a quarterly basis it works now so why break something that is working.

Michael T. Ferro an individual investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael T. Ferro I am vehemently opposed to this rule change. I am an individual investor, not a professional, and I actively manage my own investments. I regularly assess the health of the companies in which I invest. Quarterly reporting is essential, and I strongly oppose allowing companies the option of reporting semi-annually instead. To implement my long-term investing strategy, I find quarterly reports essential in assessing overall health. To allow companies the option of reporting less frequently would disadvantage individual investors such as myself, and the net effect would be that large-scale and well-connected professionals would gain an advantage, to the detriment of individual investors. Vehemently opposed.

Michele Tibodeau — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michele Tibodeau This proposal hurts Americans managing retirement and investment accounts by pulling back on transparency and causing unnecessary volatility. The closer Americans are to retirement, the harder this volatility is to overcome without working well beyond retirement years to recover losses.

Michele Winsten — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michele Winsten I have made investments on and off over the years. I have relied on quarterly reports and disclosures to help make informed decisions regarding buying and selling. The length of time between financial reports and disclosures is important. Waiting 6 months plus is much too long. Interim mistakes have the potential to be costly to the public. Quarterly Reports and Disclosures have helped protect investors through timely transparency. They should be considered by corporations just another part of doing business. There is no viable rationale for extending financial reporting and disclosures. This practice has been adequately effective and should remain in tact.

Mike Burke Trader-Investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mike Burke If it ain't broke, don't fix it!

Mike Caral — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mike Caral Getting rid of quarterly reporting means less transparency for investors. This will enable the more predatory and parasitic bad actors to hide and commit more fraud by keeping investors in the dark for a longer period of time. This kind of deregulation is pro-crime, and should not be allowed. As a retired person relying on investments to fund my retirement and legacy, it’s important to not enable white-collar crime under the false idea that somehow this is too hard. Mike Caral.

Mike F Wright — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mike F Wright I oppose the proposed rule change to reporting requirements for publicly traded companies. It was changed in the 30's for a reason, stocks fell consistently. Businesses don't want to do the work and pay the cost of quarterly reporting. Too bad, executives will use this to hide poorly performing companies from they public view so they can move their assets accordingly before the stock tanks. Retail investors stand to lose of this rule is changed. Keep reporting quarterly.

Ms. Diaz — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ms. Diaz Dear Officer of the Secretary, Thank you for the opportunity to share my concern and apprehension of the proposed rule change on the Securities and Exchange Commission’s proposal file number S7-2026-15 Semiannual Reporting which would provide all companies subject to reporting obligations under the Exchange Act Section 13(a) or 15(d) that file quarterly reports the option to file interim reports on a semiannual basis. I do not support the permitting of semiannual reporting as this creates an opportunity of extreme risk and obscured trends that filing quarterly provides visibility and clearly represents the financial health and performance of a company through operational growth stage, seasonal periods, mature markets and adverse conditions. As an individual investor through retirement accounts clear indicators of how the companies in my portfolio are performing is vital in how I am to understand and be confident that my investments are working for my retirement goals. I want to know and see the information from the companies are providing accurate, reliable facts about how financially sound and fit through frequent filing they are. Thank you and Best regards Ms. M. Diaz

---

N. Wagner — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: N. Wagner This is a bad proposal and I am opposed to it. This country has shifted from a pension system to self-directed retirement. Reducing the transparency of corporations will increase their ability to hide poor financial results and poor management from investors who are largely, now, middle-class "ordinary citizens" many of whom largely rely on these companies' dividends for their daily living expenses in retirement. If not required by law, companies will have no incentive to make quarterly results public, so they won't. Mismanagement will have a longer "runway " - that is, time for the problems to get bigger - so that resulting losses will be bigger as a given company "crashes." Retail investors might lose substantial portions of their retirement income. If you are old enough to "remember Enron," that is a case in point. (the company's stock price plummeted from a high of US$90.75 per share in mid-1990s to less than $1 by the end of November 2001.) Granted, the CEOs were charged with fraud but if you decrease transparency even well-intentioned management blunders are more likely to happen. Those companies choosing to adopt less frequent reporting will signal a lack of transparency and a less focus on their prospective and existing shareholders, making them less attractive investments. This in turn will have investors turning to other investments, like real estate, foreign companies, metals and others. It would cause a decline in U.S. stock market investment, thus companies will have less money for R&D, expansion, and so on. A downward spiral. Please do NOT enact this proposal.

Nancy Controller — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Timely results are needed to make reasonable analysis in how a public company is performing. Six months is too long

---

Nancy Epstein — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Epstein As an individual investor nearing retirement, I think this is a terrible idea. Please don’t do it.

Nathan Calvert — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nathan Calvert Corruption in the corporate sphere is rampant. In this critical juncture of our society, the LAST thing we need is less transparency. If I ran the world, I would institute bimonthly reporting, but maybe corporations don’t have enough money for that. Quarterly reporting was instituted before the Internet, and since people can now be more transparent in their communications than ever before, companies (treated legally as people) should, at the very least, continue their current level of transparency rather than increase the time available to cook the books, hiding fraud and failure. I read that this practice of semiannual reporting did not improve conditions in the nations in which it has been implemented and that Singapore is trying to go back to quarterly. It is foolish, at this low point in our nation's cultural and moral evolution, to think that we can do it better.

Nicola Visaggio — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nicola Visaggio I oppose any proposal that would reduce the frequency of required financial reporting by public companies. Quarterly reporting has been a cornerstone of market transparency for decades. Reducing required disclosures to every six months would increase information asymmetry between corporate insiders, institutional investors, and ordinary shareholders. Executives, directors, analysts, and large institutional investors often have greater access to management and other sources of information than retail investors. Less frequent public reporting would further disadvantage individual investors and undermine confidence in fair and transparent markets. I also question the broader policy rationale for providing additional regulatory relief to large public corporations. For decades, many corporations have benefited from tax incentives, subsidies, and public financial support during periods of economic stress. At the same time, individual investors and workers have increasingly been expected to bear greater financial risk. Reducing transparency requirements continues a pattern of shifting benefits toward large corporations while weakening protections for the investing public. The SEC's mission is to protect investors, maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets, and facilitate capital formation. Maintaining robust and timely financial disclosure is consistent with that mission. I urge the Commission to preserve quarterly reporting requirements. Thank you for your attention in this matter.

Nicole Robins — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nicole Robins Please help protect us by keeping these the current reporting requirements in place. Big money must be kept in check and held accountable for falsifying or misleading.

Noe Villanueva — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Noe Villanueva We need to keep quarterly reporting in place as it stands now. By going to semi annual we will risk fraud not being caught in time and lose the clarity of our investments. Also other countries that went to semi annual reporting are regretting having done so and wanting to return to quarterly. So let's learn from them and keep our quarterly reporting in place.

Noel Helgesen — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Noel Helgesen Do not make this change. While I appreciate that this would allow executives to not feel like they have to make shake-ups or improvements show benefits immediately, I don't think the benefits outweigh the drawbacks. Allowing semiannual reporting enables the obfuscation of wrongdoing for an extra three months where it is happening.

Noelle Humm — Jul 5, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Noelle Humm According to what I have read, according to current rules, “four times a year, the CEO and CFO must each put their name to the company's books, certifying they've reviewed the report and that it contains no untrue statement of a material fact. Knowingly certify a false one: up to $1 million and 10 years in federal prison. Do it willfully: up to $5 million and 20 years.” In the past “Enron's executives claimed ignorance of their own books, so Congress made ignorance impossible to claim. Every quarter, the CEO and CFO certify that they personally designed and evaluated the controls that surface bad news, and that they reported any weaknesses or fraud to the auditors. “ If the law changes then “earnings releases ride on Form 8-K as "furnished," not "filed." That category exempts them from the automatic liability filed reports carry. No outside auditor reviews them, and no certification is required even when an 8-K contains financial statements. The SEC's own proposal concedes the problem. The 8-K may contain information, but it lacks any accountability.” Accountability IS the key. “Sarbanes-Oxley became law on July 30, 2002. Six days later, HealthSouth's CFO tried to quit rather than certify numbers he knew were fake: "he just couldn't sign the certifications." Months later he went to federal prosecutors and became the first of fifteen executives to plead guilty in a $2.7 billion fraud. A certification costs an honest executive nothing to sign, it just exposes those who are trying to commit fraud. Why roll them back?” Oversight promotes honesty.

Ofer Inbar — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ofer Inbar Relaxing the requirement for companies to report quarterly, allowing them to choose to wait 6 months between reports, will increase corruption. It would also delay exposure of fraud or other misconduct. Allowing companies to report only twice a year would only help insiders, at the expense of regular investors. It would also underscore the tendency of the current government to favor the few rich & powerful over regular Americans. [I submitted a similar comment recently but did not get an email confirmation with my comment, nor can I find it by searching filings, and EDGAR search web site is down. So I do not know if my comment was submitted successfully and am re-submitting.]

Oscar Chamberlain — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Oscar Chamberlain This is a bad proposal. I oppose it. The shift to a semi-annual report hurts small investors. However, in most large-scale corporations, while the majority of shareholders may be small investors, the majority of votes is with large and institutional investors. These groups can afford private services that provide much of the interim data they need. However, most small investors can't do that. This rule change will make the information divide between institutions and individual even greater. That division distorts the flow of information essential in investment into insiders and outsiders. The majority, who in this case are the outsiders, need more information, not less

---

Oscar Paniagua Morales Engineer — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Oscar Paniagua Morales I believe semiannual reporting, even though posed as optional, will provide an additional unfair disadvantage to regular, working Americans. In a time of growing economic inequality, increased opaqueness in financial reporting will harm the everyday American who relies on information to make financial decisions for retirement and personals savings. I ask that the SEC considers fairly how this will affect all Americans, not just executives and the additional costs that companies are responsible for during times of record-breaking profits.

P. Ryan — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: P. Ryan I support maintaining quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. Regular financial disclosures promote transparency, accountability, and informed decision-making for investors. Any move towards longer reporting periods introduces opacity for regular investors and creates an unfair advantage for corporate insiders. As an individual investor and retirement saver, I rely on timely public information to understand how companies are performing. Reducing reporting frequency could make it harder to identify risks early and would provide less transparency for everyday investors. Please preserve quarterly reporting requirements.

Pamela Willer Investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pamela Willer Quarterly reporting and oversight is critical to continue to ensure the integrity of our corporate institutions reporting is an accurate reflection on the health of a company (Financially fit for investment). Yes for continued SEC Quarterly Reporting.

Patricia Griffin — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia Griffin It should be monthly! Quarterly is a risk. Semi-annual is criminal

---

Patricia Hill — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia Hill Keep the current status in place! There should be NO CHANGE!

---

patrick Daniel kelly — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: patrick Daniel kelly I am opposed to public companies only submitting biannual reports. I feel as someone who has my own money invested that having access to quarterly reports allows me to make the best informed decisions about my own investments. I feel that it's unfair for those with relationships and knowledge to have better information for their own investments.

Pattie White Retired Business Executive — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pattie White I’m retired now and rely on investments to help me stay afloat for what I hope will be many years. I’m deeply concerned that eliminating quarterly reporting will make it harder to spot problems - and identify opportunities- in companies I rely on. Businesses compile information routinely so the effort/cost to report quarterly pales beside the cost of lost visibility and the risk of fraud. KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING!

Patty Bowman Consumer Investor — Jul 5, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patty Bowman I am opposed to the proposed change for companies to file the 10Q twice a year instead of the current quarterly filing. This proposal makes it harder for investors to make decisions. This proposal reduces transparency. We do not need to make corporations even more powerful.

Patty Riddlebarger Vice President, Entergy Corporation — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patty Riddlebarger To whom it may concern: I am opposed to the proposed change in quarterly reporting for corporations. Transparency is essential to maintain public trust and ensure healthy competition. Investors need more not less information.

Paul E Musselman Computer Systems Analyst — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul E Musselman re: S7-2026-15 - I recommend NOT changing the reporting period from the current quarterly interval. During the past several years, with the accounting changes required by the Sarbanes-Oxley act, any company audited by a reputable accounting firm has established controls and reports based on the required quarterly reporting cycle. Having lived with the changes required in a computerized accounting system to make such reports possible, once established the reporting process is almost automatic. Therefore, relaxing the controls to every six months provides no relief to corporations. But provides additional time for poor accounting processes to gain hold. --Paul E Musselman

---

Paul Sollenberger NGO worker — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Sollenberger I work hard, and I invest in the market for my future. In order to invest well we need financial information. Why would we, in order to save a dime for a company, move to semi-anual reporting. When doing so makes the market opaque, and gives people in the know plenty of time to close positions with insider knowledge. This seems like it's goal is to ingratiate the government with CEOs and CFOs at the expense of the people. On this the day after the 250th anniversary of our country I sincerely hope that our government is still of the people, for the people and by the people. And that speech isn't distributed on the basis of wealth.

Paul Trunzo Retired — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Trunzo Shouldn't we know more about the companies that we invest in. Please keep corporate reports at 4 times a year. If I have a mortgage I should know whether it has been sold and to who it has been sold to. I should have right to say you can't resell my mortgage.

Paula Renz Retired — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paula Renz I'm retired but I sent forty years as a financial systems analyst. Modern financial systems can easily produce quarterly reports, it is not a hardship. I oversaw systems that produced monthly reports for upper management and even daily reports for sensitive data. Don't help executives hide the truth if you want investors to trust them. Insider trading is a big enough issue without helping it metastasize.

Phillop Samson EOUSA USAO (retired) — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Phillop Samson As a retired, former DOJ employee who participated in many financial fraud investigations and prosecutions, I have seen the results of less financial transparency; and, as a U.S. citizen, I request that the SEC retain mandatory quarterly reporting & not enact S7-2026-15. Thank you.

Prashant Patel Self — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Prashant Patel It’s important to keep quarterly reporting consistency. It ensures all businesses maintain the same standards and as investors I can compare companies and their results. Allowing businesses decide can create opportunities for fraud.

Preston Layton — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Preston Layton Form 10-Q is a vital tool for me in making investment decisions. Changing reporting requirements to semiannual would reduce the amount of information available to me while allowing those with inside connections to retain that information flow. And this is counter to the purpose of the SEC.

R Cole — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: R Cole Do not change required reporting to a semi annual basis. It is important for the public to know the financial status of particular companies on a regular quarterly basis. If invested in that company or companies, it is all the more important.

Rachel Blakeman — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rachel Blakeman As someone who has invested in index funds for more than 20 years in both retirement accounts (Roth and traditional) and brokerage accounts, I respectfully request the SEC keep the quarterly reporting rule. While this might be more work than twice a year for companies, it gives investors like myself crucial knowledge about company performance. The stock market returns power my ability to retire in 10 to 15 years. Don’t mess this up by changing this rule.

Ralph Prince — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ralph Prince This change is not good for small investors like myself. Less information makes for guessing instead of being informed.

Randy Willmott Randy Willmott — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Randy Willmott It's corruption, plain and simple.

Raven Wicker — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Raven Wicker I believe quarterly reporting is critical. I work in corporate finance and consulting previously (Big 4, Home Depot) and in my experience reporting less frequently will cause delays in reporting and more mistakes. The cadence of every 3 months drives rigor at that mark and sometimes reconciliation for more than a few period becomes very difficult. For staff and investors it is imperative a 6 month period doesn't pass before external reporting must happen. Imagine closing books in weeks or more verse a few days… due to reconciliation of 6 months verse 3. This is a huge mistake to report less. Companies will fire accounting and finance staff and too much pressure will be put on remaining staff to report 2x per year, quality will decrease and expertise will decrease. The current cadence keeps accuracy at the forefront, while balancing over governance. As someone who does this work, believe me that lessening requirement will only make things more difficult. Imagine balancing your check book 1-2 times a year verse more frequently. No one does this anymore- but checking accuracy more frequently keeps companies honest and books clean.

Rebecca Virnig — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rebecca Virnig This is just flat wrong!!! Do not allow more secrets by corporations!!!

Rebecca Wolkoff Senior Product Owner, Lincoln Electric — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rebecca Wolkoff I work for a public company who works with many publicly traded companies. We need to make business decisions that change as the market landscape changes. The current economic landscape is very volatile and this will make it even more volatile because companies will be providing reports less often. This means we may make less optimal decisions. In addition, we firmly believe in transparency, integrity, and accountability. Fewer reports is less a year is less transparent and leaves more room for less accountability when something goes away. On a personal level, I am a middle class citizen who owns stock in many public companies. The current reporting structure helps keep companies I have invested in accountable. As an individual, I have less power and less time than a larger stakeholder that might invest in these companies. Whereas a large entity may be able to quickly assess what companies that I have previously invested in will stay accountable, I do not have the resources to do so. My personal savings, which I have invested, would be at risk by providing a means for companies to be less accountable to what happens in the non-reported quarters. Thank you for your consideration. I would reject the proposed change.

Richard Conroy — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Conroy Dear SEC, I am writing to you to give support to the millions of other fellow investors to ask you please do not cease your tradition of publishing the quarterly financial reporting and replacing it with semiannual reporting. I believe, as do countless others, it will do a great disservice to the investing community as we all will be operating and making important decisions with a much reduced level of financial advice. This will of course will lead to poorer decisions, poorer investing outcomes and generally will leave us less agile. Yours sincerely Richard Conroy

---

Richard Scown — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Scown I am a retired accountant with 55 years experience in corporate reporting both public and private. Quarterly reporting was implemented as a remedy for inaccurate and inconsistent financial reporting practices. It was designed to provide protection for individual investors as well as banks and other financial institutions. This system has been reliable with only a few exceptions. It has been fundamentally effective in providing that level of protection. While we currently live in an environment that suggests corporate prosperity, some of that is most likely artificial. Relaxing the financial reporting and disclosure requirements may result in more abusive practices. Investors will be deprived of significant financial data and timely disclosure of any contingent liabilities for at least several additional months. The SEC has done a commendable job thus far in providing protection for financial institutions and the public. Quarterly Reporting and Disclosures do not place an undue burden on corporate operations. They do however provide investors with significant levels of protection. There is no justifiable reason to change the current Quarterly Reporting and Disclosures practices.

Rob Harris — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rob Harris This is a bad idea. Companies should be reporting at least every quarter. If they don’t, who knows what financial maneuvers will be hidden by them?

Robert John Bradley — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert John Bradley Please retain quarterly reports as they are essential in making sound market decisions. It would be extremely difficult for me to access a stocks possible volatility relying only on twice yearly filings. Thank you.

Robert Kelly Mathematics Teacher, Fairfax County Public Schools — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Kelly The general public should be given the opportunity to see what is happening with a company they've invested in more often than less often. Taking the 10-Q away gives insiders an unfair advantage. Our government is for the people, not a select few. We need to keep the 10-Q.

Robert Lapkass — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-26-18 From: Robert Lapkass As a grass-roots level investor via various funds and employer 401(K)s, I adamantly request that you continue to require quarterly reporting. Individual investors need the visibility into company data and projections in order to make informed decisions, and level the playing field versus company interests. While I can understand a desire to move from "short-termism" in investor guidance towards longer term decision making, that is an entirely much larger discusssion, and the proposed changes skew the investing space too far towards corporate interests alone. Please continue to require quarterly reporting. Respectfully, Robert Lapkass, Roseville CA

Roe Patterson — Jul 5, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Roe Patterson Do not agree with six month filings. While it is defined as voluntarily it will soon become the norm for all corporations and other entities.

Roger Lewis Account manager for a major US medical practice — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Roger Lewis Quarterly earnings are the norm & keeps companies from cheating the consumer & lying to the public. If it ain't broke why would it need fixed. Why change now? There isn't a reasonable answer to go from quarterly to twice a year. Because trump trash wants to EXTEND his & his followers sick grift? Six months creates a lot of space & time for companies to lie, cheat and steal. STOP THIS MADNESS NOW! STOP THE GRIFT. Quarterly earnings need to stay in effect!!

Roy Adams RF Engineer — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Roy Adams Dear Sir or Madam, I am a working engineer within 10 years of retirement. In the 1990's when I started my career, the 401k was the primary tool I had to save for retirement. Access to the stock market in a tax deferred way was pitched as a better and more accessible idea than pensions or an inadequately funded social security program. However, I have lived long enough to see a number of financial crises for companies and entire markets that have threatened that system. These crises were always preceded by a lack of scrutiny and attention, allowing foolish or greedy practices to run amuck for too long. As a result, the 'free market' has not earned my trust sufficiently for me to think relaxing reporting requirements is a good idea. Visibility and accountability are required now more than ever, so I am opposed to the rule change that would allow companies to skate by the quarterly reporting. Thank you for your consideration. Regards, Roy Adams RF Engineer

---

Ruth Morlock Office Manager — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ruth Morlock I make approximately 60k. I contribute a part of my paycheck into my 401(k) every month. I'm getting ready to retire. If the reports do not stay quarterly, it will make it harder for me to retire comfortably and possibly not be able to be at ease knowing the money that I saved may not last. Why are there more laws protecting those with wealth than the lower and middle class of America?

Ryan Resweber — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ryan Resweber This rule should not be enacted. Itwould make it easier for corporations to hide issues for longer durations from the general public. It would also lend further power and trading advantage tot hose with insider knowledge or those with the means to gain public knowledge early. This extended reporting time frame would significantly disadvantage individual investors and as such the gernal public.

Sally Johnson Retired and own stocks — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sally Johnson Retain the quarterly filing. Anything longer only serves the insider people more. With AI doing all the work we should be able to get monthly reports.

Samir Ajgaonkar — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Samir Ajgaonkar Companies must report at least 4 times in a year for transparency.

Sarah D — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sarah D This is not a good rule change. This hurts American investors. We need to keep reporting to the current schedule because that allows investors to have the necessary information to make informed investment choices. Please do not initiate this rule change.

Sarah Rhoads Physician — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sarah Rhoads I am writing to express my strong opposition to decreasing reporting requirements from quarterly to the proposed semiannual change. This is something that has already been done and resulted in significant harm to the people the SEC is charged with protecting. There is no benefit to this rule that would not be tremendously outweighed by the potential harm and profiteering of a select few with inside knowledge, and should be summarily rejected.

Shanea Davis Retired — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shanea Davis The SEC should be protecting investors not providing an opportunity for them to experience loss. Reporting should be required and never voluntary. The system as it currently operates is working, don't break it.

Shannon Ledbetter — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shannon Ledbetter My name is Shannon Ledbetter- I am an inside account manager for a major technology company. Please do not allow this to happen - transparency is all that is left to help this normal everyday working person understand where my money is how much it wins or loses and informs me how much of my earnings contributed are actually serving me not just billionaire interests. I feel like everything that made businesses be honest is the truth every 90 days - I now am scared I'll wake up one day and look at my savings my portfolio and it will bo longer have any sense of truth then six months later I find out it is too late to move my saving to a more functional fund. This is so wrong in so many ways and not meant to help normal everyday working one except those who simply don't need the help. Quarterly reports are not difficult or problematic- they are more like checks and balances that have become a game of monopoly for companies that only see a corrupt bottom line. Please, please don't allow this to happen- it is being used to open a door that will never close.

Sharon Lester Stockholder — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sharon Lester As an investor, quarterly reports are important to me and my family. My husband and I make decisions on where our investment capital will go by checking quarterly reports. Changing the current system to a semiannual reporting one would be disastrous. Less accountability, higher likelihood of fraudulent outcomes in accounting, much less transparency, and an investor base kept in the dark for half the year (which would discourage investments because of lack of trust) are all reasons why semiannual reporting is not moving forward. Reporting needs to remain quarterly so that investors can stay informed. Quarterly reporting needs to remain mandatory so that accountability is kept at the forefront. Making reporting semiannual will only encourage inside trading and more fraud. Whether it's optional won't matter because companies and corporations will opt to save money by only reporting twice a year instead of four times per year. Even if that amounts to savings for these organizations and subsequent higher profits, those reasons are still not enough to change the system. The fact that one of my higher investments may be failing and I'd not know that for six months is incomprehensible. It is unacceptable. Reporting by these companies and corporations needs to remain quarterly.

Sherry — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sherry I don't believe that the timing for reporting should be changed to 6 months. Quarterly allows for adjustments and review. My name is Sherry, I am a Realtor, not a savvy investor, so this matters to me to be able to manage my funds.

Sherry Garbacik Consumer wanting Transparency — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sherry Garbacik Less transparency is not the way to foster consumer trust. Do not get rid of quarterly reporting.

SOREN HARVEY — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: SOREN HARVEY I am 30 years old from New Mexico with 7 years in the film industry. I have a Roth IRA and do not support allowing publicly traded companies to report semiannually. The market as it is moves astronomically faster than ever before. If anything this would create greater opportunity for market volatility and massive binary events in the market.

Stephanie Argamaso — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephanie Argamaso Please keep quarterly reporting. With advances in technology, it is much easier for companies to generate quarterly reports at minimal cost to them, and individuals then are better informed for their decision-making on investments. Please keep this transparency so we have the informed freedom to make choices. Please don't backslide. You have the power to do what is right for all Americans. Thank you.

Stephanie mote — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephanie mote Keep it quartly. Doesn't change profits or bonuses. Since my 401k is tied to stock market and congress has screwed up Social Security, someone has to do more for Amercians than corporations. If the SEC didn't learn from Enron, then we American should be having a problem with the power the SEC has

---

Stephen Cavalear — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Cavalear The entire S&P 500 files a 10-Q every quarter, and the S&P 500 is at an all-time high. If quarterly reporting is crushing American capitalism, American capitalism is hiding it well. Reg FD moved toward a more level playing field. This proposal moves away from it. Reducing reporting requirements makes companies harder to monitor for ordinary investors, not easier to own.

Steve Bernstein — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve Bernstein How outrageous z! Keep us and quality of our investments in the dark while the CEO's profit. Another example of this country advantaging the rich at the expense of the common investor. A recipe for disaster!

Steve J — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve J As an investor, transparency and accountability are important for maintaining trust and confidence in company leadership. Quarterly reporting is not onerous and should remain in place as is. Thank you.

Steve Trimble none, private investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve Trimble This is a stupid idea that cuts the public out of up-to-date information. Who will benefit from this proposed change? Certainly not the general public.

Steven B Adensam — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven B Adensam I oppose the proposed rule allowing companies to replace quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting. As an individual investor saving for retirement through mutual funds and a 401(k), I rely on timely, standardized financial disclosures to promote transparency and accountability. Quarterly reporting helps investors, analysts, and regulators identify emerging financial problems sooner and reduces reliance on speculation. While I understand the desire to reduce regulatory burdens, I believe the benefits of regular, consistent reporting outweigh those costs. I urge the Commission to retain the existing quarterly reporting requirements.

Steven B Southwick None — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven B Southwick As an individual I want the SEC to retain quarterly reporting for reasons of historic market performance and to maintain visibility of corporate decision making. I think this is crucial to small investors. I acknowledge short term company actions can be counter-productive long term, but the proposed rule change doesn't adequately address that problem.

Steven Birge Individual investor — Jul 5, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven Birge AGAINST Changing the required reporting frequency.

Steven Dicks — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven Dicks I strongly believe that the quarterly reporting requirement should be maintained. I don't have a lot of faith that all businesses will keep investors properly informed unless they are required to do so.

Steven Gordon Attorney Investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven Gordon An investor needs information as immediately as the insiders to make sound investment decisions. This is important be it good or be it bad information. Steve Gordon attorney.

Susan Barsnica — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Barsnica I am strongly opposed to the Commission's proposal to reduce public company financial reporting from a quarterly to a semi-annual schedule. While minimizing administrative burdens for issuers is a notable consideration, reducing reporting frequency severely harms market integrity, investor protection, and market efficiency. I oppose this change based on the following critical concerns: * Increased Information Asymmetry: Shifting to a six-month reporting cycle creates massive informational blind spots. Institutional investors with direct corporate access will maintain an unfair advantage over retail investors, who rely heavily on timely, mandated public disclosures to make informed decisions. * Heightened Market Volatility: Quarterly reporting provides the market with continuous, incremental data points to smoothly price assets. Infrequent semi-annual updates will lead to massive, unpredictable price swings when six months of accumulated corporate developments are suddenly released at once. * Delayed Accountability and Risk Detection: A six-month window allows operational failures, shifts in financial health, or governance issues to compound unnoticed. Fraud and mismanagement will take significantly longer to detect, increasing the ultimate cost of corporate failures to the investing public. * Diminished Capital Market Transparency: The U.S. capital markets are considered the gold standard globally precisely because of their rigorous transparency. Degrading the frequency of reporting aligns the U.S. with less stringent regulatory regimes, potentially damaging investor confidence and increasing the cost of capital for domestic issuers. Quarterly reporting (Form 10-Q) is a foundational pillar of the modern U.S. financial ecosystem. The proposed cost savings for corporations do not justify the substantial increase in risk and decrease in transparency for everyday investors. I urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the current quarterly reporting framework.

Susan Robinson Retired Non-profit organization director — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Robinson I am opposed to the rule change proposed in S7-2026-15. As a retired person, I write as an individual citizen relying on federal protection of my money and the economy in general. The current trend towards deregulation is not working for the American people and I am appalled by the disproportionate growth in income of CEOs and a small elite of the total population, leaving the rest of us with dwindling reserves. This rule change is a backward step! Quarterly reporting has resulted in confidence in U.S. markets across the entire world. They are widely viewed as transparent, efficient, and reliable. I depend on social security and savings that are invested on my behalf. I contend that the change from semi-annual reporting to quarterly has worked well for many years. There is evidence that it has reduced opportunities for insider trading. It has discouraged fraud and illegal activities by companies. I will not forget the betrayal investors suffered at the hands of Enron, which led to this quarterly reporting in the first place. I see companies getting larger and "too big to fail" and I know that we need as much transparency and oversight as we can get. Right now, the SEC should be concerned with restoring confidence in government; not removing protections that have served us well in recent years. The objection that quarterly reporting interferes with long-term planning is not OUR problem. That is the problem of the company leadership. Accounting for progress towards overall goals could be helpful inside the companies if data is accurate. Please retain the requirement of quarterly reporting.

Susan Tanner Master of Education — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Tanner Please leave the current quarterly reporting requirements intact. Reporting is for an accounting to the public about the health of public companies. Quarterly reports are vital to the very essence of sound investment practices. With the ease and speed of fluctuations that happen in today's world, extending reporting timeframes is a disastrous concept that would conceal valuable information from the public, whether intended or not.

Susan Winegardner — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Winegardner Regarding S7-2026-15. Keep quarterly reporting, vote against bi-annual reporting. Business cycles are much shorter than in the past, and shareholders and investors need information more often. Please vote against the proposal, it needs to remain quarterly.

T. Martin Na — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: T. Martin Please keep the regulations concerning the signing of financial records and submissions by CEOs in place to protect consumers investors and the banks that serve them

---

Tenaya Cleveland — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tenaya Cleveland S7-2026-15 is bad for America (and the world). We need more transparency from big business, not less. Stop protecting big corporations and start protecting the environment more!!

Theresa M Phillips — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Theresa M Phillips Quarterly reporting is important for individual investors to make decisions on choosing and reviewing individual stocks. We need timely information we can rely on. Don't take this away from us.

Theresa Taylor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Theresa Taylor Remain quarterly. Knowledge is key.

Thomas Galicia — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Galicia As an investor (and accountant who has prepared 10-Q reports in the past) this would enable organizations to take advantage of the extended reporting period to commit fraud and/or hide financial instability.

Thomas Kraus — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Kraus Important to maintain quarterly reporting to ensure transparency and accountability - to provide the necessary information to investors and the public at-large.

Thomas Michael Pocon Attorney, private — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Michael Pocon Quarterly reporting is essential to value the market price of publicly owned and traded stock. Without quarterly reporting , speculation, insider profiteering, and ultimately increased risk to both the stock and bond markets. Other, international stocks become more secure and this will reduce the value of the DOLIAR. The cost of quarterly reports is returned by reduced overall costs to the market, better valuation of the economy and facilitation of international trade. Thomas Michael Poxon Esq. PS my email is down so please forward to SEC

Thomas Woodson — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Woodson I'm not completely sure I understand the complexities of the reporting process or for that matter the need to change it. History, on the other hand has clearly illustrated the potential downside to eliminating quarterly reporting. There are certainly all types of people who are willing to benefit at the cost to investors and not to themselves or their companies! Let's try to regulate this in a way that affords investors a reasonable opportunity to benefit!

Tobias Bornemann Professor of Business Administration, Paderborn University, Germany — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tobias Bornemann Comments on File No. S7-2026-15 “Semiannual Reporting” (Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368) Submitted by: Tobias Bornemann, Professor, Paderborn University, Germany Submission date: July 3, 2026 Introduction: The purpose of my communication is to formally comment on SEC Release No. 33-11414 (File No. S7-2026-15) “Semiannual Reporting” (hereinafter “the Release”). The proposed rule would permit companies to file semiannual reports on new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q to satisfy their interim reporting obligations under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, thereby converting quarterly reporting from a mandatory into an optional (voluntary) disclosure regime. My primary comment: I do not advocate for or against the proposed amendments. I write as a co-author of a study cited in the Release—Tobias Bornemann et al., The Consequences of Abandoning the Quarterly Reporting

Mandate in the Prime Market Segment, 34 Eur. Acct. Rev. 89 (2025), co-authored with Anna-Lena Moosmann and Zoltán Novotny-Farkas and cited in footnote 249 on page 101 of the Release (hereinafter "the Bornemann et al. 2025 Study," or "the Study")—to draw the Commission's attention to findings of the Study beyond those reflected in that citation, in particular its capital market (stock liquidity) results, which I believe are directly relevant to the Release's economic analysis in Section V and to several of its requests for comment. The views expressed in this letter are my own. Two findings appear particularly relevant: (i) when quarterly reporting became voluntary, only a small minority of firms discontinued it; and (ii) the firms that discontinued quarterly reporting, or substantially reduced its content, experienced an economically significant deterioration in stock liquidity. Basis for my comment: The Study examines one of the few observable precedents for the proposed change: the abolition of the quarterly reporting mandate in the prime market segment of the Vienna Stock Exchange (VSE). The VSE deregulated interim reporting in two steps. In November 2015, it retained the quarterly reporting mandate but abandoned the requirement to comply with IAS 34 Interim Financial Reporting, allowing firms to omit the notes to the quarterly financial statements. In February 2019, it abolished the quarterly reporting mandate entirely, leaving both the frequency and the content of interim reporting to firms' discretion—a regime comparable in structure to the optional regime the Commission now proposes. The Study combines hand-collected interim reporting choices of all 35 prime market firms over 2016–2021 (208 firm-years), semi-structured interviews with 20 firm insiders (primarily senior investor relations and accounting executives), and capital market data. Few firms abandoned quarterly reporting when given the choice. Following the complete abolition of the mandate in February 2019, only six of 35 prime market firms (17 percent) terminated quarterly reporting entirely; in the Release's terminology (pages 103–104), these firms became "semiannual reporters." Ten firms maintained the full scope of quarterly reporting ("quarterly reporters"), and about half of the firms continued quarterly reporting with reduced content, predominantly by omitting the notes—conduct closest to the Release's "hybrid reporters." The interviewed executives almost uniformly characterized the direct marginal costs of quarterly reporting as low, because integrated internal reporting systems already produce quarterly (or monthly) financial information; proprietary costs were not raised as a concern. Firms instead reported tailoring interim reporting to the information needs of institutional investors and financial analysts, whom they regard as the primary users of quarterly reports; no interviewee considered retail investors primary users. The firms that opted out exhibited higher inside ownership, more concentrated outside ownership, lower analyst following, and historically wider bid-ask spreads—that is, firms whose key capital providers can rely on private information channels. Firms with more foreign ownership and higher analyst coverage were significantly less likely to opt out. Firms that discontinued or substantially reduced quarterly reporting experienced lower stock liquidity. Using generalized difference-in-differences estimations with firm- and year-fixed effects (and controls for the endogeneity of the reporting choice), the Study finds that the termination of quarterly reporting is associated with a 10.2 percent increase in bid-ask spreads and a 2.7 percentage point increase in the fraction of zero-return trading days relative to firms that continued quarterly reporting. Notably, firms that continued quarterly reporting but substantially reduced its content experienced comparable liquidity declines (approximately a 13.4 percent increase in bid-ask spreads). Consistent with investors anticipating these costs, the Study documents statistically and economically significant negative abnormal returns for prime market firms around the VSE's announcement of the abolition of the quarterly reporting mandate on February 25, 2019. Analyst forecast accuracy and dispersion, by contrast, were unaffected—consistent with firms continuing to serve analysts' and large investors' information needs through tailored disclosures and established communication channels, while the liquidity costs plausibly fall on less-informed market participants. Relation to the Release's characterization of the evidence. First, footnote 249 accurately describes the Study's reporting-choice findings, but the Study's liquidity results summarized above bear on the Release's discussion of information asymmetry, price efficiency, and liquidity costs of semiannual reporting (Sections V.C and V.E). Second, footnote 257 (page 103) cites a literature review for the conclusion that there is "no clear evidence for strong capital market-based benefits of higher reporting frequency, such as increases in liquidity." The Study, which post-dates the period covered by that review, provides direct evidence from an actual removal of a quarterly reporting mandate that firms electing lower frequency (or substantially reduced content) experienced economically significant liquidity declines. Third, the Release suggests (page 104) that hybrid reporters "may reduce some regulatory compliance costs while preserving aspects of the quarterly information environment through voluntary disclosures." The Study's evidence qualifies this expectation: in the Austrian setting, voluntary quarterly disclosure with substantially reduced content did not preserve liquidity, consistent with the confirmation role of mandatory reports discussed in footnote 305 of the Release. At the same time, the omission of the notes and of IAS 34 compliance alone—while the quarterly frequency of full financial statements was retained—was associated with neither a deterioration in liquidity nor a discernible market reaction, suggesting that investors value the quarterly frequency of core financial statement information rather than the full content of interim reports. Relevance to specific requests for comment: Question 49 (costs to investors): In the Austrian deregulation, the costs took the form of higher information asymmetry—bid-ask spreads of opting-out firms increased by approximately 10 to 13 percent—and these costs were not mitigated for less-informed investors by firms' voluntary disclosures or private communication channels, although analysts' forecast properties were unaffected. Question 50 (compliance cost savings): Only two of 20 interviewed executives—both of smaller firms—considered the costs of preparing and disseminating quarterly reports significant, naming the preparation of the notes as the main cost factor; all others viewed marginal costs as negligible given integrated internal reporting systems. This suggests aggregate compliance savings may be modest and concentrated among smaller issuers. Question 52 (percentage of companies switching): In the Austrian prime market, 17 percent of firms (six of 35) switched to semiannual frequency within three years of the mandate's removal. The propensity to switch was higher for firms with concentrated inside ownership and lower for firms with foreign ownership and analyst coverage. I caution that this percentage reflects a small, concentrated European market. Question 54 (capital market factors limiting a switch, including creditor demand): Consistent with the question's premise, interviewed executives noted that debt investors scrutinize quarterly reports, and more leveraged firms were less likely to abandon full quarterly reporting. Expected losses of analyst coverage and the expectations of foreign institutional investors were the most frequently cited factors against switching. Question 56 (analyst coverage): Analyst following strongly predicted the decision to retain quarterly reporting (a one standard deviation increase in analyst following reduced the likelihood of termination by 18 to 20 percent), consistent with firms perceiving coverage losses as a significant implicit cost of less frequent reporting. Question 58 (valuation and cost of capital): The statistically significant negative abnormal returns around the VSE's announcement of the mandate's abolition indicate that investors ex ante priced the removal of the mandate as costly; the documented liquidity declines identify higher information asymmetry as a plausible channel through which the cost of equity could increase for semiannual filers. Generalizability: I emphasize that the Study's evidence stems from a small, concentrated European capital market of 35 prime market firms, where ownership is more concentrated than in the United States, retail participation and market depth differ, and the enforcement and litigation environment is distinct—limitations the Release itself notes for international evidence (pages 100–101). The magnitudes documented in the Study therefore may not extrapolate directly to U.S. markets. Nonetheless, actual removals of a quarterly reporting mandate are rare, and the qualitative pattern the Study documents—limited opt-out concentrated among firms with private information channels, coupled with liquidity costs for opting-out firms—is consistent with related evidence from the United Kingdom (Nallareddy et al., 2021) and from Europe more broadly (Hitz & Moritz, 2019). Conclusion: Evidence from an actual abolition of a quarterly reporting mandate indicates that most firms continue quarterly reporting voluntarily, that the direct cost savings of an optional regime may accrue to relatively few issuers, and that issuers electing a lower reporting frequency or substantially reduced content experienced economically significant liquidity declines—with the announcement of the deregulation itself met by negative abnormal returns. I respectfully submit these findings as an input into the Commission's assessment of the proposed optional semiannual reporting regime. I do not opine on any other aspect of the proposed rule. Sincerely, Tobias Bornemann, Professor of Business Administration, Paderborn University, Germany References: Bornemann, T., Moosmann, A.-L., & Novotny-Farkas, Z. (2025). The consequences of abandoning the quarterly reporting mandate in the prime market segment. European Accounting Review, 34(1), 89–122. https : / / doi . org / 10 . 1080 / 09638180 . 2023 . 2239298 Hitz, J.-M., & Moritz, F. (2019). Turning back the clock on disclosure regulation? – Evidence from the termination of the quarterly reporting mandate in Europe. SSRN Working Paper (September 11, 2019). Kajüter, P., Lessenich, A., Nienhaus, M., & van Gemmern, F. (2022). Consequences of interim reporting: A literature review and future research directions. European Accounting Review, 31(1), 209–239. https : / / doi . org / 10 . 1080 / 09638180 . 2021 . 1872398 Nallareddy, S., Pozen, R., & Rajgopal, S. (2021). Consequences of more frequent reporting: The UK experience. Journal of Law, Finance, and Accounting, 6(1), 51–88. Supplemental information: For transparency and to aid in assessing the generalizability of the findings, I outline the sample underlying the Study. The sample begins with the 38 firms listed in the VSE prime market segment as of December 31, 2018. Three firms admitted to the segment during 2019 and one firm delisted in 2019 are excluded, as are observations with missing financial or market data, yielding 35 firms and 208 firm-year observations over 2016–2021. Firms' interim reporting choices were hand-collected from their quarterly reports; financial and market data were obtained from Thomson Reuters Datastream and S&P Capital IQ. The liquidity analyses employ generalized difference-in-differences estimations with firm- and year-fixed effects, control for the endogeneity of the reporting choice (Heckman-type selection correction), and are robust to propensity score matching. The 20 interviews were conducted between June and August 2022; participating firms are representative of the prime market population in terms of firm characteristics and reporting behavior around the deregulation events.

Tom Lundberg — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tom Lundberg I believe that we should continue to leave quarterly reporting in place. History continues to prove that more, rather than less accountability and oversight is prudent and necessary. The quarterly reporting requirement was put in place due to illegal activities; relaxing this requirement will allow corporations to be less accountable moving forward.

Tracy Armstrong — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tracy Armstrong I'm advocating for SEC transparency & timely reporting. Don't let them hide their actions

---

Tracy L. Oram Independant investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tracy L. Oram This should be done on a strict (closely monitored) 2-3 year trial period which conducts evaluations and reviews.

Vera Blouir — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vera Blouir I strongly support keeping quarterly reporting. Requiring public companies to provide regular, CEO-certified financial reports promotes transparency, accountability, and investor confidence. Reducing reporting to twice a year would mean fewer opportunities for investors to evaluate a company's financial health and could delay the discovery of serious problems. Timely disclosure helps keep markets fair and protects everyday investors.

Vicki Hamilton Hall — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vicki Hamilton Hall I am writing to formally voice my strong opposition to the Securities and Exchange Commission’s ("SEC" or "Commission") proposed rule under File No. S7-2026-15. As an individual retail investor, I am deeply concerned that the core provision of this proposal—allowing public companies to replace quarterly Form 10-Q filings with a semiannual Form 10-S—will severely diminish market transparency, strip individual investors of critical oversight, and widen the gap between everyday market participants and large institutional insiders . While proponents argue that eliminating the 10-Q will reduce compliance burdens and combat corporate "short-termism," the actual consequence of this policy will be a dangerous regression in investor protection. Quarterly disclosures are not a luxury; they are the bedrock of equal access to information in the modern public markets. Specifically, replacing quarterly reporting with a semiannual framework threatens individual investors in the following ways:Severe Loss of Transparency and Delayed Data: A six-month reporting gap is a lifetime in today's fast-moving markets. Forcing individual investors to wait half a year to see structural changes, balance sheet updates, and cash flow strains strips us of our ability to make timely, informed asset allocation decisions. It reduces the granularity needed to identify long-term trends versus immediate operational failures . Exacerbation of Information Asymmetry: While individual investors rely heavily on public, regulated periodic filings to level the playing field, institutional investors and Wall Street analysts possess alternative channels to gather corporate insights. Transitioning to a semiannual model will isolate retail investors, leaving us in the dark while sophisticated market participants leverage private access to monitor corporate performance. Heightened Risks of Insider Trading and Mispricing: Extending the reporting window from three months to six months significantly lengthens the period during which corporate insiders possess material, non-public operational data. This creates a fertile environment for information leaks and potential insider trading, while simultaneously increasing stock price volatility when massive tranches of data are finally dumped on the public every six months. Weakened Real-Time Accountability: Quarterly filings act as a critical continuous check on management. Stripping away two full periods of formal, reviewed reporting per year fundamentally removes investor oversight, allowing struggling management teams to hide poor performance, shifting strategic pivots, or capital decay for months on end before being forced to answer to shareholders . The SEC's historical mandate is to protect investors and maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets. This proposal explicitly cuts against that mandate by prioritizing marginal corporate savings at the direct expense of retail investor safety.I strongly urge the Commission to reject File No. S7-2026-15 and preserve the mandatory quarterly reporting framework that has made U.S. capital markets the most transparent and trusted in the world . Thank you for your time and consideration of the retail investor perspective.

Victoria Karabinus — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Victoria Karabinus Please do not allow public companies to switch from quarterly to semiannual reporting. As an individual investor I rely on quarterly reports to make good investment decisions. Research indicates that the proposed change would not affect corporate investment behavior. The companies most likely to opt out require the most oversight. Please keep the playing field level for all investors. The S & P is at an all time high, showing quarterly reports have not been a burden to public companies. Thank you!

Vincent Granieri CEO/Managing Member, Predictive Resources, LLC — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vincent Granieri As an individual investor for almost 50 years, the quarterly drumbeat of required financial information is invaluable in assessing my investements and achieiving investment success. Reducing this corporate exercise to twice a year puts me and others like me at a severe disadvantage relative to large institutional investors as they have professional relationships that would allow for a free flow of information to them to my detriment. S7-2026-15 reminds me of the old saying, if it ain't broke, don't fix it. In this case, it ain't broke but you would be breaking it.

Virgil Lasaga — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Virgil Lasaga When the Wheat Report made the recommendation in 1969, quarterly reports were labor intensive since computers and automation were the stuff of imagination and a hope for future generations. Commissioner Wheat and other authors felt that the expense of extra effort and labor was warranted in order to provide the investing public transparency in understanding the financials of those companies they chose to invest in. Nowadays computers and automation are a reality and have reduced the cost of compliance significantly. Additionally, we are at the cusp of the artificial intelligence revolution which will likely reduce the reporting burden even further. It makes no sense to reduce the transparency for the public by 50 per cent when costs for compliance will continue to go down. Further, it would undermine confidence in the American markets which have been held as a model of transparency and integrity globally. I strongly recommend that the proposed rule be withdrawn and that the quarterly schedule be maintained to bolster confidence in the American markets and for the benefit of keeping the American public well informed.

WAYNE S GARRAWAY MOTLEY FOOL COMMUNITY — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: WAYNE S GARRAWAY I am 74 years old and have been investing in stocks since 1972. I have many various stock based retirement and non-retirement accounts - all holding numerous individual stocks. My five family members do the same. We personally read many of the quarterly reports, in addition to reading quarterly analyses by various investment newsletters. To change to semi-annual reporting would eliminate 50% of those updates. This places our life long savings in an unfavorable position. I respectfully request that this change be cancelled.

William Bryan Pastor Abingdon Baptist Church — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Bryan As an investor for over five decades and a person nearing retirement, I oppose this rule change. I depend on my investments for my upcoming retirement and cannot afford to have set-backs or loss of retirement due to corporate malfeasance and insider trading (e.g., Enron). Keep reporting quarterly. It works. In fact it needs to be more frequent in these electronic times.

William Phillips — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Phillips I am opposed to the loss of transparency that would result from semi-annual reporting. Please do not pass this rule!

William Riechers — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Riechers I am writing in opposition to the proposed rule change. In my job as an investment advisor for a large bank's wealth management arm, the current quarterly reporting schedule provides us and our clients with an important barometer and rhythm. While I am primarily an asset allocator rather than a stock-picker, quarterly earnings data in aggregate allows my colleagues and me to talk to clients about expectations for market performance in direct relation to fundamentals and helps guide our firm's tactical asset allocation recommendations. Eliminating mandatory quarterly reporting will cloud data points we rely on for decision-making and make an important part of our client conversations harder to deliver. Regular data and established patterns help investment advisors keep their clients invested for the long-run; changing things up will invite uncertainty.

William spiniolas — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William spiniolas Protect joe public . Don’t make the rich richer off Joe public. We use this for our future and retirement.

Xochitl Ross Investor — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Xochitl Ross I am over 70 years old. I count on my investments to survive. I would prefer more information rather than less information regarding the companies I invest in. Please retain the quarterly disclosure requirements.

Yvonne and Greg Pratt Counseling and Engineer, retired — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Yvonne and Greg Pratt Please keep the financial reporting quarterly! I am retired and count on my investments for income. We make investment decisions based on financial results reporting, and waiting 1/2 year for those reports could be disastrous for everyday investors. Transparency keeps things more fair for us. A 6 month blackout allows more fraud and could cause stock prices to be more volatile. We want to stay fully and accurately informed. Yvonne Pratt, High School Counseling, retired Greg Pratt, Electronics Engineer, retired

---

Zhiping Liu Liu, Chen & Hoffman LLP — Jul 5, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Zhiping Liu Dear Commissioners, I support the Commission's proposal to permit optional semiannual reporting because quarterly reporting can encourage excessive short-termism and imposes significant compliance costs. However, I do not believe the election should be available to every reporting company. Instead, the Commission should establish objective eligibility standards. Examples include: • at least five years as an SEC reporting company; • consistent profitability and/or positive operating cash flow over the last three years; • no material weaknesses in internal controls; • no SEC enforcement actions over the last five years; • minimum public float or market capitalization (over $1 billion) requirements; and The Commission shall consider excluding development-stage, pre-revenue, or other highly speculative issuers. Companies that fail to continue meeting these standards should automatically revert to quarterly reporting. In addition, a company could adopt semiannual reporting only if its board recommends it and a majority of disinterested shareholders approve it. That would ensure the reduced reporting frequency reflects investor preferences rather than management's professed desire to lower reporting costs. Such a balanced approach would preserve transparency where investors need it most while reducing unnecessary compliance costs for mature, stable businesses. It would also lessen short-term market pressures without materially impairing investor protection. Thank you for considering these comments.

MaryEllen Schneider — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: MaryEllen Schneider Keep quarterly reporting. This change would negatively impact investors. Thank you.

A Coleman — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A Coleman Transparency is key to ensuring that the public is informed and all shareholders have more equal access to corporate performance. Please keep quarterly reporting.

Akwai Hinman — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Akwai Hinman File No. S7-2026-15 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: As a retail investor nearing retirement, I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposal to allow public companies to switch to semiannual reporting. My retirement security depends on a stable, predictable market. Reducing reporting frequency will severely harm market stability by causing massive stock volatility when earnings are compressed into just two releases a year. Furthermore, transparency from public companies is absolutely non-negotiable. Individual investors like myself need regular, reliable data to safely manage our nest eggs. Allowing big companies to hide their financial performance for six months at a time creates a dangerous information gap. This destroys the equal playing field, giving wealthy institutional insiders an unfair advantage over everyday investors. I strongly urge the SEC to do its job and protect the average American retail investor like myself -- maintain the mandatory quarterly reporting framework. Sincerely, Akwai Hinman US Citizen

---

Alan R Mercer — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan R Mercer I stand against reducing reporting frequency from quarterly filings. The increase in insider trading and hiding of negative financials and sustainability of companies does not benefit smaller investors, especially those now dependent upon 401K, 403B, Roth Plans, and other non-employer traditional retirement plans. Especially those whose plan includes default contributions in the form of employer stock. We don't need another Enron nor a lack of transparency that existed in the 1920s. When more and more people are increasingly dependent upon current information to make investment decisions to ensure their retirement stability as Congress flounders around on stabilizing Social Security, Americans do not need black box financial management that could put their savings at increased risk.

Allysa Martin — Jul 4, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Allysa Martin Transparency is critical at this stage of our country and business dealings. As an investor, it is imperative to have information regularly updated to government entities as well as as a show of good faith by companies. There is an administrative burden of filing quarterly, however, companies are well aware of the requirements and act accordingly. With the continued risk of insider trading and transparency becoming less and less, this is the wrong direction for the government to take.

Amanda Carlson Engineer — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amanda Carlson I am writing in opposition to the SEC proposal that would allow for semi-annual company financial reporting. As someone who is saving for retirement, I like to check my investment accounts quarterly. Checking less often seems too infrequent, but what will I be checking if companies don't report on their performance more than twice per year? How will my ETF keep a good balance if not everyone is reporting on the same cadence? Additionally, I have worked for a publicly traded company that used our peers' Form 10-Q to monitor our performance against our competitors. If this data is only available twice per year, companies may fall behind without realizing. Quarterly reports keep American companies on their toes and reveal slipping quickly, pushing American progress. With the rapid evolution of AI, I expect that routine quarterly reports are becoming less burdensome for companies, and they should be no trouble to maintain going forward. It is hard to imagine the burden of reporting exceeding the value of comparison within peer groups. Lastly, Americans have seen the destruction left behind when companies go bankrupt. Have we already forgotten about Enron? Have we forgotten the pain inflicted on the nation when companies "too big to fail" required bailouts? An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, and CEOs take the threat of jail seriously. Do not give the appearance of reducing scrutiny of company financial statements, and do not let companies hide their struggles for six months. Thank you.

Andrew Dalesandro Engineering professional; investor — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Dalesandro I am opposed to proposed amendment which harms the general public and capital investors and only provides meaningful benefit to those with inside information and corporations with questionable accounting practices. Reducing disclosure will increase share price volatility, limit investors' ability to evaluate and provide feedback to company leadership about their stewardship of invested capital, and promote increased incidence of fraud and impropriety. The general public has an ever increasing amount of their net worth and savings held in brokerage and retirement accounts invested in public markets and weakening investor protections directly harms the general public. Public disclosures provide a valuable feedback mechanism from investors to company leadership to challenge assumptions, ask questions, and vote with their capital if they no longer trust the direction of leadership or the business. This proposal exacerbates the problem of insider trading for whom the existing system is already highly leveraged in their favor by extending public reporting durations. The stated benefit of reducing corporate reporting expenses is marginal; public markets are trading near all-time highs and corporations continuing to report record profits such that a reduction in reporting expenses will be negligible on the income statement.

Andrew Fore — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Fore Unfortunately the need for quarterly reporting and auditing is more important today than it has ever been. This rule change would open the door to corruption and malfeasance.

Andrew Trosien — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Trosien I am NOT in favor of removing the quarterly reporting requirements. As it is, there is far too much opportunity for obfuscation, grift, and other activity that hurt retail investors. The SEC has very limited manpower to monitor, investigate, and prosecute companies that do not follow the rules and ethics as is, so giving them more months to hide from disclosure will not help. I understand the rationale, but the current system will not allow for the removal of quarterly reporting without significant risk of malfeasance.

Andrew Widlak none — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Widlak I am a small, individual investor and have been doing so for about 10 years. I am currently retired, I have an undergraduate engineering degree, an MBA, served in the U. S. Army for 10 years, then worked for a major bank in back office loan processing, then a major electronics manufacturing company, and finally 33 years for a defense / aerospace manufacturing company. I built my retirement funding based on the stock market. Of course, I rely heavily on the quarterly reporting to assess where best to place my money. More recently, with improving algorithms and AI, it is becoming tougher for individual investors to truly assess a company's performance, even with quarterly reports. Going to semi-annual reporting would put people like me at a further dis-advantage. of course, with the increasing usage of AI, we should be able to get daily financials . So, I would be opposed to lengthening the reporting period for company financials.

Ann Creek — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ann Creek Ann Creek, too much can be hidden with longer periods of time. Keep it to at least quarterly reports

---

ANNE M RUSSELL — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: ANNE M RUSSELL KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTS KEEP IT SIMPLE

ANNE M RUSSELL Stockholder — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: ANNE M RUSSELL KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTS

Anonymous — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Individual investors are at a disadvantage. Extending reporting timelines further disadvantages individual investors. Businesses have developed automated systems to provide this reporting. The quarterly reporting forces companies to ensure their data and reporting are current.

Anonymous — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Subject: Comment on File Number S7-2026-15 (Proposed Modifications to Filer Classifications and Semiannual Reporting)Dear Secretary,I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposed rule changes under File Number S7-2026-15. While the Commission frames these updates as a method to reduce regulatory burdens, the proposed framework severely compromises market transparency and investor protection . Specifically, I oppose this proposal for the following reasons:Significant Information Gaps: Transitioning from quarterly Form 10-Q filings to a semiannual Form 10-S model creates a six-month informational vacuum. In today's fast-moving market, six months is too long for investors to remain blind to material changes in a company's financial health, cash flows, and operational risks . Widespread Loss of Sarbanes-Oxley (SOX) Section 404(b) Protections: Raising the Large Accelerated Filer (LAF) threshold from $700 million to $2 billion will reclassify the vast majority of public issuers as Non-Accelerated Filers. This exempts hundreds of mid-cap companies from the mandatory, independent auditor attestation of internal controls over financial reporting (ICFR). Independent audits are the bedrock of market confidence; removing them increases the risk of undetected accounting errors, financial restatements, and corporate fraud . Disadvantaging Retail Investors: Institutional investors have the resources to demand private updates and alternative data streams. Average retail investors rely entirely on public SEC filings. Reducing filing frequency and oversight directly hurts retail investors, tilting the playing field toward insiders and large institutions . Increased Market Volatility: Replacing predictable, quarterly reporting rhythms with extended six-month gaps will lead to massive earnings surprises. This lack of continuous visibility will inevitably drive up market volatility and increase the cost of capital for the very companies the SEC aims to help . The SEC’s core mission is to protect investors and maintain orderly markets. This proposal does the opposite by sacrificing market integrity for minor compliance cost savings. I strongly urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the current quarterly reporting and accelerated filer frameworks . Thank you for considering my feedback.

Anonymous — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Please keep quarterly (10-Q) reporting as mandatory. Quarterly disclosures allows me to gauge the health and trajectory of businesses as a retail investor. Longer gaps between reports will be a disadvantage to retail investors, while giving an edge to insiders.

Anonymous — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous As an individual, retail investor, I am strongly opposed to the proposed rule change to semi-annual reporting. This cuts small investors out of one of the only sources we have to evaluate a company’s financials. Keep it quarterly!

Anonymous — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous The move the semi-annual reporting reduces the information investors have and reduces transparency in the market. Making the move optional doesn't fix the issues because most investors don't have the luxury of opting out of companies that choose to reduce their reporting frequency. With index funds and etfs, changes that impact a handful of companies can impact large numbers of individual investors.

Anonymous — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Just a regular person here; a simple investor. I prefer more information than less, and more frequent regular reporting. I see no need to lessen the amount of information available by condensing it into fewer reporting sessions. I want to be able to make decisions based on as current information as I can get. Make no changes.

Anonymous Blue collar tradesman — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I am a blue collar tradesman who is SICK AND TIRED OF BEING FUCKED BY BILLIONAIRES. Keep quarterly reporting!!

Anonymous Na — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I do not believe the reporting should change from quarterly to annually. Transparency is extremely important for confidence.

Anonymous Public Works Engineer — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Re: File Number S7-2026-15 — Semiannual Reporting Dear Members of the Commission, I am writing to oppose the proposed rule allowing companies to elect semiannual reporting on Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly Form 10-Q filings. My husband and I are both professional engineers with small children. We did not come from money — we built our savings and investment knowledge ourselves, and the majority of our life savings is in the stock market, invested with an eye toward retirement and our children's future. We understand the compliance burden quarterly reporting places on companies, but that burden is a reasonable cost of accessing public capital markets, and companies should staff accordingly. Any time or cost savings from less frequent reporting is unlikely to be passed on to shareholders as added value; it is far more likely to be absorbed internally, including into executive compensation. What this proposal does shift, clearly and directly, is risk onto investors. Even though the rule is opt-in, it will still create a two-tier market: some companies reporting quarterly, others only twice a year. That makes it harder for ordinary investors to track deteriorating fundamentals in real time, widens the information gap between filings, and increases the odds that problems surface as a large, sudden shock rather than a gradual, visible trend. For retail investors managing our own retirement savings without teams of analysts, that added opacity is a material risk we did not choose to take on. If this rule is adopted, we would seriously reconsider continued investment in any company that elects semiannual reporting, and would likely divest from those companies in favor of ones that maintain quarterly transparency. We do not believe we are alone in this. We respectfully ask the Commission to vote no on this proposal and preserve mandatory quarterly reporting. Sincerely, A professional engineer, wife, and mother of two.

Anonymous US Air Force — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I strongly oppose any effort to replace quarterly financial reporting with semiannual reporting for U.S. public companies. Retail investors deserve timely access to financial information and a fair opportunity to make informed decisions—not longer periods of silence between required disclosures. I have served on active duty in the United States Air Force for 26 years and currently serve as a Chief Master Sergeant. I submit this comment solely in my personal capacity as an individual retail investor and do not speak on behalf of the Department of Defense or the United States Air Force. Like millions of Americans, I have spent decades working, saving, and investing for my family's future and eventual retirement. I am a long-term retail investor—not a day trader—and I rely on timely, standardized public disclosures to make informed decisions about where I invest my money. Requiring investors to wait up to six months for standardized financial information would be a significant step backward for market transparency. Large institutional investors have teams of analysts, sophisticated research tools, industry networks, alternative data, and greater access to company leadership. Ordinary investors do not. We rely heavily on public financial disclosures. Reducing the frequency of those disclosures would widen an information gap that already exists between Wall Street and Main Street. I do not accept the argument that quarterly reporting is incompatible with long-term thinking. Companies can manage for the long term while remaining accountable to their shareholders every quarter. If the reporting process is unnecessarily burdensome, simplify it. Do not solve that problem by giving investors less information. Access to America's public capital markets comes with responsibilities. Regular transparency should be one of them. After 26 years of military service, I understand that accountability and transparency are not burdens—they are responsibilities that come with being entrusted with something important. Public companies are entrusted with the capital of millions of Americans saving for retirement, education, and their families' futures. The SEC's mission includes protecting investors and maintaining fair and efficient markets. Reducing the frequency of standardized financial reporting would move in the wrong direction on both fronts. I respectfully urge the SEC to preserve quarterly financial reporting requirements. Retail investors deserve timely information and a level playing field—not six months of silence.

Anonymous CPA — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I am against this ruling as this puts the average every day investor at a significant disadvantage with delay in public knowledge. Only those with insider information will profit and is incredibly unfair.

Anonymous US Citizen — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-26-18 From: Anonymous In today's day and age, with ready access to digital technology, even AI, it is unfathomable that reporting quarterly earnings or disclosures could be considered a burden by anyone. A better proposal would be to automate the system (if it isn't already) and require monthly reports. To claim a report isn't necessary because companies voluntary do something is also naive, incompetent, or intentionally deserving to the American people. Nothing voluntary is guaranteed and the purpose of government is to protect individual humans. Hiding this information only benefits inside traders and rich CEO/company leaders who know something is wrong and want time to devest before hanging their investors and employees out to dry. Either keep it quarterly or make it monthly.

Barbara Irrer — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Irrer I respectfully oppose replacing quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting. As an individual investor, I believe receiving financial information every quarter helps me stay informed about the companies in which I invest. Less frequent reporting would reduce transparency and leave investors with fewer opportunities to evaluate company performance and changing business conditions. Financial markets move quickly. Six months is a long period without formal financial reporting, especially during times of economic uncertainty. Less frequent reporting could increase speculation, rumors, and market volatility because investors would have fewer reliable updates from companies. Quarterly reporting also promotes accountability by encouraging management to communicate regularly with shareholders. While companies may incur reporting costs, those costs should be balanced against the benefits of maintaining investor confidence and market transparency. If the Commission believes some reporting requirements are unnecessarily burdensome, it may be more appropriate to simplify quarterly reports rather than eliminate them altogether. Regular, reliable financial reporting remains one of the strengths of U.S. capital markets, and I encourage the Commission to preserve quarterly reporting. Thank you for considering my comments.

Benjamin Luera — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Benjamin Luera This is so wrong. No one in business has the write to keep critical information of this nature from investors. Business that do are most likely a week away from closing their doors and those people in the know will be notified ahead of time to allow them to pull out all their investment. This is wrong and was not a good idea at all.

Bill Oliver Bill Oliver — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Oliver Why are they doing this?

Bob Rion — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bob Rion I am a retail investor and I oppose the proposal allowing companies to replace quarterly 10-Q reporting with semiannual reporting. Quarterly disclosures are the only standardized information I receive to evaluate my holdings and manage retirement risk. A six-month gap would leave retail investors blind to deteriorating financials, rising debt, or operational failures until problems are already severe. Longer reporting gaps also increase fraud risk. Enron’s collapse demonstrated how hidden liabilities and off-balance-sheet structures can grow for months without detection when disclosure is weak or delayed. When transparency breaks down, insiders act on information the public never sees, and retail investors pay the price. The “optional” nature of the proposal does not protect investors. Once large issuers switch to semiannual reporting, others will follow, and transparency will decline across the market. Any issuer cost savings are small compared to the harm caused by reducing the only guaranteed information retail investors receive. I urge the SEC to maintain quarterly reporting requirements. Bob Rion Omaha, Nebraska Retail Investor

---

Bob, small money trader — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bob, small money trader This is a nonsensical rule, many small time traders will just leave the market

---

Brian Dettmer — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Dettmer Full transparency on a quarterly basis assists me and resources I use as an individual investor. Lengthening the reporting period introduces increased uncertainty. I oppose this proposal.

Brian O'Connell none — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian O'Connell To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I am a small investor. I do my homework and try to keep up to date about the companies in which I own stock. But I need timely, current, public information to do so. Like other small investors, I do not have a paid portfolio manager or financial advisor. Better-connected people, with access to information that we "little guys" can't even dream of having, are positioned to profit when investing in public companies. By providing information on a quarterly basis, public companies are better held to account. It keeps the playing field somewhat level. Transparency makes it harder to hide information from those who will be hurt if something adverse is happening to a company financially. It makes treading on insider information more difficult. Sadly, fraud is a real thing and the "little guy" is hurt more often and worse by fraud. I read that this rule change might save a company $198,00/annually. Be serious. The benefits of quarterly reporting far outweigh the small cost. -Brian O'Connell

---

Bryan Smith — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bryan Smith This is a bad idea. You are tying to rig the system to benefit insiders and leave everyone else in the dark. What benefit does this serve other than to provide an advantage to the wealthy class?

C E McAllister Retired CFO, McAllister Machining, Retired VRC, State of OR. DHS — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C E McAllister Open the door for fraud again? NO THANK YOU! If I could manage it, so can our current company owners and CFOs! C.E. McAllister, retired, former machine shop owner (10 yr), retired realtor (10 yr), and 30+ yr retired state rehab counselor.

Carol Pierce Carol Pierce — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carol Pierce It's should be illegal if it's not!!!

Carol Reiss None — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carol Reiss Do not stop quarterly reporting! Keep it like it is

---

Carolyn Burns — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carolyn Burns To the Securities and Exchange Commission: In a world where finance is moving so fast, where accurate information must form the basis for realistic and RESPONSIBLE decision making, truthful and accurate information must be available quarterly. Especially with cryptocurrency- the volatility of the trading market means the quarterly trends must be known. We don't have to change information gathering and keep businesses in the dark to learn to understand how to respond. Changing to bi-annual reporting is a slap in the face to most business and investors. It only serves a narrow, select group. It opens the door to fraud, money laundering and abuses that do not protect investors. There is enough enough white collar crime in the world- especially at this time. Do not open the door wider for it.

Carolyn Lamb — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carolyn Lamb Potential & current investors rely on quarterly statements to make decisions regarding what companies in which to trust their retirement and/or excess funds. SEC, through quarterly and other required filings, provide a critical source of information available upon which to base decisions. In today's fast paced world, quarterly reporting can be too late. Extending this period only exacerbates this issue. Electronic record and accounting systems eliminated much of the tediousness related to quarterly and other required filings. As the government entity providing oversight to this entire process, I implore to you to retain these important requirements. Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

Chad Jones — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chad Jones I respectfully oppose the Commission’s proposed amendments that would permit public companies to elect semiannual reporting on new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q. In my view, the proposal would reduce transparency in U.S. public markets. Quarterly reporting is not merely an administrative burden. It is a core investor protection mechanism that provides timely, standardized, comparable information about public companies. Moving from required quarterly reporting to optional semiannual reporting would reduce the frequency, timeliness, granularity, and comparability of public disclosure. The proposal is framed as flexibility for issuers. But from the investor’s perspective, it would reduce the minimum disclosure standard that has long supported confidence in U.S. capital markets. Public investors rely on quarterly Form 10-Q reports to evaluate operating performance, liquidity, risks, legal proceedings, internal controls, financial trends, and management’s explanation of results. Removing required Q1 and Q3 reports would make it harder for investors to identify emerging problems, compare companies, assess seasonality, and make informed investment and voting decisions. I am particularly concerned that this proposal would disadvantage ordinary investors. Large institutional investors, analysts, creditors, and other sophisticated market participants may have access to alternative data, direct management communications, or private reporting arrangements. Retail investors generally do not. A reduction in mandatory public disclosure would risk creating a two-tier information environment in which better-resourced market participants can fill information gaps while ordinary investors are left waiting months for standardized public information. Voluntary quarterly earnings releases are not an adequate substitute for Form 10-Q. Voluntary disclosures vary in timing, scope, format, accounting presentation, legal accountability, and comparability. Many earnings releases focus on selected metrics and management-preferred narratives. They do not provide the same standardized, reviewed, comprehensive, and legally accountable disclosure framework as Form 10-Q. A system that relies more heavily on voluntary disclosures would be less reliable and less comparable for investors. The proposal may also create an adverse-selection problem. Companies with strong performance, stable results, and high investor confidence may continue to report quarterly. Companies facing volatility, deteriorating trends, internal-control concerns, seasonality, or other challenges may be more likely to elect semiannual reporting. Investors are likely to interpret the election itself as a signal. That could result in valuation discounts, lower liquidity, wider bid-ask spreads, reduced analyst coverage, and a higher cost of capital for semiannual filers. I do not believe it is accurate to assume that reduced reporting will automatically increase shareholder value. In many cases, the opposite may occur. Less frequent standardized disclosure increases information risk, and information risk is priced by markets. Investors may demand a higher return to compensate for reduced transparency. That means the rule could reduce stock values and impair shareholder wealth, particularly for companies that elect semiannual reporting and for investors who depend on timely public information. The proposal's cost-savings rationale is not sufficient to justify this reduction in transparency. Compliance costs are real, especially for smaller issuers, but the potential savings to issuers must be weighed against the broader market costs of reduced investor confidence, reduced liquidity, reduced price efficiency, and weaker capital allocation. Those market-wide costs are harder to quantify, but they are central to the Commission's mission of investor protection, fair and orderly markets, and capital formation. It is also not clear that many issuers would realize the full expected savings. Many public companies will still need to prepare quarterly financial information for boards, lenders, debt covenants, management compensation, internal controls, investor relations, and capital planning. If companies continue preparing quarterly information privately, the principal effect of the proposed rule would be to reduce what is disclosed to public investors, not necessarily to reduce the underlying economic burden. The Commission should also distinguish between quarterly reporting and quarterly earnings guidance. If the policy concern is short-termism, the more appropriate target is short-term earnings guidance and market practice, not the mandatory Form 10-Q. Investors can support long-term corporate strategy while still requiring timely, standardized financial reporting. Reducing the frequency of public disclosure would not necessarily encourage long-term thinking. It may simply reduce accountability. For these reasons, I urge the Commission not to adopt the proposed optional semiannual reporting regime. If the Commission believes Form 10-Q imposes unnecessary burden, it should pursue targeted simplification of Form 10-Q rather than reducing reporting frequency. A targeted approach could reduce unnecessary compliance costs while preserving the quarterly disclosure cadence that investors depend upon. At minimum, before adopting any change of this magnitude, the Commission should require stronger empirical evidence that the benefits to issuers would exceed the costs to investors, market efficiency, liquidity, price discovery, and capital formation. The current proposal does not meet that standard. U.S. public markets are strong because investors trust the disclosure regime. Reducing the frequency of mandatory disclosure would weaken that trust, increase information risk, and potentially erode shareholder value. I respectfully urge the Commission to preserve mandatory quarterly reporting.

Charity Auctions — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charity Auctions Hi All Teams, My name is J. I am writing to propose a collaborative project focused on entertainment, fan advocacy, and accessibility. The goal of this initiative is to rally public support for various fan-driven petitions on Change . org. By working together, our teams can spread awareness, grow signature counts from thousands into millions, and eventually catch the attention of major media outlets and production companies. Ultimately, we hope to use the momentum from these campaigns to support disability rights, freedom of expression, and charitable fundraising. Below is a categorized list of the petition ideas. Please review these with your teams to see which projects you would like to co-promote or use for charity fundraising. Theme Parks & Attractions Bring back "Back to the Future: The Ride" (Universal Studios) Link: https : / / www . change . org / bringbackclassicbacktothefuturerideandbttf4dovecameronetc Bring back "Captain EO" starring Michael Jackson (Disney Parks) Link: https : / / www . change . org / DisneylandandEpcotCaptainEOreturnsforBlackLivesMatter Expand Star Wars Parks & Resorts globally Link: https : / / www . change . org / StarWarsLucasWorldThemeParksResorts23countries Universal Studios Hollywood future expansion ideas Link: https : / / www . change . org / harrypotterdiagonalleyuniversalstudioshollywood Retheme Tokyo Disneyland's Splash Mountain to Moana Link: https : / / www . change . org / DisneyMoanaChloe5Langliveactionrethemesplashmtntokyodisneyland Retheme Irvine Boomers / Build LazyTown Park in Seoul Link: https : / / www . change . org / rethemeboomerstolazytownparkandlazytownthemeparkkorea General Disneyland expansion and future attractions Link: https : / / www . change . org /

DisneylandResortAnotheradditionattractionsfutureprojects Live-Action Film Adaptations Anastasia Live-Action Film Link: https : / / www . change . org / disneyanastasialiveactionjohnnydepphelenmarieliotmovie Disney’s Pocahontas Live-Action Film Link: https : / / www . change . org / makedisneypocahontasliveactiondwaynejonsontherockandsofiacrnilovicdanicafilm Disney’s Frozen Live-Action Musical Movie Link: https : / / www . change . org / DisneyFrozenLiveActionMusicalMovieKelliePicklerDoveCameron The Polar Express Live-Action Film Link: https : / / www . change . org / ThePolarExpressliveactionfilmWillSmithChloeLangreimagined The Powerpuff Girls Live-Action Movie Link: https : / / www . change . org / ThePowerPuffGirlsLiveActionMovie Chicken Run Live Action film Link: https : / / www . change . org / LiloandStitchLaurenDonzisCobraSamuelJacksonLiveAction Disney’s The Ash Girl Film Adaptation Link: https : / / c . org / p5gcRbGJRM Music, Concerts & Live Events BTS for the Super Bowl Halftime Show Link: https : / / www . change . org / BTSSuperbowlperformance2022 PSY "This Is It" Last Concert Reunion World Tour Link: https : / / www . change . org / thisispsylastconcertusuk Wicked Musical Live in NY (Alternative Casting Lindsay Lohan & Park Eun Bin) Link: https : / / c . org / L4CYXqkcQj MJ The Musical Adapted Movie Link: https : / / www . change . org / MJTheMusicalMovieStarringJordanFisher KPop Demon Hunters Golden by Cirque du Soleil Link: https : / / c . org / 7MQV989dRw Disney’s Moana on Broadway Musical Link: https : / / c . org / WsTRgwy5Kr Television, Documentaries & Home Video Releases LazyTown TV Show Revival (Season 5 & 6 / Disney IP Acquisition) Link: https : / / www . change . org / p / magn%C3%BAs-scheving-bring-back-lazytown-tv-show Extraordinary Attorney Woo (Kdrama) Final Season 2 Link: https : / / c . org / CYt8w4dY5M Disney Descendants Sequels Advocacy Link: https : / / www . change . org / DisneyDescendants4 Taylor Swift Biopic Film Link: https : / / c . org / dyNqjjfSrw New Documentary Feature: Celebrity & Hair Loss Interviews Link: https : / / www . change . org / makenewdocumentaryfeaturewith5celebritiesinterviewwith2girlsabouthairabusivecrime The Spooky School (Korean Film 2000) Remastered Global Release Link: https : / / www . change . org / TheSpookySchoolKorean-filmstarringJeonhyejinghostgirlclassicelementary2000intilcjentertainmentglobsl Global VeggieTales DVD/Blu-Ray Box Set Release Link: https : / / www . change . org / VeggieTales50DVDandBluRayin10countriesIcelandUKJapanSouthKoreaandetc Back to the Future Escape Room Reality TV Series Link: https : / / c . org / HPhG7s8VJB Please take your time to look over these options one by one with your respective teams. Let me know your thoughts on potential fundraising strategies, or how we might begin cross-promoting these links on our websites. I look forward to hearing your feedback and solutions as soon as possible. Best regards, J

Charlene Brummer — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charlene Brummer People that care about corruption.

Charles Greenberg USA citizen — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Greenberg The SEC proposed S7-2026-15 change does not pass the “smell test”. In your announcement of the change, you described the benefit to corporations as “determining for themselves” whether or not to file a quarterly report. If corporations want my money as investment in their company, they have an obligation to give me as much information as possible in as timely a fashion as possible. I do not want to be left in the dark with someone else handling my money. Your change is a step in the wrong direction. If anything there should be monthly reports instead of quarterly! Please refrain from making the change proposed in S7-2026-15. Thank you, Private investor, Charles Greenberg

---

Charles Spindelman Retired Law Enforcement — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Spindelman Comments attached. It's a recipe for disaster. There's a reason why this legislation was passed: Protection for "We the People". Do your duty and adhere to your faith of office, your oath to protect "We the People". Keep quarterly reporting mandatory.

Cheryl Neely Retired — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Neely The proposed rule is a Horrible idea. My parents lived through the Great Depression, and the SEC rules have been established over decades to prevent abuses and manipulations by corporations. Consistent transparency into the health of a company and its financial footing for shareholders and small investors is critical for transparency and investor confidence. Bad, bad idea! Stop trying to only protect corporate CEOs and billionaires!

Chris Crescioli The Motley Fool Community — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Crescioli As a small investor looking to maintain and grow my family’s nest egg, I need and demand factual details about the public companies I invest in. With the amount of digital noise and misinformation being generated by AI today it is more important than ever to have up to date facts. Delayed reporting simply hides these facts, which makes investment decisions more like gambling bets. Do the right thing and discard the idea of ending quarterly reporting. With modern computing capabilities and the large amount of money at stake, I would like to see monthly reports added. This could help reduce the amount of fraud, corruption, and insider trading risk.

Christa Heyward None — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christa Heyward The stock market has seen unprecedented increases since the Great Recession. This has caused more people to participate in day trading despite knowing little to none about the companies they’re investing in. This had led to a disconnect between the economy and the businesses traded and the stock market as an indicator of what the American economy. The only way to understand the status of companies is to read their quarterly reports. This informs investors and allows for an awareness of red flags that could be disastrous should reporting be decreased to 6 months. I want the people managing my retirement investments to have access to regular reporting in a timely manner.

Christine Fettinger — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Fettinger Changing reporting from quarterly to every 6 months puts individual investors at much more risk of fraud incubating for longer and insiders selling based on information only they know that hasn't been publicly released. Where the 6-month 'standard' has been implemented doesn't have a great track record considering the 1.9 billion fraud that happened with Wirecard in the UK. Public accountability and transparency in this area should not be lessened. And those who would be most negatively affected are the individuals who don't closely follow the market whose retirements are there. I'm personally on track to retire; I've done all the right things but becoming more lenient to corporations puts individual investors like me more at risk. Plus, wasn't this 6 month rule in place when the great depression happened? The economy is not in a great place now and this hasn't worked well in other countries. Please do not implement this rule change.

Chuck Orella Individual investor — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chuck Orella I am strongly opposed to reducing the requirement to allow publicly held companies to report only twice a year on their financial state and projections. As a believer and investor in the US economy it is imperative to require companies to be transparent about their business. Allowing 6 months between statements will undermine my future confidence to invest.

Cindy Bryant- Peterson Retired — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cindy Bryant- Peterson In 1955, companies only had to report twice a year. Stocks fell for 15 years. History says my portfolio pays the price. Mine, my Children’s & my Grand Children’s . Keep it Quartely.

Cindy Kratz Retiree — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cindy Kratz I am submitting comments about the proposed rule changing reporting from 3 months, to semannually (or 6 months): S7-2026-15. I am a smal investor. I rely on my investments to cover expenses during retirement. A lot of events can affect a company's financial standing in 6 months. Some recent examples include: pandemics, elections, wars. Sometimes the events negatively affect financial status of companies while other events show potential upside opportunities. I support retaining the current 3 month reporting so that invesetors evaluate whether each investment is still appropriate.

Clifton Bethel Chiropractic Physician — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clifton Bethel Dear SEC, There is absolutely no good reason why quarterly reporting should end, I want and need the SEC to keep monitoring quarterly to help protect my family’s investments. Twice a year reporting will only benefit those entities who seek to shield their untoward activities from regulatory oversight. You must not let this happen, the quarterly system has worked remarkably well in serving the public’s interests, and I strongly urge to to continue doing so. Thank you, Dr. Clifton Bethel

---

Clint Colling — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clint Colling If changes are made they should require more reporting not less. Insider information and related trading is running rampant.

Coleen R Abbott — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Coleen R Abbott The proposed change to bi-annual reporting is absurd. How are investors to read earnings reports as well as the footnotes to assess their investments? Is the SEC now changing its mission from full disclosure by business entities, to protect financial criminals, such as Enron, Madoff? Is the change supposed to enable the 1% even more? Do not implement this change. It will dramatically change the confidence of the US Markets. And will hinder the individual's information of investments in the financial market! Does the SEC want our Markets to take a plunge? This change will do so. In making this change, the SEC will ruin the confidence of investors in the US Markets. Where will that lead us? DOWN. Think about it!

Courtney Teacher — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Courtney My name is Courtney. I am a middle school teacher. There is no conscionable reason why we should change the quarterly reports. Checks and balances are oversight. Oversight is needed to prevent fraud and manipulation. If the number of reporting periods is reduced, it is a clear indication that information is being hidden from the American public. Please do your job so that I can continue to do mine. Please do your job so that Americans can trust institutions.

D. Uranowski — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D. Uranowski Keep reporting quarterly; transparency is vital! The world has gone mad in recent years with certain political entities conducting themselves like our economy is the Wild West with checks and balances failing daily! With the Advent of AI and data centers changing the face of this nation and the world at the speed of light it is all the more crucial that transparency be maintained and not diminished! On this, the 250th anniversary of the founding of this nation we need to get back to upholding the principles upon which this country was founded! D.U. PA

Daniel Korkmaz Student, San Diego State University — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Korkmaz To the SEC, these proposed rule changes would be a disaster for the United States and another blow to the rights that the general public is owed. This country was founded by the people for the people and not for corporations to skirt around and abuse our money and trust. Your job is to ensure that the market is fair and transparent with the people and it is partially because of your oversight that America's economy is seen as a bastion of stability in a sea of corruption and instability. This rule would be detrimental to that reputation for numerous reasons such as allowing fraud to grow without oversight and giving companies more avenues to hide their own failures and mistakes along with other serious long term consequences that would effect all of us. Thus for all of these reasons, I ask that this rule does not take effect and that you keep it at the current three months.

Darian Carey Former Client Relationship Manager at a Wealth Management firm as well as former Banker — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darian Carey This would be detrimental to every average investor and only helpful to those who commit insider trading, like congress and CEOs. Please stop giving our country away to the top 1%!!! They have more than enough already.

David G Zavetsky — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David G Zavetsky I do not agree on fewer updates....quarterly required updates should remain in place. Fewer updates means less info I have to make decisions based on markets and such, and it is already difficult enough to try and stay afloat investment wise . The required quarterly reporting needs to remain in place.

David Gnade Private investor — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Gnade The proposed six-month reporting gap is dangerous for individual investors. When public companies can hide financials for half a year, insiders and institutions will trade on information the public never sees. Retail investors end up holding the bag while sophisticated players mop the floor before anyone knows it's dirty. Transparency is the foundation of fair markets, and weakening it only increases asymmetry, volatility, and the risk of abuse. Public companies already prepare monthly financials. Off-quarters should deliver a stripped-down report — financials, cash, debt, KPIs — because quarterly filings have become bloated with disclosures nobody reads. Keep the full 10-K annual, keep investors informed, and protect the public — not the machine.

David hassell — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David hassell I strongly oppose letting public companies switch to semiannual reporting. This rule doesn't help everyday Americans. It helps issuers and large institutions who already have better access to information. Cutting required reports from four to two a year reduces transparency, widens the information gap, and makes it harder for workers and small investors to monitor the companies they own in their retirement accounts. If short-termism and compliance costs are the concern, fix those issues directly. Don't weaken one of the few protections that gives regular investors a fighting chance at fair information. Please keep quarterly reporting mandatory for all public companies.

Deborah Wing-Leonard — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Wing-Leonard In today's economy, changes happen rapidly. Reporting only every six months does not allow the public to make sufficiently-informed decisions about their investments. Publicly-traded companies should be required to publish quarterly reports to maintain appropriate transparency for stakeholders.

Dennis Chapman — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Chapman Reporting frequency should remain as it is now.

Diane Harper Retired — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diane Harper If quarterly reporting is changed it will affect my investments. I am retired and what little I have invested is very important to me and to other retired investors. There is not enough transparency in investing when it comes to others handling your money. I feel quarterly reporting need to stay just as it is so I can manage my investments!

Donald Kunz — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Donald Kunz I am against this proposal. Quarterly reporting has worked for over a century. Also, anything this administration proposes can only benefit big money at the expense of individual investors.

Douglas Gordon Maclean Motley,s fool — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Douglas Gordon Maclean I disagree with cutting the corporation reporting in half!

Edwin Kent N/A — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edwin Kent As a private investor, I object to the SEC recommendation to move quarterly reporting to semiannual reporting. If anything, I would support monthly reporting.

Eleanor Sommer Retiref — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eleanor Sommer As a retired business owner, I believe it is of paramount importance that public corporations keep shareholders apprised of their financial health. Millions of American have their life savings tied up in mutual funds. Moving from quarterly to semiannually is a dangerous decision.

Elizabeth Berry — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth Berry I want my statements quarterly like it is now, Do not change it. Transparency is demanded.

Elizabeth DuVal — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth DuVal Keep companies accountable! We need transparency in accounting. This action will not save companies much money, but it will make it much harder for the ordinary investor to know how a company is faring and whether they can trust the numbers enough to invest. Also, look to other countries who have tried this. How has it worked for them? (Hint- not so well.)

Elizabeth Sislak Retired CPA and accounting instructor — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth Sislak Timely financial reporting is critical for investors, especially retail clients. To reduce the frequency of required reporting allows corporations enough time to “massage” and “message” their results rather than provide transparency.

Eric Sudano — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eric Sudano Subject: Comment on File No. S7-2026-15 – Opposition to Voluntary Quarterly Reporting To Whom It May Concern, As an individual retail investor, I am writing to strongly oppose the proposal to make quarterly reporting (Form 10-Q) voluntary. Eliminating mandatory quarterly disclosures severely harms retail investors and compromises market integrity for the following reasons: • Historical Necessity: Mandatory quarterly reporting was reinforced after catastrophic corporate failures like Enron. Regular, legally binding disclosures were established precisely because less frequent reporting allows massive accounting irregularities to go undetected. • Rapid Business Pivots: Six months is an eternity in the modern economy. Without quarterly updates, retail investors are forced to make decisions based on stale, obsolete data, completely missing material shifts in a company's financial health. • The Retail Information Gap: Institutional investors possess alternative data streams and direct access to management. Retail investors rely entirely on standardized SEC filings to level the playing field. Removing this requirement shifts immense risk onto the individual. • Reduced Capital Investment: If this rule is relaxed, I will have significantly less confidence in the equity markets. To protect myself from this heightened risk, I will likely reduce my capital allocations and invest less overall. I urge the Commission to maintain mandatory quarterly reporting to protect individual investors and preserve market transparency. Sincerely, Eric V Sudano, Individual Retail Investor Downingtown, PA 19335

Erica Anderson — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Erica Anderson am writing to express my strong opposition to the SEC's proposal to allow public companies to switch from a quarterly to a semiannual reporting framework (replacing Form 10-Q with the proposed Form 10-S). While this change is framed as a measure to reduce regulatory burdens and curb "short-termism," it will inherently disadvantage everyday retail investors, damage market transparency, and create a dangerous information vacuum. For over half a century, the 90-day quarterly reporting cycle has been the bedrock of the U.S. financial system, ensuring that public companies remain accountable to the public that funds them. Shifting to a six-month reporting gap poses several severe risks to ordinary investors: 1. Information Asymmetry and Insider Advantage: A six-month reporting window means corporate executives, board members, and large institutional investors with direct access will know the health of a company long before the public does. Six months is an eternity in the modern economy. This gap creates a fertile breeding ground for insider trading and leaves retail investors "the last to know," fundamentally undermining the SEC's core mission of investor protection. 2. Increased Volatility and Market Shocks: When companies only reveal their financial health twice a year, the data dropped during those disclosures will inevitably trigger massive, unpredictable swings. Rather than smoothing out market behavior, semiannual reporting will replace steady, predictable price discovery with explosive market shocks. 3. A "Comparability Nightmare" and Gaming the System: Because this proposal allows companies to opt in and out annually via a checkbox on Form 10-K, it will make peer-and-industry benchmarking incredibly difficult. It also creates a moral hazard, where companies facing a bad year may selectively opt into semiannual reporting to "go dark" and delay bad news, only to opt back into quarterly reporting when things improve. 4. Compromising the Strength of U.S. Markets: The U.S. capital markets are the most robust and trusted in the world precisely because of our rigorous disclosure requirements, not in spite of them. Diluting transparency to mirror less liquid international markets is a step backward.

Erika Paro — Jul 4, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Erika Paro I oppose the proposed shift to optional semiannual reporting (File No. S7-2026-15) and urge the Commission to keep quarterly reporting mandatory. Quarterly filings give investors timely, comparable information, and allowing companies to opt out weakens both transparency and accountability.

Feng Gu, Professor of Accounting and Law, University at Buffalo — Jul 4, 2026
Comments on SEC Proposal for Eliminating Mandatory Quarterly Reporting by Public Companies

By Feng Gu
Professor of Accounting & Law
University at Buffalo

I applaud the SEC's efforts to consider eliminating mandatory quarterly reporting by public companies. This proposal represents an important step toward reducing the regulatory burden of financial reporting while allowing public companies and their investors greater flexibility to determine the frequency and content of financial disclosures.

I specifically advocated this reform in my 2016 book, The End of Accounting and the Path Forward for Investors and Managers, where I wrote: "FOR CONSIDERATION: LIGHTEN THE REGULATORY BURDEN…Consider eliminating quarterly reporting, leaving semiannual (every six months) and annual reporting only" (p. 207). The book outlines several benefits of abolishing mandatory quarterly reporting, including lessening the pressure on corporate managers to prioritize short-term earnings at the expense of long-term value creation and diminishing incentives for earnings management. It also addresses concerns about the potential loss of information to investors by noting that market demand for key quarterly performance metrics—such as quarterly sales and cost of goods sold—can be satisfied through voluntary disclosures. Preparing these targeted disclosures would be substantially less costly than producing complete 10-Qs while still providing investors with the information they value most.

More importantly, I strongly support the SEC's plan to work with the Financial Accounting Standards Board toward the "goal of eliciting disclosure of material information and avoiding compelling the disclosure of immaterial information" in public companies' financial statements. In my view, improving the relevance of financial statements is even more important for investors than refining the frequency of reporting. The reason is straightforward: my own research, together with a substantial body of academic evidence, documents a persistent decline in the relevance of accounting information to investors over the past four decades. This deterioration in the quality and decision usefulness of financial reporting clearly warrants SEC's close attention and action. In the remainder of this comment letter, I discuss the principal factors underlying this decline and offer evidence-based reform proposals that could help restore the relevance of financial reporting.

1

The conceptual foundations of today's financial statements were developed during the industrial age of the early twentieth century, when physical and tangible assets were primary drivers of corporate value. They are, however, ill-suited to the twenty-first-century economy where technology, innovation, and other intangible assets have become the principal sources of firm value. Consequently, financial statements prepared under current accounting standards no longer provide decision-useful information to investors for evaluating companies that invest heavily in knowledge, innovation, and other intangible assets because these critical assets are largely omitted from firm's financial reports as assets. As a result, key accounting information items—earnings and earnings-based metrics—are systematically distorted and provide unreliable and biased signals for investment decisions. Targeted reforms to financial reporting standards are therefore needed to restore the relevance of financial reporting.

In my book, I examine the root cause of this decline in depth and propose specific reforms to improve the relevance of financial reporting. The book presents comprehensive evidence documenting the sharp decline in the relevance of accounting information for U.S. firms since the 1980s, when the transition of the U.S. economy—and those of other developed countries—to knowledge- and intangible asset-driven economies began to accelerate. The evidence demonstrates that, despite a substantial increase over time in both the volume and variety of information required in financial reports—a regulatory trend acknowledged in this SEC proposal—the relevance of accounting information has continued to deteriorate over the past four decades.

For example, the usefulness of reported earnings—arguably the single most important accounting measure available to investors—has decreased by approximately 40% from the 1980s to mid-2010s. More broadly, the overall usefulness of 10-Ks, 10-Qs, and other accounting reports intended to facilitate investment decision-making has also diminished. The evidence presented in my book indicates that these reports collectively account for only about 5% of the information reflected in investment decisions. The disappearing relevance of accounting reports raises serious questions about the usefulness of the current financial reporting system and underscores the need for meaningful reforms.

The irrelevance of accounting reports for contemporary corporations is evident even to non-experts witnessing the prevalence of loss reporting by public companies. In 2019, approximately 46% of U.S. public companies were reporting operating losses, and the percentage was even higher—about 70%—among tech firms. Taken at the face value, these staggering numbers of loss-reporting corporations would point to a miserable economic year. Yet the U.S. economy in 2019 was strong and healthy. No one can make sense of such a large-scale loss reporting by public companies operating in a strong economy. The growing disconnect between accounting reports and the economic reality of contemporary corporations highlights a fundamental problem with current financial reporting standards and their inability to provide reliable information about corporate performance.

In my recent research, I find that accounting-driven losses—defined as losses due to accounting rules that require firms to immediately expense investments in intangible assets—account for 50-75% of reported losses. Such losses have become increasingly prevalent in recent decades, coinciding with a steep rise of corporate investment in intangibles, including R&D, IT, brands, human capital, and organizational capital. The bias created by accounting rules that dismiss intangibles as assets is not benign. Instead, large spenders on innovative technologies—those ascending to industry dominance and charting the future—have severely distorted accounting profitability, including overstated and persistent losses. Prominent examples include Amazon, which reported losses for eight straight years but grew sales by more than 7,500 times and became a household name. Similarly, Tesla had twelve years of loss by billions when it was working its way to mass produce electrical vehicle and revolutionize energy storage. The “losses” by these innovative companies had more to do with the accounting for their intangible investments than the lack of business success. Had the intangible investment of these firms been treated as assets, they would have been profitable enterprises worth more investor support.

Regulators, including the SEC, should be concerned about the dysfunctional financial reporting of our public companies. When out-of-date accounting standards prevent public companies from reporting their profitability truthfully, serious capital misallocation would occur, starving high-growth and successful businesses of the funds they critically need and depriving the public the opportunity to invest in promising businesses. Today, such harms would hamstring capital-intensive new enterprises that are at the forefront of the AI revolution, holding back the enormous economic and social gains to be unleashed by the revolution. For biotech and pharmaceutical startups inventing next-generation medicine and therapies, the harms of irrelevant financial reports would lead to capital starvations, slowing down or even preventing the breakthroughs in developing lifesaving medical treatments.

3

These adverse consequences, however, can be avoided if substantive reforms of financial reporting are implemented.

In my book, I propose a set of reforms aimed at improving the quality and relevance of accounting information provided to investors. These proposals are grounded in rigorous empirical analysis of the factors that contribute to the declining relevance of accounting information over time, as well as evidence on the types of information investors find most useful in evaluating modern businesses. I summarize two of the key proposals below.

The first proposal, aimed at restoring the relevance and integrity of financial statements, calls for the recognition of firms’ internally developed intangible assets. This change would eliminate the systematic bias in reported earnings and related information, thereby giving investors a more accurate view of firms’ profitability. It would enable innovative firms to communicate their performance more truthfully and could improve their access to public capital market by reducing the cost of capital. When combined with the proposed elimination of quarterly reporting, this reform can provide real incentives for the most innovative and consequential businesses to enter and remain in public markets. A win-win for both businesses and investors.

The second proposal calls for a new focus of financial reporting on the information that truly matters to investors: firms’ strategic resources and their economic consequences. Strategic resources are valuable, unique, and difficult-to-imitate assets that allow firms to achieve sustained competitive advantage, including patents, proprietary technologies, exclusive rights, loyal customer relationships, resilient supply chains, and strong brands. Equally important are the economic implications of these resources, such as the cost of developing, deploying, and preserving strategic resources, as well as their contributions to firm performance over time.

The proposed reporting framework would incorporate industry-specific financial and non-financial information, designed to help investors evaluate firms’ strategies, the extent of their execution by management, and the performance in achieving sustained competitive advantage. Because strategic resources are predominantly intangible in nature for most firms, this proposal complements and reinforces the first proposal concerning the recognition of internally generated intangible assets in financial statements.

My book also offers other reform proposals aimed at further reducing the burden and cost of financial reporting while improving its relevance to investors. For example, the ever-increasing complexity of accounting reports and the growing use of subjective and controversial estimates in these reports are such areas that can be streamlined to reduce the cost of preparing accounting reports without affecting their effectiveness. In fact, the evidence from my book and research by others indicate that complex information, particularly estimates, decreases the usefulness of accounting reports. Of course, my book also advocated the elimination of quarterly reporting as another way to reduce the regulatory burden of financial reporting.

4

My research emphasizes that improving financial reporting requires focusing on what matters most to investors—the content and information relevance of financial reports—rather than the frequency of reporting. If financial reports do not convey decision-useful information, changes in reporting frequency will do little to benefit investors. The proposals set out in my book and related research offer concrete ways to improve financial reporting, including the recognition of internally generated intangibles as assets and the development of a complementary reporting framework focused on firms' strategic resources and their economic consequences.

In closing, while I strongly support the SEC's consideration of eliminating mandatory quarterly reporting, I believe more substantive and fundamental changes to financial reporting are needed to restore the relevance of accounting information and strengthen investor confidence in financial reporting. In particular, financial reporting should place greater emphasis on intangible assets and other strategic resources that are central to firms' sustained performance. I respectfully hope the SEC will take a lead in this important reform.

Feng Gu
Professor of Accounting & Law
School of Management, University at Buffalo
Author of The End of Accounting and the Path Forward for Investors and Managers (Wiley, 2016)
Email: fgu@buffalo.edu

5

Florence Field Social Worker and Mother — Jul 4, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Florence Field I'm a single mom of three kids with IDD, and a job in social work. Through a small windfall I am able to build a very small investment portfolio for each of my kids, for the hope of stability when I'm gone. I can only protect these investments by closely watching quarterly reports with my financial advisor to help me decide what to do with the money. If large corporations and investment firms are able to work in the shadows for most of the year, they have undue advantage, the financial system can more easily become unstable, and the savings to investors are so minimal I can't understand what they are. It's presented as all about saving companies money so that can transfer to investors, but realistically it won't find its way down to any of us. This proposal has not been a successful model globally and making those claims is not honest. I ask that quarterly reporting continue, so those of us trying to eke out small financial protections for our families are able to watch what’s happening with our investments. And to better prevent fraudulent behavior on the part of Wall Street.

Forrest Barton Manufacturing — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Forrest Barton This is really bad. You should not change the reporting timeframe. It's only gonna make it harder for me to protect my retirement I am 37 years old, and I'm already looking at retiring. When I'm like 70 or 80, and even then, if that's with a decent part-time job, staying on top of my retirement, investments are super important, and this would hurt my ability. To make sure that I can take care of myself in my old age

---

George Kolb Individual Investor — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: George Kolb As an individual investor, I value the certified and vetted quarterly financial reporting currently in place. While I can appreciate potential compliance savings that could result from moving toward semi-annual reporting, my understanding is that many companies would likely continue to report quarterly. This means that we could begin to have two different standards for public company reporting and investors would no longer have an independent way to assess and compare companies on a level playing field. I support continuing to require quarterly filings with the SEC for publicly traded companies.

Gilbert Rodriguez Grocery store worker — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gilbert Rodriguez I, Gilbert Rodriguez who resides in the state of Colorado and is currently a grocery worker is concerned about not having the big corporations report their earnings statements to their shareholders as well as to the SEC. There has to be transparency in regards to their process of reporting their earnings or losses and should be done quarterly. If this process is altered, then this will lead to insider trading and corruption in the reporting process i.e. Enron.

Gordon Davis AA pilot — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gordon Davis Keep the quarterly reports. Let the average person a chance to make money, not just the insiders. Gordon Davis, AA pilot.

Gregory Smith — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gregory Smith As an active investor in public companies I rely heavily on quarterly reporting to make informed investment decisions. Quarterly reporting is necessary to monitor the health of the companies I invest in, provide transparency to company decisions, actions, and profitability in a timely manner. It holds companies accountable to their investors and stockholders. I strongly urge the SEC to keep quarterly reporting mandatory for all public companies.

H Tempest — Jul 4, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: H Tempest I oppose Proposed Rule S7-2026-15 because reducing required financial reporting from quarterly to semiannual intervals would diminish transparency for investors. Timely, consistent disclosure is essential for efficient markets, informed investment decisions, and investor confidence. Quarterly reporting helps identify changes in a company's financial condition, operational performance, and risks before they become more significant. Extending the reporting interval to six months would increase information gaps, potentially benefiting insiders and sophisticated market participants over ordinary retail investors. While reducing compliance costs is a worthwhile goal, those savings should not come at the expense of market transparency and investor protection. I encourage the SEC to preserve quarterly reporting requirements while exploring other ways to reduce unnecessary regulatory burdens without limiting the availability of timely financial information.

Harold Ho — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Harold Ho I am writing to strongly oppose File No. S7-2026-15. Creating a six-month reporting blind spot does not stop the demand for data; it simply ensures that only elite institutional players and corporate insiders possess it. While retail investors rely on regular, standardized public disclosures to level the playing field, hedge funds will bridge this 180-day gap by purchasing expensive alternative data—like credit card tracking and supply chain analytics. Furthermore, extending the reporting window creates massive insider trading blackout periods, naturally incentivizing management to utilize less transparent, non-public channels to signal company health to preferred Wall Street desks. This proposal directly degrades market integrity, widens information asymmetry, and hands a severe, structural advantage to insiders at the direct expense of everyday retail investors. I urge the Commission to reject this change. Respectfully Submitted, Harold Ho

---

Harry Marinakis — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Harry Marinakis I am retired, and I have to support my wife as well. My self-employed 401k is all we have. I want to know the name and title of the person who is proposing semi-annual reporting. I want a response. You must stick with quarterly reporting.

---

heather bryse-harvey — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: heather bryse-harvey In this age of fraud and deception we absolutely need to keep the quarterly rule!

Heidi G McDaniel — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Heidi G McDaniel In the interest of stockholders reporting should continue quarterly. Accountability is imperative. Thank you.

Helen Digenis-Bury — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Helen Digenis-Bury Please maintain the required quarterly reporting. Switching to less frequent reporting disadvantages regular people like me who have investments, and gives an advantage to the corporate insiders. Thank you.

---

holly taylor — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: holly taylor i am against the rule change. the public interest is best served by quarterly reporting, with the balance of effort for the corporation versus transparency and communication and security of shareholders and the public.

I. Siegel — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: I. Siegel I'm a professor who will be dependent on my modest retirement savings. This rule-change proposal comes as we are currently witnessing our country slide backwards toward a cartoonishly amplified version of the Gilded Age. The corruption of the Robber Barons looks quaint in comparison with what we're facing today. What we need right now is far MORE transparency from corporations, not less. With the growing threat to social security's solvency, now you're threatening to weaken one of the key tools ordinary retail investors have to make decisions to ensure we have enough savings to survive after retirement? Longer gaps between reports allows fraud to fester and gives corporate insiders an unfair advantage while offering insignificant savings to companies. Places like Singapore that tried this move to biannual reports have faced so many problems they're looking to return to quarterly. Other markets with this change have also faced problems -- including fraud. We absolutely need to maintain this minimal quarterly disclosure requirement. It is unconscionable that anyone is considering cutting that requirement in half. If anything, you should be multiplying and expanding corporate transparency requirements.

Individual Professor of PA studies — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Individual This change allows for unfair trading practices that gives institutions advantages over individuals and provides even greater opportunity for insider trading, which is not nearly investigated enough.

Irene Stiebing None — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Irene Stiebing Comments attached

---

J Anderson — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: J Anderson If you go through with this you are only protecting business, not people. Be transparent. Keep the reporting rules as they are.

J. Bilbro — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: J. Bilbro Please do NOT allow publicly-traded companies to have the option of financial reporting on a semiannual basis. Please keep the current quarterly reporting requirement! Individual investors need the most current information on the companies in which they invest. They need more transparency into the financial workings of companies, not less. Changing the reporting requirement to semiannually will reduce the timeliness of information, making it harder for individual investors to accurately evaluate the investment potential of companies. Quarterly reporting provides timely, standardized insight into each companies' fiscal health. As the rate of change of technology continues to accelerate, individual investors need information MORE often, not LESS often. The often cited CFA Institute Research & Policy Center study of the U.K.'s 7-year period of mandatory quarterly reporting showed that reporting frequency did NOT significantly impact corporate investment behavior. The study also showed that mandatory quarterly reporting DID have a positive impact upon the timeliness and quality of information available to individual investors - including increased analyst coverage, better and more timely information for evaluating a corporation, and improved accuracy of earnings forecasts. Please keep the current quarterly reporting requirement for publicly-traded companies!

Jack Bridwell — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jack Bridwell Keep reporting at 4 times per year. Reducing to twice a year is not in the best interests of investors.

Jacquelyn Harbert — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jacquelyn Harbert I am strongly opposed to the proposal to allow public companies to file financial reports twice a year instead of quarterly. I have been investing for more than 40 years. I use quarterly 10Q filings to research public companies (prospective investments) and to monitor public companies that I hold in my portfolio. 10-Qs are a PRIMARY information source that I use because they are reviewed by independent auditors, and the CEO and CFO both sign them and can be held legally accountable for its contents. The voluntary corporate communications that would replace 10-Qs carry none of that and, as such, I would be reticent to rely on such voluntary communications and "news" reports from business media sources. Receipt of 10-Qs twice a year is TOTALLY UNACCEPTABLE -- simply too infrequent to adequately inform investors of a company's financial results. I think investors around the globe will have far less interest in investing in American public companies if they are unable to obtain reliable financial reports, that company executive leadership attest to, on at least a quarterly basis. This proposal SHOULD NOT be implemented.

Jan Anglemyer — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jan Anglemyer As a senior citizen, I and we, need all of our money in order to make ends meet/ pay our bills. Please do not end quarterly reporting.

Janet Anderson — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Janet Anderson I support maintaining quarterly reporting requirement for public companies. Regular financial disclosures promote transparency, accountability and informed decision-making for investors. As an individual investor I rely on timely public information to understand how companies are performing. Reducing reporting frequency could make it harder to identify risks early and would provide less transparency for everyday investors. Please preserve quarterly reporting requirements. Thank you.

Jean Ricketts — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jean Ricketts This proposed rule should NOT be adopted. The American public and shareholders need more timely information, not less, from public companies in which they are invested. I urge the SEC to keep the requirements for quarterly reporting in place.

Jennifer Frazier — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Frazier Keep quarterly reporting. Investors require the current information and greater transparency that comes with quarterly reporting so they are not relying on outdated information for their investments.

Jennifer Lewis — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Lewis The proposed rule punishes small investors and pension holders by reducing transparency and increasing incentives for corporate misbehavior in the longer waiting period between reports. Without better oversight, the current quarterly reporting should be at least a minimum requirement. They provide the only critical data for investor to make key decisions. If you want to encourage smaller businesses to go public, find another way to not put the public and our pensions at risk.

Jessica — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jessica As a casual day trader through Fidelity, even I can confirm less information on markets is a bad idea. Please keep quartly reports mandatory.

Jessica Seaton — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jessica Seaton I believe the general public should have more, not less information about companies it invests in. Quarterly seems about right. Any less would be too little information to be making informed choices as a shareholder. I don’t believe quarterly reporting is inhibiting companies to do well given how well the market has been doing. Reporting is part of running a business and keeping tabs on what is going on. As shareholders this is our way of monitoring our investments.

Jim Allie — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jim Allie To the Commission: I am writing as an individual investor to oppose the proposed rule that would permit public companies to switch from quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q to optional semiannual reporting on new Form 10-S. In my view, this change would materially reduce the transparency and timeliness of information that ordinary investors rely on to make informed decisions. I offer this perspective based on more than four decades of experience in high-reliability and highly regulated environments. I served 26 years in the U.S. Navy on nuclear submarines as a nuclear-trained electrician, where my daily work depended on timely, accurate, and repeatable reporting to manage risk. After retiring from the Navy, I worked in the pharmaceutical industry in project management and computer system validation, where compliance, documentation discipline, and audit-ready records are non-negotiable. In both settings, compressing or lengthening reporting cycles does not remove the underlying risk; it only shifts when and how that risk becomes visible. Quarterly reporting is one of the most important tools that retail investors have to monitor the companies they own. Cutting the frequency of core financial disclosures in half would increase information asymmetry between insiders and the investing public, particularly between management and smaller, long-term shareholders who do not have access to Wall Street research or direct company contact. Less frequent updates would allow issues in performance, liquidity, or governance to compound unnoticed for longer periods and could delay market discipline when problems emerge. From my background in safety-critical operations and validated systems, I have seen repeatedly that problems rarely appear “all at once.” They show up first as small deviations in routine data and trend reports. When those signals are delayed or aggregated into larger time blocks, people discover issues later, not sooner, and the resulting corrective actions are more disruptive and more costly. Optional semiannual reporting would move the Commission in that direction by design. The proposal is also difficult to reconcile with the SEC’s investor-protection mission. I recognize that some issuers argue quarterly reporting encourages short-termism or imposes a disproportionate burden, especially on smaller companies. However, the Commission already has tools and flexibility to address specific disclosure burdens or to recalibrate particular line-item requirements without broadly reducing the frequency of core financial reporting for all investors. If the real problem is unnecessary complexity or boilerplate, then the solution should be targeted reforms, not less frequent disclosure. Allowing companies to “opt in” to semiannual reporting would also fracture the disclosure landscape. Some issuers would continue to report quarterly while others would not, making it harder for investors to compare companies on a consistent basis within an industry or across indices. That fragmentation would introduce avoidable complexity into portfolio construction, index methodology, and risk monitoring for both institutional and retail investors. In practice, companies facing weaker short-term performance could have an incentive to choose the less frequent reporting option, further skewing the information environment. I am particularly concerned about the impact on older and smaller investors who rely almost entirely on Commission-mandated reporting as their primary window into corporate performance and risk. Reducing the frequency of this information would weaken their position relative to large institutions and sophisticated traders who can supplement SEC reports with alternative data and direct access to management. As someone nearing retirement age myself, I value the stability, fairness, and predictability that come from a well-understood quarterly reporting regime that has served markets for more than half a century. In my Navy and pharmaceutical careers, when we had systems that worked reasonably well in managing risk, we were cautious about sweeping structural changes unless there was clear, evidence-based justification that the change would improve safety and reliability. I do not see such a justification here. The existing quarterly reporting framework is not perfect, but it is understood, broadly trusted, and central to how investors evaluate companies and allocate capital. The burden of proof should be on anyone proposing to materially reduce the flow of standardized financial information into the marketplace. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission not to adopt the proposed optional semiannual reporting framework in File Number S7-2026-15. Instead, I encourage the SEC to preserve the existing quarterly reporting requirement and focus on targeted reforms that improve the quality, clarity, and usefulness of disclosures, while maintaining the regular cadence of information that investors of all sizes depend on. Thank you for considering my views. Respectfully submitted, Jim Allie Knoxville, TN Individual investor, retired U.S. Navy nuclear electrician, former pharmaceutical project manager and computer systems validation professional

---

Jimmy Large Public Company Auditor, KPMG, CPA Candidate 4/4 Passed — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jimmy Removing quarterly reporting requirements for public companies will lower investors confidence in the markets. Insiders will know information 6-8 months before the public does and will have been able to act on it before hand. This will lead to lower market efficiency and an overall drop in overall market cap for companies. Repealing this will benefit only the companies and insiders and will be a detriment to the public investor. Who it is our job to protect.

Jinny Karstenson — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jinny Karstenson We have seen an airline fail in 2026. It does not seem prudent to allow businesses to operate unchecked for half a year. Businesses failing ruins multiple people's lives. Keeping the rules quarterly is best for the economy. Less regulation is a formula for more failure, more secrecy, and then unpleasant surprises and consequences for the majority of people employed by a company.

Joan Hooper retired — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joan Hooper Changing reporting requirements from quarterly to semiannual goes against two of the three missions of the SEC. First, it fails to protect investors. It is bad for oversight and transparency. Six months without scrutiny is too long, allowing too much time for small problems to grow. Second, it fails to maintain fair, orderly and efficient markets. Without quarterly reports of earnings company valuations will be based even more on guesswork, and the market will become even more volatile. In addition, it is unfair to "small" or retail investors. Quarterly reports help to level the playing field for investors who are not privy to industry gossip and who cannot afford research teams to stay abreast of the latest developments. Without quarterly reports, large institutional investors have an unfair advantage in the market. Please do not reduce these reporting requirements.

Joanne Martin — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joanne Martin Hold Corporations in check with quarterly signing!

Joel Dress NA — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joel Dress For the sake of us "regular" investors, PLEASE keep quarterly reporting! Don't let this administration gut everything until there's nothing left in place for protections for citizens. Please. I'm writing this to you for my dad, who just turned 90 in April, he's been an investor his whole life as a businessman. He built a multimillion dollar printing company which he took over from his dad. At that time it was a small local printing company in Boston doing $30,000 a year in sales - he took over the company when he was about 21 years old. My Dad retired at age 40-45 . He's always been in the DOW, et al., and he recently got in on spaceX IPO. He built a Trust for the family many, many years ago. He's been extremely happy with the stock market (2025-). And the value of the dollar as being STRONG AND GOOD. When we talk we haven't talked about this proposal of eliminating quarterly reporting, but I'm quite sure he's fully aware of the significant dangers this could have regarding everyone's portfolio - this cannot happen. We must have protections by keeping the transparent quarterly reporting. My Dad doesn't have that many years left in his life. My mom died in 2008 from breast cancer, and the Trust he formed was for the protection of his family - I've got 2 younger brothers (I'm the oldest of 3). My Dad had been worried during past administrations, especially the last one, and this is the first time I've seen him more relaxed and happy in his decades long retirement. I want him to stay this way for however long he has left on this earth. My younger brother, Neil, ran his own company for a number of years until he retired, also at an early age - he did very well for himself, and he's even an investor also, and doing pretty darn good. And because he's the only one out of the three of us with business experience, my dad appointed him as the trustee. I don't want any headaches for him as he manages our trust my dad worked so hard to set up. The trust was setup for the males in our descending family, and to be active for the next 350 years, I believe that's what it is. So that's pretty much my story. I wanted you to know my perspective, and from what little I know, there's enough inherent risk with investing in and of itself, please don't add to the risk by dismantling the Quarterly Reporting Rule that was put in place after the 2008 DISASTER which was the direct result of allowing companies not to be transparent with its investors - we need to keep the frequent, transparent financial reporting, it's the only way to hold the accountability line. Please, PLEASE Save Quarterly Reporting! ❤ Joel D. Bradenton, FL

John Day American Stockholder — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Day The ability to review Company information throughout the year is very important. Changing from a quarterly to a semi-annual period reduces transparency and acts against the ability of regular stockholders to follow and understand the actions of the Company.

John Gregory — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Gregory Please keep quarterly reporting for the SEC. I believe this will allow more careful accountability and corporate governance and more transparency for shareholders. Thank you, John Gregory

---

John Stone — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Stone I am an individual investor who wants timely and honest reporting from the companies I invest in. It is unwise to allow companies to not be required to inform their investors of the financial health of the company. Information is power and the investors deserve to have power in the companies they are partial owners of. Thank You, John Stone

---

John Williams National Bank Examiner (retired) — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Williams NO on proposed Rule S7-2026-15 I am opposed to returning to semi-annual financial reporting for public companies. It is imperative that quarterly and annual reporting be maintained. Quarterly reporting provides the timely information needed to make informed decisions on investing and corporate governance. Thank you.

John Womack Retired — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Womack More fraud against the regular citizen.

Jordan Lunda — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jordan Lunda I am an individual investor, and I strongly oppose the allowance of a semi-annual report in lieu of a required quarterly report. As an individual investor,

I need as much transparency and information as possible into the companies in which I potentially choose to invest. Retail investors are already at a disadvantage when investing compared to broker-dealers and large institutions, and this will only serve to put retail investors at more of a disadvantage. Do not get rid of the 10-Q!

Josef Burger — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Josef Burger Please keep quarterly reporting. It assures that companies keep their status of projects, finance, and other things public so that investors, small or large, can adequately keep track of their investments, and the risks involved. It helps both the companies to keep their investors properly informed, and for the investors to make timely decisions about their investments. Hiding financial information in longer reporting periods allows for abuse and fraud that is not readily apparent, and will hurt smaller investors far more than giant investors who have their own sources and guesstimates of a firm's financial issues, both good and bad.

Kaitlin Lacey — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kaitlin Lacey Keep quarterly filing. News cycles and business cycles are so short these days. The public needs frequent information to make good decisions.

Karen Blum Registered Nurse (retired) — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Blum I am opposed to the proposed change in reporting requirements. I remember the ENRON bankruptcy. Small investors, public and private pension funds, 401Ks and other holdings took a tremendous hit. Our entire economy took a hit. The bankruptcy occurred because fraudulent accounting flew under the radar. If anything, we need more transparency, not less. Thank you.

Karen Maass Retired physical therapist — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Maass I am a retired physical therapist and have money invested in various areas. I look for regular reporting on my stocks , bonds and etc. I follow my earnings monthly, but how do I get any idea of how various companioes are doing if the reporting from the SEC is only semi-annually? I am not the only one, most investors prefer that the SEC continue with quarterly reporting rather than semi annual reporting. How can a person follow what is occurring with only a semi-annual report is completed. How does one plan out their retirement years?

Karen McDonald — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen McDonald Keep this quarterly and help protect the public interests!! Why would you change something working so well. Quarterly earnings ensure full transparency to the public and should definitely be maintained!!

Kate Executive Director of Interreligious Food Consortium — Jul 4, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kate KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING— Do not even think about changing it!! So much corruption— we need ACCOUNTABILITY!!

Katelyn Schmidt Educator — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Katelyn Schmidt Quarterly reporting should be the MINIMUM standard- but should be increased, not decreased. Reporting only twice a year is absolutely unethical.

Kathi Kitner — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathi Kitner I remember Enron. I was impacted by the Florida Savings and Loan scandal. I live in a time right now where greedy behavior by individuals is leading to more corrupt financial behavior and therefore exposing many investors and others to risks greater than usual. Keeping quarterly reporting has not been burdensome in the past, or will it be going forward. It is a good accounting practice to report quarterly and should NOT be changed. Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

Kathleen Moylan Retired teacher — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathleen Moylan Please keep SEC reporting a quarterly requirement. Investors need the information and we need to combat fraud.

Kathleen Weissenberger — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathleen Weissenberger I am writing to express my strong opposition to the Securities and Exchange Commissions proposed rule that would allow public companies to opt out of quarterly reporting. Reducing corporate compliance costs should never come at the expense of market integrity and investor protection. If adopted, this rule will effectively re-privatize public market information, pricing out the everyday investor and turning back the clock on decades of transparency reforms. If required reporting moves from quarterly to semiannual, the period between official public financial updates doubles. During that longer gap, material business realities may develop well before ordinary investors receive full public accounting. Insiders, large institutions, and professional market participants may still have access to alternative data, management access, analyst networks, industry intelligence, and other channels. Ordinary investors are more dependent on standardized public filings. Companies are still required to keep up to date financial and report to boards. The actual savings from skipping a public filing are modest. The cost of worse information falls on me, the personal investor. I strongly urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain mandatory quarterly reporting. The health of our public markets depends on equal, timely access to information for all participants, not just the wealthiest institutions.

Kathy Milberg Taxpayer — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathy Milberg We believe the existing requirement of quarterly reporting should remain intact. Maintaining this will also help these entities stay on top of their operations and investments and increase their ability to respond quickly to any negative impacts sooner than later.

Kay Cowdin — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kay Cowdin It seems the opposite of transparency to reduce the frequency of reporting to semiannual. This is a fast paced world and quarterly reports are the minimum that are required to keep up.

Kelli Zsebehazy — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kelli Zsebehazy To whom it may concern: Please keep the current standard of quarterly reporting for public companies. Less frequent, semi-annual reporting will only decrease transparency, invite increased corruption, and result in economic damage. Quarterly reporting helps keep public companies accountable.

Kimberly Gosney Shareholder — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kimberly Gosney Quarterly reporting is essential for maintaining transparency, accountability, and investor confidence. It provides timely insight into a company's financial health, allowing shareholders, employees, and the public to make informed decisions based on current information rather than outdated annual reports. Regular reporting also encourages responsible financial management, helps identify potential challenges early, and promotes trust in the marketplace. Continuing quarterly reporting strengthens confidence in our financial system and supports fair, informed investment decisions.

Kimberly Malone — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kimberly Malone I believe that quarterly reporting should be maintained. It allows for more transparency in a timely manner and helps to inform and protect the interests of the common man who is impacted by corporate financial decision-making.

Kimberly McWilliams Nurse — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kimberly McWilliams I do NOT consent to this happening as this is keeping us in the dark. When We The People have tone Right to be aware of what big corporations are doing!

LaBernice — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: LaBernice I support maintaining quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. Regular financial disclosures promote transparency, accountability, and informed decision-making for investors. As an individual investor and retirement saver, I rely on timely public information to understand how companies are performing. Reducing reporting frequency could make it harder to identify risks early and would provide less transparency for everyday investors. Please preserve quarterly reporting requirements.

Lei Zhang Computer Engineer, Rivian Inc — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lei Zhang Dear Ms. Countryman, I am writing to express my strong opposition to the Commission’s proposed amendments that would permit public companies to replace standard quarterly reporting (Form 10-Q) with an optional semiannual reporting model (Form 10-S). While I understand the Commission's stated intent to alleviate regulatory burdens and curb corporate "short-termism," the proposed rule severely undermines the core mission of the SEC: protecting investors, maintaining fair and efficient markets, and facilitating transparent capital formation. Moving to a six-month reporting cycle threatens to degrade market integrity in the following critical ways: 1. Severe Information Asymmetry and the "Data Embargo" Risk U.S. markets are the gold standard of global capital precisely because of their rigorous transparency. Extending the reporting window to six months creates a massive information vacuum. Under current rules, a company can hold vital operational or material data (such as the loss of a major contract, deteriorating margins, or supply chain failure) until its next periodic report if it does not explicitly trigger a Form 8-K filing requirement. Under a semiannual model, a company could legally embargo material financial degradation for up to half a year. 2. Disadvantage to Retail Investors and Rise of Alternative Data Reducing mandatory disclosures will not stop the market from seeking information; it will merely privatize it. Sophisticated institutional investors possess the capital to purchase alternative data—such as satellite imagery, credit card tracking, and private web-scraping—to gauge a company's performance in real time. Everyday retail investors, who rely heavily on standardized, public SEC filings to level the playing field, will be left entirely in the dark. This directly contradicts the SEC's mandate to protect the retail investing public. 3. Increased Market Volatility and Higher Cost of Capital Rather than smoothing out market behavior, less frequent reporting invariably spikes volatility. When a company only opens its books twice a year, the market is forced to rely on speculation and rumors for 180 days at a time. Consequently, earnings announcements will trigger drastic, highly volatile price corrections. Academic literature consistently demonstrates that reduced transparency increases the risk premium demanded by investors, which will ultimately increase the cost of capital for the very corporations this rule aims to help. 4. Impaired Detection of Corporate Malfeasance Quarterly reporting serves as a critical, regular check-and-balance on corporate governance. Forcing management and independent auditors to review internal controls and financial statements every 90 days acts as a vital deterrent against accounting manipulation and fraud. A six-month reporting gap gives bad actors prolonged opportunities to obscure structural vulnerabilities or financial misconduct before exposure. 5. Overstating the Compliance Burden in the Era of Automation The administrative cost savings cited in the proposal—estimated to be a fraction of a percent of a public firm's overhead—are overblown. In 2026, modern enterprise resource planning (ERP) software and artificial intelligence have drastically streamlined the aggregation of quarterly financial data and XBRL tagging. The marginal compliance savings gained by skipping two 10-Q filings do not justify the immense loss of public market transparency. Conclusion The 90-day reporting cadence has underpinned the stability and growth of the U.S. financial system for over half a century. Allowing companies to retreat into a six-month black box will erode investor confidence, drive up capital costs, and disproportionately harm retail market participants. I strongly urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the mandatory quarterly reporting framework that ensures our markets remain the safest, most transparent, and most liquid in the world. Sincerely, Lei Zhang

---

Leonora Huffman — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leonora Huffman Keep accountability as it is now.

Les Bolton Realtor — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Les Bolton Regarding S7-2026-15 Transparency is key in all business dealings especially those that lives and livelihoods depend upon; including retirees who have considerable stock investments. Quarterly reporting is essential to keep investors informed about stock performance and corporate risk. Do not allow companies to keep their books secret for up to six months. Keep quarterly reporting. S7-2026-15 makes misappropriation of funds, theft and corruption easier to hide and more difficult to detect.

Leslie rivera — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leslie rivera If the SEC is in the up and up there is no reason to reduce transparency. The SEC attempts to change its current quarterly reporting to bi annual will not only greatly impact people's trust but clearly does not fully enact the agency's ability and obligation to inform citizens about the protection efforts on behalf of its investors, and how it worked to regulate the stock exchanges and brokerages, while enforcing laws against market manipulation and insider trading. By moving to biannualy, the agency is shifting who it is protecting. The agency is no longer looking out for the big and small investors but rather big business. That seems like the opposite of what the agency's true function. KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING!!!

Linda Wehrly Investor — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Wehrly We need accountability. Less reporting means less ability to invest confidently. Quarterly reporting should continue. As a retiree, I cannot afford to lose principal and need the better security of quarterly information.

Lisa McGinley — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa McGinley Sure sounds like the idea of companies only required to report twice a year is a recipe for disaster. The American public is currently hyper aware of how corporations and individuals in power positions are out for themselves and not the American public. Stay with quarterly reporting. Maybe consider making in monthly.

Lisa Tyson — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Tyson Keep it like it is NOW. Course corrections can be done more efficiently with smaller chunks of data.

Loretta Fogg — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Loretta Fogg For the love of decency, integrity and financially responsible clarity, do not institute S7-2026-15 with six month reporting. Please keep the reporting quarterly. I'm not privileged enough to work for a company, union, state nor agency that offers a pension, aside from a 401K plan which lets us select various types of investing plans and mutual funds. If the U.S. drops quarterly reporting and share prices follow dropping share prices from an average of 26 times earnings to 16.5 times earnings as seen in parts of Europe with the 6-month reporting policy and even historically in the US from 1955 to 1970 and we as retail shareholders whose entire retirement is funded through 401k's and IRAs, AND the value of our investment is follows suit and drops 38% or more due to devaluation and loss of liquidity that seem to pair with previous and current records for reporting every six months, then what I've worked and scrimped and saved to support myself in retirement will drop drastically in value, kids college funds will drop in value at the same time student aid funding is decreasing, and the US will end up with more people needing government assistance while officers in devalued (stock share value) companies collect more money and are enabled in hiding company problems for longer periods of time. The SEC is here to protect us and promote honesty, right? So keep quarterly reporting. The disastrous financial and mental impact on working people, retired people, and students present and future deserves clarity, not another chance for an Enron to cook the books with even less transparency.

Luanne Grandinetti — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Luanne Grandinetti I am a 71 year old lower end investor. I pour over my quarterlies and have just converted to online reports. Since finding out about this proposed rule I’ve dug into the issue. I’ve seen nothing to dissuade me from opposing this rule. My research shows that having these 3 times a year signed by the CEO keeps them accountable to their investors and employees. Do not implement this rule change. I am opposed.

Lynn Jardine USA citizen — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lynn Jardine Please keep quarterly filing. Please keep the dynamic tension, too many white collar crimes are happening.

Lynne Adams — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lynne Adams I'm a retiree, with investments, and do not support reducing the proposed changes to report filing. With the technology available today, I do not see quarterly reporting as an undue hardship on any entity. It is information investors need to make decisions regarding their apportioned wealth into markets that undergirds every public traded entity.

Maggie T — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Maggie T I oppose this motion

---

Mareen Bonner — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mareen Bonner Facebook post

---

Margaret Roberts — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Margaret Roberts Please keep reporting quarterly. Investors need to know what's going on at least four times a year. With AI and new technology and such a volatile world with so much happening so quickly, a lot happens in three months. If anything, reporting should be more frequent, not less. What are you trying to do, rob us?

Margaret Stanley — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Margaret Stanley I am in opposition to this proposal as it leaves investors in the dark and too much room for fraud.

Margret Pelletier — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Margret Pelletier Investing is ownership. As an investor I partially own 100s of companies. As an owner I deserve regular, transparent communication from each of these businesses. Less information and less frequent information creates ill-informed owners and increases uncertainty and volatility.

Maria Giel — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Maria Giel It is the right thing to do. Keep quarterly reporting to protect the investor safe! We do not want another Enron! Maria Giel Pittsburgh PA. Bus Driver for the local school. We as Americans are tired of being g ripped off by white collar crime. Keep quarterly reports coming ASAP!

Marie — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marie My employer has become handcuffed by Wall Street. They consistently make short-term decisions to make sure quarterly earnings meet analyst guidance so their stock price can be maintained or increase. They no longer invest in innovation; they focus on short term sales. Moving away from quarterly reporting would give them time to actually focus on investment and innovation.

Mark Darrah Attorney — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Darrah Companies that seek financing from the public should provide more transparency, not less. The less transparency, the more speculation and possible manipulation. Stocks that sell with less reporting are inherently more risky and sell at discount to US stocks. No one would really benefit from eliminating quarterly reporting. The SEC should not change the established reporting requirements.

Mark Warme — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Warme Hello, I am for changing quarterly reporting to every six months. This would focus managements attention on more long term results instead of short term results. Most individual investors hold stock for a while whereas Wall Street type of firms tend to trade more frequently based on quarterly results. This will smooth out the stock market from quarterly fluctuations to semi annual fluctuations. While it is possible that the fluctuations will be larger, at least they will be less frequent and may make it easier for new and existing individual investors to bring new money into the market. There are people who will benefit from this change as their biggest concern now is the market fluctuations. If the market fluctuates less then there will be more people willing to invest. Thank you for your time in reading this, Mark

---

Martha Shujts — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Martha Shujts I am strongly opposed to revising the reporting period from quarterly to semi-annually, even if the change is optional for companies. Events that may have major impacts on a company's financial situation occur regularly in this fast-paced world. Investors should learn about the impact of such events from company leadership sooner rather than later.

---

mary poole — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: mary poole Transparency is the foundation of trustworthy business. Going from quarterly to semi annual reporting is not in the best interest of those purchasing stocks. It allows for too much time to pass before course correction can be made. We should stick with the current cadence.

Maryellenj Viola — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Maryellenj Viola You. Must. Be. KIDDING. Less transparency is NEVER a good thing, especially in the financial realm. Keeping the average Joe in the dark while allowing the insiders free reign will only shield and protect Monolithic-Whatever. DO NOT CHANGE THIS RULE. There is already enough sleight of hand and outright fraud in the corporate world. Do not make it easier for them!

Maura Scientist — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Maura NO! NO! NO! Do I really need to say anything else?Guy y

---

Melissa Major — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Melissa Major I use quarterly reports to manage my retirement investments. I make adjustments and need to have accurate and expedient information. I do not support moving to a 6 month schedule.

Michael Farley Shareholder of several companies — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Farley As a shareholder in several companies, the performance of which directs my livihood as a future retiree, I am entitled to be made aware of company performance on a regular basis. Quarterly reporting provides this needed information. The cost of fewer investors would be much grater than the cost of reporting. Quarterly reporting also maintains accountability which prevents cases of fraud. PLEASE do not make this change!,

---

Michael Perry — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Perry Subject: S7-2026-15 I am submitting this comment as an individual investor in response to the Commission's proposed rule allowing companies to elect semiannual reporting (Form 10-S) in lieu of quarterly reporting (Form 10-Q). I recognize the compliance cost burden that quarterly reporting places on public companies, and I support efforts to reduce that burden where it does not come at the expense of investor protection. However, I am concerned that the proposed shift from quarterly (three months) to semiannual (six months) reporting represents too large a jump in the interval between disclosures. Doubling the reporting gap increases information asymmetry, delays the market's ability to detect emerging problems, and disproportionately disadvantages less sophisticated investors who rely on periodic filings rather than other channels of company information. I respectfully urge the Commission to consider a middle-frequency alternative: a trimestral reporting option, requiring three filings per year on a four-month interval, rather than the current four filings per year or the proposed two. This alternative would still provide meaningful compliance cost reduction, roughly a 25 percent reduction in filings compared to quarterly reporting, while limiting the increase in the interim reporting gap to one additional month rather than three. This preserves a materially shorter window for identifying financial irregularities or emerging risk compared to a six-month gap, while still meaningfully easing the reporting burden on companies. I would ask that the Commission evaluate a three-tier reporting frequency structure, quarterly, trimestral, and semiannual, allowing companies and the market to weigh in on which frequency best balances cost and transparency, rather than limiting the choice to the current binary of quarterly or semiannual. Thank you for the opportunity to comment. Michael Perry

---

Michael Veach — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Veach It is absolutely shameful that you would allow these rich scumbags to talk you into this. We know that you are listening to them with this absurd idea. It doesn’t help anyone but them. It helps them defraud us. It wiped out our 401(k) and other savings. If you do this, I hope to see each and every one of you behind bars when the next administration takes the reins of this great country. You people cannot, shall not, and will not do this. I say no! The people say no.

Michael W Collier — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael W Collier As a longtime individual investor I have heard horror stories about what this proposed rule could allow. There is ENOUGH insider trading already, so please, please, make these entities report quarterly! Thank you!

Michio Nagata — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michio Nagata RE: Proposal on Semi-Annual Reporting (File No. S7-2026-15) In today's volatile and fast-changing environment, the SEC, as a 'watchdog' of financial reporting, is becoming much more significant. I believe we are in the era of tightening the controls and transparency of those publicly traded entities. Please consider continuing with monitoring the financial reporting activities.

Mike Brennan — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mike Brennan Having lived through the MCI and Enron scandals, and seeing so many people lives negatively affected, I believe we need more of transparency not less.

Miyuki Vort — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Miyuki Vort Please do not change the reporting from quarterly to semi-annually. Keep corporations accountable and transparent as the rule intended.

Montherson L Saint Juste — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Montherson L Saint Juste I am writing to strongly oppose any proposal to move corporate financial reporting from a quarterly schedule to a semi-annual one. Reducing transparency strictly harms everyday retail investors and benefits nobody but Wall Street institutions. Leaving small-dollar investors in the dark for six months at a time opens a massive window for insider trading and informational asymmetry. By the time a regular citizen sees a company's financial health, institutions and insiders will have already traded on that information, leaving retail investors to hold the bag. The SEC's core mission is to protect investors and maintain fair markets. Catering to corporate lobbying by cutting reporting in half directly violates the trust of the American public and creates an unlevel playing field that screws over the average working man and woman.

Mushroomman of Motley Fool Retired Stock Invester — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mushroomman of Motley Fool To protect me as a consumer/buyer of stocks, I need to have as much information as frequently as is possible!!! Who is being protected? Are you trying to save $$ for the companies, while costing me money as an investor?? Don't make it easier to cheat the little guy!!

Nancy C Jacobson Retired compliance lawyer — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy C Jacobson As a compliance lawyer for listed companies, I saw firsthand how the reporting requirements increase corporate attention to compliance and accountability. Besides providing more transparency to investors, the frequent reporting requirements keep businesses focused on conduct that could require disclosure — encouraging business leaders to make thoughtful, risk-based decisions. For that reason (and also as an investor), I oppose the changes proposed in S7-2026-15.

Neil Hochman None, retired — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Neil Hochman This is to express my opinion against the SEC changing corporate reporting rules from quarterly to semi-yearly. Corporations don't need this benefit or advantage.

Nicholas Armstrong — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nicholas Armstrong We as investors rely on quarterly information to make decisions. If you allow longer gaps in reporting, this creates an unfair advantage for corporate insiders. This reporting being "optional" will then become the norm because it would save companies money in filing, but investors need these regular updates to make informed decisions. The savings to companies aren't worth the cost to investors in the end.

Nicholas McGrath — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nicholas McGrath Keep the reports quarterly. Semi-annual reporting hurts investors.

Nonie Ravenberg — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nonie Ravenberg I oppose this rule change from quarterly reporting.

O.T. OKADA Retired — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: O.T. OKADA I'm against the proposed rule change. We need to keep quarterly reporting so small investors can make informed decision and protect their investments and retirement accounts. There is already too much insider trading, and less public reporting will make things less transparent.

Orsola A Capovilla-Searle Professor — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Orsola A Capovilla-Searle I am adamantly against this proposed change. Less reporting creates less transparency for investors. Quarterly reporting is an important tool to protect against fraud, waste and abuse. Replacing quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting without changing review of the reports is a net loss for consumer protections.

Patricia Browning Retired Controller — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia Browning I am NOT in favor of semiannual reporting. As an investor I rely on information being a available timely and quarterly is ok but 6 mths is too long without updated info. Having spent my career heading accounting I know the data is truly available monthly but for reporting quarterly is sufficient

---

Pauline Angelakis — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pauline Angelakis Quarterly reporting is good for all involved. No one wants to fly blind regarding their finances. If any company I have invested with switches to a reduced reporting schedule I will move my money to companies that stick with quarterly reporting.

Peter K. Pelayic — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter K. Pelayic This is absurd! You people need to grow a backbone, stand up to this corrupt administration and the cronies that are perpetuating the “Oligarch” class in this country!

Peter Rozga Employee at the University of Minnesota — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter Rozga Quarterly reporting is critical to maintaining a minimum level of transparency and helps to maintain the public good and confidence in a system that is ripe for corruption and subterfuge. Making a change in this area will undoubtedly put you on the wrong side of history.

PII Information Assurance — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: PII In this age of near real time access to data, reporting should have advanced to be more frequent than the current acceptable system of 10Q, quarterly reporting. 10S SemiAnnual reporting would be a regression into the annals of deceptive practices. SemiAnnual reporting would increase the length of time that a company’s directors or employees possess non-public information. Essentially having the potential of leaving the investor holding the bag of companies that are being disingenuous. Real time and 4Q reporting could uncover mis-deeds sooner….

Ramona Boston — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ramona Boston Quarterly is barely keeping track of the corruption. We need more, not less, reporting!

Regina Billington None — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Regina Billington I oppose this rule change. I invest in the stock market and feel quarterly statements help investors keep up with a company’s health in these turbulent times.

Rich Gallian — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rich Gallian I do not support this, investors need accountability and frequent communication.

Richard Barratt Chartered Engineer — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Barratt This is a bad idea for small investors who rely on this data to make informed decisions. Please keep reporting quarterly.

Richard Grubbs — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Grubbs Email notification.

Richard Merlino None — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Merlino I'm not in favor of only twice a year reporting. Keep reporting at 4 times a year.

Richard Saunders Laborer — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Saunders There are a lot of hard working people out there like me with a 401k that can't afford to have extra risks and losses when it comes to their retirement money. Nor can their spouses, if they have spouses who didn't work or worked only part time jobs to be able to contribute the majority of their time and effort taking care of the family and the household chores…they may have to depend on the 401k to supplement them at retirement age because their full retirement amounts will not be as high. If my wife gives up 35+ years of making a good income to dedicate her time and love to taking care of our family and running errands and making sure the house stays in order so that I can bust my butt to keep bills paid, their lives more comfortable, and have some left over in a 401k for us to enjoy our finals years together, or at the very least for her to be able to make ends meet without struggling at retirement should I pass away first…if my 401k goes down the drain because of this lack of transparency then all the hard work and sacrifices we put in to making sure we had a little more once we could finally rest, and rest easy, or god forbid if I'm gone and she doesn't have that to lean on an compensate for her sacrifices. I understand investments are risks, but this is adding unnecessary risk without giving the people a choice. This country talks up a big game about planning for retirements and employers have 401k benefits as added selling points for potential employees. It's not just me, it millions of people who's long term plans could be destroyed by this, and all they did was spend their lives dumping their time and efforts into investing in their futures and their families futures. Don't put this risk on us just to save a few bucks on the back end. We don't deserve it.

Rico Contreras N/A — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rico Contreras Do not wish for quarterly reporting changes. Invaluable to investors and economic metrics.

Rita Amrhein Consumer — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rita Amrhein I want all those involved to submit their reports monthly.

Rob Radcliff — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rob Radcliff 1) Reduced transparency harms investors — Moving from quarterly to semiannual reporting widens the information gap between insiders and ordinary shareholders, increasing volatility, uncertainty, and mistrust, especially for smaller companies that already receive limited scrutiny. 2) There is no evidence that the proposed change solves short-term thinking — Research (including CFA Institute studies in the U.K.) finds that reporting frequency does not affect corporate investment behavior, meaning the SEC would be trading away transparency for a benefit that evidence says won't occur. 3) The proposal reverses progress toward fairness — Allowing companies to opt out of quarterly reporting moves away from the level playing field established by Reg FD; as critics note, major companies already file quarterly without issue, and markets remain strong.

Robert Investor — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert I believe the reporting should be kept quarterly. There was a very good reason why after the Enron fiasco the quarterly reporting was implemented. Investors deserve to be timely kept abreast of corporate financials with which they are invested.

Robert A. Svoboda The Motley Fool Community — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert A. Svoboda I am 100% opposed to the proposed change away from quarterly reporting, I am a retired CPA that worked in public accounting for 40 years. I understand financial reporting, financial disclosures, and operational comments and related matters. Less regular public reporting and accountability will be, in my opinion, harmful to me personally and others like me, as active individual investors and market participants,

---

Robert M Peters — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert M Peters I do not support the rule change.

Robert Michael Flanagan Public Citizen — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Michael Flanagan I feel that the required reporting period for CEOs should continue to be reported Quarterly and not changed to Twice-a-year reporting as proposed. I feel it will reduce the timeliness of the reports if the reports are less frequently required to be filed.

Rodger Wittig — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rodger Wittig Please keep quarterly reporting. Changing to semi-annual reporting results in an unnecessary lag in information used to make investment decisions. I am retired and depend on accurate timely information to balance my retirement portfolios.

Ron Abernathy Retired Business Executive — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ron Abernathy Quarterly filing are a must to keep investors apprised of business health. Do not extend the time period between filings.

Russell Brown Fixed Income Portfolio Manager/Trader — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Russell Brown Investors need to see trends in asset quality, defaults, delinquencies, trends in sales, etc. If we do not see this information, there will be bigger surprises, causing greater volatility and reducing confidence in U.S. markets. There may be a "compromise" that provides the above without a formal earnings report, but let's not eliminate most of the information we need.

Ryan Nowicki Stewart, Co-Founder & CEO, Pennant — Jul 4, 2026
Pennant
Ryan Nowicki Stewart
Co-Founder, CEO
ryan@getpennant.ai
55 Liberty Street
New York, NY 10005
getpennant.ai
Your Views. Your Values. Your Votes.
Via Electronic Submission
July 4, 2026
Vanessa A. Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securities & Exchange Commission
100 F Street, NE
Washington, DC 20549-1090
Re: File No. S7-2026-15, Semiannual Reporting (Release No. 33-11414)
Dear Secretary Countryman:
Pennant respectfully submits this comment in response to File No. S7-2026-15, the Commission's proposal to allow reporting companies to file a single semiannual report on new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q.1
As a market-wide service provider, we do not take a position for or against a change in reporting frequency. We write instead to offer the perspective of a technology company whose technology institutional investors use to read and analyze the disclosures this rulemaking concerns.
Pennant is an AI-native proxy voting and governance intelligence platform built for institutional investors, including global asset managers, public pension systems, and corporate retirement plans that safeguard the retirements of millions of Americans. Our platform applies tailored large-language models and structured data pipelines to SEC filings, including 10-Ks, 10-Qs, 8-Ks, 13-Fs, DEF 14A proxy statements, and N-PX reports, to generate independent, customized governance analysis and voting recommendations across institutional portfolios. Every voting recommendation generated through our platform to reflect our clients' investment views begins with issuer disclosures filed through EDGAR.
Pennant does not maintain a benchmark voting policy or house view that seeks to influence market outcomes, and we take no institutional position on whether companies should move to semiannual reporting. Reasonable market participants disagree in good faith on that question. Our interest is to describe what the proposal could mean for disclosure practice and for the growing use of AI to analyze filings.
The Current Record Reflects a Divided Market
The comment record reflects an engaged and divided market, and the substance on both sides is worth recognizing alongside the headline count. The docket includes support from major issuers and long-term market organizations, while institutional investors and investor advocates largely oppose the proposal.

A minority of commenters support the change. FCLTGlobal, which has studied structural short-termism in U.S. capital markets for more than a decade, described the proposal as "a meaningful step toward reducing structural short-termism" while noting several considerations for the Commission.2 ExxonMobil, through its Senior Vice President and Chief Financial Officer, submitted a letter in support.3 The Business Roundtable and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce have argued for years that reduced mandatory frequency can lengthen management time horizons and lower compliance costs.4

Prominent executives have echoed these themes in public remarks. JPMorgan's Jamie Dimon has said he would welcome less frequent reporting, though he locates the deeper problem in quarterly forecasting rather than in reporting itself.5 Morningstar's Kunal Kapoor has supported the change on the condition that disclosure quality remain strong.6 And Occidental Petroleum's Vicki Hollub has said the quarterly cadence can make it difficult to convey the full arc of a long-term project.7

A larger group opposes it. The Council of Institutional Investors, whose members and associate members hold trillions in assets and represent the retirement savings of millions of pensioners, filed a detailed letter against the proposal. CII argues that quarterly, data-tagged financial statements, subject to auditor review and management certification, are central to the timely and accurate information flow that supports market quality, and that less frequent reporting would increase share-price volatility and short-term speculation.8 Other major institutional voices have filed in opposition as well, including CalPERS, the largest U.S. public pension fund9, and the CFA Institute10

. These organizations represent many of the most prominent institutional voices opposing the proposal.

AI is Already Reshaping Regulatory Analysis

We would point the Commission to the public comment-letter tracker maintained by Professor Tzachi Zach of The Ohio State University Fisher College of Business, which classifies letters on this proposal as they are filed and reports patterns in the docket.11 As of early July 2026, the individually classified letters run heavily against the proposal, with a small minority in support and a further set of conditional letters, alongside tens of thousands of form-letter submissions that are almost entirely opposed.

The tracker is valuable because it demonstrates how AI-assisted analysis can be applied transparently and reproducibly to large regulatory records: Professor Zach classifies each letter with a multi-rater large-language-model ensemble, the same kind of AI-assisted reading of regulatory text that our own work applies to disclosure. We cite the tracker because it provides a transparent and reproducible approach relevant to how the Commission weighs the practical effects of any change.

The Future of Disclosure Is About More Than Cadence

We recognize that the costs of quarterly reporting are not borne only by investors and analysts. For many issuers, particularly smaller and newer public companies, the preparation of quarterly reports consumes management attention and compliance resources that might otherwise support long-term growth. Today's debate extends beyond reporting cadence and cost. It also concerns whether investors will continue to receive authoritative, structured, and issuer-originated information in an environment where AI-enabled analysis, prediction markets, and other market-based signals increasingly shape expectations.

Whatever cadence the Commission adopts, the usefulness of interim reporting depends as much on the structure and completeness of what is disclosed as on how often it is filed. A well-structured, fully tagged semiannual report can be more useful to investors than a rushed quarterly one. Reducing frequency in a way that also weakens machine-readable disclosure, however, would cost investors more than the change in cadence alone. If the Commission proceeds, we therefore ask that it keep, at a minimum, the Inline XBRL tagging of interim financial statements, comparability across periods, and the completeness of the underlying disclosures. As the Commission recognized in adopting Inline XBRL requirements, structured disclosures improve the accessibility, comparability, and usability of financial information for investors and market participants.12 Structured data is what allows investors of all sizes to run independent analysis, rather than leaving that capability to a few incumbents with proprietary data pipelines.

AI is Changing the Economics of Disclosure

One observation from our work is worth emphasizing. Several familiar arguments in this debate rest on assumptions about the cost of producing and reading interim information. Recent advances in large-language models have substantially reduced the cost of analyzing information from complex documents, increasing the importance of high-quality, structured source data.13 With the cost of extracting, comparing, and synthesizing disclosure information continuing to fall, the traditional argument that less frequent reporting saves analyst time may carry less weight, while the value of clean, well-structured source data continues to rise. Because AI systems increasingly serve as an initial layer of analysis across capital markets, issuers should expect that the structure, consistency, and machine readability of their filings will become increasingly important determinants of how information is interpreted and acted upon.

Regardless of reporting cadence, AI systems are only as reliable as the issuer disclosures on which they are built. In our experience building AI-native workflows for institutional governance workflows, retrieval accuracy and cross-period comparability depend more on consistent structure and machine-readable formatting than on the marginal reduction in reporting frequency.

Finally, as these comments are submitted on Independence Day during our Nation's 250th year, we are reminded that the strength of U.S. capital markets has long rested on investor confidence in the quality of corporate disclosure and the accountability of public companies to their owners. Whatever reporting cadence the Commission ultimately adopts, investors should continue to receive timely, authoritative, and issuer-originated information.

Ultimately, the next generation of disclosure policy should be evaluated not only by how often companies report, but by how effectively that information reaches investors in an increasingly AI-enabled market.

* * * * *

We appreciate the opportunity to submit these comments and welcome the chance to discuss them further with Commission staff.

Sincerely,

Ryan Nowicki Stewart
Co-Founder & CEO
Pennant
www.getpennant.ai

1 U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, Semiannual Reporting, Release No. 33-11414, File No. S7-2026-15 (proposed May 5, 2026; published Fed. Reg. May 7, 2026). Comment period closes July 6, 2026. See also Statement of Chairman Paul S. Atkins and Statement of Commissioner Mark T. Uyeda on the Proposing Release (May 5, 2026).

2 FCLTGlobal (Sarah Keohane Williamson, Chief Executive Officer), Comment Letter on File No. S7-2026-15 (June 16, 2026), https://www.sec.gov/comments/S7-2026-15/s7202615-832081-2545286.pdf.

3 Exxon Mobil Corporation (Neil A. Hansen, Senior Vice President and Chief Financial Officer), Comment Letter on File No. S7-2026-15 (June
24, 2026), https://www.sec.gov/comments/S7-2026-15/s7202615-881139-2685767.pdf.

4 Business Roundtable and U.S. Chamber of Commerce, long-standing advocacy for reduced mandatory reporting frequency (see, e.g., positions submitted in response to Release No. 33-10588, File No. S7-26-18 (2018), and subsequent statements).

5 Jamie Dimon, Chief Executive Officer, JPMorgan Chase & Co., remarks on Bloomberg Television (October 2025).
6 Kunal Kapoor, Chief Executive Officer, Morningstar, Inc., “I Agree With the SEC on Ending Quarterly Reporting—With Conditions,” Fortune
(May 5, 2026).
7 Vicki Hollub, President and Chief Executive Officer, Occidental Petroleum Corporation, remarks to Bloomberg (2025).
8 Council of Institutional Investors, Comment Letter on File No. S7-2026-15 (June 25, 2026).
9 California Public Employees’ Retirement System (Marcie Frost, Chief Executive Officer), Comment Letter on File No. S7-2026-15 (June 19, 2026), https://www.sec.gov/comments/S7-2026-15/s7202615-848519-2600170.pdf.

10 CFA Institute (Matthew P. Winters and Sandra J. Peters), Comment Letter on File No. S7-2026-15 (June 11, 2026), https://www.sec.gov/comments/S7-2026-15/s7202615-815219-2482219.pdf.
11 Tzachi Zach, SEC Semi-Annual Reporting Proposal Tracker (S7-2026-15), The Ohio State University Fisher College of Business (2026), https://tzachizach.github.io/sec-semi-annual-proposal-tracker/. See also Commissioner Hester M. Peirce, “A Quarter for your Thoughts,” Remarks at the Meeting of the SEC Investor Advisory Committee (June 4, 2026).
12 U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, Inline XBRL Filing of Tagged Data, Release No. 33-10514 (June 28, 2018), 83 Fed. Reg. 40846
(Aug. 16, 2018).
13 Stanford Institute for Human-Centered Artificial Intelligence, AI Index Report 2026 (2026); McKinsey & Company, The Economic Potential of Generative AI: The Next Productivity Frontier (June 14, 2023); Erik Brynjolfsson, Danielle Li & Lindsey Raymond, Generative AI at Work, NBER Working Paper No. 31161 (2023)

S B — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: S B We have a right to continue receiving regular & transparent messaging from businesses. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it.

Sandy Castle — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sandy Castle As individual investors, we hold a stake in the businesses we invest in. Quarterly reports provide us with valuable insights into their performance, financial well-being, and emerging trends. They allow us to evaluate businesses because they are standardized and certified, allowing frequent comparisons over time. The financial statements, management discussions, revenue and earnings trends, and analyst Q&A sessions reveal important information in determining healthy businesses and struggling ones, for example. Fewer checks on struggling organizations can leave shareholders financially disadvantaged. Regular, mandatory financial reporting from the quarterly filings, unlike episodic, voluntary disclosures, provide high-quality information. Increased analyst coverage and accurate earnings forecasts enrich the information environment for those of us who otherwise cannot get that information. Requiring less frequent reporting would be detrimental to individual investors. Individual investors need and deserve more transparency, not less of it. We deserve as much equal access to company information as large institutions have. They have expert networks, data, and direct access to retailers, but we only have quarterly reporting. To address short-termism, rather than reducing quarterly disclosures, regulators should instead prioritize addressing executive compensation structures, incentive misalignment, and governance failures.

Sandy Knudsen Retiree with stock holdings — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sandy Knudsen I object to the 6 mos. reporting period. Maintain the quarterly reporting period to help prevent the opportunity for companies to misrepresent to their own advantage and to the disadvantage of the investor. I vote.

Sarah — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sarah Do not allow this to go through. We the people deserve transparency & updated information for placing our funds into whatever companies we believe match our values and goals. Do not let this go through.

Sarah Burnett Pierce — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sarah Burnett Pierce Technology is allowing the world to move faster. This is particularly true in the investment sector. It is imperative for investment managers to have the most up-to-date information possible, so they may make the best decisions for their clients. Allowing companies to report semi-annually is a move in the wrong direction. This change will cause more surprises for ethical investors and increase market volatility. The decreased oversight will only serve to weaken our markets and increase insider trading occurrences. The reporting requirements should remain at quarterly or be increased to a more frequent schedule.

Sarah Kimberly Bowen — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sarah Kimberly Bowen Quarterly reports should still be required. Average investors will loss money with less transparency.

Sarah Lambert — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sarah Lambert I rely on quarterly reports to make investment decisions and losing them will lead to more market volatility, with no long term gain. Other countries who have adopted a similar model have seen no benefits and only costs to small investors. This will increase chances of fraud and only lead to more insider trading. Is that what the SEC wants?

Sarah S Perdue — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sarah S Perdue I support the continuation of quarterly reporting. It provides transparency and gives shareholders and consumers more accurate information about corporate performance. Please continue the current policy of quarterly reporting.

SB Watson Educator — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: SB Watson This is to urge that public reporting frequency stay as it is or make it more often. Definitely do NOT decrease reporting and accountability!

Scott M None — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Scott M Reducing the frequency of financial reporting for SEC regulated firms is a terrible idea. The costs to firms is minimal, but the loss of transparency and the required information to investors of all levels would be disastrous. This would be making investments a casino game, rather than one of informed decisions. Bsd idea. Don't do it.

Scott Pacheco NA — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Scott Pacheco Strengthen this measure to include all the financial officers - but decreasing the number of times they are held accountable is the exact opposite of what we should be requiring by law; increase it to include every/any verbal statement to the public, that comes out of their mouth.

Sharon Trgovich — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sharon Trgovich I want quarterly reporting to continue to be able to see how well or not that these companies are doing so I can adjust my retirement savings accordingly.

Shelmun Dashan Policy Director, UC Berkeley Law, Center for Consumer Law and Economic Justice — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shelmun Dashan (Professional affiliation listed only for identification purposes. All views are my own, written in my individual capacity as an investor). I oppose the proposed change to allow companies to opt for semi-annual instead of quarterly reporting. This rule is unlikely to reduce administrative burden for most public companies whose large investors, creditors, and other affiliates may still require quarterly (or even more frequent) data. The rule will have the effect of exacerbating information asymmetries between retail investors and institutional investors and between insiders and everybody else. To the extent that it does actually impact internal data collection and analysis by companies, it will give embezzlers and insider traders an even bigger advantage both in how long it takes for a company to potentially detect a problem and how hard it will be, in the case of insider trading, to correlate trading decisions to non-public information because the time window is twice as big and there's more noise to hide illegal trading in. If the SEC actually has strong data showing quarterly reporting is meaningfully reducing desirable IPO activity, why not target the administrative burden at companies who show good cause for temporary relief from the quarterly requirement instead of indiscriminately removing the requirement from companies who don't need relief and are providing valuable information to investors and valuable deterrence to companies? Also this rule is likely to have a side effect of creating uneven playing fields between companies whose other investors and creditors maintain quarterly or monthly reporting requirements and those who don't have third party reporting requirements. It has been noted that European countries use semi-annual reporting, but is it the case that those countries have retirement safety nets that are more robust than the US and therefore individual investing does not have the same stakes there than in the US where pensions and company-funded retirement plans have been replaced with DIY retirement planning? The SEC should more carefully balance retail investors' transparency needs and their existing comparative disadvantage against institutional investors with the need of a subset of companies for whom quarterly reporting is a barrier to going public. The proposed rule should be abandoned or amended to narrowly target the companies for which this is a necessary relief and perhaps consider imposing other guardrails on companies that adopt the semi annual reporting, for example requiring quarterly disclosures to continue if the company has to prepare and provide quarterly or monthly data to any other stakeholders. The SEC should also study what happens after this rule is put into place to determine the effects - good, bad, and neutral - on all stakeholders.

Stephen Plotkin retired — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Plotkin SEC should be trying to move reporting for companies to a shorter timeframe for greater transparency to investors, not a longer timeframe. The proposed rule will allow companies to hide financial problems from the investing public for long periods. It hurts the very people that the SEC is supposed to protect—mainstream investors with retirement portfolios. This rule change will mean that when something you're invested in starts going down the tubes, you'll be the last to know, and so will your fund managers. This is bad for everyone invested in the stock market through IRAs, 401ks, etc. This is not in the public interest. We should have more transparency for the corporations the public is invested in, not less. The only winners in this rule are corporate insiders. Allowing companies to hide financial problems for longer periods hurts the investors the SEC is supposed to protect.

Stephen Rodriguez — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Rodriguez As an investor, I believe this change will negatively effect my ability to make good decisions. Additionally, as a publicly traded company has a legal obligation to provide value to shareholders, this will make it harder to for shareholders to ensure this is occurring. Do not make this change.

Stephen Spampinato — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Spampinato Quarterly reporting is necessary for transparency. I am for keeping this rule. Stephen Spampinato

---

Steven Bucklin The Motley Fool Community — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven Bucklin I/We need quarterly reporting from the company's I'm investing within.

Stop fleecing the people already. This is not ok — Jul 4, 2026 Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stop fleecing the people already. This is not ok Stop fleeing the people. This is ridiculous. Repeal citizens united and release the epstein files

---

Stuart Smith United Methodist Clergy — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stuart Smith Quarterly reporting gives the unscrupulous and outright criminal element — which in the present time seem over represented among those given major responsibility for overseeing vitally important components of our nation's life — much more room to perpetrate their malfeasance and harm investors. Please do not give corruption a bigger chance to prosper by making a change in the current system.

Sue Hasty — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sue Hasty S H, retiree, who tried to responsibly save for the future. Changing the reporting system makes it harder for individuals to keep track of what's happening with their investing. The Enron debacle comes to mind! Why are you trying to make it harder for hard working Americans to keep track of their investments? It's unfair to the investors, especially the people who are relying on what they have saved & invested for their future! Do you care more about big businesses than the average American? I say keep things as they are to protect the people you should be responsible to! S H

Susan Givens-Skeaton Professor of Management, DeSales University — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Givens-Skeaton Susan Givens-Skeaton, Professor of Management Guardrails are necessary. Sarbane's -Oxley was passed for good reason. Do not alter the current reporting timeframe. If we've learned anything recently, it is that those in power cannot be trusted to do the right thing.

Susan Walker — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Walker Keep reporting quarterly. I am a recently disabled senior and being able to timely manage my retirement investments is essential. Susan Walker, Minneapolis Minnesota

---

Sylvester Criscone — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sylvester Criscone As an owner and investor of several companies, I believe quarterly updates are necessary to provide the level of transparency required to ensure a company is delivering on its tactical and strategic objectives and to be properly informed of new opportunities.

T. Carhart — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: T. Carhart Limiting required reporting to twice a year drastically reduces transparency for everyday people. Quarterly updates are necessary for assessing a company's financial health. It would also give another huge advantage to institutional investors over retail investors. It would also increase volatility, which is the last thing we need in the US right now. We're already on the edge. Please don't push us over.

Ted Lapis Public Land Users Committee member Buffalo, WY — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ted Lapis Public lands must be protected from profiteering. The Trump Administration has shown that they cannot be trusted to do the right things. We need to protect our country from the opportunists who will profit from its destruction. Just say “No!” to Trump.

Thomas Donnelly — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Donnelly Dear SEC, I oppose the SEC proposal for semiannual reporting because it prevents investors from accessing information about companies more often; lets companies hide behind closed doors; and it opens a doorway to allow fraud to fester. We live in an age where more and more information is available to all people to help in making daily decisions. Switching to semiannual reporting would be taking a huge step backwards and would only serve to penalize the basic American investor who is relying on this information often times to help secure a safe and well earned retirement for themselves. Please do not implement this change! Keep Quarterly reporting as it stands now. Thank you

---

Thomas Watts — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Watts Especially in these times, when trust seems to be in limited quantities, the idea of providing less insight into the companies we stockholders own is a move in the wrong direction. This sounds like big business pushing government to do their bidding, not the government looking out for the people. Do not reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to two.

Timothy Gombold None — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Timothy Gombold Keep the required quarterly reporting interval. 180 day interval is not sufficient transparency.

Timothy South Engineering Manager — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Timothy South Hello, As an active investor it’s imperative to keep quarterly reporting in tact, as semi annual can allow significant events to occur without timely knowledge. The downside to semi-annual reporting is greatly outweighed by the upside. EU and Asian markets have already tried and realized this.

Trena Carter — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Trena Carter The majority of our retirement funds invested in funds who have a quarterly reporting requirement. We review the reports to assist in making decisions on our investments. The new optional requirement transitioning the reporting requirement does not provide value to us . Companies still have to keep their books reporting to their boards. Any savings from skipping a public filing are modest legal and accounting fees, and those savings flow to the company and its executives, not the investors. The lack of reporting will be a disservice to investors such as us. Please keep the reporting requirements the same, Quarterly reporting! Thank you!

Valerie Van Courtlandt — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Valerie Van Courtlandt Corporations operate without investor input, but those same corporations need to report to the investors no less often than quarterly. To permit those corporations to report only twice a year is giving those corporations the right to rip off those same investors.

Verona H. Green — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Verona H. Green Our elected officials should be reminded of the promises they have made to the people they have been elected to represent. Quarterly reporting keeps that part of what needs to be done 4 times a year.

Vincent Longo — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vincent Longo Quarterly reporting protects individual investors. Semiannual reporting doubles the information gap between insiders and ordinary shareholders. That gap is where volatility, uncertainty, and mistrust grow. The short-termism diagnosis doesn't justify this remedy. Research from the CFA Institute, which studied this exact maneuver in the U.K. market, shows that reporting frequency has no measurable effect on corporate investment behavior. The SEC is accepting a real cost – less transparency for individual investors – for a benefit that the evidence says simply won't materialize. The companies most likely to opt out are the ones where oversight matters most. Smaller, less-covered businesses operate with less scrutiny. Reducing their reporting requirements makes them harder to monitor, not easier to own. This is the wrong direction. Reg FD moved toward a more level playing field. This proposal moves away from it.

Virginia Saak — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Virginia Saak I think transparency is important. Therefore, I would like to keep the quarterly reporting.

Wendie Hardy Karpinski — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wendie Hardy Karpinski If it’s not broken . . Quarterly reporting has worked well for decades. There is NO reason to change it. ~ Wendie Hardy Karpinski

---

William B Bannier American Citizen Since 1952 — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William B Bannier Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 Why lengthening SEC reporting from quarterly to semiannual is a bad idea. Lengthening SEC reporting from quarterly to semiannual sounds reasonable at first: fewer filings, less compliance work, less pressure to “hit the quarter,” and more room for long-term planning. But that argument confuses quarterly reporting with quarterly obsession. The real problem is not that investors receive too much reliable information. The problem is that markets, executives, analysts, and compensation systems often overreact to short-term numbers. Reducing mandatory disclosure would not cure that culture. It would mostly make the market darker. The SEC's current proposal would let public companies file one semiannual report on a new Form 10-S instead of three quarterly Form 10-Q reports, leaving them with one semiannual and one annual report each year rather than three 10-Qs and one 10-K. The SEC frames this as flexibility for companies and investors, with Chairman Paul Atkins arguing that reduced filing frequency could lower burdens and make public markets more attractive. That is the best version of the argument. But even then, it asks investors to give up standardized, timely information in exchange for a speculative benefit. Quarterly reports are not just ceremonial paperwork. They are one of the basic ways public markets stay fair. A Form 10-Q gives outside investors regular, legally structured updates on revenue, margins, cash flow, debt, risk factors, litigation, liquidity, and management's discussion of results. If that information comes only every six months, the gap between insiders and outsiders widens. Management, board members, lenders, suppliers, large customers, and sophisticated institutions may still have ways to infer what is happening. Ordinary investors will not. That is why the "companies can still report voluntarily" answer is weak. Voluntary disclosure tends to work best when the news is good. The companies most likely to go quiet are often the ones investors most need to hear from: companies with deteriorating margins, hidden operational problems, emerging risks, weakening liquidity, or governance issues. The SEC Investor Advisory Committee's draft recommendation warned that eliminating quarterly reporting would deprive markets of timely material information and undermine informed investment decisions and efficient capital allocation. The proposal also creates a comparability problem. If some companies report quarterly, some semiannually, and some change cadence over time, investors lose a clean basis for comparing peers. That matters because markets do not value companies in isolation; they compare companies across industries, cycles, margins, balance sheets, and execution. A mixed reporting regime would make earnings seasons less complete, valuation work messier, and underperformance easier to hide. Investor sentiment appears to reflect that concern. A 2026 CFA Institute survey of 2,500 investment analysts and portfolio managers found that 62% opposed replacing quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting, 63% believed quarterly reporting's benefits exceed its costs, and nearly 85% were concerned about comparability if companies could choose or change reporting frequency. That is not just reflexive love of paperwork; it is a recognition that standardized disclosure is part of the market's plumbing. The short-termism argument is also overstated. If companies are managing only for the next quarter, the better targets are quarterly earnings guidance, executive compensation tied to near-term stock price, activist pressure, and analyst fixation on consensus EPS. Investors do not need less information; they need better incentives. Notably, the same CFA survey found that 85% of respondents viewed management incentives and compensation structures as more important drivers of long-term behavior than the reporting cycle itself. Semiannual reporting could also increase volatility. When information is withheld longer, each report carries more surprise. Instead of four smaller information updates, markets get two larger shocks. That can make price discoveries lumpier and more speculative. In the months between reports, investors may lean more heavily on rumors, alternative data, selective management commentary, non-GAAP metrics, or privileged access. That is not a healthier market. It is a less equal one. A better reform would be to keep quarterly reporting while reducing the performative nonsense around it. The SEC could discourage quarterly EPS guidance, simplify immaterial disclosure requirements, streamline Form 10-Q, expand scaled reporting for smaller issuers, and modernize reporting through structured data and technology. That would reduce waste without reducing transparency. The central point is simple: public companies receive access to public capital, and regular public disclosure is part of the bargain. Semiannual reporting would save some companies time and money, but at the cost of weaker transparency, poorer comparability, greater information asymmetry, and more risk for ordinary investors. The SEC should fix short-termism directly, not blindfold the market for an extra three months at a time. The past experiment of the SEC, to have only semi-annual reporting had allowed Fraud (Enron) and Loss by many individual Investors, Do Not Do That Again. Conclusion: At a time when technology allows for more transparency, not less, the SEC should be leveraging modern technologies to make disclosures more accessible and timelier, rather than permitting companies to retreat into a six-month silence. I urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the quarterly reporting standards that ensure a level playing field for all market participants. Thank you for considering this comment. William B Bannier American Citizen Since 1952.

William B Peete — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William B Peete Publicly traded companies should be expected to be as transparent as possible to its shareholders. Quarterly reporting is the maximum period of time companies should be able to go without sharing financial information with fellow owners of the company. The SEC should stick with quarterly reporting requirements or even require monthly or biweekly reporting to maintain or increase a company's transparency to its shareholders. If a company seeks financial help from the public it owes a duty of transparency to the public especially those investors who staked their own money. A person's individual money is sacred, its primary means of survival. A person's ability to protect that asset through access to information he or she has paid for is equally sacred and such right shall not be infringed.

William Cook — Jul 4, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Cook Keep quarterly reporting!

Aaron — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aaron I'm an electrical engineer. The proposed change to semi-annual reporting will greatly disrupt the investing opportunities for real members of our nation's communities. Semi-annual reporting will allow too much time for companies to lax their quality of reporting as this would be driven by knowledge losses/gaps of the company(s) financial health assessments. As an engineer, I rely on timely reporting in my daily work on critical infrastructure and in turn I rely on timely reporting for my retirement choices. If this proposal goes through, not only will you affect everyone's equal footing, but this'll encourage fraud and other adverse actions/ consequences. Please keep quarterly reporting

---

Alannah Farrell — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alannah Farrell I want reporting to be quarterly. That is the most ethical and fair requirement. Alannah Farrell, retired marketing professional.

Alex Elliott — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alex Elliott I am commenting in protest of this proposed rule change. Retail investors rely on quarterly reports to make educated investing decisions, many of which are instrumental in efforts to create some semblance of a retirement fund.

Alice Dugan — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alice Dugan Corporations should undergo scrutiny at a more frequent pace than bi-annually. Quarterly reporting to the U.S. government coincides with quarterly accounting reports that companies do internally and to their stakeholders. A transparent, respectable company should have nothing to hide and should be efficient enough to adhere to quarterly compliance.

Amber Jones — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amber Jones I am Amber Jones, investor and honest taxpayer. I am among the small percentage of honest and responsible citizens who actually pay into the income taxes that fuel the U.S. government, unlike big businesses including those like Enron that receive big taxpayer buyouts and unlike very rich, very greedy corporate executives and other millionaires/ billionaires that weasel out of taxes via dishonesty, squirrely accounting, loopholes, or total lack of accountability, in addition to lax regulations and laws. I fear our country is returning to an era of big business getting away with massive corruption and screwing-the-little-guy. Small investors like me, and millions of poorly paid and compensated employees, suffer from this massive inequality. I urge you to do what you can to keep corporate executives honest, beginning with retaining and enforcing the quarterly reporting and CEO signature. Say no to rule Rule S7-2026-15. Do your job. We taxpayers are paying you to do your job!

An ordinary American and retail investir Just a U.S. citizen and voter — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: An ordinary American and retail investir This is a comment for S7-2026-15: I am deeply troubled by this proposal and am opposed to every aspect of it. This country has shifted from a pension system to self-directed retirement. The vast majority of individuals receive no education on investing unless they take the initiative to learn themselves. This is what I had to do, and becoming financially literate did not come naturally to me. I had a job already, but because of the way America handles (or fails to handle) retirement for its citizens, learning became a second job for me. What I predict as a retail investor for 20 years and with my hard-earned, self-taught knowledge is that: * Those companies choosing to adopt less frequent reporting will signal a lack of transparency and a lesser focus on their prospective and existing shareholders, making them a less attractive investment * Less transparent reporting result in riskier investment decisions for 401ks, 403bs, and TSPs (not to mention the few remaining pension funds); if these funds fail, expect class action lawsuits * The stock market and the economy (the two are not the same) are already suffering because of this administration's volatile, reckless and poorly considered actions. Tariffs are on, off, then on again. Unwanted wars are on, off then on again. There is open and persistent endorsement of risky assets like AI and cryptocurrencies, and decimation of grants that drive research innovation and the knowledge economy. These are creating the perfect storm. Coupled with a lack of transparency, this is certain to create negative economic impacts and hiding this from retail investors will only make it worse. I will remind the SEC that most of the U.S. economy is driven by American consumers. This proposal, along with the other appalling actions this administration is taking will kill your golden goose. Hiding information is the antithesis of free markets and the healthy competition at the heart of American capitalism at its best. It will undoubtedly hurt the American people. What will you do when your consumers can no longer consume, and desperate people join together to defend themselves against this attack on their survival?

Andrew Raclaw — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Raclaw Reporting on a quarterly basis is not onerous for companies. They are collecting data and evaluating their business more frequently (weekly reports, monthly, etc.) Shareholders, who are company owners, should have access to timely information. The information exists inside the company and sharing it can be done efficiently. Cost of creating information is low. Cost of generating and distributing has fallen and AI will reduce further. If the cost was extremely high to generate quarterly reports, US would be disadvantaged and the US markets would suffer. Sharing information less frequently would not shift companies' focus. They already collect information on their businesses on shorter time frames. A focus on growth or results over longer terms (5 years) will not result from shifting to biannual reports. Why not report annually or every two years then? The more frequent reports allow investors to gauge progress towards long term goals. There will still be short term pushes, risk taking, and poor decisions by companies to boos numbers to look good at reporting times biannually. The change would not reduce company behavior to better target long-term company health or goals. The lower frequency reporting reduces market efficiency and competition. Less reporting can mean investors will base decisions on older information increasing inefficiency. Growing companies may receive less investment than would have occurred and companies whose opportunities are diminishing could receive more with less timely information. The US markets would be less attractive to investors. The change will give less reason for investors to choose US investments. Reducing reporting times for US companies diminishes advantage to foreign markets.

Anna Dreher — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anna Dreher Please don't get rid of quarterly reporting. I know you have heard all the arguments already, so I don't want to waste your time. Just please keep reporting quarterly.

Anonymous — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous As an active investor for my adult life, I am strongly opposed to S7-2026-15. I urge the SEC to reject this amendment and maintain current paper-based quarterly reporting. I have many objections to S7-2026-15 outlined below. S7-2026-15: 1) puts U.S. companies at risk through relaxed standards and greater capital costs. Stephen Berger, global head of government and regulatory policy at investment firm Citadel, said, quarterly reporting "allows investors to make more informed investment decisions. That leads to more accurate market valuations, that better optimizes the allocation of capital to the real economy." 2) delays capital investment in U.S. companies. Neil Constable, head of quantitative research and investments at Fidelity, warns that when investors have less information, they'll likely "be slower to build conviction" and to put money into companies, restricting capital flow. Companies need quicker access to funding not slower. 3) puts U.S. economy at risk. Reduced transparency and greater potential volatility can have outsized impact on the economy. Likewise, it is unclear when the semiannual reporting would take place. 4) creates a comparability problem. If some companies report quarterly, some semiannually, and some change schedule over time, investors lose a clean basis for comparing peers. That is important because markets do not value companies in isolation; they compare companies across industries, cycles, margins, balance sheets, and execution. A mixed reporting regime would make earnings seasons less complete, valuation work messier, and underperformance easier to hide. This proposal is ill-advised. Maintain quarterly reporting with option for paper delivery.

Anonymous — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Dear Secretary, I am writing as an individual retail investor to strongly oppose the SEC's proposal to permit optional semi-annual financial reporting for public companies (File No. S7-2026-15). Moving from a quarterly (10-Q) cadence to a six-month window will severely harm market transparency. Individual investors rely on timely, standardized financial disclosures to make informed capital decisions. A six-month "blackout" period provides far too much time for internal business operational metrics, liabilities, or mismanagement to compound out of public view, dramatically increasing market volatility when data is finally released. Furthermore, institutional investors and company insiders already hold massive information advantages through private data channels. Reducing mandatory public disclosures directly worsens the information gap, leaving everyday shareholders at a distinct disadvantage. I urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the mandatory quarterly reporting framework that ensures equal access to market data. Respectfully, A Concerned Retail Investor (Chatsworth, California)

Anonymous — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Dear Commissioners, Please keep quarterly reporting in place. Thank you.

Anonymous — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I am writing as an individual retail investor to strongly oppose Proposed Rule S7-2026-15, which seeks to eliminate quarterly reporting in favor of semiannual filings. Reducing the frequency of financial disclosures severely harms market transparency and compromises investor protection. Retail investors rely heavily on timely, quarterly data to evaluate corporate health and make informed portfolio adjustments. Shifting to a six-month reporting cycle creates massive informational blind spots, increases market volatility around biannual data drops, and disproportionately benefits institutional entities with private data-gathering resources. To maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets, the Commission must preserve the current quarterly reporting framework

---

Anonymous — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I am against reducing the number of required public-company reports from four times a year to just two. At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners and less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Investors require frequent reporting.

Anonymous — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I oppose the proposed semiannual reporting rule. I am approaching retirement and manage some of my own investments. I am not an insider or a professional analyst. I am comfortable reading public filings, but I still have to make decisions from the outside, with the same public information available to everyone else. For me, quarterly reporting is not about short-term trading. It is about watching risk. As I get closer to retirement, I care more about whether a company is becoming riskier, not just whether the stock price is moving. Quarterly reports help me look at cash flow, debt, margins, liquidity, legal issues, controls, and changes in management's explanation of the business. Those details matter because I have less room for error than I did earlier in life. A bad decision near retirement can be harder to recover from. A six-month number is not the same thing as two quarterly reports. The order of events matters. A company that had a strong first quarter and then started to weaken is different from a company that had a weak first quarter and then began to recover. A six-month report can blur those differences. For someone trying to manage risk, that matters. The Commission should analyze that loss of quarter-level granularity. It should also analyze comparability. If some companies continue filing quarterly and others switch to semiannual reporting, investors will be comparing companies on different information schedules. That is not a small inconvenience. It affects valuation, portfolio monitoring, risk control, and confidence in the public markets. The Commission's own release recognizes that longer intervals between mandatory reports may delay material information, increase information asymmetry, and disproportionately affect less sophisticated or less resourced investors who rely more heavily on periodic reports. It also recognizes that increased information asymmetry may reduce liquidity, raise transaction costs, reduce price informativeness, and increase the cost of capital. (Proposing Release at 110–111.) One of my biggest worries is which companies would actually choose this option. I doubt the companies that stop filing quarterly reports will necessarily be a random sample of healthy, easy-to-understand companies. They may be companies with weak analyst coverage, volatile results, high debt, poor controls, pending offerings, recent restatements, complicated business models, or deteriorating performance. Those are exactly the companies where I want current information, not delayed information. The Commission's release says the decision to switch is voluntary and firm-specific and that the Commission cannot predict with certainty how many reporting companies would make the change. It nevertheless assumes 20% adoption, or 1,195 of 5,976 affected issuers, to calculate aggregate monetized effects. (Proposing Release at 125.) That assumption should not do so much work. The Commission should test its conclusions under several adoption rates and, more importantly, several adopter profiles. The Commission should publish a scenario where the adopters are disproportionately high-risk, thinly followed, highly leveraged, or capital-seeking. It should also provide a break-even analysis showing how small an increase in spreads, liquidity costs, investor search costs, reduced analyst coverage, or cost of capital would wipe out the issuer savings. Voluntary earnings releases do not solve the problem. Earnings releases are not Form 10-Q. They vary in content, they are written by management, and the Commission's own release recognizes that earnings releases furnished on Form 8-K are not required to be reviewed by an independent public accountant or comply with the Commission's interim financial-statement requirements. The release also recognizes that earnings releases may vary in content and present information differently from Form 10-Q, including in a more optimistic tone. (Proposing Release at 20, 97.) The Regulation S-X changes are a separate problem. This proposal is not only about periodic reports. The release states that proposed Rule 3-01(c)(2) may result in investors receiving less-current interim financial statements in a registration statement. It gives the example of a calendar-year registrant electing semiannual reporting that could file a registration statement as late as August 13 without including any interim financial statements, while a quarterly filer would include first-quarter interim financial statements. (Proposing Release at 56.) That matters directly to capital formation. If a company is asking investors for money, investors should not receive less-current financial information because the company chose semiannual reporting. The Commission should separately analyze whether issuers could use the election to reduce the currency of offering documents. There is also a statutory question. Exchange Act §13(a), 15 U.S.C. §78m(a), refers to annual reports and quarterly reports. Exchange Act §13(c), 15 U.S.C. §78m(c), allows substitute reports when a required report is inapplicable to specified classes of issuers and the substitute reports are of comparable character. A broad management election does not obviously fit that language. The Commission should explain how issuer-by-issuer self-selection is a "specified class" determination and why one six-month report is comparable in character to two quarter-specific reports. Because courts reviewing agency action decide relevant questions of law and statutory limits, the Commission should address this issue in the final release rather than relying on general policy preference or issuer flexibility. I submit these objections to preserve them for judicial review under the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. §§705 and 706; the Securities Exchange Act, including 15 U.S.C. §§78c(f), 78m, and 78y to the extent applicable; and any other applicable review provision. I object that the rule would be arbitrary, capricious, contrary to law, in excess of statutory authority, or inadequately reasoned unless the Commission addresses all of the following: adverse selection; the 20% adoption assumption; lost quarter-level granularity; comparability between quarterly and semiannual filers; investor search and transaction costs; reduced analyst coverage; cost-of-capital effects; voluntary-disclosure shortcomings; the Regulation S-X offering-document issue; statutory authority under Exchange Act §13; and less harmful alternatives. If the Commission really believes this will work, it should test it first instead of rolling it out broadly. A pilot would be a much safer way to see what actually happens. Any pilot should have objective eligibility limits, a matched control group, required metrics, exclusion of issuers with recent material weaknesses or restatements, an automatic sunset, and a new notice-and-comment process before expansion. The Commission should withdraw the proposal. If it does not withdraw the proposal, it should reopen the comment period after publishing a fuller analysis of adoption, adverse selection, comparability, investor costs, cost of capital, capital-formation effects, Regulation S-X effects, and irreparable harm. If it adopts the rule, it should stay implementation pending judicial review under 5 U.S.C. §705 and any other applicable authority. Once Q1 or Q3 information is skipped, investors cannot get back the lost decision period. Respectfully submitted, Near-retiree and individual investor

---

Anonymous — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Keep reporting quarterly. Everyday investors need more transparency.

Anonymous — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I am retired, and I try to be careful with my savings. I am not trying to trade like a professional or beat Wall Street. I just want to be able to check basic facts before I make decisions that affect my retirement. I oppose the proposal to let public companies replace quarterly Form 10-Q reports with semiannual reports on Form 10-S. Quarterly reports matter to me because retirement decisions often cannot wait six months. People in retirement, like me, sometimes need to sell, rebalance, reduce risk, pay taxes, handle medical costs, or deal with family emergencies. If I have to make a decision in the middle of the year, a report that comes months later does not help me at the time I needed it. The proposal seems to treat this mainly as a paperwork issue for companies. For retired investors, it is an information issue. I understand that companies may prefer to file less often. I also understand that quarterly reporting costs money. But the cost of preparing a report is not the only cost that matters. There is also a cost when ordinary investors have to make decisions with stale information. The Commission's own release recognizes that longer intervals between mandatory reports may delay material information, increase information asymmetry, and disproportionately affect less sophisticated or less resourced investors who rely more heavily on periodic reports. It also recognizes that increased information asymmetry may reduce liquidity, raise transaction costs, reduce price informativeness, and increase the cost of capital. (Proposing Release at 110–111.) That is exactly my concern. Retired people may be careful, but we are still outsiders. We also have less time to recover from a bad decision. Public filings help us check what we are being told by companies, brokers, advisers, newsletters, financial media, or anyone else trying to persuade us about an investment. I do not think "the market will punish companies that disclose too little" is an adequate answer. I cannot punish a company before the missing information affects the market. I cannot force a company to file a quarterly report. I cannot negotiate better disclosure. By the time the market supposedly reacts, ordinary investors may already have bought, sold, held, or voted without the information. Nor are earnings releases an adequate substitute. A company press release is not the same thing as a standardized SEC filing. The Commission's release acknowledges that earnings releases furnished on Form 8-K are not required to be reviewed by an independent public accountant or comply with the Commission's interim financial-statement requirements, and that earnings releases may vary in content and present information differently from Form 10-Q, including in a more optimistic tone. (Proposing Release at 20, 97.) The Commission should specifically analyze retired investors before adopting this rule. Retirees have less time to recover from losses. Retirees may need to sell assets for income rather than wait for a better disclosure window. Retirees also may rely on public filings to check claims made by people with incentives to sell them investments or persuade them to hold risk. Before adopting this rule, the Commission should answer some basic questions: How will retired investors get current, standardized information in Q1 and Q3 if companies elect semiannual reporting? How will the Commission measure the cost of stale information to people who need to sell or rebalance during the missing quarters? What evidence shows that voluntary company disclosures will be complete, comparable, and reliable enough to replace Form 10-Q? What happens if the companies choosing semiannual reporting are not average companies, but weaker, riskier, or more opaque companies? Why should company management decide whether retired investors receive less frequent information? The Commission should not rely on general "flexibility" or paperwork savings unless it explains how the rule is consistent with the statutory focus on investor protection and fair dealing. There is also a statutory issue that should be addressed. Exchange Act §13(a), 15 U.S.C. §78m(a), refers to annual reports and quarterly reports. Exchange Act §13(c), 15 U.S.C. §78m(c), permits substitute reports when a required report is inapplicable to specified classes of issuers and the substitute reports are of comparable character. A company simply preferring not to file quarterly does not obviously make quarterly reporting "inapplicable." One six-month report also does not obviously provide the same kind of information as two separate quarterly reports. I submit these objections for purposes of judicial review under the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. §§705 and 706; the Securities Exchange Act, including 15 U.S.C. §§78c(f), 78m, and 78y to the extent applicable; and any other applicable review provision. I object that the rule would be arbitrary and capricious unless the Commission analyzes retired investors, adverse selection, investor costs, voluntary-disclosure problems, statutory authority, less harmful alternatives, and the irreparable harm caused by the loss of contemporaneous quarterly information. The harm here cannot be fully fixed later. Once a company skips a quarterly report, investors cannot go back in time and make their decisions with the missing information. A later semiannual report cannot undo trades, sales, votes, reallocations, or losses caused by stale information. The Commission should withdraw the proposal and keep mandatory quarterly reporting. If the Commission wants to test this idea, it should use a limited pilot with objective eligibility criteria, public metrics, an automatic sunset, and a new notice-and-comment process before any expansion. If the Commission adopts the rule, it should stay implementation pending judicial review under 5 U.S.C. §705 and any other applicable authority. No company should be permitted to omit a Q1 or Q3 Form 10-Q before the legality of the rule can be reviewed.

Anonymous — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Who does this benefit other than company insiders?

Anonymous — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous As an assistant in a law firm who is trying to save up for my family and is surrounded by people who buys stock and participate in the market, transparency is of utmost importance. We demand quarterly reporting for there is already leniency for big corportations. Changing the reporting to biannually will only give big corporations advantages as more fraud will become easier while individuals will fly blind during the six months and our savings has a higher chance of dwindling, making the taxpayers hold the brunt of the risk. If we're going to have a free market, then give us a free market that is transparent and has equity, not a breeding grounds for monopolies. Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Anonymous Attorney, retired — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous As you know, pensions are now a rare thing and personal investments in the stock market are now the vehicle used by the vast majority of people to save for retirement. To allow us to make informed investment decisions, we need more information from publicly traded companies, not less or less frequent. A lot can change, good or bad, in the market place in three months that affect the value of a company. Profit reports provide an important window into the health of the companies we invest in and an important piece of information we need to make the best decisions we can with our assets. Please do not alter the current requirement of quarterly profit statements. Thank you.

Anonymous Investor — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Keep quarterly reporting

---

Anonymous None — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Do NOT implement this proposed rule! There is currently too much of a lack of transparency in government a it stands.

Anonymous None — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous The USA does not need another Enron disaster…Keep the reports quarterly…

Anthony Investor — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anthony I'm writing to recommend SEC does not alter the quartly reporting and switch to semi annual. Quarterly reports prevent six-month information blackouts that leave everyday investors in the dark while institutional traders use alternative data.A quarterly cadence forces management to stay disciplined and addresses operational problems before they compound into major crises. The current U.S. quarterly standard provides the transparency and liquidity that makes American capital markets the most trusted in the world.

Anuj Kaul — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anuj Kaul Quarterly earnings forces companies to comply and present data which is covered with a lot of fraudulent information which gets exposed every quarter .

imagine this happening every 6 months and investors waiting a year to uncover fraud . Company data should be public and accessible whenever needed

---

Asif Khan CEO Shacknews — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Asif Khan This rule is bad for transparency. This will impact the volatility of the stock market in a negative way, and it will make it harder for individual investors to make informed stock purchase and sale decisions. This is the most anti-investor rule I have seen proposed by the SEC since the repeal of the Uptick Rule.

Barbara Bendl Retired University Mathematics Lecturer — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Bendl Please keep quarterly reporting. Plenty can already be hidden in that time frame. I have a very small 401k account to last me for hopefully many years yet and I can't afford to be scammed by any company. Barbara Bendl 78 year old retiree

---

Barbara Statas Retired Senior Director of Financial Reporting & Forecasting — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Statas Dear SEC, As the former Senior Director of Financial Reporting and Forecasting for a 7-billion-dollar food service and facilities management company, I would like to voice my objection to the new rule being proposed to allow publicly traded companies to switch from mandatory quarterly reporting (Form 10-Q) to semi-annual reporting. Any well-run company is already producing financial statements every month (or 13 four-week periods a year) for Management's internal purposes. Furthermore, in my experience, since semi-annual reporting will be required at a minimum, there is not a large opportunity to reduce staffing levels since external SEC reporting is somewhat of a specialized area within the overall finance department. In other words, the employees that specialize in SEC reporting are not necessarily well versed in other financial/operational management areas such as tax return preparation, cash management, financial ROI analysis, etc., and since the external reporting timetable does not vary, they are not reliably free to be assigned to other projects within the company. I can also tell you that senior management did not spend two weeks out of every quarter focused on this as some have suggested. Several staffers in the finance department certainly did, but senior management most definitely did not – that was more like 2 days. Perhaps some of the current reporting requirements could be streamlined for Q1 and Q3, but I fail to see how allowing companies to report less often to their shareholders is a benefit to those investors/owners. And in a world where some companies will choose to report quarterly and some semi-annually, it seems that there could be more confusion or lack of comparability for investors. Just an example as to why more frequent reporting is a good idea… my local municipal water company just announced they are switching from quarterly billing to monthly billing… why?... to give residents who may unknowingly be racking up a huge bill due to an undetected waterline leak the ability to catch and mitigate the problem before it becomes even more expensive for them. That's great – a new policy that actually helps the public! So akin to early leak detection, in today's fast-moving business environment, including the impact of emerging technologies, on-again/off-again tariffs, etc., it seems incredible that investors would really be served by allowing publicly traded companies (the emphasis on "public") to report basic financial information less frequently than they have been for over 50 years. If you are determined to go down the path of letting companies opt for less-frequent reporting, perhaps a case could be made for baby steps -- keeping the public Q3 10-Q reporting requirements (and maybe streamlining them) but allowing companies to skip the public Q1 10-Q reports since they would have recently completed the more robust prior year-end (Q4 10-K) reporting. Thank you for your consideration!

Becky Lafrancois Professor of Economics and Finance — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Becky Lafrancois I am opposed to this proposal. Disclosing financial information on a regular basis is essential for investors, lenders, and other stakeholders to make informed decisions. The current quarterly system helps to aid thos process and I crease the accessibility of Information. Reduci g reporting g frequency will limit market efficiency and impair stakeholders. This rule . seems ti be solely of benefit to corporations.

Benjamin Eide — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Benjamin Eide This is an outrageous breach of trust. Keep companies accountable to it's shareholders . BBE

Bernard Booth Jr — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bernard Booth Jr First, no corporation will do quarterly anymore. They are not going to do extra work. It reduces Executive accountability by needing to report less. President suggesting of increasing investment has proven in effective in UK. It has had the 6 month rule for 12years. No investment or long term corporate planning has changed.

Betty Fang — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Betty Fang Allowing semi annual reporting provides insufficient transparency for investors.

Bill - long time investor Electric Utilities Provider — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill - long time investor We don't need to make it any easier for company executives to manipulate or withhold pertinent information from its investors. We need MORE transparency and accountability. NOT less. This proposal will provide NO benefit to the investor. It only protects the executive leadership when time are difficult. And withholding information like that could hurt a much larger population. A population that put their faith in said leadership as well as placed thier own financial resources in their hands for solid and ethical management. Those investors deserve full transparency so they have to opportunity to move those investments if the current leadership is not able or choosing to manage their support well.

Bill Lane — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Lane I am very concerned about this rule change and the resulting lack of transparency that could seriously harm investors. Please block this change and keep quarterly reporting in place permanently.

Brian — Jul 3, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian I am against changing from quarterly reporting to semiannual reporting. Leave the rules as is

---

Brian Bennett Registered representative — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Bennett As a 50 year industry professional I believe investors will be exposed to additional risks and harm with less disclosure. Companies can stay private if they don't want to report.

Brian Daly Retired military and civil servant — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Daly Since when do we allow corporations do what they want?? Keep reporting quarterly! No more bought elections either!

C Hale — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C Hale We the American people RESPECTFULLY NEED the SEC to keep the quarterly reporting structure NOT BIANNUAL. That's just too long to have your money in the dark. Especially these days!

C. Shea — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C. Shea Continuing quarterly reports ensures consistent transparency. Historically, the market performs better under supervision. Our economic environment is already unpredictable. Decreased accountability would be detrimental to the market results.

Carlo Salgado-Russo LCSW — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carlo Salgado-Russo Carlo Salgado-Russo LCSW, Clinical Coordinator/ Clinical Social Worker / Therapist / Business Owner. I am nearing retirement and having a clear idea of how the companies I invest in are doing is very important to me and my family.

Carol A. Wallace — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carol A. Wallace I object to the change. Keep it at quarterly reports. I want more transparency, not less. We don't need another Enron.

Carole Miller — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carole Miller I and my investment club of about 15 people use quarterly filings on companies to to assist us in determining if they have the criteria that we use to judge ,if they are a possible choice for us to invest in. Please Do Not take the quarterly filings away. Carole Miller

---

Carolyn Day Jackson Retired teacher — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carolyn Day Jackson As a retired teacher my monthly SSI is roughly one quarter of my husband's. Fortunately I have a small investment account from another job which is a lifesaver at Christmas. Allowing companies to report every six months will lead to another Enron-type disaster. Keep the quarterly reporting.

CARON E TSAPATSARIS — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: CARON E TSAPATSARIS Yes, required quarterly financial reporting should continue. I was a finance executive (now retired) in banking for almost 30 years. Frequent transparency into the financial results necessary and fair for the public especially investors. Risk to healthy financial results can occur more frequently than every 6 months. Imagine if we had delayed window into the 2008 banking financial crisis as well as the S&,L debacle.

Catherine Farrell — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Farrell Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this proposed new rule. I urge the SEC to retain quarterly reporting requirements. Small investors like me depend on timely public information to make informed investment decisions. Semi-annual reporting means small investors will get less information more slowly and those with inside information will have more time to dump bad stocks and bonds. Semi-annual reporting would also give fraud more time to grow before it can be detected. Please keep quarterly reporting.

Catherine Naghitorabi retired — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Naghitorabi This rule will jeopardize so many people's hard-earned retirement savings. Mismanagement and bad faith actions can have much more time to damage our investments and the economy before they are made public. Do not enact this rule.

Catherine Walter Attorney (semi-retired) — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Walter Please consider my opposition to the change to quarterly reporting on the grounds that such change would provide an unfair advantage to corporate insiders. Ordinary investors need more transparency, not less.

CHAN YIU CHUNG Personnal Investor — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: CHAN YIU CHUNG Quarterly financial disclosure is essential to sustain market transparency and let shareholders / stakeholders to have adequate knowledge for making investment decision.

Chris Swanson — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Swanson I am a small self-directed investor with a financial background. This illogical move would reduce transparency to both professional analysts and small investors like myself. This gives insiders a huge advantage over the public. I look at not only earnings, but margins, DSO, dilution and other write downs to help make decisions. This is a very bad policy, investors have a right to know and not fly blind for six months. True, most of the market are panicans and sheep that react to short term changes, but thats the system. DON'T CHANGE IT! And seriously? You are going to list my address, phone number and email publicly so I am overwhelmed with spam. That's intentionally reducing public comment.

Christina Drews — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christina Drews The SEC should keep reporting requirements to quarterly to prevent the chance of hidden fraud.

Christina Robbins — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christina Robbins Dear SEC , I am against making the quarterly reports voluntary . The SEC's proposal to adopt semiannual reporting damages market transparency and increases risks for individual investors by widening the information gap between insiders and the public. Evidence from the CFA Institute indicates that reduced reporting frequency does not impact long-term corporate investment, meaning the proposal sacrifices transparency without tangible benefits. The shift, which disproportionately impacts oversight of smaller companies, marks a step backward from the level playing field fostered by Regulation FD. Please maintain quarterly reporting to protect investor interests.

Christine Corr — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Corr Please do not allow semi annual reporting. So much transparency will be lost and it will significantly impact investors. The slow erosion of the safety controls in our economy is hurting Americans. Please don't let this be another bad decision in favor of corporations that would be able to hide their true financial picture from the public and investors for months.

Christine Dvonch — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Dvonch I strongly support continuing the practice of quarterly reporting for all companies. Reducing the so-called “burden” of reporting quarterly is dangerous and unnecessary. As an investor, I don’t want to be limited to data that is six months old. Three months is long enough. Today’s markets require speed and agility. This data is especially important for individual investors like me - corporate/professional investors already have access to companies and information that we don’t have. Don’t widen that gap. Give us the data we need - quarterly.

Clint Martin None — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clint Martin I support the Commission's proposal to permit Exchange Act registrants that meet the definition of an investment company under FASB Accounting Standards Codification Topic 946 (Financial Services - Investment Companies) to file reports on a semi-annual, rather than quarterly, basis. These pooled investment vehicles are fundamentally different from operating companies. Their primary activities consist of investing in portfolios of financial instruments rather than operating a business, and investors generally evaluate their performance based on portfolio returns, net asset value, and investment strategy. Investors also receive regular disclosures regarding portfolio holdings, valuations, and other key information through existing regulatory reporting requirements. Aligning the reporting frequency for these entities with that of registered investment companies under the Investment Company Act of 1940 would create a more consistent and coherent regulatory framework for investment companies, regardless of their legal structure. It would also eliminate unnecessary differences in reporting requirements between economically similar investment vehicles. In addition, 10-Q quarterly reports for Topic 946 investment companies often contain limited incremental information beyond what investors already receive through other required disclosures, while imposing significant preparation, audit review, and compliance costs on registrants. Permitting semi-annual reporting would reduce these costs and reporting burdens without materially diminishing the quality or timeliness of information available to investors. Overall, I believe the proposed amendment appropriately balances investor protection with regulatory efficiency by tailoring reporting requirements to the unique characteristics of investment companies and harmonizing the Commission's reporting framework for similarly situated pooled investment vehicles.

Courtney Meyer — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Courtney Meyer Please keep quarterly reporting. Americans deserve transparency from corporations we are investing our retirement savings in. Going away from this does a huge disservice to the average person. Courtney Meyer Colorado Springs CO

Craig Hartwell No s — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Hartwell Dear Commissioners, Please keep quarterly reporting requirements in place.

Dale Kaff — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dale Kaff Please keep quarterly reporting for updated information for investors to be able to make timely decisions.

Daniel Gibson — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Gibson Hello, I am not in favor of semiannual reporting. I believe quarterly reporting is an important measure for maintaining investor transparency. Thank you.

Darrin Yee — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darrin Yee Reporting should remain quarterly. Investors need to have transparency.

David — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David You don't need my name, title, or location for this. I'm a U.S. citizen and am old enough to remember the Enron scandal as well as others. The quarterly reporting rule is to try and keep things in check. Going back to 6 months would be a disaster and allow for too much fudging of numbers. This reporting time frame (quarterly) must remain in place. I would pull every nickel I have in the stock market out if this rule were to go back to the twice a year requirement! Do the right thing and leave the requirement as is!!!

David — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Hello, I have $100,000 in an investment account. I would like the data, we would all like the data. Please continue doing your job. And stop bending the knee to your corporate sponsors. Stop reducing the availability of resources and knowledge to the average consumer for the benefit of a few rich assholes. If you’re gonna do absolutely jack shit to stop corporate, let alone congressional insider Trading, then you could at least continue to give the average person quarterly not even more often updates on how their money is performing in the market. It is not that complicated. Do your job, please or hire people that will.

David Asekoff — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Asekoff Quarterly reports are quite effective. For a century they've informed the government, investors and the board of directors the true and accurate health and risks of a company. Changing the rules to require less reporting greatly increases the chance of malfeasance and makes investing more risky. At a time when Americans are invested in the stock market at a greater percentage than ever before and it's very accessible, you want the public to be well informed. In short, switching to less frequent reporting doesn't benefit anyone and certainly not the companies itself. These reporting processes work very well and they shouldn't be changed

---

David Hitzrot High School Math Teacher — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Hitzrot This is a terrible idea for those of us who hope to retire off of making safe long term investments as the lack of information will increase investment risk across the board

---

David LALIRE — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David LALIRE As an individual investor residing in France, I invest in U.S.-listed companies in part because the 10-Q allows me, whether directly or through the analysis and commentary it generates, to follow these companies' performance on a regular and close basis. I would feel far less confident investing in U.S. companies if I could only access their results twice a year, and this would very likely lead me to limit or reduce my allocations to U.S. equity markets. In my view, this reporting frequency is a meaningful factor in the trust that international investors place in U.S. markets, and reducing it could undermine that trust.

David S. The Motley Fool Community — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David S. I am opposed to reducing the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Taking the reports away makes everyone less informed. Less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. My vote is to keep the number of public-company reports at four times a year.

Debra Kohn — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Debra Kohn Please continue quarterly reporting. I worry that in 6 months things can go terribly wrong. I am a senior and count on my RMD's. Debra Kohn

---

DENISE B EDWARDS Physical therapist — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: DENISE B EDWARDS Please do not do this. The people investing in the stock market whose retirement depends on the performance of these companies deserve the transparency of quarterly reports to make the best, most informed decisions regarding their livelihood. Frankly, much like communism, I do not wish to experiment with something that has not worked before and risk it blowing up in our faces.

---

dion contreras The Motley Fool Community — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: dion contreras Please keep financial reporting requirements to four quarter per fiscal year.

Don Wall Loan Officer — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Don Wall We are living in an era of reduction of consumer protections at the same time as risks to consumers are becoming greater. As companies get larger and larger and more complex it's even more important that we as consumers/ investors have financial information available more than 2 times a year. The fact they we are even considering less reporting is crazy in my opinion. Less reporting will open millions of Americans up to increased chances of corporate fraud and the damage that will result from it. You only need to look as recently as the Enron debacle to see how this could be a huge problem. I'm asking you to please keep quarterly reporting as the standard for reporting in the United States.

Doris Butler — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Doris Butler Keep the reporting quarterly and keep CEO's accountable.

Doris Szejna Retired Educator and Marines Veteran — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Doris Szejna I have spent my life trying to keep my head above financial stress the quarter reports helped me make sound decisions in investing my 401 and pension. I am a 76 year old veteran not a wealthy investor but what is left of middle class who lives comfortably Please keep Quarterly reporting Please

---

Doug Wandell — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Doug Wandell I DO NOT support this change. I want MORE visibility in this time of corporate and political corruption, not less.

Dustin Dash — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dustin Dash To Whom It May Concern, I am writing as an individual retail investor to strongly oppose the Commission's proposal to make quarterly reporting optional for public companies (File Number S7-2026-15). While I understand the desire to reduce compliance costs for small issuers, reducing reporting frequency to a semiannual cadence directly harms individual investors. Six months is far too long to wait for transparent, standardized financial data. This change will widen the gap between institutional insiders and everyday retail investors, drastically increase market volatility when data is finally released, and give struggling companies too much time to obscure negative material changes. Mandatory quarterly Form 10-Q filings provide the necessary transparency and guardrails that ensure market integrity. If a company chooses to access public capital, they must accept the responsibility of regular accountability to their shareholders. I urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the current mandatory quarterly reporting framework. Respectfully, Dustin Dash

---

E. Ashe — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: E. Ashe Less accountability would make even more egregious errors! It’s already bad enough CEO’s do not pay fair share in taxes and labor is shipped oversees to make the companies more money and increase global warming. If anything, make them sign six times a year!

E.F. Clergy — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: E.F. I request that the SEC continue quarterly reporting. A lot can go wrong in 6 months and open things up to corruption and fraud. We need more transparency not less; the small amount of supposed savings benefit the executives at the loss to the ordinary investors

---

Edmund Cooper Project Managgr — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-26-18 From: Edmund Cooper I am commenting as a regular member of the public who is trained in cybersecurity and risk assessment. In cybersecurity, you cannot build or maintain trust if you only share a partial risk picture or selectively disclose what is convenient. The same principle applies to public company financial reporting: investors and the public need a full, consistent view of a company’s risk profile to understand what is really going on and to support a healthy economy for everyone – not just for one company or one group of insiders. After the market abuses that led to the 1929 crash, Congress passed the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and gave the SEC authority to require ongoing reports so investors would have a continuing view of a company’s financial position and risks, not just one-off headlines. The Exchange Act has been on the books since 1934, but the SEC did not formally standardize quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q until 1970, which shows how long it can take to overcome resistance to basic transparency. That history matters: we already saw what happens when disclosure is left too much to management's discretion, and the answer back then was to build a regular, standardized reporting system so the public would not be the last to know. Weakening those reporting requirements now would start to undo that hard-learned lesson and move us back toward the same trappings of selective disclosure and unchecked greed. Under the federal securities laws, domestic public companies are required to file annual reports on Form 10-K and quarterly reports on Form 10-Q, which together provide a continuing view of the company's financial position during the year. Form 10-Q includes unaudited financial statements and other information about the company's financial condition and risks for each of the first three fiscal quarters, and it is a core part of that framework. Quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q is already the bare minimum and has been in place for a long time for a reason: it provides a regular, standardized snapshot of a company's financial condition, the risks it faces, and its operating results so that markets can function on shared, reliable information. If an organization is well run and organized, providing a complete Form 10-Q each quarter that accurately reflects its risk profile should be entirely achievable as a basic responsibility of being publicly traded. In cybersecurity and risk management, we follow established frameworks that expect continuous monitoring and honest reporting of weaknesses so leaders can make informed risk decisions. Under those approaches, including NIST-style continuous monitoring, the standard is not "once a quarter" – it is ongoing awareness, regular updates, and a clear picture of the current risk posture. For us, that kind of visibility is not optional; it is built into how we are supposed to operate. The financial reporting system should work the same way in spirit. Letting short earnings releases or marketing-style communications furnished on Form 8-K stand in for a full Form 10-Q would move in the opposite direction by shifting the focus from objective, standardized disclosure to curated messaging that makes executives more comfortable but leaves everyone else with less information. In cybersecurity, hiding or downplaying issues only leads to bigger failures later and destroys trust when they eventually surface. The same is true for financial risk: reducing the depth or frequency of required reporting does not solve short-term thinking, it just makes problems harder for the public to see and easier for those at the top to manage for their own benefit, often without a clear picture of the true risk profile being shared broadly. If we loosen these requirements simply to keep the heads of companies happy, we risk repeating the very patterns of overconfidence, opacity, and greed that earlier generations tried to fix, and we leave consumers and investors exposed while those at the top are insulated. Robust, standardized quarterly reporting through Form 10-Q supports trust in the overall market and benefits everyone, from small individual investors to large institutions. It is not only about Fortune 500 companies, although they clearly benefit from a level playing field and sustained confidence. Weakening Form 10-Q requirements or allowing them to be effectively replaced by selective earnings releases would move in the wrong direction by obscuring information to keep the people at the top more comfortable, instead of keeping the full picture of a company's risk profile visible so that accountability and informed decision making can occur across the entire economy.

Edward Brinkman investor — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edward Brinkman I am against this proposed amendment. This proposal to allow reduced reporting frequency opposes a historical trend of increasing transparency that the SEC has embraced since its inception. The SEC has long understood that more frequent disclosures gives corporate insiders less of an unfair advantage over public investors, which encourages participation. I consider reduced transparency with grave suspicion. It undermines public trust. It allows for a greater degree of bad behavior, reduced opportunity for prompt rule enforcement, and increases the overall risk in the market. The arguments in favor of this change are weak: 1. To reduce compliance cost. Reporting should be far less costly today than it was when quarterly reporting was first mandated in 1970, due to computerized record keeping. 2. To reduce management distraction. It is not a distraction to know how one's business is doing. It doesn't seem reasonable that a well-run company asks that question internally less often than quarterly. 3. To discourage prioritizing short-term earnings over long-term strategy. While this is a legitimate concern, it has more to do with perverse incentives created by executive compensation schemes than reporting frequency. Besides, a semi-annual time horizon would do little to encourage serious long-term thinking. 4. To make the public company model more attractive to businesses. What kind of businesses would be more attracted to an environment of reduced transparency and reduced enforcement, and do we really want shady businesses like that populating our investment markets? I believe this change would do more harm than good, and the harm would be inflicted on individual investors - the very group most in need of protection from unfair advantage and deception, protection it is the SEC's mission to provide.

Elizabeth J Benn Sergeant Major, US Army, Retired — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth J Benn It is ridiculous to assert that companies need a break. History clearly proves the need for quarterly reporting. We the People will not be run by corporate greed. We will not be taken advantage of.

Elveria H Walton — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elveria H Walton It is in the best interest of our country to continue quarterly reporting for public companies currently required to provide and sign such reports. Those reviews are necessary to keep the public informed of any irregularities and improprieties. I do not believe this can be achieved through semi-annual reporting.

Elwood Balog — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elwood Balog Maintain CURRENT requirements.

Emilio Velez Sales / Investor — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Emilio Velez I am against making this change. Companies should be required to file quarterly earnings reports .

Eugene Hoover Retired - Financial Institution Controller, Auditor, Director of Financial Analysis — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eugene Hoover Simply unbelievable. I have to question seriously the real root of this proposal. The only sector of the US Economy that will be adversely affected by this proposal is the private investment sector. It is a conspiracy established to further attack and weaken the financial information space. If anything, quarterly reporting systems should be further strengthened through enhanced automation and integration at the reporting identity level. The net effect would be less capital and effort expended in production of quarterly reporting. Additionally, similar effort should be expended in refining and standardizing the forward looking components. Doing what the “Europeans” are doing is a key reason why the US Markets should avoid this proposal like a plaque. There are evil forces at play in today’s world. Beware the Middle Eastern influence that believes the Great Satan should be destroyed. Many financial leaders, sadly adhere to a theocratic decision based rationalism. I say NO to this proposal, no matter how well meaning it sounds on the surface.

F Simmons — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: F Simmons I strongly urge the SEC to keep quarterly reporting in order to keep companies honest and accountable.

F. With — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: F. With Do the right thing. Don't be shady. What more motivation do you need!?

Financial Reporting Policy Committee (Melissa F. Lewis-Western - Chair, Sudipta Basu, Michael T. Durney, Mary S. Hill and George Ruch), Financial Accounting and Reporting Section of the American Accounting Association — Jul 3, 2026
July 3, 2026
Paul S. Atkins
SEC Chairman
100 F Street NE,
Washington, D.C. 20549-0213
File No. S7-2026-15
Semiannual Reporting
Dear Chairman Atkins,
Thank you for the opportunity to comment on File No. S7-2026-15, the SEC's proposal regarding semiannual reporting for Exchange Act reporting companies (hereafter "the proposal" or "the proposed amendments"). The Financial Reporting Policy Committee of the American Accounting Association's Financial Accounting and Reporting Section, which is charged with responding to requests for comment from regulators on matters related to financial reporting, asked us to respond to this invitation for comment. The views expressed in this letter are our own and do not necessarily represent those of the American Accounting Association or the Financial Accounting and Reporting Section.
Executive Summary
After reviewing the proposal and the relevant academic literature, we conclude that the expected benefits of semiannual reporting are uncertain and likely modest, while the potential costs are more substantial and better supported by existing evidence.
The proposal is motivated in part by the belief that reducing reporting frequency may encourage more companies to access and remain in U.S. public markets. However, the academic evidence suggests that broader economic, regulatory, and legal developments—including the growth of private capital markets, increased compliance obligations, and heightened litigation risk—are more important determinants of companies' listing decisions than the frequency of periodic reporting. Consequently, academic research provides limited evidence that semiannual reporting alone would meaningfully increase IPO activity or reduce public-company exits.
Similarly, while semiannual reporting may generate some direct compliance cost savings, the savings quantified in the proposal appear relatively modest and may continue to decline as advances in technology and artificial intelligence reduce the costs of preparing financial reports. By contrast, reducing reporting frequency is likely to diminish the consistency, comparability, and timeliness of financial information, thereby weakening the public information environment through higher information-processing costs, greater information asymmetry, and increased reliance on private information channels. Although investors may partially price-protect against increased information risk, less frequent reporting could still weaken the public information environment by reducing analyst and intermediary information production, increasing reliance on private information, lowering market liquidity, increasing trading frictions, and affecting price efficiency. These effects are likely to be more pronounced for investors who rely primarily on standardized public disclosures, including many retail and less-sophisticated investors. Less frequent reporting may also influence managers' real decisions.

In sum, the available evidence does not provide strong support for the proposition that the benefits of semiannual reporting would outweigh its direct costs. We acknowledge that opportunity-cost savings may be significant. However, because neither the proposal nor the academic literature provides clear evidence on the magnitude of these benefits or the extent to which they would arise broadly, it is difficult to assess whether they would offset the accompanying costs of semiannual reporting. We therefore encourage the SEC to carefully weigh the potential reduction in reporting frequency against the likely effects on the public information environment, market functioning, and the efficient allocation of capital before adopting the proposed amendments.

The remainder of this letter proceeds as follows. We first evaluate the proposal’s claimed benefits, including its potential effects on companies’ incentives to enter and remain in public markets, as well as its effects on direct compliance costs, managerial short-termism, and proprietary disclosure costs. We then examine the proposal’s likely costs through the lenses of consistency, comparability, and timeliness—three qualitative characteristics of useful financial information that are closely linked to information asymmetry. Throughout, we discuss the implications for investors, information intermediaries, and capital-market participants and explain why the available evidence raises questions about whether the proposal's anticipated benefits would outweigh its information-related costs. We prioritize academic research on interim reporting frequency in the U.S. and markets with similar institutional features to focus on the most relevant evidence. We conclude with suggestions for implementation should the SEC decide to move forward with semiannual reporting, followed by responses to selected questions posed in the proposal.

Sincerely,

Melissa F. Lewis-Western Professor, Committee Chair
Brigham Young University Marriott School of Business melissa.western@byu.edu
Mary S. Hill
Associate Professor
Kennesaw State University School of Accountancy mary.hill@kennesaw.edu
Sudipta Basu
Professor
Temple University
Fox School of Business
sudipta.basu@temple.edu
George Ruch
Assistant Professor
University of Denver Daniels College of Business

george.ruch@du.edu
Michael T. Durney
Assistant Professor
University of Iowa
Tippie College of Business
michael-durney@uiowa.edu

Table of Contents
Executive Summary 1
I. Background and Context - Broader Determinants of Public-Market Participation..... 5
A. Growth of private capital 5
B. Elevated litigation risk 5
II. Potential Benefits of Semiannual Reporting 6
A. Public market participation 6
1. The JOBS Act 6
2. The SOX Act 7
B. Lower direct compliance costs 8
C. Reduced managerial focus on short-term results 9
D. Reduced or delayed disclosure of proprietary information 10
III. Potential Costs of Semiannual Reporting 11
A. Reduced consistency..... 11
B. Reduced comparability 14
C. Reduced timeliness 16
D. Potential mitigating mechanisms 17
IV. Recommendations 18
A. Recommendation 1 - Mitigate consistency costs..... 19
B. Recommendation 2 - Require timely notification of changes in reporting frequency 20
C. Recommendation 3 - Enhance event-driven disclosure requirements 21
D. Recommendation 4 - Adopt a phased implementation or conduct further analysis 21
Appendix- Responses to Selected Questions from the Proposal on Semiannual Reporting..... 23
Q1. Optional semiannual reporting versus required quarterly reporting 23
Q2. Mandatory semiannual reporting with optional quarterly reporting 24
Q3. Eligibility criteria or pilot program for semiannual reporting 24
Q6. Effects on comparing same-company performance over time 25
Q10. Changes in interim reporting frequency during the fiscal year 25
Q14. Content of Form 10-S relative to Form 10-Q 27
Q15. Reducing Form 10-Q burden as an alternative to semiannual reporting 27
Q17. Effects on business operations, growth, and long-term strategy 28
Q30. Fourth-quarter and quarterly-disaggregated financial information 28
Q48. Potential investor benefits of semiannual reporting flexibility 28
Q49. Potential investor costs of semiannual reporting flexibility 29
Q55. Stock price volatility around semiannual releases 29

Q56. Effects of reduced analyst coverage 30
Q58. Valuation and cost-of-capital effects 30
Relevant References Not Included in the Proposal 32

I. Background and Context – Broader Determinants of Public-Market Participation

A central premise of the proposal is that reducing the frequency of periodic reporting may encourage more companies to access and remain in U.S. public markets. Consistent with this view, SEC Chairman Paul Atkins noted that the flexibility provided by the proposal "might reduce some of the burdens of being a public company and potentially influence a company's decision to become or remain public." Evaluating this claim requires considering the broader factors that have contributed to the decline in the number of publicly listed U.S. companies. As discussed in the following sections, the available evidence suggests that this decline has been driven by a range of economic, regulatory, and legal developments that are likely more important determinants of companies' listing decisions than periodic reporting frequency alone.

A. Growth of private capital

In normal market conditions, public capital markets offer cheaper financing than bank loans or private equity. But after the early-2000s downturn and the 2008 financial crisis, prolonged low interest rates and quantitative easing increased the supply of private capital, leading companies to rely more heavily on private markets.1 Zingales (2009) documents the rapid growth of Rule 144A private placements, which expanded from a negligible source of financing to a market rivaling or exceeding traditional IPO issuance. The growth of private equity and private debt markets likely has reduced the relative appeal of public listings by offering companies alternative financing sources without the costs and regulatory burdens of being public.2

B. Elevated litigation risk

The Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 increased oversight and litigation exposure for executives, directors, and auditors, and prior research finds that financial reporting became more conservative following its enactment (Lobo and Zhou 2006). More broadly, Mahoney (2009) argues that evolving enforcement practices increased the perceived legal risks of being a public company, highlighting the expanded use of state securities laws, such as New York's Martin Act, and changes in prosecutorial practices that increased pressure on public companies and their advisors.

Recent evidence suggests that some of these growing legal risks are tied directly to financial reporting standards used by public companies and, in particular, fair value estimates. Everard and St. Pierre (2024) document that securities class-action lawsuits against auditors increasingly focus on alleged GAAP violations involving fair value estimates. Given that securities class-action settlements and judgments often exceed

1 See, for example, https://fred.stlouisfed.org/series/fedfunds.

2 The SEC's current proposal (S7-2026-17), Registered Offering Reform, would relax several requirements associated with registered offerings. Most notably, the proposed preemption of state blue-sky registration requirements could reduce the regulatory and compliance advantages of private placements relative to public offerings, potentially shifting firms' financing choices toward the public capital markets.

II. SEC fines and penalties, the expected legal costs associated with being a public company have likely increased over time and may represent an important factor in companies' decisions to access or remain in U.S. public markets.

Overall, the evidence suggests that the decline in the number of publicly listed U.S. companies is attributable to a broad set of economic, regulatory, and legal factors. Accordingly, the effects of semiannual reporting should be evaluated within this broader context.

Potential Benefits of Semiannual Reporting

The proposal identifies four principal benefits of semiannual reporting: increased public market participation, lower compliance costs, reduced managerial short-termism, and reduced proprietary costs. As discussed in this section, the existing literature provides limited evidence that reducing reporting frequency alone would materially generate the anticipated benefits. Taken together, the magnitude of these potential benefits remains uncertain.

A. Public market participation

At its core, the proposal suggests that reducing the frequency of mandatory reporting may lower the costs associated with public-company status and, at the margin, increase the attractiveness of becoming or remaining a public company. In support of this argument, the proposal cites prior research indicating that disclosure and compliance costs can influence companies' decisions to enter or remain in public markets, including studies documenting increased IPO activity following JOBS Act accommodations and increased going-private or going-dark activity following SOX-related compliance costs. The regulatory changes examined in the cited studies primarily affected companies' internal governance, oversight, and compliance processes rather than the frequency of periodic financial disclosures. As a result, a careful review of the cited literature provides limited support for the proposition that semiannual reporting alone would materially encourage companies to go public sooner or remain public longer.

1. The JOBS Act

The academic evidence from the JOBS Act does not provide strong support for the claim that reducing the frequency of quarterly reporting would materially increase companies' propensity to go public or remain public. Although Dambra et al. (2015) document an increase in IPO activity following the JOBS Act, the authors attribute this increase primarily to the Act's de-risking provisions, such as confidential filings and "testing the waters", which reduced proprietary disclosure and IPO withdrawal costs. In contrast, reducing the frequency of periodic reporting more closely resembles the JOBS Act's de-burdening provisions, which reduced ongoing disclosure and compliance requirements, but were not the primary factors associated with the increased IPO activity.

Consistent with the rationale underlying the proposal, Lewis and White (2023) compare biotech IPOs before and after the enactment of the JOBS Act and find that reduced regulatory and compliance burdens were associated with a substantial increase in biotech IPO activity. However, the study does not isolate the effects of de-risking provisions from those of de-burdening provisions. As a result, the evidence does not provide a direct basis for assessing the likely effects of reducing reporting frequency. Moreover, subsequent research that is not referenced in the proposal, raises important concerns regarding the costs associated with reduced disclosure. Specifically, the reductions in disclosure requirements permitted by the JOBS Act can increase information asymmetry, investor uncertainty, and perceived reporting risk. While investors may partially price-protect against these risks, reduced disclosure can still impair the information environment by increasing trading frictions and reducing the usefulness of public information (Barth et al. 2017; Chaplinsky et al. 2017; Cather et al. 2026).

Together, the existing JOBS Act literature provides limited evidence that semiannual reporting alone would meaningfully encourage companies to enter or remain in the public markets. Moreover, these studies suggest that reductions in disclosure requirements degrade the public information environment in ways that increase trading frictions, reduce price efficiency, weaken monitoring, and impair capital allocation., potentially offsetting or diminishing any benefits associated with lower compliance costs.

2. The SOX Act

The proposal also relies on the assumption that the costs associated with SOX encouraged companies to exit the public market and that these costs are comparable to those associated with the frequency of periodic reporting. To evaluate this argument, it is helpful to identify the specific compliance costs examined in the underlying literature.

Bova et al. (2014) conclude that disclosure and compliance regulation can have meaningful economic effects on capital formation, entrepreneurial incentives, and private companies' strategic decisions. However, the compliance costs that are central to their analysis relate specifically to the internal control over financial reporting requirements of SOX Section 404. The authors' primary argument is that IPO companies must build SOX-compliance infrastructure "from scratch," creating substantial implementation and monitoring costs. Importantly, a shift to semiannual reporting would not eliminate or materially reduce these costs for public companies because they would still be required to maintain effective internal controls over financial reporting.

The evidence regarding SOX and companies' propensity to exit SEC reporting is also nuanced. Leuz et al. (2008) partially support Engel et al.'s conclusion that SOX increased incentives for some companies to leave the SEC reporting system. However, the paper also reinforces Leuz's (2007) caution—an article not cited in the proposal—that these effects are more complex than a simple conclusion that "SOX was too costly." Moreover, even if the conclusion that SOX compliance costs influenced companies' listing preferences is accepted, the relevant SOX costs largely involved internal control and governance requirements. As a result, the applicability of this literature to a proposal focused on semiannual reporting may be limited.

As the SEC proposal acknowledges, the evidence suggests that regulatory costs are unlikely to be the primary driver of broader IPO trends. Accordingly, while semiannual reporting may modestly reduce certain reporting burdens, the existing evidence suggests that its effect on IPO activity and firms' decisions to remain public is likely to be limited.

B. Lower direct compliance costs

The SEC asserts that permitting companies to report on a semiannual basis would reduce direct compliance costs. The SEC notes that the costs of producing periodic financial reports are significant. These include management and employee time, audit fees, legal and accounting costs, and XBRL tagging. However, it is important to recognize that these costs would not be fully eliminated under the proposed amendments. In other words, permitting companies to report semiannually does not relieve them of this undertaking, but rather, simply reduces the frequency at which they are required to perform it. The cost savings, therefore, reflect the difference between filing three Form 10-Qs versus filing a single Form 10-S. Based on the evidence provided in the proposal and our understanding of the extant academic research, it is unclear if the potential cost savings are significant enough to offset the associated costs (see Section III below).

First, the magnitude of the estimated cost savings appears small. The SEC estimates potential cost savings using evidence from prior comment letters, a 2019 survey of 187 Nasdaq companies (Nasdaq 2019), and academic studies examining the costs of auditor reviews of quarterly financial statements (Bedard and Courteau 2015; Bar-Hava 2021). With respect to direct compliance costs, the SEC estimates an average annual cost savings of $198,000 per issuer that chooses to report semiannually instead of quarterly. While there will likely be savings stemming from a reduction in indirect costs (e.g., opportunity costs), the SEC does not provide specific estimates of such cost savings.

The SEC proposal also provides estimates of potential audit fee savings from companies operating in different regulatory environments. It is unclear whether results from other jurisdictions generalize to U.S. listed companies. The proposal acknowledges this gap by noting that “there are no readily available estimates of the incremental cost of the mandated auditor review of Form 10-Q” (p. 94). Yet, even if the estimated 12%–16% reduction in audit fees applies similarly to U.S. companies, the resulting cost savings appear modest. According to a recent Audit Analytics
8
C. survey, average audit fees in 2023 were approximately $5.7 million, $1.6 million, and $0.7 million for large accelerated, accelerated, and non-accelerated filers (Audit Analytics 2024). Applying the 12%–16% savings range implies average reductions in audit fees as a percentage of revenue, of approximately 0.006%–0.008%, 0.017%–0.023%, and 0.024%–0.033%, respectively. Further, it is important to note that these cost savings will only be realized if the proposed amendments exempt companies from quarterly reviews in other contexts, such as when disclosing quarterly non-GAAP metrics (as required by SOX) or quarterly reviews required by debt covenants. Thus, while the proposed amendments may reduce costs, the magnitude of these direct savings appears modest. Although any cost reduction is beneficial, the relevant question is whether such savings are sufficient to offset the incremental costs associated with reduced consistency, comparability, and timeliness of financial reporting and the resulting as well as the resulting effects on the public information environment and market functioning. On balance, the evidence on direct cost savings raises questions about the proposal's net benefits, although this inference could change if indirect cost savings are substantial.
Second, the SEC’s cost savings estimates may be functionally obsolete considering that many companies have recently begun using generative artificial intelligence (AI) in financial reporting.3 A recent study by Blankespoor et al. (2026) documents that companies are already using generative AI to write the disclosures that populate quarterly filings. Another recent study by Choi and Xie (2026) provides field evidence of significant productivity gains from the adoption of generative AI in financial reporting tasks. AI presumably reduces the cost of financial reporting, and therefore raises the prospect that the incremental direct cost savings of switching from quarterly to semiannual reporting may be lower than the SEC estimates in the proposal.
Reduced managerial focus on short-term results
The concern about quarterly earnings releases inducing managerial short-termism has been aired since at least the early 2000s (e.g., Berenson 2003), with famous companies like GE under Jack Welch seeking to report higher earnings per share every quarter (e.g., Gladwell 2022). The SEC proposal cites academic evidence that more frequent reporting can increase real activities manipulation and short-termism, while also citing evidence of reduced investment and innovation. In anonymous surveys, managers themselves often claim that the need to meet earnings targets at regular quarterly intervals is a primary motivator of myopic behavior (Bruns and Merchant 1990; Graham et al., 2005, 2011). However, a recent academic review of related evidence paints a murkier picture with the conclusion that it is still an open question whether more frequent financial reporting leads to managerial myopia (Roychowdhury et al. 2019). The next two paragraphs further discuss the evidence on both sides.
3 The compliance cost savings estimates include direct and indirect costs, but do not include opportunity costs
(e.g., management time that could otherwise be devoted to strategic planning or operational improvements).

D. On the one hand, several studies suggest more frequent interim reporting can encourage managerial short-termism at the expense of long-run value creation. Ernstberger et al. (2017) document a sharp increase in real earnings management among European companies following the EU's 2004 shift from semiannual to quarterly interim reporting. Kraft et al. (2018) reach a similar conclusion in the U.S. context, finding that stock exchanges' progressive tightening of reporting frequency requirements between 1950 and 1970 was followed by investment declines that subsequently translated into lower asset turnover and profitability—a pattern consistent with managerial myopia. Fu et al. (2020) extend this evidence to innovation, finding that companies increasing their reporting frequency curtail innovation output, while competitors whose reporting cadence is unchanged expand theirs.

On the other hand, some research points either to null effects or to beneficial consequences of more frequent reporting. Nallareddy et al. (2017) and Kajüter et al. (2018) find no indication that higher reporting frequency distorts investment horizons among UK and Singaporean companies, respectively, suggesting that the myopia-inducing effects documented elsewhere may be context- or institution-specific. Balakrishnan and Ertan (2018) provide a counterpoint to the myopia narrative, finding that increased reporting frequency operates as a disciplinary mechanism in the banking sector, constraining managerial discretion in ways that may improve investment quality. Recently, Hillegeist et al. (2026) report that both the U.S. and EU transitions to quarterly reporting were associated with greater investment-to-stock-price sensitivity, suggesting higher-quality investment decisions.

Overall, the literature does not yet settle whether more frequent financial reporting increases or decreases managerial myopia. The divergence in results across settings suggests that the dominant effect likely depends on the institutional environment, the nature of the frictions present at the time reporting requirements change, and whether one examines direct effects on disclosing companies or broader spillovers to non-disclosing peers. Consequently, whether increased reporting frequency ultimately encourages myopia or imposes beneficial discipline on managers remains an open empirical question warranting further investigation.

Reduced or delayed disclosure of proprietary information

We agree with the SEC’s conclusion that the proposal’s ability to reduce proprietary disclosure costs is likely to be limited to situations in which delaying the disclosure of competitively sensitive information decreases its value to competitors (see footnote 133 of the proposal). In support of this argument, the proposal cites research on segment disclosures (Hayes and Lundholm 1996) and major customer disclosures (Ellis et al. 2012). The segment disclosure literature is particularly relevant because segment information is currently required in interim reports, suggesting that a shift to semiannual reporting could reduce the frequency with which competitors receive potentially sensitive data. By contrast, the evidence on major customer disclosures is

III. less directly applicable. Under current U.S. GAAP, entity-wide disclosures relating to major customers are required only in annual reports (ASC 280-10-50-42) and are not required in interim filings. As a result, a transition from quarterly to semiannual reporting would be unlikely to materially affect proprietary costs associated with major customer disclosures.

Under the current quarterly reporting system, some material contracts are filed as exhibits to Form 10-Q. The semiannual reporting proposal notes that these requirements would be adjusted for semiannual filers, which could reduce proprietary costs. However, the proposal would not affect current Form 8-K requirements for material definitive agreements outside the ordinary course of business. Thus, while Form 8-K would continue to provide timely narrative disclosure about certain new or amended agreements, investors could face delayed access to the contracts themselves when those contracts are disclosed only through periodic-report exhibit requirements under Regulation S-K Item 601(b)(10). At the same time, because timely Form 8-K disclosure would continue for material definitive agreements, any reduction in proprietary costs from moving to semiannual reporting is likely to be muted.

Potential Costs of Semiannual Reporting

The proposal identifies information asymmetry as a cost of permitting semiannual reporting. In this section, we underscore and extend this point by examining the costs of semiannual reporting through the lens of three qualitative characteristics of financial reporting from the Financial Accounting Standards Board's (FASB) Conceptual Framework for Financial Reporting (FASB 2024): consistency, comparability, and timeliness. For each characteristic, we discuss what the research suggests about its effect on information asymmetry and apply that evidence to the SEC's proposal. Although consistency, comparability, and timeliness are distinct concepts, reductions in each can weaken the public information environment and increase information asymmetry. Even if investors can partially price-protect against these risks, weaker public disclosure may reduce the efficiency with which resources are allocated in capital markets, consistent with the FASB's view that high-quality financial information helps capital markets function efficiently in allocating scarce resources (FASB 2024, p. 1). Throughout, we note when these effects are likely to be more pronounced for retail and less-sophisticated investors. We close the section by explaining why we are not optimistic that compensating efforts from information intermediaries (e.g., analysts) or from voluntary managerial disclosures (e.g., 8-Ks) will meaningfully alleviate these costs.

A. Reduced consistency

The FASB defines consistency as the use of the same accounting and reporting methods for the same items, both within a single firm over time and across companies in the same period (FASB 2024, QC22). We acknowledge that the FASB treats consistency as a means to comparability rather than a qualitative characteristic of financial reporting itself, but we begin with consistency because it is (1) directly affected by the proposal and (2) directly related to information-processing costs.

1. Academic research

A substantial literature documents that greater consistency of financial reporting reduces information-processing costs for users, which lowers information asymmetry and improves capital-market outcomes. Peterson et al. (2015) measure consistency through the textual similarity of accounting-policy footnotes. They find that greater consistency is associated with broader analyst coverage, more accurate and less dispersed analyst forecasts, and lower information asymmetry as reflected in bid-ask spreads and illiquidity. Similarly, Henry et al. (2025) examine presentation consistency, the consistency of line-items on the face of the financial statements and find that greater presentation consistency is associated with broader analyst coverage, increased forecast accuracy, reduced forecast dispersion, and greater forecast timeliness.

A separate body of literature examines cross-firm consistency improvements following mandatory IFRS adoption.4 Improved consistency under IFRS is associated with increased market liquidity, lower cost of capital, and higher firm valuations (Daske et al. 2008). However, Christensen et al. (2013) caution that these liquidity benefits are found only in five countries with concurrent increases in financial reporting enforcement and conclude that the enforcement changes (rather than IFRS adoption itself) drive the observed effects.

Other IFRS-adoption studies document additional capital-market effects: greater cross-border investment attributed to lower information-processing costs (Yu et al. 2014); reduced returns to insider purchases, a proxy for reduced information asymmetry (Brochet et al. 2013), and broader analyst coverage with improved forecast accuracy (Byard et al. 2011; Tan et al. 2011). The caveat identified by Christensen et al. (2013) applies broadly to studies that use cross-country IFRS adoption as their source of identifying variation. In some countries, changes in enforcement occurred concurrently with IFRS adoption, making it difficult to isolate the effects of greater reporting consistency from the effects of stronger enforcement. These studies attempt in various ways to address this confound; the resulting evidence supports the general claim that consistency improves capital market outcomes, but the specific magnitudes within these studies should be interpreted with caution.

In summary, the evidence suggests that greater consistency is generally associated with lower information asymmetry and a stronger public information environment, contributing to improved market functioning.

4 Most pre-SFAC-8 academic literature uses "uniformity," as defined in SFAC 2 in the sense that the FASB now calls consistency under SFAC 8 (QC22). We categorize the cited literature based on what each paper actually measures rather than the term used in the paper.

2. Application to the proposal

The proposal would reduce consistency in interim reporting in three principal ways.

1. 2. 3. Across-firm consistency of reporting intervals within each fiscal period. Under the current quarterly regime, companies that file Form 10-Q provide interim financial information at a uniform fiscal-quarter interval. The proposal would replace this uniformity with a regime in which some companies file Form 10-Q on a quarterly basis, while others file Form 10-S on a semiannual basis, reducing across-firm consistency within each fiscal period.

Within-firm consistency of reporting intervals over time. The proposal permits a reporting company to elect semiannual reporting each year. Therefore, a firm can switch its interim reporting frequency between quarterly and semiannual over time, reducing within-firm consistency over time.

Voluntary disclosure heterogeneity among semiannual filers. Semiannual filers may voluntarily provide first- or third-quarter information through earnings releases or other channels. The form, timing, and content of such voluntary disclosures will vary across companies and across years within a firm, introducing a further source of inconsistency that mandated uniform reporting currently mitigates.

The proposal currently provides that Form 10-S would require the same narrative disclosures and financial information as Form 10-Q, scaled to the six-month period (Release No. 33-11414, p. 24). We agree with this design choice. If the SEC were to ease this requirement and allow the contents of the two forms to differ, this would introduce a fourth reduction in consistency beyond the three above.

For users of financial reports, the reductions in consistency would raise information-processing costs. For example, an investor comparing two calendar-year companies after each has filed an interim report for the period ending June 30 would compare two three-month statements (Q1 and Q2) from the quarterly filer with a six-month statement (January through June) from the semiannual filer. Likewise, users would need to reconcile financial reports to track a firm whose reporting frequency changes over time, and to piece together heterogeneous voluntary disclosures across semiannual filers.

Based on the research summarized above, we would expect these increased processing costs to weaken the public information environment by reducing analyst coverage, increasing information asymmetry, and lowering market liquidity. Although investors may partially price-protect against these risks, the resulting increase in trading frictions and reduced availability of timely, decision-useful information may affect the efficiency with which market participants process and incorporate information into prices. These effects are likely to be more pronounced for retail and less-sophisticated investors, who often lack the resources available to institutional investors, such as paid research services and third-party data vendors that help absorb processing complexity. We address analyst attrition more fully in Subsections C and D.

B. Reduced comparability

The FASB defines comparability as "the qualitative characteristic that enables users to identify and understand similarities in, and differences among, items" (FASB 2024, QC21). Comparability requires that economically similar items be reported similarly, and that economically different items be reported differently: "for information to be comparable, like things must look alike and different things must look different" (FASB 2024, QC23).

1. Academic research

Academic research documents that greater comparability of financial reporting reduces information-processing costs for users, which lowers information asymmetry and improves capital-market outcomes. De Franco et al. (2011) and Barth et al. (2018) find that greater comparability is associated with broader analyst coverage, more accurate analyst forecasts, lower bid-ask spreads, greater market liquidity, and a lower cost of capital. One qualification is worth noting. Much of this literature examines differences in accounting standards or accounting methods rather than differences in reporting frequency or presentation formats. Nevertheless, because the underlying mechanism operates through information-processing costs and the ease of comparing companies, we draw on this literature for insights into the capital-market consequences of reduced comparability, while recognizing that its application to reporting-interval comparability is indirect.

While research is clear on the benefits of comparability, the relationship between consistency and comparability is itself conditional. In other words, a reduction in consistency does not necessarily imply a reduction in comparability. Per QC23 (FASB 2024), when companies are economically similar, inconsistent reporting may obscure those similarities and reduce comparability. When companies are economically different, however, inconsistent reporting may help users identify and understand the underlying economic differences. Theoretical work supports this conditional view: consistency can improve or impair the information available to users depending on the relative magnitudes of firm-specific and common economic shocks (Corona et al. 2024) and forced consistency can produce uniform-looking reports that obscure substantively different underlying economics (Sunder 1997).

Two empirical examples illustrate how forced consistency can obscure economic differences. The FIFO–LIFO choice in inventory accounting reflects firm-specific economic conditions (Lee and Petruzzi, 1989), and the market prices the choice as conveying information about firm risk (Krishnan et al. 2008). Eliminating this flexibility and requiring all companies to use the same inventory method would make economically different companies appear more similar than they are.

14
Similarly, FASB Statement No. 2 requires R&D to be expensed as incurred, so a firm whose $10 million in R&D yields a successful product reports the same expense as one whose $10 million yields nothing. Sunder (1997, p. 145) describes this as "uniformity of form, but not substance." In both cases, forced consistency causes economically different companies to look alike, reducing rather than enhancing comparability.

Beyond the inventory and R&D examples, empirical evidence on reporting-frequency choices is more directly relevant to the proposal. Butler et al. (2007) examine voluntary and mandatory changes in interim reporting frequency from 1950 through 1973 and find that companies voluntarily moving from semiannual to quarterly reporting experienced increased earnings timeliness, while companies whose increase was mandated by the SEC did not. Although their setting examines voluntary increases (rather than decreases) in frequency, their evidence supports the broader proposition that reporting-frequency elections may convey information about firm-level economics.

2. Application to the proposal

Whether the proposal reduces comparability depends on whether a firm's election of reporting frequency conveys information about its underlying economics. If the election conveys such information, for example if companies electing semiannual reporting differ systematically in operating cycle or management horizon, then permitting different reporting frequencies allows economically different companies to look different. In this case, the proposal would not reduce comparability and may even enhance it. If, on the other hand, the election does not convey such information, then permitting different reporting frequencies would cause economically similar companies to look different, reducing comparability. The evidence from Butler et al. (2007) discussed above is consistent with companies self-selecting reporting frequency based on their information environments. Whether this self-selection mechanism would operate similarly under the proposal's structure, where election would be a reduction rather than an increase in reporting frequency, remains a question for future empirical research.

Even granting the most favorable interpretation of the proposal (that a firm's election of semiannual reporting conveys information about firm-level economics), this benefit does not eliminate the information-processing costs identified in Subsection A. We acknowledge that under this interpretation, it is unclear whether users would in fact seek to compare economically dissimilar companies. To the extent that users do make such comparisons, for example in routine portfolio review or in screening on common metrics such as P/E ratios, the recurring task of reconciling financial information across different reporting intervals remains. Therefore, the analyst, asymmetry, liquidity, and cost-of-capital consequences described in Subsection A potentially flow through the processing-cost channel, though these consequences may be offset, perhaps fully, to the extent that the election itself improves comparability.
15

C. Reduced timeliness

The FASB identifies timeliness as one of the four enhancing qualitative characteristics of useful financial information, defining it as "having information available to decision makers in time to be capable of influencing their decisions" (FASB 2024, QC29). When mandatory disclosure is less frequent, information that the firm possesses but has not yet disclosed remains non-public for longer periods, allowing information asymmetry to accumulate.

1. Academic research

A first stream of research examines how mandatory reporting frequency affects analyst coverage. International evidence from the UK consistently shows a positive relationship between mandatory reporting frequency and analyst coverage. Pozen et al. (2017) specifically document that UK companies that moved to semiannual reporting without supplementing through voluntary quarterly disclosures experienced reductions in analyst following. Analysts depend on timely periodic disclosures as an important input to their forecasting and recommendation models, and reduced reporting frequency reduces both the volume of material analysts can produce and the timeliness of the underlying information. Less analyst coverage reduces the public dissemination of firm-specific information, contributing to greater information asymmetry.

A second stream of research documents that gaps between mandatory disclosures allow information asymmetry to accumulate with negative consequences for liquidity, transaction costs, and cost of capital (Diamond and Verrecchia, 1991; Easley and O'Hara, 2004; Glosten and Milgrom, 1985). Stoumbos (2023) directly addresses reporting frequency and finds that information asymmetry grows steadily between earnings announcements and is meaningfully higher under semiannual than quarterly reporting in the second half of each semiannual period. Recent advances in alternative data technologies, such as satellite imagery, have enabled sophisticated institutional investors to supplement public disclosures with proprietary data, reducing their reliance on periodic financial reports (Katona et al. 2025). As a result, less frequent public reporting may disproportionately affect investors who rely primarily on standardized public disclosures. To the extent this increases information asymmetry, it may also reduce liquidity and increase trading frictions, costs that are borne primarily by liquidity traders, including many retail investors.

A third stream of research examines private meetings between managers and institutional investors as a substitute channel for less frequent public disclosure. This literature documents that private meetings are informative, that their informativeness is greater for companies with less public disclosure, and that the guardrails of Regulation Fair Disclosure are likely ineffective in promoting a level playing field (Soltes, 2014; Solomon and Soltes, 2015; Bushee et al., 2017; Bushee et al., 2018; Brown et al., 2019; Campbell et al., 2021).

Taken together, this research suggests that less frequent reporting could increase information asymmetry by reducing analyst information production, increasing reliance on alternative data and other proprietary information sources, and increasing the relative importance of private communications between managers and institutional investors. Although market participants may partially price-protect against these effects through adjustments in prices and trading costs, greater information asymmetry may nonetheless increase trading frictions and reduce liquidity until new public information becomes available.

2. Application to the proposal

Less frequent mandatory reporting directly undermines timeliness: under the proposal, the interval between mandatory disclosures of immaterial data doubles, and the maximum age of newly disclosed information increases from approximately four and a half months under quarterly reporting to roughly seven and a half months under semiannual reporting.

Research suggests that information asymmetry would also grow over this extended interval for semiannual filers. First, semiannual filers with analyst following that do not voluntarily supplement with quarterly disclosures would likely face reduced analyst coverage. Second, sophisticated institutional investors with privileged access to alternative data technologies would be positioned to exploit the longer gaps between mandatory disclosures. Finally, large institutional investors would likely increasingly rely on private meetings with managers to compensate for reduced public disclosure.

Taken together, this evidence suggests that semiannual reporting could increase reliance on private information channels relative to standardized public disclosures. Although market participants may partially price-protect against greater information asymmetry through adjustments in prices and trading costs, the resulting increase in reliance on proprietary data and private communications may weaken the public information environment. These effects are likely to be particularly important for investors who rely primarily on standardized public disclosures, including many retail and less-sophisticated investors.

D. Potential mitigating mechanisms

The discussion in Sections A through C identifies several ways in which semiannual reporting may weaken the public information environment. Market participants, however, are not passive. Analysts, managers, and investors adapt to changes in disclosure requirements, raising the question of whether alternative information channels could substantially offset the reduction in mandatory quarterly reporting. We consider three such mechanisms: analyst coverage, voluntary disclosure, and information transfer from firms that continue to report quarterly. Although each may partially mitigate the proposal's effects, the existing evidence suggests that none is likely to fully substitute for timely mandatory reporting.

Analyst coverage is itself a mechanism through which public information is produced and disseminated. However, as discussed above, research suggests that less frequent mandatory reporting reduces analyst following for some firms (Pozen et al. 2017). Consequently, analyst coverage is unlikely to offset the effects of semiannual reporting and may instead amplify them. Because many small firms already receive little or no analyst coverage (Bhushan 1989), this cost is less relevant to them.

Voluntary disclosures like earnings announcements, management forecasts, and other interim communications already convey much of the information eventually reported in Forms 10-Q and 10-K (Sivakumar and Waymire 1994; Basu et al. 2013). However, prior research argues that the credibility of these disclosures depends in part on subsequent mandatory verification (Gigler and Hemmer 1998; Ball et al. 2012). Consistent with this view, Cheng et al. (2013) find that firms permitted to replace certain mandatory disclosures with voluntary disclosures experience declines in liquidity even when they voluntarily maintain their previous level of disclosure. This evidence suggests that voluntary disclosure cannot fully substitute for the credibility provided by mandatory disclosure. Thus, voluntary disclosure appears to complement rather than replace mandatory reporting. Information transfer from large firms may partially offset the reduction in firm-specific disclosure. Investors often infer industry-wide developments from the earnings announcements of large firms and incorporate this information into the prices of smaller firms before their own announcements (Foster 1981; Han and Wild 1990; Shroff et al. 2017). Consequently, if larger firms continue quarterly reporting, some information may continue to reach the market for semiannual reporters through this channel. On a value-weighted basis, the resulting loss of information may therefore be modest. Overall, these mechanisms suggest that market participants are likely to adapt to less frequent mandatory reporting. Nevertheless, the available evidence indicates that they are imperfect substitutes for timely public disclosure. Rather than eliminating the effects of semiannual reporting, they appear more likely to redistribute information production toward analysts, sophisticated investors, and voluntary disclosures while leaving the public information environment less robust than under quarterly reporting.

IV. Recommendations

As discussed throughout this letter, we have concerns that the proposal may not generate net benefits in its current form. However, if the SEC elects to proceed, we offer the following recommendations to mitigate potential costs while preserving, to the extent possible, the compliance-cost reductions the proposal seeks to achieve.

18

The table summarizes the recommendations and the qualitative characteristics they address. A more detailed discussion of each recommendation follows.

Problem	Solution
1. Consistency Semiannual reporting reduces consistency between Forms 10-S and 10-Q.	Require quarterly-disaggregated information within Forms 10-S and 10-K and maintain content equivalence between Forms 10-S and 10-Q.
2. Consistency Companies may switch between quarterly and semiannual reporting over time, reducing within-firm consistency	Require a Form 8-K when a firm changes reporting frequency, supplemented by the proposed Form 10-K cover-page checkbox.
3. Timeliness Longer reporting intervals increase the time between mandatory disclosures, allowing information asymmetry to accumulate	Strengthen Form 8-K and related event-driven disclosure requirements to ensure timely disclosure of material events between periodic reports.
4. Direct Evidence Existing research provides only indirect evidence.	Initially limit the option to a subset of companies and evaluate the resulting outcomes before broader adoption, allowing for evidence-based assessment and timely adjustment of the proposal. Also, commission studies on similar recent switches in UK, Japan, and EU, the most comparable financial markets to the U.S.

A. Recommendation 1 — Mitigate consistency costs of semiannual reporting through quarterly disaggregation and content equivalence.

If the SEC proceeds with the proposed semiannual reporting option, we recommend two modifications to mitigate the loss of consistency associated with less frequent reporting. We recognize that delayed quarterly information cannot fully substitute for timely quarterly reporting. Rather, the recommendation is intended to preserve some of the consistency benefits should the SEC adopt a semiannual option.

First, Form 10-S should present financial information disaggregated by fiscal quarter (Q1 and Q2), in addition to cumulative six-month results. We further recommend that Form 10-K include disaggregated third and fourth-quarter data (Q3 and Q4), in addition to cumulative annual results for all filers.

Second, the SEC should preserve the proposal's intent that Form 10-S require the same financial and narrative disclosures as Form 10-Q, scaled to a six-month reporting period.

The SEC's economic analysis indicates that a substantial portion of the direct compliance-cost savings from semiannual reporting arises from eliminating two filing cycles, including associated auditor reviews, XBRL tagging, and legal review (Release No. 33-11414, Section V.G.3). At the same time, many public companies already prepare quarterly financial information for internal reporting, internal control, and, in many cases, voluntary disclosure purposes. Consequently, if quarter-specific financial information is already being produced internally, requiring its presentation within Forms 10-S and 10-K may involve lower incremental costs than preparing a complete additional periodic filing. The magnitude of those incremental costs, however, is uncertain and likely varies across firms.

We acknowledge that this recommendation may partially offset one of the proposal's stated benefits, reducing managerial short-termism by decreasing attention to quarterly results. However, to the extent that quarterly reporting induces myopic behavior, disclosing quarterly results with a delay through semiannual filings may lessen those incentives while preserving quarter-specific information. Thus, our recommendation preserves the proposal's principal source of compliance-cost savings while mitigating the loss of consistency associated with less frequent reporting.

If requiring additional quarterly disaggregation for all filers is considered undesirable, an alternative that would preserve consistency is to require semiannual filers to report first-quarter and six-month results in Form 10-S and third-quarter and annual results in Form 10-K.

B. Recommendation 2 — Require timely investor notification of changes in reporting frequency.

If the SEC proceeds with the option to elect Form 10-S in lieu of Form 10-Q, we agree that companies should not be required to make a one-time, permanent election, as doing so would materially reduce the flexibility the proposal is intended to provide.

We also agree with the SEC's proposed Form 10-K cover-page check-box for indicating a firm's current reporting frequency, and we recommend supplementing it with a Form 8-K filing requirement when a firm changes its reporting frequency.

We believe that requiring timely notification through Form 8-K would strengthen the proposal by providing investors with prompt notice whenever a firm changes its reporting frequency, rather than requiring them to identify the change from the cover page of a subsequent Form 10-K. The two disclosures serve complementary purposes: the Form 8-K provides timely notification of reporting-frequency changes, while the Form 10-K check box provides a continuing record of the firm's current reporting status. Together, they improve both the visibility and accessibility of reporting-frequency information without relying solely on the annual filing.

For changes during a fiscal year, we recommend that the SEC permit firms to increase, but not decrease, their reporting frequency and require timely disclosure of the change through a Form 8-K. Under this approach, a semiannual filer could elect, mid-year, to file a Form 10-Q for the third quarter when circumstances suggest more frequent reporting would be useful. By contrast, a firm that began the fiscal year as a quarterly filer would not be permitted to drop its third-quarter Form 10-Q. This 20

C. D. asymmetric approach allows companies to provide more timely reporting when circumstances suggest it would be useful, while ensuring that a firm's election to report quarterly remains in effect through the end of the fiscal year.
Recommendation 3 — Enhance event-driven disclosure requirements.
If the SEC adopts the proposed semiannual reporting regime, we recommend strengthening Form 8-K and related event-driven disclosure requirements to preserve the timeliness of material information.
Share repurchases provide a helpful example. Under current U.S. rules, repurchase activity is disclosed only as aggregated monthly data in Form 10-Q under Item 703 of Regulation S-K. By contrast, UK issuers who operate under a semiannual reporting environment, must disclose repurchases as soon as practicable and no later than seven days after execution. Under the current U.S. reporting regime, a share repurchase executed in January would not be disclosed until the Q1 Form 10-Q is filed in April, approximately four months later. Under the proposed semiannual regime, disclosure would be delayed until the Form 10-S is filed in August, extending the delay to approximately seven months. The SEC's 2023 Share Repurchase Disclosure Modernization Rule, which would have required more granular repurchase disclosures, reflects the SEC's own recognition that the existing disclosure regime provides information with considerable delay. Although the rule was subsequently vacated on procedural grounds, the proposed semiannual reporting regime would further lengthen these delays and strengthen the case for enhanced event-driven disclosure.
Strengthening event-driven disclosure requirements would partially mitigate the timeliness and information-asymmetry concerns discussed in Section III.C and would align U.S. disclosure practices more closely with those of several jurisdictions cited in the proposal as operating under semiannual reporting regimes.
Recommendation 4 — Adopt a phased implementation to facilitate evidence-based evaluation of costs and benefits or conduct/commission further economic analysis.
The existing research provides only indirect evidence on the specific questions raised by the proposal. As a result, the effects of semiannual reporting on market liquidity, information asymmetry, analyst coverage, and the information environment investors remain uncertain.
If the SEC proceeds with the proposed semiannual reporting option, we recommend implementing it initially as a randomized pilot program. Specifically, the option to elect semiannual reporting should be offered only to a randomly selected subset of companies or industries. Random assignment would ensure that treatment and control companies are comparable in expectation, allowing the SEC to estimate the causal effects of semiannual reporting by comparing outcomes for treated and control companies before and after implementation. After evaluating the proposal's effects, the SEC could determine whether broader adoption is warranted. A pilot program could also explicitly consider threshold-based implementation to assess how the consequences of semiannual reporting vary with firm size.
21
A randomized pilot program would allow the SEC to directly evaluate the effects of semiannual reporting on market outcomes and investor welfare, including any disproportionate effects on retail investors, before extending the option to all reporting companies. It would also generate unusually strong causal evidence for policymakers and researchers regarding the proposal's effects. Following a defined evaluation period, the SEC could use this evidence to determine whether the option should be expanded, targeted to particular types of companies, retained in limited form, or rescinded.

Given the availability of natural experiments in several major foreign capital markets, including the UK and the European Union, the SEC may wish to supplement the current economic analysis with a comprehensive empirical evaluation (or commission such an evaluation) of jurisdictions that have reduced mandatory reporting frequency. Such an analysis could provide direct evidence on the effects of semiannual reporting on liquidity, analyst coverage, information asymmetry, IPO activity, and firms' decisions to remain public, thereby informing the SEC's assessment of the proposal's anticipated costs and benefits.

Appendix

Responses to Selected Questions from File No. S7-2026-15, the SEC's Proposal on Semiannual Reporting

The selected questions from the proposal are presented in bold font, followed by our responses.

Q1. The proposed amendments would allow Exchange Act reporting companies to elect to file interim reports on a semiannual basis in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q. Should companies have this option, or should all companies continue to be required to file Form 10-Q? What types of companies are likely to elect the option to file semiannual reports? Are companies in certain industries more likely than those in other industries to elect to file semiannual reports?

We have concerns about whether companies should have the option to file interim semiannual reports in lieu of quarterly reports. As discussed in Sections I and II, the existing literature provides limited evidence that the proposal's expected benefits, lower compliance costs, reduced managerial short-termism, and greater incentives to go public or remain public, would materialize in practice. As discussed in Section III, the proposal would likely reduce the consistency, comparability, and timeliness of interim financial reporting, thereby increasing information asymmetry and trading frictions. These changes may reduce the availability of timely, decision-useful information and affect the efficiency with which market participants process and incorporate information into prices. These costs would likely fall disproportionately on retail and less-sophisticated investors. On balance, the existing evidence suggests that the costs of permitting the option are likely to outweigh the benefits.

Our letter does not take a specific position on the types of companies or industries most likely to elect semiannual reporting. We expect that election will reflect the relative weight individual companies place on the compliance-cost savings the proposal contemplates against the consequences of reduced consistency, comparability, and timeliness we discuss in Section III. Companies with relatively high Form 10-Q compliance costs may be more likely to elect semiannual reporting, whereas companies operating in environments with greater demand for timely financial information (for example, firms in low-quality information environments (Hribar et al. 2022) or industries with pronounced seasonality) may be less likely to do so. Companies with proprietary costs that are revealed in current 10-Q disclosures (e.g., companies whose quarterly segment disclosures benefit competitors) may also prefer semiannual reporting.

Q2. We are proposing amendments that would permit, but not require, all Exchange Act reporting companies that file Form 10-Q today to file semiannual reports. Should we instead require all companies to file semiannual reports? What would be the benefits and costs of such a mandatory approach? Would mandatory semiannual reporting, with the option to file quarterly reports, lead to more companies electing to forgo quarterly reporting?

No, the SEC should not require all companies to file interim reports on a semiannual basis.

Under either approach contemplated in the question, firms could file quarterly if they choose, while firms that find the marginal costs of quarterly reporting to exceed the marginal benefits could file semiannually. Under standard economic analysis, the two approaches are equivalent since firms can self-select into their preferred filing regime. The difference between the two approaches is that the SEC proposal sets quarterly reporting as the benchmark and treats semiannual filers as deviators. The mandatory semiannual approach works in the opposite direction with semiannual reporting installed as the new benchmark and old quarterly filings deviating from the benchmark. From a sociological perspective, benchmarks become the default setting and deviation from the norm can be costly to reputation. From this behavioral perspective (e.g., DiMaggio and Powell 1983), it seems likely that mandatory semiannual reporting will reduce the number of quarterly filers more than the voluntary semiannual approach.

Q3. Our proposal would permit semiannual reports for all Exchange Act reporting companies that file Form 10-Q today, regardless of filer status, revenues, market capitalization, or other criteria. Should the option for semiannual reporting be available only for Exchange Act reporting companies that satisfy certain criteria? If so, what criteria should be imposed and why? For example, should only emerging growth companies or smaller reporting companies be allowed to report semiannually? Should only companies below alternative quantitative or monetary thresholds be allowed to report semiannually? Should the Commission consider a pilot program to permit optional semiannual reporting for a subset of reporting companies and, if so, what would be the benefits of such a pilot program? What types of companies should be included in the pilot program?

Yes, we believe the option should be available only to a defined subset of issuers, at least initially. In Recommendation 4, we recommend allowing semiannual reporting for a randomly selected group of companies to allow for assessment of the causal relation between semiannual reporting and various contemplated outcomes. Broader extension should follow only after empirical evaluation of the costs and benefits of the proposal as implemented for the test subset.

The SEC also has the opportunity to observe and learn from experiments with quarterly reporting rules in other jurisdictions (Kajüter et al. 2022). For example, Singapore mandated quarterly reporting only for firms with market capitalization above $75 million in 2002. Singapore reversed quarterly reporting requirements in 2020 except for risky firms with qualified audit opinions or regulatory concerns (Singapore Exchange, 2020).

Q6. If adopted, would semiannual reporting have an impact on investors' ability to compare same-company performance over time? Why or why not?

Yes. Semiannual reporting on Form 10-S would reduce investors' ability to compare same-company performance over time through two mechanisms, as we discuss in Section III.A. First, replacing three quarterly observations per year with a single six-month observation reduces the frequency at which investors can observe the firm's performance trajectory. Second, if a firm changes its interim reporting frequency in subsequent fiscal years, time-series comparison of that firm's performance becomes more difficult because the reporting periods are no longer uniform across the firm's historical record.

Both concerns can be mitigated through the quarterly disaggregation recommended in Recommendation 1. Specifically, we recommend that Form 10-S require semiannual filers to disaggregate cumulative six-month results into separate first- and second-quarter amounts and that Form 10-K present third-quarter and fourth-quarter financial information separately.

Q10. Our proposal would require Exchange Act reporting companies that elect to file semiannual reports to continue with that interim reporting frequency for the rest of the fiscal year in which the election was made. Therefore, companies would not be allowed to file a semiannual report on Form 10-S for the first six months of a fiscal year and then file a quarterly report for the third quarter for that fiscal year. Likewise, companies would not be allowed to file a quarterly report on Form 10-Q for the first quarter of a fiscal year, file a semiannual report on Form 10-S for the first six months for that fiscal year, and not file a quarterly report on Form 10-Q for the third fiscal quarter. Would this proposed approach help avoid potential confusion that could be caused by changes in interim reporting frequency during a fiscal year? Is it necessary to add any language to the proposed rules to make more explicit the requirement to maintain the selected frequency for the full fiscal year? Rather than the proposed approach, should we allow: (1) semiannual filers and quarterly filers to make a change in interim reporting frequency during the fiscal year, or (2) only semiannual filers to switch to filing quarterly reports during the fiscal year? Should issuers that elect semiannual reporting be required to commit to that disclosure frequency for a certain period of time? Why or why not?

25

If the SEC moves forward with the proposed option to file Form 10-S in lieu of Form 10-Q, we agree with the SEC that companies should not be categorically prohibited from changing their reporting frequency. An outright prohibition on changes in reporting frequency would substantially limit the flexibility the proposal is designed to provide. However, we have mixed views regarding whether companies should be required to commit to a given reporting frequency for the full year.

On the one hand, commitment by management to a specific reporting frequency provides investors with a predictable information environment. The theoretical and empirical literature on voluntary disclosure is broadly consistent with the view that credible commitment to a disclosure policy reduces information asymmetry (Diamond and Verrecchia 1991; Leuz and Verrecchia 2000; Lambert et al. 2007). We note that this literature primarily addresses commitment to disclosure quality, scope, or content rather than commitment to interim reporting frequency specifically; we draw on its conclusions by extension.

On the other hand, increases in reporting frequency in response to material changes in a firm's circumstances can provide investors with useful information, and the proposal itself acknowledges that the appropriate reporting frequency may depend on a firm's circumstances. If a material event or development occurs after a semiannual filer has submitted its first-half Form 10-S, voluntary filing of a Form 10-Q for the third quarter would benefit investors.

We offer two recommendations that seek to balance these considerations.

First, with respect to changes in reporting frequency across fiscal years, we discuss in Recommendation 2 our recommendation that the SEC combine the proposed annual check-box election on Form 10-K with a Form 8-K notification requirement when a firm changes its reporting frequency. These disclosures serve complementary purposes. The Form 10-K check box identifies a firm's current reporting frequency, while the Form 8-K provides timely notice of any change. Together, they provide both a current record of a firm's reporting status and timely notification of changes. We believe that requiring timely notification through Form 8-K is an important modification to the proposal because it provides investors with a distinct and timely signal when a firm changes its reporting frequency, rather than embedding the change in the cover page of a Form 10-K, which primarily serves other reporting purposes. It also relieves investors of the need to inspect each Form 10-K cover page to detect whether a frequency change has occurred; instead, the notice is delivered to them via the Form 8-K itself.

Second, we recommend that the SEC permit firms to increase, but not decrease, their reporting frequency and require timely disclosure of the change through a Form 8-K.. Under this approach, a semiannual filer could elect, mid-year, to file a Form 10-Q for the third quarter when circumstances suggest more frequent reporting would be useful. By contrast, a firm that began the fiscal year as a quarterly filer would not be permitted to drop its third-quarter Form 10-Q. This asymmetric approach allows companies to provide more timely reporting when circumstances suggest it would be useful, while ensuring that a firm's election to report quarterly remains in effect through the end of the fiscal year.

Q14. Proposed Form 10-S would mandate the same narrative and financial information as Form 10-Q, albeit for semiannual periods rather than quarterly periods. Should Form 10-S require narrative or financial information that differs from what is required in Form 10-Q? If so, please specify what information should be different and why this information is or is not needed in Form 10-S. Are there any disclosure items, such as mine safety violations, in proposed Form 10-S that should be required instead to be disclosed in other forms, such as Form 10-K, Form 8-K, or Form SD?

We do not believe that Form 10-S should require information different from that currently required in Form 10-Q. We support the proposal's intent that Form 10-S require the same narrative disclosures and financial information as Form 10-Q, scaled to the six-month reporting period (Release No. 33-11414, p. 24). As we discuss in Section III.A and Recommendation 1, any divergence between the content requirements of the two forms would impair across-firm consistency beyond the time-interval effect inherent in the proposal itself, and would undermine the proposal's framing of Form 10-S as a less-frequent analog of Form 10-Q.

Q15. As an alternative to the proposal for optional semiannual reporting, should we instead revise the disclosure requirements of Form 10-Q to reduce the burden on reporting companies of filing this form, such as amending the current rules for the required interim financial statement review by an independent public accountant, XBRL data tagging, MD&A, information about unregistered sales of registrant securities pursuant to 17 CFR 229.701 (Item 701 of Regulation S-K), or year-to-date comparisons involving financial statements and MD&A? How should these requirements, or any other requirements of Form 10-Q, be revised? What aspects of Form 10-Q’s current reporting framework are most burdensome for reporting companies?

Our letter does not take a specific position on whether the disclosure requirements of Form 10-Q should be revised to reduce compliance burden as an alternative to permitting semiannual reporting. The costs we identify in Section III, reductions in consistency, comparability, and timeliness, and the resulting increase in information asymmetry, arise from the change in reporting frequency rather than from the specific content of Form 10-Q. Modifications to Form 10-Q's content requirements that reduced compliance burden without reducing reporting frequency would avoid these specific costs, though they would raise distinct disclosure-quality and comparability concerns that are not addressed in this letter.

Kajüter et al. (2022) survey reductions in quarterly disclosure requirements concurrent with switches to semiannual reporting in other jurisdictions.
27
Q17. What impact would the proposed option to file semiannual reports on Form 10-S have on Exchange Act reporting companies' ability to focus on: (1) business operations, (2) growth, or (3) long-term business strategies? Please provide any data on the amount of employee and director time spent on preparing a quarterly report on Form 10-Q.
The proposal could allow managers to devote somewhat more time to business operations, growth initiatives, and long-term strategic planning by reducing the frequency of mandatory reporting activities. However, the magnitude of these cost savings is difficult to quantify. Existing research documents that many CFOs perceive financial reporting primarily as a compliance activity (Dichev et al. 2013), but we are unaware of evidence quantifying how much additional managerial attention would be redirected toward operations or long-term strategy if reporting frequency were reduced. Consequently, publicly available estimates of direct compliance costs may not fully capture managerial costs associated with quarterly reporting. We are unaware of publicly available evidence that systematically measures the employee and director time devoted to preparing Form 10-Q filings. Such information is largely internal to firms and therefore difficult for researchers to observe.
Q30. Should the Commission require the fourth-quarter (or second-semiannual-period) financial information to be included in Form 10-K? Should the Commission require Form 10-S to break out the six-month period into two three-month periods, and require similarly broken-out three-month information for the fiscal year covered by Form 10-K?
We recommend that the SEC require Form 10-S of a semiannual filer to present its financial information disaggregated into the two constituent fiscal-quarter periods (Q1 and Q2), in addition to the cumulative six-month figures. We further recommend that Form 10-K of all filers present third-quarter and fourth-quarter financial information separately. Requiring quarter-specific disaggregation in Forms 10-S and 10-K would provide investors with additional information at relatively modest incremental cost, particularly if firms already prepare quarterly financial information for internal reporting purposes.
We discuss this recommendation more fully in Recommendation 1 of this letter.
Q48 What would be the benefits to investors from reporting companies' flexibility to file semiannual reports on Form 10-S, instead of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q? Are there certain types of companies or industries for which such benefits would be greater than for others? Would the benefits to investors be limited to the pass-through of cost savings, or would there be other kinds of benefits, such as improved managerial incentives or reallocation of company resources to potentially more productive corporate activities?
The proposal identifies two principal investor benefits: pass-through of cost savings and improved managerial incentives from a reduced focus on short-term results, which could in turn lead to better investment decisions and resource allocation by the firm. While these benefits could potentially accrue to investors, it is unclear whether they would materialize in practice. As we discuss in the "Potential Benefits of Semiannual Reporting" section of this letter, the SEC's own estimates suggest that potential direct cost savings that they can estimate are modest in magnitude but opportunity costs could be large, and the academic literature on whether reduced reporting frequency meaningfully reduces managerial short-termism is mixed across studies and institutional settings.
28

Q49 What would be the costs to investors from providing reporting companies with flexibility to file semiannual reports on Form 10-S, instead of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q? Would the option for semiannual reporting increase information asymmetries in ways that impair investors' abilities to make investment and voting decisions? To the extent there are such costs or information is reduced, would other regulatory requirements (beyond those requiring interim reports) or market forces mitigate such factors?

Q55 We discuss the costs to investors in detail in Section III of this letter. The proposal would reduce the consistency and timeliness of interim financial reporting, and may also reduce comparability, thereby increasing information asymmetry between informed and uninformed market participants, which could in turn reduce market liquidity and affect the efficiency with which market participants process and incorporate information into prices. These effects are likely to be more pronounced for retail and less-sophisticated investors, who often lack the resources available to institutional investors, such as paid research services and third-party data vendors that help absorb processing complexity. In the closing subsection of Section III, we explain why we are not optimistic that compensating mechanisms (i.e., analyst coverage, voluntary disclosure, and hybrid reporting) will meaningfully alleviate these costs.

For semiannual filers who would not voluntarily release earnings quarterly, would stock price movements around the release of semiannual financial information be more volatile compared to movements around quarterly releases? If so, what are the reasons this would occur? If so, how would this affect investors, companies, and markets?

Yes. As we discuss in Section III.C, information asymmetry accumulates between mandatory disclosures, with empirical evidence showing that asymmetry grows steadily between earnings announcements and is meaningfully higher under semiannual than quarterly reporting in the second half of each semiannual period (Stoumbos, 2023). When mandatory disclosure occurs semiannually rather than quarterly, a larger volume of accumulated information is impounded into prices at a single point in time, which would likely produce more pronounced price movements around the release of semiannual financial information. However, if managers seek to avoid large price movements, especially negative ones, to avoid class-action shareholder lawsuits (e.g., Kellogg, 1984), they may issue management forecasts and especially earnings pre-announcements when they expect to report bad news at future earnings announcements (e.g., Basu et al. 2022). Such preemption of future bad news spreads out stock price movements across multiple announcements (e.g., Kasznik and Lev, 1995).

Q56 If the proposal were to reduce securities analyst coverage of Exchange Act reporting companies that elect the semiannual reporting option, what effect would this have on investors and companies? How would such a reduction in analyst coverage affect stock market price efficiency? How would such a reduction affect liquidity of semiannual filers' securities?

Q58 Reductions in analyst coverage would compound the information asymmetry and liquidity effects we discuss in Section III. As we discuss in Section III.C, the international evidence cited in the proposal suggests that semiannual filers without voluntary quarterly supplementation would face reduced analyst following (Pozen et al., 2017). In the closing subsection of Section III, we discuss the role of analyst coverage as a channel through which information asymmetry is mitigated, and we explain why we do not believe that analyst coverage will compensate for the disclosure reductions identified in the proposal. The information costs associated with reduced analyst coverage would fall disproportionately on retail and less-sophisticated investors, who rely more heavily on analysts as a substitute for in-house research. At the same time, we acknowledge that reduced analyst coverage affects only firms that are currently followed by analysts and that any resulting decline in liquidity is most relevant for firms with actively traded shares. Many small firms' stocks do not trade even once on a given trading day (e.g., Lesmond et al. 1999). If these relatively illiquid firms elect semiannual reporting, any additional reduction in liquidity is likely to be modest and may be difficult to detect.

Would a company's valuation or cost of capital differ based on whether the company is a quarterly filer or a semiannual filer? Please explain the reasons why there would be a difference and provide any specific data. Would less frequent interim reporting negatively affect the ability of investors or other market participants to value the company's securities? If cost of capital would increase for semiannual filers, would this result from an increase in the cost of equity or cost of debt (or both)? How?

Yes. As we discuss in Section III, the proposal would increase information asymmetry between informed and uninformed market participants, which research consistently associates with a higher cost of capital and reduced market liquidity. The asymmetry would arise through multiple channels: reduced consistency of interim financial reporting (Section III.A), reduced timeliness of mandatory disclosure (Section III.C), and increased reliance on private channels including alternative data and private meetings with management (Section III.C). We expect both the cost of equity and the cost of debt for trading purposes to be affected because both are influenced by the underlying information environment, which the proposal could weaken.

30

However, these effects may not translate directly into higher financing costs for all firms. Firms expecting to access public debt or equity markets may choose to return to quarterly reporting or supplement mandatory disclosures with additional voluntary disclosure. As a result, the proposal's effects on the ongoing information environment and secondary-market trading may be more pronounced than its effects on financing costs.

31

Relevant References Not Included in the Proposal

Atiase, R. K. (1985). Predisclosure information, firm capitalization, and security price behavior around earnings announcements. Journal of Accounting Research, 23 (1), 21–36. https://www.jstor.org/stable/2490905

Audit Analytics. (2024). Audit fee trends: A 20-year review. https://go.ideagen.com/audit-fee-trends-report.

Balakrishnan, K., & Ertan, A. (2018). Banks' financial reporting frequency and asset quality. The Accounting Review, 93(3), 1–24. https://doi.org/10.2308/accr-51936

Ball, R., S. Jayaraman, and L. Shivakumar. 2012. Audited Financial Reporting and Voluntary Disclosure as Complements: A Test of the Confirmation Hypothesis. Journal of Accounting and Economics 53 (1–2), 136–166. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jacceco.2011.11.005

Barth, M. E., Landsman, W. R., & Taylor, D. J. (2017). The JOBS Act and information uncertainty in IPO companies. The Accounting Review, 92(6), 25–47. https://doi.org/10.2308/accr-51721

Barth, M. E., Landsman, W. R., Lang, M. H., & Williams, C. D. (2018). Effects on comparability and capital market benefits of voluntary IFRS adoption. Journal of Financial Reporting, 3(1), 1–22. https://doi.org/10.2308/jfir-52279

Basu, S., Duong, T. X., Markov, S. & Tan, E.-J. (2013). How informative are earnings

announcements as an information source? European Accounting Review, 22 (2): 221-256. http://dx.doi.org/10.1080/09638180.2013.782820
Beaver, W. H., McNichols, M. F., Wang, Z. Z. (2018). The information content of earnings announcements: new insights from intertemporal and cross-sectional behavior. Review of Accounting Studies 23 (1), 95-135. https://doi.org/10.1007/s11142-017-9417-z Berenson, A. (2003). The Number: How the Drive for Quarterly Earnings Corrupted Wall Street and Corporate America. Random House. https://www.amazon.com/Number-Quarterly-Earnings-Corrupted-Corporate/dp/0812966252
Bhushan, R. (1989). Firm characteristics and analyst following, Journal of Accounting and Economics, 11 (2–3), 255-274. https://doi.org/10.1016/0165-4101(89)90008-6.
Blankespoor, E., E. deHaan, & Q. Li. (2026) Generative AI in Financial Reporting. Journal of Accounting Research 64 (3), 1189-1232. https://doi.org/10.1111/1475-679X.70050.
Brochet, F., Jagolinzer, A. D., & Riedl, E. J. (2013). Mandatory IFRS adoption and financial statement comparability. Contemporary Accounting Research, 30(4), 1373–1400. https://doi.org/10.1111/1911-3846.12002
Brown, L. D., Call, A. C., Clement, M. B., & Sharp, N. Y. (2019). Managing the narrative: Investor relations officers and corporate disclosure☆. Journal of Accounting and Economics, 67(1), 58-79. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jacceco.2018.08.014
Bruns, W. R., Merchant, K. A. (1990). The dangerous morality of managing earnings. Management Accounting, 72 (2), 22-25. https://www.researchgate.net/publication/265235024_The_Dangerous_Morality_of_Managing_Earnings

Bushee, B. J., Jung, M. J., & Miller, G. S. (2017). Do investors benefit from selective access to management?. Journal of Financial Reporting, 2(1), 31-61. https://doi.org/10.2308/jfir-51776
Bushee, B. J., Gerakos, J., & Lee, L. F. (2018). Corporate jets and private meetings with investors. Journal of Accounting and Economics, 65(2–3), 358–379. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jacceco.2018.02.001
Butler, M., Kraft, A., & Weiss, I. S. (2007). The effect of reporting frequency on the timeliness of earnings: The cases of voluntary and mandatory interim reports. Journal of Accounting and Economics, 43(2–3), 181–217. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jacceco.2007.01.005
Campbell, J. L., Twedt, B. J., & Whipple, B. C. (2021). Trading prior to the disclosure of material information: Evidence from Regulation Fair Disclosure Form 8-Ks. Contemporary Accounting Research, 38(1), 412-442. https://doi.org/10.1111/1911-3846.12610
Cather, W., S. Pierce, & A. Tillet. 2026. Consequences of Delayed Accounting Standard Adoption: Evidence from the JOBS Act (May 08, 2026). Available SSRN: https://ssrn.com/abstract=6735560 or http://dx.doi.org/10.2139/ssrn.6735560
Chaplinsky, S., Hanley, K. W., & Moon, S. K. (2017). The JOBS Act and the costs of going public. Journal of Accounting Research, 55(4), 795–836. https://doi.org/10.1111/1475-679X.12172
Cheng, L., S. Liao, & H. Zhang. 2013. The Commitment Effect versus Information Effect of Disclosure—Evidence from Smaller Reporting Companies. The Accounting Review, 88 (4), 1239–1263. https://doi.org/10.2308/accr-50416
Choi, J. H., & C. L. Xie. 2026. Human + AI in Accounting: Early Evidence from the Field. Journal of Accounting Research, 64 (3), 1333–1373. https://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/10.1111/1475-679x.70052?af=R.
Christensen, H. B., Hail, L., & Leuz, C. (2013). Mandatory IFRS reporting and changes in enforcement. Journal of Accounting and Economics, 56 (2-3, Supplement 1), 147-177. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jacceco.2013.10.007
Corona, C., Huang, Z., & Hwang, H. (2024). Accounting uniformity, comparability, and resource allocation efficiency. The Accounting Review, 99(1), 139–161.

https://doi.org/10.2308/TAR-2021-0024
Dichev, I. D., Graham, J. R., & Harvey, C. R., & Rajgopal, S. (2013). Earnings quality: evidence from the field. Journal of Accounting and Economics 56, (2-3, Supplement 1), 1-33. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jacceco.2013.05.004
DiMaggio, P. J., & Powell, W. W. (1983). The iron cage revisited: Institutional isomorphism and collective rationality in organizational fields. American Sociological Review, 48(2), 147–160. https://doi.org/10.2307/2095101
Everard, A., & St. Pierre, K. (2024). Valuation issues, auditor fraud, and PCAOB confirmation: findings from an analysis of lawsuits against large public accounting companies. Journal of Accounting, Auditing and Finance, 39 (2), 456-467. https://doi.org/10.1177/0148558X211065856 Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB). 2024. Conceptual Framework for Financial Reporting. Available at: https://storage.fasb.org/Conceptual%20Framework%20for%20Financial%20Reporting%20(September%202024).pdf
33
Gladwell, M. (2022). Severance. The New Yorker 98 (36), 71-76. Was Jack Welch the Greatest C.E.O. of His Day—or the Worst? | The New Yorker
Graham, J. R., Hanlon, M., & Shevlin, T. (2011). Real effects of accounting rules: evidence from multinational companies' investment location and profit repatriation decisions. Journal of Accounting Research, 49 (1), 137-185. https://doi.org/10.1111/j.1475-679X.2010.00395.x
Graham, J. R., Harvey, C. R., & Rajgopal, S. (2005). The economic implications of corporate financial reporting. Journal of Accounting and Economics, 40 (1-3), 3-73. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jacceco.2005.01.002
Henry, E., Liu, F.-C., Yang, S., & Zhu, X. (2025). Does financial statement line-item comparability affect analysts' forecasts? Journal of Accounting, Auditing & Finance, 40(2), 337–369. https://doi.org/10.1177/0148558X231167461
Hillegeist, S., Kausar, A., Kraft, A., & Park, Y. (2026). More frequent financial reporting and market feedback effect: evidence from U.S. and EU regulatory changes Journal of Accounting and Public Policy, 56, 107421.
Kasznik, R., & Lev, B. (1995). To Warn or Not to Warn: Management Disclosures in the Face of an Earnings Surprise. The Accounting Review, 70 (1), 113–134. http://www.jstor.org/stable/248391
Kellogg, R. L. (1984). Accounting activities, security prices, and class action lawsuits. Journal of Accounting and Economics, 6 (3), 185-204. https://doi.org/10.1016/0165-4101(84)90024-7
Kinney, W. R., Palmrose, Z.-V. & Scholz, S. (2004). Auditor independence, non-audit services, and restatements: was the U.S. government right? Journal of Accounting Research, 42(3), 561–588. https://doi.org/10.1111/j.1475-679X.2004.t01-1-00141.x
Krishnan, G. V., Srinidhi, B., & Su, L. (2008). Inventory policy, accruals quality and information risk. Review of Accounting Studies, 13(2–3), 369–410. https://doi.org/10.1007/s11142-008-9067-2
Lee, C.-W. J., & Petruzzi, C. R. (1989). Inventory accounting switch and uncertainty. Journal of Accounting Research, 27(2), 277–296. https://doi.org/10.2307/2491236.
Lesmond, D. A., Ogden, J. P., Trzcinka, C. A. (1999) A New Estimate of Transaction Costs. The Review of Financial Studies, 12 (5), 1113-1141. https://doi.org/10.1093/rfs/12.5.1113
Leuz, C. (2007). Was the Sarbanes–Oxley Act of 2002 really this costly? A discussion of evidence from event returns and going-private decisions. Journal of Accounting and Economics, 44(1–2), 146–165. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jacceco.2007.06.001 Leuz, C., & Verrecchia, R. E. (2000). The economic consequences of increased disclosure.

Journal of Accounting Research, 38, 91–124. https://doi.org/10.2307/2672910
Lewis, C., and J. White. 2023. Deregulating innovation capital: The effects of the JOBS Act on biotech startups. Review of Corporate Finance Studies, 12 (2), 240–290. https://doi.org/10.1093/rcfs/cfac039.
Lobo, G. A., & Zhou, J. (2006). Did conservatism in financial reporting increase after the Sarbanes-Oxley Act: initial evidence. Accounting Horizons, 20 (1), 57-73. https://doi.org/10.2308/acch.2006.20.1.57
34
Mahoney, P. (2009). The development of securities law in the United States . Journal of Accounting Research, 47 (2), 325–347. https://doi.org/10.1111/j.1475-679X.2009.00326.x
Roychowdhury, S., Shroff, N., & Verdi, R. S. (2019). The effects of financial reporting and disclosure on corporate investment: a review. Journal of Accounting and Economics, 68 (2-3, Supplement 1), 101246. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jacceco.2019.101246
Schipper, K. (1994). Academic accounting research and the standard setting process. Accounting Horizons, 8(4), 61-73. https://www.proquest.com/scholarly-journals/academic-accounting-research-standard-setting/docview/208902786/se-2?accountid=14270
Singapore Exchange. (2020, January 09). SGX RegCo adopts risk-based approach to quarterly reporting. Retrieved June 27, 2026, from: https://links.sgx.com/1.0.0/corporate-announcements/4ZXEWPTOJB0IZC33/d779bf5161bc8f8724e219922bdf93e3e5f7397e6e142fbcf20adf83121d26ea
Sivakumar, K., & Waymire, G. (1994). Voluntary interim disclosure by early 20th century NYSE industrials. Contemporary Accounting Research, 10(2), 91–124. https://doi.org/10.1111/j.1911-3846.1994.tb00410.x
Soltes, E. (2014). Private interaction between firm management and sell-side analysts. Journal of Accounting Research, 52(1), 245–272. https://doi.org/10.1111/1475-679X.12037
Solomon, D., & Soltes, E. (2015). What are we meeting for? The consequences of private meetings with investors. The Journal of Law and Economics, 58(2), 325–355. https://doi.org/10.1086/684038
Sunder, S. (1997). Theory of accounting and control. South-Western College Publishing. https://faculty.som.yale.edu/shyamsunder/theory-of-accounting-and-control/
Zingales, L. (2009). The future of securities litigation. Journal of Accounting Research ,47 (2), 391-425. https://doi.org/10.1111/j.1475-679X.2009.00331.x
35

Gilbert Aguilar Restaurant manager and investor — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gilbert Aguilar My name is Gilbert Aguilar I'm a restaurant manager and have a few investments that this ruling would affect. Keeping consistent accountability is necessary to run any type of business or organization. Allowing businesses to skirt on those responsibilities is not a good business practice. Please keep reportings quarterly.

Gregory Barton Professor of Law — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gregory Barton SEC should be trying to move reporting for companies to a shorter timeframe for greater transparency to investors, not a longer timeframe. This proposed rule will allow companies to hide financial problems from the investing public for long periods, and hurts the very people that the SEC is supposed to protect—mainstream investors with retirement portfolios. The problem with this rule is that when something you're invested in starts going down the tubes, you'll be the last to know, and so will your fund managers. This is bad for everyone invested in the stock market through IRAs, 401ks, etc . This is not in the public interest. We should have more transparency for the corporations the public is invested in, not less. The only winners in this rule are the corporate insiders, and allowing companies to hide financial problems for longer periods hurting the investors the SEC is supposed to protect.

Gwendolyn Myles-Chisholm Taxpayer — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. PCAOB-2025-01 From: Gwendolyn Myles-Chisholm All companies should be held accountable and report quarterly as it is. The only reason that this administration wants to change is to keep the dirt they have done over the past 6 months covered. All companies should adhere to strict standards.

H Malk — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: H Malk We need quarterly reporting. Do not change this requirement.

Heather Cole Invester, US — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Heather Cole Please do not take away public either individual or corporate investment entities ability to keep tabs on what companies are doing with the funds we are investing with them or considering investing with them. Twice a year is not enough. Quarterly reporting is not a huge burden. As a corporate employee I often have to do monthly, quarterly and yearly reporting as part of my job. It is the least we can expect from corporations to provide information to protect not only our investments but also the financial stability of our nation. Do not approve reducing reporting from quarterly to twice a year. This will not strengthen the position of the companies nor the position of the overall financial markets which we all rely on so heavily now. The current administration wants us to be self-reliant and providing this information on a quarterly basis as has been successful for 50 years is important to continue. Again just in case you're not clear, I strongly disagree with the proposal to reduce to twice yearly reporting and ask that you do not approve this proposal. Please continue with quarterly reporting. Thank you

---

Helen Harris — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-24 From: Helen Harris Keep quarterly reports so that investors can monitor funds and make decisions in a timely manner.

Helen S Crescenzi Retired, investor — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Helen S Crescenzi This proposal is counter to the public interest. It advantages those in powerful positions, while depriving every day investors of vital information that potentially impacts the value of their investments. This proposal would prove detrimental to the health of our Country's economy and to the welfare of most of its citizens.

Hollie David — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Hollie David As a concerned US citizen, I would like the SEC to keep the requirement of quarterly reporting available to the public investors.

Individual Individual — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Individual Please report four times a year It is essential. So many of us have money in the stock market It needs to know the company's progress every 3 months or else people will come out of the stock market and find another investments and leave teachers and everyday workers in the dark Quarterly reporting lets you know the outlook of the company or companies if you only report once or twice a year you left in the dark for 6 months which is unacceptable I would put all my money out of the market and put it into bonds I have substantial money in the stock market you have my word I would put it into cash gold bonds no more stocks it's not worth the risk

---

J Ramseyer — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: J Ramseyer I In an age where companies are using every technology to quietly take away the individual’s right to privacy, giving the companies we invest our time and money into the right to less transparency for the investor is not the right decision. Every tech to make this efficient exists! Keep accountability in play. - J. Ramseyer, Missouri.

Jack Stensgaard — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jack Stensgaard I am investing my own hard earned money to support myself in retirement. I study all available information at least every quarter to adjust my allocations. I believe moving from quarterly reporting to semi-annual is a terrible idea. Significant information can be hidden longer leading to larger price swings when the information finally does come out. I can envision insiders making trades affecting prices long before the public knows why they were trading. As an investor, I need and deserve the most up to date information available. Please leave reporting quarterly or make it even more frequent.

---

james collins none — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: james collins Re: SEC Proposed Rule S7-2026-15 – Proposed Semiannual Reporting Option I respectfully oppose the proposed rule that would allow eligible public companies to replace quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting. Quarterly reporting promotes transparency, accountability, and timely disclosure of material financial information. Investors, particularly individual retail investors, rely on regular financial reports to make informed investment decisions and to evaluate company performance. Reducing the frequency of required reporting could: Decrease transparency by extending the time between required financial disclosures. Increase information asymmetry between company insiders and public investors. Reduce market confidence by limiting access to current financial information. Make it more difficult for investors to identify changes in a company's financial condition in a timely manner. While reducing compliance costs for smaller companies is a worthwhile objective, I believe there are more targeted ways to achieve that goal without reducing the frequency of public financial reporting. Maintaining quarterly reporting helps ensure that all investors have access to timely and consistent information. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission not to adopt the proposed rule. Thank you for considering my comments.

James Morton — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Morton I strongly urge the SEC to keep its quarterly reporting requirement. Semi-annual reporting stands to give large entities and investors, who have greater resources and access to information, an advantage at the expense of smaller investors. Quarterly reporting promotes transparency; less frequent reporting provides greater opportunities for companies to hide bad or adverse news from smaller investors for longer periods of time and increases these investors' risk. Billions of small investors' dollars, held in various retirement accounts, college savings funds, etc. are at stake. Please do not allow companies to adopt any reporting period that is less frequent than quarterly. Thank you.

James Swartz Retired — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Swartz I'm am in agreement that the potential risks are too dangerous switching to biannual reporting of corporate financials. I would vote to keeping the current quarterly reporting system that is already in place! Thank you.

Jana VanArsdale Data Analyst — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jana VanArsdale I'm writing to express by strong opposition to the proposal to change corporate reporting requirements from quarterly to semi annual.. History has shown that less transparency comes with lower returns and lower valuations. As a 62 year old on the brink of retirement after working since age 14, the move to six month reporting cycle introduces severe operational and structural risks to my life savings. I rely heavily on consistent and timely corporate disclosures to protect my savings. The primary mandate of the SEC must remain investor protection. Reducing transparency to satisfy short term, corporate convenience, directly undermines public trust in the integrity of the US capital markets. Quarterly reporting provides the steady transparency required to make informed and safe investment decisions. I urge the commission to reject this proposal and maintain the current quarter of the reporting framework.

Jane Whiteside — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jane Whiteside This ruling, although in the name of efficiency will really hide transparency and accountability and sets a very dangerous precedent allowing companies to serve their own interests.

Janet Jacobs Teacher — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Janet Jacobs I support continuing quarterly reports.

Janet laylor Individual investor — Jul 3, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Janet laylor My entire retirement is in my house and the market. I deoend on quarterly reports to understand the health of my various investments. I depend on yhe SEC and my government to help these companies stay honest. Please dont allow companies another way to keep investors like me waiting 6 months instead of 3 to make sure my investments are dound

---

Jay Rutledge — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jay Rutledge I am totally against this change. We need the transparency that quarterly reporting provides to investors. Investors deserve to be informed as often as possible of what is happening in a company that they own shares in. From my corporate experience, this change would not save corporations much money if any. I urge you not to make this change and to keep the rules as they are.

JD Masterpool — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: JD Masterpool Maintain current practices with oversight & quarterly reporting.

Jean cummings Retired teacher — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jean cummings Stop trying to make it easier to have more corruption.

Jean Eichhorst — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jean Eichhorst Quarterly reports are essential data that inform decision making, the public, and economic and business activities. The SEC needs to continue to require publicly available quarterly reports for economic rigor.

Jen Mulholland — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jen Mulholland Please do not allow this to happen. As an individual investor, this will tie my hands because I will not be able to obtain information on the companies financial health for an extended period of time which will give businesses time to hide any problems that may be occurring and put my investments in jeopardy. Please have my back on this matter. Don’t abandon the average person.

Jennie Dugan retiree — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennie Dugan Regarding Proposed Rule File Number S7-2026-15, change to quarterly reporting Please do not change this requirement to optional. Those of that remember how devastating Enron was to Americans saving for retirement can see that happening again. Most people are honest and willing to be transparent, but making this rule optional benefits those few who are not and who would seek to hide the financial realities. Please do not change this rule. Please keep quarterly reporting mandatory. Thank you. Jennie Dugan

---

Jewell Stremler Retiree — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jewell Stremler I'm a retiree, I worked 50 years. I earned my retirement annuity. I need companies that my benefits are invested in to be transparent. Quarterly reporting must be mandatory. I think we should require monthly reports.

Jillian Caballero none — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jillian Caballero I want to KEEP quarterly reporting because transparency is the foundation of a free answer fair stock market. Quarterly filings dramatically shorten the window in which fraud can fester. Without quarterly reporting, retail investors like me are on an unlevel playing field, with no way to get timely information about public companies. I rely on quarterly reports to make decisions about my investments and retirement savings.

Joe Simon The Motley Fool Community — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joe Simon Considering current corporate trends, executive teams' tendency to prioritize self interest over shareholders' and scarce accountability, it appears obvious that investors need thorough and more frequent - rather than less - disclosure.

John Doran Engineer — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Doran Dear SEC, I am writing to express my strong opposition to Proposed Rule S7-2026-15, which would allow public companies to reduce their reporting frequency from quarterly to semiannually. Mandatory quarterly reporting (Form 10-Q) is a cornerstone of market transparency and retail investor protection. Business changes are happening more quickly than ever before due to the proliferation of AI and due to all the uncertainty being caused by political tensions around the world. Everyday people who are retail investors deserve as much transparency as possible from the companies they are investing in. They rely on frequent, consistent data to evaluate risks and make informed decisions. Also regular financial reporting encourages corporate accountability. Think of what happened with Enron or the Lehman Brothers and how devestating those were to everyday Americans and their retirement savings. These corporate scandals must never happen again. Mandatory quarterly reporting will help reduce the blast radius of these types of scandals. For these reasons, I ask the SEC to reject this proposal and protect market integrity by keeping financial reporting quarterly.

John Hemkens none — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Hemkens Current rules were put into place to hold public companies accountable after misleading the investors with the finincial reporting of the time. Do not change the rules to allow this behavior to return.

John J Golan Retired — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John J Golan Quarterly reporting should not change and must continue for the benefit of shareholders and the overall economy. Do not change this. JJG

John Murray — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Murray Since the 2008 financial crisis, the S&P 500 has returned over 11% annually for hard working Americans, like me, who are lucky enough to participate in the markets. The current administration likes to correlate the success of the financial markets to the success of the country. History has shown that not doing quarterly reporting as it is done today will hurt the markets. I've read that the reason for this change is to reduce costs and allow company leadership to focus on day-to-day operations rather than reporting. These companies have a lot of computing resources, and many are investing in AI, both of which are perfectly suited to quickly and cheaply producing a quarterly form report. And the leaders of these companies are very smart people who surround themselves with very smart people so these reports should not be a distraction from day-to-day operations. If it ain't broke, don't fix it.

John White Retired — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John White Individual investors need the most current information possible. Additionally, the chance of fraud and other improper transactions needs to be monitored on a frequent basis.

Jonnie Taton Civil Servant — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jonnie Taton Quarterly reporting must remain the standard. Mandatory quarterly reporting is an essential tool to ensure proactive and responsive decision making occurs by having timely data, and it supports transparency and reduces volatility. Lack of reporting benefits insiders and opens up the possibility of fraud .

Jordan Harburger Retired Registered Representative — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jordan Harburger Since the Enron debacle US publically held corporations' CEOs and CFOs have been required to sign their corporations' quarterly financial reports attesting to the accuracy of their corporations' financial condition facts and changes, under penalty of severe consequences for knowingly misrepresenting to the public those facts, conditions and changes. This has helped to protect the public from fraud. Please maintain the requirement enacted by Congress that corporate CEOs and CFOs must sign their quarterly financial reports to certify that they accurately present the financial facts, conditions and changes about their corporations. Please do not expose investors to the increased risks of more fraud and greater investor risk inherent in reducing the frequency of such required signing certifying and reporting by CEO and CFOs. Sincerely, Jordan Harburger Retired Registered Representative 9500 Sidebrook Rd #208 Owings Mills MD 21117

Josh Ingram — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Josh Ingram As an employee of a publicly traded company and as an investor, I want to maintain the quarterly pulse checks on the finances of my employer and my investments. Keep the quarterly reports on the table for us so we aren’t blind 12 months at a time.

Joshua Roberts Engineer — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joshua Roberts This is wrong and I do not support this. Do not go through with this.

Joyce Barry Private investor — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joyce Barry Doing away with quarterly financial reporting and allowing publicly traded companies to only file semi-annually is a bad idea on many levels. First is the lack of transparency for individual and institutional investors. Many things can happen to a company during a 6 month period that an investor will not know about until it's too late. Had they known what was going on, they may have chosen to purchase a different stock or sold the shares they owned. Second, less frequent reporting opens the gates for increased fraud such as occurred at Healthsouth, Maddoff Investments, Enron, Worldcom and Pharmor (to look really far back.) Part of the SEC's mandate is to eliminate the potential for fraud. This proposal does not accomplish that. Third is the impact on the commercial and fixed income markets. With less current information, it becomes more difficult for banks and institutional lenders to assess loan risk and track risk throughout the life of the loan. This may cause smaller regional lenders to withdraw syndication participation and/or increase rates. Fewer participants and increased rates would have a chilling effect on companies' access to debt. Reject this change. The health and stability of our markets - both capital and debt - depend on regular, reliable, accurate financial statements delivered quarterly.

Judy Killeen Retired — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Judy Killeen My name is Judy Killeen and I am a retiree from the commercial insurance field. A significant portion of my retirement income is from my investments. I am against moving from quarterly reporting to semi-annual reporting. The retail investor needs timely reporting so we can make informed decisions. The savings are negligible. Delayed reporting will only increase the chance of fraud. Regulation is not a dirty word. It is necessary to protect people and all of society. Less frequent reporting can also increase volatility which increases the instability in society. Please keep reporting quarterly.

Julie Mendenhall Retired — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Julie Mendenhall Keep quarterly reporting, so CEO's and other signers will remain honest. It's too easy for them to cheat, lie and steal without the threat of prison time. Julie Mendenhall, retired. Location is Burien, WA

Kahla Broussard Board member non profit — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kahla Broussard I am writing to urge the Commission not to adopt the proposed rule allowing public companies to opt into semiannual reporting on Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q. 1. Comparability breaks down. If some companies report quarterly and others semiannually, analysts and investors lose the ability to compare firms within the same industry on equal footing. The proposal compounds this by letting companies switch reporting frequency year to year, which invites gaming — companies could time elections to periods when less disclosure is advantageous. 2. The short-termism rationale is not supported by evidence. A central justification for this proposal is that quarterly reporting fuels short-term thinking at the expense of long-term investment. But the UK's own experiment with this exact policy — mandatory quarterly reporting from 2007, then optional from 2014 — showed no meaningful change in corporate investment behavior in either direction. The empirical record does not support the premise that reporting frequency drives management's time horizon.

Karen Hillier None, retired — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Hillier Quarterly reports regarding financial investments and securities are essential and must continue. Anything less endangers the investor who is taking the full risk of the investment from day one.

Kathryn Lale Davidson Professor of English — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathryn Lale Davidson Don't end quarterly reporting! There is already too much insider trading, and eliminating quarterly reporting just makes insider trading easier. The rich with their advisors will have all the advantages of getting richer, and those of us in the starting lane won't be able to get started. We need these this information. The founding fathers knew that we needed this information. Flying blind is never a good idea.

Kathy Anderson None, retired — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathy Anderson Keep quarterly reporting; seniors with retirement investments will be underserved should you adopt only quarterly reporting. Please!

Kay Platt — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kay Platt Please keep quarterly reporting. History shows that reduced reporting harms investors. Individuals, especially seniors, need timely information to protect their assets. With global events affecting markets, quarterly reports are critical for financial decisions and security.

Kentley Benson Dean Kentley Benson Dean — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kentley Benson Dean It is simply EVIL to be so GREEDY that you need to LIE about how much money you make or have for your SELFISH self, when our USA has so many families who live without just the basics due to being UNDERPAID when our economy is OVERINFLATED & SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFACTORS are expected to LIVE OFF OF MEAGER 2% INCREASES TO THEIR BENEFITS WHEN THE USA IS EXPERIENCING A 50% RISE IN COSTS FOR EVERYTHING??? HAVE THE GRACE TO HELP OUT YOUR FELLOW AMERICAN CITIZENS!!

Kevin Baur — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin Baur I am AGAINST changing the Corporation filing period changes from Quarterly (10-Q) to Semi-Annual (10-S.) Such a change would limit information to investors from 4 times per year to only twice. It's more difficult to see trends with only 2 samples per year. This would give inside investors a considerable advantage over John Q. Public. It would make the rich richer. Thank you for giving the public the ability to provide feedback.

Kevin H Dellinger The Motley Fool Community — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin H Dellinger We need and want transparency always!!

Kevin Henderson Project manager, BPMI — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin Henderson What is the benefit for changing? If anything, Quarterly reporting has gotten easier with modern financial software.

Kevin Woida Teacher — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin Woida Kevin Woida Educational Assistant Portland, OR I am hoping to retire and have the SEC regulations/guardrails in place for me and my family when I get older. Your stripping quarterly reports leaves me with a future that is not satisfactory in this country.

Kim Cordetti — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kim Cordetti KIM CORDETTI, RETIRED. IT MATTERS BECAUSE, WHY FIX SOMETHING THAT ISN'T BROKEN, AND BECAUSE WE NEED TO BE AWARE OF MARKET ACTIVITIES as much as possible??? HELLO? SHOULD BE OBVIOUS. OH, YEAH I HAVE INVESTMENTS TO PROTECT. SINCERELY, KC

Lacey Rohde So tired of greed. Keep the quarterly reports as is. — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lacey Rohde Reports need to keep coming quarterly. When people get good at the process, the process gets altered so as to make difficulty for the people. We are sick of being limited, and we are smart enough to know what is going on.

Laura Anglum — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Anglum Given the frequency of general horse thieving and snake oil selling we read about, quarterly reports do not seem like too much to require. There was a good reason it went to quarterly. As an investor who is relying on my investments for income, I don’t think it is too much to ask for transparency 4 times a year from the companies I’m trusting with my money.

Laura McGillicuddy CPA — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura McGillicuddy I do not support the change from quarterly to semiannual filing by public companies. I do not believe that moving to semiannual reporting would ultimately serve the interests of investors or the capital markets. I believe quarterly reporting provides investors with timely and necessary information to make informed investment decisions. Extending the reporting interval to six months would significantly increase the amount of time during which investors must make decisions using outdated financial data, increasing uncertainty and in the end will be bad for the average investor. All the while, Congress and other political leaders will continue to trade off insider information. Please do not make this change!

Lawrence Kopperud Investor — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lawrence Kopperud I oppose this rule change. It would put all investors at greater risk for loosing money.

Leesa Powers Retired — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leesa Powers Keep things as they are now. We tried this before and it failed.

Leslie Kotyuk — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leslie Kotyuk Please keep quarterly reporting!

Lincoln W. Ward III — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lincoln W. Ward III I am writing to express my opposition to the SEC proposed rule that would allow public companies to opt out of quarterly reporting (Form 10-Q) in favor of semiannual reporting on the proposed Form 10-S. A significant increase in market transparency was achieved at the time our current quarterly reporting rule came into being. This substantially lowered unnecessary risks faced by investors large and small. The suggestion that the current rule imposes an undue burden on corporate business is simply incorrect. The systems mechanisms through which quarterly reporting requirements are serviced are robust and well-established. Moreover, the attention required on the part of C-level players, and the gravity of providing accurate financial reports, have been compelling drivers of good corporate behavior. The very suggestion that "short-termism" is a real problem is rather transparently misleading and the consequence of moving to semi-annual reporting will be a severe erosion of market transparency. At a time when so much political force is seemingly being applied to the privatization of the mechanisms of retirement, forcing an ever-increasing dependence on the markets, any suggestion of changes that diminish transparency and increase investment risk is both cynical and ill-advised.

Lisa Biordi Investor — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Biordi Once again, it appears that financial institutions and the government want to hide information in order to take advantage (or cheat) investors. I guess the bank collapse in 2008 wasn’t enough to prove that these institutions need oversight. My nephew who works in financial analysis for Wells Fargo called these “NINJA loans” - no job, no assets and institutions kept lending these people money. Then they defaulted. We lost half our investments. If institutions weren’t planning on doing something wrong in order to increase their bottom line, why hide what they are doing? Complaining that quarterly paperwork is too onerous is deceptive. For heavens sake, please protect regular Americans as the government is supposed to do.

Lissa Coleman Retired educator — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lissa Coleman We have a corrupt and compromised SEC!

Lynne — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lynne Keep the rules as they are. Businesses should work in sunshine.

M — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: M Against this change, there's no upside and no cost savings to companies and only downside to investors. Opens up options for long term lack of transparency and governance.

M Mimms Vanderbilt University — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: M Mimms I am a single parent who has overseen my investing for many years. I need transparency and current information to make the best decisions possible for myself and my family, now and in the future. I am patently opposed to the proposed, regressive six-month blackout and strongly urge the SEC to retain quarterly reporting. It is crucial that individual investors like me have ready access to current data in order to stay abreast of financial trends in these fast-moving, chaotic times.

Margaret Stolfa — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Margaret Stolfa Please don't move away from quarterly reporting. My investments are mde in reliance on it to know how to manage my money. Quarterly reporting is not a big savings to companies - they still have to keep their books - they only save the cost of accountants and lawyers to prepare the report, small savings that only benefits the people at the top of the companies. You must know opt in will not improve the situation. This change to would allow only those with connections to know what is going on for half a year leaving the rest of America in the dark. The other economies that have changed have seen fraud and failures; there is not a world wide standard to which the US can claim it needs to change. Please don't hide the ball from the average American like me just trying to make smart and informed investments.

María Herrero — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: María Herrero Lets preserve transaparency. Under this proposal, we owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses we own; it would make everyone less informed.

Marianne DeMarco — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marianne DeMarco Please do NOT give public companies the option to file twice a year rather than quarterly. This is a race to the bottom with transparency. Once large companies start filing twice a year, smaller competitors face pressure to follow. They can't justify "more compliance than the bigger guy." Investor expectations adjust downward. What started as a choice quietly becomes the new normal. Almost no rule like this stays optional for long.

Marilyn Black — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marilyn Black Keep quarterly Financial reporting requirements!

Martha Karen Trantham — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Martha Karen Trantham I hope you are really going to stop all the greed

---

Martha Retired — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Martha Our politicians seem so out of touch with regular citizens and what we need to survive. We need our politicians to be good stewards on our behalf. Please protect us. Don’t eliminate quarterly reporting! Don’t ignore the plight of regular people just trying to survive! Don’t sell out to the lovers of money!!!

Mary Ann Van Cura Past Treasurer of 501c3 — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Ann Van Cura As a past treasurer for a nonprofit, I have seen the value in monthly and quarterly reporting. Waiting six months to report financial data does not give the board and it’s public the timely information needed to assess the true financial position of the organization. There is a fiduciary responsibility to keep decision-makers, investors, and the public informed. I request that the quarterly reporting requirement for our corporations continue - for the financial safety of our communities.

Matthew Sholar — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew Sholar The regulatory state exists to protect citizens from those who would take advantage of them. This rule fails that standard by increasing opacity to the retail investor who has been asked for a generation to put their hope for retirement in the stock market. Reducing disclosure frequency when the business cycle is faster than ever before provides more opportunity for insider interests to achieve favorable outcomes at the expense of the common citizen.

Maureen Lee — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Maureen Lee I oppose the new semi-annual reporting. As an investor I appreciate the quarterly reviews to drive my investment decisions. I also like to see companies accountable regularly.

Melissa L — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Melissa L Keeping financial data hidden only benefits insiders. Transparency is critical. Keep quarterly reporting!

Michael Groce — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Groce Keep quarterly reporting. There is enough hiding and dishonesty in the market; creating quarterly reports is not THAT hard, nor is it that excessive.

Michael LaRocca Retired personal Investor — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael LaRocca To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I'm an investor and am opposed to the changes being proposed. Keep Quarterly Reports, they're necessary for consumer confidence and accountability. 6 months of non reporting is unacceptable to the stockholders they are responsible to. This system works, isn't cost prohibitive to those required to abide by these standards Respectfully Michael LaRocca

---

Monica Field Retired corporate IT executive — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Monica Field As a retiree, it’s critical to have stability and predictable markets by relying on high integrity and frequent measures and metrics. After living through several market meltdowns, it’s imperative that we ensure accountability from the companies we invest in. I have a BS in managerial economics, follow macro topics as a hobby and read historical narratives of major events (lived through Enron, 1987 black Monday, 2003 internet downturn, 2008 financial crisis.). Please ensure continued transparency and accountability with quarterly reporting.

Nancy K. Pratt Staff Accountant — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy K. Pratt My name is Nancy K. Pratt, and I am a staff accountant. I worked at Peregrine Systems, Inc., in San Diego, from 2000 until several months after the company was acquired by Hewlett Packard. As is well known, Peregrine Systems, Inc.'s CEO and CFO, Stephen Gardner and Matthew Gless, and Vice President of Worldwide Sales Douglas Powanda served prison sentences for their part in fraudulent activities while at Peregrine Systems, Inc. Our company was one of several that prompted the passage of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act. Our company was one of the first directed by the SEC to adopt SOX Compliance and was under strict guidance by outside auditors. I authored our policy and procedures section for our Accounts Payable Department for SOX Compliance. I was both a stockholder and a stakeholder in Peregrine Systems, Inc., and both were severely damaged when the executive team chose to commit fraud. If this half-yearly reporting proposal is adopted, it will be a travesty for many stockholders and stakeholders, as the window will open wider for fraudulent behavior to occur. Keeping the quarterly 10-Q reporting keeps a tighter grip on publicly held companies and thus helps to discourage would-be fraudulent schemes from occurring. From a voice of experience, from someone who has seen the damage from the inside, I am adamantly against reducing the reporting requirements to twice a year. I respectfully request that the SEC maintains its quarterly 10-Q reporting requirements. Thank you for your consideration, Nancy K. Pratt

---

Natalia Gruenbaum — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Natalia Gruenbaum I believe no changes should be made. If given the opportunity, companies will leverage flexibility to hide critical information that investors working on behalf of average Americans should have at their disposal to make informed investment decisions. I think if this change is adopted, it would increase unethical insider trading and decrease transparency

---

Natalie Johnson — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Natalie Johnson There is so much fraud already. Semi-annual reporting will allow those of ill will to perpetrate more fraud. Accountability must be strengthened, not weakened.

Nathaniel Harlan — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nathaniel Harlan My name is Nathaniel Harlan. I am a musician and a teacher. I urge the SEC to continue to require quarterly reporting. We need this transparency to protect everyday people like me. The billionaires don't need more advantages - we do.

Nicole Hicks — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nicole Hicks I do not believe less reporting(from quarterly to biannually)is in the best interest of the public. It may be beneficial for employees wishing to invest in companies they are employed by if that reduction in reporting would reduce blackout dates in which purchases of stock may be made.

Octa Kellond — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Octa Kellond My name is Octa Kellond, a retiree, receiving a very small pension from my public schools job. I am 70 and own an IRA account and also receive Social Security. I am writing to ask that you NOT allow bi-annual financial reporting on how OUR MONEY is being used, If we cannot have monthly reporting, that actually should be possible in this digital age, then, at the very least, please continue quarterly required reporting. THANK YOU for your consideration of my request.

Opal Parikh — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Opal Parikh I support maintaining quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. Regular financial disclosures promote transparency, accountability, and informed decision-making for investors. As an individual investor and retirement saver, I rely on timely public information to understand how companies are performing. Reducing reporting frequency could make it harder to identify risks early and would provide less transparency for everyday investors. Please preserve quarterly reporting requirements.

Pam Brewer Citizen — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pam Brewer Hi. My retirement is tied to investments. I need those quarterly reports. Do not change the requirements.

Patience Isaac — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patience Isaac Keep reporting quarterly! Thank you.

Patricia Gunderson Citizen — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia Gunderson Transparency and expediency are cornerstones of good governance. Please do not reduce the frequency of reporting. Quarterly may already not be good enough for information to be actionable. The people deserve this information: clear, accurate, and timely. Please do not lengthen the time between reports.

Patricia Williams — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia Williams I oppose lengthening the reporting period or relaxing the rules on reporting in the favor of the companies. These rules were set up to protect investors and the general public. Required disclosures are an important part of investor decision making. The government should rule in favor of the public. Do not approve this proposal please.

Paul Seese N/A — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Seese Keep reporting quarterly. If any change needed it would be for more accountability.

Paula J. Schneiderman — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paula J. Schneiderman The SEC has been the bastion of public protection from corporations’ ability to deceive their stockholders. Dishonesty is more easily monitored when companies report their financials quarterly, rather than semi-annually. Please do not change this rule to accommodate those who wish to deceive the public.

PCG — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: PCG As a person who worked in retail for 35 years, the amount of nonsense that can occur in a quarter is astounding. The amount of destruction that could occur in six months scares the heck out of me. So many employees don't even last 6 months! The amount of change, the duds that are pushed around the store because they signed contracts not to discount! the product for a set amount of time! Having that info secret for 6 months, which is two seasons of product turnover, is a surefire way to invite shenanigans that will not ever serve the customer or the front line employee. Look at Michaels- private equity owned, trying to sell, conned into Jonathon Adler eating prime real estate with minimal to no discount, in a store that is constantly running sales. Over priced and not the right product for a craft store! Then they were talked into expensive color printers for every store with frames for the prints, too expensive and too limited in scope for a spur of the moment sale. The staff having to harass and beg the customer for another product that they don't want to make up the cost. And then firing or writing up or taking hours away from front-line, low-level employees for not making the metrics they were told would come just by printing being available. CVS, Walgreens, Target all offer far better print size options at a better cost, but the 2 or 3 people in the building must devote their time and attention to this fantasy moneymaker.

Philip Cecchini — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Philip Cecchini To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I am writing as an individual investor and retiree who relies on my investment portfolio to help fund my retirement. I strongly oppose any proposal to reduce public company financial reporting from quarterly to semiannual reporting. Timely, transparent financial information is one of the cornerstones of fair and efficient capital markets. As an individual investor, I do not have access to private meetings with management teams or sophisticated research resources. Quarterly reports help level the playing field by ensuring that all investors receive meaningful financial information on a regular, predictable schedule. Reducing reporting to twice a year would have several negative consequences: ● It would leave investors with significantly less current information when making investment decisions. ● It could increase market volatility by causing more information to accumulate between required reports, leading to larger price swings when results are finally released. ● It would make it more difficult to identify emerging risks, deteriorating financial conditions, or significant changes in a company’s performance. ● It could disadvantage retail investors while increasing the relative advantage of institutional investors who have greater resources to gather and analyze information from other sources. While I appreciate concerns that quarterly reporting may encourage short-term thinking, I do not believe reducing transparency is the appropriate solution. Companies already have considerable flexibility in communicating their long-term strategies through earnings calls, annual reports, investor presentations, and other disclosures. If there are concerns about excessive emphasis on short-term earnings targets, those concerns should be addressed directly rather than by reducing the availability of financial information. As someone whose retirement security depends on well-functioning capital markets, I value transparency, accountability, and equal access to information. Quarterly reporting has been an important part of the U.S. securities markets for decades and contributes to investor confidence. I respectfully urge the Commission to reject any proposal that would reduce the frequency of required financial reporting from quarterly to semiannual. Thank you for considering my comments. Sincerely, Phil Cecchini

---

Rachael Rutkowski — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rachael Rutkowski I am an investor and would like quarterly reports to remain as-is. I need to check on my 401k and holdings regularly.

Randy Prine Retired — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Randy Prine Against eliminating quarterly returns. We need more not less transparency.

Ray Souza — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ray Souza Stop stealing from the people!

Rebecca Walker — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rebecca Walker I strongly oppose replacing quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting. Reducing reporting frequency would reduce market transparency, and weaken investor decision making capabilities. I respectfully urge the SEC to retain mandatory quarterly reporting requirements. Thank you

---

Reinette Woollands The Motley Fool Community — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Reinette Woollands As retail investors we are owner of the businesses we invest in. As owners, we need regular financial information to make informed decisions. We use quarterly reporting to assess revenue, profit margins, debt, cash flow, risks and whether management is delivering on its promises. This helps with making decisions on our portfolio. Moving to biannual reporting would leave ordinary investors in the dark for longer. It would increase uncertainty and make it harder to decide whether to buy, hold or sell. Large institutions often have access to company management, analysts and paid research tools. Most retail investors do not. Quarterly reporting gives us the necessary insights into our companies' performance and a connection with management. Quarterly reporting supports transparency, accountability and fair access to information for all shareholders.

Retired couple None — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Retired couple As a retired couple, we rely on the quarterly reports to provide necessary information in order to adjust investments as we see necessary.

Rev Kurt Walker — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rev Kurt Walker What is the SEC thinking? We have daily examples of financial corruption in this country. Crypto, oil, tech companies, private equity. Reducing oversight at this time, when our country is in another gilded age is mindless. The love of money is the root of all evil. Capitalism is a wonderful system economic system as long as it doesn’t become toxic to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Please keep quarterly reporting a standard with SEC.

REY BLACQUE UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: REY BLACQUE Rather than DEcreasing the number of reports, this body should be galvanizing support to INcrease the number of reports. How can anybody justify diminishing the amount of information and view it as beneficial? Keeping individuals in the dark as to what is going on should only serve heighten anxiety and promote panic.

Reza Shafiei Engineer — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Reza Shafiei As an individual investor, I appreciate to know how the businesses that I invest in are performing financially and how they are contributing to the society on a regular basis. Reporting how a company is performing on a quarterly basis does not seem to be a burden to the company and it should be more cost effective and more accurate when the reports are completed for a shorter period (quarterly) versus a longer period (once every 6 months). The work that needs to be completed on a quarterly basis will still have to be done except once you increase the time to report, accuracy of the report will be impacted. I believe reporting once every 6 months will make it more difficult and costly for the company to report accurately. I recommend keeping the reporting process as it has always been.

Richard Barlow None — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Barlow I oppose a reduction in the quaterly reporting. I can imagine there is a push to reduce the size of goverment, and see an arguement being made that better SEC oversight can be made of each report with less staff. I'm not buying it. If anything increase your staff and guard the remaining public oversight of how money is flying around before it's to late. As it stands private interests are gobbling up ownership of assests that were more evenly distributed at an alarming rate. Is the goal to be run by people on a journey together with God, or just enslavement and hopelessness to the coin. If anything, congress should wake up and start requiring Private equity, and holders of large wealth and assets to do more reporting. I am very displeased at the offer I see develping to our grandchildren. Thank you. Happy 4th... God has His reasons we will never truely understand in this realm, but at least let's try keep it working for Him.

Richard Schneider — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Schneider I am writing as an individual retail investor to express my opposition to any proposal that would reduce public company reporting requirements from quarterly to semi-annual reporting. As I make investment decisions, I regularly review publicly available SEC filings and compare that information against company shareholder reports, earnings releases, and financial media coverage. Quarterly reporting provides a reliable, standardized source of information that allows investors like me to independently evaluate a company’s performance and financial condition rather than relying solely on company-produced materials or third-party commentary. Reducing reporting frequency would create longer periods during which investors have less access to verified financial information, making it more difficult for retail investors to make informed decisions and increasing the advantage held by corporate insiders and large institutional investors with greater resources. While I appreciate concerns about encouraging long-term thinking by management, I do not believe reducing transparency is the right solution. The strength and reputation of U.S. capital markets have long been built on timely disclosure, accountability, and investor confidence. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to maintain the current quarterly reporting requirements.

Richard Zaker — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Zaker Please block this proposal in order to maintain the public’s very trust in the financial system— and the SEC itself. Insider trading cases have become all too common. I want to be able to explain “fairness” to my grandchildren.

RM The Motley Fool Community — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: RM More information, not less is needed to make better informed decisions.

Robin Harbour Retired educator — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robin Harbour I believe that public companies should be held more accountable, not less. Switching to a bi-annual report brings less transparency and opens more opportunities for corruption. It's ill-advised to change what we have now. The American consumer needs this transparency.

Ronald Balasco Retired — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ronald Balasco Because we all deserve our investments to be based on facts, not fiction!

Ronald C Hay None — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ronald C Hay Quarterly reporting is not a burden on public corporations. It is an obligation to their shareholders to provide regular guidance on financial performance. Moving to semi annual reporting only reduces transparency and keep shareholders and investors in the dark. There is absolutely no good that can come of this.

Roxanne McGill — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Roxanne McGill As a retired citizen who has saved and now having to rely on my investments to supplement my SS, I am OPPOSED to this proposal. Any time we remove even the slightest bit of transparency, we no longer have timely visibility into the affected disclosure. It is the responsibility of our government to be the bookkeeper, the overseer to protect "We the People". The SEC and any other facet of our government has a responsibility to its citizens, which can be categorized into three main areas: protection, provision, and investment. WE MUST LEARN FROM PAST MISTAKES > 1929 crash, Enron, financial crisis of 2008, the collapse of Lehman Brothers ... the list goes on. Thank you.

S.W. Lavender S.W. Lavender — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: S.W. Lavender I am sick of these bastards always having another opportunity to falsify, insider trade, orcreate a loophole just for them or outright steal. They need more oversight not less. Quit making graft easier and more convenient. It shrinks the job market for forensic accountants. It shrinks our taxes not to go after these people ever. Maybe their businesses would flourish if they built up wages, rebuilt the middle class and people could afford to buy products again. Henry Ford payed his workers above average wages to force up the wages of the day. He did this so more families would be able to buy a car. He literally rebuilt the economy in way that could support his product. Our businessfolk have eliminated our middle class and wonder why their customer base is so damn thin. Maybe someday they will get it.

Samantha Steele — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Samantha Steele America is dealing with all time high of corruption thanks to the current administration, I can only deduce that the same bad actors are behind this proposal as it will open the economy to further manipulation and volatility. Insider Trading as reached the top of US politics, it would seem your organization is ignoring that as well as the reduction in market transparency, investor information gap which could create risks investors cannot take. Keep in mind other countries will still be reporting quarterly, allowing speculation that could also hurt the economy since the facts WON'T BE KNOWN. Is your organization willing to be another cog in the wheel of disparities forced on the American people and the world, who look to America, on its 250th anniversary, to be leaders of at least financial integrity? Or are we about to throw the baby out with the bath water!?

Sami Hussain 6 months is too long for an investor to be in the dark, companies can go bankrupt in less time than that. Why couldn't SEC have an exception rule for small companies that want to go public & have a cutoff after which they have to follow normal rules ? — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sami Hussain NA

Sara Pedri — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sara Pedri From experience, I can confirm that the accounting will still be done quarterly, if not monthly, for reporting to the Board of Directors, Officers, and internal executives. Switching to semi-annual reporting simply keeps the info away from stockholders and potential investors. Why would companies want to do that? I've never commented on something like this before now, but this proposed change is unnecessary; the need for it is unsubstantiated; and the delayed reporting will undoubtedly be detrimental to shareholders and potential investors.

Sarah Richardson — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sarah Richardson This rule change should not be permitted! The quarterly reporting requirements were established to help protect the financial interests of everyday Americans. There is no benefit to Americans from this rule change. These financial corporations are trading with OUR money and MUST be required to as transparent as possible.

Sarah Stein Assistant Prof, GSU College of Law — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sarah Stein I oppose allowing companies to lengthen their reporting period to 6 months because the reported information is vital aggregate data about economic conditions. Companies who choose to report less frequently, which will likely become customary, will reduce the breadth and frequency of information that policymakers and other decision makers have to understand and respond to economic conditions. It also could lead to the privatization of data that now exists publicly, as data purveyors struggle to replace a good quality data source with a watered down, privately collected alternative. Why would a regulating agency make it harder to detect and chase down troubling trends that could topple the economy? This is a bad idea and should not be implemented. On a more personal note, my financial investments, though modest, are intended to keep my family afloat during retirement. Reducing information like this will make it harder to be an informed investor, and will ultimately cost government more in social services, when uninformed choices lead to the loss of private safety nets and drives of retired people are struggling to get by. The minor expenses saved by companies if by two quarterly reporting deadlines a year are eliminated will quickly be dwarfed by the costs to people and systems that rely on these data at their current frequency.

Sarah W Carter — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sarah W Carter You may not care if my small portfolio gets smaller but lots of folks like me do care. When your public trust is gone the little guy is not the only one who will be hurting. So will you.

Selma Bonemery Veteran — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Selma Bonemery We must keep quarterly reporting so we are aware of what's going on. Selma Bonemery Enfield CT

Shahad Choudhury — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shahad Choudhury I support less frequent reporting for all sizes of companies. I like the idea of less burden on smaller companies, and less focus on quarterly metrics vs long term planning for all sizes of companies

---

Shawn M. Farrell National Inventory Control Manager - ASC Engineered Solutions — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shawn M. Farrell The quarterly reporting cadence should be maintained. Quarterly reporting maintains business focus and provides a balanced and consistent feedback mechanism. Shawn M Farrell

---

Shenlee Sires Investor — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shenlee Sires If I can’t get regular quarterly updates on my money, I will need to pull it out of investments and put somewhere that can provide me better visibility. I’m curious how I can gain daily visibility into how businesses are doing, not less. Why isn’t this possible with the technology we have today?

Sherwin Lee — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sherwin Lee Since 1970s the correct reporting should be quarterly. It has been a bedrock for USA companies and accounting. Do not change this as it will make companies less transparent on their financials.

Steven Walter Private investor — Jul 3, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven Walter I oppose the proposal to reduce SEC corporate reporting requirement from its current quarterly schedule to a semiannual schedule. While increasing the SEC reporting period from quarterly to semiannually would reduce corporate overhead, it would also degrade corporate transparency, thereby diminishing investor confidence and increasing the opportunities for insider trading. Semiannual reporting will also increase market volatility. With less frequent reporting, investors will increasingly rely on rumors, social media, and unsubstantiated commentary, amplifying unjustified swings in corporate valuations. Quarterly reporting is not just perfunctory, tedious, rote work; the resulting reports are scoured by investors and analysts who track corporate financials, opportunities, and risks. If that information becomes less timely, the gap between corporate insiders and outsiders widens, undermining a significant population of investors who lack visibility into company profitability, revenue, cash flow, and related financials. Relying on voluntary disclosure to fill the information void that less frequent reporting will create is unworkable. Companies tend to highlight their positive news, while relegating problems with existing financials, management, products and services, and liabilities to the fine print in SEC filings. Companies experiencing cash flow problems, reduced margins, emerging risks, or governance issues will go quiet. My advocacy for quarterly reporting is not in conflict with a desire to reform the reporting process. The SEC could streamline disclosure requirements, reduce the need for reporting on issues that aren't germane to financial performance and forecasting, and update the reporting process to leverage modern technology. Quarterly public disclosure is a small price to pay for access to a regulated market providing the opportunity to raise public capital. Semiannual reporting would save time and money, but at a cost of diminished transparency, increased market volatility, and enhanced opportunities for insider trading.

Susan Dvorscak — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Dvorscak Please do not allow semi-annual reporting. It is bad trade for all investors ultimately. It will hurt us regular investors by allowing persons with insider information in larger Corporations to quietly leave is "holding the bag." It will harm smaller companies and keep us all at risk. We actually would do well with more transparency, even monthly disclosure. These companies still need to keep their books brief boards etc. We need to be able to protect our 401(k), IRA'S and all our investments. More timely and accurate reporting is better for all. So, I am saying NO to semi annual reporting. We deserve more. Thank you

---

Susan Gillis Stephens n/a — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Gillis Stephens I respectfully urge the Securities and Exchange Commission to withdraw or substantially revise the proposed rule allowing public companies to replace quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting. As an individual investor managing my own retirement savings, I do not have access to teams of analysts or proprietary research. I rely on timely SEC filings to evaluate the companies in which I invest. Reducing the frequency of those filings would make it more difficult for me to make informed decisions about whether to buy, hold, or sell a stock. Public SEC filings are one of the few tools that provide ordinary investors with standardized, reliable, and legally accountable information. Quarterly reports help level the playing field between retail investors and large institutional investors, which have access to private briefings, analyst coverage, and alternative data sources that are not available to the general public. Reducing required financial reporting from every three months to every six months would significantly decrease the amount of current information available to investors. Six months is a long period in modern financial markets, during which a company's financial condition, liquidity, competitive position, legal exposure, or operational risks can change substantially. Delayed disclosure increases uncertainty and can make markets less transparent and more volatile, as investors may rely more heavily on speculation or incomplete information. While the proposal suggests that reducing reporting frequency may lower compliance costs and encourage long-term management focus, I do not believe this change is justified for large public companies. Many such companies already prepare detailed financial information throughout the year for internal management, lenders, auditors, and quarterly earnings releases. The incremental burden of preparing a Form 10-Q appears modest compared to the benefits of maintaining consistent, timely disclosure to the investing public. If the Commission is concerned about regulatory burden, a more appropriate approach would be targeted relief for smaller issuers with limited resources rather than reducing transparency for large, widely held public companies. Strong and fair capital markets depend on timely, comparable, and consistent disclosure. Investors cannot make fully informed decisions without up-to-date financial information. Reducing transparency would disproportionately benefit those with access to private information and sophisticated research tools, while disadvantaging ordinary investors. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to reject the proposed rule or substantially narrow its scope to preserve investor protection and market transparency as the Commission's highest priorities. Thank you for considering my comments.

The Motley Fool Community — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community The reduction of information used to inform the public of how a company is performing would do nothing to help the public. That is the exact purpose of making quarterly reports. Otherwise only true insiders will have any idea into what is going to and whenever transparency is being lessened it is usually for an ulterior motive. Everything the government allows a company to do cannot be at the cost to the general public.

Tia Wilke — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tia Wilke Do not change to semi-annual reporting. There is too much fraud, etc. out there these days. I had to submit quarterly reporting during my working career. Let's keep everything above board and transparent for EVERYONE. I remember Enron.

Timothy McIntyre — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Timothy McIntyre This administration is a criminal enterprise. The Republican party is complicit. They are eroding the Constitution and making it harder for everyday citizens to get by. Eventually it may have to be fought in the streets if it doesn't get any better and it looks like they are gearing up for just such a situation. Criminals need to be prosecuted.

Toby Cordone — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Toby Cordone I believe that for markets to be efficient and effective, publicly traded companies should continue to report financial information quarterly. Retail shareholders and traders require this to make more informed decisions. Reducing the amount of information available helps only a few while the majority are left waiting, lacking the knowledge required to act in their interests.

Troy Seagondollar — Jul 3, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Troy Seagondollar I am writing to oppose the Commission's proposal to allow semiannual reporting in place of the current quarterly reporting requirement. Quarterly reporting gives investors timely, regular insight into a company's financial condition and lets problems surface before they compound. Stretching the reporting interval to six months increases the risk that material issues — deteriorating cash flow, accounting irregularities, emerging fraud — go undetected for longer, leaving investors to trade on stale information. This is particularly concerning for retail investors, who have far less access to the private channels (analyst calls, informal guidance) that institutional investors could use to fill the gap. Frequent reporting also imposes discipline on management and auditors. Reducing that cadence loosens accountability at a time when the Commission should be reinforcing investor protection, not relaxing it. I urge the Commission to retain quarterly reporting as the default standard and to reject this proposal.

Victoria Kelley Retired financial advisor — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Victoria Kelley Keep quarterly reporting. The market needs more transparency, not less. Different rules for some disenfranchises someone else.

Virginia Saylor — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Virginia Saylor I believe this opens a bad window for more covering up and not reporting to investors, so many companies have made the news and investors have lost money with quarterly reports extending the periods of time sounds BAD for investors!

VIRGINNY SCHIPPANO — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: VIRGINNY SCHIPPANO I am against this plan I am against reduced disclosure and the harm stress and worry this will cause people and I am against the potential financial loss this will cause

---

W webber — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: W webber No more GRIFT FOR DT!!!!!

Zachary Wilson Executive Presbyter, Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area — Jul 3, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Zachary Wilson Reducing transparency in any of the corporate governance and reporting requirements of publicly traded companies is contrary to investors, consumers, employees, and the public interest. There is not positive evidence that reducing reporting frequency will do anything but reduce costs to corporations and no evidence that companies will pass that savings on to consumers. I urge the SEC to maintain and even strengthen its quarterly reporting requirements. And, given the corporate championing of AI, it seems that their reporting costs should come down regardless of the reporting frequency. There is no need to reduce it. Thank you for your time and consideration. Sincerely, Rev. Zachary Wilson

---

Abby Tusing — Jul 2, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Abby Tusing Keep quarterly reporting. We need more transparency, not less.

ACR — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: ACR As an everyday investor, I feel completely left in the dark by this rule. For people like me, checking quarterly updates is how we make sure our hard-earned retirement savings are safe. Six months is a lifetime in the stock market. If a company waits half a year to report a major financial slump, regular families will be the last to know, while big Wall Street hedge funds will use their connections to bail out early. This rule doesn’t help regular folks. It just hides the truth and leaves us holding the bag. We deserve honest, timely answers.

Ajit Jain — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ajit Jain As an Individual Investor in companies I need the same info as institutional investors nothing less then that. By reducing the number of reporting you are taking that knowledge away from individual investors like me. Investing is how my family make our living and this would be make it much more difficult for me to be an investor in the market. So I am totally against this decision.

Alan J Cohen Former Registered Representative — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan J Cohen If anything, the reporting should be more frequent, not less. With the growing number of investors in the United States and around the world investing in American equities, it's imperative that we remain as transparent as possible for the safety and benefit of the investing public.

Alex Andrikopoulos — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alex Andrikopoulos Dear Secretary Countryman,I am writing as an active, self-directed retail equity trader executing block sizes of 5,000 to 10,000 shares per order, focusing primarily on high-float, high-liquidity equities priced under $10. My entire trading edge relies on micro-market structures: specifically scanning depth-of-book Level 2 data to capture microscopic .005 sub-penny fills. I am writing to strongly oppose the elimination of the Order Protection Rule (Rule 611) and the reduction of corporate reporting frequency (File No. S7-2026-15).For a retail trader routing $40,000 to $80,000 per transaction, execution quality is not a theoretical concept—it represents real capital friction. Eliminating Rule 611 removes the legal requirement for institutional algorithms to respect time-and-price priority on the public ledger. On high-float, liquid names, this allows institutional high-frequency traders to utilize private dark pools to "queue-jump" front-end retail limit orders by fractions of a cent, systematically cutting off retail fills. Furthermore, without a legally protected, unified NBBO, retail wholesalers will face significantly less competitive pressure to offer genuine sub-penny price improvements across large share blocks, leading to severe mid-order slippage . Additionally, reducing corporate disclosures to a semiannual timeline deprives the public market of the fundamental structural data needed to price high-float equities accurately. Removing quarterly reports converts Level 2 order books from a reliable execution map into a highly volatile system prone to sudden "ghost quotes" and institutional spoofing . The Commission should protect retail capital by maintaining mandatory quarterly disclosures and preserving the structural protections of Rule 611.

Allison La Reau Stylist — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Allison La Reau Allison Companies should be held to high standards of financial reporting for fairer investment strategies from exterior parties and a more stable financial landscape for the economy overall.

Alondra Pacheco Motley Fool Community — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alondra Pacheco Investors have a right to obtain information in a timely fashion in order to make decisions that affect their investments. Limiting the amount of information provided is detrimental to investors who would be unable to check how their investments are doing.

Amy Daniels — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amy Daniels I am concerned about the proposed change for corporations to report earnings every 6 months (as opposed to the way it has been done for years with quarterly reports). This move will reduce transparency for investors and could allow corporations to hide "red flags" such as concealing liquidity crises and accounting fraud. It tilts power to insiders and disrupts valuation models.

Andrew Neutzling Senior Service Planner, Central Ohio Transit Authority — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Neutzling I oppose the rule change to reduce quarterly reporting requirements. Quarterly reporting is important for transparency and fairness to investors. It could make fraud more likely and harm consumers. As an investor and stakeholder in a pension fund, it is important to me to keep transparency and fairness in the investment process.

Anne M Horn Platz — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne M Horn Platz Responsibility needs to be acknowledged and in order to keep things honest acknowledgment has to be made constantly. Please do not stop this progress we've made. Please keep the signatures required as they are now and the acknowledgment of what they are doing. Keep things in the open

---

Anonymous — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Please keep reporting quarterly! People rely on this information for investment decisions. We need more transparency in financial reporting, not less!

Anonymous — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Less reporting is dangerous for retail investors in particular. Strongly request the SEC to _not_ go ahead with this proposal and keep the existing mandatory quarterly reporting. Please do not further erode the trust of the people in the government and national institutions such as yourselves. Think of the long-term future of USA and investors who believe in US economy across the world. SEC was made to protect the investors, please do the right thing.

Anonymous — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I oppose the SEC proposal to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two.

Anonymous Financial Advisor — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I wholeheartedly OPPOSE this rule change. Corporations should be required to provide more information not less. Quarterly reports include financial statements and disclosures that are crucial for investors and stakeholders to assess the company's performance and financial health. Taking away half of the reporting is detrimental to the investor. You know, the people you are in government to help and protect from greedy corporations! It is NOT a compliance burden on the corporation! They are a publicly traded company and that info is needed at the bare minimum quarterly but in this technology driven age it should be available on demand! I OPPOSE!!

---

average joe — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: average joe Investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Do not reduce the number of required reports per year.

Barbara Errico N/A — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Errico I OPPOSE the entirety of Rule S7-2026-15. Under the new rule, companies can sit on disclosure for six months and a lot can go wrong. There's lots of time for insiders to quietly sell their shares to me (or my ETF) before the bad news tanks the stock. Quarterly filings don't prevent fraud - they dramatically shorten the window in which it can fester before someone outside the company can see it. Once large companies stare filing twice a year, smaller competitors face pressure to follow suit. They will be unable to justify "more competence than the bigger guys". Investor expectations will adjust downward, & what started as a choice quietly becomes the new norm. Almost no rule like it stays "optional". Companies will still have to maintain their books and brief their boards. The "savings" from skipping public filings are modest legal & accounting fees & those savings will flow to company executives. The cost of worse information will fall on me and others like me - people whose 401(k), IRA, college funds hold the stock. That's a bad trade for ordinary investors.

Barbara Green Texas CPA - Retired — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Green This proposal hurts individual retail investors in favor of institutional investors who have access to finanical information through many other sources and contacts. Quarter public disclosure is essential for the individual retail investor to stay informed on their investments. AI has only made it easier for the company financial departments to gather the basic information and compile it. I retired as a financial executive for a fortune 50 company and essential financial information is reported daily, weekly, and monthly for operations. Quarterly external reporting is not a burden and has the management team focus on the shareholders concerns. Moving to only semi-annual would not give retail investors the information required for their analysis and be unfair in favor of the well-connected institutional investors.

Becky Turlington None — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Becky Turlington PLEASE DO NOT make me FLY BLIND by allowing this change! I'm just a small investor who relies on transparency!!

Benet Hill N/a — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Benet Hill We should be able to see what they do. Theres no reason to make reports semi-annual besides hiding more things from the public

---

Benjamin Morley — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Benjamin Morley I oppose this proposal. Firstly, it decreases transparency by forcing investors like me to wait every six months before we know what's currently happening with our investments. Secondly, the technology to produce quarterly reports has improved, making reporting easier. Its been standard practice for decades so firms should have an easier reporting process by now. Allowing reduced reporting allows firms to avoid accountability. Thirdly, this creates a market signal to us investors as companies who are weak are probably more likely to favor reduced reporting. Fourthly, information asymmetry is created with reduced reporting as institutional investors will probably have greater access to information anyway than average investors. Lastly, this proposal does not address short termism. It ignores how short term thinking can come from executive compensation design, activist pressure, earnings guidance, analyst expectations, algorithmic trading, debt covenants, and market incentives. Reducing reporting to twice a year doesn't change these other factors and could even make them worse.

Bernardino Lemus Manufacturing Coordinator /Purchaser — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bernardino Lemus Dear Secretary, I appreciate the opportunity to comment on the proposed rule regarding optional semiannual reporting. I strongly urge the Commission to reject this proposal and retain mandatory quarterly reporting for all domestic issuers. The current 90-day reporting cycle serves as an essential guardrail for the financial ecosystem. Extending the blind spot for investors to 180 days poses significant dangers: Compounding Financial Misstatements: Quarterly reporting catches financial errors, internal oversight failures, or operational pivots before they become unmanageable. Allowing six months to pass before formal disclosure increases the likelihood that a distress cycle becomes fatal to the company, harming employees and public investors alike. Information Asymmetry and Insider Trading: A six-month reporting gap creates vast informational advantages for corporate insiders over retail investors. This lack of continuous disclosure degrades market efficiency and opens the door for volatile, speculative trading around the fewer remaining reporting dates. Market Stability over Capitulation: While proponents argue this reduces compliance burdens, the ultimate cost of reduced transparency will be borne by the public.

A lack of timely data will lead to capital misallocation and increase systemic risk when failing business models are hidden from public view for half a year. For these reasons, the SEC must prioritize its core mandate of investor protection and market integrity over marginal cost savings for issuers. Please maintain the current Form 10-Q quarterly reporting structure.

Beth M. Arman, Ph.D. — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beth M. Arman, Ph.D. This is about S7-2026-15. I don't want to see the SEC eliminate quarterly reporting by companies and go to just twice/year. It's hard enough for small investors like me to get the information we need to make informed decisions. Companies don't need more opportunities to evade scrutiny, keep small investors in the dark, or engage in unethical behavior such as insider trading or cover-ups. Please keep the regulations the way they are now. Thank you.

Bethel Sharma — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bethel Sharma To the Securities and Exchange Commission: Keep quarterly reporting. Quarterly reporting is one of the most important tools for retail investors to get information. A lot can go wrong in half a year: Ballooning debt, lawsuits, vanishing customers. Quarterly filings force it into the open. Less transparency with only semi-annual reporting means more opportunities for fraud. Retail investors need clear, accurate and timely information to make informed investment decisions. Insiders and institutional investors will always have the resources and relationships to get the information they need. Without quarterly reporting, retail investors are not on a level playing field, with no way to get timely information about public companies.

Bill Kieffer Independent — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Kieffer At least TRY to appear to have a concern about fairness and transparency. Keep it mandatory quarterly reporting for all!!

Bobby Stokeley — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bobby Stokeley I believe leaving it quarterly is the best way to go

---

Bradley J Pedersen — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bradley J Pedersen I as an individual am AGAINST semiannual reporting. It would impact the individual investor by reducing the amount of timely information that is available.

Brian Berkebile — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Berkebile This seems like an exceedingly horrible idea. Publicly traded companies affect the entire market, not just their investors. Anyone who's investing in the market should be able to see regular financial reporting data for these companies. Quarterly, is already being generous. Do NOT revise to twice/year.

Brian Collins — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Collins The proposed rule flies in the face of transparency and the need of all investors to have timely accurate information to make informed decisions. The proposed rule aids CEOs and other corporate executives to make decisions to benefit themselves without investor accountability.

Brian Koehler — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Koehler I do NOT like the proposed change. As an investor, I prefer the current frequency of reporting. I oppose all changes proposed in the rule change.

Bruce Blanchard senior software engineer — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Blanchard Extending financial reporting from quarterly to semi-annual significantly undermines transparency and harms small investors most. Institutional players have access to earnings calls, analyst relationships, and proprietary data to fill information gaps — retail investors do not. Doubling the reporting window doubles their blind spot into company activity, widening an already uneven playing field. Six months is too long. A company can take on debt, lose key customers, or shift strategy entirely with no disclosure obligation in that window. By the time small investors learn what happened, the damage is done. The compliance burden argument doesn't hold up either — any company with sound internal accounting can produce a quarterly report without extraordinary effort. The SEC should reject this proposal. Reducing reporting frequency protects corporate convenience, not investors.

C bongio — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C bongio This is unacceptable. Companies should have to file quarterly! Every major modern accounting scandal was enabled by gaps and opacity in financial disclosure. Not to mention failings at the SEC. The inability of the regulators to have access to Quarterly filings don't prevent fraud, but they dramatically shorten the window in which it can fester before someone outside the company can see it

---

Cathy Investor — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cathy Hello SEC, keep quarterly reporting. Dropping that requirement will give more time for fraud to grow unnoticed, or detrimental changes in a company that could be caught in a quarterly report will be more difficult to remove. Quarterly reports are important to investors. Thank you.

Charlene Worley — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charlene Worley Quarterly reporting is a method for keeping people honest. We NEED to keep people, especially CEOs, honest so the rich remain accountable.

Charles Corbett Program Manager, Tech Company — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Corbett I am not supportive of this change. Companies like the one I work for manage against deadlines and only address things as time permits. Everyone is worked so thin that mistakes are sometimes made and they are much harder to unravel after months than when caught in short order to correct data and internal reporting errors within the quarter. Separately from the above as a retail investor, I benefit from seeing quarterly reports from my investments in this highly volatile market. Less frequent reporting may push me toward more foreign investments where I could keep a better tab on performance instead.

Charles goesprinting company owner Printing exec — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles goesprinting company owner No law change to benefit big biz remember Enron

---

Cheryl Boschert — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Boschert America stands for Truth and Justice. I oppose the SEC proposal (Rule S7-2026-15). Corporations need to abide by mandatory quarterly filings. A blackout is only to fuel the criminals lurking inside corporations and fosters the increase of insider trading. This blackout will continue to damage the USA as an untrustworthy investment. It is time to step up and protect our democracy by rejecting this proposal.

Cheryl Martin Information Technology — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Martin This is a very bad proposal to reduce the reporting standards. Reduced reporting would leave so many investors vulnerable to losing their money and keeping them uninformed for 6 months increases the chance of fraud. I am near retirement and do not want to have any of my hard-earned money basically "stolen" because companies would be allowed to keep vital information secret for 6 months. This is a proposal to allow fraud and theft by corporations against investors. NO to this horrible, harmful proposal.

Chris Conroy — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Conroy PLEASE KEEP quarterly CEO reporting!!

Chris Weaver — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Weaver As an individual investor I am not in support of changing financial reporting from quarterly to semi-annually. I rely on quarterly reporting for my investment tracking and decisions. I feel I will no longer have timely information needed to invest wisely and will be at an even bigger disadvantage to institutional investors/firms. It’s already an unfair playing field for individual investors, this change would only widen the gap. There is no benefit to individual investers here, only to investment firms and businesses although I would argue that this would cause more businesses to fail given the reduction in financial discipline this change would cause.

Christin Butler CPA Virginia — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christin Butler I do not believe requiring less transparency is in the best interest of the American economy. Reducing financial reporting to less than quarterly basis can open a door. This door will allow entities to publish comments about results that are false during an extended time and the American/global economy will be none the wiser until the semi annual report is published. This is important for American middle class citizens. Quarterly reporting provides timely information required for individuals or others whom they rely on to analyze and make sound decisions to invest. As public companies have CPA firms to audit transactions as well as transaction cycle and IT controls continuously throughout the year it will not decrease the cost they are absorbing substantially. Therefore, reporting on a quarterly basis should be no issue. The American and global economy should not be left in the dark for such an extended period of time. There is a reason the we are (or should be) the gold standard. The companies have an ethic and fiduciary duty to issue audited financial statements on a quarterly basis to the public.

Christine Geary — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Geary As a citizen and a decent person, I denounce underhanded tactics that purportedly help ordinary investors, but in actuality enhance the advantages of shady backroom dealers and insider traders. Executives don't stop chasing quarterly numbers simply because the SEC stops asking for them. Kindly refrain from force-feeding the public this shamelessly avaricious narrative, this egregious so-called "long term thinking" farce. Not every American is a credulous and fiercely anti-intellectual partisan rube voting against their own interests. This tactic is just another way of shafting the middle class to enrich the few, as per usual these days. We Americans, with the exception of the willfully ignorant Fox viewers, didn't just fall off the turnip truck.

Christopher Morley — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Morley This proposed rule should not be implemented. A thriving capitalist economy requires transparency in corporate actions, dealings, and profits. The proposal that a corporation should be able to keep investors and the general public in the dark for half a year places investors in a direct disadvantage of knowing whether their investment strategy and capital is wisely placed. By example, if Corporation A started out with $100/share during the first report and because of substantial losses, underperformance, or even legal problems, drops to $10/share, investors won't know until they have lost a substantial amount of their investment half a year later. There is no public benefit to such a rule and the risk is especially severe for those living on fixed incomes based on investments. This will create a less dynamic economy where investors can lose their entire investment with minimal warning. The current reporting requirements are worth ensuring investors have a fighting chance to participate in the market without having to wait half a year for critical information. And who benefits from this rule? A handful of insiders? Individuals engaged in criminal activity with the assurance that their investors won't find out at minimum for half a year? There is no articulable benefit to the public for this rule, but plenty of opportunity for innocent investors left in a lurch, many of them retirees on fixed incomes. Again, this rule should not be implemented.

Colleen Nowak — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Colleen Nowak I am against a longer period as it may hurt the average investor. What are you hiding? Ask yourself, who does this benefit?

Committee on Corporate Reporting (FEI) — Jul 2, 2026
July 2, 2026
Ms. Vanessa Countryman
Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, N.E.
Washington, D.C. 20549-1090
Re: Semiannual Reporting (File No. S7-2026-15)
Dear Ms. Countryman,
This letter is submitted by Financial Executives International's ("FEI") Committee on Corporate Reporting ("CCR") in response to the Securities and Exchange Commission's ("SEC" or "Commission") proposed amendments to permit optional semiannual reporting by public companies.
FEI is a leading international organization comprised of members who hold positions as Chief Financial Officers, Chief Accounting Officers, Controllers, Treasurers, and Tax Executives at companies in every major industry. CCR is FEI's technical committee of approximately 50 Chief Accounting Officers ("CAOs") and Corporate Controllers from Fortune 100 and other large public companies, representing more than $19 trillion in market capitalization. CCR reviews and responds to pronouncements, proposed rules and regulations, pending legislation, and other documents issued by domestic and international regulators and organizations such as the SEC, PCAOB, FASB, and IASB.
The enclosed views and recommendations set forth within this letter were developed in accordance with CCR's governance procedures. This process includes a survey of the CCR membership and multiple iterative reviews by a drafting committee comprised of member company CAOs, Controllers and their direct reports. As noted, CCR is comprised of the largest public companies across a diverse array of industries – each with unique regulatory challenges and varying priorities. The perspectives incorporated in this letter reflect areas of consensus across committee members and may not align with the specific views of every individual entity or industry group.
Executive Summary
CCR commends the Commission for its continued commitment to reducing the regulatory burden of operating as a public company. CCR is supportive of the Commission's proposal to introduce an optional semiannual reporting regime. The proposal for optional semiannual reporting is a meaningful step in the Commission's broader effort to ensure that public company reporting requirements are calibrated to elicit disclosure of material information and are commensurate with the benefit they provide to investors and the capital markets. We believe providing issuers with the optionality to elect semiannual reporting allows market forces, including peer company and industry practices, as well as investor demands, to determine the appropriate reporting cadence based on individual company facts and circumstances. As Commissioner Uyeda noted, the Commission's framework should allow market participants to select the optimal reporting period for their business, with investors and market intermediaries signaling whether such period aligns with their expectations.1
1
In this letter, CCR offers its support for the Commission's proposal. As the Commission acknowledges in its proposal, certain factors affecting companies' semiannual reporting election remain under consideration – including those requiring updates to existing standards and those that will be shaped by market practice. Their resolution will ultimately influence the pace and extent to which companies elect semiannual reporting. The positions and recommendations set forth in this letter are grounded in a shared commitment to materiality as the foundation for public company reporting and are addressed in detail below.

Furthermore, CCR has considered Commissioner Peirce's question regarding whether the Commission should reduce the reporting burden of Form 10-Q rather than, or in addition to, adjusting its cadence.[2] CCR supports both objectives and encourages the Commission to explore reductions to the disclosure obligations of Form 10-Q in connection with this rulemaking by leveraging its ongoing Regulation S-K reform initiative. CCR recommends that any such simplification of Form 10-Q should apply equally to Form 10-S filers so that they benefit from the same streamlined disclosure framework. CCR's recommendations for streamlining Form 10-Q are set forth in CCR's April 13, 2026 comment letter[3] ("Reg S-K Letter") on Regulation S-K reform[4] and are incorporated by reference. CCR believes that adopting these recommendations would meaningfully reduce the quarterly reporting burden for companies that retain a Form 10-Q filing cadence. While these initiatives overlap in their goal of reducing interim reporting burdens, they also represent separate regulatory tracks. As such, CCR would not want consideration of Form 10-Q simplification to delay the Commission's advancement of optional semiannual reporting, which represents the more transformative regulatory change.

We respectfully submit these views for the Commission's consideration and welcome the opportunity to provide additional context through a live discussion.

Materiality as the Foundation for Reform

The Commission's proposal reflects a recognition that the appropriate reporting cadence should be determined by market participants based on individual company facts and circumstances – a principle that aligns directly with CCR's view that public company reporting requirements should be calibrated to elicit material information rather than compel disclosure of immaterial information.

1 Commissioner Uyeda, Statement on Proposing Semiannual Reporting (May 5, 2026), available at https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-statements/uyeda-statement-proposing-semiannual-reporting-050526

2 Commissioner Peirce, Quarterly Questions: Statement on the Proposed Amendments to Allow Semiannual Reporting (May 5, 2026), available at SEC.gov | Quarterly Questions: Statement on the Proposed Amendments to Allow Semiannual Reporting

3 CCR Comment Letter on Regulation S-K Reform (April 13, 2026), available at https://www.sec.gov/comments/cll-15/cll15-750007-2316754.pdf

4 SEC.gov | Statement on Reforming Regulation S-K, available at https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-statements/atkins-statement-reforming-regulation-s-k-011326

Under the proposed framework, companies electing to report semiannually would retain the ability, and remain subject to the obligation, to communicate material information frequently through means other than a Form 10-Q filing under the U.S. disclosure regime. This includes Form 8-K reporting with voluntary earnings releases and material events, press releases and investor presentations. CCR views the existing Form 8-K trigger events for material events as an important backstop grounded in materiality, one that allows investors to maintain confidence in the integrity and timely transparency of the capital markets, even under a semiannual reporting cadence.

While companies are still evaluating the proposal and have not made a definitive decision, in a survey of CCR members, 58% indicated they would most likely elect semiannual reporting, while 42% indicated they would most likely continue filing quarterly.5 Importantly, these survey results are separate and distinct from the broad committee support for the option to report semiannually. Among respondents who indicated a preference for semiannual reporting, all indicated they would continue issuing voluntary quarterly earnings releases. This feedback reflects the reality that the market infrastructure supporting CCR member companies' investor relations programs – including analyst coverage, institutional investor expectations and capital markets activity – operates on a quarterly cadence that is unlikely to change in the near term. CCR member companies are committed to engaging proactively with their investor base as they evaluate the semiannual reporting election and will continue to consider investor expectations and market signals in determining the reporting cadence that best serves their individual circumstances.

CCR's support for this proposal is grounded in a broader commitment to materiality as the north star for public company disclosure. The Commission has articulated this principle consistently, and Chair Atkins' recent statements reflect a renewed commitment to this objective. While the concept of materiality exists in today's regulatory frameworks and in U.S. GAAP, a meaningful distinction exists between what is material at a given point in time and what represents a material change from information previously reported in a company's most recent annual report. It is the latter that CCR believes should govern the scope of interim disclosure obligations. Furthermore, while the materiality principle exists, management's ability to exercise judgment on materiality is often impeded by friction arising from a combination of regulatory, auditing and operational considerations.

Realizing the full benefit of optional semiannual reporting and of a streamlined Form 10-Q requires a concerted effort across the broader regulatory ecosystem – including the Commission, the PCAOB, standard-setters and external auditors – to affirm management's ability to exercise materiality judgments without friction. CCR encourages the Commission to reinforce its existing materiality principles, grounded in reasoned judgment, to support their application in practice.

5 These survey results reflect preliminary CCR member views at a single point in time, prior to a thorough assessment of the proposal's implications, are subject to change, and may not be indicative of actual adoption decisions or the timeline over which companies may elect semiannual reporting.

CCR's Recommendations

CCR's engagement with its membership and review of the Commission's proposal have led to three specific recommendations that CCR believes are essential to the practical adoption of the semiannual election. Each reflects CCR's view that materiality should serve as the foundation for public company reporting. CCR's specific recommendations, discussed in further detail below, are as follows:

• Earnings Releases: CCR recommends the Commission preserve the current framework under Item 2.02 of Form 8-K and does not support requiring semiannual filers to file quarterly earnings releases in Q1 and Q3 periods.

• Auditor Involvement in Earnings Releases: CCR recommends the development of an optional mechanism under the PCAOB auditing standards for companies to obtain assurance on financial information without preparing financial statements with footnotes that conform to U.S. GAAP and Article 10 of Regulation S-X (the "Applicable Reporting Framework"). CCR does not support requiring companies to obtain an auditor review of the financial information included in quarterly earnings releases issued in Q1 and Q3 by semiannual filers.

• Comfort Letters: CCR recommends the Commission coordinate with the PCAOB to revise Auditing Standard ("AS") 6101 to extend the negative assurance window for semiannual filers, and recommends the Commission extend the period-end alignment approach in revised Rule 3-01 to Rule 3-05.

Each recommendation is addressed in detail below, including the rationale for CCR's position and its significance for companies in evaluating the semiannual election.

Earnings Releases

CCR members who may elect semiannual reporting have indicated they will continue issuing quarterly earnings releases, though actual elections and practice may evolve. The continuation of voluntary quarterly earnings releases, which also serves as an important mechanism through which companies manage their Regulation FD obligations, makes the Commission's treatment of those releases under Form 8-K a particularly important consideration for semiannual filers. CCR members are committed to remaining responsive to their investor base and recognize that the content and scope of voluntary quarterly earnings releases may develop over time in a manner that continues to serve investor needs as market practice adapts to a semiannual reporting cadence.

As currently drafted, the Commission's proposal does not require changes to the current framework under Item 2.02 of Form 8-K, though it has requested comment on whether semiannual filers should be required to file, rather than furnish, their quarterly earnings releases. CCR does not support such a requirement and recommends the Commission preserve the current framework under Item 2.02 of Form 8-K. A requirement to file rather than furnish earnings releases could discourage companies from providing the voluntary quarterly information that investors rely on and interfere with the quality and utility of the quarterly information. A key consideration for CCR is the compliance burden that would arise from the application of additional Item 10(e) requirements of Regulation S-K to filed documents. These additional requirements are more prescriptive in their treatment of non-GAAP financial measures, including prohibitions on certain measures. Certain CCR member companies include adjusted liquidity measures, adjusted free cash flow and other non-GAAP guidance metrics in their furnished earnings releases that would require significant modification, or would be prohibited, if those releases were filed. Furthermore, shifting from a furnished to a mandatory filed framework would introduce heightened statutory liability and would result in the automatic incorporation by reference of these disclosures into registration statements. This combined burden could disrupt the voluntary disclosure framework that exists today.

Auditor Involvement in Earnings Releases

To maintain the rigor of financial reporting and robust internal controls over financial reporting that exist today, companies and their audit committees may seek to have their auditors review the financial information underlying the voluntary quarterly earnings releases.

Under the current framework, independent public accountants must review Form 10-Q financial statements conforming to the Applicable Reporting Framework prior to filing, with such reviews conducted in accordance with PCAOB auditing standards. Knowledge that this review is occurring provides audit committees, investors and creditors with additional confidence in quarterly earnings releases. If a company elects semiannual reporting, it would not prepare interim financial statements conforming to the Applicable Reporting Framework in Q1 and Q3, and auditors would therefore be constrained from performing a standard interim review. Consequently, audit committees and market participants would lose the assurance provided by a review, as auditors would be unable to perform one on the standalone, voluntary financial information underlying the quarterly earnings release. CCR understands that while companies electing semiannual reporting could prepare financial statements conforming to the Applicable Reporting Framework each quarter without filing a 10-Q and obtaining a review, this would undermine the efficiencies of electing semiannual reporting and may not be cost-effective. Although agreed-upon procedures ("AUP") exist under the current PCAOB standards as an alternative, AUP provide no assurance and may not be considered an adequate substitute by audit committees. CCR members are in the early stages of evaluating these considerations and recognize that audit committee approval will be an important factor in determining whether and how companies proceed with a semiannual reporting election. Furthermore, AUP can be more onerous than an interim review as each procedure performed needs to be included in a detailed report. As a result, the related fees tend to be relatively high, which may undermine any potential cost savings of electing to report semiannually. Additionally, AUP require each registrant to define its own specific procedures, which may create inconsistency in practice across companies.

While CCR supports the availability of an optional review mechanism, CCR does not support requiring companies to obtain an auditor review of financial information included in quarterly earnings releases in Q1 and Q3 by semiannual filers. A mandatory review requirement would undermine the voluntary nature of the quarterly earnings release and may discourage some companies from providing quarterly information to investors or delay the release of quarterly earnings information for others. CCR supports the development of an optional mechanism for companies to obtain a review of financial information without preparing financial statements that fully conform to the Applicable Reporting Framework.

CCR encourages the SEC and PCAOB to continue their active dialogue on this issue and to amend or develop a standard as promptly as practicable, given the importance of audit committee support in electing semiannual reporting.
Comfort Letters
CCR supports the Commission's proposed amendments to Regulation S-X to address the staleness of financial statements in registration statements filed by semiannual filers. The shift from a days-based assessment to a period-end alignment approach is a pragmatic solution to the regulatory staleness concern.
However, addressing regulatory staleness does not resolve the separate and equally significant constraint arising from PCAOB auditing standards governing comfort letters in underwritten securities offerings. Comfort letters are essential to bring-down procedures in registered and certain unregistered offerings and provide underwriters with negative assurance on financial statement items. CCR acknowledges that where 135 days or more have elapsed from the end of the most recent period for which the accountants have performed an audit or review, auditors may still perform procedures and report findings under AS 6101. However, underwriters in the U.S. typically require negative assurance, rather than just a procedures and findings report, to proceed with registered and certain unregistered offerings on standard terms. Without aligning the PCAOB's auditing standards to the Commission's proposed updates, semiannual filers will be constrained in their ability to access the capital markets on standard terms for a significant portion of the year, regardless of whether a procedures and findings report remains a technical alternative available under PCAOB AS 6101. Absent a coordinated resolution to this constraint, the semiannual election may not be a viable option for active U.S. capital markets participants, which could limit the practical impact of the Commission's proposal and impair the efficient capital formation the Commission seeks to facilitate.
CCR recognizes that ensuring negative assurance remains available to semiannual filers will require coordination among the Commission, PCAOB and auditing firms to ensure there is an appropriate balance between the scope of procedures required and the cost of obtaining such assurance. The goal should be to maintain meaningful investor protection without imposing a burden that would effectively negate the cost savings of a semiannual election and compel companies to continue filing Form 10-Q.
CCR is aware that foreign private issuers ("FPIs") who are not subject to quarterly reporting requirements have, in certain cases, addressed this constraint by preparing unaudited interim financial statements specifically for inclusion in a registration statement to bring the elapsed period since the most recently audited or reviewed financial statements to less than 135 days. However, this approach would not represent a reasonable alternative for CCR member companies. Preparing interim financial statements outside the normal filing cadence solely to facilitate a capital markets transaction would impose the very burden that the semiannual election is designed to eliminate. CCR member companies are large accelerated filers that regularly and frequently access the U.S. registered debt and equity markets, making the comfort letter constraint a significant consideration in the practical adoption of the semiannual election. CCR therefore recommends the Commission coordinate with the PCAOB to revise its auditing standards and extend the negative assurance window for semiannual filers, harmonizing it with the Commission's proposed staleness framework. Without such a revision, the comfort letter constraint will function as a substantial barrier to the semiannual election for companies active in the capital markets. Absent a revision to AS 6101, semiannual filers would face a difficult choice of either limiting their access to the capital markets or preparing interim financial statements outside of their elected cadence to facilitate a transaction. Either of these would unnecessarily prolong capital-raising timelines, creating a significant disincentive for frequent market participants to adopt the semiannual reporting cadence.

CCR further notes that the proposed Rule 3-01 amendments do not address the acquired business financial statement requirements governed by Rule 3-05 in mergers and acquisitions. The period-end alignment approach to staleness under proposed amendments to Rule 3-01 applies to the registrant's own financial statements but does not govern the age requirements for pre-acquisition financial statements of acquired businesses filed on Form 8-K under Rule 3-05, which operates under a separate staleness framework that the proposal does not amend. A semiannual filer completing an acquisition could therefore find itself subject to inconsistent staleness standards – one for its own financial statements and another for the acquired business's financial statements. CCR recommends the Commission extend the period-end alignment approach in revised Rule 3-01 to Rule 3-05 to ensure consistency and avoid this mismatch when acquiring another business.

Capital Markets Considerations

Although the following considerations fall outside the Commission's immediate regulatory authority, CCR has included them in this letter as they represent practical capital markets and contractual implications that companies are actively evaluating as they assess the semiannual reporting election. CCR members expect to navigate these dynamics and engage with relevant stakeholders on an individual company basis.

- Trading Windows and Corporate Share Repurchases: CCR members expect to navigate trading window management and corporate repurchase timing individually under existing insider trading compliance frameworks and issuer buyback programs.
- Debt Covenants: CCR members expect to navigate existing covenant obligations through direct engagement with lending institutions.
- Credit Rating Agencies: CCR members expect to engage directly with rating agencies to ensure a semiannual reporting election is not misconstrued as a reduction in transparency or an indicator of credit risk.

Trading Windows and Corporate Share Repurchases

Company insider trading policies impose fixed blackout periods around the close of each fiscal quarter and the subsequent earnings release date. These policies are designed to reduce the risk that insiders, and the issuer itself when executing stock repurchase programs, trade while in possession of material non-public information ("MNPI"), consistent with Rule 10b-5 under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act").

CCR member companies generally intend to include all material financial information in their voluntary quarterly earnings releases to support opening trading windows and resuming any open market share repurchases following publication of those releases. As such, neither the frequency nor duration of trading windows, nor the timing of corporate buyback activity would be expected to change meaningfully for those companies under a semiannual reporting cadence, assuming they continue to issue quarterly earnings releases that serve as the basis for opening the window and clearing corporate buyback activity. Some companies currently open trading windows and resume open-market repurchases only following the filing of a Form 10-Q, which may occur on a later date than the earnings release. Certain of those companies are still evaluating the implications of a semiannual election for their insider trading policies and corporate buyback programs, including the appropriate timing for opening the trading window and initiating repurchases in the absence of a quarterly filing. In either case, CCR believes the underlying principle is consistent and companies open their trading windows after all material information has been made publicly available, whether through a voluntary earnings release, a quarterly filing, or both.

Ultimately, CCR believes that managing these trading windows and corporate repurchase programs and determining the exact timing and scope of sufficient public disclosure represent practical, company-specific governance considerations that semiannual filers expect to navigate individually under existing insider trading compliance frameworks and capital management policies.

Debt Covenants

Covenant obligations in indentures, credit agreements and other contractual arrangements generally require quarterly financial statements accompanied by management certification, without reference to whether those statements are filed with the Commission or accompanied by auditor-provided assurance.

CCR members are in the process of assessing the implications of a semiannual reporting election on their existing debt covenant obligations. To the extent lenders continue to require quarterly financial statements, the primary concern would be the imposition of requirements beyond what would be customary under the current quarterly reporting regime, such as a requirement that quarterly financial statements be included in a Form 10-Q filing or that auditors are engaged. CCR members are also evaluating whether a change in reporting cadence could result in increases to the cost of debt directly attributable to the semiannual election.

Where covenant delivery requirements are limited to face financial statements accompanied by a management certification – consistent with current practice for many CCR member companies –

the primary cost savings associated with a semiannual election would not be materially eroded. However, where covenants require delivery of financial statements equivalent in scope to a Form 10-Q, or require auditor involvement, the burden of compliance and the associated cost savings would need to be carefully evaluated.

CCR notes that the impact of debt covenant obligations on the voluntary adoption of semiannual reporting represents a market dynamic that falls outside of the Commission's immediate regulatory authority. Accordingly, CCR members expect to navigate these contractual implications through direct engagement with lending institutions on an individual company basis.

Credit Rating Agencies

In CCR's experience, credit rating agencies typically require quarterly financial information from rated companies as part of their ongoing ratings process, regardless of a company's SEC reporting cadence. CCR is mindful of two risks that warrant consideration in connection with this dynamic.

First, where a company's quarterly financial information is not filed with the Commission, rating agencies may have concerns about the reliability and completeness of the information provided. Second, CCR is concerned that rating agencies may view a company's election of semiannual reporting as a signal of reduced transparency, potentially affecting credit ratings or outlooks independent of actual financial performance. This risk is particularly relevant in the early years of the semiannual reporting framework, before rating agencies and the broader market have developed established practices for evaluating semiannual filers.

CCR does not believe the frequency of SEC reporting should be a determinative factor in credit assessments. Accordingly, CCR members expect to engage directly with rating agencies on an individual company basis to ensure that a semiannual reporting election is not misconstrued as a reduction in transparency or an indicator of credit risk.

Streamlined Form 10-Q
CCR supports both optional semiannual reporting and a complementary reduction in the disclosure obligations of Form 10-Q. CCR believes that a robust simplification of Form 10-Q requirements could encourage certain companies to retain a quarterly filing cadence for investor relations, capital markets, or contractual reasons while still achieving meaningful burden reduction. Importantly, CCR recommends that any simplification of Form 10-Q disclosure requirements apply equally to Form 10-S filers, so that they benefit from the same streamlined disclosure framework. CCR's recommendations for simplifying Form 10-Q are addressed in the Reg S-K Letter and are incorporated herein by reference. CCR views these as complementary initiatives that can be progressed on separate timelines, prioritizing the finalization of the semiannual option as the more transformative regulatory change.
* * * * *
9
CCR reiterates its support for the Commission's proposal to introduce an optional semiannual reporting regime and appreciates the Commission's consideration of our comments. We stand ready to support the Commission in its rulemaking efforts and welcome the opportunity to discuss the contents of this letter through a live discussion.
Sincerely,
Committee on Corporate Reporting
Committee on Corporate Reporting (FEI)
10

Connie S. White Social Worker — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Connie S. White What in the everloving heck are you folks trying to do? Kill off the rest of America for a dollar?? People bust their butts to TRY to have a fraction of what rhe ultra wealthy have...and you put one MORE obstacle in their way. While CEO/Senetor/Etc are gabbing stocks like they're candy at a carnival. NO, DO NOT PASS THIS CRAP ONTO THE AVERAGE AMERICAN. We cannot afford it. Connie S. White, BASW

Connie Taylor — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Connie Taylor This is corruption which YOU are encouraging if you allow this.

Cynthia Gayle Herrman Retired — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Gayle Herrman Better for the American people to report quarterly. History has proven this. It would be easier to cheat without quarterly control. If you can't be for honest reporting you should resign.

Cynthia Mowery none (retired) — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Mowery As an individual investor, I rely on quarterly financial statements (and in fact, I wish I could get them monthly). Having the executives of publicly-held companies attest 4 times a year to the accuracy of their financial reporting is not too much to ask, and the "cost savings" are insignificant in the scope of their annual operations. Their legal departments look out for the best interests of these companies; their accounting departments should, among other things, be protecting the interests of their stockholders. I am also a member of an investment club, through which I'm aware there are millions of investors just like me who have relied on this relatively small but crucial safeguard ever since the Enron fraud. Additionally, studies in other countries indicate that less frequent reporting does not, in fact, lead to a more long-term focus in the management of publicly-held companies. In fact, there is evidence that other factors, including executive compensation, drive "short-termism". Please remember that the investors are the ones who have a stake in this, and the investors -- the public -- are the ones to whom our federal Securities and Exchange Commission is responsible and the ones who the SEC was designed to protect.

D. Campbell Tax payer. — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D. Campbell It must remain quarterly!

Darlene Blascoe Finance Assist - J&RS Construction — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darlene Blascoe Please maintain quarterly reporting

---

Dave Radcliff Dave Radcliff — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dave Radcliff Keep all reports to investors quarterly. No exceptions. This protects investors. We will be watching.

David — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David I agree with the position of the Motley Fool company that we should retain the four times per year reporting rule. This will reduce any shock that may accompany a report because we the owners will have received it sooner rather than later. ..... timely information is calming.

David Armes Disabled Veteran — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Armes My name is David Armes. I am a disabled Veteran, that was forced into early retirement due to physical limitations. While I still have to navigate the VA system to receive the benefits I deserve, I rely on quarterly reporting to determine the best investments to take care of my family in the only way I can any more. And to try to have something to pass on to my children and grandchildren. Forty five years ago I volunteered to stand on the access road to a missile complex in Damascus AR. to wait for the explosion so that we could evacuate both military and civilians that we didn’t even know, to insure their safety and secure the 10 megaton resource. The cost to those of us that were there and our families is immeasurable. My time left here and ability to provide for my families future has been shortened and altered significantly. Please allow us to watch over what we do have with both eyes open and a clear unhindered view of what is going on so that we can make the best decisions for our family and their future. Thank You, David Armes.

David Schwartz — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Schwartz We tried this once, between 1955 and 1970. Less transparency came with lower returns and lower valuations. For ordinary investors like me, a return to those days could mean losing a third, or even half, of our life savings. Keep the quarterly transparency.

Dena Merrill Retired, former teacher and documentation specialist in SAS — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dena Merrill As an investor in the US stock exchange for my retirement money, I think this is a sleazy move by the SEC and corporations. To allow corporations to manipulate their company status, manipulate their change— it's bad faith, it lacks transparency, and creates a. divide between the company and their outside shareholders. Remember it's the outside shareholders who provided the capital for them to get started in the first place. It's not right for them to have information on company performance that the rest of their shareholders cannot get for three more months. Thank you for hearing my opinion.

Diane M Basehore — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diane M Basehore I believe that Public companies should keep the current rule of reporting their financial results every 3 months. If they go every 6 months, this could adversely affect my investments in my retirement account.

Earl Berner Individual investor — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Earl Berner Good governance starts with consistent disclosure. Companies that don't want to provide quarterly information can be private. As an UT MBA and two decade individual investor who has sweated to save over $500k in my 401k, I am both a sophisticated investor and hyper aware that we need the transparency of the markets. In this modern age when analytics are better and faster than ever, it's not reasonable to take a massive step back. We should be insisting on more, not less transparency.

Edward Colie Mechanical Engineer — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edward Colie Keep quarterly reporting. Quarterly reporting coincides with the accounting work already required for tax purposes, so there is no extra burden. Quarterly reporting is there to protect shareholders and keep something like ENRON from happening again. Protect THE CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, not corporate interests. KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING.

---

eileen costello — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: eileen costello keep the rule as is. semi annual reporting leaves too much room for fraud. look out for all investors

---

Elaine Jones Retired — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elaine Jones Quarterly financial disclosures promote transparency, accountability, and allow informed decision-making by investors. As an individual investor and retirement saver, I rely on timely public information to understand how companies are performing. Reducing the reporting frequency would provide less transparency for investors and would make it harder to identify risks early. Please preserve quarterly reporting requirements for public companies.

Elayne M Fuller Citizen — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elayne M Fuller I am extremely concerned about changes to SEC reporting requirements. The current reporting requirements should remain quarterly. This is working very well and any disruption will cause problems. KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING.

Elizabeth A Kasprzak Retired Educator — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth A Kasprzak This is a very very bad idea. Less oversight = more opportunities for ABUSE. More opportunities to hurt the "little" guy. Who do you think that you are working for???

Elizabeth Runge Retired CPA — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth Runge Without benchmarking, how do we define success, or failure... Since Enron, quarterly financials, verified and signed by the CEO, has been the one way we could count on the accuracy of financial reporting. Reducing the frequency of this verified reporting would further widen the gap between investors who rely on regulated financial reporting and those who rely on insider information. The financial markets NEED data to understand the direction of companies. Especially as we begin to absorb the affects of AI on public corporations, it is even more necessary to see quarterly information.

Elizabeth Woods — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth Woods Hello, my name is Elizabeth Woods. I'm an accounting assistant for a small non-profit in northern Arizona. I'm writing to express my concerns for the proposal to allow companies, who choose to be public, to only be required to report their finances to the public twice a year. I can't think of a good reason to change this from quarterly reports to every six months, except to benefit the companies. This is the FTCs mission statement: "We protect consumers and competition by preventing anticompetitive, deceptive, and unfair business practices through law enforcement, advocacy, and education." this change would keep individual investors from knowing vital information needed to make important, personal financial decisions. Please do not change the requirements to report quarterly!

Ellen Cosgrove Retired — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ellen Cosgrove I'm retired and I did what I was supposed to do. I saved and invested for retirement. I now depend on my investments to have the quality of life I worked for. My portfolio is in peril by this proposal to eliminate quarterly reporting. Publicly traded companies have an obligation to provide information to their stockholders/investors. Reducing that reporting obligation to once a year impedes the public's ability to make informed decisions and unfairly privileges the people who can profit from inside knowledge. In eliminating pensions, the rationale was that people could invest their retirement money more effectively. Please don't change that.

Ellen Metzger Keep quarterly reporting. The public has a right to know. — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ellen Metzger Clerk quarterly reporting. The public has a right to know.

Em Satterwhite — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Em Satterwhite I believe that we should stay with quarterly reporting, or even go to bi-monthly reporting to benefit the individuals who invest. Semiannual reporting only benefits insiders and encourages locking out investors who won't have enough information to make informed decisions about something as important as their retirement funds. Please discourage insider trading and say no to semiannual reporting.

Eric H Pettit None — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eric H Pettit Keep quarterly updates. Investors need to hear from companies more than twice a year.

Erick Semi retired — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Erick Erick Semi retired. It hasn't worked in other countries so why do it here? And why hurt us retail investors more than anybody!? We already have a huge disadvantage. We need the most up-to-date information we can get our hands on to make intelligent investing decisions. Please keep the quarterly reporting. Thank you

---

FEI's Committee on Corporate Reporting (CCR) — Jul 2, 2026
July 2, 2026
Ms. Vanessa Countryman
Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, N.E.
Washington, D.C. 20549-1090
Re: Semiannual Reporting (File No. S7-2026-15)
Dear Ms. Countryman,
This letter is submitted by Financial Executives International's ("FEI") Committee on Corporate Reporting ("CCR") in response to the Securities and Exchange Commission's ("SEC" or "Commission") proposed amendments to permit optional semiannual reporting by public companies.
FEI is a leading international organization comprised of members who hold positions as Chief Financial Officers, Chief Accounting Officers, Controllers, Treasurers, and Tax Executives at companies in every major industry. CCR is FEI's technical committee of approximately 50 Chief Accounting Officers ("CAOs") and Corporate Controllers from Fortune 100 and other large public companies, representing more than $19 trillion in market capitalization. CCR reviews and responds to pronouncements, proposed rules and regulations, pending legislation, and other documents issued by domestic and international regulators and organizations such as the SEC, PCAOB, FASB, and IASB.

The enclosed views and recommendations set forth within this letter were developed in accordance with CCR's governance procedures. This process includes a survey of the CCR membership and multiple iterative reviews by a drafting committee comprised of member company CAOs, Controllers and their direct reports. As noted, CCR is comprised of the largest public companies across a diverse array of industries – each with unique regulatory challenges and varying priorities. The perspectives incorporated in this letter reflect areas of consensus across committee members and may not align with the specific views of every individual entity or industry group.

Executive Summary

CCR commends the Commission for its continued commitment to reducing the regulatory burden of operating as a public company. CCR is supportive of the Commission's proposal to introduce an optional semiannual reporting regime. The proposal for optional semiannual reporting is a meaningful step in the Commission's broader effort to ensure that public company reporting requirements are calibrated to elicit disclosure of material information and are commensurate with the benefit they provide to investors and the capital markets. We believe providing issuers with the optionality to elect semiannual reporting allows market forces, including peer company and industry practices, as well as investor demands, to determine the appropriate reporting cadence based on individual company facts and circumstances. As Commissioner Uyeda noted, the Commission's framework should allow market participants to

1

select the optimal reporting period for their business, with investors and market intermediaries signaling whether such period aligns with their expectations.1

In this letter, CCR offers its support for the Commission's proposal. As the Commission acknowledges in its proposal, certain factors affecting companies' semiannual reporting election remain under consideration – including those requiring updates to existing standards and those that will be shaped by market practice. Their resolution will ultimately influence the pace and extent to which companies elect semiannual reporting. The positions and recommendations set forth in this letter are grounded in a shared commitment to materiality as the foundation for public company reporting and are addressed in detail below.

Furthermore, CCR has considered Commissioner Peirce's question regarding whether the Commission should reduce the reporting burden of Form 10-Q rather than, or in addition to, adjusting its cadence.

2 CCR supports both objectives and encourages the Commission to explore reductions to the disclosure obligations of Form 10-Q in connection with this rulemaking by leveraging its ongoing Regulation S-K reform initiative. CCR recommends that any such simplification of Form 10-Q should apply equally to Form 10-S filers so that they benefit from the same streamlined disclosure framework. CCR's recommendations for streamlining Form 10-Q are set forth in CCR's April 13, 2026 comment letter3 ("Reg S-K Letter") on Regulation S-K reform4 and are incorporated by reference. CCR believes that adopting these recommendations would meaningfully reduce the quarterly reporting burden for companies that retain a Form 10-Q filing cadence. While these initiatives overlap in their goal of reducing interim reporting burdens, they also represent separate regulatory tracks. As such, CCR would not want consideration of Form 10-Q simplification to delay the Commission's advancement of optional semiannual reporting, which represents the more transformative regulatory change.

We respectfully submit these views for the Commission's consideration and welcome the opportunity to provide additional context through a live discussion.

Materiality as the Foundation for Reform

The Commission's proposal reflects a recognition that the appropriate reporting cadence should be determined by market participants based on individual company facts and circumstances – a principle that aligns directly with CCR's view that public company reporting requirements should be calibrated to elicit material information rather than compel disclosure of immaterial information.

1 Commissioner Uyeda, Statement on Proposing Semiannual Reporting (May 5, 2026), available at https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-statements/uyeda-statement-proposing-semiannual-reporting-050526

2 Commissioner Peirce, Quarterly Questions: Statement on the Proposed Amendments to Allow Semiannual
Reporting (May 5, 2026), available at SEC.gov | Quarterly Questions: Statement on the Proposed Amendments to Allow Semiannual Reporting

3 CCR Comment Letter on Regulation S-K Reform (April 13, 2026), available at https://www.sec.gov/comments/cll-
15/cll15-750007-2316754.pdf

4 SEC.gov | Statement on Reforming Regulation S-K, available at https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-
statements/atkins-statement-reforming-regulation-s-k-011326

Under the proposed framework, companies electing to report semiannually would retain the ability, and remain subject to the obligation, to communicate material information frequently through means other than a Form 10-Q filing under the U.S. disclosure regime. This includes Form 8-K reporting with voluntary earnings releases and material events, press releases and investor presentations. CCR views the existing Form 8-K trigger events for material events as an important backstop grounded in materiality, one that allows investors to maintain confidence in the integrity and timely transparency of the capital markets, even under a semiannual reporting cadence.

While companies are still evaluating the proposal and have not made a definitive decision, in a survey of CCR members, 58% indicated they would most likely elect semiannual reporting, while 42% indicated they would most likely continue filing quarterly.5 Importantly, these survey results are separate and distinct from the broad committee support for the option to report semiannually. Among respondents who indicated a preference for semiannual reporting, all indicated they would continue issuing voluntary quarterly earnings releases. This feedback reflects the reality that the market infrastructure supporting CCR member companies' investor relations programs – including analyst coverage, institutional investor expectations and capital markets activity – operates on a quarterly cadence that is unlikely to change in the near term. CCR member companies are committed to engaging proactively with their investor base as they evaluate the semiannual reporting election and will continue to consider investor expectations and market signals in determining the reporting cadence that best serves their individual circumstances.

CCR's support for this proposal is grounded in a broader commitment to materiality as the north star for public company disclosure. The Commission has articulated this principle consistently, and Chair Atkins' recent statements reflect a renewed commitment to this objective. While the concept of materiality exists in today's regulatory frameworks and in U.S. GAAP, a meaningful distinction exists between what is material at a given point in time and what represents a material change from information previously reported in a company's most recent annual report. It is the latter that CCR believes should govern the scope of interim disclosure obligations. Furthermore, while the materiality principle exists, management's ability to exercise judgment on materiality is often impeded by friction arising from a combination of regulatory, auditing and operational considerations.

Realizing the full benefit of optional semiannual reporting and of a streamlined Form 10-Q requires a concerted effort across the broader regulatory ecosystem – including the Commission, the PCAOB, standard-setters and external auditors – to affirm management's ability to exercise materiality judgments without friction. CCR encourages the Commission to reinforce its existing materiality principles, grounded in reasoned judgment, to support their application in practice.

5 These survey results reflect preliminary CCR member views at a single point in time, prior to a thorough assessment of the proposal's implications, are subject to change, and may not be indicative of actual adoption decisions or the timeline over which companies may elect semiannual reporting.

CCR's Recommendations

CCR's engagement with its membership and review of the Commission's proposal have led to three specific recommendations that CCR believes are essential to the practical adoption of the semiannual election. Each reflects CCR's view that materiality should serve as the foundation for public company reporting. CCR's specific recommendations, discussed in further detail below, are as follows:

- Earnings Releases: CCR recommends the Commission preserve the current framework under Item 2.02 of Form 8-K and does not support requiring semiannual filers to file quarterly earnings releases in Q1 and Q3 periods.
- Auditor Involvement in Earnings Releases: CCR recommends the development of an optional mechanism under the PCAOB auditing standards for companies to obtain assurance on financial information without preparing financial statements with footnotes that conform to U.S. GAAP and Article 10 of Regulation S-X (the "Applicable Reporting Framework"). CCR does not support requiring companies to obtain an auditor review of the financial information included in quarterly earnings releases issued in Q1 and Q3 by semiannual filers.
- Comfort Letters: CCR recommends the Commission coordinate with the PCAOB to revise Auditing Standard ("AS") 6101 to extend the negative assurance window for semiannual filers, and recommends the Commission extend the period-end alignment approach in revised Rule 3-01 to Rule 3-05.

Each recommendation is addressed in detail below, including the rationale for CCR's position and its significance for companies in evaluating the semiannual election.

Earnings Releases

CCR members who may elect semiannual reporting have indicated they will continue issuing quarterly earnings releases, though actual elections and practice may evolve. The continuation of voluntary quarterly earnings releases, which also serves as an important mechanism through which companies manage their Regulation FD obligations, makes the Commission's treatment of those releases under Form 8-K a particularly important consideration for semiannual filers. CCR members are committed to remaining responsive to their investor base and recognize that the content and scope of voluntary quarterly earnings releases may develop over time in a manner that continues to serve investor needs as market practice adapts to a semiannual reporting cadence.

As currently drafted, the Commission's proposal does not require changes to the current framework under Item 2.02 of Form 8-K, though it has requested comment on whether semiannual filers should be required to file, rather than furnish, their quarterly earnings releases. CCR does not support such a requirement and recommends the Commission preserve the current framework under Item 2.02 of Form 8-K. A requirement to file rather than furnish earnings releases could discourage companies from providing the voluntary quarterly information that investors rely on and interfere with the quality and utility of the quarterly information. A key consideration for CCR is the compliance burden that would arise from the application of additional Item 10(e) requirements of Regulation S-K to filed documents. These additional requirements are more prescriptive in their treatment of non-GAAP financial measures, including prohibitions on certain measures. Certain CCR member companies include adjusted liquidity measures, adjusted free cash flow and other non-GAAP guidance metrics in their furnished earnings releases that would require significant modification, or would be prohibited, if those releases were filed. Furthermore, shifting from a furnished to a mandatory filed framework would introduce heightened statutory liability and would result in the automatic incorporation by reference of these disclosures into registration statements. This combined burden could disrupt the voluntary disclosure framework that exists today.

Auditor Involvement in Earnings Releases

To maintain the rigor of financial reporting and robust internal controls over financial reporting that exist today, companies and their audit committees may seek to have their auditors review the financial information underlying the voluntary quarterly earnings releases.

Under the current framework, independent public accountants must review Form 10-Q financial statements conforming to the Applicable Reporting Framework prior to filing, with such reviews conducted in accordance with PCAOB auditing standards. Knowledge that this review is occurring provides audit committees, investors and creditors with additional confidence in quarterly earnings releases. If a company elects semiannual reporting, it would not prepare interim financial statements conforming to the Applicable Reporting Framework in Q1 and Q3, and auditors would therefore be constrained from performing a standard interim review. Consequently, audit committees and market participants would lose the assurance provided by a review, as auditors would be unable to perform one on the standalone, voluntary financial information underlying the quarterly earnings release. CCR understands that while companies electing semiannual reporting could prepare financial statements conforming to the Applicable Reporting Framework each quarter without filing a 10-Q and obtaining a review, this would undermine the efficiencies of electing semiannual reporting and may not be cost-effective. Although agreed-upon procedures ("AUP") exist under the current PCAOB standards as an alternative, AUP provide no assurance and may not be considered an adequate substitute by audit committees. CCR members are in the early stages of evaluating these considerations and recognize that audit committee approval will be an important factor in determining whether and how companies proceed with a semiannual reporting election. Furthermore, AUP can be more onerous than an interim review as each procedure performed needs to be included in a detailed report. As a result, the related fees tend to be relatively high, which may undermine any potential cost savings of electing to report semiannually. Additionally, AUP require each registrant to define its own specific procedures, which may create inconsistency in practice across companies. While CCR supports the availability of an optional review mechanism, CCR does not support requiring companies to obtain an auditor review of financial information included in quarterly earnings releases in Q1 and Q3 by semiannual filers. A mandatory review requirement would undermine the voluntary nature of the quarterly earnings release and may discourage some companies from providing quarterly information to investors or delay the release of quarterly earnings information for others. CCR supports the development of an optional mechanism for companies to obtain a review of financial information without preparing financial statements that fully conform to the Applicable Reporting Framework.

CCR encourages the SEC and PCAOB to continue their active dialogue on this issue and to amend or develop a standard as promptly as practicable, given the importance of audit committee support in electing semiannual reporting.

Comfort Letters

CCR supports the Commission's proposed amendments to Regulation S-X to address the staleness of financial statements in registration statements filed by semiannual filers. The shift from a days-based assessment to a period-end alignment approach is a pragmatic solution to the regulatory staleness concern.

However, addressing regulatory staleness does not resolve the separate and equally significant constraint arising from PCAOB auditing standards governing comfort letters in underwritten securities offerings. Comfort letters are essential to bring-down procedures in registered and certain unregistered offerings and provide underwriters with negative assurance on financial statement items. CCR acknowledges that where 135 days or more have elapsed from the end of the most recent period for which the accountants have performed an audit or review, auditors may still perform procedures and report findings under AS 6101. However, underwriters in the U.S. typically require negative assurance, rather than just a procedures and findings report, to proceed with registered and certain unregistered offerings on standard terms. Without aligning the PCAOB's auditing standards to the Commission's proposed updates, semiannual filers will be constrained in their ability to access the capital markets on standard terms for a significant portion of the year, regardless of whether a procedures and findings report remains a technical alternative available under PCAOB AS 6101. Absent a coordinated resolution to this constraint, the semiannual election may not be a viable option for active U.S. capital markets participants, which could limit the practical impact of the Commission's proposal and impair the efficient capital formation the Commission seeks to facilitate.

CCR recognizes that ensuring negative assurance remains available to semiannual filers will require coordination among the Commission, PCAOB and auditing firms to ensure there is an appropriate balance between the scope of procedures required and the cost of obtaining such assurance. The goal should be to maintain meaningful investor protection without imposing a burden that would effectively negate the cost savings of a semiannual election and compel companies to continue filing Form 10-Q.

CCR is aware that foreign private issuers ("FPIs") who are not subject to quarterly reporting requirements have, in certain cases, addressed this constraint by preparing unaudited interim financial statements specifically for inclusion in a registration statement to bring the elapsed period since the most recently audited or reviewed financial statements to less than 135 days. However, this approach would not represent a reasonable alternative for CCR member companies. Preparing interim financial statements outside the normal filing cadence solely to facilitate a capital markets transaction would impose the very burden that the semiannual election is designed to eliminate. CCR member companies are large accelerated filers that regularly and frequently access the U.S. registered debt and equity markets, making the comfort letter constraint a significant consideration in the practical adoption of the semiannual election. CCR therefore recommends the Commission coordinate with the PCAOB to revise its auditing standards and extend the negative assurance window for semiannual filers, harmonizing it with the Commission's proposed staleness framework. Without such a revision, the comfort letter constraint will function as a substantial barrier to the semiannual election for companies active in the capital markets. Absent a revision to AS 6101, semiannual filers would face a difficult choice of either limiting their access to the capital markets or preparing interim financial statements outside of their elected cadence to facilitate a transaction. Either of these would unnecessarily prolong capital-raising timelines, creating a significant disincentive for frequent market participants to adopt the semiannual reporting cadence.

CCR further notes that the proposed Rule 3-01 amendments do not address the acquired business financial statement requirements governed by Rule 3-05 in mergers and acquisitions. The period-end alignment approach to staleness under proposed amendments to Rule 3-01 applies to the registrant's own financial statements but does not govern the age requirements for pre-acquisition financial statements of acquired businesses filed on Form 8-K under Rule 3-05, which operates under a separate staleness framework that the proposal does not amend. A semiannual filer completing an acquisition could therefore find itself subject to inconsistent staleness standards – one for its own financial statements and another for the acquired business's financial statements. CCR recommends the Commission extend the period-end alignment approach in revised Rule 3-01 to Rule 3-05 to ensure consistency and avoid this mismatch when acquiring another business.

Capital Markets Considerations

Although the following considerations fall outside the Commission's immediate regulatory authority, CCR has included them in this letter as they represent practical capital markets and contractual implications that companies are actively evaluating as they assess the semiannual reporting election. CCR members expect to navigate these dynamics and engage with relevant stakeholders on an individual company basis.

• Trading Windows and Corporate Share Repurchases: CCR members expect to navigate trading window management and corporate repurchase timing individually under existing insider trading compliance frameworks and issuer buyback programs.
• Debt Covenants: CCR members expect to navigate existing covenant obligations through direct engagement with lending institutions.
• Credit Rating Agencies: CCR members expect to engage directly with rating agencies to ensure a semiannual reporting election is not misconstrued as a reduction in transparency or an indicator of credit risk.

Trading Windows and Corporate Share Repurchases

Company insider trading policies impose fixed blackout periods around the close of each fiscal quarter and the subsequent earnings release date. These policies are designed to reduce the risk that insiders, and the issuer itself when executing stock repurchase programs, trade while in possession of material non-public information (“MNPI”), consistent with Rule 10b-5 under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (“Exchange Act”).

CCR member companies generally intend to include all material financial information in their voluntary quarterly earnings releases to support opening trading windows and resuming any open market share repurchases following publication of those releases. As such, neither the frequency nor duration of trading windows, nor the timing of corporate buyback activity would be expected to change meaningfully for those companies under a semiannual reporting cadence, assuming they continue to issue quarterly earnings releases that serve as the basis for opening the window and clearing corporate buyback activity. Some companies currently open trading windows and resume open-market repurchases only following the filing of a Form 10-Q, which may occur on a later date than the earnings release. Certain of those companies are still evaluating the implications of a semiannual election for their insider trading policies and corporate buyback programs, including the appropriate timing for opening the trading window and initiating repurchases in the absence of a quarterly filing. In either case, CCR believes the underlying principle is consistent and companies open their trading windows after all material information has been made publicly available, whether through a voluntary earnings release, a quarterly filing, or both.

Ultimately, CCR believes that managing these trading windows and corporate repurchase programs and determining the exact timing and scope of sufficient public disclosure represent practical, company-specific governance considerations that semiannual filers expect to navigate individually under existing insider trading compliance frameworks and capital management policies.

Debt Covenants

Covenant obligations in indentures, credit agreements and other contractual arrangements generally require quarterly financial statements accompanied by management certification, without reference to whether those statements are filed with the Commission or accompanied by auditor-provided assurance.

CCR members are in the process of assessing the implications of a semiannual reporting election on their existing debt covenant obligations. To the extent lenders continue to require quarterly financial statements, the primary concern would be the imposition of requirements beyond what would be customary under the current quarterly reporting regime, such as a requirement that quarterly financial statements be included in a Form 10-Q filing or that auditors are engaged.

CCR members are also evaluating whether a change in reporting cadence could result in increases to the cost of debt directly attributable to the semiannual election.

Where covenant delivery requirements are limited to face financial statements accompanied by a management certification – consistent with current practice for many CCR member companies –

the primary cost savings associated with a semiannual election would not be materially eroded. However, where covenants require delivery of financial statements equivalent in scope to a Form 10-Q, or require auditor involvement, the burden of compliance and the associated cost savings would need to be carefully evaluated.

CCR notes that the impact of debt covenant obligations on the voluntary adoption of semiannual reporting represents a market dynamic that falls outside of the Commission's immediate regulatory authority. Accordingly, CCR members expect to navigate these contractual implications through direct engagement with lending institutions on an individual company basis.

Credit Rating Agencies

In CCR's experience, credit rating agencies typically require quarterly financial information from rated companies as part of their ongoing ratings process, regardless of a company's SEC reporting cadence. CCR is mindful of two risks that warrant consideration in connection with this dynamic.

First, where a company's quarterly financial information is not filed with the Commission, rating agencies may have concerns about the reliability and completeness of the information provided. Second, CCR is concerned that rating agencies may view a company's election of semiannual reporting as a signal of reduced transparency, potentially affecting credit ratings or outlooks independent of actual financial performance. This risk is particularly relevant in the early years of the semiannual reporting framework, before rating agencies and the broader market have developed established practices for evaluating semiannual filers.

CCR does not believe the frequency of SEC reporting should be a determinative factor in credit assessments. Accordingly, CCR members expect to engage directly with rating agencies on an individual company basis to ensure that a semiannual reporting election is not misconstrued as a reduction in transparency or an indicator of credit risk.

Streamlined Form 10-Q

CCR supports both optional semiannual reporting and a complementary reduction in the disclosure obligations of Form 10-Q. CCR believes that a robust simplification of Form 10-Q requirements could encourage certain companies to retain a quarterly filing cadence for investor relations, capital markets, or contractual reasons while still achieving meaningful burden reduction. Importantly, CCR recommends that any simplification of Form 10-Q disclosure requirements apply equally to Form 10-S filers, so that they benefit from the same streamlined disclosure framework. CCR's recommendations for simplifying Form 10-Q are addressed in the Reg S-K Letter and are incorporated herein by reference. CCR views these as complementary initiatives that can be progressed on separate timelines, prioritizing the finalization of the semiannual option as the more transformative regulatory change.

* * * * *

CCR reiterates its support for the Commission's proposal to introduce an optional semiannual reporting regime and appreciates the Commission's consideration of our comments. We stand ready to support the Commission in its rulemaking efforts and welcome the opportunity to discuss the contents of this letter through a live discussion.

Sincerely,

Committee on Corporate Reporting

Committee on Corporate Reporting (FEI)

Francisco Cunha The Motley Fool Community — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Francisco Cunha self-explanatory

---

Gary West — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gary West I do not want the reporting interval to be changed to a wider time frame. Removing the quarterly interval will hurt me as I am a retail trader. I have read the arguments for and against and in my case I think the negative of making the change will be greater than any relief it gives.

George Menendez RETIRED - IT Professional — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: George Menendez To whom it may concern, KEEP the reporting QUARTERLY! As a small retiree who is managing my small retirement, it is CRITICAL to know how companies and the markets are doing on a timely basis. I cannot afford to be 6 months behind the knowledge curve while trying to keep what little we have, while bigger firms have the advantage of quarterly or less intervals to manage their funds. It is untenable to increase status reporting to 6 months. It would be a serious detriment to our savings. Please DO NOT REDUCE THE REPORTING TO 6 MONTHS! ! KEEP Quarterly reporting. Best regards, George M Menendez RETIRED IT Professional 473 Union Hill Rd. Morganville, NJ 07751 Cell/Text: 908-770-5879 menendez@optimum.net

---

Greg Burke Video Journalist — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Greg Burke Do not do this. This is devastating and awful.

Gretchen Ochs — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gretchen Ochs The integrity of our financial markets depends on one foundational principle: transparency. Any proposal to reduce the frequency of filings strikes at the heart of that principle and must be met with serious scrutiny. Frequent, mandatory disclosures are not bureaucratic formality — they are the mechanism by which investors, regulators, and the public hold corporations accountable. When companies are required to report regularly, the window for concealing material misstatements, manipulating earnings figures, or obscuring deteriorating financial conditions is narrow. Reduce that frequency, and you widen that window considerably. History has shown, repeatedly, that fraud flourishes in the dark. The scandals that have most damaged public trust in capital markets shared a common ingredient: insufficient visibility into the true financial condition of the entities involved. Quarterly and periodic reporting requirements exist precisely because the market learned those hard lessons. It is therefore deeply contradictory to simultaneously declare the elimination of fraud a national priority while loosening the disclosure mechanisms that make fraud detectable in the first place. Less frequent filings mean longer stretches during which a company's books go unscrutinized by the public, by analysts, and by regulators. That is not a reform — it is an invitation. Retail investors, who lack the access to private information that institutional players sometimes enjoy, are the most exposed in any transparency rollback. They rely on timely, accurate, publicly available filings to make informed decisions. Eroding that access does not level the playing field; it tilts it further against ordinary Americans. Retail investors, who lack the access to private information that institutional players sometimes enjoy, are the most exposed in any transparency rollback. They rely on timely, accurate, publicly available filings to make informed decisions. Eroding that access does not level the playing field; it tilts it further against ordinary Americans. We urge regulators and legislators to reject any reduction in mandatory filing frequency and to reaffirm their commitment to the disclosure standards that underpin market confidence. Transparency is not a burden on honest companies — it is their most credible advertisement. It is, above all, the public's right.

Guido Roncallo — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Guido Roncallo 1. Market volatility is bad enough, given some of the surprises that flow from quarterly reporting. Extending reporting to every six months would create greatly exacerbated volatility. 2. Corporate accountability is reduced. To be clear, I am against extending the reporting period.

Heidi Motley Fool Community — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Heidi I respectfully request that the SEC doesn't change the disclosure requirements to only bi-annually. Currently, we get notices quarterly. At times I feel like this isn't frequent enough especially in our current economy and how fast things are changing. More information is needed to make educated decisions, not less. It's extremely important for the good of everyone involved to at least maintain the transparency quarterly. If not, it certainly will feel more like betting on your blackjack hand without getting to look at both your cards. It leaves investors in the dark. I strongly urge you to at a minimum maintain the full disclosure quarterly. Thank you for your consideration and making transparency a priority. Sincerely, Heidi of St Petersburg, Fl

---

Howard Rosewell Jr Stockholder — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Howard Rosewell Jr I oppose the proposed rule and Financial Reporting should remain a quarterly requirement. Much of the data in the quarterly reports is automated and it is not an undue burden for a corporation to provide financial reporting. However, it is a burden for stockholders to be kept in the dark as to the financial condition of the companies they are invested in for 6 months. When you consider the amount of money traded daily in the equity markets, you would think that there would be a push for more frequent reporting than less frequent.

Ilene M. Smith — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ilene M. Smith I learned about the proposed change that would allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. That's a bad idea. Investing is ownership. When one owns a piece of a business, a person deserves to receive regular, transparent communications from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. It will reduce peoples' confidence in investing in businesses, and reduce owners' and investors' ability to protect their financial interests against poor decisions being made by the companies that opt for the reduced reporting practices.

Isaiah Saul — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Isaiah Saul Since quarterly reporting became a requirement in 1970, a great deal has changed. The internet has allowed companies to complete filings and audits far more easily than they could 50 years ago. This should merit increased reporting and transparency requirements, rather than the attack on transparency that this proposed rule change represents.

Jacob M Financial Professional — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jacob M Regarding S7-2026-15... Moving to a six-month reporting cycle is a significant step backward that will harm everyday investors and undermine the integrity of our markets. Amongst other reasons my concern is based on the following critical issuess: Less Transparency for Investors: The quarterly reporting standard has successfully protected investors for over 50 years. Cutting financial updates in half means crucial metrics, risks, and performance shifts will remain hidden for up to six months at a tie. This increases the risk of sudden market shocks and corporate fraud going undetected. Increased Information Advantage: Reducing mandatory disclosures creates a bigger knowledge gap between institutional investors and retail investors. While big funds have the private resources to constantly track companies, everyday investors rely heavily on these public financial snapshots to make informed decisions. Higher Price Volatility: When companies release financial data less frequently, surprises are larger and more sudden. This lack of regular data points will likely cause greater and more chaotic swings in stock prices . Even if companies continue to hold voluntary updates, the official regulatory filings are the only legally reliable standard. I urge the SEC to abandon this proposal and maintain the quarterly Form 10-Q reporting requirement.

---

janet . bush@sbcglobal.net — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: janet . bush@sbcglobal.net Please don’t kill our life savings in our 401k. We worked hard to earn and invest our money to have savings to live on in retirement. It is just reporting to these big companies but to us it is our survival!

Janet Whitehead Disappointed American with the unending Gov’t corruption — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Janet Whitehead KEEP THE REPORT QUARTERLY!! STOP THE CORRUPTION! STOP FOLLOWING THE MOST CORRUPT PRESIDENT IN HISTORY!

Janet Zegna — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Janet Zegna I am against the proposal which will allow companies to provide information semi-annually. I feel that companies need to know they will be checked on a regular basis and twice a year is just enough time for big companies to “hide” financial situations that may affect small investors like myself in negative ways. Big investors would not “feel” these fluctuations as strongly. The monies that companies would save would not make a big difference in comparison to the potential losses small investors would have to manage.

Jeff Emerson — Jul 2, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeff Emerson Please don't allow publicly traded companies to report less. If anything, individual investors need more transparency, not less. The companies that will take advantage of this will be companies that we want to look at more closely and need scrutiny. This change will cause increased mistrust of smaller companies and put the money of the individual investor at a much higher and unnecessary risk.

Jeff Haladik — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeff Haladik There is no need to change the frequency of reporting. There is a long history of quarterly reporting that works well for both individuals and financial institutions. This change will just hinder transparency to Corporate financial activities in a timely manner.

Jefferson Guinn — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jefferson Guinn In the age of Artificial Intelligence (AI) quarterly reporting is not a burdensome task. Actually, rational arguments can be made for more frequent (e.g., monthly) reporting. The reports communicate important information that needs to disseminated "up and down the line." Greater transparency is the goal, not less. The present requirement for quarterly reporting provides investors with data to adequately track trends within a calendar year. Semi annual reporting extends tracking to, minimally, 1 and a half years, or more. Please put me on the record for maintaining the current, existing standards. Thanks for your time.

Jeffrey Clark none — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeffrey Clark To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I strongly oppose proposed Rule S7-2026-15. As an individual investor, I cannot afford to be six months behind the knowledge curve while large investment firms and institutional investors have far greater resources to analyze companies and react to changing conditions. Quarterly financial reporting helps level the playing field by ensuring all investors receive timely, standardized information. Waiting six months between required reports would leave retail investors at a significant disadvantage and reduce the transparency that has made U.S. markets among the strongest and most trusted in the world. Reducing required financial reporting from quarterly to semiannual would be a serious detriment to my retirement savings and to millions of other individual investors who rely on current financial information to make informed investment decisions. Please do not reduce reporting to every six months. Keep quarterly reporting requirements in place. Thank you for considering my comments. Jeffrey Clark

---

Jenna Townsend — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jenna Townsend We do not support the proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Investors deserve regular, transparent communication from businesses. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Jennifer Formoso — Jul 2, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Formoso Do not change the reporting to semester from quarterly. There is no valid reason to change it and a multitude of reasons not to. Leave it alone.

Jennifer L Mcinnes Concerned Citizen — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer L Mcinnes Please do not change the current requirement for companies to report every quarter. I understand this may be cumbersome for a company and going to six month reporting would be easier. However this leads to so many potential problems and the risk is not worth it. Most of these companies are making record profits at this time. The top executives are also getting record compensation packages mostly tied to their companies success. The incentives to hide bad information are there and six moth reports would make this worse. Reporting quarterly keeps this information available to those of us who rely on the market to fund our retirements. Very few companies offer pensions these days so we are forced to rely on our 401k and other investment accounts. Leaving hardworking American citizens more exposed to fluctuations due to longer reporting times is unacceptable. Jennifer McInnes Clayton, NC

Jennifer Steward — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Steward Please do NOT approve this rule change. Quarterly reporting allows for every day investors and the general public to better understand the system and their investments. Semiannual reporting will hurt the public at large by reducing their ability to make informed decisions and reduce trust and transparency in the process. reduced trust in the process will continue to hurt the economy. This rule existed for a reason, and there is no reasonable justification for moving to a semiannual system.

Jenny L — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jenny L Quarterly filings have been the bedrock of stability and transparency in a sector that often lacks both. Changing this would create greater risk for investors, including the millions of Americans who's retirement accounts are invested. The public needs greater visibility into the companies & sectors invested in, not less. Please do not pass a semiannual filing. Keep the filing requirements as quarterly.

Jenny Santangelo — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jenny Santangelo As a retired person who depends on having access to the most current and accurate data concerning investment opportunities and risks, I wholeheartedly object to the notion of reverting back to semiannual reporting. This is an unnecessary “get out of jail free” card for business that only hurts the average American trying to survive and thrive in our capitalist country.

Jessica Quick Gostola — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jessica Quick Gostola Please keep reporting to be quarterly. I believe changing to semi annually could negatively impact individual investors.

Jessica Ryerse, CPA CPA — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jessica Ryerse, CPA Financial transparency is crucial in preventing fraud.

Jessica The ARC — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jessica My name is Jessica and I am a Habilitation Coordinator for a nonprofit organization that provides medical care and services for the developmentally disabled. I also have a child with special needs. What little I make goes to take care of my child and my chronically ill father in law. The retirement investments I have taken out of my paychecks are all I will have to take care of myself and put towards supporting my child's independence. Quarterly reports are necessary so I am informed and prepared to meet with my employer's retirement plan consultants regularly throughout the year. Please, I implore you. Don't take away 50% of my financial freedom. Our lives depend on it.

Jim Frankland — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jim Frankland NO ! It seems CRAZY you are even considering this! 4 - FOUR - times a year to submit how your PUBLIC company is doing, this is NOT that hard to do. How are STOCK INVESTORS suppose to know if their investments are OK???

Jim M. — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jim M. As a private investor, more information is better, not less. I would prefer having a 10-M (monthly) or 10-B (bi-monthly), but I realize there is a lot of work that goes into producing financial statements because of my personal experiences, so 10-Q is sufficient. Now I realize that 10-S is an option, and that at first those companies that change from Q to S will be punished in the market. As time goes on, that punishment may be reduced, which will encourage more companies to change over to S. This gives companies more opportunity to make bad decisions and hide it. This also means less data for investors to analyze to compare investments. I encourage you not to make this change.

---

john kirkwood brick mason — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: john kirkwood if a conservative party wants to keep its business credential, it should then conform to standard business practices, quarterly reporting. keep the status quo, even if for the illusion of the status quo.

John M. Campbell Individual Investor — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John M. Campbell As an individual investor, I rely on quarterly reports from companies to evaluate how the business is performing and to make adjustments in my investments accordingly. Reducing the number of public-company reports to two per year would mean I am unable to make these adjustments in as timely a manner. Clearly, company management collects the data on at least a monthly basis in order to run their companies efficiently. With most companies adopting AI technology to automate their processes, collecting the data into the required reports twice a year instead of four times a year creates a minimal if any decrease in their costs, while it creates a larger negative impact on investors. I urge the SEC to retain the current reporting rules for public companies.

John Mccaslins — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Mccaslins As a retired person, I would like to get regular visibility into the companies I have invested my retirement. I would oppose going to semi-annual reporting.

John McHugh — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John McHugh I think that the quarterly reports system should be kept in place. In these days of scams and back room deals, the more visibility, the better. Unscrupulous businesses will take advantage of any extra time between filings to do their dirty work.

K. A . Petonke Retired — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: K. A . Petonke Leave reporting as is please, and stop screwing the small investors. Thank you.

Karen — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen I oppose the proposal to move SEC reporting to 6 months. It needs to stay at a quarterly interval to keep information current and relevant for investors and the general public. There is already enough corruption in corporate America. These companies do not need another loophole to make defrauding the consumer and investor any easier. A lot can be made to “disappear” in a 6 month period.

Karen — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Why do you want to eliminate quarterly reporting?

Karen Stachler — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Stachler As a person who actually reads the prospectus and reports from my investments or potential investments, this proposed change is not welcome! Keep the reports quarterly for all the right reasons.

Karen Walker — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Walker It seems to me that this administration is doing away with common sense. For a company to only have to report 2xs a year in this information generation when things change instantly makes absolutely no sense and flies in the face of encouraging people to invest. When people invest, they want timely information especially because it affects their livelihood. This new rule change only benefits the corporations, they have more time to hide financial info when things go south.

Kathleen Monahan Retired — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathleen Monahan Kathleen Monahan Retired I worked my entire life, 51 years, in order to build a small nest egg. I want to be able to start some small generational wealth for my children and grandchildren. I think it is so unfair that lower middle class people like myself who have worked hard and tried to put away for the future are being bulldozed by millionaires and billionaires. Why should they have inside information before us? After all, they are the people who can afford to lose some money. The rest of us little people can't. Please do not let this happen.

Kathleen Phaneuf — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathleen Phaneuf I am writing in opposition of the proposal to move from quarterly to semi-annual reporting by the SEC. This change will diminish transparency and trust between pubic corporations and their investors and the public at large. Semi-annual reporting widens opportunities for fraud to continue at the expense of shareholders' savings. Any savings suggested by those who support this measure, will certainly not benefit ordinary investors with modest holdings which will fund their retirement.

Kathryn Dattomo CAE, Chief Executive Officer, National Association of Personal Financial Advisors (NAPFA) — Jul 2, 2026
8700 West Bryn Mawr, Suite 700N
Chicago, Illinois 60631
Phone: (847) 483-5400 l Fax: (847) 483-5415 l
www.NAPFA.org
July 2, 2026
Vanessa A. Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street NE
Washington, DC 20549–1090
Via Electronic Submission: rule-comments@sec.gov
Re: Semiannual Reporting - File No. S7-2026-15
Dear Secretary Countryman:
The National Association of Personal Financial Advisors ("NAPFA"), the nation's leading organization of "Fee-Only" comprehensive financial planning professionals, welcomes the opportunity to provide comments on the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (the "Commission" or "SEC") proposed rule on Semiannual Reporting (RIN 3235–AN58) which would allow public company issuers to choose semiannual periodic reporting instead of the current requirement of quarterly periodic reporting (the "Proposed Rule").1
For the reasons stated below, NAPFA respectfully urges the Commission not to adopt the Proposed Rule.
NAPFA members, and their thousands of Main Street investor and retirement saver clients across America, rely everyday on quarterly reports, as well as current reports of material events filed on Form 8-K, to make informed investment, retirement, and financial planning decisions.

NAPFA believes that quarterly reporting is an established cornerstone of America's capital markets that supports efficient, fair, and robust capital formation that benefits American investors, retirement savers, and businesses alike. Without quarterly reporting, NAPFA members and their clients would incur significant additional costs to obtain, by other means, the timely material information that quarterly reporting currently provides and to mitigate critical material information gaps that would unnecessarily arise. NAPFA is also concerned that the Proposed Rule would lower the quality of material financial information typically available and thus weaken the investor protections that more frequent disclosure provides.
1. About NAPFA
NAPFA was founded in 1983 and is the nation's leading organization of "Fee-Only" comprehensive financial planning professionals. There are more than 4,600 NAPFA members across the nation. NAPFA members provide fiduciary-level financial planning services and retirement advice to Americans from all backgrounds. NAPFA members adhere to standards of professional conduct that are widely recognized as among the highest in the financial planning profession.
Each year a NAPFA member must sign NAPFA's Fiduciary Oath and Code of Ethics2 (the "NAPFA Fiduciary Oath") which generally require each NAPFA member always to act in good faith; to be proactive in disclosing conflicts of interest; and to not accept any commissions, referral fees, or 1 Semiannual Reporting, 91 Fed. Reg. 24968 (May 7, 2026).
2 NAPFA's Mission, Fiduciary Oath and Code of Ethics available at https://www.napfa.org/mission-and-fiduciary-oath.

8700 West Bryn Mawr, Suite 700N
Chicago, Illinois 60631
Phone: (847) 483-5400 | Fax: (847) 483-5415 |
www.NAPFA.org
compensation that is contingent upon the purchase or sale of a financial product. NAPFA members hold themselves out to the public as, and must conduct their business as, Fee-Only financial professionals.
A NAPFA-Registered Financial Advisor (a "NAPFA Advisor") must be registered with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (the "SEC"), or with a state securities regulator, as a "registered investment adviser"3 and commonly referred to in the public as a "RIA." Under the federal securities laws, the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (the "Advisers Act") imposes a strict fiduciary duty on a RIA.
Each NAPFA Advisor also must hold the CERTIFIED FINANCIAL PLANNER™ designation from the Certified Financial Planner Board of Standards.4 A CFP® professional must comply with the CFP Board Code of Ethics and Standards of Conduct (the "CFP Standards") which reflect the commitment of CFP professionals to high standards of competency and ethics. NAPFA and NAPFA members have worked closely with CFP Board over the years to develop and to implement the CFP Standards as a commonsense, workable, and ethical framework of business practices to guide financial professionals who provide financial planning services and retirement advice. NAPFA endorses the CFP Standards and asks the Department to carefully consider CFP Board's public comments on the Proposed Rule.

As a result, NAPFA Advisors operate their businesses and provide financial planning services to clients under three complementary sets of ethical standards. One set is under the NAPFA Fiduciary Oath. A second set is under the Advisers Act, which imposes federal securities law fiduciary requirements on all RIAs. And a third set of ethical standards is under CFP Standards that provide practical fiduciary-level guidance to CFP® professionals.
Prospective clients sometimes ask why NAPFA Advisors are Fee-Only, do not accept commissions, and are compensated only from the fees that their clients pay them. NAPFA's answer is that financial professionals who receive commissions typically are paid based on the financial products they sell to their clients. This can lead to a conflict of interest between the financial professional, whose compensation may be tied to the recommendation of a financial product, and the client who, in this relationship of "trust and confidence," reasonably expects financial advice that is solely in the client's best interest.
Because of this conflict of interest, financial professionals who are paid from commissions may have difficulty placing the client's best interest above the financial professional's personal financial interest.
NAPFA's position is that the Fee-Only method of compensation is the most transparent and objective compensation method available in the marketplace today; minimizes conflicts of interest; and allows NAPFA Advisors to act as true fiduciaries. NAPFA Advisors are well positioned to always act solely in the best interest of each client and to serve each client in a holistic, transparent, and comprehensive manner without the distraction of having to generate commission compensation.
3 See, https://www.sec.gov/about/offices/oia/oia_investman/rplaze-042012.pdf, https://www.finra.org/investors/investing/working-with-investment-professional/investment-advisers and https://www.nasaa.org/industry-resources/investment-advisers/investment-adviser-guide.
4 CFP Board, founded in 1985, is a professional standards-setting body that has been committed to the public interest for more than 40 years.
The CFP® certification program rests on both competency and ethics standards and is accredited by the National Commission for Certifying Agencies. Today, more than 109,000 CFP® professionals (or approximately one-third of all financial advisors) voluntarily commit as a part of their certification to abide by high standards of competency and ethics. The cornerstone of the CFP Standards is the requirement to act as a fiduciary, and therefore, to always act in the best interests of the client when providing financial advice. CFP Board adopted the fiduciary standard in response to the reasonable expectations of investors and to promote investor access to competent, ethical financial advice. CFP Board consists of two affiliated nonprofit organizations: (i) the Certified Financial Planner Board of Standards, Inc.; and (ii) the Certified Financial Planner Board of Standards Center for Financial Planning, Inc.

8700 West Bryn Mawr, Suite 700N
Chicago, Illinois 60631
Phone: (847) 483-5400 | Fax: (847) 483-5415 |
www.NAPFA.org
2. The Benefits to Investors and Capital Formation Outweigh Costs to Issuers NAPFA appreciates that the current requirement to file quarterly reports on Form 10-Q can be costly, in time and resources, for Exchange Act reporting companies to prepare and to distribute and, in addition, may increase the risk of disclosure of sensitive proprietary information that could benefit reporting companies' competitors. Thus, the Commission posits in the Proposing Release that semiannual reporting would permit reporting companies to redirect resources towards strategic priorities and other business needs while reducing the risk of disclosing proprietary information.5
On this point, however, NAPFA highlights the following observations that the Commission itself makes in the Proposing Release. First, the remarkable efficiency of American financial markets rests on material financial information becoming public in a timely fashion. Second, in addition to protecting investors, greater availability of material financial information allows securities prices to better reflect the fundamental value of the issuing company. This promotes capital formation as issuers have access to lower cost of capital and investors have access to higher market liquidity. Third, a reduction in the frequency of reporting could result in delayed disclosure of material information, reduced comparability, and lost information.
NAPFA recognizes this tradeoff between (i) reducing regulatory burdens, so that reporting companies can reallocate their resources to more value-enhancing activities and (ii) promoting efficient financial markets through more frequent, timely disclosure. NAPFA, however, urges the Commission to resolve this tradeoff in favor of retail investors and retirement savers who deserve and demand the market protections that quarterly and more frequent material financial disclosure provides.
3. The Proposed Rule Would Lead to Information Gaps and Increased Investor Costs
NAPFA members and their clients rely on quarterly reports to help make sound investment, issuer analysis, and shareholder voting decisions. This information is critical to monitoring how issuers are performing financially, implementing their business strategies, and addressing instances of fraud, error, and control deficiencies. When reviewed as a whole, the current financial statements, management discussion and analysis, auditor reports, and supplemental information contained in quarterly reports together provide NAPFA members and their clients both the material information and the business context necessary to make sound investment decisions.
To close information gaps that would result from semiannual disclosure, financial planning professionals and their clients would likely be compelled to purchase data from private information providers to supplement available issuer information that currently is provided through quarterly reports. Issuer information provided by data brokers and other third-party sources would likely be less reliable and more difficult to verify than current SEC-mandated disclosures.

The Proposed Rule would also reduce the ability of financial planning professionals and their clients to engage in comparable financial analysis if some issuers opt into reporting semiannually while other issuers continue to report quarterly. For example, NAPFA understands that a semiannual filer might choose to disclose earnings and other material information, that currently is required to be filed quarterly on Form 10-Q, instead on a Form 8-K "current report." The contents of a Form 8-K current report, however, are largely determined by an issuer's management team and are not tightly regulated under SEC rules. As a result, the information provided on a Form 8-K current report would be less comparable and 5 See, 91 Fed. Reg. 4987

8700 West Bryn Mawr, Suite 700N
Chicago, Illinois 60631
Phone: (847) 483-5400 | Fax: (847) 483-5415 |
www.NAPFA.org
provide a less complete picture of an issuer than information that is currently required to be filed quarterly with the SEC under SEC rules that govern Form 10-Q quarterly reports.

4. Semiannual Reporting May Enhance Insider Advantages Over Investors

NAPFA is concerned that semiannual reporting would place financial planning professionals and their clients at a greater informational disadvantage compared to issuer "insiders" (e.g., directors, management persons, and company affiliates) who may receive material nonpublic information more frequently through business, personal, or other relationships. Doubling the time period for reporting from quarterly to semiannually will increase the value of nonpublic information for a longer period and heighten the potential for misuse of nonpublic information. The resulting reduction in issuer transparency, coupled with the increased risk of misappropriation of nonpublic information, may likely trigger heightened investment volatility, decrease market liquidity, and require public investors to demand higher risk premia from issuers that opt into semiannual reporting.

5. Public Confidence in Retirement Investing

The Proposed Rule raises NAPFA's concerns about the public’s future confidence about investing in financial markets to achieve lifetime goals. NAPFA believes the public's confidence to invest in public markets rests substantially on at least three long-standing expectations. One is the high quality of the financial information regularly reported to investors and the marketplace. A second is the cadence of regular, quarterly financial reporting of public company material information. A third is that an ever-vigilant SEC will rigorously enforce its rules to protect investors and markets.

Although the SEC's Investor Advisory Committee recently observed that "disclosure requirements for public companies have increased dramatically in recent decades at a significant cost to public companies,
”6 NAPFA views this as a "cost of doing business" that issuers must bear to have access to what is widely regarded as the most stable, liquid, and well-regulated securities market in the world today.

NAPFA members, and the public we serve, rely upon quarterly reporting of public company information.

Less frequent reporting may result in lasting public distrust in America's financial markets that will discourage participation in long-term investing.

6. Maintain Quarterly Reporting but Consider Other Disclosure Improvements

NAPFA applauds the Commission's initiatives to minimize regulatory burdens and costs on investors, businesses and the marketplace through adopting policies that are consistent with promoting investor protection and capital formation. We note, for example, the Commission's multi-year effort, across several Administrations, to reduce the amount of time for settlement of most exchange-traded equity transactions from three business days in 1993 ("T+3") to one business day applicable since 2024 ("T+1").

The Proposed Rule, by comparison, is not a step in the right direction. The current securities regulatory framework does not require continuous disclosure of material information by issuers which would ensure prompt public disclosure of new material events and financial information. Instead, the current framework requires issuers periodically to answer specific questions on a Form 10-K annual report, Form 10-Q quarterly report, and Form 8-K current report of recent events. These Exchange Act reporting obligations provide the public greater confidence and certainty about when issuers will disclose various categories of material information. Those benefits must be weighed, however, against the costs and disadvantages experienced by the pubic because an issuer can delay disclosure of that information until 6 See, https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-statements/atkins-remarks-iac-031226.

8700 West Bryn Mawr, Suite 700N
Chicago, Illinois 60631
Phone: (847) 483-5400 | Fax: (847) 483-5415 |
www.NAPFA.org

the issuer is required to file the appropriate Form. The SEC's quarterly reporting requirement is an important example of the agency's attempts to evaluate and balance competing public costs and public benefits.

From NAPFA's perspective, the more prudent course for the Commission today is to continue the current quarterly reporting regime and to propose new alternatives that instead would both accelerate disclosure of material information to the public and improve the disclosure process. NAPFA believes that the Commission's investment of its time and resources in those initiatives would be cheered by the public as a step in the right direction.

6. Conclusion

NAPFA appreciates this opportunity to comment on the Proposed Rule. In our view, the Proposed Rule neither supports the Commission's investor protection mandate nor provides evidence that it would meaningfully encourage additional capital formation. We respectfully urge the Commission not to adopt the Proposed Rule and instead invest its time and resources toward new initiatives that would both accelerate disclosure of material information to the public and improve the disclosure process.

NAPFA is available to meet with the Commission at its convenience to discuss these issues further. Should you have questions regarding NAPFA or this comment letter, please contact me at (847) 483-5400 or DattomoK@napfa.org.

Sincerely,
Kathryn Dattomo, CAE
Chief Executive Officer
SEC Semiannual Reporting Comment 070226 5

Kathy Fleming Citizen — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathy Fleming Please keep reporting quarterly!

Kathy Retired Professor — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathy Absolutely demand quarterly reporting! No compromise! No exceptions!

Kayley Manwell — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kayley Manwell My name is Kayley Manwell, I work for a small business shipping and fulfillment company as a shipping clerk. We produce and deliver orders for over a dozen small businesses that were founded by artists, and grown through their respectful approach to business. Through my amazing job I have started and maintained a 401k for my future retirement which would now be at risk due to this ruling if it leaned in favor of large corporations instead of the individuals who truly matter. Me, my coworkers, and millions of others who rely on accurate reports to invest for our futures as well as our family's could now be at risk. Our hard earned American dollars would be on the line due to this decision if it allowed quarterly reporting to disappear— like the integrity of every American corporation will if this passes. We are hard working small town people who take pride in what we do, create, and the work we put into not only our jobs but our passions. To have that threatened by big corporations would be stunningly devastating and dangerous. Large corporations receiving handouts, tax cuts, monopolies, or other unfair incentives to increase their business and profits while regular people suffer is a story as old as humanity and it has never ended well for the corporations. I urge you to use what brain power you possess to keep this rule on quarterly reporting intact and to keep companies accountable and aware of the public concerns in their backroom dealings. They should not be allowed to steam roll the rule of law in this decision or in any others currently being protested and fought in courts across the nation. Keep Quarterly Reporting Intact!

Kendra Bruce — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kendra Bruce I support maintaining quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. Regular financial disclosures promote transparency, accountability, and informed decision-making for investors. As an individual investor and retirement saver, I rely on timely public information to understand how companies are performing. Reducing reporting frequency could make it harder to identify risks early and would provide less transparency for everyday investors. Please preserve quarterly reporting requirements.

Kervin M. Coss Nuclear Engineer — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kervin M. Coss To the Securities and Exchange Commission, I am writing as an individual retail investor to express my opposition to the proposed rule that would permit public companies to replace quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q with semiannual reporting on Form 10-S. The SEC's core mission includes protecting investors, maintaining fair and efficient markets, and facilitating capital formation. In my view, this proposal would weaken investor protection and market transparency while providing limited benefits to ordinary shareholders. Quarterly reporting is one of the few mechanisms that provides all investors with regular, standardized, and publicly available information. Large institutional investors have access to extensive research capabilities, alternative data sources, industry experts, and direct interactions with management teams. Retail investors generally do not have access to these resources. We rely heavily on SEC filings to evaluate company performance and make informed investment decisions. Reducing mandatory reporting frequency from every three months to every six months would increase information asymmetry between institutional and retail investors. The result would likely be a less level playing field, with professional investors gaining an even greater advantage over individual shareholders. The proposal is often justified as a way to reduce short-term thinking by corporate management. While long-term decision-making is important, less disclosure is not the appropriate solution. Investors should not lose access to timely financial information in an effort to influence managerial behavior. Transparency and accountability are foundational principles of U.S. capital markets and have contributed significantly to investor confidence. Quarterly reporting also serves as an early warning system. Financial deterioration, liquidity concerns, operational challenges, and governance issues are often identified through interim reports before they become more severe. Extending the reporting interval could delay the discovery of material trends and increase the risk of sudden market disruptions when a larger amount of information is released at once. I acknowledge that reporting costs may be more burdensome for certain smaller issuers. However, it is my opinion that companies listed in public markets are required to have the infrastructure to communicate financial metrics to their shareholders. The strength of U.S. capital markets has long rested on transparency, investor confidence, and equal access to information. Reducing the frequency of required financial reporting moves in the opposite direction. For retail investors, the benefits of quarterly reporting substantially outweigh the compliance costs associated with maintaining the current system. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to withdraw or reject the proposed amendments in File No. S7-2026-15. Thank you for considering my comments.

Kimberly Turner — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kimberly Turner Subject: Comment on File No. S7-2026-15 — Proposed Optional Semiannual Reporting (Form 10-S) Dear Secretary, I am writing as an individual investor to urge the Commission to reject the proposed amendments allowing public companies to elect semiannual reporting on Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q. 1. Longer information gaps increase risk. Doubling the interval between required disclosures — from three months to six — means investors go longer without verified financial information, leaving more room for undetected problems to build before they’re disclosed. 2. Individual investors rely more heavily on formal filings. Institutional investors often have access to management and analyst calls; retail investors depend disproportionately on standardized SEC filings. Reducing filing frequency would widen the information gap between institutional and individual investors. 3. Stale information during capital-raising events. Longer reporting intervals mean investors may be asked to make decisions, such as in a follow-on offering, based on financial statements that are materially older than under the current quarterly system. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to preserve mandatory quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q. Sincerely, K Turner East Greenbush, NY

KIRBY WHITEHEAD III Retired Teacher - History/ Social Studies — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: KIRBY WHITEHEAD III No, this change is counter to positive economic rules and basic capitalism. Economic actors in a free market should be able to operate knowing the risk and provide information they have to allow others to weigh risk when making decisions. Today's complex economy already makes this a difficult task. Allowing those entities involved in the free market would only undermine the system. Also, with the amount of computing power available today, it would be ludicrous to assure that quarterly reports are some unreasonable burden. And, as a retired individual with a pension, it is difficult for me to pick and choose individual companies because much of my investments are in large funds and the State of Texas' retirement investment funds. So, I cannot punish an individual company for not reporting when others might. Your job is to protect my rights as an individual citizen. More transparency does that. Do not make this change.

Kirk Jones None. Blue collar worker. — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kirk Jones There is enough grift already. They will not be honest unless compelled to do so. Then go after those who use their political positions to skirt the laws to enrich themselves and their families. Do your job.

L Behrman — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: L Behrman July 2, 2026 To Whom it May Concern, S7-2026-15 is incredibly inappropriate. Transparency is key in all business dealings, especially those that public lives and livelihoods depend upon; including retirees who have considerable stock investments. Quarterly reporting is essential to keep investors informed about stock performance and corporate risk. Do not allow companies to keep their books secret for up to six months. Keep quarterly reporting, which was put in place to prevent another Enron or Madoff fiasco from happening again. S7-2026-15 makes misappropriation of funds, theft and corruption easier to hide and more difficult to detect. It also makes it easier to deceive American consumers. Keep quarterly reporting. L Behrman

---

L. Logan Boswell Semi retired rancher — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: L. Logan Boswell I think we need to keep the quarterly reporting requirements. Publicly traded companies need to be more transparent about their business records not less.

Laura Landolt Oakland University — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Landolt Please maintain transparency and keep quarterly reporting.

Laurens Vaneveld Mechanical Engineer and retail investor — Jul 2, 2026 Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laurens Vaneveld Please do not allow companies to go from the current quarterly reporting to semiannual reporting. Retail investors such as myself are already at a significant disadvantage compared to insiders, even to employees who can see and hear things not public. True corporate insiders have even more advantages and often profit even more at the expense of retail investors is these reporting frequencies are reduced further. They can sell in advance of bad news becoming public or buy before good news becomes public driving stock prices before retail investors hear any news.

Laurie Gilzow None — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laurie Gilzow Please keep the quarterly reporting rule. Hard working Americans pensions are at stake. Help protect our investments by keeping things as they are now. Thank you

---

Lillian Financial analyst — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lillian My name is Lilly and I work in the finance sector. Keeping the 10Q reporting is extremely important as it holds companies accountable and allows investors to make informed decisions about their investments. Moreover a lot of times investments are made within a retirement account - A lot can happen in 3 months and many Americans will be left in a bad retirement position if companies are allowed to fly under the radar

---

Lisa Evon — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Evon This situation is exactly why the SEC exists. Hold corporations accountable all year long - not twice a year!!!

Lorine Bautista Vice Presenter of Mortgage Lending, Guaranteed Rate Affinity — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lorine Bautista I oppose any proposal to reduce the frequency of required corporate financial reporting. Regular reporting is a cornerstone of transparent and efficient capital markets. Investors, especially individual investors who rely on timely, standardized disclosures to make informed decisions and to identify changes in a company's financial health before problems become significant. Less frequent reporting increases information asymmetry, giving insiders and large institutional investors an advantage while leaving everyday investors with less current information. Reducing transparency also weakens market discipline. Companies are more accountable when they know their performance will be regularly disclosed. Extending reporting intervals could allow material issues to go undisclosed for longer periods, increasing volatility when information is finally released and potentially resulting in larger investor losses. While reducing regulatory burden is a worthwhile goal, it should not come at the expense of investor protection or market integrity. If compliance costs are a concern, the SEC should pursue targeted reforms that streamline reporting requirements without reducing the frequency of financial disclosures. Strong, transparent markets depend on timely access to reliable information. I urge the SEC to preserve regular reporting requirements that protect investors, promote fair markets, and maintain confidence in the U.S. financial system.

Lynn Congdon Investor — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lynn Congdon Do not change the frequency of reporting to investors from Quarterly; it is the investors' money and transparency is required, and less frequent reporting is not transparency. There is too much corruption going on and this proposed change facilitates corruption.

Lynn W Investor — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lynn W The last thing we need in the United States right now is LESS transparency. I'm against S7-2026-15.

M. Watson CEO, Private Business — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: M. Watson Letter of Opposition to File No. S7-2026-15 Semiannual Reporting: I am writing as an individual retail investor, managing my own long-term retirement & brokerage portfolio, to express my strong opposition to proposed rule S7-2026-15. The proposal to make quarterly Form 10-Q reporting optional and replace it with a semiannual Form 10-S creates severe risks for the large number of us who rely on timely, standardized financial disclosures to secure our financial futures. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal based on the following critical issues: •Exacerbates Information Asymmetry: Insider trading is a serious problem that is happening with regularity. Corporate executives and Wall Street insiders possess direct channels to company management. They profit off of information that the public doesn't have access to. Individual retail investors depend almost entirely on standardized, public SEC disclosures. Waiting six months for certified numbers leaves everyday investors completely in the dark while insiders trade on fresher data. This rule would worsen an unlevel playing field for all retail investors. •Magnifies Retirement Portfolio Volatility: A 180-day gap between financial statements means that underlying business issues can fester undetected for half a year. When negative performance or accounting concerns are finally revealed, it will result in severe, abrupt stock drops rather than gradual market adjustments. For people close to and in retirement, these sudden shocks can cause permanent, catastrophic damage to savings. Social Security is projected to be depleted in 2032, resulting in automatic, across-the-board cuts for millions of people. That, combined with this proposed rule, would severely harm our financial futures. •Undermines Fiduciary Oversight: Many of us rely on financial advisers, published information, and information from investment funds themselves to manage our retirement. As highlighted by an analysis from Advisors4Advisors, slowing down formal information forces people to monitor long-term assets using inaccurate, outdated data, increasing investors overall liability and risk. Retail investors wouldn't be able plan properly, relying on educated guesses and opinions of others to make the best investment decisions for ourselves. •Technology Eradicates the "Burden" Argument: Proponents claim quarterly reporting is an onerous burden. However, in 2026, modern enterprise software, automated accounting systems, and Ai make extracting quarterly data highly efficient, effectively rendering their argument moot. The minor compliance savings for corporations do not justify shifting immense financial risks onto the public. The SEC was founded on the fundamental principle of narrowing the disclosure gap between corporate insiders and public investors. Reducing mandatory reporting frequency represents a massive step backward for investor protection at this crucial time. I ask the Commission to stand up for us, the everyday investors, and maintain mandatory quarterly 10-Q reporting. -Sincerely, M. Watson CEO & Retail Investor

---

Margaret Readdy Professor of Mathematics, University of Kentucky — Jul 2, 2026 Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Margaret Readdy Companies should continue to submit quarterly statements for many reasons: 1. This information allows investors to have up-to-date information regarding the health of companies they are invested in or plan to invest in. 2. A lot of economic damage can occur if a company does not report troubles until almost 6 months after the fact. 3. The quarterly statements protects the US government from having to deal with a major company causing economic harm to the Nation's economy for at least half of a year. If necessary, Congress can step in sooner from the quarterly information and prevent a stock crash. 4. There is nothing in the proposed 6 month reporting to prevent insider trading.

Marilyn Folwell Marilyn Folwell — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marilyn Folwell Stop trying to hide your information no to six month reporting.

Marion David Haddock Jr CPA — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marion David Haddock Jr Reporting on a 6-month basis is a BAD idea. I urge a defeat of this proposal, investors need information that is current or at least no older than 3 months. Defeat this proposal. Don’t know any regular investor who would favor this. This idea is out of left field.

Mark Kram Regular investor — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Kram I do not support this proposed rule. Allowing it enables public companies that previously were required to submit quarterly reports and newly established public companies to perform moderate to major financial changes that could have significant impact on the valuation of the public company’s underlying finances, stock value and stability. This, in turn, can result in significant impacts to investors portfolios. There is also the prospect of Elevated Insider Trading Risks: With six months between formal, reviewed financial filings, the risk of material non-public information (MNPI) floating around inside the company increases. Investors may face a market where corporate insiders hold a much structural advantage, requiring companies to enforce much longer and stricter insider trading blackout window This should rule should not be approved.

Mary Francoeur, NFMA Industry & Media Liaison, National Federation of Municipal Analysts — Jul 2, 2026
July 2, 2026
Ms. Vanessa A. Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, NE
Washington, D.C. 20549-1090
Re: Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140; File No. S7-2026-15 Semiannual Reporting
Dear Ms. Countryman:
The National Federation of Municipal Analysts (NFMA) is a not-for-profit association with approximately 1,200 members in the United States, comprising a broad range of municipal bond analysts from the buy-side, sell-side, rating agencies, bond insurers, bond counsel, financial advisors, and financial data providers. The membership of the NFMA represents a material portion of the firms owning the municipal debt outstanding.
The mission of the NFMA is to enhance the professional development and analytical contributions of municipal market participants through best-in-class educational programs, networking opportunities, and targeted advocacy that supports improved disclosure to benefit the industry. The NFMA has published an extensive library of Recommended Best Practices in Disclosure and White Papers which are available on our website, www.nfma.org.

We appreciate the opportunity to comment on the Securities and Exchange Commission's proposed rule on Semiannual Reporting. Debt issued in the tax-exempt market is subject to the Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board's Rule 15(c)212 with respect to continuing disclosure. However, economic and industrial development bonds are a class of debt issued in the municipal market that also relies on the reporting requirements of publicly traded companies. These bonds, of which approximately $84 billion are outstanding, are issued by governmental agencies with the proceeds lent to private parties that are obligated to repay the bonds. Special facility bonds issued for airlines are an example of these financings, and there are approximately $8.77 billion of these bonds presently outstanding. Corporate obligors of economic and industrial development bonds also include investor-owned utilities, industrial manufacturers and petroleum companies. For bonds issued to finance infrastructure projects through public-private partnerships, key project participants include publicly traded funds and construction companies.

Holders and potential buyers of these bonds rely on the timely quarterly filings of these entities to assess the credit quality of these bonds as well as to ensure the bonds are being appropriately priced in the secondary market. Reducing by half the frequency of these reports would be detrimental to the holders of these bonds and could impair the liquidity of these bonds. Economic conditions can change rapidly, as exemplified by the recent reduction in availability of aviation fuel and resulting price increases. Less frequent filings will reduce investor access to key financial and operational information from these obligors.

We believe that the proposed rule is contrary to the Commission's mission of protecting investors, maintaining fair, orderly, and efficient markets, and facilitating capital formation.

Yours truly,
/s/ Mary Francoeur
Mary Francoeur
NFMA Industry & Media Liaison
cc: The Honorable Paul S. Atkins, Chairman
The Honorable Hester M. Peirce, Commissioner
The Honorable Mark T. Uyeda, Commissioner

Mary Perrone — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Perrone This is ridiculous. I am stunned by the degree that institutions are falling and how those who are supposed to work for "We the People" are destroying what protections have been put in place for that exact reason. The more destruction getting through only reinforces the probability of another Civil War. Watch your step. Shame on you. Mary Perrone

---

Matt — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matt Very, very bad idea. At best, this rule signals complete incompetence in understanding capital markets and the value of informed investing from both individual and institutional investors. At worst, a nefarious rule change designed to block out the individual from capital markets and further erode the middle class.

Maura Belliveau — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Maura Belliveau I am sending this message to register my opposition to any reduction in the frequency of corporate reporting. SEC quarterly reporting is critical to individual investors. The current schedule of reporting is not burdensome to public companies and preserves transparency in our financial markets. Like many Americans, I am an individual investor who relies on and benefits from this transparency. The "blindness" this change would create harms individual investors like me. Please do not change the current reporting schedule. Sincerely, Maura Belliveau, Brooklyn NY

MC Derivatives Trader, Anonymous — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: MC Quarterly reporting helps my clients better understand how they deploy their capital and gives them more opportunities to identify abnormalities in reporting. Please maintain the quarterly reporting requirement — this is crucial to maintaining confidence in American markets.

Michael Daniel — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Daniel I am a retail investor. I would like reporting to remain quarterly for all publicly traded companies. Respectfully, Mike

---

michael gast — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: michael gast keep the reporting of companies at 4 times per year!

Michelle Gagnon — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michelle Gagnon Dear SEC, My name is Michelle and I am a professional in the tech industry. I have a bachelors degree in Robotics Engineering and have spent more than half of my first decade post-college working at a growing tech startup that eventually went through the IPO process. I vehemently oppose the proposed changes to allow companies to report on financials on a semi-annual basis. The reality of working in tech today is that most Boards and C-suite execs are endlessly looking for quarter-to-quarter successes and constantly hiding or obscuring losses. Allowing companies to hide their financials for an extended period will encourage corruption and exploitation of systems designed to protect regular citizens and investors. I urge you to strike down this proposal for the protection of the American citizens and the national economy.

Mike — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mike Please retain quarterly reporting

---

Mike — Jul 2, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mike As a millennial who's already fighting hard for what I earn, I don't need companies stealing from me while I'm not watching. Retirement is already pretty much a pipe dream for us. Don't screw us even more.

Mike Flood, SVP, US Chamber of Commerce — Jul 2, 2026
July 2, 2026
Ms. Vanessa Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street NE
Washington, DC 20549
Re: Semiannual Reporting
Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140
File No. S7-2026-15
Dear Ms. Countryman:
The U.S. Chamber of Commerce ("Chamber") submits these comments in response to the proposed rules from the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC" or "Commission") regarding Semiannual Reporting (the "Proposal"). The Chamber also commends the Commission for its ongoing commitment to review existing regulations that impact capital formation in the United States.
As the Commission acknowledges in the Proposal, much has changed in the U.S. capital markets since 1970 when the SEC first moved to mandate quarterly repor ng. The makeup of the U.S. economy has changed notably, with manufacturing and heavy industry declining in rela ve size, and technology-based and service-oriented companies composing a much higher percentage of the public company base. The Proposal is right to note the "varied circumstances" that each public company faces and which in some instances may support a shi to semiannual repor ng.1
The Chamber previously provided input to the SEC regarding semi-annual repor ng when the SEC requested informa on and held a public roundtable on the subject in 2019.2 As discussed in those comments, supporters of op onal semiannual repor ng typically point out the high compliance burden for issuers and the poten al for quarterly repor ng to contribute to "short-termism" in the capital markets. On the other hand, those that support quarterly repor ng argue that it produces greater transparency, results in a lower cost of capital, and serves as a discipline for companies. Our thoughts on the ques on remain consistent with our 2019 submissions to the SEC.
1 Proposal at 16
2 See Chamber Le ers of March 19, 2019, and July 17, 2019. Available at: h ps://www.sec.gov/comments/s7-26-18/s72618-5821159-187492.pdf; h ps://www.sec.gov/comments/s7-26-18/s72618-5177716-183506.pdf
Cri cs of quarterly repor ng note the associated cost and compliance burden, as well as the distrac on to management and poten al incen ves for management to focus on short-term results at the expense of greater long-term value crea on. Semiannual repor ng could afford more me for companies that elect that repor ng frequency, including their financial and management teams, to spend on value-adding ac vi es and projects.
At the same me, the Commission should be mindful of poten al opera onal considera ons associated with changes in repor ng frequency, including the need to prepare compara ve interim financial informa on in periods when issuers transi on between semiannual and quarterly repor ng frameworks.
The Chamber also echoes the sen ments of Commissioner Peirce regarding the focus on content of disclosure rather than frequency of disclosure.3 Much of the administra ve burden of SEC repor ng stems from decades' worth of ever-increasing disclosure mandates that have increased the volume and cost of quarterly and annual reports but made it more difficult for investors to determine the most salient informa on about a business. The SEC's ongoing Reg S-K reform ini a ve will go a long way towards modernizing disclosure and encouraging more companies to enter the public markets.4

Many companies will determine that, based on feedback from their investors and analysts, con nuing with quarterly repor ng is in the best long-term interest of their shareholders. Companies may also consider the poten al impact on the liquidity of their stocks from a shi to semi-annual repor ng and decide to maintain their current repor ng frequency. Even for companies that elect semiannual repor ng, many may con nue to prepare and provide quarterly financial informa on to sa sfy contractual obliga ons, lender requirements, and capital markets expecta ons, further suppor ng the Proposal's reliance on private ordering.

Boards of directors—guided by their fiduciary du es to all shareholders—are best suited to determine whether quarterly or semiannual repor ng is best for their respec ve companies. Even with the op on to report quarterly or semiannually, many companies are likely to elect to remain on a quarterly repor ng calendar for any number of reasons, including covenants in financing agreements, analyst and investor preferences unique to their companies, regulatory requirements exis ng outside the federal securi es laws, decision making and risk management, and other fiduciary concerns.

The Chamber does not prefer one cadence of repor ng over another. But we also believe that the Proposal's op onality approach righ ully leaves the decision to companies to decide whether semiannual repor ng is in the best interests of their businesses and investor bases.

3 Quarterly Ques ons: Statement on the Proposed Amendments to Allow Semiannual Repor ng. Commissioner Hester Peirce
(May 5, 2026) h ps://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-statements/peirce-statement-proposing-semiannual-repor ng-
050526

4 See e.g. April 10, 2026 Chamber le er to SEC on Reg S-K reform h ps://www.uschamber.com/finance/le er-to-sec-onreforming-regula on-s-k-cll-15

DISCUSSION

The Proposal's approach towards disclosure of financial informa on.

The vast majority of public companies report earnings by means of a press release that is contemporaneously reported to the Commission under Item 2.02 of Form 8-K. Because the content and format of the earnings release is subject to fewer mandatory SEC disclosure rules, public companies have greater flexibility to tailor content to meet the unique needs of their respec ve companies and investors. They are also able to focus the discussion on issues of par cular relevance to their respec ve industries or geographies.

Companies elec ng semiannual repor ng would remain subject to exis ng governance and control requirements and would need to con nue providing mely disclosure of material informa on. Companies elec ng semiannual repor ng may also need to reassess the design of insider trading policies, including blackout periods and trading windows, to ensure they remain appropriately calibrated to the ming of periodic and current disclosures.

A typical earnings release includes material financial informa on that is repeated in the Form 10-Q. Similarly, the typical earnings release also includes a narra ve descrip on of the material developments in the prior quarter (or year in the case of an annual report), again similar to content in the MD&A in Form 10-Q (or Form 10-K). Other material events, such as material li ga on or recent M&A ac vity, also are disclosed in an earnings release, again poten ally overlapping with disclosure in Form 10-Q.

To accompany the earnings call, many companies also prepare a slide deck containing useful charts and graphics that are not repeated in the Form 10-Q. Management may also highlight recent developments, such as a new product launch or other strategic ventures, that may not receive the same level of discussion in Form 10-Q due to the nature of its disclosure requirements.
While a number of public companies file Form 10-Q on the same day they report earnings under Item 2.02 of Form 8-K, many others s ll defer the Form 10-Q filing for many days un l a er the earnings release. In the interim, issuers have already conducted the earnings call, news media has reported on the results, and the capital markets have reacted to the informa on, leading to market adjustments in stock prices long before the lengthier Form 10-Q is filed. Even for those companies that make both filings on the same day, the seminal events are s ll the earnings release and subsequent call. Put another way, most companies will a est that their stock does not trade upon the filing of a Form 10-Q or 10-K, indicia that all material informa on rela ng to a completed quarter is disclosed through the earnings process, and hence the reason that most company trading windows are ed to the release of earnings and not the filing of SEC periodic reports.
These dynamics may not change for some companies that elect to report semiannually on Form 10-S.5 Certain filers may con nue the prac ce of releasing earnings and hos ng investor calls before the filing of the applicable Form 10-S or Form 10-K.
We also expect some issuers to follow the hybrid approach discussed in the Proposal. Such companies would formally report results semiannually, but publish "flash" numbers or other off-cycle updates more frequently when circumstances warrant. Although the Proposal suggests Item 2.02 of Form 8-K would not technically be available to such hybrid issuers, they could s ll make substan ally similar informa on available to investors under Item 7.01 or Item 8.01.
Reducing the frequency of SEC repor ng can help reduce compliance and repor ng costs.
Preparing a Form 10-Q can be an arduous task, even at the largest public companies. The Chamber agrees that transparency and disclosure are important elements of an efficient capital market and the ability of a business to raise capital from investors. S ll, while repor ng ins lls discipline, it is important for the SEC to weigh whether certain disclosures impose costs or burdens that are unnecessary.
For smaller public companies in par cular, the quarterly repor ng process can consume a dispropor onate amount of corporate resources. In this context, the Chamber has supported legisla on in Congress that would simplify quarterly repor ng requirements for emerging growth companies (EGCs) and provide EGCs with the op on of issuing a press release with financial results in lieu of a 10-Q.6 Addi onally, many foreign private issuers currently report semiannually without any perceived harm to investors.
Reducing administra ve burdens on public companies has the poten al to make the public markets more a rac ve rela ve to the private markets. A chief complaint we hear from large private companies that are hesitant to go public is that the costs and burdens of quarterly repor ng outweigh their benefits of being a publicly traded company. Remaining privately-held denies public shareholders, par cularly retail shareholders, the opportunity to invest and benefit in the apprecia on in value of the company over me.
5 We believe the content of Form 10-S as proposed, which would largely track the content of current Form 10-Q, is adequate and do not recommend any changes that would expand the requirements in Form 10-S.
6 See May 27, 2021 Le er from U.S. Chamber in Support of the "Modernizing Disclosures for Investors Act”

h ps://www.uschamber.com/assets/documents/ccmc/210527_
ModernizingDisclosuresforInvestorsAct_Rep.-Wagner.pdf
Quarterly repor ng vs. quarterly guidance.
A separate but related issue to quarterly repor ng is the voluntary prac ce of some public companies to provide quarterly or annual earnings guidance. Even companies that do not publish internal guidance may feel pressure to take steps to meet analyst targets or other consensus es mates.
More specifically, providing an explicit target can mo vate execu ves to manage to those targets, as investors expect management to meet or exceed those targets, penalizing firms that do not. The distrac on to management that accompanies quarterly repor ng and the a endant focus on short-term results o en comes at the expense of greater long-term value crea on. Even many advocates for maintaining the status quo with respect to quarterly repor ng on Form 10-Q would prefer to see less emphasis placed on chasing short-term targets.
Furthermore, many long-term investments do not fit quarterly melines. Certain industries naturally operate on mul -year melines that do not lend themselves easily to quarterly measurement. Pharmaceu cal and other biotech companies may spend years developing a single new product, for example. Aerospace, energy transi on and infrastructure projects likewise take years to plan and develop.
For these and other similarly-situated types of companies, quarterly repor ng can distort the market’s assessment of businesses whose value crea on is be er measured in years rather than months. To that end, semiannual repor ng could be er align the actual business cycle with the SEC disclosure cadence.
Form 8-K has expanded significantly since 1970 and now requires real-repor ng of many significant corporate events.
me
In 1970 when the SEC adopted Form 10-Q, Form 8-K required repor ng on only a handful of events, with the expecta on that Form 10-Q (or Form 10-K) would serve as the primary source of company informa on for investors. Through many amendments over the intervening decades, Form 8-K now requires repor ng on a significant number of intra-period events, typically within four business days, and enables companies to voluntarily provide addi onal informa on. Importantly, the SEC is not proposing to change the current Form 8-K repor ng deadline.
Material corporate events that must be reported on Form 8-K include major acquisi ons or dives tures, changes in execu ve leadership, bankruptcy proceedings, entry into significant agreements, departures of directors, earnings announcements, and other material developments that could influence investment decisions. Because Form 8-K filings are event-driven rather than scheduled, they provide investors with mely access to cri cal informa on regardless of the ming of quarterly or semiannual reports.
The informa on disclosed through Form 8-K provides investors with mely and relevant updates for material off-cycle developments, allowing them to make more informed investment decisions. By requiring companies to report certain significant events promptly, and by requiring broad dissemina on of other material informa on disclosed to members of the investment community under Regula on FD, the SEC helps ensure that investors have access to the same informa on at approximately the same me. This transparency reduces informa on asymmetry, where some market par cipants might otherwise possess important knowledge before others.
A shi from quarterly financial repor ng to semiannual repor ng could reduce the frequency of informa on available to investors and other market par cipants. One of the primary concerns associated with such a change is the possibility of increased informa on asymmetry, in which corporate managers possess significantly more current informa on than investors. However, the repor ng requirements of Form 8-K and Regula on FD help mi gate many of these concerns by ensuring that material events are disclosed promptly, even if periodic financial reports are less frequent.

For companies elec ng to move to a semiannual repor ng system, Form 8-K disclosures would serve as an important mechanism for maintaining market transparency between repor ng periods. Investors would s ll receive prompt no fica on of material developments instead of wai ng for the next periodic report on Form 10-Q, Form 10-S or Form 10-K.
The SEC should encourage the PCAOB to harmonize Audi ng Standard 6101.
If the SEC permits public companies to transi on from quarterly repor ng to semiannual repor ng, it should also encourage the Public Company Accoun ng Oversight Board ("PCAOB") to revise the 135-day staleness requirement contained in PCAOB Audi ng Standard 6101, Le ers for Underwriters and Certain Other Reques ng Par es. The current standard, which generally prohibits PCAOB-registered audit firms from providing comfort le ers on financial informa on older than 135-days, was developed within a regulatory framework that assumes investors, underwriters, and auditors have access to quarterly financial informa on.
If repor ng becomes semiannual, maintaining the exis ng staleness threshold would create unnecessary obstacles to capital forma on, increase compliance costs, and undermine the intended benefits of the SEC's repor ng reform. To ensure consistency between SEC disclosure requirements and PCAOB audi ng standards, it will be necessary for the PCAOB to modify the 135-day requirement to accommodate a semiannual repor ng environment.
The ra onale for the 135-day requirement may be less compelling for companies repor ng semiannually. Under a semiannual repor ng regime, a company's most recent financial statements could easily exceed 135 days before the next periodic filing becomes available. As a result, many issuers seeking to access the capital markets during that interim period would encounter situa ons in which standard nega ve assurance comfort cannot be provided if certain financial informa on is deemed stale, even when they are fully compliant with SEC repor ng requirements.
This outcome would create a regulatory inconsistency in which the SEC allows financial informa on to remain current for repor ng purposes while PCAOB standards effec vely treat the same informa on as not en tled to customary nega ve assurance comfort.
Maintaining the 135-day rule would also increase costs for issuers. Companies conduc ng public offerings on or a er the 135-day period may be forced to prepare addi onal interim financial informa on and management representa ons, or engage auditors in expanded procedures solely to sa sfy the comfort-le er requirements. These addi onal costs would be par cularly burdensome for smaller public companies, EGCs, and issuers that access the capital markets frequently. Such expenses would diminish one of the primary benefits of semiannual repor ng: reducing regulatory burdens and allowing management to focus on long-term value crea on rather than frequent compliance ac vi es.
Likewise, the 135-day rule could uninten onally discourage capital forma on. Public companies o en rely on mely access to equity and debt markets to fund growth opportuni es, acquisi ons, research and development, and other strategic ini a ves. If the staleness requirement makes it more difficult or expensive to complete securi es offerings during large por ons of the year, companies may delay or forgo transac ons that would otherwise benefit shareholders and the broader economy. Revising the staleness threshold would help ensure that capital markets remain efficient and accessible under a semiannual repor ng model.
The SEC should therefore coordinate with the PCAOB to extend the staleness period under AS 6101 to align more closely with the semiannual repor ng cycle. For example, the threshold could be increased to approximately 225 days or another period that reflects the ming of semiannual filings. Alterna vely, AS 6101 could be revised to allow an accountant to provide nega ve assurance based on interim financial informa on included in a quarterly earnings release or similar disclosure, without requiring a full AS4105 review of that informa on. Such an approach would prevent reliance on excessively outdated financial informa on while recognizing that the SEC's repor ng environment has fundamentally changed.

* * * * *
We commend the Commission for reconsidering the current approach to quarterly repor ng. We support SEC ini a ves such as the Proposal that encourage private ordering. We appreciate your considera on of these comments, and we are available to discuss them further with the Commissioners or Staff at your convenience.
Sincerely,
Mike Flood
Senior Vice President
Center for Capital Markets Compe veness
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Mike Sullivan — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mike Sullivan I am an investor and frankly I'm shocked the SEC is even considering this proposal to allow public companies to transition from quarterly to semi annual reporting. Look back at history and you'll see how ridiculous this is -- that public transparent reporting is critical to analysis & AI makes it easier than ever for these companies to comply. It's exactly the wrong time to make this change. It would only benefit insiders & would allow companies to do new levels of shenanigans & will cause more market volatility. Which maybe is what this administration wants, but We the People do not.

Nancy Benavides Retired — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Benavides I wish to keep quarterly reporting.

Nancy Campbell none — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Campbell DO NOT DO THIS! Do you really want to create another Enron disaster? Do you care if you do??? I fully understand that paperwork is never fun, but given the tendency in today's world for corporations to be less than fully honest with both investors and customers -- to hide or bury relevant and important facts so that they're virtually invisible -- you MUST continue to keep them honest. Why would they not want quarterly reporting? They do it for themselves! They have the figures, they have the information, and they have the software and technology that substantially lessens the "burden" of honest reporting. If you change this rule and give companies the green light to be less accountable, you are responsible for the next Enron. You. No one else. You. Please do NOT put yourself or American investors in that tragic position!

Nancy Erickson — Jul 2, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Erickson When Trump campaigned on reducing burdensome restrictions on banks and corporations, we knew this was coming. His argument was that those entities are fully capable of self-monitoring. Now he is just trying to fulfill another paid-for promise. Keep reporting requirements quarterly, they were put there for a good reason.

Nancy Garren N/A — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Garren Please do not reduce the transparency of corporate reporting. As an investor in a significant amount of stock, that will be detrimental to my ability to understand and react to information in a timely manner. Rules should not be made solely for the benefit of corporations, especially those that rely on investors for funding. We are already at a disadvantage from a tax standpoint. Don't make it worse for us.

Neri Bukspan, and Marc Siegel, Co-Founder, Executive Advisor, Metrix Advisory LLC — Jul 2, 2026
July 2, 2026
Vanessa A. Countryman
Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street NE
Washington, DC 20549–1090
Via Online Submission
Re: Metrix Advisory Submission on Proposed Rule – Semiannual Reporting (Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140; File No. S7-2026-15)
Dear Secretary Countryman:
Executive Summary
Metrix Advisory LLC appreciates the opportunity to comment on the Commission's proposal to permit eligible registrants to elect semiannual interim reporting on new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q. We support the Commission's decision to reexamine practices that have remained largely unchanged since mandatory quarterly reporting was adopted in 1970.
On balance, Metrix Advisory supports the Commission's proposal as a sound evolution of the U.S. periodic reporting framework, if implemented in conjunction with the content modernization improvements discussed throughout this letter as well as in our prior Regulation S-K comment letter submission1
.
Our central thesis is straightforward: the effectiveness of periodic reporting depends more on whether the disclosures in those filings are management-aligned, structured, well understood, decision-useful, and navigable, and less on the frequency of filings. Stated differently, frequency reform without content reform is incomplete reform.
When mandatory quarterly reporting was adopted in 1970, the information environment was fundamentally different. Investors lacked immediate access to company information, electronic filing systems, broad current reporting mechanisms, Regulation FD protections, established earnings release practices, and the analytical technologies that today enable rapid dissemination and processing of information outside formal periodic filings. Quarterly reports therefore served as one of the principal mechanisms through which investors received timely company-specific information.

That environment has changed materially. Today, investors operate within a continuous, multi-channel disclosure ecosystem that includes Form 8-K reporting, Regulation FD communications, earnings releases and conference calls, investor presentations, company websites, structured data, and immediate electronic access to filings. Of note, periodic reports increasingly function as a structured governance, accountability, and verification mechanism for information that investors often receive through other channels before the filing itself. They also often lack the most actionable information and 1 Metrix Advisory comment letter on Reforming Regulation S-K (CLL-15) https://www.sec.gov/comments/cll-
15/cll15-749187-2316134.pdf

KPIs that are reflective of the company's strategy and interim operational and financial progress updates most commonly found in earnings presentations and calls.
Because the Commission's concurrent review of Regulation S-K and this proposal are conceptually linked, they present a unique opportunity to modernize not only the frequency of interim reporting but also its underlying disclosure architecture.
We do not repeat our prior Regulation S-K comment letter submission in this letter, but the concepts that we outlined there, including materiality as an organizing principle, layered disclosure, management-focused MD&A, structured bridge analyses, evergreen versus evolving risk disclosure, modular reporting, and plain-English navigability, are directly relevant to the design of Form 10-S and to modernization of Form 10-Q for registrants that retain quarterly reporting.
We believe the Commission should not treat semiannual reporting as a simple reduction in filing frequency. A Form 10-S that merely extends the current Form 10-Q model over a six-month period would reduce the number of filings but leave the underlying limitations of interim reporting intact. The better approach, in our view, is to design Form 10-S (and 10-Q by extension) as a genuinely improved interim report: one that communicates material developments, performance drivers, management's current view of the business, and relevant forward-looking considerations in a concise and structured manner.
A semiannual framework should therefore be understood as a three-part system:
• Annual reporting that provides the comprehensive baseline;
• Semiannual reporting that provides reviewed, certified, structured interim updates; and
• Form 8-K and other current reporting mechanisms that provide event-driven disclosure between periodic reports.
We also believe that several concerns explored by the proposal that are often associated with quarterly reporting, including short-termism, managerial time horizons, goal setting, dividend policy, insider trading windows, and the protection of confidential information, should be analyzed separately from the question of reporting frequency.
The more direct remedy for concerns about short-termism is better disclosure of multi-horizon goals, targets, key performance indicators, capital allocation priorities, and progress against those objectives, principally in Form 10-K, with material updates at whatever interim cadence applies. While the issues of reporting frequency and potential short-termism may be related, they are not synonymous. A change in reporting cadence may influence disclosure practices, but it is not, by itself, a meaningful lever on strategic planning horizons, capital allocation decisions, dividend policy, or information-handling controls.

Keeping these issues as distinct considerations should be, in our view, a central aspect of the Commission's further deliberations.
Importantly, nothing in our commentary should be read to suggest that less frequent disclosure is, in itself, a desirable feature of efficient capital markets. To the contrary. We recognize that markets already benefit from a continuous flow of information, reaching them well outside the rhythm of the SEC's filing calendar. Our point is instead that information frequency and disclosure channel governance should be addressed holistically in light of how today's markets actually function, rather than treated as synonymous with periodic filing frequency.
This view is underpinned by a simple but important observation: today's investors operate within a broad, continuous disclosure ecosystem and access information frequently and using different channels that did not exist, or were far less developed, when Form 10-Q and the current interim reporting framework were first instituted.

Much of the market-moving information investors rely on now reaches them through channels entirely outside Commission filings. It includes company and peer earnings and news releases, broader economic or sector-specific developments, social media, and analyst conferences and calls. As a result, the Form 10-Q filing itself frequently functions as a confirmatory document rather than the primary vehicle through which the market is informed. While the formal filing itself remains critical, this dynamic, and its own timing implications, coupled with an inherent filing lag of periodic filings, irrespective of their frequency, represents a significant driver of our recommendations.
Our recommendations, which emerge from the discussion below, are summarized as follows:
Recommendation 1: Support optional semiannual reporting. The Commission should adopt the proposed optional semiannual framework while pairing it with content modernization, clear election disclosure, reversibility, and a structured monitoring process.
Recommendation 2: Prioritize content before frequency. The Commission should define what a modern interim report should contain and how it should be organized before treating frequency reduction as the principal reform.
Recommendation 3: Treat interim reporting as an update to the annual report. The Commission should design Form 10-S, and modernize Form 10-Q, around disclosure of material changes, developments, and updates since the annual report, using cross-referencing and layered disclosure where appropriate. The content of interim reports should be driven by a rigorous application of the materiality principle rather than by a compliance-oriented repetition of information previously disclosed.

Recommendation 4: Encourage FASB to address GAAP compatibility. The Commission should encourage the FASB to address certain specific topics and consequential amendments: (i) the comparative presentation framework in ASC 270; (ii) the broader set of interim accounting standards calibrated to a quarterly cadence; and (iii) the disclosure requirements throughout the Codification that function as standing, recurring obligations rather than change-triggered ones, where FASB guidance or amendment would reduce ambiguity for preparers, auditors, and investors. The Commission and the FASB should encourage registrants to apply materiality concepts when preparing interim filings and considering disclosure requirements such that immaterial disclosures are not included. The Commission should align the effective date of the final rule with FASB's ability to complete these efforts.
Recommendation 5: Preserve the distinction between continuous disclosure and formal periodic reporting. The Commission should recognize that voluntary disclosure channels, including the wide range of voluntary operating metrics already provided across industries, complement but do not replace reviewed, certified, filed periodic reports, and should confirm that Regulation FD obligations apply equally regardless of a registrant's periodic reporting election while clarifying the means for communicating material updates. Filed periodic reports should remain the principal vehicle for integrated financial and narrative disclosure because they uniquely combine governance, disclosure controls, management certifications, review procedures, standardized presentation, and accountability in a manner not replicated by most voluntary communications.
Recommendation 6: Modernize MD&A. The Commission should redesign interim MD&A around management's analysis of performance, key drivers, liquidity, capital allocation, trends, and outlook, underpinned by a rigorous application of the materiality principle. The Commission should encourage structured tables and bridge-aided analyses where useful.

Recommendation 7: Address non-GAAP measures, KPIs, and management metrics. The Commission should confirm, and provide sufficient guidance, that semiannual filers may continue to provide voluntary interim operating updates, including non-GAAP measures and KPIs, using transparent definitions, reconciliation to the closest available or reasonably estimated GAAP measure, and clear disclosure regarding unaudited or estimated information.
Recommendation 8: Strengthen Form 8-K as the continuous reporting anchor. Form 8-K should remain the principal filed mechanism for material developments between periodic reports, and the Commission should consider whether targeted clarifications or recalibration of current reporting triggers would strengthen investor protection under any filing cadence. In particular, the Commission should evaluate whether material developments, trends, liquidity deterioration, margin compression, outlook revisions, covenant stress, or other significant developments that may not fit neatly within existing item-based triggers are communicated to investors on a sufficiently timely basis.
Recommendation 9: Distinguish long-term value creation, capital allocation, governance, and compliance considerations from reporting frequency. The Commission should address short-termism, capital allocation, confidentiality, and trading windows and related governance concerns as analytically distinct issues from reporting frequency. It should also confirm that Regulation FD obligations and the full range of compliant disclosure methods available to satisfy them, including Form 8-K, widely disseminated press releases, webcasts, and, where established as a recognized channel, company websites, are unaffected by a periodic reporting election. Similarly, insider trading controls, trading-window and Rule 10b5-1 plan administration are governed by existing frameworks that operate continuously and independently of the periodic filing calendar. To the extent registrants believe voluntary quarterly disclosure practices assist in managing information asymmetries or trading-window administration, the final rule should expressly preserve that flexibility.

Recommendation 10: Address retail investors, AI, and disclosure accessibility. The Commission should design Form 10-S around clarity, navigability, plain-English summaries, structured presentation, materiality assessments that highlight deviation from prior trends, and technology-enabled access so that the framework serves all investors, not only those with sophisticated analytical tools. The Commission should also consider requiring clear disclosure of a registrant's reporting election and encouraging concise plain-English summaries of material developments so that retail investors can readily understand both the reporting framework selected and its implications.
Recommendation 11: Preserve governance, assurance, certifications, and disclosure integrity. The Commission should preserve reviewed interim financial statements, management certifications, disclosure controls, audit committee and disclosure committee oversight, and error-correction obligations as central safeguards under any interim reporting cadence.
Recommendation 12: Address auditor procedures for voluntary interim information. The Commission should encourage the PCAOB to ensure that adequate professional standards exist to support the assurance needs of audit committees and investors under a semiannual reporting regime. It should address whether AS 4105 (Reviews of Interim Financial Information) applies to or provides a workable framework for voluntary quarterly financial information that does not represent a set of financial statements, including footnotes, and is furnished but not filed. Audit committees seeking comfort on the reliability of quarterly information that forms the basis for voluntary reporting to the markets will need a clear and practically available engagement framework under existing, new, or updated PCAOB guidance.

Recommendation 13: Adopt a practical implementation and review framework. The Commission should preserve flexibility, optionality and reversibility, require clear election disclosure, avoid unnecessary bright-line eligibility restrictions, acknowledge contractual constraints, coordinate with Regulation S-K and filer status rulemaking, and conduct a structured post-implementation review within two to three years. Such review should specifically evaluate investor outcomes, voluntary disclosure practices, comparability effects, analyst coverage, market liquidity, and registrant election patterns.
We provide a table in Appendix D cross-referencing this letter’s analysis and recommendations to the specific questions enumerated in the Proposing Release.
About Metrix Advisory
Metrix Advisory is an advisory firm focused on financial reporting, disclosure effectiveness, and investor communication. Our work is grounded in practical experience at the intersection of issuer reporting, investor analysis, regulatory frameworks, and governance oversight. It frequently involves helping companies refine and align their disclosures with how management and investors evaluate performance, risks, and long-term value creation.

Metrix Advisory approaches this submission through a lens that is, we believe, genuinely differentiated from most other commenters. Our principals and advisors collectively occupy virtually every seat at the corporate reporting table: issuers, investors and credit analysts, accounting standard-setters, regulators, and disclosure advisors. We speak not from a single constituency's interest but from the integrated perspective of a system that must serve all of them.
The authors of this letter bring decades of domain experience working with corporate disclosures for issuers across the full spectrum of size and complexity, from emerging growth and IPO-stage companies to large domestic and global enterprises, public registrants as well as private companies applying U.S.
GAAP, other national GAAPs, and IFRS, across many industries. Our experience includes advising management teams, boards of directors, audit committees, and investors on how disclosures are prepared, interpreted, and used in investment and credit analyses, capital allocation, and investment decisions.
We have read, analyzed, prepared, or supported thousands of corporate filings across industries, geographies, and market cycles. This work has provided insights into how disclosure requirements are applied under real-world constraints, how materiality and judgment are applied, and how preparers, auditors, regulators, standard-setters, and investors interact within an integrated reporting environment, both domestically and across borders.
Our experience also includes standard-setting, regulatory, advisory, and analytical roles, providing insights on how accounting, auditing, and disclosure frameworks intersect and evolve. These combined perspectives inform our views on improving the clarity, relevance, and utility of disclosures while preserving rigor, comparability, and investor protection.

Background
The Commission's proposal returns to a question that has arisen periodically throughout the history of the federal securities laws: how frequently should public companies be required to provide formal interim reports to investors?
As the proposing release notes, the Commission adopted semiannual interim reporting in 1955 and transitioned to the current quarterly reporting framework in 1970. The release also recognizes that the information environment has evolved substantially since that time.
When Form 10-Q was adopted, investors operated in a markedly different disclosure environment characterized by paper-based reporting systems, limited distribution channels, and delayed access to company information. Today, investors receive information through a broad and continuous disclosure ecosystem that includes Regulation FD disclosures, the current Form 8-K framework, earnings releases, earnings calls, investor presentations, company websites, social media, and immediate electronic access to SEC filings and structured data.

These developments have significantly reduced the information constraints that existed when the current quarterly reporting regime was established and support the Commission's decision to reexamine whether quarterly periodic reporting remains necessary to achieve investor protection and disclosure objectives.
We agree that this changed landscape warrants reconsideration, and we support the Commission's decision to proceed through an elective framework rather than a mandatory one.
While ultimate consistency and conformity might be a worthwhile objective, we believe that, on balance, a flexible and well-governed election, coupled with additional elective disclosure mechanisms, best serves the markets overall. Registrants differ by size, stage of development, business model, capital intensity, ownership structure, analyst coverage, retail ownership, debt obligations, covenant requirements, investor expectations, and internal reporting maturity and capacity.
A uniform cadence will not optimally serve every registrant or every investor base. We believe this flexibility is consistent with the Commission's longstanding principles-based approach to disclosure regulation. A framework that permits registrants and investors to determine the reporting cadence that best serves their circumstances is preferable to one calibrated to a single assumed model of issuer and investor behavior.
We recognize that an elective framework may produce less uniformity than a mandatory approach. Nevertheless, some loss of uniformity is a reasonable tradeoff for a system that accommodates meaningful differences among registrants and allows disclosure practices to evolve in response to investor needs, technological developments, and changing market conditions.
At the same time, we do not believe the frequency election should be the primary vehicle through which the Commission addresses the principal concerns motivating this rulemaking: the regulatory burden of periodic reporting, the decision-usefulness of interim disclosure, and concerns regarding short-term managerial decision-making. Each of these concerns is more directly affected by what is disclosed, how it is organized, and how it connects to management's view of the business than by whether the formal interim report is filed three times or once each year.

What This Proposal Does, and Does Not, Attempt to Solve
It is worth being explicit, at the outset, about what an optional shift in periodic reporting frequency can and cannot accomplish. The proposal can meaningfully affect the volume and cadence of formal filings, the compliance burden associated with preparing condensed interim financial statements (with footnotes), and the degree of flexibility registrants have in calibrating their reporting calendar to their business and investor base.
The proposal is less suited to resolving a separate set of concerns that are sometimes raised in the same breath as reporting frequency: short-termism and managerial time horizons, broader capital allocation and dividend policy, the handling of confidential and market-sensitive information, executive compensation incentives, insider trading controls and trading windows.

While these are important considerations, each of these is governed by its own economic and financial incentives, legal framework, internal corporate governance processes, and set of market dynamics, and each operates largely independently of whether a registrant files an interim report on a quarterly or semiannual basis.
We raise these distinctions at the outset because they recur throughout this letter and the proposal's considerations. Our intent is not to suggest that these issues are unimportant; they are important and should be evaluated and, as applicable, addressed. Our objective is to avoid a result in which a change in filing frequency is expected to do work that it cannot do, while the more direct and effective remedies for these concerns, principally enhanced disclosure, receive less attention than they warrant.
A semiannual election that simply halves the frequency of periodic reports would reduce the number of filings, but it would not solve the more fundamental problem: interim reports often remain organized around compliance checklists and legacy form requirements, rather than around the material information investors need to understand performance, risk, liquidity, capital allocation, and trajectory. The Commission has an opportunity to make interim reporting better, not merely less frequent.
Our comments therefore proceed from a sequencing principle: content before frequency. The Commission should determine what a modern interim report should contain, how it should relate to the annual report, and how it should interact with Form 8-K, earnings releases, Regulation FD, and voluntary disclosure practices. Once that architecture is clear, registrants and investors can make better judgments about the appropriate reporting cadence for particular companies and their investor base.
I. Content Before Frequency
The proposal frames its principal objective as providing registrants with flexibility and potentially reducing the regulatory burden of being a public company. These are appropriate objectives. But they should not replace the more important design question: what should an interim report be in the modern disclosure ecosystem?
The burden and limited usefulness of many current Form 10-Q filings are not products of the three-month reporting interval. They are often products of repetition, boilerplate, fragmented organization, defensive drafting, backward-looking orientation, inconsistent application of materiality principles, and a compliance posture that promotes inclusion over prioritization.
A current Form 10-Q frequently includes condensed financial statements that repeat annual footnote structures with modest updates, MD&A that describes rather than analyzes reported results, risk factors that repeat prior filings with limited differentiation between evergreen and evolving risks, and overlapping disclosures that require investors to assemble the relevant story from multiple locations. Its backward-looking orientation results in much actionable information appearing elsewhere, including earnings calls, earnings releases, non-GAAP and operating data communications, and guidance updates.

Often, much of the most actionable data and context such as forward guidance, strategic priorities, related financial and operational KPIs, and non-GAAP metrics are not included at all in the Form 10-Q itself.
Filing one such regulatory, compliance-driven document rather than three does not resolve those structural limitations. It reduces their frequency. When form requirements drive content, compliance considerations displace communication objectives, and the filing optimizes for completeness rather than decision-usefulness. The more useful reform is to reconsider the architecture of interim reporting so that whichever filing cadence applies, the filing itself is fit for purpose.
This distinction matters because reporting frequency and information quality are not the same variable, and treating them as interchangeable risks a cost-benefit error in either direction. Additional reporting frequency imposes real, recurring costs: preparation burden and management time for issuers, and, for investors, the cost of reviewing, reconciling, and distinguishing genuinely new information from repeated or immaterial disclosure. Those costs are justified only to the extent that each additional filing carries decision-useful marginal content beyond what is already available through other channels. A quarterly cadence built around repetitive, boilerplate, or compliance-driven disclosure does not deliver more information merely by virtue of being filed more often; it can instead impose recurring costs on both preparers and investors without a corresponding increase in decision-useful content.
This approach is consistent with our prior Regulation S-K submission, which emphasized that many disclosure problems arise not from the absence of information, but from how information is organized, prioritized, and communicated. Materiality should function not only as a threshold for whether information is included, but also as an organizing principle for structure, hierarchy, and presentation. That concept applies with particular relevance to interim reporting, where the objective should be to communicate what has changed, why it matters, and how management evaluates the implications.
Content reform would benefit both semiannual and quarterly filers. Semiannual filers need a redesigned Form 10-S that compensates for a longer formal filing interval through more analytical and better organized disclosure. Quarterly filers should not be left with an unreformed Form 10-Q simply because they do not elect semiannual reporting. The Commission should treat this proposal as a catalyst for improving the interim reporting framework as a whole.
Recommendation 1: Support optional semiannual reporting.
The Commission should adopt the proposed optional semiannual framework while pairing it with content modernization, clear election disclosure, reversibility, and a structured monitoring process.
Recommendation 2: Prioritize content before frequency.
The Commission should define what a modern interim report should contain and how it should be organized before treating frequency reduction as the principal reform.

II. Interim Reporting as an Update to the Annual Report

The most important conceptual question raised by the proposal is whether an interim report should be understood as a stand-alone report or as an update to the annual report.

We believe the better view, supported by both the history of interim reporting and the structure of existing financial statement requirements, is that interim reporting should primarily function as an update to the annual report. The financial statement requirements of Regulation S-X already reflect this view. Rule 10-012 permits registrants to presume that users of interim financial information have read or have access to the audited financial statements for the preceding fiscal year and allows omission of disclosures that would substantially duplicate the most recent annual report.

ASC 2703 likewise reflects the integral view of interim reporting: the usefulness of interim information rests on its relationship to the annual period, not on treating each interim period as a complete, discrete reporting universe.

This update model is coherent and investor-protective. It recognizes that the annual report provides the baseline: audited financial statements, full footnotes, business description, risk factors, MD&A, controls, and other comprehensive disclosures. The interim report should then communicate material changes from that baseline. Investors do not need immaterial repetition. They need a clear explanation of what changed, what did not change, and why any changes matter.

One current problem is that the update model is applied unevenly. It is embedded in the financial statement architecture, but MD&A as well as the financial statement footnotes and other narrative disclosures often drift toward a stand-alone model, whether by application conservatism, rule design, unclear guidance, or a posture of inclusion over prioritization.

The result is repetition in some areas and insufficient analysis in others. A comprehensive evaluation of Form 10-S requirements gives the Commission an opportunity to extend the updated model across the annual and interim reporting ecosystem. A modern Form 10-S should therefore be organized around a disciplined question: what has materially changed since the annual report, and how does management view and address those changes?

Stable accounting policies should not be repeated and instead be cross-referenced to the annual report unless changed. Period-specific composition and roll-forward information should be provided where material. Key estimates, judgments, and uncertainties should be updated when they have materially changed or when new information materially affects the prior analysis. Risk factors should focus on emerging, evolving, or materially changed risks rather than repeating static cautionary language.

This approach would also reduce investor processing costs. Investors should not have to search through repeated disclosures to identify the handful of developments that matter. A layered architecture, stable

information, period-specific updates, and materiality-driven judgment-intensive disclosures, would make filings shorter, clearer, and more useful without eliminating material information.
Modern interim reporting should also emphasize navigability, enabling investors to easily identify what has changed since the prior annual report and where supporting analysis can be found. For more information about the application of these concepts along with illustrative examples, see our Regulation S-K comment letter submission.
The need for content modernization is not merely theoretical. Review of several recent quarterly reports across large-cap technology, financial services, and industrial registrants suggests that a significant portion of interim reporting consists of information that changes little from quarter to quarter.
2 17 CFR § 210.10-01 - Interim financial statements.
3 FASB ASC 270-10-45-1, Interim Reporting, Overall, Other Presentation Matters.

Common examples include extensive business descriptions, organizational and segment overviews, repeated accounting policy discussions, evergreen risk disclosures, and other information that is already available in the annual report. While these disclosures may serve important reference and compliance purposes, they can also reduce the prominence of the information investors most seek in interim reporting: material developments, performance drivers, management judgments, emerging trends, capital allocation decisions, and changes in outlook.
In many instances, investors must reconstruct key performance drivers from multiple narrative discussions rather than being provided with clear bridge analyses explaining the principal factors affecting revenue, margins, cash flows, or earnings. Similarly, risk disclosures often emphasize comprehensive recitation rather than highlighting what has changed since the prior reporting period.
Compounding this limitation is the fact that much of the information investors find most actionable, including earnings guidance, non-GAAP performance measures, operating KPIs, and the qualitative discussion linking strategy to financial results, is communicated through earnings releases and earnings calls rather than through Form 10-Q itself. The distinction is therefore not merely one of timing, but also of content and purpose. Form 10-Q principally provides historical, compliance-oriented disclosure, whereas earnings communications typically convey management's forward-looking perspective, strategic priorities, operational performance, and market-oriented analysis.
This is not incidental. It reflects a structural divergence in the U.S. disclosure framework. Over time, the periodic report has evolved primarily as a compliance document organized around GAAP financial statements and prescribed disclosure requirements, while much of management's most meaningful discussion of the business has migrated to unreviewed, unfiled communications that are subject to different review, assurance, and governance processes. As a result, the integration of strategic and managerial thinking into formal periodic reporting has weakened, leaving Form 10-Q increasingly focused on historical compliance rather than management's current assessment of the business.
The current reporting architecture therefore requires investors to assemble a complete understanding of corporate performance from multiple disclosure channels rather than from a coherent, integrated management narrative. Information that management itself considers most significant is dispersed across periodic reports, earnings releases, investor presentations, and conference calls, requiring investors to reconcile disconnected sources that are subject to differing levels of review, assurance, and governance oversight.

The consequence is not simply a more burdensome information-gathering process, but a disclosure architecture that obscures rather than highlights the information most relevant to informed investment decision-making. This structural disconnect is precisely the challenge that modernization of disclosure content, rather than merely a reduction in reporting frequency, is best positioned to address.
Taken together, these observations suggest that the principal opportunity for reform lies not simply in reducing the number of periodic filings, but in improving the relevance, organization, integration, and decision-usefulness of the disclosures those filings contain.
Recommendation 3: Treat interim reporting as an update to the annual report.
The Commission should design Form 10-S, and modernize Form 10-Q, around disclosure of material changes, developments, and updates since the annual report, using cross-referencing and layered disclosure where appropriate. The content of interim reports should be driven by a rigorous application of the materiality principle rather than by a compliance-oriented repetition of information previously disclosed.

III. U.S. GAAP Considerations
While Metrix Advisory has not undertaken a comprehensive analysis of U.S. GAAP requirements in connection with this submission, we observe that the Commission should be attentive to the interaction between a semiannual reporting election and existing accounting standards.
For example, current ASC 270-10-45-1, Interim Reporting, is the master disclosure standard for interim reporting and contains a comparative presentation framework based on quarterly reporting. The provision states: "If summarized financial data are regularly reported on a quarterly basis, the foregoing information with respect to the current quarter and the current year-to-date or the last 12 months to date should be furnished together with comparable data for the preceding year." The FASB's ASU 2025-11, Interim Reporting (Topic 270): Narrow-Scope Improvements (issued December 8, 2025), removes this specific quarterly-based comparative-presentation requirement from ASC 270, effective for public business entities for interim reporting periods within annual reporting periods beginning after December 15, 2027 (later for other entities). Regulation S-X, however, separately continues to require comparable quarter-to-date and year-to-date information from SEC registrants. We recognize that the Commission's proposal contemplates conforming amendments to Regulation S-X to facilitate optional semiannual reporting. Our point is simply that those amendments should be coordinated with corresponding changes to U.S. GAAP, particularly ASC 270 and related interim reporting guidance.

Because ASC 270's comparative-presentation requirements are calibrated to quarterly reporting, corresponding amendments to U.S. GAAP would be necessary to establish a complete comparative presentation framework for semiannual reporting. While the Commission's proposed conforming amendments to Regulation S-X are intended to accommodate semiannual reporting, corresponding amendments to U.S. GAAP remain necessary not only to establish a coherent comparative-presentation framework, but also to address the broader body of interim accounting guidance. As a result, the FASB should consider whether consequential Codification amendments, together with the Commission's corresponding amendments to Regulation S-X, would further clarify the requirements applicable to semiannual reporters.
Beyond this structural observation, the Commission's proposal raises a broader set of accounting questions that warrant attention in connection with the issuance of a final release. Several existing GAAP standards contain requirements, illustrations or assumptions that reflect a quarterly reporting cadence, including, by way of example, the computation and accumulation mechanics of the annual effective tax rate methodology under ASC 740-270, earnings per share guidance under ASC 260 for certain year to date treasury stock calculations, and derivatives and hedging guidance under ASC 815, which requires hedge effectiveness testing at least every three months. In addition, provisions designed as periodic updates, such as pension cost components under ASC 715 and the equity method lag conventions under ASC 323, may warrant reconsideration of how the "update" versus "standalone" characterization of an interim report applies at a six-month interval. More generally, the shift to semiannual reporting provides an opportunity for FASB to revisit which existing interim disclosure requirements are calibrated to quarterly intervals and to consider whether to clarify how those requirements apply, or should be adapted, for semiannual filers.
This standalone/update tension is not limited to the quarterly-calibrated provisions noted above. A number of existing GAAP disclosure requirements are written at the paragraph level, by Topic, without reference to whether the underlying fact pattern has changed since the prior period, meaning that in practice they function as standing, recurring obligations rather than change-triggered ones, regardless of reporting cadence.

Examples include:
• Segment reporting. ASC 280-10-50-22 through 50-28 requires disclosure of the factors used to identify reportable segments, the types of products/services in each segment, and measurement of segment profit/loss and assets. Review of issuer filings shows this descriptive narrative is frequently repeated across consecutive quarterly filings and against the prior 10-K, changing only when segment structure itself changes (which it rarely does).
• Fair value measurement. ASC 820-10-50-2 and related paragraphs require disclosure of the valuation techniques and inputs used for assets and liabilities measured at fair value, commonly repeated each period an instrument remains classified within the hierarchy, regardless of whether the methodology has changed.

• Derivatives and hedging. ASC 815-10-50 requires disclosure of an entity's objectives and strategies for using derivatives by risk category, a description of its risk-management program, not a report of what changed during the period.
Under a quarterly cadence, this standalone-style repetition recurs three times a year. Under a semiannual cadence, the same content would recur only once a year, but each instance would span a longer gap from the annual report, increasing the likelihood that preparers default to restating the full disclosure out of caution rather than relying on incorporation by reference. A semiannual regime therefore does not eliminate this tension; it changes its frequency and may, without further guidance, increase its volume per filing.
Additionally, we observe that despite the admonition in ASC 105 that “[t]he provisions of the Codification need not be applied to immaterial items,” in practice many registrants and auditors apply the list of interim disclosure topics as requirements without regard to materiality. We believe that the FASB and the Commission, as well as the PCAOB, should provide guidance and reinforce the notion that immaterial disclosures should not be included within interim filings.
Taken together, these observations reinforce our recommendation that the Commission should coordinate with FASB before finalizing a semiannual reporting regime, both to resolve the structural comparative-presentation gap described above and to revisit paragraph by paragraph, rather than only at the architectural level, to determine which existing interim disclosure requirements are genuinely event-or change-driven, which are calibrated specifically to a quarterly cadence, and which are static descriptive or policy content that could be incorporated by reference to the annual report rather than restated each period.
Recommendation 4: Encourage FASB to address GAAP compatibility.
The Commission should encourage the FASB to address certain topics and consequential amendments:
(i) the comparative presentation framework in ASC 270; (ii) the broader set of interim accounting standards calibrated to a quarterly cadence; and (iii) the disclosure requirements throughout the Codification that function as standing, recurring obligations rather than change-triggered ones, where FASB guidance or amendment would reduce ambiguity for preparers, auditors, and investors. The Commission and the FASB should encourage registrants to apply materiality concepts when preparing interim filings and considering disclosure requirements such that immaterial disclosures are not included.
The Commission should align the effective date of the final rule with FASB's ability to complete these efforts.

IV. Periodic Reporting in a Continuous Disclosure Environment
A. Continuous Disclosure Does Not Eliminate the Need for Periodic Reporting
A central feature of today’s markets is that investors receive information continuously, but continuous information should not be confused with continuous formal reporting obligations. The distinction matters.
Public companies routinely communicate through earnings releases, investor presentations, conference calls, industry conferences, investor days, press releases, websites, Form 8-K filings, Regulation FD disclosures, social media, and analyst interactions. These channels often provide economically meaningful information before the next periodic report is filed. In that respect, the information environment of 2026 bears little resemblance to the environment that existed when quarterly reporting was adopted in 1970.

This evolution supports flexibility in reporting cadence. It does not support weakening the quality or integrity of periodic reports. Formal periodic reports remain uniquely important because they combine financial statements prepared under prescribed requirements, independent accountant review or audit, management certifications, disclosure controls, audit committee oversight and disclosure committee processes, standardized presentation, inline XBRL tagging, and liability frameworks that do not apply in the same manner to many voluntary communications.
Earnings releases furnished under Item 2.02 of Form 8-K, voluntary conference calls, and investor presentations are important sources of information for investors. They are not substitutes for filed periodic reports. Instead, they complement the periodic reporting system, which subjects disclosure to a more formal governance framework, including disclosure controls and procedures, management certifications, audit committee oversight, and other reporting disciplines. Periodic reports also provide context, integration, and accountability that may not be present in standalone voluntary disclosures.
The distinction is particularly important for narrative disclosures. Investors increasingly rely on management's discussion of strategy, competitive positioning, demand trends, liquidity, capital allocation, risks, assumptions, and outlook to interpret reported financial results. While earnings releases, conference calls, investor presentations, and other Regulation FD communications play an important role, they generally do not provide the same combination of disclosure controls, management certifications, board and audit committee oversight, standardized presentation, and accountability as filed periodic reports. A modern periodic reporting framework therefore should promote disciplined, decision-useful narrative disclosure alongside reliable financial reporting.
Investors use them differently because they carry different levels of formality, assurance, liability, and governance accountability. Public market equity and credit investors often rely on reviewed financial statements and certified MD&A because they carry governance accountability and are prepared within a formal disclosure control environment.
A semiannual framework should therefore be understood as a three-part system:
• Annual reporting that provides the comprehensive baseline;
• Semiannual reporting that provides reviewed, certified, structured interim updates; and
• Form 8-K and other current reporting mechanisms that provide event-driven disclosure between periodic reports.
The strength of the proposal depends on the content and quality of all three components.

This is also why we do not support a substitute mandatory quarterly KPI filing. Such a requirement would risk recreating the quarterly reporting burden through a new vehicle while weakening the conceptual clarity of the proposal. Registrants should remain free to provide voluntary quarterly updates when that practice serves their investors, but the Commission should not impose a new quarterly reporting obligation under another name.

B. Voluntary Interim Disclosure Already Exists and Should Be Preserved

The continuous information environment described above is not theoretical. Across a wide range of industries, companies already provide investors with company-specific operating information at frequencies that are unconnected to, and often more frequent than, their formal periodic reporting obligations.

This existing practice is directly relevant to the Commission's consideration of a semiannual election, because it demonstrates that the market already receives substantial company-specific actionable information outside the periodic reporting structure, and that investors and registrants are capable of developing appropriate voluntary disclosure norms without a mandatory quarterly filing requirement.

Examples are readily observable across sectors. Retailers commonly disclose comparable-store sales on a monthly or quarterly basis, independent of their Exchange Act filing calendar. Automotive manufacturers report vehicle delivery and production volumes, often monthly, well in advance of any periodic filing. Aerospace companies report aircraft order and delivery figures on a recurring basis, which analysts and investors use as leading indicators of revenue recognition. Hospitality companies disclose occupancy, revenue per available room, and similar operating statistics outside or between formal filings.

Subscription and technology businesses frequently disclose subscriber counts, churn, and engagement metrics on a cadence set by the business rather than by Form 10-Q.

Financial institutions also provide illustrations of this dynamic. Banks routinely discuss deposit trends, loan growth, net interest margin, capital ratios, and credit quality metrics, including charge-offs and non-performing assets, in investor communications and conference presentations between quarterly filings, and many provide interim updates on these metrics when conditions warrant. Insurers similarly discuss underwriting performance, reserve development, investment portfolio composition, and catastrophe or other exposure metrics outside the formal filing and filing cycle, reflecting the importance of this information to investors notwithstanding its absence from any mandatory interim form.

The existence of these widespread voluntary disclosure practices is itself evidence that investors value information at frequencies and in formats that differ from, and often exceed, what periodic reporting requires. It also suggests that a semiannual election should not be understood as a determination that less information is appropriate.

Rather, it is an opportunity for registrants and their investors to determine, in light of their specific circumstances, the appropriate mix of formal periodic reporting and voluntary interim disclosure as guided by materiality and subject to interpretive guidance and enforcement by the Commission when exceptions are observed. As noted in the previous section, even under a quarterly reporting framework, investors often derive much of their actionable information from earnings releases and calls, while the periodic report itself functions primarily as a confirmatory document that is read less frequently than the earnings release or call transcript.

We recognize that voluntary disclosure practices vary in scope, consistency, and comparability across registrants, and that a registrant's voluntary disclosures following a semiannual election may not replicate the full content of its prior quarterly filings. That variation is itself informative: it would reflect differing assessments by registrants and their investors of the information warranted between periodic reports, rather than a uniform reduction mandated by the Commission.

To the extent the mix of formal and voluntary disclosure that emerges under an elective framework proves inadequate for particular registrants or investor bases, the post-implementation review discussed in Section XI below, as well as investors' further calls for information, would result in appropriate adjustments and/or provide the Commission with a basis for evaluating whether further guidance or adjustments are warranted.
While a registrant may lean towards the disclosure of favorable over unfavorable information, we do not believe that it depends on, or is meaningfully altered by, its periodic reporting election. A registrant's obligation to disclose material information, not to make materially misleading statements, and the operation of Regulation FD and Form 8-K reporting triggers discussed elsewhere in this letter, apply regardless of whether the registrant files quarterly or semiannually, and constrain selective or asymmetric disclosure of operating trends in either case.
A longer interim interval may serve to increase the number of channels, including analyst inquiries, industry data, customer and supplier disclosures, and the registrant's own obligation to update prior statements that have become materially misleading, through which adverse developments are likely to become known before the next periodic report is filed. We therefore do not believe that an elective framework would systematically favor the withholding of unfavorable information relative to favorable information.
Similarly, a registrant that elects semiannual reporting but continues to engage with analysts and investors between filings, through earnings releases, investor conferences, operating-metric updates, or other communications, remains subject to Regulation FD. We do not believe a semiannual election raises a novel Regulation FD issue, but we believe it would be useful for the Commission to confirm in any adopting release that Regulation FD obligations are unaffected by a periodic reporting election and continue to apply equally under quarterly and semiannual reporting frameworks. As discussed in Section VII below, registrants have a range of compliant channels available for disseminating material information between periodic filings.
Recommendation 5: Preserve the distinction between continuous disclosure and formal periodic reporting.
The Commission should recognize that voluntary disclosure channels, including the wide range of voluntary operating metrics already provided across industries, complement but do not replace reviewed, certified, filed periodic reports, and should confirm that Regulation FD obligations apply equally regardless of a registrant's periodic reporting election while clarifying the means for communicating material updates. Filed periodic reports should remain the principal vehicle for integrated financial and narrative disclosure because they uniquely combine governance, disclosure controls, management certifications, review procedures, standardized presentation, and accountability in a manner not replicated by most voluntary communications.

V. Modernizing MD&A

MD&A should be the heart of a modern interim report. The Commission has long described MD&A as a narrative explanation intended to allow investors to see the company through the eyes of management4.

In practice, however, interim MD&A too often becomes a descriptive comparison of line items rather than an analytical discussion of business performance, trajectory, liquidity, and management judgment. A modern Form 10-S should use the longer interim period to improve analysis rather than simply accumulate two quarters of description.

MD&A should supply answers to the most relevant, material questions:

• What happened during the period, and what drove it?
• How did performance compare to management's expectations or previously communicated trends?
• What changed in liquidity, capital allocation, operating conditions, competitive trends or risk profile?
• What is management's current view of the business's trajectory?

Based on feedback from a recent roundtable5 we hosted and our own observations from recent quarterly reports, many MD&A sections remain organized primarily around explanations of historical period-over-period financial statement variances. While such analysis serves an important purpose, investors may benefit more from a framework centered on management's current assessment of the business, including the key drivers of performance, significant assumptions and judgments, capital allocation priorities, emerging opportunities and risks, and developments that management believes are most likely to influence future results.

Consistent with an update-based reporting model rather than a stand-alone unit of reporting, interim MD&A should focus principally on developments that have changed management's assessment since the most recent annual report. The objective should not be to recreate a complete historical analysis in each reporting period, but rather to succinctly and directly explain what has changed, why management believes those changes occurred, and how they affect management's current view of the business.

We believe Form 10-S MD&A should be organized around the following elements:

• A concise performance summary that identifies the most significant developments during the period.
• Driver-based analysis of revenue, margins, operating income, cash flows, liquidity, capital allocation, and segment results where material.
• Structured bridge analyses or tables that explain changes by price, volume, mix, currency, acquisitions, divestitures, costs, productivity, or other company-specific drivers.
• A plain-English discussion of material trends, inflection points, and changes from previously communicated expectations.

4 SEC Releases Nos. 33-6711, Concept Release on Management’s Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations (Apr. 24, 1987), 33-6835, Management’s Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations; Certain Investment Company Disclosures (May 18, 1989), 33-8350, Commission Guidance Regarding Management’s Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and

Results of Operations (Dec. 19, 2003), and 33-10890, Management's Discussion and Analysis, Selected Financial Data, and Supplementary Financial Information (Nov. 19, 2020).
5 Disclosure Effectiveness – Fit for Use or Fit for Filing? – Key takeaways from the Fordham Responsible Business Center/Metrix Advisory Roundtable, April 2026.

• A forward-looking discussion of potential impacts from known trends, uncertainties, and risks for the subsequent period, appropriately framed within existing safe harbor and disclosure frameworks.
Bridge-style and tabular presentations should not be mandatory in every circumstance, but they should be expressly encouraged. They often reflect how management, boards, and investors actually evaluate performance. They also impose discipline: management must identify the drivers that explain changes rather than relying on diffuse narrative descriptions.
As we further outlined in our Regulation S-K comment letter this approach does not require more disclosure volume. It requires better organization. A well-designed table that explains revenue growth by price, volume, mix, currency, acquisitions, and divestitures is often more useful than several paragraphs of generic narrative. Similarly, a bridge showing material factors associated with revenues, costs, margins and net income as well as cash flows associated with working capital, capital expenditures, debt activity, dividends and share repurchase can be more useful than a recitation of income statement and cash flow line items.
The Commission should also consider whether Form 10-S should include a plain-English management summary. This would not be a marketing section or a replacement for detailed disclosures. It would be a navigational device, helping investors identify the most important developments and where to find supporting analysis, rather than reading through lengthy narrative to identify what management views as the most salient period information. This would be particularly valuable for retail investors and for companies with less analyst coverage.
Recommendation 6: Modernize MD&A.
The Commission should redesign interim MD&A around management's analysis of performance, key drivers, liquidity, capital allocation, trends, and outlook, underpinned by a rigorous application of the materiality principle. The Commission should encourage structured tables and bridge-aided analyses where useful.
VI. Non-GAAP Measures, KPIs, and Management Metrics
Investors increasingly evaluate companies through a combination of GAAP information, non-GAAP measures, operating metrics, and company-specific KPIs. This is neither an aberration, nor an indictment, per se, of GAAP itself. It reflects the fact that GAAP financial statements, while essential, are not designed to communicate every aspect of management's operational view of the business.
Our Regulation S-K submission addressed non-GAAP measures in this context. The central policy issue is not the existence of non-GAAP metrics, but the quality of the context in which they are presented, whether they are misleading, and the integrity of their reconciliation to the most directly comparable GAAP measure. That conclusion bears directly on the semiannual reporting proposal.

If a registrant elects semiannual reporting, it may nevertheless continue to provide voluntary quarterly earnings releases, operating updates, investor presentations, or KPIs including non-GAAP metrics. The Commission should preserve and avoid disincentivizing those practices. Investors may benefit materially from voluntary interim information, particularly where the company has a history of providing such information and where the information is presented with appropriate context and discipline.

A. Reconciliation Need Not Depend on Full Interim Financial Statements

A registrant electing semiannual reporting will not prepare and file with the Commission a complete or condensed set of GAAP financial statements for the first or the third quarter. That should not be understood as precluding it from providing investors with interim operating or performance metrics, including non-GAAP measures, for those intervening periods.

Existing non-GAAP guidance requires reconciliation to the most directly comparable GAAP measure. It does not require that the GAAP measure to which a non-GAAP measure is reconciled have itself been presented in complete, audited, or reviewed interim financial statements. A registrant should be able to reconcile a non-GAAP metric disclosed for an intervening period to the closest available or estimated GAAP figure for that period, such as an unaudited, internally prepared estimate of GAAP revenue, operating income, or net income, with clear disclosure of the estimated and unaudited nature of the GAAP figure.

This would preserve the transparency objectives of existing non-GAAP guidance without turning full interim financial statements into a precondition for voluntary quarterly operating updates. We recommend that the Commission provide interpretive guidance confirming this approach so that uncertainty regarding non-GAAP reconciliation does not discourage registrants from continuing to provide investors with useful voluntary interim updates.

A related issue we further discuss in Section X is that many audit committees will still desire auditor involvement in quarterly voluntary information. However, currently there is no clear mechanism for auditors to issue an opinion on any information set that is short of a full set of financial statements and footnotes.

This approach may also produce useful market self-selection. Registrants for whom estimated interim GAAP figures can be produced with reasonable reliability and at modest incremental cost may continue to provide voluntary quarterly updates notwithstanding a semiannual election. Registrants for whom even estimated quarterly GAAP figures are burdensome, because of the complexity of their operations, estimates, systems, or internal closing processes, may provide fewer voluntary quarterly metrics. That result is not necessarily a defect. It may reflect precisely the fact-specific burden that an elective semiannual framework is designed to address.

The Commission need not prescribe a uniform outcome. It should instead provide interpretive guidance as necessary so that registrants can make informed decisions and investors can evaluate those decisions. If a company's investors value quarterly KPIs, the company may face market pressure to provide them. If the costs of producing reliable quarterly metrics are significant, the company can explain its disclosure approach and investors can price that choice accordingly.
B. Management Metrics and Long-Term KPIs
The Commission should also encourage registrants to distinguish between short-term operating metrics and longer-term value drivers irrespective of reporting frequency. A semiannual framework should not result in less visibility into the factors that management uses to evaluate long-term performance. For many companies, meaningful KPIs may include backlog, retention, churn, same-store sales, production volumes, unit economics, safety, regulatory milestones, R&D investments, pipeline development, capital project progress, or other metrics that are not fully captured by GAAP measures.
These metrics should be presented with definitions, consistency, reconciliation where applicable, and explanation of how management uses them in Form 10-K or other means of disclosure. Where metrics change, registrants should explain why. Where a metric is tied to multi-year objectives, short-, mid- or long-term goals or objectives, the company should provide progress updates at an appropriate cadence.

Recommendation 7: Address non-GAAP measures, KPIs, and management metrics.
The Commission should confirm, and provide sufficient guidance, that semiannual filers may continue to provide voluntary interim operating updates, including non-GAAP measures and KPIs, using transparent definitions, reconciliation to the closest available or reasonably estimated GAAP measure, and clear disclosure regarding unaudited or estimated information.
VII. Form 8-K as the Foundation of Continuous Reporting
We believe that the debate should not be framed as quarterly reporting versus semiannual reporting. The modern reporting framework consists of annual reporting, interim reporting, and continuous event-driven reporting. Form 8-K is therefore central to the investor protection architecture of any semiannual regime.
Material information today often reaches the market through earnings releases and Form 8-K. A semiannual election should not reduce a registrant's obligation to disclose material developments when existing Form 8-K items are triggered, nor should it weaken Regulation FD obligations. The Commission should make this clear in any adopting release.
We note that the U.S. Form 8-K framework is not identical to the broader continuous-disclosure regimes that exist in certain foreign jurisdictions. While we do not advocate replacing the current U.S. framework with a principles-based continuous-disclosure model, we recommend that if the Commission adopts an elective semiannual reporting regime, it should evaluate whether targeted enhancements or interpretive guidance could improve the communication of material developments occurring between periodic reports, either quarterly or semiannual, underpinned by a robust application of the materiality principle.

We are not recommending a broad new mandatory quarterly reporting obligation. Rather, we suggest that the Commission consider whether existing Form 8-K triggers sufficiently capture material inflection points, including material changes in liquidity, known trends, capital allocation decisions, covenant issues, significant operating developments, control environment matters, or other events that may be especially important when formal periodic reports are filed less frequently.

A. Regulation FD Considerations

Regulation FD requires that when an issuer, or a person acting on its behalf, discloses material nonpublic information to covered market participants, the issuer must simultaneously make public disclosure in the case of intentional disclosures and promptly make public disclosure in the case of non-intentional disclosures6. This requirement does not depend on, and is not relieved by, the registrant's periodic filing schedule.

Regulation FD generally permits an issuer to satisfy this public disclosure obligation either by furnishing or filing a Form 8-K, or by disseminating the information through another method (or combination of methods) reasonably designed to provide broad, non-exclusionary distribution to the public7
.

This flexibility is significant in the semiannual reporting context: a registrant that elects semiannual reporting retains the same range of compliant disclosure channels as those companies reporting on a 6 17 C.F.R. § 243.100(a) (Regulation FD).

7 17 C.F.R. § 243.101(e).

quarterly basis: Form 8-K, a widely disseminated press release, a webcast or conference call with adequate advance public notice, or, where the company's website has been established as a recognized channel of distribution, posting on that website.

As discussed in Section IV, above, a registrant that elects semiannual reporting but continues to engage with analysts and investors between filings remains fully subject to Regulation FD and may rely on any of these methods, individually or in combination, to satisfy that obligation. We believe the Commission should confirm this point in any adopting release.

B. Confidential Information and Information-Handling Controls

A related concern is that a longer interval between periodic filings would extend the period during which material non-public information about results exists internally before being reflected in a periodic filing.

That concern, which is indeed valid, should be addressed through existing information-handling, disclosure controls, Regulation FD, and insider trading compliance frameworks, which already operate continuously and independently of the periodic filing calendar.

A company's obligations regarding material non-public information do not pause between periodic filings under the quarterly regime, and they should not operate differently under a semiannual regime.
Stated differently, the gap between the occurrence of an event, the end of a reporting period, and the filing of the corresponding periodic report already exists under the quarterly regime, and a semiannual interval does not introduce a new category of exposure, only a longer instance of one that current information-handling frameworks are designed to address. Further, market incentives to improperly access or exploit non-public information—which often impact markets instantaneously—are not meaningfully changed whether the lag is 90 days or 180 days.
This reinforces that the key point is not the filing frequency in and of itself; it is the design and operation of controls governing material information, selective disclosure, trading windows, and escalation of disclosure judgments and market enforcement disciplines.
Recommendation 8: Strengthen Form 8-K as the continuous reporting anchor.
Form 8-K should remain the principal filed mechanism for material developments between periodic reports, and the Commission should consider whether targeted clarifications or recalibration of current reporting triggers would strengthen investor protection under any filing cadence. In particular, the Commission should evaluate whether material developments, trends, liquidity deterioration, margin compression, outlook revisions, covenant stress, or other significant developments that may not fit neatly within existing item-based triggers are communicated to investors on a sufficiently timely basis.
VIII. Short-Termism, Time Horizons, Capital Allocation, Dividends, Information Integrity, and Reporting Frequency
A significant strand of the policy debate surrounding quarterly reporting holds that quarterly reporting contributes to short-term managerial decision-making and “managing to the quarter,” and that a longer interim reporting interval would help correct it.
We do not dispute that these concerns are real. We do believe, however, that the critique conflates several questions that are analytically and practically distinct from filing frequency.

A. Two Distinct Questions
The first question is over what time horizons a company should set, pursue, and be evaluated against goals, strategy, and capital allocation priorities.
The second question is how often the company is required to file a periodic report with the Commission.
These are different questions with different answers.
A company’s strategic planning horizon, capital expenditure plan, product development roadmap, long-term margin target, or capital allocation framework is a function of its industry, capital intensity, competitive dynamics, regulatory environment, business model, strategic objectives, and investor base.
These corporate goals are effectuated through board strategic oversight and management judgment, not through the SEC filing calendar.
Companies in capital-intensive industries often communicate three-, five-, and ten-year objectives notwithstanding quarterly reporting. Conversely, companies in fast-moving consumer or technology sectors, as well as companies facing financial or operational distress, may reasonably emphasize shorter-term priorities, largely independent of filing frequency. The appropriate planning horizon is driven principally by a company's business model, operating environment, and strategic circumstances rather than by the cadence of periodic reporting. Investors benefit from understanding both interim milestones and longer-term objectives, and the relevance of each will vary by issuer and circumstance.

We see nothing inappropriate in this variation. Companies should articulate short-, medium-, and long-term objectives as their businesses warrant, to emphasize different horizons at different points in their development, and to be held accountable by the market, through share price, cost of capital, shareholder engagement, and, where warranted, shareholder activism, for performance against the horizons they have articulated or that are expected by the market.
The market's interest in near-term performance is legitimate and does not represent a failure of the disclosure system when put in the context of long-term trajectory and stated goals. It reflects capital providers using available information to make allocation decisions across the time horizons relevant to them.
Accordingly, if the objective is to promote long-term value creation, the more direct remedy is better disclosure of long-term strategy, capital allocation priorities, multi-horizon targets, management KPIs, and current-period progress against stated objectives so that market participants can allocate capital in line with their investment goals and horizons. The long-term strategy and related information should be anchored in Form 10-K, with material updates at whatever interim cadence applies.
A reporting framework that emphasizes progress against annual and long-term objectives, key drivers of value, and changes in outlook, rather than mechanical quarter-over-quarter comparisons, can better support long-term capital allocation and stewardship. But the mechanism is disclosure quality and accountability, appropriate goal setting, rather than merely a longer filing interval.
We would also observe that the market discipline associated with periodic reporting does not operate only on the date a periodic report is filed. Share price, cost of capital, and analyst and shareholder reaction respond continuously to the information environment described earlier, including earnings releases, Form 8-K disclosures, and other voluntary updates between periodic filings. A registrant that experiences a deterioration in performance is unlikely to be insulated from market response merely because its next periodic report is some months away. We therefore do not believe that the disciplining effect of disclosure depends on any arbitrary periodic filing cadence in the manner sometimes suggested.

B. Dividends and Capital Allocation Dividend policy illustrates the same point. A company's decision to declare, maintain, increase, or reduce a dividend reflects the board's judgment regarding capital allocation, liquidity, future capital needs, leverage, earnings durability, and other facts available to the board. Those judgments are informed by internal forecasts, budgets, projections, and financial analyses that are more current and more granular than any periodic filing, whether quarterly or semiannual.

We do not believe the sufficiency of a board's informational basis for a dividend decision should be understood to hinge on whether the company files interim financial statements quarterly or semiannually.
Many companies and other entities outside the Exchange Act periodic reporting framework declare and pay dividends or distributions on cycles that do not correspond to quarterly reporting. A semiannual election should not imply anything about the adequacy of a board's information for dividend decisions.
That adequacy rests on internal information flows, governance processes, liquidity assessments, and legal standards independent of the external filing cadence.
The same point applies to broader capital allocation decisions, including share repurchases, debt reduction, capital expenditures, acquisitions, divestitures, and investment in growth initiatives. These decisions are not made solely by reference to the most recently filed periodic report, particularly given that the periodic report itself is often not available until well after the end of the reporting period. They are made using internal information and governance processes.
The external disclosure question is not whether the decision is made quarterly or semiannually, but whether investors receive material information about capital allocation priorities, significant changes in those priorities, and the rationale for material decisions.
C. Trading Windows, Insider Trading Controls, and Information Handling
As noted earlier, the handling of confidential, market-sensitive information is also analytically distinct from filing frequency. A longer interim interval may affect the timing of formal periodic disclosure, but it does not change the registrant's obligations regarding material non-public information, selective disclosure, or the operation of its disclosure controls and procedures. A company's information-handling framework, governing who has access to material non-public information, how it is shared, and when it is appropriate for disclosure, operates continuously, independent of the periodic filing calendar, under both quarterly and semiannual regimes.
While a longer reporting interval may extend the period during which information about results exists internally before being reflected in a periodic filing, we do not believe a semiannual election meaningfully changes the underlying obligations or the existing controls designed to address that exposure. That concern is addressed through existing disclosure controls, Regulation FD policies, and information barriers, which already operate independently of the periodic filing calendar.
Insider trading controls, including Rule 10b5-1 trading plans8 and the administration of trading windows, operate largely independently of periodic filing dates and are typically driven by the existence of material nonpublic information rather than the timing of a particular SEC filing.
We do not believe these considerations are central to the question of reporting frequency. They are appropriately addressed through existing compliance frameworks, disclosure controls and procedures,
8 Securities and Exchange Commission, Insider Trading Arrangements and Related Disclosures, Release Nos.

33-11138; 34-96492 (Dec. 14, 2022), adopting amendments to Rule 10b5-1.

information barriers, Regulation FD policies, insider trading policies, and board oversight mechanisms.
Quarterly filing cadence is not the primary source of capital allocation discipline, confidential-information controls, or insider trading compliance.
While there could be a real market impact of a longer period during which trading is affected for executives, board members and others, registrants can decide for themselves how to prioritize that effect as compared to other ramifications from electing semiannual reporting, and whether they want to take actions to mitigate the impact on trading windows.
Importantly, the proposal does not require companies to abandon quarterly disclosure practices. Registrants that believe quarterly earnings releases, earnings calls, or related communications assist in managing information asymmetries, trading-window administration, or Rule 10b5-1 plan operation may continue those practices voluntarily. As a result, concerns regarding the handling of material nonpublic information and insider trading controls do not necessarily turn on whether a Form 10-Q is filed quarterly or semiannually. The proposal provides flexibility regarding the form and frequency of mandatory periodic reporting, while preserving a company's ability to maintain existing disclosure and compliance practices where it believes they remain beneficial.
Recommendation 9: Distinguish long-term value creation, capital allocation, governance, and compliance considerations from reporting frequency.
The Commission should address short-termism, capital allocation, confidentiality, and trading windows and related governance concerns as analytically distinct issues from reporting frequency. It should also confirm that Regulation FD obligations and the full range of compliant disclosure methods available to satisfy them, including Form 8-K, widely disseminated press releases, webcasts, and, where established as a recognized channel, company websites, are unaffected by a periodic reporting election. Similarly, insider trading controls, trading-window and Rule 10b5-1 plan administration are governed by existing frameworks that operate continuously and independently of the periodic filing calendar. To the extent registrants believe voluntary quarterly disclosure practices assist in managing information asymmetries or trading-window administration, the final rule should expressly preserve that flexibility.
IX. Retail Investors, AI, and Disclosure Accessibility
Investor protection is not only a question of whether information is available. It is also a question of whether information is usable. This point becomes more important as the gap widens between sophisticated investors with AI-enabled tools and less-resourced investors who must navigate complex filings without comparable analytical capabilities.

AI and other analytical tools may help some investors process large quantities of disclosure. They do not eliminate the need for clear, structured, navigable, and plain-English reporting. In fact, poorly organized disclosures can increase information asymmetry because sophisticated users may be better able to extract signals from dense filings, while retail investors and smaller institutions face higher processing costs.

A semiannual framework could increase this risk if formal filings become less frequent while voluntary disclosures become more important. Companies with broad analyst coverage and robust investor relations practices may continue to provide substantial interim information. Companies with thin coverage may not. Retail investors in those companies may rely more heavily on formal filings. The Commission should therefore design Form 10-S to present information in a more accessible as well as understandable fashion.

We recommend that Form 10-S include or encourage:

- A concise plain-English summary of material developments during the period.
- Clear navigation among annual baseline disclosures, interim updates, MD&A, financial statements, and risk updates.
- Structured tables for performance drivers and KPIs.
- Clear labeling of unaudited, estimated, or voluntary information.
- Cross-references to annual report disclosures that remain unchanged.

These design choices are not merely stylistic. They are investor protection mechanisms. Better organization can reduce investor processing costs, improve comparability of underlying drivers, and help less-resourced investors understand the information that management and sophisticated market participants already use.

Recommendation 10: Address retail investors, AI, and disclosure accessibility.

The Commission should design Form 10-S around clarity, navigability, plain-English summaries, structured presentation, materiality assessments that highlight deviation from prior trends, and technology-enabled access so that the framework serves all investors, not only those with sophisticated analytical tools. The Commission should also consider requiring clear disclosure of a registrant's reporting election and encouraging concise plain-English summaries of material developments so that retail investors can readily understand both the reporting framework selected and its implications.

X. Governance, Certifications, Assurance, and Disclosure Integrity

Periodic reports derive much of their value from the governance and assurance architecture that surrounds them. This is the cornerstone of investor confidence and the robust U.S. corporate reporting system. Semiannual reporting should not weaken that architecture. If anything, a longer interval between formal interim filings makes governance discipline more important.

Reviewed interim financial statements remain a key safeguard. They are not audited financial statements, and the level of assurance is different, but the review process provides discipline and credibility, and, importantly, an independent review conclusion from the auditors. Management certifications under Sarbanes-Oxley, disclosure controls and procedures, and audit committee and disclosure committee oversight also create accountability that is not replicated by earnings releases or investor presentations.

We recommend that the Commission confirm that existing annual controls attestations and audit scope continue to cover the full annual period regardless of interim filing frequency. A semiannual election should not create a gap in controls or accountability. Registrants should remain responsible for maintaining disclosure controls and internal controls over financial reporting throughout the year, identifying material errors, and providing material interim financial information when necessary.
This point is especially important if registrants provide voluntary quarterly metrics without full interim financial statements. Such information should be clearly labeled, appropriately controlled, and subject to a corresponding disclosure review process commensurate with its significance.
The existence of voluntary quarterly disclosure should not imply that the information has the same assurance status as reviewed interim financial statements, but neither should the absence of a full quarterly report preclude controlled and transparent voluntary updates. Investors and analysts should understand that a voluntary update, however useful, while generated through the same control environment, is not equivalent to a filed and reviewed Form 10-Q, and registrants should avoid presenting voluntary disclosures in a manner that could suggest otherwise. We expect that the clarity of a registrant's election disclosure would help investors calibrate the assurance status of the information they receive over the course of the reporting cycle.

We also believe audit committees should be attentive to the disclosure implications of a semiannual election. The decision to elect semiannual reporting should not be treated solely as a management cost-reduction decision. It should be reviewed through the lens of investor expectations, ownership structure, analyst coverage, credit obligations, covenant requirements, voluntary disclosure practices, internal reporting capacity, and disclosure controls.
A related and currently unresolved question concerns the role of independent auditors in connection with quarterly information and any voluntary interim disclosures made by semiannual filers. PCAOB AS 4105 governs reviews of interim financial information, but it is calibrated to financial statements filed quarterly.
Under a semiannual regime, audit committees that wish to continue to obtain review-level assurance from their independent accountants on quarterly information will face questions about which professional standards apply and what engagement forms are available. Currently, there is no clear mechanism for auditors to issue an opinion on any information set that is short of a full set of financial statements and footnotes.
While existing guidance on agreed-upon procedures and comfort letters may offer a partial framework, many audit committee members with whom we have spoken would not find it sufficient. This matters because oversight of voluntary interim disclosures, including the reliability of non-GAAP reconciliations, the appropriateness of estimated GAAP figures, and the consistency of operating metrics is a highly important investor protection mechanism available under any periodic reporting cadence and provides a level of comfort that many audit committees will continue to desire. This factor could limit the number of registrants who are willing to opt for semiannual reporting.

Recommendation 11: Preserve governance, assurance, certifications, and disclosure integrity.

The Commission should preserve reviewed interim financial statements, management certifications, disclosure controls, audit committee and disclosure committee oversight, and error-correction obligations as central safeguards under any interim reporting cadence.

Recommendation 12: Address auditor procedures for voluntary interim information.

The Commission should encourage the PCAOB to ensure that adequate professional standards exist to support the assurance needs of audit committees and investors under a semiannual reporting regime. It should address whether AS 4105 (Reviews of Interim Financial Information) applies to or provides a workable framework for voluntary quarterly financial information that does not represent a set of financial statements, including footnotes, and is furnished but not filed. Audit committees seeking comfort on the reliability of quarterly information that forms the basis for voluntary reporting to the markets will need a clear and practically available engagement framework under existing, new, or updated PCAOB guidance.

XI. Implementation Considerations

A. Election and Governance Review

As we outlined earlier, we support an optional and reversible election. We do not recommend restricting eligibility through bright-line quantitative thresholds such as market capitalization, revenue, or accelerated filer status. We also recognize that financial or operational circumstances could prompt a desired filing frequency change, including M&A, growth stage, debt funding requirements and changes in peer practices. Instituting thresholds would be arbitrary and may exclude precisely the companies for which reporting burden is most significant. A governance-reviewed (e.g., audit committee) and disclosed election mechanism is more flexible and more consistent with investor protection than a threshold-based screen.

The Commission should, however, require clear disclosure of the election and should encourage registrants to explain their rationale for making or changing a previous election in the audit committee report. Such disclosures need not be extensive, but investors should understand why the registrant believes semiannual reporting or a change in reporting frequency is appropriate in light of its investor base, voluntary disclosure practices, internal reporting processes, business model, and market expectations.

B. Comparability Concerns Should Not Be Overstated

Concerns have been raised regarding comparability across registrants that elect different reporting frequencies or between U.S. semiannual filers and quarterly filers. These concerns are legitimate but should not be a threshold obstacle to an elective framework.

We also recognize a related but distinct concern: that a market in which registrants report on different cadences could make comparisons across the public company universe more challenging broadly, beyond any single registrant's relationship to its immediate peers.

Differences in reporting frequency and timing are not unprecedented. Foreign private issuers have long been permitted to report on a semiannual basis under home-country practice, and fiscal year-ends already vary across registrants and peers, producing timing differences that investors and analysts routinely address. Information asymmetry across companies in the same sector is an existing feature of capital markets, not a novel condition created by this proposal.
We do not believe this concern should be a basis for declining to adopt an elective framework. Clear disclosure of a registrant's election, consistently presented and readily identifiable, allows investors and analysts to account for reporting cadence in the same way they already account for differing fiscal year-ends, differing accounting policies within GAAP, consequences of changes in the scope of the reporting entity as a result of inter-period M&A activity, and differing levels of voluntary disclosure across registrants. The Commission's monitoring framework, discussed below, would allow it to assess, as adoption proceeds, whether the resulting mix of reporting cadences across registrants has had the effects some commenters may anticipate, and to consider further guidance if warranted.
When comparability with quarterly-reporting peers is important to a registrant's investor base, that consideration itself becomes part of the fact-specific calculus. The registrant may retain quarterly reporting or continue voluntary quarterly updates. This is the elective framework operating as intended, not a defect requiring a uniform mandate.

C. Credit Agreements, Covenant Reporting, and Contractual Constraints Companies with significant credit market obligations, including revolving credit facilities, covenant-based debt agreements, or other financial arrangements requiring quarterly financial information, may face contractual constraints on a semiannual election. Rather than embedding these constraints as a formal eligibility barrier, the Commission should acknowledge them in final rule guidance as one of the considerations a registrant may weigh in deciding whether to elect semiannual reporting. Credit markets and contractual counterparties can require quarterly information where necessary.
D. Monitoring Framework
The Commission should monitor adoption patterns and investor impacts over time. We recommend a structured review within two to three years after implementation. That review should consider adoption rates, issuer size and industry characteristics, voluntary quarterly disclosure practices, investor feedback, analyst coverage effects, bid-ask spreads, credit spreads, cost-of-capital indicators, restatement or error-correction trends, and whether semiannual filers maintain adequate current reporting practices.
The Commission should also evaluate whether Form 10-S filings become genuinely more analytical and better organized than Form 10-Q filings, or whether registrants merely reproduce Form 10-Q content at a semiannual cadence. The success of the proposal should be measured not only by reduced filing count or issuer cost savings, but by whether the remaining filings become more decision-useful.

As part of this monitoring, the Commission may also wish to consider whether Form 10-K should clearly present second-half results and analysis for semiannual filers so that investors do not need to infer second-half performance by subtracting first-half results from annual totals.

E. Coordination With Regulation S-K Modernization

Finally, we recommend that the Commission coordinate final rules or interpretive guidance for Form 10-S with broader disclosure modernization efforts. The same principles apply across Form 10-K, Form 10-Q, and Form 10-S: materiality as the organizing principle, layered disclosure, management-focused MD&A, structured presentation, evergreen versus evolving risk factors, technology-enabled navigation, and plain-English communication. The complexity and repetition that characterize periodic reporting are partly the result of form-by-form accretion over many decades. A coherent cross-form modernization initiative would produce better outcomes than piecemeal changes.

Recommendation 13: Adopt a practical implementation and review framework.

The Commission should preserve flexibility, optionality and reversibility, require clear election disclosure, avoid unnecessary bright-line eligibility restrictions, acknowledge contractual constraints, coordinate with Regulation S-K and filer status rulemaking, and conduct a structured post-implementation review within two to three years. Such review should specifically evaluate investor outcomes, voluntary disclosure practices, comparability effects, analyst coverage, market liquidity, and registrant election patterns.

Conclusion

The Commission's reassessment of the quarterly reporting framework reflects appropriate recognition that capital markets, investor behavior, technology, and disclosure practices have changed substantially since 1970. We support the proposal's optional approach and believe that a single mandatory reporting cadence cannot optimally serve the diversity of public companies and investors in modern U.S. markets.

At the same time, cadence reform should not be viewed as an end in itself. The proposal should be judged not merely by whether it reduces the number of filings, but by whether it improves the quality, organization, and decision-usefulness of the information investors receive. If paired with a redesigned
Form 10-S, modernization of Form 10-Q, a robust Form 8-K current reporting framework, and the disclosure effectiveness enhancements outlined in this letter, the proposal could mark a significant advance in the U.S. disclosure system.

Clearer, more analytical disclosure serves investors better than voluminous, repetitive disclosure, regardless of filing frequency. We accordingly urge the Commission to use this rulemaking as part of a broader effort to modernize interim reporting architecture, without compromising the rigor, comparability, accountability, and investor protection that have long distinguished the U.S. disclosure system.

We appreciate the Commission's consideration of these views and would welcome the opportunity to engage further with Commission staff on any aspect of our comments.

Respectfully submitted,

Neri Bukspan Marc Siegel
Neri Bukspan Marc Siegel
Co-Founder and Executive Advisor Co-Founder and Executive Advisor Metrix Advisory LLC Metrix Advisory LLC neri@metrixadvisory.com marc@metrixadvisory.com www.metrixadvisory.com

Appendix A – Modern Interim Reporting Framework

Reporting Component	Purpose	Recommended Treatment
Annual report / Form 10-K	Comprehensive baseline	Full audited financial statements, full footnotes, complete MD&A, risk factors, business description, controls, governance, goals/KPIs/Guidance and long-term strategy disclosures.
Form 10-S	Semiannual reviewed update	Material developments since annual report; reviewed interim financial statements; management-focused MD&A; driver analysis; liquidity and capital allocation update; material strategic, financial and operational updates, material risk changes; cross-references to stable annual disclosures, related metrics and KPIs.
Form 10-Q	Quarterly reviewed update for registrants retaining quarterly reporting	Modernized using same principles as Form 10-S: less repetition, more analysis, clearer cross-referencing, and more disciplined materiality application.
Form 8-K	Current reporting anchor	Filed disclosure of material events and developments between periodic reports; material updates; key investor protection mechanism under any cadence.
Voluntary updates	Market-based communication	Earnings releases, investor presentations, KPIs and operating metrics, subject to Regulation FD, non-GAAP guidance, and disclosure controls appropriate to significance.

Appendix B – Illustrative Form 10-S Architecture

1. Plain-English Management Summary

Concise summary of the most material developments during the six-month period and where to find supporting analysis.

2. Performance Driver Dashboard

Table or bridge showing key drivers of revenue, margins, operating income, cash flows, liquidity, segment results, and relevant KPIs.
3. Financial Statements
Reviewed interim financial statements prepared in accordance with applicable Regulation S-X requirements.
4. Layered Notes
Stable accounting policies cross-referenced to the annual report; period-specific composition updates;
key estimates and judgments updated where material.
5. MD&A
Analytical discussion of what happened, why it happened, how trends evolved, liquidity and capital allocation implications, and management's outlook.
6. Risk Updates
Emerging, evolving, or materially changed risks since the annual report, with cross-reference to stable annual risk disclosure.
7. Controls and Certifications
Disclosure controls, internal control updates as required, and applicable management certifications.
8. Exhibits and Cross-References
Clear navigation, tagging, and links to annual baseline disclosures and current reports where relevant.

Appendix C – Crosswalk to Disclosure Modernization Principles9
Modernization Principle Application to Semiannual Reporting Materiality as organizing principle Focus Form 10-S on material developments and decision-useful updates, not checklist completion.
Layered disclosure Separate stable annual baseline disclosures from period-specific updates and judgment-intensive information.
Management-focused MD&A Organize discussion around how management evaluates performance, liquidity, risk, and capital allocation.
Bridge and tabular presentation Use structured tables to explain drivers of change and reduce repetitive narrative.
Evergreen versus evolving risks Cross-reference stable risks; update emerging or materially changed risks.
Modular and navigable reporting Use cross-references, hyperlinks, tagging, and plain-English summaries to improve usability.
Governance accountability Support materiality and reporting cadence judgments through management, audit committee, and disclosure committee processes.
9 See Metrix Advisory Regulation S-K Comment Letter

APPENDIX D – Comment Questions Crosswalk to Metrix Advisory Comment Letter
This appendix maps numbered request for comment questions (abbreviated) to the relevant section(s) of the Metrix Advisory comment letter and any related recommendation. Questions not included are not specifically addressed in the letter.
Comment Letter Section
Request for Comment Question Summary Metrix Advisory Response
Addressed and If Applicable

Related Recommendation

Q1. Should companies have this option, or should all companies continue to be required to file Form 10-Q? What types of companies are likely to elect the option to file semiannual reports? Are companies in certain industries more likely than those in other industries to elect to file semiannual reports?

Metrix Advisory supports affording companies this election rather than mandating a uniform reporting frequency. Companies more likely to elect semiannual reporting include those with concentrated, long-term-oriented, or closely-held ownership; lower analyst coverage or trading liquidity; more mature or stable operating profiles; and less frequent capital-markets activity. Companies with broad retail ownership, higher analyst coverage, or frequent capital-raising needs are more likely to retain quarterly reporting or continue voluntary quarterly updates. Metrix Advisory does not expect adoption to be uniform across industries; sectors with longer operating or investment cycles and established voluntary disclosure practices may see comparatively higher adoption, though actual patterns are best assessed through the post-implementation monitoring framework described in Section XI.D.

Overview; Section XI.A (Implementation Considerations — Election and Governance Review); Recommendations 1 and 13.

Q2. Should we instead require all companies to file semiannual reports? What would be the benefits and costs of such a mandatory approach? Would mandatory semiannual reporting, with the option to file quarterly reports, lead to more companies

Metrix Advisory does not recommend mandatory semiannual reporting.

Consistent with the Commission's longstanding principles-based approach to disclosure regulation, an elective framework is preferable because registrants differ materially in size, stage of development, business model, capital intensity, ownership
Overview; Recommendation 1.

Request for Comment Question electing to forgo quarterly reporting?
Q3. Should the option for semiannual reporting be available only for Exchange Act reporting companies that satisfy certain criteria? If so, what criteria should be imposed and why? Should the Commission consider a pilot program to permit optional semiannual reporting for a subset of reporting companies? What types of companies should be included in the pilot program?
Q4. Should any types of companies that currently file Form 10-Q be excluded from the option of electing semiannual reporting, such as business development companies?
Q6. Would semiannual reporting have an impact on investors' ability to compare same-company

Summary Metrix Advisory Response
structure, analyst coverage, retail ownership, debt obligations, covenant requirements, and reporting maturity, such that a uniform cadence would not optimally serve every registrant or investor base. A mandatory approach paired with an option to revert to quarterly reporting would functionally resemble the proposed elective framework while adding an unnecessary compliance overlay, and Metrix Advisory does not expect it would meaningfully change adoption patterns relative to a direct elective structure.
Metrix Advisory supports availability of semiannual reporting to all Exchange

Act reporting companies without mandatory bright-line eligibility restrictions, while acknowledging that registrant-specific factors will inform appropriate elections.

Metrix Advisory does not recommend categorical exclusions. Registrant-specific factors, including investor base, analyst coverage, credit obligations, and voluntary disclosure practices, should inform the election decision through a governance-reviewed disclosure process.

Metrix Advisory acknowledges this concern but notes that differences in reporting cadence are not

Comment Letter Section Addressed and If Applicable Related Recommendation

Section XI.A (Implementation Considerations); Recommendation 13.

Section XI.A (Implementation Considerations); Recommendation 13.

Section XI.B (Comparability Concerns Should Not Be

Request for Comment Question performance over time? Why or why not?

Q7. What effect would the proposal have on investors' ability to compare the relative peer company financial performance of a quarterly filer to a semiannual filer?

Q8. Should the check box indicating a company has elected semiannual reporting be added to registration statements and annual reports as proposed?

Q10. Should companies be required to continue semiannual reporting for the rest of the fiscal year in which the election was made? Should there be limitations on switching frequency?

Q13. Is a new Form 10-S needed? Should there be one form for all interim reports, regardless of whether they are for a fiscal quarter or a semiannual period?

Summary	Metrix Advisory Response
unprecedented (foreign private issuers, differing fiscal year-ends) and investors already navigate such variation. Clear election disclosure and modernized Form 10-S content can mitigate comparability concerns.	Metrix Advisory acknowledges comparability concerns but views them as manageable. Registrants whose investor base requires comparability with quarterly peers can retain quarterly reporting or continue voluntary quarterly updates. The elective framework is designed to accommodate this variation.
	Metrix Advisory supports clear election disclosure. The Commission should require clear disclosure of the election and encourage registrants to explain their rationale in light of their investor base, voluntary disclosure practices, and business model.
	Metrix Advisory supports optionality and reversibility without unnecessary bright-line restrictions. The Commission should preserve flexibility while requiring clear disclosure of the election and its rationale.
	Metrix Advisory supports a new Form 10-S and recommends it be designed as a genuinely improved interim report, organized around material developments since the annual report, management-focused MD&A, structured bridge analyses, and layered disclosure rather than merely extending the Form 10-Q model over Comment Letter Section Addressed and If Applicable Related Recommendation Overstated); Recommendation 13.
Section XI.B (Comparability Concerns Should Not Be Overstated); Recommendation 13.
Section XI.A (Election and Governance Review); Recommendation 13.

Section XI.A (Implementation Considerations — Election and Governance Review); Recommendation 13. Sections I (Content Before Frequency), II (Interim Reporting as an Update to the Annual Report), V (Modernizing MD&A); Recommendations 1, 2, 3 and 6.

Request for Comment Question Summary Metrix Advisory Response

six months. However, Metrix Advisory also believes that Form 10-Q content principles should be aligned with those of Form 10-S.

Q14. Should Form 10-S require narrative or financial information that differs from what is required in Form 10-Q?

Metrix Advisory recommends that Form 10-S be designed around an update model: material changes since the annual report, management-focused MD&A, structured bridge analyses, evergreen risk cross-referencing, and plain-English navigability, not a simple extension of the current Form 10-Q compliance-based approach over a longer period. Importantly, Metrix Advisory also supports a commensurate Form 10-Q redesign.

Q15. As an alternative to optional semiannual reporting, should we revise the disclosure requirements of Form 10-Q to reduce burden?

Metrix Advisory recommends that the Commission treat this proposal as a catalyst for improving the interim reporting framework as a whole, including modernizing Form 10-Q for registrants that retain quarterly reporting. Content modernization should benefit both semiannual and quarterly filers, enhancing decision-usefulness while also reducing burden.

Q17. What impact would the proposed option to file semiannual reports have on companies' ability to focus on business operations, growth, or long-term business strategies? Metrix Advisory cautions against overstating the relationship between filing frequency and long-term strategic behavior. Strategic planning horizons are determined by industry, capital intensity, governance, and business model, not primarily by the SEC filing calendar. Better disclosure of multi-horizon goals, progress against those goals, and related KPIs is the more direct lever.

Comment Letter Section Addressed and If Applicable	Related Recommendation
Sections I (Content Before Frequency), II (Interim Reporting as Update), V (Modernizing MD&A), IX (Retail Investors and Accessibility);	Recommendations 2, 3, 6, and 10.
Sections I (Content Before Frequency), II (Interim Reporting as an Update to the Annual Report);	Recommendations 2 and 3.
Section VIII (Short-Termism, Time Horizons, Capital Allocation);	Recommendation 9.
Request for Comment Question Q18. What is the likelihood that companies electing semiannual reporting will continue to issue quarterly earnings releases? Would this practice create new investor protection concerns?
Q20. Should there be a new requirement for semiannual filers that announce earnings for first or third quarters — that financial information in any such earnings release be reviewed by an independent public accountant?
Q22. Would the option for semiannual reporting result in an overall reduction in material information for investors? Would Form 8-K and Regulation FD provide sufficient offsetting information?

Summary Metrix Advisory Response

Metrix Advisory expects many semiannual filers to continue voluntary quarterly updates including earnings releases. The Commission should preserve and not disincentivize this practice. Voluntary updates, while useful, are not substitutes for reviewed periodic filings and should be clearly labeled accordingly.

Metrix Advisory does not recommend a mandatory quarterly earnings-release requirement or mandatory independent-accountant review of voluntary quarterly updates. The Commission should preserve registrant flexibility and avoid recreating the quarterly reporting burden through a new vehicle.

Metrix Advisory recognizes that markets already benefit from a continuous flow of information, reaching them well outside the rhythm of the SEC's filing calendar. Metrix Advisory believes that information frequency and disclosure channel governance should be addressed holistically in light of how today's markets actually function, rather than treated as synonymous with periodic filing frequency. Metrix Advisory acknowledges this concern but views Form 8-K and Regulation FD as important safeguards that apply regardless of filing cadence. The continuous disclosure ecosystem, including voluntary updates, earnings releases, and Form 8-K, already provides substantial information between periodic filings. The quality

Comment Letter Section Addressed and If Applicable Related Recommendation

Sections IV.B (Voluntary Interim Disclosure), VI (Non-GAAP Measures and KPIs), X (Governance and Assurance); Recommendations 5, 7, and 11.

Sections IV.B (Voluntary Interim Disclosure Already Exists and Should Be Preserved), VII (Form 8-K), X
(Governance and Assurance);
Recommendations 5, 8, and 11.
Sections IV (Periodic Reporting in a Continuous Disclosure Environment), VII
(Form 8-K); Recommendations
5 and 8.
Comment Letter Section
Request for Comment Question Summary Metrix Advisory Response
Addressed and If Applicable
Related Recommendation and modernization of the remaining periodic filings is the more important reform.
Q23. With semiannual reporting, would there be an impact on investors as a result of less frequent certifications by management relating to internal controls and disclosure controls?
Metrix Advisory recommends that reviewed interim financial statements, management certifications, disclosure controls, and audit committee oversight remain central safeguards under any interim reporting cadence. A semiannual election should not create a gap in controls or accountability.
Section X (Governance,
Certifications, Assurance, and Disclosure Integrity);
Recommendation 11.
Q24. Would the nature and extent of independent public accountant review procedures change depending on whether the review is over a semiannual or quarterly period?
The nature and extent of review procedures may differ for semiannual periods. PCAOB AS 4105 governs reviews of interim financial information and is calibrated to filed quarterly financial statements. Under a semiannual regime, audit committees may continue to seek auditor review, comfort, or other procedures over quarterly information that provides the basis for voluntary quarterly earnings releases, estimated GAAP figures, or non-GAAP presentations. Questions exist about which professional standards apply and what engagement forms are available for quarterly financial information that is less than a complete set of financial statements and footnotes. Existing agreed-upon procedures and comfort-letter frameworks may offer a partial answer. The Commission should consider coordinating with the PCAOB to address whether AS 4105 applies to voluntary interim information, and whether new or updated PCAOB guidance is warranted so that registrants are not constrained from Section X (Governance, Certifications, Assurance, and Disclosure Integrity); Recommendation 12.

Request for Comment Question Q25. Would companies that elect semiannual reporting retain their independent public accountant to perform a review of financial statements at the end of each quarter to support quarterly earnings releases?

Q26. For semiannual filers, what impact would a shift to semiannual reporting have on disclosure controls, internal control over financial reporting, and independent public accountants' annual audit approach?

Q27. Would there be reduced securities analyst coverage of Exchange Act reporting companies that elect semiannual reporting?

Q28. Would the proposal have any impact on a semiannual filer's application of relevant accounting standards? Are any changes to accounting standards necessary?

Summary	Metrix Advisory Response
opting into semiannual reporting due to the lack of availability of assurance over quarterly information without the creation of full financial statements and footnotes.	Metrix Advisory expects this to vary based on registrant circumstances. The Commission should provide interpretive clarity so registrants can make informed decisions without uncertainty regarding non-GAAP reconciliation or review obligations deterring voluntary quarterly updates. Metrix Advisory recommends that existing annual controls attestations and audit scope continue to cover the full annual period regardless of interim filing frequency. Registrants should remain responsible for maintaining disclosure controls and internal controls throughout the year.
Metrix Advisory acknowledges analyst coverage may be affected for some registrants and notes that the monitoring framework should track this. Registrants with thin coverage may rely more heavily on formal filings, reinforcing the importance of designing Form 10-S around clarity, navigability, and plain-English summaries.
Metrix Advisory observes that the proposal raises important U.S. GAAP compatibility questions. As an example, current ASC 270-10-45-1 conditions its comparative presentation framework on quarterly reporting. FASB's ASU 2025-11 (issued

Comment Letter Section Addressed and If Applicable Related Recommendation
Sections VI (Non-GAAP Measures, KPIs, and Management Metrics), Section X (Governance, Certifications, Assurance, and Disclosure Integrity); Recommendations 7 and 12.
Section X (Governance, Certifications, Assurance, and Disclosure Integrity);

Recommendations 11 and 12.
Sections IX (Retail Investors,
AI, and Disclosure
Accessibility), XI.D (Monitoring Framework);
Recommendations 10 and 13.
Section III (U.S. GAAP Considerations);
Recommendation 4.
Comment Letter Section
Request for Comment Question Summary Metrix Advisory Response
Addressed and If Applicable
Related Recommendation
December 8, 2025; effective for public business entities for annual periods beginning after December 15, 2027) removes this specific requirement from ASC 270, though Regulation S-X separately continues to require comparable information for SEC registrants. In addition, several GAAP standards reflect quarterly reporting illustrations or assumptions, including the AETR methodology under ASC 740-270, earnings per share under ASC 260, derivatives and hedging under ASC 815, pension cost components under ASC 715, and equity method lag conventions under ASC 323, that may warrant FASB guidance or amendment in a semiannual context. The Commission should encourage the FASB to explore these consequential amendments before the final rule takes effect and align effective dates accordingly.
Furthermore, the FASB, SEC, and PCAOB should provide guidance and encouragement to registrants to apply the materiality concept of ASC 105 to all interim reporting disclosure requirements such that registrants do not feel compelled to include immaterial disclosures.
Q30. Should we require second semiannual period financial information (for semiannual filers) or fourth quarter financial information (for quarterly filers) to be included in Form 10-K?

Metrix Advisory recommends that the Commission consider whether Form 10-K should clearly present second-half results and analysis for semiannual filers so investors do not need to infer second-half performance by subtracting first-half results from annual totals. However, consistent with the concept of an “update,” that Section XI.D (Monitoring Framework); Recommendation 13.

Request for Comment Question Q31. What impact would optional semiannual reporting have on company insider trading policies, including trading windows?

Q32. Would there be an increased risk of insider trading at companies that elect to report on a semiannual basis?

Q37. What impact would the proposal have on the ability of semiannual filers to conduct public offerings?

Q48. What would be the benefits to investors from reporting companies' flexibility to file semiannual reports instead of quarterly reports?

Summary Metrix Advisory Response

guidance may be similar to what is now required for a fourth fiscal quarter.

Metrix Advisory views insider trading controls as analytically distinct from filing frequency. Insider trading policies, trading blackout periods, and Rule 10b5-1 plan operation are governed by existing compliance frameworks that operate continuously and independently of the periodic filing calendar.

Metrix Advisory does not view a semiannual interval as meaningfully changing the risk of insider trading. The gap between event occurrence date, period-end and filing already exists under quarterly reporting; existing information-handling frameworks are designed to address this vulnerability. The key is the design and operation of disclosure controls, not filing frequency.

Metrix Advisory notes that registrants conducting capital markets transactions may continue to include quarterly or more recent financial information in registration statements based on market practices or liability considerations.
Metrix Advisory supports the optional semiannual framework and notes that if coupled with the disclosure enhancement recommendations outlined in its letter, investor benefits include better-organized, more analytical filings that focus on material developments. Metrix Advisory notes

Comment Letter Section Addressed and If Applicable Related Recommendation

Sections VII.B (Confidential Information and Information-Handling Controls), VIII.C (Trading Windows, Insider Trading Controls); Recommendation 9.

Sections VII.B (Confidential Information), VIII.C (Trading Windows, Insider Trading Controls); Recommendation 9.

Section XI.B (Comparability Concerns); Recommendation 13.

Sections I (Content Before Frequency), Executive Summary; Recommendations 1 and 2.

Request for Comment Question Summary Metrix Advisory Response

that the primary benefit to investors lies in content modernization, not merely frequency reduction.

Q49. What would be the costs to investors from providing reporting companies with flexibility to file semiannual reports instead of quarterly reports?

Metrix Advisory acknowledges potential costs including information asymmetry and reduced comparability, particularly for retail investors and companies with thin analyst coverage. These risks are mitigated by Form 8-K, Regulation FD, voluntary interim updates, and Form 10-S content modernization.

Q54. Are there capital market factors that would limit a reporting company's ability to switch to semiannual reporting?

Metrix Advisory notes that companies with pertinent credit market obligations, including revolving credit facilities and covenant-based debt agreements requiring quarterly financial information, may face contractual constraints. These should be acknowledged in guidance as relevant considerations rather than formal eligibility barriers.

Q56. If the proposal were to reduce securities analyst coverage of semiannual filers, what effect would this have on investors and companies?

Metrix Advisory recommends the Commission's monitoring framework track analyst coverage effects post-implementation and consider this in its structured review within two to three years after adoption.

Q57. What impact would the proposal, including the proposed option to file interim reports on a semiannual basis and the proposed financial statement rule changes, including to age of financial statement rules, have on the ability of semiannual filers to conduct public offerings?

Metrix Advisory notes that registrants may continue to provide quarterly or more recent financial information in Securities Act registration statements based on market practices or liability considerations, potentially offsetting some cost savings.

Comment Letter Section Addressed and If Applicable Related Recommendation

Sections IV (Periodic Reporting in a Continuous Disclosure Environment), IX (Retail Investors, AI, and Disclosure Accessibility);

Recommendations 5 and 10.
Section XI.C (Credit
Agreements, Covenant
Reporting, and Contractual Constraints); Recommendation
13.
Section XI.D (Monitoring Framework); Recommendation
13.
Section XI.B (Comparability Concerns); Recommendation
13.
Comment Letter Section
Request for Comment Question Summary Metrix Advisory Response
Addressed and If Applicable
Related Recommendation
Q58. Would a company's valuation or cost of capital differ based on whether it is a quarterly or semiannual filer?
Metrix Advisory recommends the Commission's post-implementation monitoring framework evaluate cost-of-capital indicators as part of its structured review. The letter does not take a position on the direction or magnitude of any such difference, particularly given the range of other information available to investors and each company's ability to calibrate its disclosure frequency to its business model, investor base, and peer practices.
Section XI.D (Monitoring Framework); Recommendation
13.

Neuberger Berman Group LLC — Jul 2, 2026
July 2, 2026
Vanessa Countryman
Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street NE
Washington, DC 20549-1090
Re: File Number S7-2026-15, Semiannual Reporting

Dear Ms. Countryman:

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the Securities and Exchange Commission's ("SEC" or, the "Commission") rule proposal titled "Semiannual Reporting," File Number S7-2026-15, May 7, 2026 ("Proposed Rule").

Founded in 1939, Neuberger is a global, independent, employee-owned investment manager. The firm manages almost $567 billion1 across a range of strategies – including equity, fixed income, private equity, real estate and hedge funds – on behalf of institutions, financial advisors, and individual investors globally. With more than 750 investment professionals and approximately 2,900 employees in total, Neuberger has built a diverse team of individuals united in their commitment to delivering compelling investment results for our clients over the long term.

As an active manager, we believe transparency and communication between companies and investors is critical to functioning markets. U.S. capital markets are widely regarded as among the deepest, most liquid, and most efficient in the world, and the quality, frequency, and reliability of public company disclosure have been central to that strength. While quarterly reporting is not the only reason U.S. markets function well, it is consistent with a disclosure framework that has supported investor confidence, efficient price discovery, and broad participation in public markets.

Below is an executive summary of the views outlined in this letter:

- We believe companies should continue to provide quarterly disclosure that supports transparency, accountability, and long-term investment analysis.

1 As of March 31, 2026.

- We support efforts to improve public company disclosure and reduce low-value or duplicative reporting, but reducing reporting frequency alone is not the appropriate response to short-termism.
- Quarterly reporting supports transparency, accountability, comparability, price discovery, and investor confidence; these benefits should be preserved even if companies are permitted to report semiannually.
- If companies elect semiannual reporting, they should maintain predictable interim updates, including disclosure of core financial results, key business metrics, management commentary, material risk updates, and regular shareholder dialogue.
- The Commission should focus on better disclosure, not simply less disclosure—emphasizing material, comparable, business-specific information that helps investors assess strategy, capital allocation, risk, and long-term value creation potential.
- The Commission should clarify safe harbor protections to encourage good-faith forward-looking disclosure on strategy, objectives, assumptions, risks, and capital allocation.
- Any reporting-frequency reform should be coordinated with broader disclosure modernization efforts to avoid investors receiving less information, less often, and in a less comparable form.

We believe companies should continue to provide quarterly disclosure that supports transparency, accountability, and long-term investment analysis. It is important to distinguish between reporting quarterly and thinking quarterly: a regular cadence of decision-useful information does not require companies to manage for short-term results, but it does help investors assess progress against long-term strategy, capital allocation, risk management, and operating performance. Where companies elect to move to semiannual reporting, we expect them to preserve the most valuable elements of the quarterly framework through predictable interim updates, including core financial results, consistent segment-level and business-specific metrics, meaningful management commentary on material drivers and risks, and regular opportunities for shareholder dialogue. Maintaining an active engagement cadence with shareholders between formal reporting periods will be especially important to address emerging issues, provide context around material developments, and preserve accountability. The objective should not be less disclosure, but better disclosure: focused on materiality, tailored to the business model and operating cycle, and sufficient to maintain investor confidence, comparability, and market discipline.

An Opportunity for Reflection, Not Reduction

The Proposed Rule to permit optional semiannual reporting in lieu of quarterly Form 10-Q filings marks a significant inflection point for U.S. capital markets and the first potential change to reporting frequency in over five decades. As long-term focused, active fundamental investors, we do not view the proposal as a binary choice between more or less disclosure, but as an opportunity for boards and management teams to reassess the quality, relevance, and decision-usefulness of the information they provide to shareholders.

While we recognize concerns that quarterly reporting may encourage short-termism and earnings management at the expense of focusing on long-term value creation, we also caution against overcorrection and the risk of abandoning the valuable disclosure practices and accountability mechanisms that have long supported market discipline, comparability, and timely accountability, as well as informed stewardship and capital allocation by long-term investors. A move to semiannual reporting could also increase market volatility by lengthening the interval between standardized public disclosures, thereby increasing information asymmetry and the likelihood that investors respond more sharply to earnings surprises, selective voluntary updates, or other interim market signals.

We strongly support efforts to reduce short-termism. However, we believe a more effective response is to encourage companies to provide clearer information on the metrics, milestones, and assumptions that are most relevant to their long-term strategy, rather than simply reducing the frequency of required reporting.

This is particularly important in a period of rapid technological change, including the increasing relevance of artificial intelligence and broader digital transformation to corporate strategy and performance. As business models, competitive dynamics, and sources of value evolve, investors need timely, decision-useful information to assess whether companies are adapting effectively. Where AI affects customer economics, productivity, capital allocation, or competitive positioning, clear disclosure of relevant metrics and management's assessment of progress are critical to improve market understanding.

To further promote more open investor-issuer dialogue, we encourage the Commission to consider clarifying or strengthening the existing safe harbor framework for forward-looking statements. Despite the protections provided under current frameworks, perceived litigation risk continues to discourage companies from providing substantive disclosure regarding strategy, long-term objectives, and capital allocation, particularly amid heightened uncertainty driven by technological disruption. The Commission should reaffirm that good-faith, well-supported forward-looking disclosures, when appropriately contextualized with meaningful assumptions and risk factors, should not subject issuers to undue liability, while preserving accountability for statements that are materially misleading.

Elements of Quarterly Reporting Worth Keeping

Any shift toward semiannual reporting should preserve those benefits through richer, more focused interim communication, including timely financial updates, meaningful management commentary, risk transparency, and sustained shareholder engagement. While certain elements of quarterly reporting remain essential to decision-usefulness and should be preserved regardless of frequency, other elements can and should be improved which can be achieved by reducing noise, strengthening linkage to strategy, and tailoring content to specific business models and operating cycles.

The value of quarterly reporting lies in the discipline, transparency, and market infrastructure it reinforces. We encourage companies that are considering semiannual reporting to identify which elements of the quarterly framework remain essential to investor confidence and preserve them through other predictable mechanisms where needed.

We view the following components as particularly important:

1. Complete, structured financial statements. Basic financial statements (income, balance sheet, cash flow) on a quarterly cadence are the lifeblood of fundamental analysis. These data points inform valuation models, trend analysis, and peer benchmarking. Even if full 10-Qs are optional, companies should still provide regular financial results (e.g., via earnings releases) to avoid long gaps in data. Less frequent reporting does not reduce the importance of these statements. However, it does increase the need for clarity and rigor when they are provided.

2. Segment information that reflects how the business is run. Detailed segment reporting and key performance metrics help investors evaluate multi-line businesses and compare peers. Companies should continue to provide segment-level and operational KPIs with consistency, even if formal filings are less frequent, to enable apples-to-apples comparisons across time and between competitors.

3. Meaningful MD&A focused on drivers, not repetition. Companies should preserve frequent MD&A updates, focusing on material changes and forward-looking commentary. MD&A is most valuable when it explains why results changed, how performance links to strategy, and what management sees ahead. Investors benefit from discussion of demand trends, competitive dynamics, cost drivers, and capital allocation decisions, not from restating tables already visible

4. 5. in the financials. A decision-useful MD&A should read as a candid explanation of business progress and challenges, not a compliance exercise.

Updates to material risks and uncertainties. Periodic risk disclosure should be dynamic. Investors value clarity on what has changed, which risks have intensified or receded, and how management is responding. While static, repetitive risk factor lists dilute attention and reduce credibility, tailored, current risk discussion enhances trust and decision-making.

Accountability mechanisms. Strong internal controls, governance oversight, and disciplined review processes are important foundations for reliable financial reporting and investor confidence. These mechanisms help reduce information asymmetry, support consistency in reported information, and reinforce the board's and management's accountability for disclosure quality. We do not view maintaining robust control and governance processes as a significant incremental burden for well-governed companies; rather, they are a core feature of sound financial reporting and should remain central to any revised reporting framework.

Enhancing Decision-Usefulness: Tailoring Disclosure to Business Models and Operating Cycles

Companies can improve usability and reduce reporting burden simultaneously by applying investor-focused materiality more rigorously and retiring boilerplate disclosures that add length without insight. In this context, materiality should encompass all financially material topics, including those related to financially material governance, social, and environmental risks and opportunities that may affect long-term value creation.

A key limitation in the quarterly reporting debate is the assumption that all businesses generate decision-useful information on the same cadence. In practice, however, business models and operating cycles vary significantly, and disclosure frameworks should be flexible enough to reflect those differences while preserving the comparability investors need.

- Capital-intensive, long-cycle businesses (e.g., infrastructure, aerospace, utilities) benefit from disclosure focused on backlog, project milestones, returns on invested capital, and regulatory or contractual developments. Quarter-to-quarter earnings volatility is often less informative than progress against long-term investment theses.
- Asset-light or platform businesses (e.g., software, marketplaces) often generate meaningful operating data at a faster pace. Here, regular updates on unit economics, retention, and scale efficiencies are central to valuation.
- Cyclical or commodity-exposed businesses should emphasize sensitivity analyses, cost structures, and balance-sheet resilience rather than point estimates.
- Seasonal businesses may warrant clearer framing around intra-year patterns so that interim results are interpreted appropriately.

Tailoring disclosures does not mean abandoning structure. Instead, it calls for emphasizing the information that best explains how a particular business creates value over time.

A Call to Return to Quality and Materiality

Quarterly reporting has long been a cornerstone of U.S. capital markets, supporting transparency, accountability, and efficient capital allocation. The case for reducing disclosure frequency as a means of promoting long-termism is unproven. What is clear is that disclosure quality can be improved.

The Commission should encourage issuers and boards to use this moment to reflect on how their disclosures serve investors who allocate capital with multi-year horizons. By preserving decision-useful elements, reducing noise, and tailoring disclosures to specific business models and operating cycles, companies can strengthen trust with long-term shareholders and support sustainable value creation, regardless of how often reports are filed.

Although this letter is focused on the Proposed Rule regarding semiannual reporting, we note that reporting frequency cannot be evaluated in isolation from the broader disclosure framework. If the Commission pursues separate reforms to modernize Regulation S-K or other public company disclosure requirements, those efforts should be coordinated to ensure that investors do not receive less information, less often, and in a less comparable form. We support efforts to reduce duplicative, boilerplate, or immaterial disclosure, but any modernization should preserve standardized, comparable, and decision-useful information that long-term investors rely on to assess strategy, governance, risk, capital allocation, and management accountability. In particular, materiality should remain anchored in the perspective of a reasonable investor, rather than narrowed to what an issuer determines is material to its own business, because investor-focused materiality is essential to preserving accountability, comparability, and confidence in public company disclosure. If reporting becomes less frequent while disclosure requirements also become less prescriptive, investors could receive less information, less often, and in a less comparable form. To the extent the Commission is also considering ways to reduce public company reporting burdens, any review of Sarbanes-Oxley implementation, including Section 404 compliance, should remain carefully tailored to issuer size, complexity, and risk profile, while preserving robust internal controls and investor confidence in the reliability of financial reporting.

We appreciate the opportunity to share our views and welcome further dialogue with the SEC on this important matter.

Sincerely,
Joseph V. Amato
President and Chief Investment Officer, Equities

New York City Comptroller Mark Levine, Office of the NYC Comptroller — Jul 2, 2026
THE CITY OF NEW YORK
OFFICE OF THE COMPTROLLER
MARK D. LEVINE
July 2, 2026
Via Electronic Submission
Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission 100 F Street, NE
Washington, DC 20549
Re: File Number S7-2026-15 — Semiannual Reporting
Dear Secretary Countryman:
As the Comptroller of the City of New York, I serve as investment adviser to, and custodian and a trustee of, the five New York City Pension Funds (the "NYC Funds"). The NYC Funds hold $329 billion in assets—invested in more than 3,000 U.S. public companies—on behalf of more than 700,000 active and retired workers, including teachers, firefighters, police officers, nurses, and sanitation workers.
I previously submitted comments to the Commission regarding potential reforms to Regulation S-K that included my concerns related to possible reductions in periodic reporting frequency that were then the subject of media reports. Now that the Commission is formally soliciting comment on semiannual reporting, I respectfully resubmit the discussion below for inclusion in the rulemaking record for File Number S7-2026-15.
While the Commission suggests that reducing reporting frequency may lessen managerial focus on short-term financial metrics and promote long-term value creation, I am concerned that the proposed rule could instead produce the opposite result by increasing informational opacity, decreasing market efficiency, and ultimately undermining sustainable capital formation.
Research consistently demonstrates that investors demand a premium to bear greater information risk. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York found that bonds issued outside the SEC reporting regime trade at spreads 30 to 50 basis points higher than comparable registered issuers, illustrating the measurable value investors place on mandatory public disclosure.1
Current market data from Barclays Credit Research confirms this persistent gap. Their March 2026 analysis of the 144A universe shows that even when adjusting for credit ratings, private-issuer debt trades 11 basis points wide to the SEC-registered universe.
1 9Anna Kovner & Chenyang Wei, The Private Premium in Public Bonds, Federal Reserve Bank of New York Staff Report No. 553 (Mar. 2012, rev. Mar. 2014), available at https://www.newyorkfed.org/medialibrary/media/research/staff_reports/sr553.pdf
DAVID N. DINKINS MUNICIPAL BUILDING • 1 CENTRE STREET, 5TH Floor • NEW YORK, NY 10007
PHONE: (212) 669-3500 • @NYCCOMPTROLLER
WWW.COMPTROLLER.NYC.GOV
Furthermore, with 81% of 144A debt concentrated in high-yield issuers, it is clear that lower disclosure standards are inextricably linked to higher risk and higher costs of capital.2
Although semiannual reporting would not eliminate the public disclosure regime, reducing the frequency of mandatory reporting moves issuers in the same direction by increasing the periods during which investors must value companies using increasingly stale information. Our outreach to a broad range of the NYC Funds asset managers confirms that they overwhelmingly rely on quarterly filings to impose essential discipline on issuers and provide a reliable foundation for assessing performance.

Reducing disclosure frequency would increase the accumulation of undisclosed information and elevate the risk that stock prices may crash. While the dangers of stale data are most acute in rapidly evolving sectors like technology and energy, information lags create friction across all industries.
This friction likely results in a lower Sharpe ratio for equities. Because pension funds rely on risk-adjusted returns to set asset allocation, this sustained decline would necessitate reduced equity exposure, putting significant downward pressure on long-term returns and undermining the ability of funds to meet their obligations to beneficiaries.
I respectfully urge the Commission to carefully consider the effects of reduced reporting frequency on long-term investors, market transparency, and the cost of capital.
Sincerely,
Mark D. Levine
Comptroller, City of New York
2 Barclays Credit Research, The Private Eye (Mar. 18, 2026).
DAVID N. DINKINS MUNICIPAL BUILDING • 1 CENTRE STREET, 5TH Floor • NEW YORK, NY 10007
PHONE: (212) 669-3500 • @NYCCOMPTROLLER
WWW.COMPTROLLER.NYC.GOV

Nick Knappenberger — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nick Knappenberger Keep quarterly reporting.

Nina Ethridge — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nina Ethridge My question is why would you want to keep us in the dark?

Ofer Inbar — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ofer Inbar Cutting back on quarterly reporting and allow companies to report less frequently will increase corruption, and delay detection of fraud or other bad practices. Allowing companies to report only twice a year will only help insiders and the wealthy at the expense of regular investors, and if the SEC allows this it would be a clear sign that the current government is here to make the rich richer and screw everyone else.

Owen McClain — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Owen McClain Please continue to have companies earnings reports due quarterly. Distant stretches between financial reporting only makes it easier for companies to be disingenuous and fraudulent at the consumers expense. Without transparency consumers and stockholders will be on the short end of the stick with the information they're given on companies they engage or hold stock of. This is strictly a detriment to consumer and average American.

Pam Ottaway — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pam Ottaway Do not change reporting requirements from quarterly for companies of any size. Letting any company report only every six months would increase the risk of fraud and manipulation. A lot of bad faith moves could go unseen in six months. Increasing the time between reporting would, I believe , make the market more volatile and could bring unwanted, unpleasant surprises to individual investors like me who are retired. Also, as an individual investor, I don't have the resources for the quantity and quality of research the large Wall Street firms use. I'm already at a disadvantage; this would make the playing field even more unlevel. I don't think this change would benefit the companies in the long run either as it could perhaps drive up their borrowing costs because of the lengthened time between reporting data.

Patricia Jones — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia Jones Keep financial reporting for businesses and corporations quarterly. We the people are already underwater from this administrations inept financial plans. We cannot take anymore hits to our savings and retirement funds. The people who put you in office deserve better.

PATRICK THOMAS WEICHEL — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: PATRICK THOMAS WEICHEL I am writing to express my strong opposition to the Commission’s proposal to allow public companies to reduce their interim financial disclosures from quarterly to semiannual reporting. At its core, investing is ownership. When individuals purchase shares in a public company, they are buying a piece of a business. As owners, they deserve regular, transparent, and timely communication from management. This proposal severely weakens the connection between public companies and their shareholders by creating extended windows of silence. Proponents of this change argue that semiannual reporting will reduce compliance costs. However, in an era dominated by advanced artificial intelligence and highly efficient automated data disclosure tools, the administrative burden of compiling quarterly figures is lower than ever. The marginal savings achieved by hiding data do not justify the massive loss in market transparency. Furthermore, proponents claim that moving to a twice-a-year schedule will alleviate short-term corporate pressures. This is a fundamental misunderstanding of market behavior. Short-termism stems from how market participants react to data, not from the availability of the data itself. Removing official reports will not make investors more patient; it will simply leave them less informed. A business operates every single day. Throughout any given six-month period, products are launched, major clients are won or lost, and corporate strategies either succeed or fail. Under the proposed rule, investors would be forced to wait half a year to receive official updates on these daily operational realities. Less transparency does not eliminate market uncertainty—it amplifies it. When financial results are finally disclosed after six months of silence, the information gaps will inevitably lead to larger corporate surprises, sharper market reactions, and heightened stock volatility. The SEC’s primary mission is to protect investors and maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets. Reducing the flow of critical information directly undermines that mandate. For these reasons, I urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the quarterly reporting framework that has successfully served the U.S. financial markets for decades. Sincerely, Patrick Weichel, Individual Investor

---

Paula Hodges Consumer — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paula Hodges Keep quarterly reporting

---

Personal Investor — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Personal Investor At a time when trust in institutions are at an historical low it seems like poor timing to discourage the open flow of information by mere half year disclosures especially given the incredible ease the internet provides individuals in being available to reach information in an effective manner. It would accelerate the breakdown in societal trust that we have been witnessing. It seems like the exact opposite of the mandate of the Securities and Exchange Commission to protect investors by ensuring fair markets. It reinforces the belief among the more cynical in our society that such markets are only for a few and could actually lead to a call for even more regulation in the system in the future. I would think the focus of the SEC would be more on how to better leverage such information for the use of all involved instead of trying to stem information flow to fewer periodical reports. Without such data people begin to distrust and disengage.

R. Wyland — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: R. Wyland As a private investor I am concerned that extending reports to 6 months diminishes accountability. One could argue that cover-ups happen regardless, but there has to be some boundary. A 6 month accountability increases the complancy of those participating in fraudulent activities.

Ralph Hall — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ralph Hall To the Commission, I am writing to express my opposition to the proposed change in the frequency of required company financial disclosures from the current quarterly to the proposed semi-annual. If anything due to the age we live in of global connectivity information should be more readily available . I feel less data would make investors less confident possibly causing less investment or leaving stocks for other types. As a member of an investment club the quarterly data can help spot trends earlier and respond in a timely manner. If the data was now semi-annual we would be working with "old news" and fewer data points. Thank you for your consideration and await the outcome. Ralph G. Hall

---

Rebekah Baker — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rebekah Baker It matters to know what companies are doing with the money I invest into them. We cannot go backwards and lose the accountability that makes companies be open about thier financial records. Keep the quarterly reporting and stop trying to cheap the system!!!

Rebekkah Carney Global Risk consultant — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rebekkah Carney Absolutely not. Corporations already have too much power and not enough accountability, and I have no interest in wasting the wealth of a nation on lack of oversight as we did several times in my lifetime even with quarterly reporting in place.

Retired investor Retired teacher — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Retired investor The proposed change in quarterly reporting serves only to return to an increase in fraudulent practices by unscrupulous corporations as has been proven by current law. Current quarterly reporting has, by any accounting I have seen or heard, reduced the opportunity of fraudulent manipulation and accounting and offers needed oversight and protection for all investors.

Rich Hazel — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rich Hazel The SEC has a duty to protect investors of all types. A change from quarterly to semi annual reporting reduces the protection that small and independent investors need. Any benefit of a change from reporting four times per year to only twice per year is more than offset by the disadvantaging of small investors. I strongly oppose this change and encourage retaining quarterly reporting.

Richard Alexander — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Alexander I strongly disagree with the proposal to move to semiannual reporting, and urge the SEC to retain quarterly reporting in order to protect individual investors. Quarterly reporting protects individual investors. Semiannual reporting doubles the information gap between insiders and ordinary shareholders. That gap is where volatility, uncertainty, and mistrust grow. The short-termism diagnosis doesn't justify this remedy. Research from the CFA Institute, which studied this exact maneuver in the U.K. market, shows that reporting frequency has no measurable effect on corporate investment behavior. The SEC is accepting a real cost – less transparency for individual investors – for a benefit that the evidence says simply won't materialize. The companies most likely to opt out are the ones where oversight matters most. Smaller, less-covered businesses operate with less scrutiny. Reducing their reporting requirements makes them harder to monitor, not easier to own. This is the wrong direction. Reg FD moved toward a more level playing field. This proposal moves away from it. What, exactly, is the problem? As the WallStreetBets comment letter put it: "The companies we trade are not being held back from greatness by the obligation to file four reports a year. ... The entire S&P 500 files a 10-Q every quarter, and the S&P 500 is at an all-time high. If quarterly reporting is crushing American capitalism, American capitalism is hiding it well."

Richard F. Ofeldt — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard F. Ofeldt Please do NOT approve the proposal to have companies report every 6 months instead of quarterly. This is an absolutely terrible proposal. The implementation of this change would have numerous negative effects: 1. It would allow corporate criminals more time to "hide" their illegal manipulation of financial statements. This change would benefit crooks to the detriment of investors. 2. It would give institutional traders a huge advantage over retail investors and they have more contacts from whom they can obtain interim information. 3. Financial decisions need to be timely - delaying the available information by an additional 3 months means that critical, timely decisions will be impossible to make.

Rickey Hall CPA, retired — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rickey Hall As a retired CPA and former Treasurer for a publicly traded company, I strongly opposed to reduces the frequency of public company reporting from quarterly to semiannual. Such a change weakens market transparency as well as weakens management diligence as it relates to even internal management information and conversations. I would also point out the most of these public companies have debt that require financial reporting of 10Q quality to debt holders at least quarterly. Some debt covenants have limited reporting weekly. As to burden, I would state that, in today's level of automated capture of transactional information that any publicly traded company that "struggles" with reporting on a quarterly basis, such company should probably have a qualifying opinion as the state of controls over information is suspect at best. Again, today, I would suggest that any company that cannot produce financial information of 10Q quality at even a more frequent interval such as monthly or weekly fails to have the information needed to manage a publicly traded company. In 1990 when I worked at GTE in reporting, we produced our quarterly financial statements before footnotes for the 10Q in 10 business days. That was the strength of our manual control systems. Any company should be able to accomplish the same with far less today. I strongly urge the SEC to maintain the current quarterly reporting requirement and to consider just the opposite of requiring even more frequent financial disclosures. Thank you for your consideration.

Robert Calloway Retired teacher and investor. — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Calloway Why would you make a rule to increase distrust of our institutions and open the door for shenanigans and self dealing and create more reasons for disinvestment? How would this insentivise anyone to trust enough to invest?

Robert Constantin Small business owner — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Constantin I am opposed to semi-annual reporting because lack of information will negatively impact small investors as well as fund managers. This will undermine investor trust in American equities ultimately destabilizing the stock market.

Robert L Childers — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert L Childers Don't reduce transparency.

Robert Marske Private investor — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Marske To whom it may concern: I wish to submit my comment in strong opposition to the proposed semiannual reporting rule. Things change so quickly in the modern economy. Six months is just too long. Quarterly reports are watched as closely as economic indicators. Just like monthly housing starts and retail sales, quarterly financial reports are vital to informed decision making. Please do the right thing and drop this proposed ruling. To do otherwise would be a huge mistake and a disservice to every American investor.

Ronald Quick — Jul 2, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ronald Quick This should be stopped. They need accountability to shareholders.

Rose M. Rock — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rose M. Rock To whom it may concern: Please keep the quarterly reporting requirement so that investors have the most current information available to accurately track trends affecting their investments. Investors rely on many sources, such as the Motley Fool and others, for up to date recommendations about the market. Our sources will be less informed and effective if reporting is reduced. Thank you for your consideration.

RoseFriedlander — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-13 From: RoseFriedlander Please keep reports quarterly. We need transparency. We need know about ballooning debt, failed product launches. We remember Enron and Bernie Madoff. . You savings in accounting fees are a bad tradeoff for us ordinary investors.

Ruben Pacheco Sales Manager — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ruben Pacheco Please do not pass this, it would severely hurt the common individual investor. The research has proven that a lock of information hurts individual investor and only enriches insiders.

Rudy R Lin NO.. — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rudy R Lin I disagree to change the reports for public listed companies from quarterly to biannually. Timely reports by management to stockholders are given not only about the business update, but also the trust stockholders put on to the management. Biannual report will lead the erosion of the trust and reduce the urgence of timely performance by management. It also encourages management to do a sloppy job. I strongly disagree the change of the reports from quarterly to biannually. Rudy R Lin

---

Russell Blahetka Retired Financial Advisor and CFP(r) Investments Instructor — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Russell Blahetka I oppose this change for the following reasons: * The concern of reporting financials on a quarterly basis is onerous to the corporation is unfounded. Corporations use computerized accounting systems, and while good corporate governance mandates review of accounts, the difficult work of collecting and processing said information is mostly automated. * Corporations which find the reporting task to me onerous should not be public. This is a well known requirement for public companies, and should be taken into account in the decision making process. The quarterly reporting structure is needed for shareholders to make informed decisions on their holdings. Corporations are loathe to report "bad numbers", but this information is critical for shareholders. Management's purpose and responsibility is the increase in shareholder value given the opportunities and restrictions in the corporation's industry(ies). Management is beholden to the shareholders, not the other way around. * Quarterly reporting is qualitative as well as quantitative. Management provides operational and strategic information as to the current health and directions of the company as well as potential issues, such as lawsuits.

Shareholders need this information. * History has shown if management can either not report results, or issue incomplete reports they will. This is at the expense of the of shareholders.

---

sam joyner jr none — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: sam joyner jr I think companies should still give quarterly reports and not move to twice a year reporting.

Schmitt Nicolas The Motley Fool Community — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Schmitt Nicolas As a private investor, I am not comfortable to have the reporting reduced from 4 to 2 per year. This would diminish my confidence in the stock market.

Scott Leavitt Florida Certified Public Accountant — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Scott Leavitt I oppose the elimination of the requirement for public companies listed on US stock exchanges to file quarterly financial reports (10-Qs). It reduces transparency of the results and financial position of the related companies and would be to the detriment of individual investors especially related to having timely information for decision making.

Sebastian Garces CEO - Investment Advisor Representative — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sebastian Garces Good morning, Please keep quarterly reporting in place. The information allows for better research and price discovery. These changes will be expensive for research companies to adjust to and will make some historical information irrelevant. In addition, advances in artificial intelligence will surely allow companies to more easily meet the requirements in the future. There's simply no good reason to change a system that isn't broken. More information and transparency, not less. Thank you, Sebastian Garces Annualitix

---

Shamaya P. Entrepreneur — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shamaya P. I am a young lady entering the world of entrepreneurship and investing. Having access to mandatory quarterly reports from these companies not only increases my trust in putting my money into their business due to the transparency, but it only makes sense. A corporation only financially reporting twice a year leaves much room for fraud, scamming, and an uneven playing field for the average retail investor. It's quite obvious that this is tailored in favor of companies and big player investors, but they wouldn't be a thing without the people. You can't shit on the people and expect them to continue to support you. This transparency we have now allows for informed decision making among retail investors. The only benefit I can think of for this proposal would be less stress on the companies, as they'd have one less thing to worry over for compliance. Outside of that, I don't think changing a system that's working just fine for both parties is necessary. It sounds like a waste of time, energy, and paper. Perhaps you should reconsider. If you really wanted to make things a bit easier for the companies, take away 1 mandatory reporting date. It wouldn't be quarterly, but there also wouldn't be too big of a gap between reporting times. Retail investors would still need to adjust over some time, as will companies, but I think this is a more viable solution than taking away 2 reporting dates.

Sharon Dever Retired — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sharon Dever Sharon Dever, Retired Keep the financial reports quarterly! I remember Enron- I want to be kept up-to-date on my investments and the details of what is occurring with my investments.

SL NASH — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: SL NASH Quarterly earnings are not just numbers on a page—they're the lifeblood of transparency and accountability in today's economic landscape. Especially with the current administration, these figures serve as a crucial barometer of economic health, corporate responsibility, and investor trust. When earnings dip or skyrocket, it’s a clear message to stakeholders about the direction and integrity of the business—and, frankly, about whether those in charge are actually competent or just riding the wave of political rhetoric. In an era where spin and smoke screens are the default, quarterly earnings cut through the noise, exposing who’s really pulling the weight and who’s just good at PR. So yes, these reports matter—more than ever—because they show us whether the so-called leaders are delivering results or just playing political games with our money. Don't be fooled by the smoke and mirrors—these earnings reveal the real story, and it’s time everyone paid attention

---

Stephanie Harvin Retired Post and Courier editor — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephanie Harvin Do not allow this change. It will affect the small investor from seeing trendlines in stocks. This experiment has already been tried to the country’s detriment.

Stephen Bornholdt — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Bornholdt I appreciate the opportunity to comment on the Proposal to Allow Optional Semiannual Reporting. I am strongly opposed to the proposed change to allow companies the option to reduce the frequency of financial reporting from quarterly to semi-annually. I do not believe the proposed rule is in the best interest of company owners (shareholders) and other financial statement users, nor would it have a material impact on management plans to become or remain a public company. I welcome the SEC’s interest in reducing the burden of reporting for public companies, but I do not believe the estimated cost savings outweigh the loss of crucial company performance information to financial statement users. Timely and accurate information is a key requirement for efficient markets as well as informed investors and lender decisions. Reducing the frequency of such financial information will hurt investors’ ability to obtain reasonably current information about changes in a company’s business, its management explanations, plans and the current performance of public companies. It will also have a more adverse impact on retail investors who do not have the staff and resources of large investors and lenders for in-depth company research. I believe a more effective path for time savings would be for the SEC to investigate possible modifications to quarterly reporting requirements to determine whether there are existing quarterly reporting requirements that could be reduced or curtailed based on feedback from the financial statement users and preparers (i.e., which disclosures are least useful to them). As a long-term investor as well as former auditor, and more recently, preparer of quarterly and annual financial statements, I know the critical importance of accurate and current financial information for financial statement users as well as management. The focus and discipline that quarterly reporting instills is a strong control over the accuracy of the underlying financial data. Significant matters must be reported on Form 8-K and are very useful for identifying individual events that may be of importance to financial statement users. However, 8-K reports fall far short of providing comprehensive information available in 10-Q reports. 8-K reports cannot fill the void of information from eliminating two out of the three current interim reporting periods. Finally, the desire to foster a longer-term business focus rather than short-term results is a laudable goal. However, whether to focus on short term results or long-term goals is a fundamental leadership decision by a company's top management and board of directors. I believe the proposed rule is unlikely to change that focus, only stretch it for an additional three months for those who decide to emphasize short-term motivations.

Stephen Fischer — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Fischer I am an individual investor that relies on the disclosure of information disclosed by companies to make decisions about what companies to invest in. I do not have access to private research like institutional investors. This action would hinder seniors access to information for retirement savings.

Stephen Ralph Boswell Retired Contracts Manager at TRW — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Ralph Boswell It is very important to me to have quarterly financial reports on my brokerage account and my IRA account.

Sterlin Pendergrass — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sterlin Pendergrass Keep quarterly reporting to ensure maximum transparency.

Stuart Porteous None — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stuart Porteous I need quarterly reports to stay on top of my portfolio. With the advent of ai, reports should become more frequent not less. I would appreciate monthly reports.

Sunny Scarborough Long-term Care Surveyor for TX HHSC — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sunny Scarborough I am relying mostly on my investments to support me in retirement. I was a stay-at-home parent for over a decade, so my SS will be more limited. My investments are all I have. Please keep them transparent by keeping quarterly.

Susan Constantin Retired Educator — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Constantin I am strongly opposed to reducing corporate reporting to twice yearly. Lack of information will be catastrophic to investors and fund managers significantly weakening public and private retirement systems.

Susan Green None — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Green I think it's a terrible idea to have businesses report every 6 months. 3 months is tough enough. I invest for my retirement and I am afraid that this makes everything more risky. Please don't make this change.

Susan Rutan — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Rutan I support maintaining quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. Regular financial disclosures promote transparency, accountability, and informed decision-making for investors. As an individual investor and retirement saver, I rely on timely public information to understand how companies are performing. Reducing reporting frequency could make it harder to identify risks early and would provide less transparency for everyday investors. Please preserve quarterly reporting requirements.

Tamiko W — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tamiko W Please keep quarterly reporting. Small investors and businesses will be lost

---

Tangela Steele-Bryant — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tangela Steele-Bryant If the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission were to adopt a proposal requiring public companies to report financial results only twice a year (semiannually) instead of quarterly, there are several strong arguments against the change from the perspective of investors, market efficiency, and corporate governance. 1. Reduces Transparency Quarterly reporting provides investors with regular insight into a company's financial health. Moving to semiannual reporting would: * Leave investors with six months of limited financial information. * Increase uncertainty about company performance. * Make it harder to identify deteriorating financial conditions before they become severe. 2. Increases Information Asymmetry With fewer required disclosures: * Institutional investors may still obtain information through management meetings and industry research. * Retail investors would have fewer reliable public updates. * The information gap between large and small investors could widen. 3. Increases Market Volatility Instead of four earnings releases each year, companies would report only twice. This could lead to: * Larger earnings surprises. * Bigger stock price swings. * Increased uncertainty between reporting periods. Smaller, more frequent updates generally allow markets to adjust gradually rather than all at once. 4. Makes Fraud Harder to Detect More frequent reporting creates more opportunities for: * Auditors * Investors * Analysts * Regulators to identify accounting irregularities early. Longer reporting intervals could allow financial problems or misconduct to go unnoticed for longer. 5. Weakens Price Discovery Financial markets work best when prices reflect current information. Quarterly reports provide updated data on: * Revenue * Earnings * Cash flow * Debt * Margins * Capital spending With only two reports each year, stock prices may rely more heavily on speculation, rumors, or unofficial information. 6. Reduces Accountability Quarterly reporting requires management to regularly explain: * Strategy * Risks * Operational performance * Future outlook Less frequent reporting could reduce management accountability to shareholders. 7. Hurts Small Investors Professional investors often have access to: * Industry experts * Supply-chain data * Alternative datasets * Satellite imagery * Credit card spending trends Retail investors rely far more on SEC filings. Less frequent reporting may disproportionately disadvantage them. 8. Encourages Rumors In the absence of official financial updates, markets may place greater weight on: * Social media speculation * Analyst rumors * Leaks * Unverified news This can contribute to unnecessary volatility. 9. Delays Recognition of Economic Changes During periods of rapid economic change—such as recessions, inflation spikes, or industry disruptions—quarterly reporting helps investors assess how companies are adapting. Waiting six months could mean investors are making decisions using outdated information. 10. May Increase the Cost of Capital Investors generally demand higher returns when there is greater uncertainty. If financial information becomes less frequent: * Investors may perceive greater risk. * Companies could face a higher cost of raising capital through debt or equity. 11. Analysts Would Have Less Reliable Data Equity analysts update forecasts using quarterly financial statements. With only semiannual reports: * Forecasts may become less accurate. * Valuations may rely more on estimates. * Earnings revisions could become more abrupt. 12. Global Competitiveness Many international investors expect frequent financial disclosures from U.S. public companies. Reducing reporting frequency could make U.S. markets appear less transparent relative to other major markets that emphasize timely disclosure.

The Motley Fool Community — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. This is a mistake. At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Theresa Engineer — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Theresa Do not pass this! Regular investors, the majority of us, need to have AT LEAST quarterly reports. Monthly would be better. Do not allow companies to work more in the shadows nor allow the 1% to make insider trades (which are illegal but who's be prosecuted lately - no one) during that time while regular investors have no transparency. Thank you.

Theresa Klemkowski — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Theresa Klemkowski I think the reporting should remain quarterly. We have seen what can happen with corporations when they are not held accountable.

Theresa Wisinski — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Theresa Wisinski Quarterly reporting should be maintained. Companies will still maintain internal month end records, as well as reporting quarterly to there board of directors. Therefore, there is no extra work in reporting to SEC on a quarterly basis. The only result will be non transparency and potential fraud against retail shareholders.

Thomas Marsh — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Marsh SEC, My name is Thomas Marsh. As a retired

pipefitter, who has traveled the US, for work, for 45 years, I have observed many instances of corruption in this country by politicians, corporations, even individuals. It is an integral aspect of human nature that is obvious to anyone who takes the time to odserve it. While at times it may be minor, our recent history is littered with outrageous examples. This is why I am confused with the point of SEC Rule S7-2026-15. With the greed and corruption prevalent in today's world and with experience with corporations in the past, what is the point? Corporations have always taken advantage of any opportunity to make money, whether immoral or outright illegal. People haven't changed for the better when it comes to money. CEO's earn enough money for themselves, they should be able to take the time to review and sign four reports in a year, instead of just two, so the public and investors are up to date with the status of a public company. Let's continue to make these corporations accountable, as opposed to giving them more time to do whatever they can get away with. We are aware that not everyone is corrupt, but it is the purpose of the SEC to watch and prevent such corruption. Everyone is aware of what voluntary compliance breeds, and as far as corporate attitudes, that is the point of SEC Rule S7-2026-15.

Tina Williams Retired CFO — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tina Williams Keep reporting quarterly. Transparency breeds honesty!

Todd Scorza — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Todd Scorza 1. Information asymmetry favors insiders and sophisticated players Quarterly reports are one of the few periodic, standardized windows retail investors get into a company's actual performance. Cutting that window in half doesn't eliminate information flow — it just shifts more of it to informal channels: analyst calls, expert networks, private meetings with large institutional holders. Insiders and well-connected funds already have informational advantages; six-month gaps widen that gap rather than closing it. 2. Markets price in uncertainty, not just information Even proponents of "long-termism" concede that markets hate uncertainty. Extending the reporting gap means more time for rumor, speculation, and unverified claims to move prices between actual disclosures. Rather than calming short-termism, thinner information flow can increase volatility around each report, since more accumulated uncertainty gets resolved in a single data dump. 3. Fraud and deterioration take longer to surface Quarterly reporting acts as a forcing function — companies must regularly reconcile books, and auditors/management have to catch problems before they compound. Enron, WorldCom, and more recent cases like Wirecard show how much damage can accumulate when reporting intervals lengthen or controls weaken. Halving the disclosure cadence gives management twice as long to paper over deteriorating fundamentals, cash flow problems, or channel-stuffing before it becomes visible externally. 4. The "short-termism" diagnosis is weakly supported The core argument for semi-annual reporting is that quarterly pressure forces executives into short-term thinking at the expense of long-term investment. But the empirical evidence is mixed at best — many chronic underinvestment problems (buybacks over R&D, for example) are driven by executive compensation structures tied to stock price, not by disclosure frequency itself. Changing the reporting calendar treats a symptom while leaving the actual incentive structure (equity comp, activist pressure, M&A dynamics) untouched. 5. International comparison doesn't clearly support the switch The UK moved away from mandatory quarterly reporting in 2014, and the evidence on whether it improved long-term investment behavior is not conclusive — many UK companies kept voluntarily reporting quarterly anyway, because investors and analysts still demanded the data. That suggests the "problem" of quarterly reporting frequency may not be the demand-side driver of short-termism that its critics claim. 6. Smaller investors lose the most Institutional investors have the resources to demand supplemental disclosure, run their own diligence, or get access to management directly. Retail investors and smaller funds rely much more heavily on the standardized, legally-mandated disclosure quarter reports provide. A move to semi-annual reporting effectively transfers information cost from large sophisticated players (who can extract data other ways) to smaller ones (who cannot). 7. Capital costs could rise Reduced disclosure frequency increases estimation risk for analysts and investors, which tends to widen bid-ask spreads and can raise the cost of capital — the opposite of what proponents claim the change will achieve. Some studies on reporting-frequency changes find that firms that voluntarily reduce disclosure see wider spreads and increased analyst forecast dispersion, both proxies for higher uncertainty premiums.

Trinidad J. Castro Former teacher, retired. — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Trinidad J. Castro Comments attached.

V — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: V Continue allowing regular investors to see their status. In 6 months a lot of things can happen. And they would be nothing that we could do about it. Which is unfair.

Victoria Knippel Retired — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Victoria Knippel It is important to keep quarterly reporting as it maintains a timely necessity for trading transparency.

Vijay Sarathi — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vijay Sarathi If a company is publicly listed, then it owes its investor updates at a reasonable frequency (quarterly frequency is not too onerous or expensive) .. if the management is doing it's job well, then investor reporting need not feel burdensome ..

Warren J gross — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Warren J gross Keep filing periods quarterly.

William Sheffield Surveyor, Logistics Supervisor — Jul 2, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Sheffield To Whom it May Concern, We have seen, time and time again, the power grabs by major corporations that have slowly eroded our ability as citizens to properly engage in politics, the market at large, and have made it more difficult for many smaller businesses to have a fair shot at expansion. I see this rule as yet another way to make it harder for the layman or business owner to enter an already complex system. There are many people who are not yet players in the market that could help make it stronger and businesses not yet created that could change the world. If passed, it would be common sense to NOT enter the wider market unless you have intimate knowledge of a certain business' practices. It would also make it extremely hard for new IPOs to kick off due to reporting gaps and lack of assurances on returns due to said gaps.

How does this lack of reporting bring clarity or stability to a market that is already so volatile? What does this level of reporting do other than keep secrets for the companies that have already made it big? How does this ease the minds of those ignorant of how things work when they finally have enough to invest? How does this help financial advisors properly assess the markets for their clients? Essentially: how does this new suggested level of reporting bring more capital into the system? The fact is: it doesn't. It has a probability of doing the exact opposite. We the people must have trust in the foundations of our economy; this new suggested level of reporting entirely erodes that trust. I urge you to not allow this rule to pass. Thank you for your time.

A, Crabb The Motley Fool Community — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A, Crabb I strongly disagree with the idea of reducing public companies' quarterly financial reports to semi-annual reports. Individual investors like myself are already less informed than large (more connected) investors. Please don't take away two reports per year! Thank you.

A. Stone Small Business Owner — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A. Stone Please keep the mandate for quarterly reporting. The benefits of transparency far outweigh the costs. Investors, meaning owners, have a right to information about the companies they own. This administration promised transparency. Please follow through. The other argument is that quarterly reporting creates quarterly earnings pressure. The expectations of some company owners can be moderated by means other than withholding information from all owners. Please respect the rights of responsible owners.

A. Traill — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A. Traill I am against changing corporate reporting periods from quarterly to semi-annual. The world and the President's whim changes too quickly to extend reporting periods for corporations that rely on investments from firms and individuals. Not knowing impacts in a timely manner will negatively affect thise investments, especially the average American with smaller investments. It also encourages greater risk by companies and potential for false reporting as the average investor will not audit six months worth of records and companies may become lax on record keeping. This does not serve the interests of corporations, investors, or Americans.

Aaron Torgerson — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aaron Torgerson AGAINST the rule change: Quarterly reporting is critical for individual investors to ensure that their investment hypothesis remains intact. Halving that means that there is less information available to investors and less transparency. Let’s make quarterly reporting easier with better tools including AI. Don’t torpedo transparency at the very moment that it is becoming easier than ever to uphold it!

Abhi Kulkarni — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Abhi Kulkarni Quarterly reporting is very important for balancing 401k portfolio options. It should be actually more than quarterly as things can change rapidly. Having to wait 6 months to get information is ridiculous idea.

Alan — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Quarterly reporting should stay mandatory for at least the big companies, like those in the index funds. The companies can still make long term decisions and actions, it shouldn't be at the expense of retail investors who could not make informed decision without these reporting. Saying that the reporting is a burden or a waste of company resource is an excuse to hide management's wasteful behavior in other aspects. If quarterly reporting becomes optional, companies will slowly switch over, and less information will be revealed over time and opportunity for fraud will likely increase. Regular investor will be required to take on more risks to achieve wealth, while company managements in general will adapt a norm of corruption.

Alexander none — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexander I believe reports need to come out quicker than a quarter, the longer the time between reports the more insider trading and other nefarious actors can do

---

Alisha — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alisha I would like to not be the last to find out how my shares are doing or if everything is going downhill and I should have done something sooner.

Amanda Light — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amanda Light My name is Amanda Light, I’m a former letter carrier. Please continue quarterly reporting, I don’t want my retirement funds to be mis-invested due to reduced reporting by companies. It will dismantle retirement funds and probably lead to them going bust for working people like me. I want to retire someday, I don’t want to work until I die.

Andrew Cowan Retired — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Cowan It is important to keep the SEC reports on a quarterly basis. It is a means of checks and balances for multiple reasons. -First as an investor, one can stay ahead of potential issues that might drastically affect their returns. Not all companies are as honest or ethical others but I believe that they would be committing a felony by knowingly filing a false report to the government. -Second as a retired smaller investor, I don’t have the ability to recover a large loss lick larger investors might. I would not recover from such a loss and it could be the ruin of my families future and ability to sustain my wife and myself. Thank you for considering my thoughts on this issue.

Angela Lepird — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Angela Lepird copy@kkeep it quarterlyeepitquarterly . org

---

Anonymous — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Dear Commissioners: Please keep the companies reporting period quarterly. If the reporting period is semi-annual that would be half the transparency. Keep the reporting period quarterly. Thank you

---

Anonymous — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous To the Commission: I oppose the proposed semiannual reporting rule. I am a newer retail investor. I am not pretending to be a portfolio manager, securities lawyer, or analyst. I am still learning. But I am educated, technically capable, and determined to do the work and not to invest blindly. I read filings because I know I am already at an information disadvantage. That is the point. I do not have management access. I do not have expert-network calls. I do not have proprietary data feeds, analyst terminals, or a research department. I have EDGAR, public filings, and whatever crumbs I can verify from the outside. Quarterly reports are one of the few places where a normal outsider can get standardized information at roughly the same time as everyone else. They are not perfect. They are not easy reading. But they are public, structured, and required. A voluntary earnings release is not the same thing. The proposal describes this as flexibility. From where I sit, it looks like giving the better-informed party the option to disclose less. Management already has the numbers. Investors do not. Letting management decide whether public investors get Q1 and Q3 reports is not a neutral procedural change. When that information is delayed, the people who can buy substitutes will buy substitutes. The rest of us will wait. The Commission's own release identifies the problem. It says the potential costs of semiannual reporting arise primarily from reducing the frequency and timeliness of standardized public disclosures. It also says longer intervals between mandatory reports may delay material information, increase information asymmetry, and disproportionately affect less sophisticated or less resourced investors who rely more heavily on periodic reports. That is me. That is also a lot of the public market. (Proposing Release at 110.) The Commission should not answer this with a general statement that "investors can use other information." Other information is not equal information. Alternative data is expensive. Analyst coverage is uneven. Company press releases are written by the company. Earnings releases vary in content and may present information differently from Form 10-Q; the SEC's own release notes that earnings releases do not always reflect information in the same manner as quarterly filings and may convey information in a more optimistic tone. (Proposing Release at 97.) There is also an adverse-selection problem that needs to be analyzed directly. The companies most eager to stop filing Q1 and Q3 reports may not be a random group. They may include companies with deteriorating performance, weak analyst coverage, poor controls, high leverage, pending financing needs, insider selling pressure, volatile results, complex segment reporting, or disclosure practices investors already find hard to parse. Those are the companies where timely standardized information matters most. The release says the choice to switch would be voluntary and firm-specific, and that the Commission cannot predict with certainty how many companies will switch. It then assumes 20% adoption, or 1,195 out of 5,976 affected issuers, to calculate aggregate monetized effects. (Proposing Release at 125-126.) That is not enough. The number matters, but the identity of the adopters matters more. A 20% adoption rate made up of stable, well-covered companies is not the same rule as a 20% adoption rate made up of opaque, stressed, thinly followed companies. Before adopting any final rule, the Commission should run and publish multiple scenarios: low adoption, high adoption, and adverse-selection adoption. It should separately analyze smaller issuers, low-liquidity issuers, highly leveraged issuers, companies with material weaknesses, companies with restatement histories, companies with weak analyst coverage, and companies likely to raise capital. It should also estimate the cost to people outside the issuer: retail investors, journalists, employees, counterparties, fraud researchers, cybersecurity researchers, and other users of EDGAR. The proposal also needs a real answer on statutory authority. Exchange Act §13(a) refers to annual and quarterly reports, and §13(c) permits substitute reports where a required report is inapplicable to specified classes of issuers and the substitute reports are of comparable character. A broad self-election by management is not obviously a Commission judgment about a specified class. Nor is one six-month report obviously comparable to two quarter-specific reports. The Commission should explain its interpretation rather than just cite authority. Because courts reviewing agency action decide statutory questions and statutory limits independently, the Commission should address this issue in the final release rather than relying on general policy preference or issuer flexibility. I am preserving these objections for judicial review under the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. §§705 and 706; the Securities Exchange Act, including 15 U.S.C. §§78c(f), 78m, and 78y to the extent applicable; and any other applicable review provision. Specifically, I object that the rule would be arbitrary, capricious, contrary to law, or inadequately reasoned unless the Commission addresses: adverse selection; the unexplained dependence on a 20% adoption assumption; the failure to quantify reasonably quantifiable investor, market, cost-of-capital, and public-information costs; the substitution of voluntary management disclosure for standardized filings; the statutory authority issue under Exchange Act §13; the impact on EDGAR users other than traditional investors; and the loss of contemporaneous Q1 and Q3 information. That last injury is not repairable later. Once a company skips a Q1 or Q3 Form 10-Q, the public cannot go back and make decisions with the information it should have had at the time. A later Form 10-S cannot undo trades, votes, portfolio decisions, fraud assessments, cyber-risk research, or other public-interest work done during the gap. The Commission should withdraw the proposal. If it does not, it should reopen the comment period after publishing a complete analysis of adoption, adverse selection, investor costs, public-information costs, and irreparable harm. At minimum, it should test the idea through a limited pilot with a sunset and a new notice-and-comment process before any expansion. If the Commission adopts the rule anyway, I request that it stay implementation pending judicial review under 5 U.S.C. §705 and any other applicable authority. No issuer should be allowed to omit a Q1 or Q3 Form 10-Q before the rule can be reviewed.

Anonymous — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Corporations have been using the " we have to answer to our shareholders" to justify their most egregious behaviors for decades so reducing even that accountability is not a bonus they deserve. Look around. ACCOUNTABILITY is a NECESSARY deterrent to protect investor interests from the greed of bad actors behavior. RETAIN QUARTERLY REPORTING.

Anonymous — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Keep corporate reporting frequent, fair and transparent for the public. Keep quarterly reporting!

Anonymous None — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Will allow MORE CORRUPTION DJT STYLE.

Armah P. — Jul 1, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Armah P. Thee proposed rule is not in the best interests of the public. Transparency is always better than honesty. Transparency removes the need for interrogation, after negative events necessitate investigation. By reducing the frequency of reporting from quarterly to bi-annually, this proposed rule creates an information void where too many bad actions will take place: insider trading, covering up negative financial data, perpetrating frauds, and the like from dishonest companies/individuals. Reporting quarterly is already stale information from three months prior, if anything, companies should be reporting monthly. Frequent progress reports cannot mask bad activities, but infrequent progress reports do mask bad activities. I understand, there is a financial burden on compliance, but withholding information is not the solution. Reporting every two months may be more acceptable, than monthly reporting. This is not merely about reporting frequency and financial disclosure; companies not doing well, can and will have a negative effect on the real economy. If disclosure is reduced to twice annually, the public will find out too late that all is not well. We will all suffer those consequences.

Ashley Carter Citizen — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ashley Carter The Rule of Law is HANGING BY A THREAD inside Washington DC. What in the name of ALL that is Holy - are YOU at the SEC, GOING TO DO IN RESPONSE? My husband is a former Administrative Judge for Tennessee. We’re both under 55, but ONE YEAR after we married in 22, he developed catatonia, and had to go on Federal Disability. Before we met, my life was a series of unfortunate events that barely gave me time to recover between disasters. My husband by contrast was able to make a plan, save & prepare for retirement. His investments are all we have. “Wellness is a Choice to build a life you don’t need to Escape from.” Ashley Carter-Aaron

---

Benny L Duvall Jr None — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Benny L Duvall Jr Make them keep submitting quarterly!! Not when they want to!!

Bill honea None — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill honea Continue as is.

Billie Leff Technology professional — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Billie Leff Allowing semi-annual financial reporting will increase market volatility and reduce corporate transparency based on similar experiments elsewhere in the world.

Bob Dunn — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bob Dunn I'm against the change of ERs to semi annual. Maintain quarterly.

Bobbi Jo Newton — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bobbi Jo Newton I can see no arguments against our quarterly system. The yearly increase and fraud, and Scam argues strongly for retaining, or making the reporting requirement more frequent.

Brenda Larrick American citizen — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Larrick This is governing by theft ! Taking advantage of American citizens ! Again ! The corruption in this second term (No, Trump did not win the 2020 election !) As President of the United States, Trump is having a detrimental effect on the American population at every level. Be informed that Trump and his abuse of the office of the Presidency in this year of the Lord 2026 will not stand. Republicans robbing Americans blind for more profitable returns for the extremely wealthy people and their conglomerates that Trump has given power to STEAL from the American citizens in these United States is injustice to the core. Americans will not tolerate being attacked monetarily any longer. The business conglomerates taking from their employees is not a wise decision for Trump and his buddies to make now or anytime. We have had enough. The American's loss in job's, wages, and healthcare, affordable food and gas, schooling. Government food, water, and disease safety cuts. The eyes of the public are on all that happens. We are the employees and buyers of products sold by these conglomerates. The American people have felt proded, lied to and priced out of many day to day simple living staples. We have suffered by the inhuman treatment by our own government. Trump and his will feel the pain when this America is done.

Brendan Dailey — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brendan Dailey While reporting quarterly does add some additional burden on smaller firms with less resources, a blanket reduction for all firms from quarterly to semi-annual would reverse safeguards that the general investor public strongly requested resulting in greater investor confidence in the markets.

Brian Struntz — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Struntz Semi-Annual reporting doesn't benefit anyone but the big corporations. Quarterly reporting allows individual investors to make adjustments to their portfolio in a timely manner maximize benefits. Semi-annual reporting allows corporations and CEO's to take advantage of ongoing trends earlier and increase their profits benefiting from what is essentially insider information. Keep Quarterly reporting.

C Russo — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C Russo I support maintaining quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. Regular financial disclosures promote transparency, accountability, and informed decision-making for investors. As an individual investor, I rely on timely public information to understand how companies/investments are performing. Reducing reporting frequency could make it harder to identify risks/fraud expeditiously and would provide less transparency for everyday investors. Please preserve quarterly reporting requirements.

Caljean Retired — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Caljean Continue to use the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and require companies to file quarterly reports. It has worked in the past so why change it?

Carin Zelenko, Director of Capital Strategies, AFL-CIO — Jul 1, 2026
July 1, 2026
Ms. Vanessa Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street NE
Washington, DC 20549
Re: Proposal to Allow Optional Semiannual Reporting (File Number S7-2026-15)
Dear Ms. Countryman:
On behalf of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations (the "AFL-CIO"), I am writing to provide comments to the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "SEC") on its proposal to allow public companies to file semiannual reports instead of quarterly reports. While we agree with the premise that too many CEOs seek to achieve short-term quarterly results rather than long-term strategic goals, semiannual reporting will not fix this problem. CEOs should be encouraged to focus on sustainable value creation through appropriately structured long-term executive compensation plans, not by hiding quarterly financial performance from their investors. We strongly urge the SEC to maintain its existing quarterly disclosure rules to maintain transparency and fairness in our capital markets.
The AFL-CIO is a federation of 65 national and international labor unions that represent nearly 15 million working people. Union members participate in the capital markets as individual investors and as participants in pension and employee benefit plans. Union members and their pension and employee benefit plans routinely use the information provided by Form 10-Q quarterly disclosures to inform their investment decisions. Decreasing the frequency of interim reporting will hurt the retirement security of working people by reducing the availability of information that we as investors have long depended on. Reducing the frequency of public company financial disclosures will also impede capital formation by undermining investor confidence and will diminish capital market efficiency by impairing the price discovery process.
We vigorously dispute the notion that reducing the reporting obligations of public companies is needed to "make IPOs great again." First of all, the decline in the number of public companies is an overly simplistic measure of available investment opportunities. The 1996 peak in U.S. listed companies came during the dot-com bubble when many unprofitable companies arguably went public prematurely. Moreover, today's public companies are far more valuable than they were in 1996. The total stock market capitalization of all U.S. public companies is more than 200 percent of U.S. gross domestic product, up from less than 100 percent in 1996. Today's public companies are much larger in size due to weak antitrust enforcement and loopholes in our securities regulations that have allowed private companies to stay private longer.

If the SEC genuinely wants to encourage more companies to conduct an initial public offering, it should require that all companies with more than 2,000 stockholders go public regardless of whether they are stockholders of record or beneficial owners.2 Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act requires companies to register their securities with the SEC if they have total assets over $10 million and exceed 2,000 holders of record or 500 non-accredited investors. By only counting stockholders of record, widely-held private companies can stay private longer through the use of special purpose vehicles that pool funds from multiple individual investors as a single stockholder of record.3 To close this loophole, the SEC should use its rulemaking authority to look through such arrangements to prevent circumvention of the Section 12(g) limits and, if necessary, ask Congress to revise Section 12(g) to include all beneficial owners.
Moving from quarterly to semi-annual reporting will undermine price discovery in the capital markets and thereby harm market efficiency. Quarterly financial results are used by investors to evaluate a company's financial performance and to predict its future growth potential. Price discovery depends on a steady flow of standardized information across time to forecast a company's future earnings. Mandatory quarterly reporting also facilitates comparisons between companies. Research conducted on a sample of 49 countries has shown that mandatory quarterly reporting (relative to semi-annual reporting) is associated with more accurate earnings forecasts.4 Quarterly financial disclosure is not just important for determining stock prices, but is also used by bondholders and other creditors to evaluate the creditworthiness of companies. Indeed, many corporate bond covenants require quarterly financial reports for this reason.
1 Mark Roe and Charles Wang, "Half the Firms, Double the Profits: Public Firms' Transformation, 1996-2022,
"
Journal of Law, Finance, and Accounting, February 17, 2025, https://doi.org/10.1561/108.00000070.2 SEC Commissioner Alison Lee, "Going Dark: The Growth of Private Markets and the Impact on Investors and the Economy,
" October 12, 2021, https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-statements/lee-sec-speaks-2021-10-12.
3 Center for American Progress,
"How Exemptions From Securities Laws Put Investors and the Economy at Risk,
"
March 22, 2023, https://www.americanprogress.org/article/how-exemptions-from-securities-laws-put-investors -and-the-economy-at-risk/.
4 Andrei Filip, Junqi Liu, and Andreea Moraru-Arfire, "Shaping the Information Environment: International Evidence on Financial Reporting Frequency and Analysts' Earnings Forecast Errors, " Journal of Accounting,
Auditing & Finance, V olume 39 Issue 3, July 2024, https://doi.org/10.1177/0148558X221141568.

The proposed rule anticipates that public companies that select semiannual reporting may still voluntarily provide earnings announcements on a quarterly basis. However, these earnings announcements are typically accompanied by non-GAAP financial measures such as adjusted EBITDA, free cash flow, or adjusted EPS. While Regulation G requires that such non-GAAP measures be reconciled to US GAAP, the more stringent Item 10(e) reconciliation requirements only apply to the use of non-GAAP financial measures in Form 10-Q reports and other filings. For example, Item 10(e) requires that GAAP measures be given equal or greater prominence than non-GAAP measures and requires an explanation as to why the company believes that the non-GAAP measure provides useful information to investors. Eliminating quarterly reporting

Item 10(e) GAAP reconciliations will therefore increase the risk of misleading investors.
Eliminating quarterly reporting requirements will also have the unintended consequence of reducing oversight of the preparation of public company financial statements. While quarterly financial results are not routinely audited, SEC Regulation S-X requires that quarterly financial statements on Form 10-Q be reviewed by the company's external auditor. The Sarbanes-Oxley Act also requires that CEOs and CFOs certify the accuracy of their Form 10-Qs but not their earnings releases. This quarterly review by the auditor and the CEO/CFO certification requirement can help identify accounting problems before they can grow in size. Allowing companies to replace their Form 10-Q reporting with a quarterly earnings release that has not been reviewed by the company's auditor or certified by the CEO and CFO will also increase the risk of earnings misstatements. For these reasons, moving away from quarterly reporting requirements may increase the risk of accounting restatements and even accounting fraud.
Semi-annual reporting will also impose agency costs on investors in the form of increased insider trading. Reducing the frequency of interim financial reporting increases information asymmetries between investors and company executives and creates a larger window of opportunity for insider trading on material nonpublic information. Compared to quarterly reporting, semiannual reporting effectively doubles the amount of time that company insiders will have material nonpublic information of their company's financial results. Existing efforts to curb insider trading through Rule 10b5-1 plans that allow executives to sell shares on a prearranged schedule have not been sufficient, and there is substantial evidence that these plans are used by executives to opportunistically time their insider stock sales.5 As a result, investor confidence in the fairness of our capital markets will be eroded because of the potential increase in insider trading.
Finally, the SEC's cost benefit analysis of the proposed rule relies on a flawed study of survey responses from 187 companies listed on the NASDAQ stock exchange as of March 2019.
5 Tom McGinty and Mark Maremont,
"CEO Stock Sales Raise Questions About Insider Trading,
" The Wall Street
Journal, June 29, 2022, https://www.wsj.com/finance/stocks/executive-stock-sales-questions-insider-trading-11656514551.

Surveys with low response rates can produce skewed results contaminated with non-response bias. Non-response bias occurs when survey recipient's propensity to respond is correlated with the survey variables being measured. In our view, the study conducted by NASDAQ suffers from non-response bias, as companies who find quarterly reporting to be burdensome are more likely to respond. We also note that the survey suffers from sample-selection bias because NASDAQ listed companies are primarily technology-focused growth stocks that are not representative of all public companies. As the study did not provide any characteristics of the respondents, it is impossible to adjust for sample-selection and non-response bias. For these reasons, any attempt to generalize the 2019 NASDAQ study to the broader marketplace is arbitrary and capricious.
In conclusion, we respectfully urge the SEC to maintain its existing quarterly reporting requirements for public companies and to not adopt the proposed rule. While we agree that company executives should be discouraged from making short-term business decisions to meet quarterly earnings estimates, withholding quarterly financial information from investors will not meaningfully address this problem. Managing public companies for the long-term requires that executives consider the impact of their business decisions over years and even decades, not in three or six month increments. Such alignment of interests is best achieved through executive compensation reform, not by reducing the amount of information that is provided to investors. If we can provide more information regarding our views on the proposed rule, please contact Brandon Rees at brees@aflcio.org or Erin Markiewitz at emarkiewitz@aflcio.org.
Sincerely,

Carin Zelenko
Director of Capital Strategies

Carissa Bach — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carissa Bach This must be a maggot act, oops Maga. Thanks maggots. You can not pay taxes for 6 months and hide your crimes longer. Thanks Don the PEDOPHILE CONVICT

Carol Ward Business owner — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carol Ward DO NOT ALLOW COMPANIES TO HIDE THEIR FINANCIALS FOR SIX MONTHS! Are you trying to make it possible for companies to be even more deceptive and corrupt?? We need them to be MORE transparent and accountable in their day to day finances and not give the ultra wealthy more ways to circumvent financial integrity. Carol Ward - a long term small business owner

---

Catherine Herbert — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Herbert Keep quarterly reports to protect investors and enable informed decision making

---

Catherine Reurs VP - Needham Bank, Needham MA (retired) — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Reurs I am writing to the SEC to request that you KEEP the quarterly financial reporting requirement. As a commercial banker for 40+ years (now retired) I well know how CRUCIAL it is to receive current financial reporting from existing and new banking clients regarding banking relationships. So much can go wrong in a 6-month time period. Quarterly reporting requirements are essential to good business & lending practices. Thank you for your consideration.

Charles Cross Retired — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Cross Financial statements are only a burden to those with something to hide. Honest, well managed companies will continue to make them available quarterly and will have them internally anyway for accountability and governance. Don't give in to those who want to hide their activities and risky behaviors. The stability of the International financial system needs to be protected from those who will hide nefarious conduct which leaves the public, investment firms, and businesses in greater jeopardy. Remember the lessons of Enron and of the 2009 Great Recession. Financial controls and quarterly reporting make America stronger and less susceptible to catastrophic failure and fraud! Thank You!

Chase Ryan — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chase Ryan Hello, I oppose the SEC proposal (on S7-2026-15) because it prevents investors and prospective investors like me from information helpful in assessing investment opportunities in a timely manner. If a change is to be considered, please consider monthly reporting. I guarantee the companies have this information readily available each month for their own use and having monthly reporting would provide greater value to investors than quarterly, or, God forbid, semiannually, which leave the majority of investors in the dark for absolutely unnecessary extended timeframes. It seems to me that semiannual reporting verges on being discriminatory or even shady. Please make the right choice and stick with quarterly or monthly reporting. Thank you, Chase Ryan

---

Cheryle Pope Retired teacher — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cheryle Pope I support the four times a year reporting. The quarterly reporting was set up after Enron's dishonesty, and I don't wanna see that go away! Corporations are not known for being terribly honest; they're known for just doing whatever they can to make more money. And they're greedy! So no don't let them get away with just reporting twice a year. That gives them so much time to do all kinds of other things that are not good for the public. I want my quarterly reports.

Christina Lynn-Craig — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christina Lynn-Craig Christina Lynn-Craig, as a senior citizen who has been and is self-employed, my investments in my IRAs are securing my retirement. Without quarterly reporting, it will be difficult to make changes in a timely manner. Income inequality will only become a bigger problem with rules changing to benefit wealthy insiders. I ask you to consider this and to keep reporting quarterly. Thank you.

Christine Bigus — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Bigus As someone who has helped small businesses prepare and submit mandatory filings, I understand the administrative burdens. But these are larger businesses with better resources than many of their investors and their investors need a better financial picture. These aren't small business and investors are not meeting regularly with the officers and directors of these companies . Quarterly reporting gives investors the information they need sooner.

Christine Graham — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Graham How can they even think about considering this!??? With all the corruption, grifting, and open criminal activity within our own WH and Congress, one example being insider trading by our so-called President and his family/buddies, AND dare I mention the Epstein files cover-up, JUST THE IDEA OF BACKING DOWN ON THIS REPORTING IS LUDICROUS!!! BETTER TO UP THE ANTE AND MAKE IT EVERY 2 MONTHS!!! If the SEC does this, they are just as complicit as everyone else in our government who pad the wallets of the top 1% and screw the rest of us 99%. I'm retired and thoroughly disgusted with the way the people are being treated and how the U.S. has lost it's credibility with the rest of the World. WHO IS PUTTING THE SCREWS TO THE SEC TO DO THIS???!!!! AND HOW MUCH ARE THEY GETTING PAID TO DO IT???? ANY BETS IT'S THE RUNNING SCARED GOP !!!!!!!!

Christopher M. Shoemaker Senior Pastor of a Protestant church. — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher M. Shoemaker Greetings, I am concerned about this potential action both for myself and my wife (we have individual retirement investments), and for my congregation. I am part of the church committee who manages the church finances and investments as we work toward a sustainable future of ministry and service to the community. Quarterly statements are a foundation of transparency and accountability. (And in my church, quarterly isn't even enough as we must report monthly.) I cannot see any logical benefit of allowing six month reporting. The economic history of our great country is clear that sunshine grows, shadows wilt. Please maintain quarterly reporting. Thank you.

Clay Malcolm — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clay Malcolm I think it is important to have quarterly reports. Please do not change this to semi annual. Thanks.

Coleman — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Coleman we need all the protection we can get, the government is working for ceo's not us

---

Concerned citizen — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Concerned citizen The current proposed change is the type rule that allows big businesses and corporations to keep the public in the dark. It will unfairly give them an advantage to be less transparent. How is semiannual reporting going to be better for the market? How will people be able to know the performance trend of a business if a report is only available every 6 months? A lot can happen in 6 months and the public would be totally unaware of what is happening and how it affects them. This proposal does not serve the people. Reporting should remain as it currently exists with quarterly disclosures.

Concerned Investor — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Concerned Investor Having access to less data, less frequently is bad for transparency. A lot can change in half of a year. Can you imagine the operations and HR departments of any legitimate business functioning at its most effective with less timely data about its employees and the technologies/equipment they use? The most successful businesses use near-daily metrics for continuous improvement. What investor in their right mind would agree to fewer metrics to make their decisions? Generally, with semi-annual reporting markets will see larger swings in equity prices around earnings announcements since reality, business plan execution, earnings, and balance sheet strength can deviate from guidance over six months time. Post earnings, you would also need to wait another half year for any validation of company guidance. In a world where timely access to material information is increasing, moving from quarterly to semiannual seems antithetical to trends. And this isn't even accounting for unscrupulous captains of industry. Proposal S7-2026-15 brings to mind Alan Greenspan: "In general, corruption tends to exist whenever governments have favors to extend, or something to sell." If I remember correctly, the press paraphrased this as, "I didn't think they would be greedy." Please abandon this proposal. Thank you.

Conor Krekeler — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Conor Krekeler Regarding S7-2026-15 I am a United States citizen in my early 30's. I'm a father and I make my living as a skilled laborer. I would most likely fall into what is left of the lower end of middle class specifically because I have worked towards that lifestyle since my early 20's. I saw my parents tackle every economic downturn and I saw those whose lives were altered forever. I want to retire some day and help my children the best I can as they experience the pitfalls life throws at you. My parents have done the same for me and have taught me how to be financially responsible. I am not a financial expert. It doesn't take a financial expert to know that this is going to be absolutely detrimental if it passes. The only reason this change has been proposed is so that corporations can continue to blur the numbers and keep squeezing the people dry. What possible legitimate reason could anyone have for wanting less accurate information on their financial health? You know it, I know it, we all know it and we're all watching. The fact that this proposal was even accepted is a very sign of how far this country has fallen. Where are those in power willing to do the right thing? Not just point fingers at everyone else for also doing the wrong thing, actually DOING something. I have never been so ashamed of my country. There will be a class war if these predatory policies continue.

Crystal Owner — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Crystal Keeping my freedom keeping my free will keeping my wages keeping my property and not paying taxes on everything all the time till the day you die so the wealthy can keep hoarding money and resources. The monopolies of all these wealthy will be abolished and spread widely evenly to the masses. Wow, this has been eye opening. Our entire system border to border needs to be cleansed of all this current corruption. We will not pay your federal war machine and will not support your budgets nor your wages nor your wasteful aide to country's we never see anything from that you helped all for personal gains. Times up for all this crookedly run country's bogus leadership

---

D Bradley Kent — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D Bradley Kent Since the beginning of business, company executives were held accountable to the company's owners…its shareholders. It is easier and faster than ever to compile financial reporting. I've been a senior officer in a publicly traded company. It's NOT a burden. To allow today's executives to hide from accountability is dangerously irresponsible. A lack of accountability and transparency has always led to trouble: Enron, Credit agencies and banking creating the mortgage crisis…Why on earth would you assume this will improve anything in corporate America? It will just prove you're no longer a regulatory agency, working on behalf of the shareholders and the free marketplace. You will be in their pocket. No reason to fear oversight. Don't be fooled.

Daniel Reynolds — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Reynolds As an individual retail investor since 2014, I read regular news and commentary regarding earnings reports of companies I own from the Motley Fool, as well as numerous other sources, including occasionally reading the reports myself. This proposed change may have made sense decades ago, but particularly as AI is now making a material difference to companies across industries, and the underlying AI is advancing in meaningful ways nearly every month, quarterly reports are even more necessary than before to noticing changes in company performance and future prospects. Really, everything just moves faster now as communication has increased. It is still up to the investor to react (or not) to "short term" information, and it is not, IMHO, the SEC's job to "suggest" by this proposed change that anyone take a longer term view, or be less reactive, or trust the business more, or whatever. The SEC is of greater service in this case by preserving the stability of the existing reporting schedule. To change the dynamics of the playing field in any environment, particularly this one, is needlessly disruptive unless the alternative is worse. I cannot see how leaving the schedule alone is at all worse. The proposed change feels like a solution in search of a problem, I'm afraid. Thank you for your consideration. DR

Danny Henk Retired from Interstate Pipeline Business — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Danny Henk Keep quarterly reporting active. Quarterly reporting keeps CEO's and Hi Level Executives accountable. Extending reporting times will lead to more fraud.

David Sweet Retired — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Sweet I'm opposed to changing from quarterly reporting to semiannual reporting. This limits the amount of information available to the general public and I see no advantage to anyone outside the company.

David Wilson — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Wilson I believe that this proposal should be limited by coporate size. Large companies do not have a large burden when it comes to the expense related to quarterly filings. It is a burden for some small businesses to report quarterly and certainly adds expenses that do not bring a return to offset those costs. So long as banks and bond holders can demand quarterly filings, enforced by the SEC, as part of the corporate borrowing it will protect debt holders. If there is a process to allow shareholders to pass a resolution to require quarterly filing, again enforced by the SEC, this will allow the shareholders to protect their investments if they so determine. I agree with the proposal with the changes I have listed. It does provide relief but allows debt and capital stakeholders to protect themselves with the agency providing enforcement action instead of courts being involved. The size of company required to file quarterly should be determined by more research than I am capable of in this short period. I believe the SEC has information that can be used to determine an appropriate size for a cutoff.

Debbie Richardson — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Debbie Richardson Here are points as to why it’s important to KEEP REPORTING QUARTERLY- Information Asymmetry: Moving to a 6-month model delays crucial financial health indicators, giving corporate insiders a massive advantage over retail investors. Market Volatility: Less frequent reporting can cause massive, unpredictable stock swings when data is finally released after long periods of silence. Reduced Oversight: Less oversight increases the risk of undetected corporate mismanagement, accounting issues, or governance failures. Investor Protection: Small retail investors rely heavily on timely public filings because they lack access to the alternative data streams available to big institutional firms. It is important to keep the information available quarterly for the average investor.

Deborah Retired — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Absolutely must know quarterly

---

Debra Woodard Independent business — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Debra Woodard If people have to pay taxes, quarterly, there's nothing wrong with reporting quarterly. If you have something to hide, then of course you don't want to Report quarterly. Let's make this fair and let's see what you're really doing every quarter just like we have been I see no reason to change it just because you're trying to hide something. Comments attached.

Deloitte & Touche LLP — Jul 1, 2026
Deloitte & Touche LLP
30 Rockefeller Plaza
New York, NY 10112
USA
https://www.deloitte.com
July 1, 2026
Ms. Vanessa A. Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, N.E.
Washington, DC 20549
Re: File No. S7-2026-15; Semiannual Reporting (SEC Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140)
Dear Ms. Countryman:
Deloitte & Touche LLP appreciates the opportunity to respond to the request for public comment from the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "Commission" or "SEC") on the proposed rule, Semiannual Reporting (the "Proposal").
We appreciate the Commission's objective of providing registrants with the flexibility to elect semiannual reporting, and we support its efforts to consider whether a change in reporting frequency could reduce unnecessary compliance burdens and costs. We believe that decisions regarding interim reporting frequency are best informed by companies, audit committees, investors, and other stakeholders (e.g., analysts, banks and lenders, vendors and contractual counterparties, other regulators, etc.).
Based on our experience with a cross-section of registrants of varying sizes and industries, we have observed firsthand the ways in which the existing interim reporting framework supports the quality, timeliness, and reliability of financial information provided to investors, consistent with our response to the SEC's 2018 request for comment on Earnings Releases and Quarterly Reports1. We offer these observations not as a recommendation on whether the Commission should adopt the Proposal, but as technical and implementation-focused input intended to assist the Commission in designing a framework that preserves the quality and reliability of financial information available to investors under any reporting frequency a registrant may elect.

We respectfully encourage the Commission to consider the specific areas outlined below as the Commission completes its deliberations.
1 Refer to Deloitte & Touche LLP's letter dated March 20, 2019
1
Importance of high-quality reporting
Transparent and reliable financial reporting is fundamental to the disclosure framework created by the SEC that underpins confidence in U.S. capital markets—and this principle holds regardless of whether a company reports quarterly or semiannually. In our view, any framework the Commission adopts should be evaluated against this standard. While markets often react to disclosures made outside required periodic reports, investors do not always understand that these may not be subject to the same safeguards as required filings. Accordingly, we believe it is important to emphasize the distinction between required and voluntary disclosures.
More specifically, Form 10-Q filings (or new Form 10-S filings) are subject to important safeguards that collectively support the reliability of interim financial information, including: (i) preparation of interim financial statements in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America ("U.S. GAAP") and SEC requirements, which provides a consistent and comparable reporting framework; (ii) management's evaluation of, and interim certifications regarding, the effectiveness of disclosure controls and procedures, which focuses executive attention on financial reporting quality; and
(iii) independent auditor review2
, which supports the timely identification of accounting issues, errors, and internal control deficiencies.
We believe that whether information comes from a Form 10-Q, a new Form 10-S, or voluntary earnings releases, investors should continue to benefit from appropriate guardrails and understand where there are differences. We therefore encourage the Commission to consider whether guidance is warranted on how disclosure controls and procedures should operate when companies elect semiannual reporting while also issuing voluntary quarterly earnings releases, particularly in circumstances where quarterly controls are no longer performed, or are performed with less rigor, in the absence of a Form 10-Q filing.
We also encourage the Commission to consider how investors may better distinguish interim financial information subject to auditor review from voluntary information, such as earnings releases, which has not been reviewed.
Control environment considerations
We believe that a robust control environment, supported by the timely execution of controls, is critical to ensuring the accuracy and reliability of financial reporting. Accordingly, companies that elect semiannual reporting would need to carefully assess the effect of the change in reporting frequency on their control environment, including disclosure controls and procedures and internal control over financial reporting (ICFR), to appropriately mitigate risk and support the timely identification and remediation of potential accounting issues and control deficiencies.

2 We believe that auditor involvement throughout the year will remain important, regardless of interim reporting frequency to facilitate consideration of significant financial reporting and accounting matters, implementation of new or revised accounting standards, accounting for complex transactions, and the evaluation of errors and control deficiencies. However, formal review by the independent auditor in accordance with PCAOB AS 4105, Reviews of Interim Information, under which the auditor performs specific actions—including analytical procedures, inquiry of management and review the financial statements for consistency with the auditor's knowledge of the entity, and tie out balances to the accounting records—is currently only required by Regulation S-X, Rule 10-01(d) for quarterly reports on Form 10-Q.
2
This assessment would include evaluating whether controls and processes designed for a quarterly reporting cycle—including period-end close procedures, financial reporting processes, and management review controls—would continue to adequately mitigate risk if performed less frequently or would need to be redesigned or supplemented to remain effective over a longer reporting period. These effects may be more pronounced for smaller reporting companies with less mature financial reporting infrastructures. In addition, changes in the company's control environment may affect the cadence of auditor involvement and the timing of certain audit procedures, potentially compressing the window available for identifying and remediating control deficiencies before the annual reporting deadline.
Broader implications and technical considerations
We encourage the SEC to coordinate with standard-setting bodies responsible for the standards governing interim reporting requirements and related auditor involvement, particularly the Financial Accounting Standards Board ("FASB") and Public Company Accounting Oversight Board ("PCAOB").
Reviews of information other than interim financial information PCAOB Audit Standard (AS) 4105, Reviews of Interim Information, was designed in the context of performing a review of interim financial information prepared in accordance with U.S. GAAP ("interim financial information"). As a result, the existing standards do not provide a basis for an auditor review of information such as earnings releases or incomplete financial statements. Any engagement for the auditor to review such information would require amendments to PCAOB standards and the development of a framework for companies to follow in preparing and presenting that information.
If the Commission determines that further auditor involvement may be warranted, we encourage coordination with the PCAOB to consider the revisions that would be needed to the relevant standards to accommodate such involvement.
Comfort matters
PCAOB AS 6101, Letters for Underwriters and Certain Other Requesting Parties ("AS 6101"), addresses assurance provided in connection with comfort letters to underwriters in capital market transactions.
Based on our experience, underwriters in registered offerings typically request negative assurance with respect to both quarterly financial information and the “change period.” In evaluating whether to provide negative assurance over the change period, the auditor considers, among other things, the guidance in paragraphs 46 and 47 of AS 61013

. Accordingly, if a semiannual filer elected not to prepare,
3 PCAOB AS 6101 paragraphs 46 and 47 states in part:
.46 If the underwriter requests negative assurance as to subsequent changes in specified financial statement items as of a date less than 135 days from the end of the most recent period for which the accountants have performed an audit or a review, the accountants may provide such negative assurance in the comfort letter. […]
.47 However, if the underwriter requests negative assurance as to subsequent changes in specified financial statement items as of a date 135 days or more subsequent to the end of the most recent period for which the accountants have performed an audit or a review, the accountants may not provide negative assurance but are limited to reporting procedures performed and findings obtained [...]
3 and have an auditor review, quarterly financial statements, under existing standards the auditor would be precluded from providing change period negative assurance beyond the stipulated 135-day period.
Our experience indicates that this guidance is well understood in the underwriting community and has operated effectively in a semiannual reporting environment applicable to foreign private issuers and significant acquirees that meet the definition of a foreign business. We also observe that registration statements frequently include other financial information that is not otherwise required under SEC rules and regulations, such as quarterly financial information associated with an audited period(s) in an initial public offering (i.e., selected quarterly financial data) or other quarterly information (i.e., “capsule information” for a recently completed quarterly period). Such information is generally included to enhance the marketability of the offering and to provide trend information or more current data for investors. When other financial information is presented, the underwriter determines whether negative assurance is requested or whether lesser forms of comfort, such as “tick and tie” comfort, are acceptable. If negative assurance is requested, it is understood that the related quarterly financial information must be reviewed by the independent auditor. Accordingly, we believe that the existing AS 6101 framework could continue to be applied when underwriters request comfort in connection with an offering by a voluntary semiannual reporter in the United States.
However, if the Commission intends to allow an auditor to provide change period negative assurance beyond the current 135-day limit, AS 6101 would need to be amended to revise the express limitation in paragraph 47. Removing or extending that limitation, particularly in the absence of intervening review procedures, would inherently increase risk to issuers and investors because of the longer period over which events may occur that cause balances to fluctuate. This may require the auditor to consider the procedures that should be performed before providing such assurance, the language used in the comfort letter, or other steps necessary to address the increased risk. If AS 6101 is modified, or other standards are adopted, we would also encourage the Commission to consider measures that mitigate such risk while still providing a framework that can be applied consistently.

Financial statements for acquired businesses

We recommend that the Commission also address the treatment of acquiree financial statements under Regulation S-X, Rule 3-05, in the context of offerings by semiannual reporters. More specifically, the Proposal does not address how the semiannual reporting election would interact with the financial statement requirements for acquired businesses under Rule 3-05. For instance, it is not clear whether a registrant that has elected semiannual reporting would be required to provide semiannual interim financial statements for a Rule 3-05 acquiree, or whether the registrant could make a separate determination for each acquisition. We recommend that the Commission address this question in the final rule and, in doing so, consider allowing registrants the flexibility to make an acquisition-by-acquisition determination. The circumstances of each transaction—including the nature and size of the acquired business, the availability of its historical financial information, and the significance of the acquisition to the registrant—can vary considerably and may not correspond to the registrant's own reporting frequency. Without such guidance, registrants and their advisors may face meaningful uncertainty in determining the appropriate form and timing of Rule 3-05 financial statements in Securities Act filings. We also believe the proposed changes may lead to complications in preparing pro forma information where the registrant and target elect different reporting frequencies, such as one 4 electing semiannual reporting and the other not electing it. Although periods ending within a quarter of each other may be combined, that presentation may be more difficult for users to understand.

Other technical matters

We note that certain existing accounting standards are premised on, or otherwise refer to, quarterly reporting periods, including guidance relating to earnings per share (ASC 260), hedge accounting (ASC 815), and the timing of equity method investee reporting (ASC 323). If the Commission were to proceed with a semiannual reporting option, we encourage the Commission to work with the FASB, so that these standard setters can undertake a comprehensive review of existing accounting standards and related practice matters to identify and address any conforming amendments that may be necessary.

We also note that, in the proposed Registered Offering Reform rulemaking,4 the Commission is separately proposing to modernize the rules governing the age of financial statements under Rules 3-01 and 8-08 of Regulation S-X by eliminating the income-related conditions in Rules 3-01(c)(2) and (3) and 8-08(b)(2) and (3). We support this modernization because, in our experience, conditioning the extension of the grace period on profitability disproportionately restricts access to capital for certain registrants without any corresponding benefit.

Targeted improvements to interim disclosure requirements

Whether or not the Commission proceeds with optional semiannual reporting, we encourage the Commission to consider targeted modifications to interim disclosure requirements of Form 10-Q. In coordination with the FASB, the Commission could meaningfully reduce the volume and complexity of interim U.S. GAAP disclosure requirements for registrants in a manner consistent with the principles reflected in Regulation S-X, Rule 10-01(a)(5), which contemplate investor familiarity with prior reports and emphasize disclosure of significant changes.

Conclusion

The reliability and timeliness of financial reporting are foundational to the integrity of the U.S. capital markets and to investor confidence in public company disclosures. Accordingly, we respectfully urge the Commission to ensure that any final rule includes the specific implementation considerations described in this letter—including measures to help investors distinguish voluntary earnings releases from filed quarterly reports, guidance on control environment design, and coordination with the PCAOB and FASB on necessary amendments to professional and accounting standards—so that an optional semiannual reporting framework may achieve its intended benefits while preserving the quality and transparency of financial information that is fundamental to well-functioning capital markets.

Further, as the Commission advances its rulemaking agenda, we encourage you to consider the cumulative impact of these rulemaking activities, including how the Semiannual Reporting proposal may interact with recent proposals, such as Enhancement of Emerging Growth Company Accommodations and Simplification of Filer Status for Reporting Companies5 and Registered Offering Reform4
. As each

4 SEC Release Nos. 33-11418; 34-105513; IC-36160; File No. S7-2026-17

5 SEC Release Nos. 33-11419; 34-105515; File No. S7-2026-18 proposal is evaluated individually, their combined effect—including optional reporting frequency, scaled filer-status accommodations, the extent of auditor involvement in quarterly reviews and internal control over financial reporting, and broader access to registered offerings—should be assessed to ensure the proposals, taken together, achieve the appropriate balance between capital formation and investor protection.

* * * *

We appreciate the opportunity to provide our perspectives on the Proposal, and we would welcome the opportunity to discuss these points with the Commission's staff at their convenience. If you have any questions or would like to discuss our views further, please contact Dipti Gulati at (212) 436-5509 or Trevor Barton at (402) 444-1818.

Sincerely,

Deloitte & Touche LLP

Denise Cunningham n/a — Jul 1, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Denise Cunningham I'm an everyday American who works hard, contributes to my 401(k) every paycheck, and invests through mutual funds because I'm trying to build a secure retirement. Like millions of people, I don't have the time or expertise to analyze every public company myself. I rely on timely, transparent financial reporting so that my advisors and I can make informed decisions. That's why I'm concerned about the idea of changing public company reporting from quarterly to only twice a year. I understand that companies would save time and money by filing fewer reports. But it seems like the benefits would go mostly to corporations while the costs are pushed onto everyday investors like me. The people who bear the financial risk are individual investors. We shouldn't be the ones receiving less information. The reports public companies file are one of the few ways investors can understand how those businesses are actually performing. Waiting six months between reports means important changes, whether positive or negative, could go unnoticed for much longer. That doesn't seem like a step toward stronger or more transparent markets. Most Americans don't trade stocks every day. We invest through our 401(k)s, pensions, and mutual funds because we're saving for retirement, our children's futures, or simply trying to achieve financial security. Those accounts represent years of hard work, disciplined saving, and trust in our financial markets. I respectfully ask that you keep the interests of everyday investors at the forefront of this decision. Quarterly reporting is an important part of the accountability that helps people like me feel confident investing for the future.

Diana Berman — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diana Berman I strongly disagree with semi annual reporting by corporations. I rely on quarterly reporting to determine the health of companies I invest in or may want to invest in. Quarterly reporting provides transparency and more up to date information. Yes to quarterly reporting!

Dianne Weiland — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dianne Weiland Quarterly reporting is what keeps Corporations truthful! Keep owners accountable! Do not reduce the accounting cycle reporting!

Dolores N Richard — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dolores N Richard The reporting period must remain quarterly for the protection of investors.

Donna D. — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Donna D. Re: File No. S7-2026-15 — Semiannual Reporting To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I am writing as an individual investor to oppose the proposed optional semiannual reporting framework under Release No. 33-11414. Quarterly reporting is a core protection for everyday investors. CEOs have been required to personally certify their financial statements each quarter under penalty of federal prosecution. Moving to semiannual reporting cuts those certifications in half, reducing a meaningful legal deterrent against fraud. That is not a paperwork reduction — it is a reduction in executive accountability. As an investor, I refer to quarterly disclosures to make informed decisions about where to put my savings. Institutional investors and insiders will still have access to earnings calls, analyst briefings, and other information channels. Reducing mandatory disclosures widens the gap between what Wall Street knows and what ordinary Americans know. That lopsidedness is unfair and harmful to market integrity. I am also very concerned that while this proposal is framed as “optional,” market pressure may effectively make semiannual reporting the norm — particularly for smaller or struggling companies with the most incentive to reduce scrutiny of their finances. The existing quarterly framework has served investors and markets well for decades. With so much opposition from consumer/investor protection advocacy groups and major Wall Street firms opposing this, it begs the question "why is the SEC pursuing it?" I urge the Commission to reject this proposal and maintain quarterly reporting as the required standard. Respectfully submitted, Donna J. DelMuro Bartlett, IL

E L Henderson — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: E L Henderson Crime; corrupt and corporate greed are running our government and our country. We need to keep / put every obstacle in their way to prevent it. Our country depends on it!

Erik Schmollinger — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Erik Schmollinger Dear Ms. Countryman, I am writing as a retail investor who relies on transparent, competitive, and accessible U.S. capital markets. I appreciate the Commission’s ongoing efforts to strengthen market integrity, but I am opposing Proposed Rule S7-2026-15 because, in its current form, it risks creating unintended harm to individual investors, reducing market efficiency, and consolidating advantages among the largest institutional participants. 1. The Proposal Reduces Market Access for Retail Investors Retail investors already face structural disadvantages relative to institutional traders with superior technology, data access, and execution speed. Several provisions in S7-2026-15 appear likely to: - Increase trading costs for small-lot orders - Reduce liquidity available to retail participants - Narrow the set of venues willing to execute retail flow - Introduce operational complexity that disproportionately affects brokers serving individual investors While the proposal aims to improve fairness, the practical effect may be reduced choice and higher friction for everyday market participants. 2. The Rule Risks Concentrating Market Power Elements of S7-2026-15 could unintentionally push order flow toward a smaller number of large intermediaries who can absorb new compliance burdens. This dynamic would: - Decrease competition among execution venues - Reduce innovation in retail-focused trading services - Increase systemic risk by concentrating activity in fewer nodes Retail investors benefit most from a diverse, competitive market ecosystem, not one where only the largest firms can comply. 3. Increased Costs Will Ultimately Be Passed to Retail Investors

---

Erik W Individual Investor — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Erik W To individual investors, quarterly reports are not background reading--they are the primary tool to decide where to place capital, for both near-term and long-term investments our financial future depends on. Quarterly reports also aligned with SEC efforts in 1970 to modernize corporate disclosure requirements. Six months is too long to make informed decisions with. We don't have inside access to a company's numbers--the quarterly filing is the access. Doubling the gap between filings doubles the time we're investing on stale information. Under this proposal, that news can sit unreported for half a year while investors making decisions blind. It widens the gap between insiders and the public stakeholders. Officers and directors still see the real numbers every day regardless of filing schedule. Only outside stakeholders lose visibility when the cadence slows. A longer reporting gap is a longer window in which insiders know more than we do about the company we put capital into. Companies' savings come directly out of investors' pockets. The stated benefit here is lower compliance cost for issuers. That cost is real, but it's the price of accessing public capital, and it's borne by companies with far more resources than the retail investors who absorb the resulting information gap. Cutting a shared public good--timely, comparable disclosure--to fund a private savings for issuers is not a trade investors should have to accept. Less frequent reporting doesn't reduce the cost of producing the information--it just delays when investors get to see it and will eventually lead to erosion of trust in financial reporting. Erik W. Individual Investor

---

Erin Richards — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Erin Richards At a time when government and big business operations are becoming more opaque, and money harder to track on everything from large corporate operations to political spending, please keep the standard SEC quarterly reporting rules. I am “owned” by a public corporation — and I appreciate them having to cough out their data quarterly. There’s enough obfuscation in our times without letting businesses go 6 months before showing their books. It’s also how good journalists can root out malfeasance of shady businesses — what gets reported is what gets tracked and paid attention to. Keep the rule as is for quarterly reports.

Ethan Scott — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ethan Scott I support this proposal wholeheartedly, long term vision is necessary if we hope to have an at all stable economy.

Evan Summers, MBA na — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Evan Summers, MBA I am writing as a retail investor to oppose the Commission's proposal to replace quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q with semiannual reporting on the proposed Form 10-S. Timely, consistent, and transparent financial reporting is one of the cornerstones of fair and efficient capital markets. As an individual investor, I rely heavily on quarterly reports to make informed investment decisions. Unlike large institutional investors, retail investors often have fewer resources to conduct independent research or obtain private insights. Public disclosures made through Form 10-Q help level the playing field by ensuring that all market participants have access to the same material information at regular intervals. Reducing the reporting frequency from four times per year to two would significantly diminish transparency. A six-month gap between required financial reports would allow operational problems, deteriorating financial performance, liquidity concerns, governance issues, or weaknesses in internal controls to remain undisclosed for much longer periods. Investors could unknowingly continue to buy, hold, or sell securities without access to material information that would otherwise have been available under the current quarterly reporting framework. More frequent reporting also promotes accountability. Knowing that financial performance will be publicly scrutinized every quarter encourages management to maintain strong internal controls and promptly address emerging issues. Extending the reporting interval risks reducing that discipline and delaying the market's ability to identify negative trends before they become more serious. Quarterly reporting also contributes to market efficiency by reducing information asymmetry. Less frequent mandatory disclosures are likely to increase reliance on selective disclosures, analyst estimates, rumors, and speculation, potentially increasing volatility and disadvantaging retail investors who depend on official SEC filings. While I understand that the Commission seeks to reduce compliance costs and reporting burdens, those benefits should not come at the expense of investor protection. The Securities Exchange Act is intended to promote transparency and maintain investor confidence. Quarterly reporting has served investors and U.S. capital markets well for decades by providing timely information that supports informed decision-making and market integrity. If there are legitimate concerns about the costs associated with preparing quarterly reports, I encourage the Commission to explore targeted ways to reduce unnecessary disclosure requirements or simplify specific reporting obligations rather than eliminating an entire quarter of required reporting. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission not to adopt the proposed amendments permitting semiannual reporting in place of quarterly reporting. Maintaining quarterly reporting better serves the interests of investors, promotes transparency, enhances market integrity, and preserves confidence in the U.S. securities markets. Thank you for considering my comments.

Franklin Edge D.M.D — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Franklin Edge I am opposed to this change. There should be more disclosure to investment not less. This puts the investor at a disadvantage. Thank you!

Gazing Globe Small buisness — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gazing Globe This bill is against every small buiness and American families! To do this says your greedy and against small buisness and American families!

George Knapp Retired Finance and Internal Audit — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: George Knapp As a finance and internal audit professional who worked for corporations for over 35 years, the Quarterly reporting was /is not a hardship. It has become a part of the normal process, incorporated into the monthly closing routine. Changing to a six month window will result in the board and the general public being without current data on which to make decisions. This will be bad for the companies as well as investors, and opens the door to fraudulent action not being caught as early as it would be currently. In my opinion, the quarterly reporting should be maintained in perpetuity.

Harriet Harris none — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Harriet Harris Please continue to require that public companies submit quarterly reports rather than amending the rule to semi-annually. We need to maintain as much transparency as possible on public corporations. Thank you.

Harry McKay Accounting Manager — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Harry McKay Keep it at 4 times a year

---

Heather — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Heather To the Securities and Exchange Commission, Please accept this comment as an official statement of my opposition to File Number S7-2026-15. Allowing public companies to hide their financial performance behind a six-month semiannual reporting wall is a massive step backward for market transparency. Six months is too long to wait for updated financial data in today's rapid digital economy. This rule will ultimately shield underperforming corporate executives from timely public scrutiny while stripping retail investors of the tools they need to manage risk. Do not eliminate the quarterly 10-Q requirement. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal in its entirety. Sincerely, Heather CO

Heather Bizzell Small Business Owner and Personal Investor — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Heather Bizzell Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission 100 F Street, NE Washington, DC 20549-1090 Re: Proposed Amendments to Exchange Act Rules 13a-13 and 15d-13 â€" Optional Semi-annual Reporting in Lieu of Quarterly Reports Dear Ms. Countryman: I am writing to express my strong opposition to the Commission's proposal to permit companies to file semiannual reports on new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q, as well as the accompanying changes to simplify Regulation S-X regarding the age of financial statements. While the Commission's intent may be to reduce the compliance burden and curb "short-termism" in corporate governance, the proposed rules present risks that outweigh these hypothetical benefits. Decreasing the frequency of mandatory disclosures will degrade market efficiency, severely harm personal investors, increase capital costs, and create a highly fragmented reporting environment. I urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal as reducing the frequency of reporting harms small businesses and personal investors who rely on transparent, frequent reporting to determine investment feasibility and determine sound investment business decisions. If this is administration is the "most transparent in history" then this policy change should increase the amount of reporting, not decrease it. Please reconsider and withdraw this proposal to benefit small businesses and personal investors across this country.

Henry Greenawalt Financial Consultant — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Henry Greenawalt Horrible idea...Companies wish to go public for various reason, predominantly to raise money and garner more shareholders. However, they also create an instrument for "insiders" to exit which wouldn't be as easily available if they weren't publicly traded. With all of these dynamics, waiting every 6 months for financial updates would be detrimental to valuations of companies. Not to mention higher volatility to the overall market.

Herb Muktarian — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Herb Muktarian I am against moving to semi-annual reporting. Quarterly reporting provides valuable insight into the health and financial performance of publicly traded companies, which allows investors, analysts, and advisors to make informed decisions about where to place investment dollars for financial security. Moving to semi-annual reporting makes it much more difficult to assess the performance of traded companies and to identify issues that might sway investment decisions. Retain the current quarterly reporting requirements.

Howard Marshall — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Howard Marshall The only reason anyone wants this is because they are doing something that they know is wrong, or they waiting for this change to go into effect so that they can do something they know is wrong.

I & N Yanasak — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: I & N Yanasak We are strongly opposed to the reduction in reporting frequency. In the interests of transparency and accountability to investors, which includes non-institutional investors, the Form 10-Q must be retained. A LOT can happen in one quarter, and this should be made public every quarter to protect investors. With the Federal government significantly shifting the burden of retirement planning to individuals investing their retirement funds themselves, this corporate information must be kept quarterly.

Individual Day trade — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Individual This is not fair to retail investors and day traders! I worked at Goldman Sachs and quarterly report were a must have for investors, this changing the environment to were only the insiders can know where the company is headed in 6 months is illegal and you know it! This should not change in fact you should require a bi monthly reporting to make it more transparent and accurate! Companies and investors would actually know if fraud is happening!

Individual Engineer — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Individual This is a bald faced act of corruption. The United States Congress has given the SEC the duty to protect investors from abuse by the establishment and enforcement of regulation of business practices. To eliminate the mandate to report quarterly is tantamount to ENRON accounting. Do your job as mandated by congress, quit working for the Pig in Chief and enabling the tyrants.

Iris Heinen Interested investor — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Iris Heinen I would very much like to keep the reporting requirements as they are. Transparency is key!!

Jacob Holloway — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jacob Holloway I strongly oppose S7-2026-15 and believe that quarterly filings should be retained. Efficient markets require timely information. By reducing vetted information available to investors, this rule change would make our financial markets less efficient. It would also transfer power away from retail and institutional investors (e.g. pension funds, endowments) and towards insiders, who would have more incentive to use their influence to game the system than they do currently where their gains thereby would be less. The problems caused by this change are not counterbalanced by any gain. The information still needs to be collected, organized, and reported, just on a less useful timeline. Compliance costs for businesses would not go down significantly. I note that all three current SEC board members are Republicans, and two of them were appointed by a Republican president. This may saddle that party with blame for any ill that comes from this change, and make it harder to sell the change as a good idea instead of a partisan one. For all these reasons, I urge the SEC not to approve this change.

Jake Kuhns, Vice President, Domestic Policy, National Association of Manufacturers; C. Edward Allen, Senior Director, Corporate Finance Policy, National Association of Manufacturers — Jul 1, 2026
July 1, 2026
Ms. Vanessa Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, NE
Washington, D.C. 20549
Re: Comments on Proposed Rule on Semiannual Reporting (File No. S7-2026-15)
Dear Ms. Countryman:
On behalf of the 13 million people who make things in America, the National Association of Manufacturers ("NAM") appreciates the opportunity to comment on the Commission's Proposed Rule to allow public companies the flexibility to report their financial results on a semiannual basis.
As the largest manufacturing association in the U.S., the NAM's membership includes businesses of all sizes, across all industrial sectors, and in all 50 states. Manufacturers collectively contribute $2.94 trillion to the U.S. economy—and right-sized, commonsense regulations are critical to sustaining the manufacturing strength that underpins our nation's prosperity.
Manufacturers welcome the Proposed Rule and the Commission's other rulemakings1 to encourage IPOs and to reduce the significant disclosure costs borne by corporate issuers. While it is not expected that a significant number of publicly traded manufacturers would initially opt for semiannual reporting, the NAM still believes that it would be helpful for the Commission to provide this option, so that each company's board of directors can engage with their investors and decide on the most appropriate cadence for reporting.
Semiannual reporting could be an attractive option for corporate issuers of all sizes, depending on a company's investor base, maturity, and capital needs. Capital spent on quarterly reporting is diverted from R&D, new equipment, job creation, and worker benefits; absent a clear investor benefit, these funds are not being well used to grow the company and increase investor returns. Semiannual reporting also would be beneficial for companies with a longer-term growth trajectory, such as biotech startups and small energy exploration firms, which have management teams and investors that are focused on investing for the long-term.
1 See, e.g., Reforming Regulation S-K (File No. CLL-15); Enhancement of Emerging Growth Company Accommodations and Simplification of Filer Status for Reporting Companies (File No. S7-2026-18)("Filer Status Release"); and Registered Offering Reform (File No. S7-2026-17).

I. Many U.S. Companies Could Benefit From a Semiannual Reporting Option
As part of the Commission's mission to facilitate capital formation and promote market efficiency, the SEC historically has sought to scale reporting burdens based on company size by providing relief to companies that qualify as "non-accelerated filers" or "smaller reporting companies." These disclosure accommodations2 are premised on the reality that smaller issuers do not have the same legal and accounting resources to devote to SEC reporting as a mega-cap issuer. In addition, the Commission typically provides smaller companies with additional time to comply with new disclosure mandates or exempts those firms completely. Similarly, the Jumpstart Our Business Startups Act of 2012 ("JOBS Act"), which created the "emerging growth company" category, reflected the judgment of Congress that IPO companies need more time to grow until they are ready to meet the full array of SEC reporting obligations borne by mature issuers. Thankfully, the Commission does not apply a one-size-fits-all approach to disclosure, and the same premise should apply to the frequency of financial reporting.

Regardless of how many companies may eventually opt for semiannual reporting, the NAM believes that it is important to offer that flexibility3 to all issuers so their executives and directors can engage with their investors and other stakeholders4 and decide on the most appropriate frequency, given the company's resources, capital needs, and growth trajectory.
A. Semiannual reporting should result in material savings for many issuers.
In the Proposed Rule, the Commission projects that a corporate issuer could see a reduction in direct compliance costs equal to $198,000 per fiscal year if it were to opt for semiannual reporting instead of three 10-Q filings.
5 The SEC estimates that the annual direct compliance costs per issuer associated with filing three Form 10-Qs would be $330,000, while the annual compliance costs associated with filing one Form 10-S would be $132,000. 6
While these reporting costs will vary by company, a potential savings of almost $200,000 each year would be a material amount for many small and newly public issuers, as well as other
2 See, e.g., Pay Versus Performance Rule, File No. S7-07-15 (25 August 2022) (smaller reporting companies received reduced data requirements and exemptions from complex metric calculations).
3 Contrary to the warnings of some commenters, a public company that opts for semiannual reporting would not "go dark" for six months. These semiannual filers still would be subject to the Commission's extensive Form 8-K rules that mandate the disclosure of material events within four business days, as well as Regulation Fair Disclosure's prohibitions against selective disclosure. The NAM also expects that some semiannual filers will choose to continue to release quarterly earnings data and hold earnings calls.
4 As the Proposed Rule acknowledges, some companies may need to continue quarterly reporting to maintain their current analyst coverage or to comply with their debt agreements.
5 Proposed Rule on Semiannual Reporting (File No. S7-2026-15) at 104-105 ("Proposed Rule").
6 That estimate doesn't include indirect costs such as the time required for senior executives and board members to review draft quarterly disclosures. One NAM member said it is interested in semiannual reporting to remove the senior executive opportunity cost from quarterly filings, noting: "Our senior executive team, including our CEO, should be using that time in a way that is way more beneficial to [our] shareholders long-term rather than focusing on so much time each quarter."

companies (such as biopharmaceutical and mining firms) that have lengthy product development timelines and may not generate significant revenue for years.
As these companies grow and start to attract analyst coverage and investments by institutional fund managers, the companies may decide later to switch to quarterly reporting after conferring with their investors and analysts. The Proposed Rule includes that flexibility by allowing companies to check a box in their annual Form 10-K to indicate their planned reporting frequency for the coming fiscal year.7
B. Semiannual reporting would help companies with limited accounting support.
Semiannual reporting also would be beneficial for companies that struggle to submit their required filings on time because of limited accounting resources. During the Commission's 2025 Small Business Forum, one panelist observed that reporting requirements are "almost like an endless loop for small companies," and that this burden is borne by "limited accounting financial personnel."8 In addition, many of these small companies have difficulty obtaining sustained attention from registered audit firms during busy reporting periods when larger companies have retained the audit firms' services.

9 In the Filer Status Release, the Commission observed that nearly 40% of smaller non-accelerated filers had failed to file their 10-K annual reports on time and that 18% of those companies had submitted their 10-K filings more than 15 days late.10 It stands to reason that semiannual reporting would be an attractive option for smaller companies that have limited accounting staffs or have difficulty meeting their filing deadlines due to staffing and external auditor inattention, as they could allocate their resources to focus on two reporting cycles a year. The combination of a semiannual reporting and additional time11 for reporting, as proposed in the Filer Status Release, should ease compliance burdens for smaller non-accelerated filers and help them remain public or ease the decision to go public.
7 If a company has a change in circumstance during the year and wants to undertake the additional burden of putting out a Form 10-Q between their 10-S and 10-K filings (or alternatively just submitting three 10-Qs instead of a 10-S), the company should be allowed to do so, as investors would benefit from the additional information.
8 Transcript, Securities and Exchange Commission, Small Business Forum (10 April 2025) at 137, available at https://www.sec.gov/files/2025-SBF-508-Transcript.pdf (comments of Dr. Yunhao Chen).
9 Filer Status Release at 106.
10 Id. at 105.
11 As part of the Filer Status Release, the Commission should consider extending the deadline for the new semiannual 10-S filings by small non-accelerated filers by 15 days (instead of five), given the limited accounting resources of these issuers and the additional time they may need to prepare and audit their financial results over a six-month period.

C. Semiannual reporting would be an appealing option for companies with longer-term growth trajectories.
Academic research12 has shown that more frequent reporting (along with quarterly earnings guidance) can contribute to "short-termism" by company managers and investors. Investor-issuer groups like FCLT Global have warned that an excessive focus on short-term results can discourage public companies from making multi-year investments in R&D, new facilities, or products that create value for shareholders. As FCLT Global, which has surveyed executives and investors, explains: "A majority of corporate executives agree that longer time horizons for business decisions would improve performance, and yet half say they would delay value-creating projects if it would mean missing quarterly earnings targets."13
While some investors may believe that the benefits of receiving quarterly 10-Qs outweigh the risks of short-termism, that assessment will vary by company, depending on a company's growth trajectory and the investment timeline of its investors. Some companies, such as biotechnology, mining, or energy exploration firms, may take years until they generate meaningful earnings, a reality that their initial investors are aware of. It makes no sense to hold these low-revenue, long-horizon companies to the same 10-Q disclosure requirements that apply to a mature company with billions of dollars in revenue from multiple business lines around the world.
Within the private markets, private equity firms typically raise funds from investors and make investments in their portfolio companies over a longer term (such as three or five years). In such a case, those investors are fully aware that they are not going to see immediate returns during the next financial quarter or even the next fiscal year. Similarly, the SEC's disclosure rules should accommodate public companies that have longer-term growth patterns and have investors who bought into that growth strategy. Providing a semiannual reporting option would give these companies more flexibility to invest capital in their business without the pressure to report immediate revenue.

A semiannual option may also help both large and small companies attract more longer-term-oriented investors. An issuer that publicly discloses it is opting for twice-a-year reporting would send a clear signal to investors that more patience is needed if they choose to invest in that company. While such an announcement could deter day-traders and other short-term investors, the benefits of having more longer-term shareholders may be a worthwhile tradeoff for a company. The Commission's rulemaking correctly recognizes that a company's management and board (in consultation with shareholders) would be best situated to make the decision of whether to opt for semiannual reporting.

12 See, e.g., Frank Gigler et al., "How Frequent Financial Reporting Can Cause Managerial Short-Termism: An Analysis of the Costs and Benefits of Increasing Reporting Frequency" Journal of Accounting Research, Vol. 52, No. 2, 2014, available at SSRN: https://ssrn.com/abstract=2493835 ("The cost of increased frequency is that it increases the probability of inducing managerial short-termism.")

13 See FCLT Global, "Our Mission" page, available at https://www.fcltglobal.org/mission/.

D. Semiannual reporting would improve the competitiveness of U.S. companies.

Providing a semiannual option also would enhance U.S. competitiveness, given that most developed nations have already moved to allow semiannual reporting. The United Kingdom, France and most of the European Union, Switzerland, Japan, Australia, Hong Kong, and Singapore all permit (or in some cases mandate) twice-a-year financial reporting for all (or most) companies.[14]

The experience of the United Kingdom is instructive, as it adopted a quarterly reporting mandate in 2007 only to abandon that experiment in 2014. Within three years, 40% of FTSE 100 companies, and over 60% of FTSE 250 companies, had opted for semiannual reporting.[15] The Investment Association, a trade association for U.K. asset managers, urged companies to stop reporting quarterly and providing guidance and to refrain "from engaging in short-term behaviour, such as managing the business to meet quarterly targets rather than developing their long term strategies."[16] [17]

Similarly, Singapore mandated quarterly reporting in 2003 for companies with more than S$75 million ($55.5 million USD) in market capitalization and then reversed course in 2020. "In a rapidly evolving business landscape, it is important for companies to take a long-term perspective on growth, while communicating meaningfully with their stakeholders on how they are navigating through these changes," Singapore Exchange Regulation CEO Tan Boon Gin said at the time, noting "the international trend is moving away from quarterly reporting."[18]

A semiannual option also would make domestic companies more competitive with the foreign private issuers that trade shares in the United States. Under the SEC's current rules, foreign private issuers are not required to file quarterly reports; they only have to report audited financial statements annually via Form 20-K (and provide the regulatory filings they submit to their home market regulator or exchange.)

14 See Debevoise & Plimpton, "The End of Quarterly Reporting in the United States?" (19 September 2025), available at https://www.debevoise.com/insights/publications/2025/09/the-end-of-quarterly-reporting-in-the-united-state.

15 The Investment Association, “Quarterly reporting falls as companies focus on the long-term” (4 September 2017), available at https://www.theia.org/news/press-releases/quarterly-reporting-falls-companies-focus-long-term.
16 Id.
17 Norges Bank Investment Management (“NBIM”), which oversees Norway’s sovereign wealth fund and invests in almost 9,000 companies worldwide, also has called for ending quarterly reporting. In a January 2025 report, NBIM observed: “Regular semi-annual reporting, supplemented with continuous updates of material information, should adequately meet disclosure requirements." Reuters, “Companies should end quarterly earnings reports, Norway sovereign wealth fund says” (21 January 2025), available at https://www.reuters.com/markets/europe/companies-should-end-quarterly-earnings-reports-norway-sovereign-wealth-fund-2025-01-21/.
18 Reuters, “Singapore Exchange scraps compulsory quarterly reporting for companies” (9 January 2020), available at https://www.reuters.com/article/markets/singapore-exchange-scraps-compulsory-quarterly-reporting-for-companies-idUSL4N29E1B1/.

As the President Trump and his administration work to revive manufacturing in the United States and the Commission seeks to encourage more companies to go public, it no longer makes sense to force all U.S. corporate issuers to incur the additional expense of preparing three 10-Qs each year, a burden that many of their overseas competitors can avoid.
***
II. The Commission Should Streamline the Form 10-Q Requirements
In addition to allowing voluntary semiannual reporting, the NAM strongly encourages the SEC to streamline its duplicative Form 10-Q filing requirements, which would benefit public companies of all sizes.
As Nasdaq19 has explained: “Most companies publish earnings press releases that update investors on key financial data. However, they also have to file a formal Form 10-Q document with the SEC, which is time-consuming and provides little additional actionable information, since the press release announcing the earnings serves as the quarterly update that virtually all investors need. In fact, research shows that Form 10-Q filings tend not to elicit any immediate market reaction, whereas earnings press releases do.”
For many companies, the cost of preparing the 10-Q filing outweighs the usefulness of that filing for investors. Accordingly, the NAM recommends consideration of the following reforms:
• In lieu of 10-Q filings during the first and third quarter, the Commission should allow corporate issuers the option of disclosing their earnings information via a press release (accompanied by a furnished Form 8-K filing).
• Form 10-Q submissions should be furnished, not filed. Such a change would reduce the liability risks and costs that public companies face when making these filings.
• Smaller non-accelerated filers should receive an additional 15 days (55 days instead of the 40 days for large accelerated filers) to submit their 10-Q filings, given the smaller issuers’ limited in-house accounting resources and the competition for outside audit services from larger companies.
19 See Nasdaq, “Advancing the Public Markets: Unlocking Capital Formation for a Stronger American Economy” (2026) at 19.

***
The NAM appreciates the Commission's efforts to update its reporting rules. Manufacturers are committed to working with the SEC to adopt commonsense rules that will provide decision-useful information to investors while reducing compliance burdens for public companies of all sizes.
Sincerely,
C. Edward Allen
Senior Director, Corporate Finance Policy
Jake Kuhns
Vice President, Domestic Policy
CC: Chairman Atkins
Commissioner Peirce
Commissioner Uyeda
Director Moloney
7

JAMES STOUT — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: JAMES STOUT No! We have been over-run with rules that benefit corporations but disadvantage the little guy. This is just one more. For Pete's sake! NOOOOOOOOO!!!! Do not institute this rule change! This will flush one more part of accountability down the drain.

Jan Parizek Retired Educator — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jan Parizek Keep the reports quarterly. Period. I want to know what is happening with my investments, and I want the companies to be held accountable more frequently. Jan Parizek, retired educator

---

Jane Ryan Retired — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jane Ryan As a retired state regulator, we required audits and financial statements current within 90 days to examine for qualifications to sell franchises. Financial fortunes can change very quickly and financial statements must be current in order for responsible decisions to be made. Those decisions can impact smaller investors very negatively. Concern for small investors is essential but seems to be disregarded entirely by this proposal. All investors should be protected as much as possible but stale information is like having no information at all. What purpose does this serve? Allowing huge corporations to escape the due diligence that investors should rightly expect is in the interests of those large corporations at the expense of all others. Do you serve the people or only those with largesse? This rule serves the public interest and should be maintained.

Jason Monk-Baumann none — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jason Monk-Baumann I think transparency in reporting corporate revenue to shareholders is a good thing and offers a meaningful value to the relationship investors have with the company. As an investor for retirement accounts myself, I look at the past disclosures when I evaluate whether to invest in a fund, and I look at performance metrics informed by quarterly reporting to evaluate what investments to retain. Please continue and maintain rules for quarterly reporting on corporate revenues.

Jay Fredrickson Business Strategy Consultant — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jay Fredrickson We need transparency and quarterly reporting as a minimum. Anything less allows companies to skate the rules and not share information with owners. This is a terrible idea and must not be implemented. Shareholders shouldn't be left in the dark.

JC Nifty Entrepreneur — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: JC Nifty JC Nifty. Entrepreneur in Reno Nevada. WE MUST HAVE MORE TRANSPARENCY in order to live in a more legitimate nation. After 250 we gotta tighten things up. Even quarterly reporting feels under serving, ought be monthly. These corrupt corporations must have more oversight because they are shaking us all down for our lunch money! Absolutely MUST NOT extend their timeline for them to further entrench their Opaque Practices. 4x a year reporting AT LEAST!!! Please and thank you.

Jeanine White — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Jeanine White Affiliation: Jul. 1, 2026 Update quarterly for stock investors' knowledge.

Sent from my iPhone

Jeneanne Murmann — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: jeneanne murmann Affiliation: Jul. 1, 2026 Companies already track their quarterly performance and make major decisions based upon this results. So the burden of quarterly filing is negligible. Investors and those outside companies should have visibility into the performance and financial health of companies.

Jeneanne Ballos

Sent from my iPhone

Jesse Fried, Professor, Harvard Law School — Jul 1, 2026
July 1, 2026
Via Electronic Submission
Ms. Vanessa A. Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, NE
Washington, DC 20549
Re: Comment on SEC Proposal to Allow Companies to File Semiannual Reports on New Form 10-S in Lieu of Quarterly Form 10-Q Filings Release No. 33-11414; File No. S7-2026-15

Dear Secretary Countryman:
I respectfully submit the attached working paper, “Should Regulators Allow Public-Firm Managers to Unilaterally Reduce Reporting Frequency?, recently posted online at https://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_id=7039063, for inclusion in the public comment file for the above-referenced proposed rule. The working paper analyzes directors’ incentives to reduce reporting frequency. I hope the Commission finds it useful in its rulemaking process.
The paper makes several points.
1. Directors of non-controlled firms will be inclined to cut reporting frequency even when it harms investors and shrinks the economic pie. Such directors share any resulting benefits pro rata but bear few of the costs—and some of those costs are, for them, benefits. Fear of ouster by unhappy investors may restrain directors in some firms, but not in all.
2. In a controlled firm, the distortion is worse, as directors never fear ouster by public investors.
3. If the Commission wishes to ensure that reductions in reporting frequency benefit public investors and do not shrink the economic pie, it should condition any reduction on approval by a majority of the firm’s public investors, whether the firm is non-controlled or controlled.
4. The problems posed by allowing directors to unilaterally reduce reporting frequency in already-public firms do not arise if a lower reporting frequency is chosen at IPO. Terms disclosed before investors decide what to pay cannot expropriate them: those who dislike a low frequency simply pay less, and pre-IPO insiders bear that discount.
There is an important caveat to the analysis: A public firm’s disclosure generates positive externalities for other firms and their investors. My analysis assumes that the reduction in such positive externalities caused by moving from quarterly to semiannual disclosure frequency is not significant. If it is, the Commission should not allow firms to opt for a semiannual cadence, even if public investors approve or that frequency is chosen at IPO.
Respectfully submitted,
Jesse M. Fried
William Nelson Cromwell Professor of Law
Harvard Law School
Should Regulators Allow Public-Firm Managers to Unilaterally Reduce Reporting Frequency?
Jesse M. Fried*
July 1, 2026
ABSTRACT
This essay considers whether regulators should let managers unilaterally cut a public firm’s reporting frequency. It is prompted by the May 2026 SEC proposal to permit managers of domestic issuers to file financial reports semiannually rather than quarterly. I show that managers of non-controlled firms will cut reporting frequency even when it makes investors worse off: they reap the same benefits pro rata but bear little if any of the costs. In fact, some costs translate into benefits for managers. In controlled firms the distortion is worse. Public investors should therefore have to approve any reduction. But before IPO firms should be free to choose the reporting frequency they prefer, potentially subject to safeguards.
* William Nelson Cromwell Professor of Law, Harvard Law School. Thanks to Steve Bainbridge, John Coates, Jack Coffee, Merritt Fox, and Bob Pozen for helpful comments, and to Joshua Koegel HLS

‘27
for valuable research assistance.
1
Part I. Introduction
U.S. domestic issuers1 are currently required to file financial reports quarterly.2 On May 5, 2026, the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) proposed amendments letting domestic issuers opt for semiannual reporting.3 Managers alone would make the choice.4
The SEC’s rationale for this “increased regulatory flexibility”:5 halving disclosure frequency cuts compliance costs, managerial distraction, and short-termism.6 These savings, the SEC adds, could yield another benefit: inducing more firms to go public.7
The proposal raises a broader question: should managers ever be allowed to cut a firm’s previously-mandated reporting frequency without investor consent?8 The question will remain relevant whether or not the SEC’s proposal is adopted. For example, if the SEC allows domestic

1 By “domestic issuer,” I mean a firm traded publicly in the United States that is not a foreign private issuer (FPI), defined infra note [X].

2 Quarterly reporting developed over decades: the NYSE began requiring quarterly earnings reports in the 1920s, and the SEC’s Rule 13a-13 (1970) extended quarterly Form 10-Q filing to all Exchange Act reporting companies. See James J. Park, Do the Securities Laws Promote Short-Termism?, 10 U.C. IRVINE L. REV. 991 (2020).

3 Semiannual Reporting, Securities Act Release No. 33-11414, Exchange Act Release No. 34-105368, 91 Fed. Reg. 24,968 (proposed May 7, 2026) (to be codified at 17 C.F.R. pts. 210, 229, 232, 240, 249)(Proposed Amendments to Exchange Act Rules 13a-13 and 15d-13—Optional Semi-annual Reporting in Lieu of Quarterly Reports on Form 10-Q), SEC Proposed Rule, Release No. 33-11414 (PDF), https://www.sec.gov/files/rules/proposed/2026/33-11414.pdf (hereinafter, “SEC Release”).

4 Under the proposal, the issuer—meaning its board—chooses the frequency. SEC Release, at 7. I use “managers” to mean both directors and officers: on reporting frequency their interests are likely to generally align, and directors are unlikely to cut reporting frequency if officers object.

5 See Statement on Proposing Release for Semiannual Reporting, Paul S. Atkins, Chairman, U.S. Sec. & Exch. Comm’n, at 1, https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-statements/atkins-statement-proposing-release-semiannual-reporting-050526 (“Today’s proposed amendments, if ultimately adopted, would provide companies with increased regulatory flexibility in this regard”).

6 SEC Release, at 16-17.

7 SEC Release, at 17-18, 23.

8 Throughout, “reducing reporting [or disclosure] frequency” means cutting it below a previously-mandated level. As Part IV explains, a firm might go public committed to semiannual reporting, raise the frequency to quarterly, then drop back—a cut that could also harm investors, but one I would not subject to an investor vote. See infra Part IV.

issuers to opt for semiannual reporting, it may in the future allow them to opt for annual reporting, as it allows private issuers9 listed on U.S. exchanges.10

Giving managers that power, I argue, is undesirable.

The essay makes four claims.

First, managers of non-controlled firms will be inclined to cut disclosure frequency even when it leaves investors11 worse off. They reap the same benefits pro rata but bear few if any of the costs; in fact, some costs translate into benefits for managers (Part II.A).

Second, in controlled firms this distortion is worse (Part II.B).

Third, investors should have to approve any reduction, whether the firm is controlled or not. A veto makes investor harm less likely—and makes any reduction more likely to be "firm-optimal," one that increases the pie shared by investors and insiders12 (Part III).

Fourth, a firm should be free to choose its disclosure frequency at the IPO, potentially subject to safeguards. When investors are informed, IPO terms are unlikely to be very inefficient, and investors who dislike them can simply walk away (Part IV).

One caveat: a firm's disclosure frequency may well have externality effects on other firms and their investors.13 I assume that spillover is small enough to ignore. If it is not, regulators should bar the cut entirely, even with investor consent or at the IPO.

A conclusion follows (Part V).

Part II. Managers' Distorted Incentives When Choosing Disclosure Frequency

9 An FPI is a firm publicly traded in the United States that is incorporated elsewhere, unless it meets both (1) a shareholders test—U.S. residents own, directly or indirectly, more than 50% of its voting securities—and (2) a business-contacts test. See 17 C.F.R. § 230.405 ("Rule 405") under the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, and 17 C.F.R. § 240.3b-4 ("Rule 3b-4") under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended (the "Exchange Act").

10 See Jesse M. Fried & Ehud Kamar, China and the Rise of Law-Proof Insiders, 48 J. CORP. L. 215, 247 (2023) (explaining that FPIs, including China-based FPIs, are required to report only annually).

11 By "investors," I mean shareholders other than the firm's insiders—its managers and controller, if any.

12 By "insiders," I mean the firm's managers and controller (if any).

13 For arguments that disclosure creates positive externalities across the market, see John C. Coffee, Jr., Market Failure and the Economic Case for a Mandatory Disclosure System, 70 VA. L. REV. 717 (1984) (firm disclosure has public-good and third-party features—benefiting the broader market and capital allocation—so private actors undersupply it relative to the social optimum); Merritt B. Fox, Retaining Mandatory Securities Disclosure: Why Issuer Choice is Not Investors Empowerment, 85 VA. L. REV. 1135 (1999) (arguing that firms will choose less disclosure than is socially optimal).

Managers face distorted incentives over disclosure frequency. They may cut it even when that hurts investors and shrinks the economic pie—and the distortion is worse in controlled firms. Section A takes up non-controlled firms. Section B turns to controlled firms. Section C presents evidence that managers' and investors' interests can diverge over disclosure.

A. Non-Controlled Firms

Consider a non-controlled firm—one where investors can oust managers through a proxy fight or hostile takeover. Managers reap the same benefits from a cut as investors do but bear almost none of the costs. Indeed, managers experience some costs as benefits. Thus, all else equal, they will favor cutting frequency even when it harms investors. But fear of ouster may hold them back.

1. Reducing Disclosure Frequency: Potential Benefits and Costs for Investors

a. Benefits

In non-controlled firms, reducing reporting frequency can yield three benefits for investors.

i. Reduced Firm Direct Costs

Fewer reports mean lower compliance costs—preparing, reviewing, and filing them.
Moving from quarterly to semiannual reporting, for instance, spares the firm the costs of filing quarterly reports on Form 10-Q for the first and third quarters.14 All else equal, that lifts firm value and so indirectly benefits investors.

ii. Reduced Supply of Sensitive Information to Competitors

Less-frequent reporting withholds, or at least delays, competitively sensitive information that could erode firm value. 15 This indirectly benefits investors.16

iii. Reduced Managerial Distraction and Short-Termism

14 The SEC estimates that on average, moving from quarterly to semiannual filing saves firms more than roughly $200K a year—savings that indirectly benefit investors. SEC Release, at 106.

15 See, e.g., Robert E. Verrecchia, Discretionary Disclosure, 5 J. ACCT. & ECON. 179 (1983) (explaining that managers will, if given a choice, have an incentive to withhold information that could benefit competitors).

16 As noted in the Introduction, I assume that market-wide externalities from changing disclosure frequency are not significant. For a single firm, though, releasing sensitive information could both cost it and benefit others significantly.

Less-frequent reporting may also reduce managerial distraction and short-termism.17 For example, managers might have less incentive to engage in “real earnings management” that can reduce long-term value by small amounts.18 Investors would indirectly benefit.

b. Costs

But less-frequent reporting also can impose three costs on investors.

i. Increased Investor-Assessment Costs

Investors must now “estimate” the results the firm no longer reports—say, by extrapolating from peers that still report.19 Summed across investors, that effort likely exceeds the firm’s cost of disclosing what it already knows—and the estimates are worse besides.20

ii. Increased Information Asymmetry and Its Associated Costs

Less-frequent reporting delays disclosure of material information about the issuer’s finances and operations and strips out fine-grained detail, widening the information gap between insiders and the market.
21
Increased information asymmetry harms investors in three ways:

17 See Frank Gigler et al., How Frequent Financial Reporting Can Cause Managerial Short-Termism: An Analysis of the Costs and Benefits of Increasing Reporting Frequency, 52 J. ACCT. RSCH. 357 (2014) (showing, theoretically, that higher reporting frequency could increase managerial short-termism). However, evidence from the U.K. suggests that firms moving from quarterly to semiannual reporting do not appear to increase investment. See Robert Pozen, Suresh Nallareddy, and Shivaram Rajgopal, Impact of Reporting Frequency on UK Public Companies (CFA Institute Research Foundation 2017) (finding that companies that moved to semiannual reporting after 2014 without supplementing with voluntary quarterly reports did not have detectable increases in investment).

18 See, e.g., John R. Graham et al., The Economic Implications of Corporate Financial Reporting, 40 J. ACCT. & ECON. 3 (2005) (finding, based on a survey of 400 executives, that managers place a great deal of importance on meeting earnings benchmarks, with 78% of the surveyed executives indicating a willingness to sacrifice at least a small amount of long-term value to smooth earnings). However, to the extent the significance of missing a less frequent (say, semi-annual) target is much greater than that of missing a quarterly target, managers subject to less frequent disclosure might be incentivized to sacrifice even more long-term value in real earnings management.
19 See John C. Coffee, Jr., Market Failure and the Economic Case for a Mandatory Disclosure System, 70 VA. L.
REV. 717, 733-34 (1984) (arguing that mandatory disclosure "reduces wasteful duplication by establishing a central information repository").
20 See, e.g., Salman Arif & Emmanuel De George, The Dark Side of Low Financial Reporting Frequency: Investors'
Reliance on Alternative Sources of Earnings News and Excessive Information Spillovers, 95 ACCT. REV. 6 23, 23 (2020) (concluding that "investors are unable to successfully offset the information loss arising from low reporting frequency, thus impairing their ability to value firms and adversely affecting the quality of financial markets").
21 See, e.g., Renhui Fu et al., Financial Reporting Frequency, Information Asymmetry, and the Cost of Equity, 54 J.
ACCT. & ECON. 132, 132 (2012) ("[u]sing hand-collected data on [US] firms' interim reporting frequency from 1951 to 1973" and finding that "higher reporting frequency reduces information asymmetry and the cost of equity").
5
(1) by boosting insiders' ability to engage in insider trading on material (as well as important but "sub-material"22) nonpublic information23, which reduces investors' returns, either through insiders' direct trading24 or their indirect insider trading via the corporation.25
(2) by increasing uncertainty, which tends to lower the stock price.26
(3) by reducing analysts' incentives to cover the issuer,27 which can further reduce liquidity28 and lower the stock price.29
iii. Reduced Managerial Effort Less reporting cuts both ways: it can not only reduce managerial distraction and short-termism but also managerial effort.
22 See Jesse M. Fried, Reducing the Profitability of Corporate Insider Trading Through Pretrading Disclosure, 71
S. CAL. L. REV. 307, 311-13 (1998) [hereinafter, Fried, Reducing the Profitability] (explaining why insider trading on sub-material nonpublic information generates similar harms to trading on material nonpublic information).

23 Cf. Robert C. Pozen & Mark J. Roe, Those Short-Sighted Attacks on Quarterly Earnings, Harvard Law School Forum on Corporate Governance (October 8, 2015), https://corpgov.law.harvard.edu/2015/10/08/ those-short-sighted-attacks-on-quarterly-earnings/ (noting that increasing the "going dark" period between reports will increase "the temptation for insider trading"). For a contrary view, see Stephen M. Bainbridge, Letter of Comment Re Proposed Amendments to Exchange Act Rules 13A-13 and 15D-13 – Optional Semi-Annual Reporting In Lieu of Quarterly Reports on Form 10-Q (May 11, 2026) at 7, https://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm? abstract_id=6750300 [hereinafter, Bainbridge, Comment Letter].
24 See Fried, Reducing the Profitability, supra note [X], at 307 (insider trading profits reduce, dollar-for-dollar, the profits of other stockholders).
25 See Jesse M. Fried, Insider Trading via the Corporation, 164 U. PA. L. REV. 801 (2014) (explaining how insiders can exploit inside information to enrich themselves via the firm's transactions in its own shares).
26 Cf. Richard Lambert et al., Accounting Information, Disclosure and the Cost of Capital, 45 J. ACCT. RSCH. 385
(2007) (using model to show that higher quality disclosures raise a firm's stock price).
27 See Robert Pozen, Suresh Nallareddy & Shivaram Rajgopal, Impact of Reporting Frequency on UK Public Companies (Colum. Bus. Sch. Rsch. Paper No. 17-59, 2017) (finding that analyst following increased after imposition of mandatory quarterly reporting in 2007, and that companies that moved to semiannual reporting after 2014 without supplementing with voluntary quarterly reports experienced a reduction in analyst coverage).
28 See, e.g., Karthik Balakrishnan et al., Shaping Liquidity: On the Causal Effects of Voluntary Disclosure, 69 J. FIN.
2237 (2014) (finding that a reduction in analyst coverage reduces liquidity).
29 Yakov Amihud & Haim Mendelson, Asset Pricing and the Bid-Ask Spread, 17 J. FIN. ECON. 223 (1986).

First, less frequent disclosure makes managers harder to monitor (and then potentially replace), increasing the incentive to slack off. 30 Second, a wider information gap makes it riskier and thus potentially less likely for activist funds to build stakes, weakening that discipline further. Both effects tend to lower firm value and indirectly harm investors.
2. Reducing Disclosure Frequency: Managers' Distorted Incentives Managers' cost-benefit considerations are different. As shareholders they share the potential benefits of a disclosure-frequency cut pro rata, yet bear almost none of the costs—and some of investors' costs are, for managers, benefits.
So managers will always prefer a cut when investors do—and often when investors don't, even if this would shrink the shared pie.31
a. Same Pro-Rata Benefits as Public Investors Equity-owning managers enjoy the same three benefits as investors, pro rata:
(1) Reduced firm direct costs.

(2) Reduced supply of sensitive information to competitors.
(3) Reduced managerial distraction and short-termism.
b. Lower Costs than Public Investors
But managers do not bear investors' costs—and some of those costs are, for managers, benefits. Consider them in turn.
(1) Investor-assessment costs. Managers, who know how the firm is doing, avoid these entirely.
(2) Increased information asymmetry and related costs. Everything else equal, the value of managers' shares declines. But they can trade more profitably on what they alone know. On net, they experience this cost less than investors do—or as a gain.
30 See Zohar Goshen and Gideon Parchomovsky, The Essential Role of Securities Regulation, 55 DUKE L. J. 711, 760 (2006) (noting how increased disclosure puts poorly performing management teams at greater risk of replacement); Benedikt Downar et al., The Monitoring Effect of More Frequent Disclosure, 35 CONTEMP. ACCT. RSCH. 2058 (2018) (finding evidence consistent with the argument that more frequent disclosure provides shareholders with the opportunity for timelier monitoring and the ability to better constrain managers from misusing corporate resources).
31 One caveat: reducing reporting frequency in the United States can impose additional personal costs on directors. For example, they might have to work harder figuring out insider trading policy and issuing more Forms 8-K ("current report" capturing material events between periodic filings), and worry about reputational risks. To the extent that these concerns loom sufficiently large for a particular board, that firm is unlikely to be inclined to reduce reporting frequency.

(3) Reduced effort. Managers slack off only when the non-pecuniary payoff outweighs the hit to their shares—so for them, this too is a net benefit.
Table 1 below summarizes the different perspectives of managers and investors in non-controlled public firms.
Table 1: Benefits and Costs of Reduced Disclosure Frequency in Non-Controlled Firms Benefits Investors
(pro rata)
Managers
(pro rata) Costs Investors Managers
Reduced Firm
Direct Costs B1 B1 Increased Investor-
Assessment Costs C1 0
Reduced Supply of Increased
Sensitive Information
B2 B2
C2
< C2 [or net
Information to Asymmetry and benefit]

Competitors
Related Costs
Reduced
Managerial
B3 B3 Distraction and Reduced
Managerial Effort C3 benefit]
[net
Short-Termism
3. Reducing Disclosure Frequency: Managers' Overall Incentives
Because managers reap the same benefits pro rata as investors, and bear less if any of the costs (some of which managers experience as additional benefits), they will, all else equal, want to cut disclosure frequency even when it harms investors.
But in a non-controlled firm, managers may decide it's better not to do so over investor objections: unhappy investors are likelier to back a proxy challenger or hostile bidder who throws at least some of the managers out. If managers are not so deterred, investors lose—and the pie can be expected to shrink, because investors' loss will tend to exceed managers' gains. 32
B. Controlled Firms
Now consider controlled firms, where a controller appoints the managers. Four things change:
First, every benefit and cost from the non-controlled case carries over, with two important, related exceptions. Because the controller, not investors, can remove managers, a cut can neither (1) reduce managerial distraction and short-termism (a potential benefit of cutting disclosure frequency) nor (2) reduce managerial effort (a potential cost).
32 Managers' gain comes from insider-trading profits (extracted from investors) and from slacking off—gains that likely fall short of the resulting direct harm to investors directly (because of losses to insider trading, etc.) and indirectly (because of a drop in firm value).

Second, managers may nominally set frequency, but the controller calls the shots, so the remaining benefits and costs must be considered from the controller-and-managers' combined perspective. Fortunately, for the controller they look much the same as for managers.33
Table 2 below summarizes the different perspectives of investors and the controller/ managers in controlled firms.
Table 2: Benefits and Costs of Reduced Disclosure Frequency in Controlled Firms Controlle
Controlle
Benefits Investors
(pro rata)
r and Costs Investors
r and Managers
Managers
(pro rata)
Reduced Firm
Direct Costs B1 B1 Increased Investor-
Assessment Costs C1 0
Reduced Supply of Increased

< C2 [or Sensitive Information
B2 B2
C2
net
Information to Asymmetry and benefit]
Competitors
Related Costs
Third, the restraint that fear of ouster creates in a non-controlled firm is gone: the controller has nothing to fear from investors unhappy about reduced disclosure frequency.
Fourth, a reduction in disclosure frequency opposed by investors usually shrinks the pie in controlled firms too—but not always. If the controller owns, say, 90% of the equity, few outside investors absorb the loss, and the controller/managers' gain can exceed it.
C. Evidence that Managers Often Prefer Less Disclosure than Investors
The evidence that managers and investors diverge over the amount of disclosure—with managers often wanting less—is substantial.34 The evidence takes two forms: (1) the disclosure practices of publicly-traded firms that are not subject to mandatory disclosure, and (2) stock price reactions to publicly-traded firms (a) becoming subject to mandatory disclosure (against managers' wishes) or (b) being removed by managers from the mandatory disclosure regime.
1. When Disclosure is Voluntary, Managers Often Fail to Disclose Anything
Over-the-counter (OTC) firms were exempt from mandatory disclosure until 1965, when it reached all firms with sufficient assets and more than 500 recordholders.35 Because a 33 Controller and managers both share pro rata in the two remaining benefits—lower direct costs and less leakage to competitors—while escaping investors' costs: they bear no investor-assessment costs, and experience information asymmetry as less of a cost, or as a net gain.
34 So far as I know, no one has studied this manager-investor divergence over disclosure frequency.
35 See Allen Ferrell, Mandatory Disclosure and Stock Returns: Evidence from the Over-the-counter Market, 36 J.
LEG. STUD. 213, 223-25 (2007) (describing the 1964 legislation). Today a company enters the regime when, at fiscal recordholder is whoever the firm's books name as owner—usually a nominee institution, not the beneficial owner—a firm with 500 recordholders can have thousands of real shareholders.36

Pre-1965, many OTC firms disclosed nothing at all—plainly less than investors would have wanted. In a 1963 SEC sample of OTC firms traded in late 1961, more than a quarter reported nothing about their financial position or results.37
Today, publicly-traded firms can exit the regime and remain publicly-traded if (1) trading in their securities is moved exclusively to the "Pink Sheets" market; and (2) the firm does not have any class of securities outstanding with at least 300 recordholders.38 Hundreds of U.S. companies—some with thousands of shareholders—have used the recordholder test to escape mandatory disclosure while their shares keep trading.39
Once out, insiders may disclose whatever they like.40 However, firms exiting mandatory disclosure are said to "go dark": afterward, insiders typically refuse to tell public investors anything. In a study of 500 firms that went dark between 1998 and 2004, only 10% provided any financial statements to investors on a website, not all of which were audited.41
2. Stock-Price Reactions to Changes in Disclosure Regime

Stock-price reactions—when firms are forced into the regime, and when managers take them out—tell the same story.

Two studies examine OTC firms forced into the regime in 1965 after their managers had chosen to stay out. One study estimated that affected OTC firms experienced statistically year-end, it holds more than $10 million in assets and a class of equity held of record by 2,000 persons—or 500 who are not accredited investors. See Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

36 See Jesse M. Fried, Firms Gone Dark, 76 U. CHI. L. REV. 135, 135-36 (2009). See also Section 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

37 See Joel Seligman, The Historical Need for a Mandatory Corporate Disclosure System, 9 J. CORP. L. 1, 39-40

(1983) (also reporting that a 1957 SEC study found that "more than 25 percent of the issuers responding did not disseminate any financial information to shareholders at all").

38 See Jesse M. Fried, Firms Gone Dark, supra note [X], at 135–36. If total assets did not exceed $10 million on the last day of each of the three most recent fiscal years, the recordholder threshold for exit is 500. See Section 12(h)(3) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Banks, holding companies, and savings-and-loan companies may suspend reporting if they have fewer than 1,200 holders of record. See JOBS Act, Pub. L. No. 112-106, §§ 601–602, 126

Stat. 306 (2012); 15 U.S.C. § 78l(g)(4).

39 Some firms had more than 300 recordholders shortly before exiting but used a reverse stock split or repurchase tender offer to get below the 300 recordholder threshold. See Fried, Firms Gone Dark, supra note [X], at 136.

40 Firms may still be subject to state law disclosure requirements, which tend to be minimal. See Fried, Firms Gone

Dark, supra note [X], at 139

41 Christian Leuz et al., Why do firms go dark? Causes and economic consequences of voluntary SEC registrations, 45 J. ACCT. & ECON. 181, 203 (2008).

10

significant, positive abnormal returns ranging between 11% and 22% during the period from January 1, 1963 (around the time regulatory change began to appear likely) through November 15, 1965.42 The second study reported a 6% abnormal return for 1963.43 Investors, in short, gained from disclosure their managers had resisted.

Exit announcements run the other way: the stock usually drops sharply, a sign that managers will cut disclosure even at investors' expense. In a ten-day window around the time firms announce their intention to go dark, abnormal (market-adjusted) cumulative returns are -10%.44 In contrast, firms announcing going-private transactions (transactions in which all public shareholders are cashed out) experience positive market-adjusted returns in a comparable window.45

***

Managers cannot yet set disclosure frequency, but they can sometimes choose whether to be subject to mandatory disclosure at all. When they opt out, they often tell investors nothing—clearly less than investors want. The 1960s and going-dark studies show, in stock prices, that investors do better when managers must disclose more than they prefer and worse when managers can decide how much to disclose. Together they support, if indirectly, the claim that managers given the choice will cut frequency even when it harms investors.

Part III. For Post-IPO Firms, Give Investors the Vote

A. A Shareholder-Veto Rule

My proposed rule is simple: a firm—controlled or not—may cut reporting frequency only with the consent of a majority of the firm's public investors (or at least a majority of their voted shares).46 An exception could be made for a firm where a controller owns almost all of the shares (say, 90%).47

The logic is straightforward. Managers, as Part II showed, will cut frequency even when it harms investors and shrinks the shared pie. Requiring their consent makes both outcomes less likely.

42 See Ferrell, supra note [X], at 214.

43 Michael Greenstone, Paul Oyer, and Annette Vissing-Jorgensen, Mandated Disclosure, Stock Returns and the 1964 Securities Acts Amendments, 121 Q.J. ECON. 399, 402-403 (2006).

44 See Leuz et al., supra note [X], at 182

45 Id.

46 This builds on my work in Firms Gone Dark, where I proposed that public investors approve any exit from mandatory disclosure that does not cash them out. See Fried, Firms Gone Dark, supra note [X].

47 Because investors own so little equity, the cost imposed on them by reducing disclosure frequency is likely to be insignificant, making it unlikely that such a reduction is pie-shrinking.

A vote does impose costs on the firm that are indirectly borne by investors (and insiders). But investors already vote not once but every year48 on say-on-pay and shareholder resolutions that likely matter far less than disclosure frequency.

B. Would a Precatory Vote Suffice?

After the SEC's proposal, prominent securities scholars suggested giving shareholders a precatory vote.49 They write:

"Hypothetically, if 90 percent of shareholders voted in favor of retaining quarterly reports, this would be important for management to know. Ignoring such information or failing to obtain it could result in activist hedge funds seeking board representation in order to challenge management's decision. This would be expensive to both sides and could be avoided if management sought a serious census of its shareholders before proceeding." 50

If the SEC can compel a precatory vote but not a binding one, a precatory vote is worth requiring—it can only help. But in both controlled and non-controlled firms, its value is limited.

1. Non-controlled firms

In a non-controlled firm, managers are likely to care about investors' attitudes towards reducing disclosure frequency (because they may be ousted by unhappy investors). If they do, without a formal precatory vote, they will seek feedback from institutional investors (who hold 48 Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act § 951, 15 U.S.C. § 78n-1 (2018) (requiring a shareholder advisory vote on executive compensation at least once every three years); see also Dodd-Frank's Unintended Consequences: Lawsuits Seeking To Enjoin Say-On-Pay And Equity Plan Shareholder Votes, CCB J. (June 24, 2013), https://ccbjournal.com/articles/dodd-franks-unintended-consequences-lawsuits-seeking-enjoin-say-pay-and-equity-plan- (noting that most public companies now hold say-on-pay votes annually).

49 John Coates, John C. Coffee, James D. Cox, Merritt Fox, and Joel Seligman, Shadow SEC Statement No. 8: Comment on SEC Proposal to Allow Companies to File Semiannual Reports on New Form 10-S in Lieu of Quarterly Form 10-Q Filings, The CLS Blue Sky Blog (June 1, 2026)

https://clsbluesky.law.columbia.edu/2026/06/01/shadow-sec-statement-no-8-comment-on-sec-proposal-to-allow-companies-to-file-semiannual-reports-on-new-form-10-s-in-lieu-of-quarterly-form-10-q-filings/.
50 Id.

less than 50% of smaller firms' shares,51 but 70-80% of larger firms' shares52) about their views on such a reduction. A precatory vote cannot add much value here.53

2. Controlled firms

In a controlled firm it makes no difference at all: managers answer to the controller, not to investors, and can ignore the vote.54

Part IV. IPO Firms

The problems arising from allowing managers of already-public firms to reduce disclosure frequency do not arise when a firm indicates at the IPO that it is choosing (or may in the future choose) the lowest reporting frequency allowed by regulators.55 So firms should be free to do exactly that, without any need for an investor vote.

Section A explains that arrangements in place at the IPO—before public investors decide how much (if anything) they are willing to pay for shares—cannot harm informed investors. Section B argues that if investors are informed, arrangements chosen by managers are also likely to be firm-optimal, or at least not too far from it. Section C discusses further considerations, including potential safeguards.56

51 Garnet Roach, Only Small Caps See Minority of Shares Held by Institutions, Shows Research, IR Impact (Jan. 18, 2022), https://www.ir-impact.com/2022/01/only-small-caps-see-minority-shares-held-institutions-shows-research/.
OECD, OECD Corporate Governance Factbook 2025: Global Public Markets and Corporate Ownership (2025), https://www.oecd.org/en/publications/oecd-corporate-governance-factbook-2025_f4f43735-en/full-report/global-public-markets-and-corporate-ownership_c5012184.html.
52 53 Where a non-controlled firm's managers shrug off investor opinion—say, because ouster is unlikely, the firm being unattractive to activists or acquirers—a precatory vote changes little there too. Such a firm is, for our purposes, effectively controlled.
54 In the context of the SEC's proposal to allow managers to opt for semiannual reporting, which he supports, Steve Bainbridge suggests that managers be required to issue a press release explaining the switch and file the press release with a Form 8-K. See Bainbridge, supra note [X], at 11-12. I don't see how issuing a press release would deter managers of non-controlled firms and controlled firms from reducing reporting frequency even when it hurts investors. In my view, it would be even less effective than a precatory vote. See generally Stephen Bainbridge, Is the Sky Falling? SEC Prepares Proposal to Eliminate Quarterly Reporting Requirement, BainbridgeOnCorporations.com (Mar. 17, 2026), https://www.bainbridgeoncorporations.com/p/is-the-sky-falling-sec-prepares-proposal (defending the elimination of mandatory quarterly reporting).
55 The firm could later raise its frequency and perhaps cut it again. No vote should be needed for that cut: investors already consented to the low baseline, and we should not deter firms from voluntarily reporting more. The firm could also commit to giving investors a vote on any subsequent reduction in frequency.

56 As the Introduction notes, I assume the regulator has concluded that the spillover benefits of more frequent disclosure are too small to mandate it.

A. IPO Arrangements Cannot Harm Informed Investors Securities regulation and corporate law alike assume investors are informed and rational enough to trade and vote in their own interest. Institutional investors buy around 90% of shares at IPOs,57 and own a large percentage of shares, often exceeding 50%, in post-IPO firms.58 U.S. investors can fairly be presumed to understand an IPO firm's governance terms.
To the extent investors are informed about disclosure—they can understand the disclosure arrangements of a firm at the IPO (and thereafter) and take them into account in assessing the value of the shares—the frequency the firm picks cannot be said to harm them. If they dislike the frequency, they can value the shares less. If they think the price exceeds the value, they don't need to buy. Those who do buy have no grounds to complain.
IPO investors already weigh single- versus dual-class stock and Delaware versus Nevada charters. Considering disclosure frequencies is no harder—indeed, they already buy FPIs that report just once a year. 59
B. The Presumptive Firm-Optimality of IPO Disclosure Arrangements
With informed investors, firms going public tend to choose terms that are not too far from firm-optimal—disclosure included—because investors pay more for terms they like and less for terms they don't. Insiders will choose a lower frequency only when it helps both them and investors, or when their gain exceeds investors' loss.
C. Further Considerations
Once a regulator sets a floor, I see no reason an IPO firm can't elect that frequency—or give itself an option to drop to that frequency subsequently, without an investor vote.
If regulators believe that IPO terms do not stray too far from the firm-optimal, they may want to consider setting a lower minimum frequency for IPO firms than for already-public firms.
FPIs already list here while being allowed to report just once a year, on the SEC's apparent view that annual disclosure suffices. If it suffices for FPIs, perhaps it should suffice for domestic issuers, which typically give U.S. investors stronger corporate-law protections and better enforceability.60
And, if regulators worry that small issuers might exploit unsophisticated buyers, they could demand more frequent disclosure except where the offering either clears a dollar threshold or draws enough institutional investors, or both.
57 Fidelity, Understanding the IPO Share Allocation Process (2025), https://www.fidelity.com/learningcenter/trading-investing/trading/ipo-share-allocation-process (institutional investors receive "the lion's share" of an IPO; the historical institutional-to-retail split is about 90/10, varying deal to deal).
58 See supra note [X].
59 See supra note [X].
60 See e.g., Fried & Kamar, supra note [X] (documenting the limited enforceability of U.S. corporate and securities law against insiders of China-based FPIs).

Part V. Conclusion
A public firm's disclosure generates positive externalities for other firms and their investors. Assuming that a reduction in reporting cadence does not significantly reduce these externalities, regulators should enable firms to choose a lower reporting frequency.
However, this choice should not be made by managers alone. Managers of non-controlled firms will, if permitted, be inclined to cut disclosure frequency even when it harms investors and shrinks the pie they share with them. The reason is structural: managers capture the benefits pro rata but bear less of the costs—and some costs, like greater information asymmetry and weaker monitoring, actually translate into benefits for them. In a controlled firm, where a controller fears no ouster from unhappy investors, the distortion is worse.

I thus propose that no firm cut a previously-mandated reporting frequency without public-investor approval. A shareholder veto screens out value-destroying reductions, while permitting those that increase firm value. The cost of such a one-time vote is trivial next to annual say-on-pay votes and shareholder resolutions, which matter less.
For disclosure arrangements adopted at the IPO, no vote is needed. Arrangements adopted before investors decide what to pay cannot expropriate informed investors, who simply discount the price to reflect any disclosure frequency they dislike. And because pre-IPO insiders bear that discount, they have every reason to pick the frequency that maximizes firm value. Regulators should therefore permit firms to go public with the reporting frequency of their choice, without the need for any investor vote, down to the regulatory floor deemed appropriate for IPO firms.
15

Joan Matt n/a — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joan Matt I feel semiannual reporting, though more economical for companies, does a disservice to investors who rely on quarterly reports to keep track of their investments and to make financial decisions. It seems the semiannual reports don't keep investors up to date and could be detrimental to their finances.

Jodi Juhnke Public School Educator — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jodi Juhnke Please continue the quarterly reporting. As we near retirement age we deserve to be informed on our finances. Transparency is always the most trustworthy!

John B Todd — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John B Todd Please leave mandatory quarterly reporting as a requirement. Do not allow companies or elect to report only twice a year.

John McMillan — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John McMillan I disagree with this proposal, as it will negatively impact the individual investor who is already at a distinct disadvantage to instituitional traders. This reduces transparency of company actions, and allows instituitional investors to front run the market. This is a bad idea

---

John Schmitz CPA — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Schmitz CPA I see no valid reason to make a switch from the current 4 times reporting to semi annual.

John W Mitchell III — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John W Mitchell III Yes, quarterly statements damage companies abilities to plan long term and penalize companies when billing has a snafu.

Johnna Willmon CITIZEN of the United States — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Johnna Willmon Do to the amount of corruption and money laundering happening in this Country, relaxing of reporting doesn't make any sense whatsoever. With the amounts of data having to be processed it would seem to me that extending the reporting time will only complicate the problem even more. Until the waste, fraud, and abuse is cleared up and the money laundering is STOPPED, I find it absurd to make it easier to continue the Status Quo. I ask for common sense and will watch for whether the SEC is truly a watchdog or complicit in the fraud taking place against the American People. Thank you for your time and attention to this matter. Sincerely Johnna Willmon

---

Joshua Burris — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joshua Burris Transparency requires financial information to be shared in a timely manner. Quarterly reporting is the minimum acceptable reporting period to ensure accountability and avoid abuse of the system. I urge you to maintain quarterly reporting as weakening this requirement will undermine the public's trust in your agency during an economic period that requires steady and reliable assurances. Also, allowing more time to pass between reports only makes it easier to commit fraud and other criminal or civil crimes. This would also hurts retail investors whom do have the time and/or money to keep track of financial information compared to institutional and corporate investors.

Joy Grey-Morris None — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joy Grey-Morris I would like the committee to keep the reporting by CEO's at quarterly intervals. I think this will provide greater transparency, oversight, and greater protection for investors.

Joyce Powell — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joyce Powell Semi-annual reporting has been done twice in the past and was devastating for investors both times. Learn from past history and keep quarterly reporting.

Julie Atebalo NA — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Julie Atebalo Keep quarterly reporting. We need up to date Information on our funds!

K Greulich — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: K Greulich Why are YOU making it easier for greedy people to hide what they're doing? Are you as much a thief as they? SHAME ON YOU! We "nobodies" (as so many of you/them think of us) work do hard do YOU/THEY can STEAL from us. SHAME ON YOU! Keep the reporting quarterly. Clean up the thievery.

K. Jeffrey — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: K. Jeffrey We have seen what happens when Financial companies are able to hide issues and drag reporting. We worked to fix that. Do not go back on it when people are struggling as it is and those who have some funds in 401Ks and IRAs are trying to save and one day retire. We bailed the financial industry out once and it was a disaster. Our economy is teetering. This is the wrong move.

Kade Sanders — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kade Sanders Please keep the reporting quarterly.

Kansan against Oligarchy — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kansan against Oligarchy If anyone questions the statement “we are living in a corporate oligarchy”, their observational skills should be questioned. It is obvious to me that the current rule for quarterly earnings for America’s corporations is not hurting them whatsoever. Stock prices are at all time highs. There is no question that the prime directive as publicly stated by US corporations is the stock price. After working at a large corporation myself for 35 years, quarterly earnings reports allow both insiders and outsiders the information they need on a timely basis. This is another attempt by corporate interests, political donors, etc., etc., to avoid transparency. Please just leave this the way it is. Don’t give corporations the option to continue to gain more and more power. In my opinion this is a no-brainer. Require quarterly earnings reports just like we have for decades.

Karen Doane — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Karen Doane Affiliation: Jul. 1, 2026 I'm a registered veterinary technician. I don't make much money, so whatever I have to invest has to go as far as possible. Up to date information is important to me. Every decision I make determines wether I have enough retirement money to survive after I can no longer do this very physical job. Quarterly reporting should absolutely continue. Thank you.

Karen Fisher — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Fisher Keep companies reporting quarterly. It keeps companies transparent and accountable. Why do large companies continue to get perks? In this day and age, hardworking investors deserve up-to-date information about companies they invest in.

Karen Huss Motley Fool — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Huss Now retired, my spouse and I have been investing regularly for fifty-plus years. We have a stake in the proposed rule change. Reducing the number of public-company reports from 4x a year to 2x a year is a mistake. Stock investing is ownership; bond investing is debtor-creditor. When we own a piece of a business or loan to a business, we deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens that connection. Fewer reports MAY reduce costs, but with increasingly efficient disclosure tools, that point is debatable. It MAY ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter, but taking the reports away doesn't make us or anyone else more patient. It just makes us and everyone else less informed and less information rarely creates better-informed owners or creditors. Half as many official updates -- less transparency -- increases uncertainty. And volatility. Because when information belatedly arrives, the surprises are bigger and the reactions are sharper. This is a BAD IDEA! No change to quarterly reports, PLEASE.

Kathy Davis None — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathy Davis Keep it quarterly!!!

Keith Ensminger Retired small business owner, teacher, and farmer — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Keith Ensminger The SEC needs to keep the quarterly reporting. Every business creates quarterly reports for tax purposes except for farmers. A computer teacher 30 years ago in a computer class out our local community college described a Microsoft representative presentation about Excel to a room of accountants. He said some were accounts shook and told the representative Excell will allow them to update financial documents with a click instead of taking hours or days by pencil in hand. The online world has vastly improved, so the financial incentive to produce biannual instead of quarterly reports makes little sense. The financial information can be easily merged in Form 10-Q. Please keep the requirement that public companies submit quarterly Form 10-Q reports instead of the new Form 10-S reports.

Keith Peters Private investor — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Keith Peters Please vote NO on the current legislation reducing the number if times reports are published regarding investment products. Ref S7-2026-15.

Kelsey Swanson — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kelsey Swanson We shouldn't be allowing companies who are asking for our investment support to give us less information. How can we confirm they are staying on track with their proposals and promises? How do we hold them accountable? Why should someone at the company have more consistent and accurate information than all of the other investors? Isn't that just insider trading potential? If companies are only required to report twice a year, the common investor will be shut out of smart financial decisions. Take a look at stock history. Whenever less information has been enforced and allowed, the entire market suffered. More volatility. Stop taking away the rights of investors that are helping boost company's expansion. If they are public, reliable and frequent information belongs to the public whose support they have asked for. Quarterly reports should remain required for all public companies.

Kenneth B Pajor N/A — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kenneth B Pajor As a stock investor I believe that a Reduction in reporting from 4 times /yr to 2 times/yr is a mistake.

Kent Quiggle — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kent Quiggle Do not let them extend the filing period to be semi-annually. I do not approve.

Kerry Homenik — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kerry Homenik Keep the guardrails in place...I am tired of the small, individual investor who doesn't have access to ALL the (inside)information that big(rich) investors/politicians do. Do not take away what valuable information we do have.

Kevin keefe — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin keefe As seniors, we do not have a lot on funds in our IRAs and annuities. It’s important to us to keep the quarterly reports so we can see the he markets and make adjustments as soon as possible. Please keep the quarterly reports!

Kim Graham — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kim Graham We want full transparency from companies who must have public oversight and information regularly to make investment decisions. The quarterly reports are vital for the public. You could make them take less time but we must have critical information that could affect price movements dividends and insiders' trading in a timely manner.

Lacy Saunders-Fereday — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lacy Saunders-Fereday This is a horrible idea that would prevent individuals from knowing the state of their finances for retirement without actively having to search out the information. With many older individuals that are less technologically savee berring the brunt of collapse with no recourse of moving their money until after a collapse is complete. Do NOT do this

---

Larelise Kintz — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Larelise Kintz I am writing as an individual investor to express my strong opposition to the proposal to permit public companies to report on a semiannual rather than quarterly basis. Public companies receive extraordinary benefits from access to the public capital markets. In return, they should continue to provide timely, transparent financial reporting to the investors whose capital they use. Quarterly reporting is a fundamental part of that relationship. The proposal’s benefits accrue primarily to issuers through reduced compliance costs, while its costs fall primarily on investors, who would be asked to make investment decisions with less current information. Less frequent reporting increases information asymmetry between corporate insiders and the investing public, reduces market transparency, and weakens the efficiency of price discovery. Supporters argue that semiannual reporting would encourage longer-term thinking. I do not believe transparency and long-term management are competing goals. Companies can pursue long-term strategies while remaining accountable to shareholders through regular financial reporting. Access to public capital is a privilege, not an entitlement. The modest reduction in administrative burden proposed here does not justify reducing transparency, accountability, and investor protection. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to reject the proposed rule.

Laura Kiholm — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Kiholm At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

LG — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: LG I do not support the move from quarterly to semi-annual reporting. Taking information away makes for less informed owners/stock-holders and in this day and age transparency is imperative. The slowing down of sharing results may relieve some administrative burden it also opens the door for another Enron situation. Let us not make that mistake again.

Liann Bowman — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Liann Bowman Please keep the quarterly reporting to assist investors in analyzing their portfolios. Too many circumstances can change in 6 months and without required reporting transparency will be compromised. It is very important for the individual investor and I would think for the institutional investor as well.

Lily Stevens — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lily Stevens To the Securities and Exchange Commission: My name is Lily Stevens and I'm a constituent who has lived in multiple states across the southeast US. I have worked in nonprofit and state government positions for over a decade. As a public servant one of the benefits has been a state retirement account that has allowed me some peace of mind about my future. In addition to my employer sponsored retirement account I have a supplemental retirement account. The cost of living has only been going up and I hope that one day I'll might be able to retire with my savings. I rely on quarterly reports to make decisions about my retirement investments. Without these, I stand to lose money and lose out on a future that I, and EVERYONE, deserves. My parents are both retired now and living off their retirement savings which we hope can provide for them for the rest of their lives. Please do not put their wellbeing and our family's financial security in jeopardy. We the people deserve transparency. The SEC quarterly reporting rules have existed for decades. Leave them alone.

Linda Matthews Motley Crew — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Matthews In a time of so much disaster, fear and uncertainry, where many are losing jobs and homes, the one thing we don't need is more secrecy, which looks to us like just more conspiracy, and self service. We know who you are and there is a swell-a movement, ever growing-to remove those who disuse their power for self service. So go ahead, show your deep disdain for Americans and your career will end. Permanently

---

Lisa OConnor Psychologist — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa OConnor I worked for 15 years as a Behavior analyst (psychologist) with a very challenging patient population (traumatic brain injury). My husband owned his own business and worked 80 hour days for 30 years and also invested heavily so he could retired before his body gave out from years of physical labor. We Invested heavily so we could retire early. Now my daughter (17)! is investing. We want our hard work to pay off just like any one else. We need accountability and transparency in our institutions, not more opportunities for insider trading. Please, keep it quarterly! Trust me, people behave in ways that benefit them, IF THE CONTINGENCIES ALLOW. Keep it quarterly because you KNOW what will happen if you don't. More faith, not less. The American people need you to make the better choice.

Lisa Trager — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Trager KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING

Lloyd Dalton Account holder — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lloyd Dalton Maintain quarterly reporting and accountability. There are no changes warranted.

Lynda Streater — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lynda Streater This is a dangerous change and the disaster that was Enron is all the proof needed that quarterly reporting is vital for investors to track trends and spot problems. KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

M Dow Sound Mixer/Design — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: M Dow M Dow Sound Mixing/Design Pacific Northwest This Experiment has already been run – we know the Ending – Stocks lose value when companies are only required to report twice a year. WHY RUN THE EXPERIMENT AGAIN ? Our retirement funds are AT RISK. MAINTAIN QUARTERLY REPORTING. Thanks for reading.

Margaret Smith — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Margaret Smith Dear Secretary, I am opposed to the proposed new rule S7-2026-15 being considered by the commission which could allow public corporations to report financial information semi-annually rather than quarterly. As a member of the general public who has invested in both funds and individual stocks through brokerages for at least three decades, I know that having access to business information more frequently (at least quarterly) will be more helpful to me (and those I look to for guidance) when deciding how to handle my investments. It may help reduce mistakes or fraud. Corporations are enjoying huge profits right now. Rather than more simplicity in reporting financial information, corporations ought to provide as much information to investors as possible to help us secure our future. Sincerely, M Smith

---

Marla F. Beatty None — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marla F. Beatty My husband and I have been saving for our retirement for over 45 years. We depend on Quarterly Reporting to determine the strengths and weaknesses of our investments. We both sincerely feel that changing to semi-annual reporting weakens the transparency of company governance, and provides bad actors (such as happened at Enron) or inept company officers to fail in their duty to Investors. Please maintain Quarterly Reporting.

Martin Williams Motley fool community — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Martin Williams Less information is very rarely a good thing. Even though this has been the general trend in government and big business the negative consequences are visible. And not healthy. In my opinion this should not even be co spidered without an overwhelming vote by shareholders

---

Mary — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Please keep the filing in a quarterly basis.

Mary Ann Wolfe — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Ann Wolfe No, don't let companies hide their books! Consumers and investors, especially small investors, will be susceptible to losing money easier without knowing.

Mary Ellen Snell None — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Ellen Snell Keep quarterly reporting if you want private investors to stay invested in your stock. If not, you will only be at the mercy of institutional investors who can take you down or buy you out.

Mary Martin US citizen and Financial Investor — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Martin KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING !! I am a financial investor, a retired person who depends upon my savings to provide income, and a supporter of free & fair financial markets. Keeping all of that in mind , is is imperative that the SEC continue to require quarterly reporting. Investors require and deserve transparency. It is NOT a burden to tell me what YOU are doing with MY money. Rather, it is REQUIRED that you maintain a transparent relationship with investors which includes frequent updates. I have you my money and you need to explain how it is producing value for me.

Matt Hunt — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matt Hunt Please keep reporting quarterly, I feel individuals like me are already at a disadvantage and cutting back reporting would make it worse.

Mauricio Rodriguez Martinez The Motley Fool Community — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mauricio Rodriguez Martinez I completely disagree and express huge concern about the proposal on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that's a mistake which reduces transparency to investors.

Max Spindler — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Max Spindler To the SEC Committee: My name is Max Spindler, I am an individual investor. I invest to build a solid portfolio based on available information and not to have to rely on internet wall street gossip. When investing the Quarterly 10-Q reporting is essential as it provides me with information in a timely manner. Quarterly reporting gives me information I need. Both the Motley Fool, to which I subscribe and Better Investing to which my friends subscribe are strong proponents to maintaining the flow of information in a timely manner. In our current economy and the current AI revolution, it is imperative that I get the best up to date information on the companies I own. My ownership of these companies, through the stock I own together with other stock owners hire the management of these companies. Based on research from the CFA Institute, which studied the U.K. market, reporting frequency has no measurable effect on a company's investment planning and execution. Less transparency for individual investors will not make companies stronger. Accountability will make them stronger. Therefore, please do not remove or relax the requirement for public companies to file a 10-Q every quarter. Thank you. Max The Motley Fool Community

---

Mehul Pema — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mehul Pema Keep quarterly reporting, semi annual reporting will create unfair advantage to Institutional Investors, less transparency will create increased market volatility.

Melanie Grace General Counsel & Corporate Secretary, Long Term Stock Exchange (LTSE) — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Melanie Grace The Long-Term Stock Exchange [LTSE] writes in support of the proposed rule currently before the Commission to allow semiannual reporting. We commend the Commission for acting on our petition for rulemaking (File No. S7-2026-15), which we submitted on September 30, 2025. The reaction to this petition from issuers, investors, lawmakers, academics, and the media confirm that a change is necessary and timely. See for example: Wall Street Journal (May 5, 2026); MarketWatch (May 5, 2026); Governance Intelligence (May 7, 2026); and CNBC (September 22, 2025). This rule addresses longstanding concerns regarding the effect of quarterly reporting on corporate decision-making. Providing issuers with this option has been supported by a range of business and policy leaders, including the Trump Administration and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. We fully support the proposal's optionality. Companies may continue to file quarterly if they choose. This is at the heart of our original petition to the Commission, which emphasizes that a "one-size-fits-all" reporting regime is sub-optimal for reporting companies and their investors. We also note that companies' obligations to promptly report material information publicly would not deviate from current practice. Commenters who claim that important information may somehow be withheld during interim reporting periods do not appreciate the distinction. The same rigorous requirements (and penalties for failure to comply) that exist today will continue to protect investors under the new rule. Extensive academic research has documented the negative effects of quarterly reporting pressure on long-term value creation. The time has come to create a capital markets system that rewards patient capital and long-term thinking.

Memorandum from the Office of Commissioner Hester M. Peirce regarding a July 1, 2026 meeting with representatives of the CFA Institute — Jul 1, 2026
MEMORANDUM
To:
From:
Re:
File No. S7-2026-15
Austin Stephenson, Counsel to Commissioner Hester M. Peirce
Meeting with Representatives of the CFA Institute
On July 1, 2026, Commissioner Hester M. Peirce and her legal advisor Austin Stephenson had a meeting with representatives of the CFA Institute. The CFA Institute representatives in attendance were:
• Sandra J. Peters, Senior Head, Corporate Disclosures and Information Advocacy
• Matthew P. Winters, Senior Director, Corporate Disclosures and Information Advocacy
The participants discussed the proposed rule for Semiannual Reporting, File No. S7-2026-15.

Michael Brooks — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Brooks I demand this to be kept at quarterly! This is an outrage! Protect the investors or we stop investing.

Michael Staton — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Staton I oppose reducing public company reporting from quarterly to semiannual. As an individual investor and member of The Motley Fool Community, I rely on regular, transparent financial reporting to make informed investment decisions. Less frequent reporting would reduce transparency, increase uncertainty, and likely lead to larger market surprises and greater volatility when information is finally released. The benefits of timely disclosure to shareholders outweigh any modest reduction in reporting costs. Public companies should remain accountable to their owners through quarterly reporting.

Michele Giannini Systems analyst retired disabled — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michele Giannini This matters to me because authorities are meant to protect and serve not strip away accountability and integrity. If you stop reporting as often, then we will lose sight & they will use that time to compromise and bend the system to their desires.

MIKE BANNAN — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: MIKE BANNAN Current rules in place should only be strengthened not waterdowned. Transparency is vital!

Mohammed F Mohiuddin — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mohammed F Mohiuddin I strongly oppose the proposal to reduce public-company reporting from quarterly to semiannual. Managing my own investments requires consistent, reliable data to accurately evaluate business health and make informed decisions. Reducing the frequency of these reports will not curb short-termism; instead, it will severely diminish transparency, increase market uncertainty, and lead to greater volatility when information is finally disclosed. I urge the SEC to maintain the current quarterly reporting requirements to protect the fundamental right of individual owners to stay informed about their investments.

N. Thompson Retired lawyer — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: N. Thompson I oppose this rule . Quarterly reporting allows individual investors, and the public in general, to have a more timely and accurate of a company's performance and avoid potential fraud. There is absolutely no reason to change a long standing rule that will only benefit large corporations.

Nancy Hand — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Hand I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposed rule that would allow public companies to opt out of quarterly reporting in favor of semi-annual filings on Form 10-S. As an independent, retail investor solely responsible for managing my personal stock portfolio and my family's 401(k) retirement plan, I view this proposal as a direct threat to my ability to participate safely and fairly in the U.S. financial markets. Unlike institutional investing firms, I do not have access to proprietary data feeds, expensive corporate intelligence tools, or direct lines of communication with executive management teams. I rely entirely on public, standardized, and timely SEC disclosures—specifically Form 10-Q—to make informed, long-term investment decisions. If this rule is enacted, it will negatively impact independent investors in three distinct ways: 1. Exacerbating Information Asymmetry: Moving to a six-month reporting cycle creates a massive information vacuum. Corporate insiders and institutional investors will inevitably find ways to gauge a company's health during this long gap, while everyday retail investors are left entirely in the dark. 2. Impairing 401(k) Fiduciary Accountability: Managing a retirement account requires timely monitoring of corporate health, debt levels, and operational shifts. A six-month delay means I could be left holding failing or fundamentally altered stocks for half a year before a mandatory disclosure reveals the truth. 3. Forcing Capital Market Exit: The ultimate consequence of reduced transparency is a loss of trust. If this rule passes, the stock market will become too opaque and risky for an independent manager. It will effectively force me to cash out my investments and exit the market to protect my retirement security. The SEC’s foundational mandate is investor protection and maintaining fair, orderly, and efficient markets. Reducing disclosure frequency actively harms retail investors to marginalize corporate compliance costs. I strongly urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the mandatory quarterly reporting framework. Sincerely, Nancy Hand

---

Necola Staples Invester — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Necola Staples Transparency is essential. Allowing corporations to hide behind reduced reporting is a sure way to to reduce transparency. If corporations want us to continue to invest in them, they need to demonstrate they are doing what they said they were going to do and publish quarterly reports to ensure investors are aware (regularly) what they are indeed doing and how that syncs with the performance plan. DO NOT allow them to reduce reporting to twice annually. That will certainly lead to an impact on growth.

New Constructs, LLC — Jul 1, 2026
To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
New Constructs, LLC respectfully submits this comment in opposition to File No. S7-2026-15, the Commission's proposal to permit public companies to replace three quarterly reports with a single semiannual filing.
We are a financial research firm. For more than two decades, we have built our business on the premise that rigorous, detailed financial disclosure — including the footnotes and supplemental data that most investors never read — is the foundation of fair and functional capital markets. We analyze thousands of public companies. We know what good disclosure looks like, and we know what it costs investors when companies obscure or delay material financial information. This proposal goes in the wrong direction. We urge the Commission to reject it.
The Trend Everywhere Else Is Toward More Transparency, Not Less
The Commission is proposing to reduce the frequency of mandatory financial disclosure at precisely the moment when every other domain of modern life is moving toward real-time information. We receive live updates on flight delays, train positions, storm systems, power outages, and utility performance. Sports scores update by the second. News cycles run continuously. The infrastructure for near-instantaneous data collection and transmission is not a futuristic aspiration — it is the operating reality of the American economy in 2026.
Against that backdrop, the argument that public companies cannot be expected to report their financial condition more than twice a year is not a neutral administrative judgment. It is a choice to hold financial markets to a lower standard of transparency than we hold the weather.
The Data Already Exists
The Commission's proposal rests in part on the premise that quarterly reporting imposes meaningful costs on issuers. We are skeptical. Major American corporations are not run on pen and paper. They operate sophisticated enterprise systems that track revenue, costs, inventory, and operational performance — in most cases, on a daily basis. Does anyone seriously believe that Walmart does not know its store-level sales every day? That Kroger cannot pull a real-time report on gross margin by category? That Amazon's finance team is waiting for quarter-end to learn how the business is performing?
The data exists. The systems exist. The marginal cost of compiling and disclosing quarterly financial information for a company that already tracks that information internally is, in most cases, close to zero. The argument that quarterly reporting is a meaningful financial burden on large public companies is difficult to reconcile with what we know about how those companies actually operate.
If the Data Doesn't Exist, That Is Itself Material Information

There may be companies — particularly smaller issuers — that genuinely lack the infrastructure to track financial performance on a quarterly basis. If so, investors deserve to know that. A public company that cannot produce a quarterly financial summary is telling the market something important about the sophistication of its internal controls, the reliability of its management systems, and the confidence investors should place in its annual disclosures. That is not an argument for exempting such companies from quarterly reporting. It is an argument for requiring them to disclose the fact that they lack the systems to do so.

The Reasons Not to Report Are Not Good Ones

If the data exists — and in most cases it does — then there are only a limited number of reasons why a company would prefer not to report it quarterly. We will name them plainly:

Laziness. Compiling and filing a 10-Q requires effort. Some companies and their advisors would prefer to do it less often. This is not a sufficient basis for regulatory relief. The obligation to keep investors informed is not optional, and the Commission should not treat the cost of fulfilling it as a harm to be remediated.

Obfuscation. Some companies perform better over longer measurement periods than shorter ones. Some managements would prefer that investors not see the quarter-to-quarter volatility in their results. Some would prefer more time to manage the narrative around a difficult period before they are required to disclose it. Reducing reporting frequency gives those managements more room to operate — at the direct expense of investors who are trying to make informed decisions.

The Commission should be clear-eyed about this. When a company elects semiannual reporting, it is not simply choosing a reporting schedule. The company is choosing to withhold information that it already has from the investors who own it. Investors who are aware that a company has made that choice are receiving material information. Investors who are not aware of it — or who do not understand its implications — are being disadvantaged.

The Information Asymmetry Cost Is Real

Sophisticated institutional investors do not wait for 10-Q filings to understand how their portfolio companies are performing. They have proprietary data sources, expert networks, channel checks, management access, and analytical resources that allow them to build a continuous picture of company performance between mandatory disclosure dates. Retail investors, and many smaller institutional investors, do not have those resources. For them, the 10-Q is not a formality — it is one of the primary mechanisms by which they can monitor the companies they own.

Extending the gap between mandatory disclosures does not eliminate the information. It concentrates it among those who already have structural advantages in accessing it. The spread between what insiders and sophisticated institutions know and what ordinary investors know will widen. Someone will capture that spread. It will not be the investors the Commission was created to protect.

This Proposal Runs Counter to the Commission's Founding Purpose

The Securities Exchange Act of 1934 was built on a straightforward premise: that public markets cannot function fairly when the people running companies know vastly more than the people investing in them. Mandatory periodic disclosure was the mechanism chosen to narrow that gap. It has worked. U.S. equity markets are the deepest, most liquid, and most trusted in the world, in part because investors have confidence that companies are required to disclose material information on a regular and predictable schedule.

Reducing that frequency — even optionally, even for a subset of issuers — is not a technical adjustment. It is a step away from the transparency architecture that underpins investor confidence in U.S. markets. We do not think the current disclosure burden justifies that step. We do not think the companies asking for relief have made a compelling case that quarterly reporting is harming them. And we are confident that the investors who will bear the cost of reduced disclosure have not been adequately represented in the Commission's analysis.

Conclusion

New Constructs urges the Commission to reject File No. S7-2026-15. Rather than reducing the frequency of mandatory disclosure, the Commission should be asking how the infrastructure that already exists — inside companies, across markets, and throughout the broader economy — can be used to give investors more timely, more granular, and more reliable information about the companies they own. That is the direction the rest of the world is moving. It should be the direction of U.S. securities regulation as well.
Respectfully submitted,
David Trainer Chief Executive Officer New Constructs, LLC 5110 Maryland Way, Suite 350 Brentwood, TN 37027 david.trainer@newconstructs.com
New Constructs, LLC is an independent financial research firm specializing in forensic accounting and fundamental analysis. The firm analyzes more than 10,000 public securities using data derived from financial statement footnotes and regulatory filings.

Norma Castro Corporate Paralegal — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Norma Castro As a corporate legal employee I think that quarterly earnings reporting is essential for corporations to be transparent with its investors, employees and even themselves. Quarterly earning reports helps investors make decisions about where to invest. These earnings reports also benefit the companies themselves as they can self audit and catch problems like fraud early. It also reassures the public to know the legitimacy of businesses. Also think about how many more jobs will be lost in this already struggling economy. This seems very politically driven as it seems as if it is to gain favor with corporations and getting rid of the protections that we the people rely on.

P. Vagnoni Investor — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: P. Vagnoni Keep quarterly reporting!

Pamela Style Associate, Retail — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pamela Keep the Quarterly Reporting Rule. It is important that ALL investors have TIMELY access to financial reports in order to be able to make informed and intelligent decisions.

Patricia A Hampton Advocate — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia A Hampton Let's keep it honest; With Quarterly reports view the validity of one's behaviors and strategies for quality of actions and future projections, intentions with factually of outcomes while progress takes place. Without the Quarterly results there's greater possibilities of loosing expected outcomes with minimal opportunity to correct before disaster imploded. It not rocket science its precaution of failures without accountability.

Patricia M Allen Retired Teacher — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia M Allen Please continue quarterly reporting. There have been too many instances of misusing company funds or sloppy directing of investing that harm the financial stability of innocent people.

Pedro Maynes — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pedro Maynes What is it that they're trying to hide? Honesty, Transparencies, and Quaterly Records Goes Hand-In-Hand.!.!.!. .

PJC — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: PJC Quarterly reporting is best for the US and its citizens. It was changed years ago for a reason. How can we determine what's best for our portfolios if we are not getting accurate reporting? Changing this policy ONLY benefits billionaires. Don't they already benefit enough since our president has made their lives grand? It's time to look out for middle America! We are drowning and our retirement portfolios are all we have left!

R. Neal Engineering and Science — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: R. Neal Quarterly reporting should remain required. The problem and cost associated with compliance for quarterly reports should only get easier and less burdensome with the incorporation of AI into more accounting structures. If burden is the challenge, the SEC could also reduce the number of non-business-oriented items needed for quarterly reporting. The problem of short-term thinking and business incentives lies more with the organizations and management, and their compensation structures. This would not reliably be corrected by reducing the cadence of reporting financials to the shareholders, and would in fact make it much harder to recognize if patterns or behaviors are changing. Overall, as shareholders in a business, it is critical to be able to understand the operations of that business on a more regular schedule to understand the performance of the business and the executive team and board running that business. Reducing reporting frequency will dramatically overprivilege insiders and incentivize more unsavory/unethical/illegal practices, while retail investors trying to manage to climb the ladder and share in the success of the US economy and US businesses will be left playing the sucker, having to operate on less frequent insights into the business. Do not promote more insider privileges, keep quarterly reporting. Thanks for your consideration, R.

Randall Bevin Scott — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Randall Bevin Scott I do not want changes to the quarterly reporting . We the people don't want companies to be in the the dark for 6 months before required reporting is done. That is not in the best interest of us investors. Thank you.

Randall Johnson — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Randall Johnson Quarterly reports provide valuable insight for retail investors and others. Without these regular, public updates, it will give people with more access to non public company information a greater advantage than they already have. Quarterly reports should continue to be the standard.

RANDALL WARREN BOEHMER none — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: RANDALL WARREN BOEHMER Keep it quarterly to keep it honest.

Raynor Construction Owner — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Raynor Construction Thus is absolutely one of the worst ideas yet and there have been plenty. If killing small business and awareness is your goal well Kudos

---

RC — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: RC I believe that proposed rule S7-2026-15 will dilute transparency and make informed investing decisions less obtainable.

Rene Retired Cardiac Sonographer — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rene Quarterly statements allow me to adjust how I live. Being retired I need to be aware of changes more frequently.

Richard Sanford, Jr. Retired Investor, former SVP American Stock Exchange — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Sanford, Jr. Accounting has made a giant leap since then, allowing most companies to close quarterly accounts quickly and accurately. The AICPA, FASB, SEC have helped to keep quarterly financial reporting timely, transparent and meaningful to investors. Yes, quarters have their variabilities, but that's the nature of the US economic environment. Plus, management can help fill in the gaps with investors in quarterly reports. More information is better; less means more uncertainty. As an individual investor, and as an interested party for all other Equity investors, and our economy, keep quarterly reports for public traded companies.

Robert Gotshall — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Gotshall There a reason there quarterlies, there no reason to do away with them. Do the right thing for doing the right thing in Corporate America. We been down this road before. Remember Enron.

Robin LeBrun — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robin LeBrun I am writing to formally voice my strong opposition to the proposed change extending the filing timeline to a 6-month period . As a retired Registered Nurse (RN), I rely on a stable, predictable, and transparent financial market to preserve the retirement savings I worked my entire career to build. Extending filing intervals significantly reduces market transparency. This lack of timely information exposes retail investors like myself to heightened, unnecessary financial risks and potential market losses that I cannot afford to recover from at this stage of my life . Furthermore, reducing corporate accountability by limiting regular financial disclosures moves our markets away from democratic transparency and one step closer to an oligarchy, where corporate entities operate with less public oversight. Market integrity depends on regular, timely information for all investors, not just a privileged few.I urge the Commission to reject this proposal and maintain the current, more frequent filing requirements to protect vulnerable retail investors and uphold fair market standards.

Roger Johns Retired — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Roger Johns Corporate financial reporting needs to remain a quarterly requirement.

Rosemary Deese — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rosemary Deese Keep reporting quarterly. More accountability.

RSM US LLP — Jul 1, 2026
July 1, 2026
Ms. Vanessa A. Countryman
Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, NE
Washington, DC 20549-1090
Re: Proposed Rule 33-11414, Semiannual Reporting, File Number S7-2026-15
30 South Wacker Drive
30 South Wacker Drive
30 South Wacker Drive
30 South Wacker Drive
Suite 3300
Suite 3300
Suite 3300
Suite 3300
Chicago, IL 60606
Chicago, IL 60606
Chicago, IL 60606
Chicago, IL 60606
www.rsmus.com
www.rsmus.com
www.rsmus.com
www.rsmus.com
Dear Ms. Countryman:
RSM US LLP (RSM, “we”) appreciates the opportunity to comment on the Securities and Exchange Commission’s (“SEC” or “Commission”) Proposed Rule 33-11414, Semiannual Reporting (“Proposal”).
RSM is the leading provider of assurance, tax and consulting services focused on the middle market, with nearly 18,000 professionals in 77 U.S. cities, six locations in Canada, one in El Salvador and four in India.
Overall Comments on the Proposal
We believe that investor confidence in information provided by issuers is fundamental to the successful operation of the U.S. financial markets and that the Commission's disclosure framework supports the timely, reliable and decision-useful flow of information to investors. We commend the Commission's ongoing efforts to maintain investor protection and improve the efficiency of the financial reporting system and appreciate the commitment to revisiting and updating the financial reporting requirements through a focus on materiality and scalability of disclosure and reporting requirements. We recognize the operational and cost burdens associated with periodic reporting and are broadly supportive of the Commission's efforts to evaluate and modernize the interim reporting framework to provide additional access to the capital markets through cost savings to issuers.

Regardless of the decisions made to change issuers' quarterly reporting requirements, we understand the impact on the underlying assurance and believe we will be able to adjust and continue to serve investors by providing interim review or other services, as appropriate, to enhance the quality and reliability of financial information disclosed in SEC filings.
The economic analysis of the Proposal primarily focuses on the transition to semiannual reporting as a standalone change. However, this modification occurs concurrently with two other significant proposed rules changes for the simplification of filer status and the modernization of registered offerings. All three initiatives aim to achieve similar objectives, including reducing compliance costs, enhancing access to capital, and maintaining essential protections for investors. In addition to other recommendations discussed in this letter, we encourage the Commission to consider evaluating the combined impact of these three proposals to identify potential overlaps or diminishing returns resulting from the cumulative effects of the rules. This comprehensive look will aid in informing whether any adjustments are necessary to balance the goals of facilitating capital formation and safeguarding investor interests.
Our responses to the questions posed in the Request for Comment for which we have relevant knowledge and experience as a provider of audit services to issuers, other than those directed to investors and preparers and certain other questions that we believe are best addressed by other stakeholders, are included in the remainder of this letter.

Comments on Specific Questions Posed by the Commission
5. We are proposing that the filing deadlines for semiannual reports on Form 10-S be the same as for quarterly reports on Form 10-Q. Should the filing deadline for semiannual reports on Form 10-S be longer or shorter than proposed? If so, what would be an appropriate filing deadline? Do companies need more time to prepare semiannual reports than quarterly reports and if so, why? Should smaller public companies, newly public companies, or emerging growth companies be afforded a longer filing deadline for Form 10-S to allow for additional time to consult with their accountants and advisers?

We support the Commission's proposal to align the filing deadlines for semiannual reports on Form 10-S with the existing deadlines for quarterly reports on Form 10-Q. While a semiannual reporting period encompasses six months of activity, we do not believe this necessarily translates into a proportionate increase in reporting and review complexity and the need for additional time for review under the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (PCAOB) Auditing Standard (AS) 4105 procedures. Assuming issuers continue to maintain proper controls and perform robust close procedures on either a quarterly or semi-annual basis, depending on the reporting frequency elected, extended filing time does not appear necessary
Although certain processes, such as management review and auditor procedures, may involve incremental effort due to the longer reporting period, we believe registrants can reasonably meet the proposed deadlines without compromising reporting quality. Accordingly, we do not believe extended filing deadlines are necessary, provided the underlying reporting framework remains clear and consistent.
10. Our proposal would require Exchange Act reporting companies that elect to file semiannual reports to continue with that interim reporting frequency for the rest of the fiscal year in which the election was made. Therefore, companies would not be allowed to file a semiannual report on Form 10-S for the first six months of a fiscal year and then file a quarterly report for the third quarter for that fiscal year.
Likewise, companies would not be allowed to file a quarterly report on Form 10-Q for the first quarter of a fiscal year, file a semiannual report on Form 10-S for the first six months for that fiscal year, and not file a quarterly report on Form 10-Q for the third fiscal quarter. Would this proposed approach help avoid potential confusion that could be caused by changes in interim reporting frequency during a fiscal year? Is it necessary to add any language to the proposed rules to make more explicit the requirement to maintain the selected frequency for the full fiscal year? Rather than the proposed approach, should we allow: (1) semiannual filers and quarterly filers to make a change in interim reporting frequency during the fiscal year, or (2) only semiannual filers to switch to filing quarterly reports during the fiscal year? Should issuers that elect semiannual reporting be required to commit to that disclosure frequency for a certain period of time? Why or why not?
We believe limiting issuers to an annual election of interim reporting frequency could unintentionally restrict the availability of information without necessarily reducing investor risk. Accordingly, we recommend that the Commission consider allowing issuers that elect semiannual reporting on Form 10-S to also file quarterly financial information on Form 10-Q when circumstances warrant. For example, if an issuer determines that additional information is needed to support a capital raise or meet market expectations, prohibiting a third-quarter transition from semiannual to quarterly reporting could impede capital formation for some issuers. This concern could be addressed by either making semiannual reporting mandatory while permitting optional quarterly reporting or retaining an annual election while allowing semiannual filers to voluntarily provide quarterly information. However, we do not believe issuers should be permitted to switch from quarterly to semiannual reporting after making an annual election, as doing so could reduce the information investors expect to receive.

12. Should correction of errors with respect to the Form 10-K check box related to semiannual reporting be permitted as we propose? Are the proposed time limits on when an error correction may be made appropriate? In addition to allowing error correction in an amended Form 10-K—or in lieu thereof—should we allow check box error correction through a Form 8-K filing?

Although market participants outside the public accounting profession may be better positioned to address certain aspects of this question, including how the form of correction may affect investors and issuers, we support the Commission's proposal for error correction through an amended Form 10-K. Clear guidance on the required correction method would help reduce diversity in practice and limit potential ambiguity in filing expectations from an investor perspective. Requiring correction through an amended Form 10-K also avoids leaving an inaccurate annual report on file and promotes clarity in the public record.

15. As an alternative to the proposal for optional semiannual reporting, should we instead revise the disclosure requirements of Form 10-Q to reduce the burden on reporting companies of filing this form, such as amending the current rules for the required interim financial statement review by an independent public accountant, XBRL data tagging, MD&A, information about unregistered sales of registrant securities pursuant to 17 CFR 229.701 (Item 701 of Regulation S-K), or year-to-date comparisons involving financial statements and MD&A? How should these requirements, or any other requirements of Form 10-Q, be revised? What aspects of Form 10-Q's current reporting framework are most burdensome for reporting companies?

The dependability, transparency and timeliness of financial information provided by issuers establishes a foundational knowledge base that enables effective capital formation through informed investor insights.

We believe the current requirements for interim reporting on Form 10-Q has created a culture of transparency for investors and rigor for issuers that has supported the continued elevation of the U.S. capital markets. Although the historical precedence has been effective, we believe that the addition of the available interim semiannual reporting frequency is reasonable and appropriate to aid in increasing access to the capital markets while maintaining investor protection.

If the Commission determines that the adoption of the Proposal is not appropriate, we advise the Commission to perform additional outreach to issuers and investors. This outreach could identify potential changes within the current reporting requirements that are determined to be burdensome or of decreased importance to investors. We recognize the concerns regarding the growing volume of interim disclosures and believe that continued refinement of disclosure requirements in line with the Commission's initiative related to the modernization of regulations, with a focus on the materiality and scalability of disclosures, would be appropriate.

20. In connection with any adoption of the proposal, should there be a new requirement for semiannual filers that announce or release earnings for the first or third quarters of their fiscal year (i.e., the periods that would later be subsumed in Forms 10-S and 10-K but for which there would be no quarterly report filed with the Commission)—that financial information in any first or third quarter earnings releases be reviewed by an independent public accountant? If so, would any changes to current auditing standards (e.g., governing reviews) be required?

Due to the lack of a reporting framework for earnings releases, the furnished documents inherently have diversity in the financial and narrative information provided. This diversity results in information that can create reduced comparability but additionally allows issuers flexibility to best illustrate their company's performance in line with investor expectations. Although the lack of a reporting framework allows for customization to meet the needs of investors, we believe that if market participants or the Commission determine that assurance over earnings releases is desirable, a clear reporting framework would need to be established and potential corresponding changes or clarifying guidance provided for the application of professional auditing and attestation standards would be necessary.
24. Would the nature and extent of procedures that an independent public accountant performs during a review change depending upon whether the independent public accountant is performing a review over a fiscal semiannual period or a fiscal quarterly period? Would independent public accountants conducting reviews do the same amount of work for a fiscal semiannual period as they currently do for two quarterly fiscal periods on a combined basis? Would an independent public accountant experience any impact on efficiency or economies of scale when conducting reviews and annual audits under semiannual reporting versus under quarterly reporting for the same company? Would any changes to independent public accountants' review or audit procedures or any impact on efficiency or economies of scale result in changes in costs to companies? If so, describe the impact and whether the impact could vary depending upon the size of the registrant subject to the review.
We believe the nature and extent of review procedures performed under PCAOB AS 4105 would generally remain consistent regardless of whether the review covers a quarterly or semiannual period. A single semiannual review would likely require less aggregate effort than the separate reviews for the first three quarters of an entity's fiscal year; however, the reduction in effort would not be one-for-one due to the need to understand six months of financial information within the semiannual review versus three months for a quarterly review. In addition, procedures currently performed on a quarterly basis—such as testing of internal control activities and substantive procedures to support the opinion on the annual financial statements and internal controls over financial reporting—will still need to be performed, regardless of the cadence of interim reporting resulting in the need for issuers to maintain robust internal controls and close processes. As a result, while some cost savings may be realized, these savings may be more modest than anticipated and would vary based on a registrant's size, complexity and transaction volume.

26. For semiannual filers, what impact would a shift to semiannual reporting have on: (1) companies' disclosure controls and procedures, (2) companies' internal control over financial reporting, and (3) independent public accountants' strategy and approach for the annual audit of companies' internal control over financial reporting or financial statements? With semiannual reporting, is there a potential for a material increase in the risk that material misstatements (either due to error or fraud) or control deficiencies are not timely detected by or communicated to the independent public accountant thereby limiting potential remediation of these issues by the issuer? Please provide any data related to these questions.
A shift to semiannual reporting would primarily affect the frequency, rather than the design, of disclosure controls and procedures. Although these controls would still need to operate effectively, less frequent reporting could reduce opportunities to identify, communicate and remediate issues timely. This, in turn, could affect management's assessment of internal control, the auditor's opinion on internal control and investor confidence in the financial information if more material weaknesses are reported.

With respect to internal controls over financial reporting and audit strategy, auditors would likely continue performing interim testing throughout the year to support audit quality. However, fewer interim reviews under AS 4105 could increase the risk that material misstatements or control deficiencies are not detected timely and are reported later than under a quarterly reporting model. Companies could mitigate this risk by continuing to operate key controls on a quarterly or more frequent basis, even if formal reporting occurs semiannually. The Commission should also consider if there is information included in the quarterly filings that is useful to investors and users and should be provided through another means such as 8-K current reporting.

27. Would there be reduced securities analyst coverage of Exchange Act reporting companies that elect the semiannual reporting option as compared to quarterly filers? Would underwriters' requests for independent public accountants to provide "comfort letters" in securities offerings (to support potential due diligence defenses) lead semiannual filers to continue to retain independent public accountants to conduct quarterly financial statement reviews? If so, are changes needed to PCAOB Auditing Standards (regarding reviews by independent public accountants)?92 For example, to comport with semiannual reporting, are changes needed to PCAOB Auditing Standard 6101, Letters for Underwriters and Certain Other Requesting Parties, to permit independent public accountants to provide comfort letters expressing negative assurance on changes subsequent to the date and period of the latest financial statements included (or incorporated by reference) in the registration statement? If semiannual filers would continue to prepare quarterly financial information or to retain independent public accountants to conduct quarterly reviews, should the Commission make any rule changes or take any other steps to address this issue?
While other market participants outside of the public accounting profession are better positioned to assess potential impacts on analyst coverage and market demands as related to reporting needs to support capital formation, we believe it is important to distinguish between the ability to issue comfort letters and the scope of assurance that can be provided. Existing PCAOB standards limit negative assurance when the most recent audited or reviewed financial information becomes stale. Specifically, PCAOB AS 6101.47 provides that if an underwriter requests negative assurance about subsequent changes in specified financial statement items as of a date 135 days or more subsequent to the end of the most recent period subject to an audit or a review, accountants may not provide negative assurance and are limited to reporting procedures performed and findings obtained. However, those standards still permit comfort letters to be provided for both quarterly and semiannual interim reporting timelines as demonstrated by their current use for domestic and foreign filers.
The current standards framework can accommodate a semiannual reporting model, with market participants determining whether additional interim reviews are warranted in connection with specific transactions to allow firms to provide negative assurance. Accordingly, we do not believe changes to PCAOB AS 6101 are necessary to support semiannual reporting, as similar dynamics already exist that will drive the market to expand procedures and disclosures if required.
28. Would our proposal have any impact on a semiannual filer's application of relevant accounting standards to prepare financial statements in accordance with U.S. GAAP, IFRS, or home-country GAAP? How? Are any changes to accounting standards, including U.S. GAAP or IFRS, necessary or appropriate to effectuate semiannual reporting (e.g., changes to the guidance on annual impairment testing, lag reporting, earnings per share, or other topics of authoritative guidance)?

We believe the Proposal would require the Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB) to consider targeted amendments to the Accounting Standards Codification (ASC) that assumes quarterly reporting.

Certain areas of the ASC that may need to be reassessed for application in a semiannual reporting framework include Topic 260, Earnings Per Share; Topic 270, Interim Reporting; and Topic 280, Segment Reporting. The FASB may also want to reconsider the quarterly hedge effectiveness reassessment requirements in Topic 815, Derivatives and Hedging, including some of the implementation guidance in Topic 740, Income Taxes.
If the Commission moves forward with a semiannual reporting option, we recommend that the FASB conduct a comprehensive review of the ASC to determine what amendments are needed. We generally believe most of the changes could likely be achieved through the FASB's evergreen Codification Improvements project.
* * * * *
We appreciate this opportunity to provide feedback on the Request for Comment and would be pleased to respond to any questions the SEC or its staff may have about our comments. Please direct any questions to Rich Davisson, Partner, National Professional Standards Group, at 574.296.3747, or Adam Hallemeyer, Chief Auditor, at 619.641.7318.
Sincerely,
RSM US LLP

Ruth Summers Tweedle Corresponding Secretary CLIFF Cultural Literacy Intelligence Foundation Federation — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ruth Summers Tweedle The grifters in business quietly stealing is not a factor that improves life for the majority of people. Oversight is totally necessary as U.S. CEOs make 500% more than median employees, while in Asia and Europe it is 19% to 28% more than median employees. 🙏🏽 U.S. Workers are already being ripped off by big corporations plus attacks on social programs. Don't make it easier. Why should some people hoard money out of ego when these same funds can create better paying jobs in public and private sectors?

Sally Van Sickle — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sally Van Sickle Quarterly reporting is beneficial to everyone from the CEO to the mail handler. It provides guidance to investors that bi-annual reporting would avoid. Only those in the C-suite would have accurate information for the majority of the year with bi-annual reporting. Please keep required reporting on a quarterly basis for corporations.

Samantha Whiteside — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Samantha Whiteside I oppose moving to only reporting 2x a year. What a MASSIVE mistake this would be for the public at large, financial transparency, and basic common sense.

Sandy Hauser None — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sandy Hauser Keep it quarterly!!. With what is happening in the US in the last 2 years big business needs to be more transparent then ever. We must have accountability at all levels from top to bottom.

Sarah Simpson AICPA — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sarah Simpson Quarterly reporting is essential for every day investors to stay aware of what is occurring in the companies they are invested in. Quarterly reporting is essential to keeping confidence in the stock market and investment world.

Sheridan Lloyd None — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sheridan Lloyd Quarterly reporting is a requirement since 1934; changing it to “allow” companies to file semiannual reports in lieu of quarterly reports creates confusion and a “non-standard” reporting system among companies. There may be some companies that report quarterly, and some that are report semi- annually. This would remove the ability of comparing market & economy effects on each company and thus a component of sound investment analysis. There must be consistency in reporting for all companies, for all investors. Please maintain the current SEC requirement for corporate reporting.

Sreenivasa Bahudodda — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sreenivasa Bahudodda Quarterly reporting by companies must remain mandatory. Recurring the reporting frequency to semi annual will adversely impact the investors. Please keep quarterly reporting intact to protect the customers.

Stacey Henning — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stacey Henning As an active individual investor, I rely on quarterly reports to track and trend company performance for stocks that I own and when I consider future purchases. Six months between reports is too long. As an employee of a Fortune 20 company, my performance grade is tied to our quarterly and annual results. Receiving feedback twice a year is not often enough to course correct.

Stephanie Cluff — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephanie Cluff As an individual investor I rely heavily on the quarterly reports to manage my investments. Im very concerned about the proposal to switch to semi annual reporting because it would make it significantly more difficult for individual investors while benefiting insiders.

Stephen M Platt — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen M Platt As an investor, I rely on up-to-date, relevant, and complete reporting of the financial and business statuses of companies. Quarterly reports were infrequent enough; going to semi-annual makes the information practically useless. It reduces the value of the information. It decreases transparency. It increases the imbalance between corporations and the individuals that make up this nation (and, in essence, create and support companies generting 10-Q reports). Going to semi-annual reporting is a horrendous idea. It further distances modern America from "We the People of the United States" and does nothing but increase the distrust of citizens from the government by demonstrating that the Government supports corporate entities over its citizens. Do not approve this proposed change.

Steve Elliott — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve Elliott Please leave quarterly reporting mandatory, allowing companies to only report twice yearly would be damaging to the way most investors view the market. As retail investor I like to know quarterly about how the company is preforming so I can sleep at night.

Steve Schultz Senior global equities portfolio manager, South Dakota Investment Council — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve Schultz Reducing the amount of required disclosure to minority shareholders by 50% is a bad idea. Fewer quality data points will decrease confidence and increase volatility unnecessarily.

Sundee Koffarnus — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sundee Koffarnus As an individual investor, I deserve transparent communication regularly from the business I invest in. A reduction in the frequency of reports would make everyone less informed. I ask that the reporting frequency remain as is.

Sung Lee — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sung Lee I would want public-company reports stay as four times a year, NOT two.

Susan Fuller — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Fuller PLEASE DO NOT CHANGE QUARTERLY REPORTING TO BI-ANNUALLY. THIS WILL WIPE OUT RETIREE'S INVESTMENTS AND WE WILL NEVER CAST ANOTHER REPUBLICAN VOTE AGAIN! YOU WILL KILL THE REPUBLICAN PARTY. DONALD JOHN TRUMP DOES NOT WANT THIS DESECRATION ON HIS LEGACY. IT WILL BE DECADES BEFORE ANYONE VOTES REPUBLICAN AGAIN. PLEASE STOP THIS INSANITY. Susan Fuller 678-283-5757 susiesf4@gmail.com

---

Susan Guyaux — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Susan Guyaux Affiliation: Jul. 1, 2026 Hiding their corruption even better now! I guess you are on their side, not ours. Sometimes you just have to do the “right” thing. Please do it this time. Quarterly reports are a good thing for them and us.

Sincerely

Susan Guyaux
131 N Golfview rd
Lake Wirth Beach, FL

Susan Mello-Conroy Retired librarian — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Mello-Conroy This is outrageous; why is the SEC doing this.

Susan Pencille Investor — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Pencille I believe Semi-annual reporting would reduce transparency. As an Investor/owner I prefer to have information to make informed decisions. Quarterly reports provide a more current view of what is taking place. Small or gradual changes will be easier to track with less chance of surprises that could arise in a six month time frame.

Susan Prin None — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Prin I am an 80-year-old widow who reads these quarterly statements. I rely on current, correct information to help me make the best educated, informed investment decisions about my future. I am concerned that longer gaps in reporting may result in a drop in the quality of disclosure information. It may also encourage corporate insiders to go outside the law to make questionable decisions that will not be noticed until the damage is done. Please keep these reports quarterly! Thank you.

Susan Sullivan — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Sullivan I am oopposedto this as it removes a layer of accountability to the public.

Suzanne Young — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Suzanne Young The reporting status should remain the same, quarterly. I have been an individual investor for decades and I find the quarterly reports important and valuable in my decision-making about stocks. Six months can go by and a company could be doing far worse or better than they reported at the last quarterly reporting and in the meantime, people within the business and their friends will be doing insider trading. I also feel that reporting every six months will lead to spikes, whether up or down, that will be much more dramatic. I'm asking you to consider the impact and leave quarterly reporting as it is.

T Henderson Retiree — Jul 1, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: T Henderson I am a retiree who relies heavily on investment income from a lifetime of savings, and following my investments on a rigorous quarterly schedule. I rely on quarterly reports. Semi-annual reports offer almost no savings, at a considerable cost to transparency. I STRONGLY SUPPORT quarterly reporting and STRONGLY OPPOSE going to a semi-annual basis.

T. Leff (Individual) — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: T. Leff (Individual) I am against the proposed change to semiannual reporting, and believe that current regulations should stay in place. Transparency is critical. We need more timely information with which to make informed investments, not less. Delayed reporting practices only benefit those on the inside, at the expense of general citizens.

T. McDonald — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: T. McDonald Do not move to semi-annual reporting for companies. It should stay the way it has been for the past half century, financial reporting every 3 months - this allows for transparency. Reducing that allows companies to hide issues from retail investors (which make up a large portion of the investment class). Reducing transparency impact us. Expanding the time allows companies the time to hide issues, like: ballooning debt, vanishing customers, failed product launches, etc. They should not be allowed to hide these issues if they want us to invest in them and the stock market.

Tanya Carlson None — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tanya Carlson I'm writing to express my strong opposition to the proposal to reduce quarterly reporting to semi-annual. Implementing this proposal would dramatically reduce the transparency and information investors need to make investment decisions and the negative impact would disproportionately affect individual investors.

Teresa L Eichholz Retiree and 457 holder — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Teresa L Eichholz I am one of many who support maintaining quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. Regular financial disclosures promote transparency, accountability, and informed decision-making for investors. As an individual investor and retirement saver, I rely on timely public information to understand how companies are performing. Reducing reporting frequency could make it harder to identify risks early and would provide less transparency for everyday investors. Please preserve quarterly reporting requirements.

Tesia Houlette — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tesia Houlette Don't reduce reports, we want transparency

---

Thad Richardson — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thad Richardson As an equity owner I am against the proposed relaxed reporting criteria. While appearing beneficial for the entity it is not in the best interest of the owners. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

The Motley Fool Community. None — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. This is not saving us any more time or money .and in the long run, will increase the amount of work. Please reject this proposal.

Tina Watson — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tina Watson In this day and age of fraud, scams, the ever increasing (though not necessarily accurate) interpretation by AI combined with economic upheaval caused by policies of current administrations, it is ludicrous to propose that less reporting to investors is acceptable. This is tantamount to "I need to borrow some money", then "what do you need it for?", then "I'll tell you later. Ridiculous.

Tony Kern — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tony Kern No, I do not support this recommendation — for the following reasons: 1. Consistent Price Discovery: Regular quarterly disclosures ensure all investors receive timely and simultaneous information, allowing the market to accurately price risk. 2. Enhanced Accountability: It serves as a vital tool to deter fraud and market manipulation by keeping companies under regular public scrutiny under the current system. 3. Reduced Information Gap: Quarterly reports prevent longer periods where insiders can hold material, nonpublic information, thereby increasing the risk of insider trading. 4. Improved Capital Allocation: By providing a reliable cadence of quarterly data, it helps level the playing field between large institutional firms and smaller independent advisors, who rely heavily on public data. 5. Easier Trend Tracking: The current construct enables companies and investors to analyze both short- and long-term financial growth by easily comparing older reports to more recent performance.

Trevor Rizzolo — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Trevor Rizzolo The proposed rule is ridiculous on its face. Quarterly reporting ensures transparency and fair market reporting for all economic stakeholders, including individual investors, employees who deserve accourate estimation of their company's finances, and other businesses which make decisions based on the included information. It's also a critical tool for exposing gaps between what sugarcoating the marketing team provides publicly and how the companies are actually positioned financially, a gap we all know the industries are trying to widen by passing this ridiculous change

---

Vince Zegarelli Taxpayer/investor — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vince Zegarelli Don't pass this as it's not a good idea and if you need a reminder as to why remember Enron.

Vincent B — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vincent B I STORNGLY disagree with this proposal which puts at risk investors. As a private investor, the quarterly financial results are one of the most important sources of updates from the companies I am investing in. Allowing companies to switch from quarterly to semi-annual reports will create obscurity which will make the interpretation of companies' directions more difficult to follow. In addition to my own readings, I am also leveraging services that take care of analyzing those quarterly results, and the frequency at which the companies emit the reports is crucial to the quality of the information they will be sending me, on which I base my investment strategies. Thanks for considering this feedback and BLOCKING this proposal.

Virginia Mahoney — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Virginia Mahoney KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING!! Listen to US, the PEOPLE, PLEASE!! Restore our faith in government! I deserve to be heard, and listened to. KEEP REPORTING on a QUARTERLY basis. Thank you.

W noble — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: W noble Keep quartly reporting, we already have enough chaos, do not engender more

---

Wilton Neville Private Investor — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wilton Neville S7-2026-15 should NOT be allowed to be enacted! This change to 10Q quarterly filing, allowing Publicly Traded companies to decide when they want to file will only increase their ability to commit fraud, hide possible negative information that can harm investors, and/or delay information that enables 'insiders' to profit, while the general investor is left without that same information. This change should be quashed - unless those proposing it are intentionally doing it for the reasons above! If enacted it will eventually destroy the faith in our stock market system, knowing that the game is rigged and only a very small segment of the population can ever profit from it!

Woody Woodring The Motley Fool Community — Jul 1, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Woody Woodring Quarterly reporting protects individual investors. Semiannual reporting doubles the information gap between insiders and ordinary shareholders. That gap is where volatility, uncertainty, and mistrust grow. The short-termism diagnosis doesn't justify this remedy. Research from the CFA Institute, which studied this exact maneuver in the U.K. market, shows that reporting frequency has no measurable effect on corporate investment behavior. The SEC is accepting a real cost – less transparency for individual investors – for a benefit that the evidence says simply won't materialize. The companies most likely to opt out are the ones where oversight matters most. Smaller, less-covered businesses operate with less scrutiny. Reducing their reporting requirements makes them harder to monitor, not easier to own. This is the wrong direction. Reg FD moved toward a more level playing field. This proposal moves away from it. What, exactly, is the problem? As the WallStreetBets comment letter put it: "The companies we trade are not being held back from greatness by the obligation to file four reports a year. ... The entire S&P 500 files a 10-Q every quarter, and the S&P 500 is at an all-time high. If quarterly reporting is crushing American capitalism, American capitalism is hiding it well." pls fix

---

A. Bober — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A. Bober Lack of oversight is what allowed the Enron debacle and the 2008 mortgage banking crisis to occur, While quarterly reporting isn't a panacea, it does hold business executives much more accountable than semiannual reported does, and will help protect investors, and especially small investors who rely on their 401k's and IRAs to live in retirement, from financial ruin. SEC financial reporting requirements should be kept at least quarterly.

Aaron Bush Managing Partner, Naavik — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aaron Bush I strongly oppose making company reporting less frequent, because a reduction in transparency only harms individual (and professional) investors. We all benefit when our most important companies are more transparent and share updates more frequently. If this unfortunate change occurs, the public will receive far less information, making it harder to make smart decisions as individuals and increasing the likelihood that companies will leave investors in the dark more often, which only brings harm. Please consider not making this change. Thank you.

Akash — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Akash I do not support semi annual reports and I strongly support quarterly reports that bring more transparency to the company finances to investors as well as millions of Americans whose 401(k) retirement accounts are often tied up with their own company stock. A longer term reporting will make wrong be hidden from investors for long time and reduces accountability and encourages corruption. We should learn from our own history but if we have forgotten that then look at other countries where reporting requirements are semiannual or annual and their companies are filled inefficiency, corruption, lack of accountability and monopolies. We can be better and don't have change something that's working already great in our quest to make America great. Thanks.

Alex Buttery None, investor — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alex Buttery Please keep reporting quarterly to protect transparency of corporate finances. My fear is that companies will hide non- favorable data if they only have to report results every 6 months.

Alice Campbell — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alice Campbell Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep quarterly reporting. Business cycles are much shorter than in the past, and shareholders and investors need the information. Please vote against quarterly reporting

☕☕☕

Alicia — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alicia They should not reduce this, it holds people with so much power accountable. The position they have makes them leaders and our society. And with great power comes great responsibility. And if they're in that position for corruption and self gain, we the people need checks and balances to keep our society, our people and home safe. If these people want to be leaders, they should act like it. And a real leader cares about those they're guiding. A leaders goal isn't what is best for themselves or profit. A leader takes into consideration what his people need as an individual human. What the 'team' is capable of and how we could all work cohesively and happily. Are we going to step into the future as a species or are we going to continue to perpetuate destructive rhetoric.

Allen Kiser — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Allen Kiser Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Eradicate the bullshit and stop the theft of The American people

---

Allison — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Allison As an individual saving for retirement, I strongly oppose this change. Semi-annual reporting removes the transparency that people rely on to make educated decisions with their investments. Keep it quarterly.

Andrew Laucher — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Laucher Keep reporting quarterly, as is now. Do not change the reporting requirements to 6 months. Allow a fair playing field for everyday investors.

Andy Cross — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andy Cross Strongly encourage the SEC to continue the practice of quarterly reporting for all sized companies. Information and data is the lifeblood of investing. Individual investors, let alone professional money managers and institutions, who are real owners of companies, need to hear from the companies they own. We need to see the financial numbers. We need to hear the context. We need to understand from our management teams and see how our capital is invested and to what end. Quarterly reporting helps with this. Removing it, or granting permission to lesson the frequency of reporting, eliminates our access to information and could grant advantages to larger players in the market who already have significant resources and advantages (along with some disadvantages, too). Our focus on long-term investing does not mean we blindly put tuck our heads down and pay not attention to quarterly results. It's a time check for us to gain insights that we can use to make insightful, purposeful, informed decisions. Do not take this flow of oxygen away from us. Please. Keep quarterly reporting. For all investors.

Angie Nanz — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Angie Nanz I worked at MCI during the Worldcom acquisition. Prior to Worldcom's collapse, executive leadership was not pushing down budgets to the lines of businesses. It was chaotic and unknown to employees what was going on until the charges were filed against Worldcom. It is absolutely imperative to keep reporting quarterly or else there is no sense of accountability at the highest levels of management. Prosecuting financial crimes at that level is also incredibly difficult and taxing. From start to finish, it takes years to investigate and years to prosecute. Quarterly reporting has not stopped accounting scandals but has lessened the frequency. Public companies need to be accountable not only to shareholders but to employees, clients, and consumers alike.

Anna Bertiger — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anna Bertiger Reducing required reporting frequency does not allow better serving of investors. Instead, it better serves insiders as the information gap becomes larger. It also increases the potential for corruption, which is not good for the economy of the United States.

Anna Schneider — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Anna Schneider Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
We need more transparency, not less

AnnaMaria Lognion Associate Creative Director — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: AnnaMaria Lognion I've spent decades working to build a foundation for retirement and saving for the future of my disabled son. My family & I deserve transparency and accountability - the same thing expected from me at my job.

---

anonymous — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: anonymous NO! quarterly reporting provides a higher resolution on a companies performance. Every 6 months promotes even further manipulation. no on 6 month reporting.

Anonymous — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous My husband and I oppose semiannual statements. We want quarterly, even monthly, statements mailed to us. As seniors we are not trusting or savvy regarding the internet, online banking, identifying fake sites, spoof emails and the constant online burden to prove who we are. Too much time between statements gives companies the ability to do risky finances without the knowledge of investors. I don't trust the government to adequately police companies. It didn't go well in the past, I don't expect it today.

Anonymous — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 More transparency , not less!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 I think they should have to go over the books once a month . If it's your company , wouldn't you want to know what's going on .

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly

---

Anonymous — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly what you’re asking is not fair to the rest of us.

Anonymous — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly what you’re asking is not fair to the rest of us.

Anonymous — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly stop getting rich off of our backs

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 If it ain't broke, don't fix it. Keep it Quarterly!

Anonymous — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Rep it quarterly

---

Anonymous — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Rep it quarterly

---

Anonymous Educator, New York City Public Schools — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Keep quarterly reporting. The SEC should not allow a president to dictate how frequently companies report earnings and losses to investors. Investors should continue to be kept informed of what is happening with their investments on a quarterly basis. Semi-annual reporting allows companies to hide wrongdoing and removes investors' opportunities to make changes to their portfolios in a timely manner. It keeps investors in the dark for far too long. I urge the SEC to act independently of the president and the billionaire class and not be led around by people who are trying to manipulate the market and the economy. Please consider the public good rather than the benefit of the one percent. Have they not benefited enough?

Anonymous None — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I oppose the proposed change to allow companies to file semi-annual reports. This will disadvantage small investors and allow for more insider trading. We need more transparency, not less. I propose monthly disclosure.

Arva Brown — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Arva Brown Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it Quarterly! Keep it Fair!

Sent from my iPhone

Association of Professional Accountants — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Association of Professional Accountants Keep reporting quarterly. Retail investors count on that transparency to make informed decisions. Quarterly reporting has been proven to be the best time frame for investors who don't have the unfair advantage of insider information. We stand to lose a third or more of our invested money with the SEC proposal of allowing semi annual reporting by companies. KEEP SEC REPORTING QUARTERLY.

Baker Tilly US, LLP — Jun 30, 2026
Baker Tilly US, LLP
205 N Michigan Ave, 28th Fl

Chicago, IL 60601-5927
United States of America
T: +1 (312) 729 8000
F: +1 (312) 729 8199
bakertilly.com
June 30, 2026
Via email: rule-comments@sec.gov
Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, NE
Washington, DC 20549-1090
Re: Proposed Rule on Semiannual Reporting; File Number S7-2026-15
Dear Office of the Secretary:
Baker Tilly US, LLP ("Baker Tilly", "we" or "our") appreciates the opportunity to share our views and provide input on the Securities and Exchange Commission's ("Commission" or "SEC") File No. S7-2026-15, Proposed Rule on Semiannual Reporting (the "Proposed Rule" or "Proposal")1, which would provide all companies subject to reporting obligations under Exchange Act Section 13(a) or 15(d) ("reporting companies") that file quarterly reports the option to file interim reports on a semiannual basis.
Overall, Baker Tilly is supportive of the Commission's efforts to reduce the regulatory burdens of being a reporting company and to encourage more companies not only to go, but also remain, public in order to further the facilitation of capital formation. We are also cognizant of the need to balance those efforts with the two other prongs of the Commission's three-part mission to protect investors and maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets. In this letter, we comment through the lens of a public company auditor serving a broad spectrum of smaller and middle-market public clients, registered broker-dealers, and other stakeholders in the US capital markets, providing the following overarching observations to matters raised in the Proposal where we feel best served to provide input.
If the Commission decides to permit semiannual reporting, we support the flexibility permitted by the Proposal to allow reporting companies the option to elect on an annual basis to file semiannual reports instead of quarterly reports. The Proposal acknowledges that a company's determination of reporting frequency would likely "reflect a combination of firm-specific, market-based, and institutional considerations", and highlights that factors such as "(F)irm size, operating complexity, growth stage, and seasonality of business operations may influence both the perceived costs of quarterly reporting and the perceived benefits of more frequent disclosure." We agree with these observations, but further observe that the need (or desire) to access capital markets (including the anticipated frequency of accessing capital markets) will likely be a significant determining factor in a reporting company's determination of whether to elect to file semiannual reports instead of quarterly reports.

As noted in the Proposal, underwriters often request independent public accountants to provide "comfort letters" in securities offerings to support potential due diligence defenses. Auditors support strong capital markets by serving an important role in enhancing the quality and reliability of certain financial information disclosed in 1 Proposed Rule on Semiannual Reporting; Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140; File No. S7-2026-
15) [hereinafter "Proposed Rule" or "Proposal"].
Baker Tilly Advisory Group, LP and Baker Tilly US, LLP, trading as Baker Tilly, are members of the global network of Baker Tilly International Ltd., the members of which are separate and independent legal entities. Baker Tilly US, LLP is a licensed CPA firm that provides assurance services to its clients. Baker Tilly Advisory Group, LP and its subsidiary entities provide tax and consulting services to their clients and are not licensed CPA firms.

Commission filings to enhance investor protection. We believe the amendments within the Proposal are generally workable as proposed. Further, we believe PCAOB AS 6101, Letters for Underwriters and Certain Other Requesting Parties, currently accommodates auditors' ability to provide comfort letters under both a quarterly and semiannual reporting framework, and that the PCAOB standards as a whole are operational in their current form for comfort letters.
Notwithstanding the above, if companies elect semiannual reporting, we believe that reporting companies may choose a hybrid reporting approach and choose to provide financial information outside of Commission filings or present information that is not a full set of interim financial statements. Investors and/or other stakeholders may either (i) expect and/or assume a level of auditor involvement over that information given the historical requirements of Form 10-Q or (ii) require it (for example, in the context of a comfort letter in a securities offering). If assurance is desired in response to stakeholder preferences, underwriter needs or Commission requirements, the current PCAOB standards do not permit the provision of attest services (i.e. audit or review) over financial information that is not a full set of interim financial statements (with supporting footnotes). As such, we observe that reporting companies and their audit committees may request auditors to perform procedures akin to those outlined in AS 4105, Reviews of Interim Financial Information ("AS 4105"), over their quarterly earnings releases or over interim financial statements that exclude all or some footnotes required by the Financial Accounting Standards Board's Accounting Standards Codification Topic 270, Interim Reporting, which is not currently permitted under AS 4105 or other frameworks available to an auditor. Further we have also considered the potential impact of the hybrid reporting approach and believe there may be increased risk for less reliable financial information to be provided to investors when such information does not comprise a full set of interim financial statements and is therefore not subject to the entirety of management's broader financial reporting close process.

We believe that providing reporting companies the flexibility to determine the frequency of interim reporting that best suits the company and its investors acknowledges that a "one size fits all" approach may be too restrictive.
We also believe that optionality is consistent with the Commission's goal of establishing minimum requirements and allowing market participants to dictate reporting beyond those baseline standards. However, we have also considered whether the Commission's proposal addresses the root cause of interim reporting burdens felt by reporting companies such that rulemaking efforts may be better directed at revising the extent of interim disclosure requirements instead of the frequency of reporting. We suggest that the Commission study the root cause of the interim reporting burdens, including performing outreach to public reporting companies and investors directly, to assess whether providing optionality in frequency of interim reporting is the most effective means of addressing reducing regulatory burdens associated with interim reporting, or rather, whether reductions of interim disclosures or other alternatives would more directly address the hurdles faced by public companies.
We thank you for the opportunity to present our views and appreciate your consideration. We would be pleased to discuss our comments or answer questions regarding the views expressed in this letter. Please address questions to Fred Frank, Principal in our Professional Practice Group, by e-mail at Fred.Frank@bakertilly.com or Kathie Hennessey, Managing Director in our Professional Practice Group, by e-mail at Kathie.Hennessey@bakertilly.com.
Sincerely,

Barry Minish — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Barry Minish Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly

Sent from my iPhone

Becky Wood — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Becky Wood Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly ! Make sure businesses aren’t delaying their profits Becky Wood Michigan

Sent from my iPhone

Benjamin Brooks — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Benjamin Brooks Leaving the transparency of quarterly reporting would make me too in uneasy to leave my money in the market. It already has enough risk.

Betty A. Barr — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Betty A. Barr Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly. More accountability. Keep them honest.

Betty Bonanno — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Betty Bonanno Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Betty Bonanno — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Betty Bonanno Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Betty M — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Betty M Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it honest don't be deceitful.
My name's Bette, I am a cashier but like to invest. I want to know how my investments are doing. Complete transparency. Companies should not be allowed to practice dishonesty and a longer window to get away with fraud. That defeats the purpose of the SEC.

Bill Blankemeier — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bill Blankemeier Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 It's fair and it's transparent, keep it.The way it is

---

Bob Broucek — Jun 30, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bob Broucek Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 An absolute must for transparency for companies that choose to go public. .what are they trying to hide?

Sent from my Verizon, Samsung Galaxy smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

Bonnie Shortridge — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bonnie Shortridge Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 I want you to keep it quarterly, easier to find the fraud!

Sent from my iPhone

Brenda Thom — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brenda Thom Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Quarterly reporting is the only responsible choice. Six months is far too long to discover a disastrous course has been chosen. The company might be nearly bankrupt before investors know anything was wrong. History tells us that the company executives can not be trusted with out scrutiny. Only fools ignore history.

Sent from my iPhone

Brent Bouwens — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brent Bouwens I am commenting to request the SEC keep the current quarterly reporting requirement as is . As a retiree I depend on my 401k and other investments, and rely on quarterly reporting to ensure accountability and transparency. Going back to semi-annual reporting will result in unaccountability and disaster. There is no benefit to the American public in changing the current requirements and regulations. Thank you for your consideration.

Bri Zimmer — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bri Zimmer Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Bri, Technical Training Editor for a VERY LARGE tech company. History shows that stocks and investors suffer from biannual reporting. Keep things transparent and do not switch from quarterly reporting. It’s dishonest and shady af.

Brian Lee — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Lee Dear SEC, I am long-term retail investor who is deeply concerned about the Securities and Exchange Commission’s proposed rule (File No. S7-2026-15) that would allow public companies to report financial results every six months instead of every quarter. I respectfully urge you to oppose this proposal and encourage the SEC to preserve quarterly reporting requirements. Quarterly reporting is one of the cornerstones of transparent U.S.

capital markets. Public companies receive tremendous benefits from access to our public markets, and in return investors deserve timely, standardized, and reliable financial information. Extending mandatory reporting to every six months would reduce transparency precisely when investors need it most. As an individual investor, I believe this proposal would disproportionately benefit corporate management while placing retail investors at a disadvantage. Large institutional investors often have greater access to management teams, industry research, and alternative sources of information. Retail investors rely heavily on SEC filings to make informed investment decisions. Reducing the frequency of those filings widens the information gap between everyday Americans and sophisticated market participants. Less frequent reporting could also make it easier for deteriorating business conditions, financial risks, or governance issues to go unnoticed for longer periods. Investors should not have to wait six months to receive standardized financial disclosures from publicly traded companies. The United States has long enjoyed the deepest and most trusted capital markets in the world because of strong disclosure requirements and investor protections. Weakening those protections risks reducing confidence in our markets and increasing uncertainty for millions of Americans who invest through retirement accounts, pensions, and brokerage accounts. I respectfully ask that you communicate these concerns to the SEC and support policies that strengthen—not weaken—market transparency and investor confidence. Thank you for your time and for representing our community. Sincerely, Brian Lee

---

Brittany Kugler — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brittany Kugler Less reporting means less oversight. The American public deserves consistent and frequent reporting on publicly traded companies. Quarterly reporting to only a few groups will lead to insider trading and unbalanced sharing of information. Keep reporting quarterly.

Brock T Brown — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brock T Brown Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Why lengthening SEC reporting from quarterly to semiannual is a bad idea

Lengthening SEC reporting from quarterly to semiannual sounds reasonable at first: fewer filings, less compliance work, less pressure to “hit the quarter,” and more room for long-term planning. But that argument confuses quarterly reporting with quarterly obsession. The real problem is not that investors receive too much reliable information. The problem is that markets, executives, analysts, and compensation systems often overreact to short-term numbers. Reducing mandatory disclosure would not cure that culture. It would mostly make the market darker.

The SEC’s current proposal would let public companies file one semiannual report on a new Form 10-S instead of three quarterly Form 10-Q reports, leaving them with one semiannual and one annual report each year rather than three 10-Qs and one 10-K. The SEC frames this as flexibility for companies and investors, with Chairman Paul Atkins arguing that reduced filing frequency could lower burdens and make public markets more attractive. That is the best version of the argument. But even then, it asks investors to give up standardized, timely information in exchange for a speculative benefit.

Quarterly reports are not just ceremonial paperwork. They are one of the basic ways public markets stay fair. A Form 10-Q gives outside investors regular, legally structured updates on revenue, margins, cash flow, debt, risk factors, litigation, liquidity, and management’s discussion of results. If that information comes only every six months, the gap between insiders and outsiders widens.

Management, board members, lenders, suppliers, large customers, and sophisticated institutions may still have ways to infer what is happening. Ordinary investors will not.

That is why the “companies can still report voluntarily” answer is weak. Voluntary disclosure tends to work best when the news is good. The companies most likely to go quiet are often the ones investors most need to hear from: companies with deteriorating margins, hidden operational problems, emerging risks, weakening liquidity, or governance issues. The SEC Investor Advisory Committee’s draft recommendation warned that eliminating quarterly reporting would deprive markets of timely material information and undermine informed investment decisions and efficient capital allocation.

The proposal also creates a comparability problem. If some companies report quarterly, some semiannually, and some change cadence over time, investors lose a clean basis for comparing peers. That matters because markets do not value companies in isolation; they compare companies across industries, cycles, margins, balance sheets, and execution. A mixed reporting regime would make earnings seasons less complete, valuation work messier, and underperformance easier to hide.

Investor sentiment appears to reflect that concern. A 2026 CFA Institute survey of 2,500 investment analysts and portfolio managers found that 62% opposed replacing quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting, 63% believed quarterly reporting’s benefits exceed its costs, and nearly 85% were concerned about comparability if companies could choose or change reporting frequency. That is not just reflexive love of paperwork; it is a recognition that standardized disclosure is part of the market’s plumbing.

The short-termism argument is also overstated. If companies are managing only for the next quarter, the better targets are quarterly earnings guidance, executive compensation tied to near-term stock price, activist pressure, and analyst fixation on consensus EPS. Investors do not need less information; they need better incentives. Notably, the same CFA survey found that 85% of respondents viewed management incentives and compensation structures as more important drivers of long-term behavior than the reporting cycle itself.

Semiannual reporting could also increase volatility. When information is withheld longer, each report carries more surprise. Instead of four smaller information updates, markets get two larger shocks. That can make price discovery lumpier and more speculative. In the months between reports, investors may lean more heavily on rumors, alternative data, selective management commentary, non-GAAP metrics, or privileged access. That is not a healthier market. It is a less equal one.

A better reform would be to keep quarterly reporting while reducing the performative nonsense around it. The SEC could discourage quarterly EPS guidance, simplify immaterial disclosure requirements, streamline Form 10-Q, expand scaled reporting for smaller issuers, and modernize reporting through structured data and technology. That would reduce waste without reducing transparency.

The central point is simple: public companies receive access to public capital, and regular public disclosure is part of the bargain. Semiannual reporting would save some companies time and money, but at the cost of weaker transparency, poorer comparability, greater information asymmetry, and more risk for ordinary investors. The SEC should fix short-termism directly, not blindfold the market for an extra three months at a time.

Brock Brown,

Senior Scientist of Pharmacology

Bruce Sutherland — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Sutherland I do not support the semi-annual reporting proposal

---

C. Bland — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C. Bland To the SEC Chairman, I am a former Series 7 and 9/10 professional w 30 years in the industry. I am stunned that this rule change is even being considered. We live in a world where fraud and corruption are rampant. Are we going to just succumb to the trend by giving the top 5% the opportunity to transact business under the cloak of darkness for 6 months? The enactment of this rule will roll us back to 1929. It's all well and good until the middle class is wiped out and then who will buy the products and services these publicly traded corporations are selling? Try to be the hard regulatory agency I had to deal with and whom I had respect for. Do not approve this scam of a rule. It will have devastating market repercussions down the line. Respectfully, C Bland

---

C. Dille — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C. Dille KEEP the QUARTERLY reporting period currently required. Do NOT change to semi-annual reporting as proposed in S7-2026-15.

Calvin Joseph Davidson — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Calvin Joseph Davidson This is not fair for everyday investors. Reporting should be kept the same

---

Carol Drummet — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carol Drummet Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 We want transparency and accountability

---

Carol K Stamets — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carol K Stamets Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Quarterly reporting helps to keep the process honest. There is no rational reason to change this… it opens the door to deceit and fraud. Thank you. Carol K Stamets (Retired)

Sent from my iPhone

Carol Kagdis — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carol Kagdis Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

DO NOT CHANGE THE SEC RULES

Carol L. — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carol L. Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly. White collar crimes hurt people, too! Enough is enough. Thank you, Carol L. My job title is not anyone's business. This should matter to everyone, especially the people that will be harmed by this "Change in Reporting" to help the rich, sneaky white collar crime committing snakes.

Carolyn B Theodore — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carolyn B Theodore Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly

---

Cathleen O'Connor — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cathleen O'Connor Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 I believe this a terrible idea. There should be transparency from businesses. I strongly oppose this new rule

Sincerely,
Cathleen O’Connor
Sent from my iPad

Cathy Vetter — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cathy Vetter Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Transparency is critical when our financial future is at stake.

Catsith7 Lordzero — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Catsith7 Lordzero Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 john doe, ceo of a stock market company, i use the stock market quarterly to invest and run my business if you change this my business literally will die. do not change this keep it quarterly!

Cheri Cook — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cheri Cook As an individual investor, I rely on quarterly reports to guide my investment decisions. More transparency, not less, is needed. Please make decisions that protect individual investors, who are investing in public companies.

Christian McIntyre Auditor/CPA — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christian McIntyre This new rule is a terrible idea. Companies will cherry pick information to release on an informal quarterly basis. Investors need quarterly reports with standardized reporting standards from the SEC to ensure transparent information to make wise, informed investing decisions. Why allow 24 hour trading, extended trading, daily trading if there is extremely limited company information to trade with. The US stock market is the gold standard of the world. If changes are needed investors prefer more information not less. I suggest implementing biquarterly earnings that would produce more earnings reports on a regular basis which would improve stock market fair values. Let us strive for more informed investors with more earnings updates. Thank you

---

Christina Lair — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Christina Lair Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep quarterly reporting. No more Enrons!!!

Christina Ruth The Motley Fool Community — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christina Ruth Investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Quarterly public-company reports benefits both the companies as well as the investors. Please preserve this greater transparency for individual investors. Thank you

---

Christine Iuliano — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Iuliano At a time when there is little to no oversight and a lack of accountability for government spending I believe that semi-annual reporting of Investments would be harmful to investors. This would take away our control over our money and give to those that would profit. This can only be harmful to the average investor.

Commenters name Professional @ Acme Acres — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Commenters name Add your name , jobtitle ,why it matter's to you .

Connor Dingae — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Connor Dingae It is my personal belief that information is powerful and allows those that possess it to mitigate risk, make informed decisions, and empowers others to hold people and organizations accountable for their actions. This policy would take that information from the hands of investors and professionals and would reduce their ability to accomplish those three actions. Currently, the investing and business ecosystem is used to a quarterly reporting requirement, and it should stay that way. If the worry is that it incentivizes short term goals rather than long term, I argue that it is up to the company and it's executive leadership to determine the long term goals and vision and hold the company to those ideals.

Cora Yao — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cora Yao Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING! The suggested 6 month reporting is the worst idea ever. It will give insider's a terribly destructive advantage that is immoral at best. Cora Yao, Retired RN, trying to hold on to funds for my remaining years.

Cora M. Yao
120 Utica Street
Ithaca, NY 14850
(c) 301-346-7570

Cristian mj Sanchez — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cristian mj Sanchez Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

Dan Ellerbroek — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan Ellerbroek There is no reason to make this switch except to further disadvantage everyone else who is not an insider or billionaire. Do not make this switch.

Darcy Mazurkewich — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darcy Mazurkewich While it can be argued that fewer reports would reduce costs for businesses or that it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. The reality is that the reports are getting more and more automated through AI and that businesses managing quarter to quarter are likely going the way of the dodo bird and shareholders should be well aware of that fact. Businesses with long term strategies can explain where they are on their plan and keep shareholders informed. I would stipulate that less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty, but merely decreases the frequency for shareholders to determine if the money they have allocated to a business is in alignment with their investment strategy (e.g. high risk vs low risk, or growth vs income). Kind regards Darcy

---

David W. Priestley Retired, Individual Investor — Jun 30, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David W. Priestley As an investor in individual stocks for the last 58 years, I support allowing many publicly traded companies to move from quarterly to semi- annual reporting. The most obvious benefit is reducing the administrative cost of financial reporting. More importantly, quarterly reporting causes many companies to manage to the quarter end. This frequently leads to companies taking inefficient short-term actions just to meet quarterly numbers. Semi-annual reporting would encourage longer term thinking by both companies and investors. There should probably be financial condition requirements needed to be eligible for quarterly reporting. As a compromise, quarterly reporting could be reduced to revenue only, which is relatively easy to report and does not induce as many short term gymnastics as full financial reporting.

Dawn None — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dawn If you are a publicly traded company you owe your little investors quarterly accounting. What is it you're trying to support here!? Or who are you protecting? Definitely not the small investor!

Debbie Gray — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Debbie Gray Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 "I have reviewed this report… it does not contain any untrue statement of a material fact." This is the statement required. Keeping concise records and accountability is necessary when you are responsible financially. Keep it quarterly.

Debbie Miceli — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Debbie Miceli Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 My name is Deborah Miceli. I am a retired teacher from Spring TX. I believe that keeping the reporting quarterly affords me information that is vital to keeping my retirement account viable for its purpose. Please do not agree to the proposed changes. Keep it quarterly for the sake of small investors like myself all across America. Thank you

---

Debra MacKillop — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Debra MacKillop Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 This rule was originally to help after so much fraud by corporations governed by SEC, so clearly SEC not doing a good job. The quarterly reporting is VITAL. In fact it should be monthly - how about a rule that makes it monthly instead, especially with the level of corruption in the trump-controlled SEC. My IRAs and 401(k) need a monthly reporting, but certainly no change to take away quarterly reporting, and especially when we cannot trust the SEC today to do anything to help the 99% of Americans, but will easily hurt us with decisions to help enrich trump, MAGA GOP, and the enabling SEC administrators who show allegiance to trump not to ethics and honesty, only value GREED. I was a lawyer at the CFTC in the appellate division in the 1980's when it was a great agency that tried to combat corporate fraud. Not any more. We are watching the SEC closely and expect it to STOP putting forth rule changes like this to help trump continue to use insider trading to enrich himself and his companies (that he never divested from) and use the presidency to enrich himself. That's what the SEC should be focused on - insider trading by trump and MAGA GOP, especially in Congress. KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING. We will follow this, and the SEC must take the comments seriously and drop this proposed rule change. Thank you. Debra MacKillop, Grand Junction, CO.

Dinarte Seibel — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dinarte Seibel To the Securities and Exchange Commission: New Constructs, LLC respectfully submits this comment in opposition to File No. S7-2026-15, the Commission's proposal to permit public companies to replace three quarterly reports with a single semiannual filing. We are a financial research firm. For more than two decades, we have built our business on the premise that rigorous, detailed financial disclosure — including the footnotes and supplemental data that most investors never read — is the foundation of fair and functional capital markets. We analyze thousands of public companies. We know what good disclosure looks like, and we know what it costs investors when companies obscure or delay material financial information. This proposal goes in the wrong direction. We urge the Commission to reject it. The Trend Everywhere Else Is Toward More Transparency, Not Less The Commission is proposing to reduce the frequency of mandatory financial disclosure at precisely the moment when every other domain of modern life is moving toward real-time information. We receive live updates on flight delays, train positions, storm systems, power outages, and utility performance. Sports scores update by the second. News cycles run continuously. The infrastructure for near-instantaneous data collection and transmission is not a futuristic aspiration — it is the operating reality of the American economy in 2026. Against that backdrop, the argument that public companies cannot be expected to report their financial condition more than twice a year is not a neutral administrative judgment. It is a choice to hold financial markets to a lower standard of transparency than we hold the weather. The Data Already Exists The Commission's proposal rests in part on the premise that quarterly reporting imposes meaningful costs on issuers. We are skeptical. Major American corporations are not run on pen and paper. They operate sophisticated enterprise systems that track revenue, costs, inventory, and operational performance — in most cases, on a daily basis. Does anyone seriously believe that Walmart does not know its store-level sales every day? That Kroger cannot pull a real-time report on gross margin by category? That Amazon's finance team is waiting for quarter-end to learn how the business is performing? The data exists. The systems exist. The marginal cost of compiling and disclosing quarterly financial information for a company that already tracks that information internally is, in most cases, close to zero. The argument that quarterly reporting is a meaningful financial burden on large public companies is difficult to reconcile with what we know about how those companies actually operate. If the Data Doesn't Exist, That Is Itself Material Information There may be companies — particularly smaller issuers — that genuinely lack the infrastructure to track financial performance on a quarterly basis. If so, investors deserve to know that. A public company that cannot produce a quarterly financial summary is telling the market something important about the sophistication of its internal controls, the reliability of its management systems, and the confidence investors should place in its annual disclosures. That is not an argument for exempting such companies from quarterly reporting. It is an argument for requiring them to disclose the fact that they lack the systems to do so. The Reasons Not to Report Are Not Good Ones If the data exists — and in most cases it does — then there are only a limited number of reasons why a company would prefer not to report it quarterly. We will name them plainly: Laziness. Compiling and filing a 10-Q requires effort. Some companies and their advisors would prefer to do it less often. This is not a sufficient basis for regulatory relief. The obligation to keep investors informed is not optional, and the Commission should not treat the cost of fulfilling it as a harm to be remediated. Obfuscation. Some companies perform better over longer measurement periods than shorter ones. Some managements would prefer that investors not see the quarter-to-quarter volatility in their results. Some would prefer more time to manage the narrative around a difficult period before they are required to disclose it. Reducing reporting frequency gives those managements more room to operate — at the direct expense of investors who are trying to make informed decisions. The Commission should be clear-eyed about this. When a company elects semiannual reporting, it is not simply choosing a reporting schedule. The company is choosing to withhold information that it already has from the investors who own it. Investors who are aware that a company has made that choice are receiving material information. Investors who are not aware of it — or who do not understand its implications — are being disadvantaged. The Information Asymmetry Cost Is Real Sophisticated institutional investors do not wait for 10-Q filings to understand how their portfolio companies are performing. They have proprietary data sources, expert networks, channel checks, management access, and analytical resources that allow them to build a continuous picture of company performance between mandatory disclosure dates. Retail investors, and many smaller institutional investors, do not have those resources. For them, the 10-Q is not a formality — it is one of the primary mechanisms by which they can monitor the companies they own. Extending the gap between mandatory disclosures does not eliminate the information. It concentrates it among those who already have structural advantages in accessing it. The spread between what insiders and sophisticated institutions know and what ordinary investors know will widen. Someone will capture that spread. It will not be the investors the Commission was created to protect. This Proposal Runs Counter to the Commission's Founding Purpose The Securities Exchange Act of 1934 was built on a straightforward premise: that public markets cannot function fairly when the people running companies know vastly more than the people investing in them. Mandatory periodic disclosure was the mechanism chosen to narrow that gap. It has worked. U.S. equity markets are the deepest, most liquid, and most trusted in the world, in part because investors have confidence that companies are required to disclose material information on a regular and predictable schedule. Reducing that frequency — even optionally, even for a subset of issuers — is not a technical adjustment. It is a step away from the transparency architecture that underpins investor confidence in U.S. markets. We do not think the current disclosure burden justifies that step. We do not think the companies asking for relief have made a compelling case that quarterly reporting is harming them. And we are confident that the investors who will bear the cost of reduced disclosure have not been adequately represented in the Commission's analysis. Conclusion New Constructs urges the Commission to reject File No. S7-2026-15. Rather than reducing the frequency of mandatory disclosure, the Commission should be asking how the infrastructure that already exists — inside companies, across markets, and throughout the broader economy — can be used to give investors more timely, more granular, and more reliable information about the companies they own. That is the direction the rest of the world is moving. It should be the direction of U.S. securities regulation as well. Respectfully submitted, Dinarte Seibel Finance Data Specialist at New Constructs, LLC 5110 Maryland Way, Suite 350 Brentwood, TN 37027, dinarte . seibel@newconstructs.com New Constructs, LLC is an independent financial research firm specializing in forensic accounting and fundamental analysis. The firm analyzes more than 10,000 public securities using data derived from financial statement footnotes and regulatory filings.

Donald Allen Retired — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Donald Allen I do not support relaxing financial reporting requirements from the current quarterly standard. I feel strongly that publicly traded companies have an obligation to inform the public regularly on the performance of their companies. Biannual reporting is not adequate to do this, especially when computerized business and accounting systems make this data more easily available than ever before. If the size of some companies makes compliance difficult, then this should be welcomed as a deterrent to creating unmanageably large organizations.

Donald B — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Donald B I believe that quarterly reporting is an important and crucial part of being an informed stock investor. Limiting reporting to bi-yearly limits and hinders our ability to make sound choices and manage our portfolio's of company's we invest in.

Donald Sobey — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Donald Sobey Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 If you are about the small investor rather than your power pals, leave it at quarterly. Your power pals already have an huge advantage. And they will be the only ones that will benefit from this nonsense

---

Dorine Clapp — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dorine Clapp Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 This would be a terrible new rule. This would only benefit fraudsters, i.e. like Madoff, companies fiscally irresponsible such as Enron and leave honest hard working individuals who count on those resources to save for their children’s education or retirement. It must stay quarterly.

Sent from my iPad

Douglass Individual Investor — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Douglass Please maintain the quarterly reporting. The U.S. markets distinguish themselves globally with its transparency and accountability. Both will be diminished by reducing reporting frequency. AI is rapidly decreasing the time and cost of reporting overall, and (particularly for the megacap stock) increasing the frequency of event that materially affect the price. While there are reporting requirement for material events, the impact of those events are only fully captured in quarterly statements. Being a public company is a privilege and responsibility. Companies are receiving access to liquidity and potential for brand awareness in exchange for reporting transparency. The reporting “burden” is being addressed by technology, and the speed of business is increasing. A request to reduce reporting frequency will only lead to less publicly available information without any corresponding benefit to investors.

---

eileen andrews — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: eileen andrews Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Don’t drag us backward, keep it quarterly

Sent from my iPhone

Elise Iannitti — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elise Iannitti I support maintaining quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. Regular financial disclosures promote transparency, accountability, and informed decision-making for investors. As an individual investor and retirement saver, I rely on timely public information to understand how companies are performing. Reducing reporting frequency could make it harder to identify risks early and would provide less transparency for everyday investors. Please preserve quarterly reporting requirements.

Elizabeth Conidi — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Elizabeth Conidi Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep Quarterly Reporting ..... NO MORE KEN LAY'S !!!!!! FRaud would be overwhelming !!!!!

Elizabeth Pryor Bookkeeper — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth Pryor For transparency and accountability, reporting should continue on a quarterly basis. Elizabeth Pryor Bookkeeper

---

ella a — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: ella a Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Reporting-keep it quarterly!

Ella Jane Anderson
816-305-3247

---

ella a — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: ella a Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Reporting-keep it quarterly!

Ella Jane Anderson
816-305-3247

Elle Johnson — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Elle Johnson Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

It isn't broken, so don't break it. Keep reporting quarterly. Do not regress back to semi annual reporting. Who benefits from that delayed reporting? Not the average investor. Insiders with information that is not accessible to average investors, will have an unfair and damaging advantage. Please. Keep companies reporting QUARTERLY! It is vital to the health of the retail investor. Reporting semi annually has been PROVEN not to work.

Elsie Wiliiams — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Elsie Wiliiams Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep it quarterly this is the only way to keep these people in line. It has done this way for years & everything worked out fine. No need to change now.

Eric Hecox — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Eric Hecox Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Make it Monthly!

Exterovich, Jerry Director, Gatehouse LLC — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Exterovich, Jerry To the Powers that be at the SEC, As you contemplate a switch from quarterly reporting of financial information to a semiannual reporting basis please keep in mind the both State and Federal Revenue entities require quarterly reporting on everything from Payroll Taxes to Sales and Use Taxes to assure compliance and accountability. To change the frequency of reporting to semiannual would be foolish and irresponsible, opening the door to corporate obscurity in reporting much to the detriment of individual investors that carry the weight of our market! DO NOT change reporting from QUARTERLY to SEMIANNUAL!!! Jerry Exterovich, jexterovich @gmail.com

---

Fay Hazelbauer — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Fay Hazelbauer Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep reports quarterly. We need to have faith in our US companies.

Sent from my iPhone Fay

Frankie Shilakes — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Frankie Shilakes Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission
I ask you to reconsider your plan to decrease business reporting from quarterly to only a bi-annual report. That is far too long a period in which investors are unaware of the health and monetary practices of a business!
Please continue to require businesses to report quarterly, in order that investors and those considering investing have the most current information to make sound investment choices and avoid businesses those whose profitability and operation might be in question.
We rely on the sec to monitor and report up to date info. Changing to bi-annual reports impedes our ability to evaluate companies' monetary stability and practice.
Sincerely,
Frankie J Shilakes

Frederick J. Osterhagen Retired Systems Analyst — Jun 30, 2026 Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Frederick J. Osterhagen Eliminating the requirement for quarterly reporting would be a mistake. It would reduce timely information that I currently use in managing my investments. Please retain the 10-Q standard quarterly reporting requirement. Thank you.

Gail McGowan — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Gail McGowan Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I am 80! My portfolio holds my Emergency Money $5000. I live on my SS and I am one of millions my age.
I am asking you to ensure there is no fraud, to ensure that what little money I have will be protected by transparent, quarterly, reviews.
I hope you see your job as I do and that is to support integrity in all you do.

Thank you for your consideration.

Gail Unverferth — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gail Unverferth I do not support the idea of semi-annual reporting. As an investor, I am an owner, and less information rarely creates better-informed owners. As someone who has also worked for publicly traded companies, I know that it should not be an issue to report quarterly as long as the business is operating efficiently. Companies that might struggle to produce their quarterly reports should think about their business operations and address those issue accordingly.

Georganne Shirk — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Georganne Shirk Less transparency is NOT a positive. Please retain quarterly reporting requirements. This maintains consistency of reporting and allows for better analysis by investors and auditors.

Gillian Lindahl — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Gillian Lindahl Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Hi SEC, Keep it quarterly! Gillian Lindahl, Retiree

Sent from my iPhone

Gillian Lindahl — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Gillian Lindahl Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Hi SEC, Keep it quarterly! Gillian Lindahl, Retiree

Sent from my iPhone

Grace Jones — Jun 30, 2026

Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Grace Jones Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: Keep it QUARTERLY!!

Hari Satheesh — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Hari Satheesh I am writing as an individual investor to urge the Commission not to adopt the proposed rule permitting companies to file semiannual reports (Form 10-S) in lieu of quarterly Form 10-Q filings. As someone who relies on quarterly disclosures to track the companies I invest in, I value the ability to monitor performance, spot emerging risks, and compare results on a consistent, timely basis. Moving to a six-month reporting cadence would widen the information gap between company insiders and individual investors like me, and could lead to sharper price swings when material news is only revealed twice a year instead of four times. Surveys of investors show strong preference for keeping quarterly reporting, with most citing concerns that less frequent disclosure increases uncertainty and weakens accountability. As an individual investor without access to insider information or specialized research tools, I depend on regular quarterly updates to make informed decisions about my own portfolio. While semiannual reporting may reduce compliance costs for some companies, I don’t believe those savings should come at the expense of investor protection and market transparency—values I believe are central to the Commission’s mission. I respectfully ask that the Commission continue to require quarterly reporting as a baseline obligation for public companies. Thank you for considering my comment.

Heather Disselkoen — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Heather Disselkoen Transparency requires financial information to be shared in a timely manner. Quarterly reporting is the minimum acceptable reporting period to ensure accountability and avoid abuse of the system. I urge you to maintain quarterly reporting as weakening this requirement will undermine the public's trust in your agency during an economic period that requires steady and reliable assurances.

Helene Hinsey — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Helene Hinsey I am strongly against reducing the quarterly reporting requirement to semi-annual or annual reports. This reduces the transparency between publically traded companies and their investors and could increase investors risks significantly. This is especially true for investments in 401ks, IRAs and other retirement plans where investors abd their advisors depend on these reports to make informed decisions. Thank you.

HIlary Grant — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: HIlary Grant I oppose the rule change. We need more transparency, not less. Keep reporting quarterly.

Holly Morales — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Holly Morales Keep the filings quarterly. We don't want to be flying blind for 6 months, while the fraud grows. The gaps will let insider trading run rampant. I 'm a retail investor and I rely on quarterly reports to make decisions about my retirement and investment savings. American investors DEMAND transparency. I oppose the changes to this rule. I do not care about savings to companies.

J Kong-Sivert — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: J Kong-Sivert Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 I have to sign off on everything my firm does. Execs should not be exempt from this accountability. Keep it quarterly. Best, J

Jillian N. Kong-Sivert, J.D.
She/ Ella
Law Office of Jillian N. Kong-Sivert, PLLC
1601 N. 7th St., Ste. 300
Phoenix, AZ 85006-2222
602-759-1299

CONFIDENTIALITY STATEMENT: This electronic message transmission contains information classified as confidential or privileged. The information is intended only for the use of the person(s) named above. If you are not the intended recipient, any disclosure, copying, distribution or use of or any other action based on the contents of this information is strictly prohibited. If you received this electronic transmission in error, please notify us by telephone at 602-759-1299

DECLARACIÓN DE CONFIDENCIALIDAD. Esta transmisión de mensaje electrónico contiene información clasificada como confidencial o privilegiada. La información está dirigida únicamente para el uso de la(s) persona(s) marcada(s) como destinatario(s). Si usted no es uno de dichos destinatarios, cualquier revelación, copia, distribución o uso de, o cualquier otra acción basada en los contenidos de esta información queda estrictamente prohibido. Si recibió esta transmisión electrónica por error, favor de comunicárnoslo al 602-759-1299

Jacob Palmer — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Jacob Palmer Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
There is already a low trust given the changes to the fraud and bribery statutes changing the law so there isn't a requirement for quarterly reporting is only going to cause damage to the market and the average American off Wall Street investor. Wether pension funds, IRAs or 401Ks we depend on quarterly reporting and will not accept semi annual reporting as equivalent integrity than quarterly.

James White — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: James White Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Please keep it quarterly.These corporations have enough schemes and behind the scene shenanigans to keep stuff from the public already

---

Jan Pienezza — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Jan Pienezza Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Please keep it quarterly. I'm in the last quarter of my life & can't afford to lose any of my 401K. I'm really not clear on why it should be changed anyway. It seems to have worked well in the past, so why change back to something that didn't work? I hope you'll take the comments provided by us and think things out.
Mrs. Jan Pienezza
Retired, Birmingham, AL

Janet DeWitt — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Janet DeWitt Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it Quarterly

Sent from my iPhone

Janice Ellin — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Janice Ellin Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: keep quarterly reports unless you are helping companies hide something.

Jason Wu, CPA, EA, Tax Principal, Taxseract LLC — Jun 30, 2026
June 30, 2026
Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, NE
Washington, DC 20549-1090
Re: File No. S7-2026-15; Release No. 33-11414 — Semiannual Reporting
Dear Ms. Countryman:
I respectfully submit this comment letter in response to the Commission's proposed amendments that would permit public companies to elect semiannual interim reporting on new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q (the "Proposal"). I am a Certified Public Accountant with approximately twenty years of experience in international tax compliance and ASC 740 income tax provision, including service at Big Four public accounting firms and in-house roles at multinational enterprises. The views expressed in this letter represent the professional opinion of Taxseract, LLC and do not represent the position of the American Bar Association, the AICPA, or any other organization.
I acknowledge the legitimate policy objective underlying the Proposal: reducing the compliance burden of public company reporting and encouraging broader participation in public capital markets. The observations that follow are focused on a single concern — the potential impact on investors.
I. The Central Concern: Investor Information, Not Company Burden
At the outset, I wish to distinguish between what companies compute and what investors see. The Proposal addresses reporting frequency, not computation frequency. Nothing in the Proposal would preclude a registrant from continuing to calculate its estimated annual effective tax rate quarterly, maintaining the same internal provision discipline it follows today. The internal computation workload need not change.

The concern, therefore, is not that companies will compute their provision less frequently. It is that investors will see the results less frequently. The income tax provision is among the most complex and judgment-intensive line items in the financial statements. The cadence at which its results are disclosed to investors — and through which investors can evaluate changes in Taxseract, LLC is a tax consulting firm, not a licensed CPA firm. Tax return services provided by an authorized practitioner.
taxseract.com · info@taxseract.com
management's estimates, assumptions, and judgments — is the dimension that changes under the Proposal.
This distinction matters because the Proposal's stated purpose is to make public capital markets more accessible and equitable. If the effect on investors is to reduce the frequency, granularity, and comparability of information about one of the most material and judgment-sensitive line items in the financial statements, the Proposal may produce an outcome at odds with its intended purpose.

II. The Comparability Paradox

The Proposal introduces an elective framework: some companies would report quarterly, others semiannually. The stated objective is to reduce complexity and improve the attractiveness of public markets. However, the introduction of mixed reporting cadences within the same market may create the opposite effect.
Today, investors comparing two companies in the same industry can evaluate their interim financial statements on a common timeline. Rate reconciliations, deferred tax movements, and discrete tax items are disclosed on the same quarterly cadence, enabling direct comparison. Under the Proposal, one company might report quarterly while its peer elects semiannual — producing disclosures that cover different time horizons, aggregate different numbers of discrete events, and trigger different ASU 2023-09 disaggregation thresholds for the same underlying economics.
Rather than simplifying the capital markets landscape, this optionality introduces a new structural variable that investors must account for when comparing companies. Analysts would need to normalize for reporting cadence in addition to industry, size, geography, and accounting policy differences. Index providers, screening tools, and quantitative models that rely on uniform interim reporting periods would need to accommodate mixed cadences. The result is additive complexity in the capital markets infrastructure — the structural opposite of the Proposal's stated intent.
The concern extends to market efficiency. If semiannual filers disclose material tax developments later than quarterly filers, the information asymmetry between the two groups' investor bases widens. Investors in semiannual filers receive the same information, but later. This does not enhance the equitable functioning of public capital markets — it creates two tiers of information currency within the same market.
Taxseract, LLC is a tax consulting firm, not a licensed CPA firm. Tax return services provided by an authorized practitioner.
taxseract.com · info@taxseract.com

III. Valuation Allowance: The Most Sensitive Judgment

The income tax provision item that the Commission's staff has historically scrutinized most closely — and the one most material to investors — is the valuation allowance against deferred tax assets. The assessment of whether a valuation allowance is needed requires management to weigh all available positive and negative evidence under ASC 740-10-30 to determine whether it is more likely than not that some or all of the deferred tax asset will not be realized. This is one of the most judgment-intensive determinations in financial reporting.
The four sources of taxable income that support realization — future reversals of existing taxable temporary differences, projected future taxable income exclusive of reversing temporary differences, taxable income in carryback years if permitted, and tax planning strategies — require reassessment as facts and circumstances change. A customer loss, a restructuring charge, a shift in geographic income mix, a change in tax law, or a sustained period of losses can tip the weight of evidence from positive to negative, triggering a valuation allowance establishment. Conversely, a return to profitability or a favorable law change can support a release.

Under quarterly reporting, these reassessments occur four times per year, providing investors with a developing view of management's evolving judgment. A valuation allowance established in Q2 and partially released in Q3 tells investors a different story than one established and released in the same semiannual period — which, under semiannual reporting, might net to a smaller disclosed change or no change at all, obscuring the underlying volatility.

This affects domestic companies as much as multinationals. A purely domestic company with significant net operating loss carryforwards, recent acquisition-related deferred tax assets, or cyclical earnings is making the same valuation allowance judgments as a global enterprise. The valuation allowance is the one provision issue that cuts across every filer profile the Proposal would cover.

Under semiannual reporting, investors receive two windows per year into management's valuation allowance judgment rather than four. Large establishments or releases that develop between semiannual reporting dates reach investors later. The Q3 quarterly filing — which currently serves as the last interim checkpoint for investors to evaluate valuation allowance changes before the annual report — would not exist.

Taxseract, LLC is a tax consulting firm, not a licensed CPA firm. Tax return services provided by an authorized practitioner.

taxseract.com · info@taxseract.com

IV. Legislative and Regulatory Context

The Proposal arrives in the first year in which several major tax law changes are simultaneously effective. The One Big Beautiful Bill Act (P.L. 119-21), effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 2025, introduced the GILTI-to-NCTI transition with a reduced Section 250 deduction and elimination of the QBAI exclusion, the FDII-to-FDDEI transition, reinstatement of full domestic R&D expensing under new Section 174A, reversion of Section 163(j) to an EBITDA-based limitation, and continuation of the corporate alternative minimum tax under Section 55.

Concurrently, the OECD's Pillar Two GloBE rules continue their rolling global implementation. The FASB concluded that GloBE top-up taxes are alternative minimum taxes under ASC 740 — period costs included in the estimated annual effective tax rate with no deferred tax recognition. Each of these developments affects the AETR computation, the deferred tax balance sheet, and the valuation allowance assessment. For calendar-year filers, 2026 is the first year in which all of these changes interact simultaneously. This is the environment in which companies would be making the semiannual election for the first time.

V. ASC 740-270 Estimation Dynamics

The interim provision methodology under ASC 740-270 requires estimating the annual effective tax rate at each interim reporting date. Under quarterly reporting, the estimate is refined four times, with each successive estimate incorporating more actual data and a smaller forecasting horizon. The Q3 estimate — based on nine months of actuals — is typically where the AETR converges toward the actual full-year rate.

Under semiannual reporting, the estimation cycle is compressed to two data points. The H1 estimate must forecast the full second half of the year without the Q3 refinement. The gap between the last interim estimate and the annual true-up is accordingly wider. In 2026, this means companies are estimating their first-ever AETR under the new OBBBA framework with only six months of experience rather than nine before the year-end close.

This, again, is an investor concern rather than a company concern. The company may still compute its AETR quarterly for internal purposes. But investors only see the H1 estimate and the annual true-up — and the distance between those two data points is where management judgment resides.

Taxseract, LLC is a tax consulting firm, not a licensed CPA firm. Tax return services provided by an authorized practitioner.
taxseract.com · info@taxseract.com

VI. Further Considerations

Several additional interactions merit examination, each of which affects the information available to investors under semiannual reporting.

Multinational enterprises consolidate financial data from foreign subsidiaries on different fiscal year-end cycles. Under quarterly reporting, lag adjustments from staggered fiscal year-ends are absorbed incrementally. Under semiannual reporting, the H1 disclosure incorporates a wider mix of actual and lagged data, reducing data freshness at the time of disclosure.

External auditors currently perform interim review procedures on each quarterly filing, providing incremental checkpoints that surface provision issues before the year-end audit. Under semiannual reporting, the Q3 review — the final checkpoint before year-end — does not exist. Six months of accumulated issues arrive at the year-end audit simultaneously.

Transfer pricing adjustments and customs duty changes flow through intercompany allocations and cost of goods sold respectively, each affecting the provision. The frequency at which these effects are reflected in interim disclosures changes under semiannual reporting. This interaction is addressed more fully in Section VII below.

SOX 404(b) control frameworks calibrated to quarterly computation cycles would need to be reassessed under a consolidated semiannual cadence — fewer checkpoints, larger data volumes per cycle, and longer intervals between management assessments.

Taxseract, LLC is a tax consulting firm, not a licensed CPA firm. Tax return services provided by an authorized practitioner.
taxseract.com · info@taxseract.com

VII. ASU 2023-09: Substance and Format Decoupling

ASU 2023-09 expanded the rate reconciliation disclosure into eight mandatory categories with a 5% quantitative threshold for further disaggregation. The standard increased the dimensionality of the disclosure format — more categories, more granularity, more quantitative precision. This format was designed and calibrated against the existing quarterly reporting cadence.

The underlying substance of the rate reconciliation, however, is not static. It develops over time as corporate events materialize: an intercompany restructuring closes in month four, a foreign jurisdiction enacts GloBE legislation in month five, a valuation allowance is partially released in month seven after improved earnings, a UTB is settled in month eight. Each of these events produces a discrete reconciling item or changes a continuing item's magnitude. Under quarterly reporting, these events are reflected in the rate rec as they occur — investors observe the developing substance across four disclosures, each capturing approximately three months of materialized events.

Under semiannual reporting, the disclosure format remains the same — the eight ASU 2023-09 categories, the 5% threshold, the percentage and dollar amount presentation — but the underlying substance is aggregated over a six-month window. Events that materialized at different points within the semiannual period are compressed into a single disclosure. A reconciling item that emerged in month one and reversed in month five may net to an immaterial amount in the semiannual rate rec, even though it was individually material during the months it was outstanding. A jurisdiction whose ETR crossed the 15% Pillar Two threshold in month four and was corrected by a transfer pricing adjustment in month six may not appear as a disaggregated item at all — the passage of time resolved it before the disclosure date.

The concern is that semiannual reporting decouples the substance of the rate reconciliation from its format. ASU 2023-09 increased the granularity of the format to give investors more meaningful information. But the meaningfulness of that information depends on the reporting interval capturing the rate at which corporate events materialize. When the interval is widened from three months to six, events that were individually significant may aggregate, offset, or resolve before reaching investors. The format captures what remains at the disclosure date; the substance includes what developed and resolved between disclosure dates. The quarterly cadence was calibrated to minimize this gap. The semiannual cadence widens it.

This is not a comparability concern alone — it is a fidelity concern. The question is whether semiannual rate reconciliation disclosures, even when prepared in full compliance with ASU 2023-09, represent the same quality of information that the standard was designed to produce.

VIII. Transfer Pricing: Timing of Adjustments and Investor Visibility
Transfer pricing adjustments deserve specific attention because of their interaction with both the income tax provision and the Pillar Two jurisdictional ETR computation, and because the timing of these adjustments within the fiscal year directly affects what investors see under different reporting cadences.
Consider a multinational enterprise with a US parent and a European distribution subsidiary operating under a cost-plus transfer pricing policy. In Q1, actual intercompany transaction results show the European distributor earning a margin above the arm's-length range established in the company's transfer pricing documentation. The transfer pricing team identifies the variance during its Q1 monitoring cycle and initiates an analysis. By late Q2, the team has quantified the adjustment needed: a year-to-date true-up that shifts income from the European entity to the US parent, implemented through an intercompany payable adjustment that reduces the European subsidiary's revenue and increases the US parent's intercompany income.
This adjustment has several downstream provision effects. It increases US-source taxable income and decreases European-source income, changing the geographic mix that feeds the NCTI computation. It alters the European jurisdiction's GloBE ETR — if the jurisdiction was near the 15% threshold, the income reduction could push the ETR below 15%, triggering a Pillar Two top-up tax. It changes the FTC limitation calculation because the basket allocation shifts. And it may affect the FDDEI computation if the intercompany transactions involve qualifying services or property.
Under quarterly reporting, this sequence is visible to investors as it develops. The Q1 10-Q reflects the pre-adjustment intercompany results. The Q2 10-Q reflects the year-to-date true-up and its provision effects — the AETR is updated to reflect the revised geographic income allocation, any resulting Pillar Two impact, and the FTC recalculation. If the adjustment proves insufficient and a further correction is needed, the Q3 10-Q captures it. Investors observe the developing picture across three checkpoints before the annual true-up.
Under semiannual reporting, the H1 Form 10-S would capture the cumulative effect of both the variance and the adjustment in a single disclosure — or, if the adjustment was initiated in Q2 but not finalized until Q3, the H1 filing may reflect the variance without the correction. The correction would then appear for the first time in the annual filing, creating a larger period-over-period change that investors had no opportunity to evaluate at an interim date.
For companies with active transfer pricing adjustment programs across multiple jurisdictions — each adjustment cascading through NCTI, FTC, FDDEI, and Pillar Two computations — the quarterly cadence provides investors with incremental visibility into a complex, multi-step process. The semiannual cadence compresses this visibility, potentially presenting investors with larger net adjustments and fewer opportunities to evaluate how management is monitoring and correcting intercompany pricing.

IX. Questions for the Commission's Consideration
Has the Commission evaluated the Proposal's impact on comparability when companies within the same industry or peer group report on different cadences? The introduction of mixed reporting frequencies may add structural complexity to the capital markets rather than reduce it.

How does semiannual reporting affect investor visibility into valuation allowance judgments — the most scrutinized and judgment-intensive component of the income tax provision? Would reduced disclosure frequency obscure material changes in management's assessment of deferred tax asset realizability?

Should semiannual filers be subject to enhanced Form 8-K requirements for material tax events — including significant valuation allowance changes, UTB settlements, or Pillar Two legislative enactments — occurring between filing dates?

How does the Proposal interact with ASU 2023-09? Beyond the comparability question of mixed cadences, does a semiannual aggregation window produce rate reconciliation disclosures of the same informational quality that ASU 2023-09 was designed to achieve? If reconciling items can emerge and resolve within a single semiannual period without reaching investors, does the expanded disclosure format fulfill its intended purpose?

Would a phase-in approach be appropriate? Delaying the semiannual election by one year would allow the OBBBA transition effects to be fully reflected under the existing quarterly framework before companies begin reporting on a semiannual basis.

Has the Commission considered the interaction between semiannual reporting and the timing of transfer pricing adjustments? For multinationals with active intercompany monitoring programs, the quarterly cadence provides investors with incremental visibility into adjustments that cascade through multiple provision computations. Under semiannual reporting, these adjustments may aggregate or offset before reaching investors.

Taxseract, LLC is a tax consulting firm, not a licensed CPA firm. Tax return services provided by an authorized practitioner.

taxseract.com · info@taxseract.com

X. Conclusion

The Proposal seeks to make public capital markets more accessible by reducing reporting burden. This is a worthy objective. However, the income tax provision is the line item where the gap between what companies compute and what investors see matters most — because it is where management judgment, estimation uncertainty, and regulatory complexity converge.

The introduction of an elective mixed-cadence reporting framework may reduce the frequency of disclosure for one of the most material and judgment-sensitive items in the financial statements while simultaneously introducing a comparability variable that adds complexity to the capital markets the Proposal intends to simplify. The potential for these effects to work against the Proposal's stated objectives may warrant further examination.

I appreciate the Commission's consideration of these observations and the opportunity to participate in the comment process.

Respectfully submitted,

Jason Wu, CPA, EA
Tax Principal
Taxseract, LLC

Taxseract, LLC is a tax consulting firm, not a licensed CPA firm. Tax return services provided by an authorized practitioner.

taxseract.com · info@taxseract.com

Appendix: References

SEC Semiannual Reporting Proposal:

• Proposing Release No. 33-11414: https://www.sec.gov/files/rules/proposed/2026/33-11414.pdf
• Rulemaking Page (File No. S7-2026-15): https://www.sec.gov/rules-regulations/2026/05/s7-2026-15
• SEC Fact Sheet: https://www.sec.gov/files/33-11414-fact-sheet.pdf
• Chairman Atkins' Statement: https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-statements/atkins-statement-proposing-release-semiannual-reporting-050526

Domestic Tax Legislation:
• One Big Beautiful Bill Act (P.L. 119-21): https://www.congress.gov/bill/119th-congress/house-bill/1
• IRS Rev. Proc. 2025-28 (Section 174A): https://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-drop/rp-25-28.pdf
FASB Accounting Standards:
• ASU 2023-09, Income Taxes (Topic 740): https://www.fasb.org/page/document?pdf=ASU+2023-09.pdf
OECD Pillar Two:
• GloBE Model Rules: https://www.oecd.org/en/topics/sub-issues/global-minimum-tax/global-anti-base-erosion-model-rules-pillar-two.html
• Side-by-Side Package (January 2026): https://www.oecd.org/content/dam/oecd/en/topics/policy-sub-issues/global-minimum-tax/side-by-side-package.pdf
Taxseract, LLC is a tax consulting firm, not a licensed CPA firm. Tax return services provided by an authorized practitioner.
taxseract.com · info@taxseract.com

Jeanne Williams — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeanne Williams I am writing to express my strong opposition to the SEC’s proposed rule that would allow public companies to replace mandatory quarterly reports with semiannual reporting. As an investor, I believe this proposal threatens transparency and harms retail market participants. Rather than reducing administrative burdens at the cost of investor protection, the SEC should maintain the current quarterly reporting requirement as the mandatory standard. Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this crucial rulemaking.

Jeff Hadley Sr Software Engineering Manager — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeff Hadley Dear Secretary Countryman, I am writing to express my strong opposition to the Commission's proposed rule change under File No. S7-2026-15, which would allow public companies to elect semiannual reporting via Form 10-S in lieu of standard quarterly Form 10-Q filings. The primary mandate of the Securities and Exchange Commission is investor protection and the maintenance of fair, orderly, and efficient markets. This proposal directly undermines that mission by creating an information vacuum that benefits wealthy corporate insiders at the direct expense of retail investors . My specific concerns regarding this proposal are as follows: Heightened Information Asymmetry and Insider Advantage: Extending the reporting window from three months to six months severely expands the timeline during which corporate executives, board members, and large institutional investors possess material, non-public information. This creates an unlevel playing field, increasing the risk of unchecked insider trading and leaving individual retail investors structurally disadvantaged. Erosion of Regulatory Accountability: Over recent years, there is a growing and troubling perception that public markets are becoming less regulated, and that rules are not being uniformly enforced against those in power. Reducing the frequency of audited or reviewed disclosures gives bad actors further room to obscure operational decay, circumvent adequate reporting, and mask financial engineering until it is too late for everyday shareholders to protect their capital. The "Casino" vs. Main Street: Traditional, long-term fundamental investors, modeled after the principles of Warren Buffett and long term investment organizations, rely on granular, consistent, and timely quarter-over-quarter trend data to understand how a business is genuinely conducting its affairs. Removing quarterly granular requirements degrades the public market into a short-term speculation casino where transparency is treated as an optional burden rather than a fundamental prerequisite of public ownership. While the Commission cites compliance cost savings as a justification, the estimated savings are entirely eclipsed by the massive public cost of reduced market transparency, lower analyst coverage, and a higher cost of capital due to investor distrust. If a company wishes to enjoy the immense privilege of public capital, it must accept the obligation of timely, transparent disclosure. I urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the mandatory Form 10-Q quarterly framework to protect the integrity of our financial system. Sincerely, Jeff Hadley

---

Jeff Lenhard — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeff Lenhard As a retail investor, I rely on the predictable cadence and granularity of quarterly disclosures to make informed decisions — both for shorter-term trades that supplement my income and for long-term holdings in retirement and education savings accounts. Reducing the frequency of mandatory disclosure from four filings a year to two does not eliminate the underlying financial activity of a company; it only widens the window during which that activity goes unreported. In the gap between filings, risks such as deteriorating cash flow, mounting debt, failed initiatives, or emerging fraud can accumulate unseen, while institutional investors, analysts, and insiders often retain other channels to track company performance that retail investors do not. This creates an information asymmetry that disadvantages individual investors specifically. I am also concerned that less frequent, less granular reporting will increase volatility rather than reduce it. When investors finally do receive an update after six months instead of three, the larger accumulated surprise — whether positive or negative — is likely to produce sharper price swings, not calmer markets. This volatility is especially damaging to retail traders who depend on timely, accurate information to manage risk and to those holding long-term retirement and college savings accounts who need confidence that material developments will surface promptly. Quarterly reporting has functioned for decades as a basic transparency mechanism that helps deter and surface fraudulent or misleading corporate behavior. Halving the reporting requirement removes a meaningful layer of oversight and makes it easier for bad actors to obscure problems for longer periods before they must be disclosed. I do not believe the administrative cost savings to issuers justify this tradeoff against investor protection. For these reasons, I urge the Commission to reject this proposal. If the Commission's goal is to reduce filing burden, I would encourage it to instead explore targeted relief within the existing quarterly framework (for example, scaling certain disclosure or review requirements for smaller reporting companies) rather than reducing the overall frequency of disclosure for the market as a whole. Thank you for considering my comment.

Jen Martin — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jen Martin Quarterly reporting is extremely important. Especially in Healthcare. Billions of dollars are at stake. Fake providers will thrive if Quarterly reporting is discontinued.

Jeni Pepper — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeni Pepper Please maintain quarterly reporting. Transparency is extremely important in business and investing. Don't sell individual investors "down the river." Individuals are important to the economy.

Jennifer Davenport — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Davenport Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

We, the American people, deserve better. We deserve transparency and fairness across all entities. Millionaires and billionaires aren't the only ones entitled to make more and know more. The middle-class American is truly the entity keeping this country going and we deserve better.

Jennifer Hackett Copeditor, self-employed — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Hackett Please keep the requirement that publicly traded corporations release reports quarterly. Transparency is essential to a healthy economy.

Jeremy Fulmer NA — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeremy Fulmer It’s important to know what’s going on with a company you’re investing in. For me, quarterly isn’t enough disclosure.

Jessica Dancingheart — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jessica Dancingheart Transparency makes for a better more efficient market. Keep financial reporting quarterly and raise the time behind bars and financial penalties for false reporting.

Jessica Done Valley Hospital — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jessica Done Allowing companies to reduce the amount of filings reduces transparency and puts investors like me at risk. I am highly against this amendment

---

Jessica Murray — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jessica Murray More information creates better-informed investment decisions. Please keep reports shared at least quarterly!

Joan Horton CPA licensed by Oregon & California — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joan Horton Do not do away with quarterly financial reporting! It's important for investors to be able to see what they company THEY OWN A STAKE IN is doing on a regular basis. Waiting for 6 months gives crooks & nincompoops too much lead time before they are discovered. It doesn't take 6 months of crooked deals or poor decisions to bring a company down. When a company goes down, it hurts the investors & the employees, both of whom rely on the business for financial support. Countries which use 6-month reporting do not have as robust an economy as those that use quarterly reporting. This doesn't save nearly enough money to make it worthwhile. Thank you, Joan Horton, CPA Portland, OR

Joan Kurt — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Joan Kurt Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep everyone one who is invested on the same playing field. I’m tired of grabs by the wealthy. The Enron corruption case will rise again if doors are open for companies with the most wealth. Let democracy reign.

Sent from my iPad

Jocelyn Adler — Jun 30, 2026
Oops! Page Not Found. Error 404 Please check the web address or try searching below. Search Search To report a broken link, please email webmaster@sec.gov. We regret any inconvenience and we thank you for your interest in the SEC website. Last Reviewed or Updated: Sept. 1, 2021

Joe Torelli — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joe Torelli Keep it at mandatory quarterly reports. Allowing the business to dlbe able to decide to report less is ridiculous. It is like asking a parolee how often/when they need to check in with their probation officer/submit to drug tests... If anything, it should be required even MORE often... i.e. mandatory monthly reporting Nothing in allowing companies to switch to semi-annual reporting is good for investors or the public. The only people who will benefit are business insiders and companies trying to hide bad financials from shareholders/investors... coverup/hide illegal activities... etc. There is ZERO benefit to this proposed change

---

John Meinhardt — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: John Meinhardt Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep It Quarterly! - No need to reiterate... - If it aint broke... You Know-

---

John Stanton Tennis Professional — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Stanton American companies need to be regularly accountable to their investors. Allowing them to operate in the shadows is a dangerous gambit that invites dangerous financial behavior. Keep the reporting rules in place!

Johnny Wolf The Motley Fool Community — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Johnny Wolf Please keep the quarterly reports for public-held companies. These reports keep investors informed in a more timely manner.

Jolie Bauman — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Jolie Bauman Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 WTF? How about we just stop investing in them? If I don’t know what they’re up to for 6 whole months I’m not sure they’re worthy of my money or trust. Show us you’re not in the pocket of billionaires and corporations and do the right thing.

Sent from my iPhone

Jonathan Overholt — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jonathan Overholt Reducing the public reporting frequency would be an egregious breach of the public trust by the SEC that would go on to damage trust in these financial instruments for many years to come. Circumstances that would justify a decrease in transparency might exist, but the regulatory burden of publishing a few pages of financials every few months does not make the cut. Is it some extra effort that publicly-held institutions have to deal with? Yes. It's supposed to be more effort, though. These corporate officers are doing their duty to the public at large when they build these quarterly reports, a duty that exists to inform and protect everyone. This is not to be shirked and not to be minimized. Do not reduce transparency. Do not damage the trust. Do _your_ duty to the people of the United States and leave reporting as it is.

Jonathan Saweikis — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Jonathan Saweikis Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Dear Chair, Commissioners, and Staff:
I respectfully submit this comment letter in strong opposition to any proposal that would reduce the frequency of public company financial reporting from quarterly (Form 10-Q) to semiannual disclosures. As an investor and participant in U.S. capital markets, I believe that quarterly reporting is a cornerstone of investor protection, market transparency, and the integrity of our financial system. Reducing this cadence would be a serious step backward — one that would harm ordinary investors while disproportionately benefiting corporate insiders and sophisticated market participants.
I. Quarterly Reports Are Essential for Detecting and Deterring Fraud
The current quarterly reporting regime plays a critical and underappreciated role in the early detection of corporate fraud and financial misconduct. When companies are required to file certified financial statements every 90 days, there are four annual opportunities for auditors, analysts, short sellers, regulators, and the investing public to scrutinize a company's accounts. Problematic trends — rising receivables, deteriorating margins, unusual related-party transactions, or unexplained cash flow divergences — can be identified and investigated while they are still manageable.
Extending the reporting window to six months would provide fraudulent actors a vastly larger runway to manipulate accounts, conceal losses, or orchestrate Ponzi-like schemes before detection. History has shown repeatedly that financial frauds of the greatest magnitude — Enron, WorldCom, Wirecard — were sustained in part because disclosure gaps allowed misrepresentations to compound undetected. Reducing reporting frequency would replicate precisely this vulnerability at a systemic scale.
Moreover, the CEO and CFO certifications required under Sarbanes-Oxley Sections 302 and 906 are triggered by each periodic filing. Fewer filings mean fewer certified attestations — weakening a key legal and cultural deterrent against financial misstatement. The Commission should be strengthening, not eroding, these accountability mechanisms.
II. Investors Need Timely Information to Make Informed and Rational Decisions
The premise that investors would be well served by receiving material financial information only twice per year is fundamentally at odds with the economic realities of modern capital markets. Investors — from individual retirement savers to pension fund managers — routinely make consequential allocation, rebalancing, and risk management decisions that depend on current and accurate information about the companies they own.
A six-month reporting lag would mean that an investor purchasing shares in, say, February might not receive audited financial information reflecting a company's true condition until August — by which point material conditions could have changed dramatically. Corporate strategies, competitive dynamics, supply chain disruptions, and macroeconomic headwinds can all materially alter a company's prospects within weeks, let alone months. Depriving investors of the ability to assess these changes through regular disclosures undermines the informational efficiency upon which fair markets depend.

The right to vote, the right to sue, and the right to sell are the three fundamental protections of equity investors. Each of these rights is meaningless if investors lack the information necessary to exercise them intelligently. Quarterly reporting ensures that these rights remain substantive rather than theoretical.

III. Reduced Reporting Creates an Unacceptable Information Asymmetry Favoring Insiders

Perhaps the most troubling consequence of a shift to semiannual reporting would be the information asymmetry it would create between corporate insiders and the general investing public. Under the current quarterly reporting framework, executives, directors, and major shareholders are constrained in their ability to trade on material nonpublic information precisely because that information is regularly required to be disclosed. The 90-day cycle disciplines the universe of “inside information” and limits the window during which insiders can exploit superior knowledge.

A semiannual reporting schedule would double the period during which insiders — aware of the company’s actual financial trajectory — could trade ahead of public disclosure. Institutional investors with close relationships to management, sell-side analysts with privileged access, and industry participants who can infer performance from supply chain data or customer conversations would similarly benefit at the expense of retail investors who rely on public filings.

This outcome is antithetical to the Commission’s core mission. The federal securities laws were enacted in no small measure to address exactly this kind of structural disadvantage. Regulation FD was adopted to prevent selective disclosure. To now reduce the frequency of public disclosure — effectively expanding the period of informational advantage enjoyed by those closest to management — would represent a reversal of decades of investor-protective rulemaking.

It is worth noting that industry participants — suppliers, customers, competitors, and trade association members — often develop sophisticated means of estimating a company’s performance in real time, well before any public disclosure. Reducing reporting frequency does nothing to eliminate their informational advantage; it simply ensures that the general public falls further behind. The result is a market that is less fair, less liquid, and less trustworthy.

IV. The Asserted Benefits of Reduced Reporting Are Insufficient to Justify the Costs

Proponents of semiannual reporting typically argue that quarterly filings impose compliance burdens that distort corporate decision-making toward short-term results. With respect, I believe this argument is overstated and misdirected. The solution to short-termism lies in better governance, long-term incentive alignment, and investor education — not in withholding financial information from the public.

The compliance costs associated with quarterly reporting, while real, are modest relative to the total costs of operating a public company, and are appropriately considered a cost of access to U.S. public capital markets. If those costs are genuinely burdensome for smaller reporting companies, the Commission has existing tools — scaled disclosure requirements, extended filing deadlines, and safe harbors — that can address these concerns without dismantling the quarterly reporting regime entirely.

V. Conclusion

The quarterly reporting system is not a relic of an earlier era — it is one of the structural pillars that makes U.S. capital markets the deepest, most liquid, and most trusted in the world. Investors around the globe invest in American companies in part because they trust that those companies will be subject to rigorous, regular disclosure obligations. Weakening those obligations would damage that trust, reduce market quality, embolden fraud, and harm the ordinary Americans who depend on transparent markets for their retirement security.

I urge the Commission to reject any proposal to reduce the frequency of public company financial reporting and to reaffirm its commitment to the quarterly disclosure framework that has served investors and markets so well.

Thank you for the opportunity to submit these comments.

Respectfully submitted,

Jonathan Saweikis

Jose Ramos — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jose Ramos The criminals already enslaved the population, tax us to death, and will find another way to keep people down until we are practically in chains. The quarterly report was a way to hang to a level of personal freedom of knowing how the companies are doing and operating. Now they wanna go semiannual? I totally oppose this level of tyranny and I demand the system stays quarterly. The only way to have a clear view of the investments of my hard earned slave money.

Josh Gordon — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Josh Gordon I find it very difficult to see benefit from this proposal that outweighs the harm this does to investors transparency in the market

---

Joyce Weber — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Joyce Weber Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Accountability is key, and companies should be required to follow standard reporting to keep all investors, not just the insiders, aware of key figures. A lot can be left out and forgotten when reports are due only twice a year. Quarterly reports exist for a good reason and should continue to be the standard to combat fraud and allow consumer input and discovery.

Judy Crossett — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Judy Crossett I want my investments to remain as protected as they can be, therefore I am not in favor of the semiannual reporting. Keep the quarterly reporting for all companies.

Julie — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Julie Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly. Reporting 4 times a year is not an undo burden on companies. Citizens rely on this reporting to guide investment strategy. This is a necessity as we certainly cannot rely on the Social Security we've paid into our whole life. This feels like an attack on the common citizen yet again… keep reporting quarterly!

Sent from my iPhone

Julie Shlepr — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Julie Shlepr I think private investors need more transparency not less. I also think AI should help automate reporting processes, making it easier not more difficult or costly, to meet quarterly reporting requirements. Keep reporting quarterly!

Jurina Morimoto — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: Rule S7-2026-15 From: Jurina Morimoto Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
My name is Jurina M. and I work as an interior designer. As someone who is an ordinary investor, transparency is very important and I can't be wondering blindly what is going on with my investments for 6 months. It is unfair to the people who are investing their savings for important retirement funds. Without clear, accurate and timley quarterly reports I would be at risk of being unable to make informed investment decisions. Quarterly reports are necessary and should not be an option.

Best regards,

Jurina Morimoto

Interior Designer

K Plante — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-26-18 From: K Plante I know people who lost everything because of the duplicity of the Enron leadership. Their end of life was ruined by unscrupulous people. We see today much the same unscrupulousness with corporations making increased profits while keeping their prices artificially inflated. They can not be trusted to “do the right thing” so keep the quarterly reporting to force them to at least continue the visibility.

Karen Becker — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Becker I object to the suggested change to semi annual reporting. I see it as a way to mislead, slow communication, and in general, keep the client uninformed of information they are entitled to in order to manage their financial assets. These reports are already being generated and I see no reason to stop.

Karen Golab — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Karen Golab Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 It can’t be good if you have to hide it. Keep it quarterly

Sent from my iPhone

Karen Oloughlin — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Karen Oloughlin Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Retired Program Manager/Project Manager.

I will be forced to change my portfolio to alternatives if this happens. I am too old to recover from subterfuge from companies that hide their data/profits and problems.
Companies rely on monthly or even weekly internal reports to run their business. We are asking for them to do that. We are merely asking to keep the reports quarterly, so we can better understand how to invest and protect what money we have.

Perhaps people should really take this into consideration before investing their hard earned money AT ALL.

We the people, should be VERY concerned about this because it truly creates a Void. All of this in favor of Corporations. 1 word, Ethics. This allows companies to hide problems.

Stock Market Crash again anyone??

Let's protect our fellow Americans and SAY NO this!!

Sent from my iPhone

Karen Wolas — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Wolas I do not understand why companies would be allowed to semi-annual reporting versus quarterly. All data is electronically available and can be collected and submitted quarterly as it currently is. Delaying reports to every 6 months delays any financial decisions on a company's status and increases fraudulent activity if any. Please keep quarterly reporting to promote transparency.

Karynne Rayner — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Karynne Rayner Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please keep quarterly reporting. Companies need to show they are following the law. Reducing their reporting only benefits the corporations. When will the American people be more important than the Corporations?

Kassandra Brown — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kassandra Brown The SEC needs to keep reporting quarterly. There has not been nearly enough transparency in the financial status of the privileged and politically-inside - even Congress is now engaging in insider trading. Please stand up for "every person," the people and taxpayers that are being taken advantage of, and do not provide further shelter for the grifters that suck us dry.

Kathaleen Moriarty — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Kathaleen Moriarty Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Quarterly isn't often enough!!

Kathelen Weinberg — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathelen Weinberg When I buy stock in a company I become an owner. I expect a minimum of quarterly reporting by the business I invested in. Twice a year reporting is not adequate to inform me and protect my investment.

Kathleen Maguire — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathleen Maguire I am strongly opposed to any change from quarterly reporting. A change from quarterly to semi annual reporting will decrease transparency and reduce the information available to individual investors. I would think that AI and constant data collection has made quarterly reports even less of a burden that in years past, not more of a burden. The priority should be protecting investors and providing them with the information they need to make financial decisions. Do not change the quarterly reporting

---

Kathleen McCune Retired — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathleen McCune I am against the change/amendment to the quarterly filing rule. The amendment would limit information needed for investors and limit competition among companies.

Kathleen Miller — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Kathleen Miller Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
You need to keep companies transparent. Quarterly reporting needs to remain in place.

Kathryn Paul Rancher — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathryn Paul I am certainly not in favor of reducing the number of annual reports on finances reported by companies I have invested in. Please do not allow Enron to happen again by reducing the quarterly reports. How would you like to check your bank statement twice a year? Sincerely, Kathryn Paul

---

Kay Jensen — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kay Jensen Keep quarterly reporting. I need the information to make decisions in my investments. Kay Jensen

---

KeithandJohnette Barton — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: KeithandJohnette Barton Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly! If a company is publicly traded, investors have a right to be informed.

Keith and Johnette Barton
3804 Cohen Dr.
Zellwood, FL 32798

Ph: 689-444-0215

Kerina Biwker NA — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kerina Biwker I oppose the changes proposed under SEC Rule S7-2026-15. Reducing mandatory financial reporting to a semiannual basis would materially diminish visibility for retail investors like myself and lengthen the window in which potential fraud or financial misconduct could go undetected. I urge the Commission not to adopt this rule.

Kevin Pereira — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin Pereira This is a poor move for individual investors who leverage this quarterly data for investing in portfolios and retirement funds – it creates opacity and undermines the trust of the public who are using the data to make sound decisions in a fast paced environment. Analysts and individuals alike rely heavily on these reports and without them, the institutions are risking the capital of the very people that help stand it up. This would be a terribly dangerous precedent to remove transparency and our markets would be worse for it.

Kim None. Soon to be retiree. — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kim Hello. I'm Kim and preparing for retirement. Quarterly reporting is important to me as an investor. Without it, transparency will diminish along with accountability for performance. While many corporations are managed ethically, there are those that aren't. Don't make it harder for investors to see risks. People will lose faith in the market.

Kim Ellicks — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Kim Ellicks Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Please do not change the process.

Kirby Hanson — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Kirby Hanson Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it Quarterly

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Kirby Hanson — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Kirby Hanson Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it Quarterly

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Kristine S. — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Kristine S. Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To whom it may concern: Please keep the current standard of quarterly reporting for public companies. Less frequent, semi-annual reporting will only decrease transparency, invite increased corruption, and result in economic damage. Quarterly reporting helps keep public companies accountable.

Laird Grant — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Laird Grant Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Laird Grant, President, Bryce’s Bounty, Inc. I strongly oppose this notion of less than quarterly reporting. The blatant level of corruption currently being witnessed demands the continued quarterly reporting. The effort to report is insignificant compared to our fiduciary responsibility to shareholders. This is nonsense, stop it.

Sent from my iPhone

Laurie Smith Individual investor/Retired Entertainment Executive — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laurie Smith June 30, 2026 Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission 100 F Street, NE Washington, DC 20549-1090 Re: File No. S7-2026-15 — Proposed Rule on Optional Semiannual Reporting Dear Secretary Countryman: I am writing as an individual retail investor to comment on the Commission's proposal to allow public companies to elect semiannual reporting on Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q. I urge the Commission to preserve mandatory quarterly reporting and to reject this proposal, or at minimum to significantly narrow it. Quarterly reports are how individual investors monitor the companies we own. Unlike institutional investors, I do not have access to management calls, analyst briefings, or other informal channels of corporate information. Form 10-Q is one of the few sources of timely, standardized, audited-adjacent financial data available to me on equal footing with every other market participant. Cutting that disclosure in half does not just delay information — it widens the information gap between retail and institutional investors, who will continue to receive informal updates regardless of the formal filing cadence. Six months is too long to wait to learn a company is in trouble. Earnings deterioration, liquidity problems, and accounting irregularities can develop and become unrecoverable well within a six-month window. Quarterly reporting is an early-warning system; halving its frequency doubles the time before problems surface in the public record. The "optional" framing does not protect investors. Companies most likely to elect semiannual reporting are precisely those facing cost pressure, deteriorating performance, or governance weaknesses — the companies investors most need timely information about. An opt-in structure invites adverse selection: the companies that would benefit most from reduced scrutiny are the ones most likely to choose it. The stated cost savings to issuers come directly at investors' expense. Reduced reporting frequency does not eliminate the need for information — it shifts the cost of obtaining it onto investors, who must rely more heavily on rumor, informal guidance, and incomplete information between filings. For these reasons, I respectfully ask the Commission to maintain quarterly reporting as the mandatory standard for all reporting companies, regardless of size or filer status. Thank you for considering my comment. Respectfully submitted, Laurie Smith Dana Point, California

---

Lawrence Shore Engineer — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lawrence Shore In this day of individual greed, I think it is important to continue the quarterly checks on corporations so that citizens that choose to invest their hard earned savings are given financial information regarding corporations that is as accurate as possible.

Lee Martin None — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lee Martin Nobody asked for this. The system is working as it is. Please, don’t change it. As an investor, I need quarterly information in order to make informed decisions. This will open our markets to corruption.

Lee McGrath — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lee McGrath Can you say Enron!? Remember what this did to working Americans? Entire retirement savings vanished! Do not give companies the opportunity to hide results! Maintain the current reporting structure and Sarbanes-Oxley!

Lilliana Mendez-Soto — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lilliana Mendez-Soto Reporting should stay quarterly for transparency for investors. Twice annually is not sufficient ever, and especially in these very volatile economic times under the current administration where tariffs and acts of war impact the entire world's economy on a daily basis. As an investor, I need more information not less to analyze my investments, and see what positions I want to hold or sell. Please do not change this regulation.

Linda Dondzila — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Dondzila Quarterly

Linda O'Malley — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Linda O'Malley Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 No. Wall Street is already opaque in too many dealings and this makes them even worse?!!! I oppose as an American that wants to see how business profits in a country spinning out of citizen access and concerns.

Sent from my iPhone

Lisa Frey None — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Frey Information relating to corporate transactions should be AT LEAST quarterly. Semi annual reporting leads to less transparency and increased opportunities for potential corruption. Do not allow less frequent reporting to occur.

Lisa James — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa James As an investor (through a financial advisor) and someone who believes in transparency in all public matters, I strongly oppose the proposed rule. I feel that extending the financial reporting timeframe from four months to six increases the danger of illegal activity and makes it more difficult to track a company's financial performance.

Lisa Reinhardt — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Reinhardt I am a single parent. Transparency is key in any endeavor, especially those involving the public. Corporations enjoy plenty of “relief” already; they need to keep investors informed on a quarterly basis so we can protect OUR money.

LLB — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: LLB A Regulated WAY is a "Protected" Way. A freedom to ACT .. . is naturally yoked by a "Responsibility" to ACT wisely. A person needs to have ACCESS to key information, in order to properly understand how to carry out Investment principles. To suddenly "Blind-fold" the Public from a previously Regulated Way - especially DURING a time of growing Global "unrest" - will inadvertently CRIPPLE the Trust of "WE~ the People". The DUTY of the SEC is firmly written in the Mission statements of the SEC. Without "VISION" ~ People cast off formal Restraints. If Companies are SEEKING Investigators - it's their "DUTY" to be Transparent - no matter the cost of regularly AUDITING and Publically Reporting on their internal operations. The COST of doing GREATER Business is the "COST" of doing Business "Greater" & Properly. Reporting more often, and more Truthfully is what "WE the People" are finally demanding. ... every Publically Traded Corporation 'should' understand the importance of relational - Investment Transparency.

Lori Dwan — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Lori Dwan Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 NO NO NO!!! Please do not keep us in the dark! We have a right to quarterly reporting! How can we wait 6 months for INFORMATION! This is unacceptable! Stop the madness!
Lorraine Dwan
Retired, Chase Bank.

Lyle Buss None — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lyle Buss I feel my government isn't doing well.

Lynn MacLeod Retired investor — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lynn MacLeod Please keep quarterly reporting. I believe the public and especially the shareholders need to have access to this information quarterly. It is all part of analyzing the performance of a company and making informed investment decisions. Six months with no visibility for the investing public is the wrong thing for both shareholders and the companies who want new investors.

Maggie Fletcher — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Maggie Fletcher Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly!!!

Maggie Wierzbicki — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Maggie Wierzbicki Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Companies would only be able to cheat even more! Not necessary that's why it was set up this way!

---

marcelline bruck — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: marcelline bruck Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly!!!

Margaret Ann Berggren MBA, University of Texas At Austin — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Margaret Ann Berggren During my career, in addition to my MBA, I have held a Series 7 License, worked for over 10 years in the Mutual Fund Industry, worked in the Mortgage Servicing space for over 10 years including for a bank with over $100 billion in assets in data analytics, and participated in CFPB and other internal and external audits, I am very concerned about this change to the regulations. In a rapidly changing world, investors, consumers and regulators need the most current data available, and quarterly is essential to making sound financial decisions. Most financial debacles throughout history are a direct result of either a lack of current information regarding the financial health of a company, or the deliberate mis-representation of that data. While I realize that this type of reporting can be onerous at times, and sometimes unbalanced, reducing the frequency is not the answer. Having examiners with a deeper industry and data understanding and utilization of leading edge data tools and technology to produce that reporting on a more consistent and transparent basis in my experience would better serve everyone. My experience is that often such efforts often resulted in improvements to process and reporting even when the review process seemed tedious and overwhelming. I urge you to please continue requiring public companies to report quarterly.

---

marie fitzgerald — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: marie fitzgerald Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Another way to keep us peons in thr dark They keep on coming up with ways to commit fraud

---

Marilee Radak None — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marilee Radak Keep the corporations in check. Quarter reporting is a must!

Mark Frerichs The Motley Fool Community — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Frerichs I am strongly opposed to relaxing reporting to only semi-annual status. Though I am in favor of companies looking beyond quarterly profits and planning sustainable, long-term growth and policies, semi-annual reporting seems among the worst ways to try to incentivize long-term planning or cost-savings. As an owner of individual companies' stocks, I rely heavily on an understanding of a given company's financial health/status/decisions. Making me wait 6 months for valuable information, especially given global geopolitical and economic volatility, could be very costly and significantly reduce my ability to react and adjust strategy. Information, reliable and transparent, is the basis of a healthy and productive capitalistic marketplace. Do not make this change.

Marlene Dunn — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Marlene Dunn Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 In the 70s companies were indicted for even verbally touting an offering!

Sent from my iPad

Martha Rodabaugh Retired — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Martha Rodabaugh Investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it.

Martin Farkas — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Martin Farkas Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 I'm retired and depend on my investment income to support my wife and me. We will be secure only when the SEC continues to do its job and keep the quarterly reporting requirement.

Martin Farkas

Martin Whittaker Motley Fool Community — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Martin Whittaker As a part owner of a company through a shareholding, I feel that the number of reporting opportunities throughout a year should NOT be decreased but continued at their existing level of frequency.

Matthew Schaefer The Motley Fool Community — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew Schaefer Investment ownership requires information. Reducing required reports to twice each year (versus the currently required four times per year) only prolongs the wait for information and adds to uncertainty by the owners - the stockholders. Any claimed reduction in costs will be minimal given the automation tools in use by most companies of any size and reduces the transparency of corporate operations. This is a bad proposal and should be withdrawn. Period!

Maxine Franklin Dental hygienist retired — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Maxine Franklin Please keep quarterly reporting. I don't want to be kept in the dark for 6 months.

Megan Jeanne, Attorney, The Corporate Law Group — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Megan Jeanne Changing the corporation reporting schedule from quarterly to semi-annual will do a great disservice to consumers, the market, and shareholders of the reporting companies. I practice corporate and securities law so I help clients prepare and review securities filings. While I understand the expense and time involved in preparing the periodic reports, requiring companies to prepare public reports and financials on a quarterly basis not only provides transparency to investors that do not have a private line of communication with management of their investments, but it also helps to prevent manipulation of the marketplace by requiring clear reviewed financial statements; plain English discussions of the company's ongoing operations; and descriptions of potential risks to the company, all certified under threat of substantial penalties and liabilities by the persons who are best-positioned to know this information. Extending the time period for reporting from every three months to every six months gives bad actors a much longer window to conduct malfeasance before a report is required to be published. Additionally, the longer reporting window also gives regular market investors less of an insight into what a company is actually doing behind the scenes. Most investors do not have the ability to call up management of a company in which they are a smaller shareholder to ask what is going on - they find out information at the same time as the rest of the market when a periodic report is filed. The SEC should be requiring more transparency, not less, from company that rely on public investment and take the money of ordinary citizens. If a company's management does not want to provide disclosures to the public and investors about what they are doing, they are free to take the company private and remain a private company. A company should not be allowed to avail itself of the benefits of the stock market without also accepting that it needs to provide information and transparency in return. We do not need to go back to the time of the robber barons and Enron when management of companies could do whatever they wanted, little people be damned. The SEC was created and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 was enacted specifically to require oversight and periodic reporting by companies taking advantage of the stock market to help prevent another confluence of events that led to the largest stock market crash in history. Congress saw what happened when companies were allowed to operate without oversight - stocks were inflated beyond any reasonable measure, the public was encouraged by such inflation to speculate, the bubble burst, and the entire economy paid the price. We cannot afford repeats of Black Thursday, Black Tuesday, or Black Monday. Transparency and more-frequent reporting are key to helping avoid market manipulations and crashes. Keep the quarterly reporting requirements of companies under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

Melissa Kacher — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Melissa Kacher The SECs job is to protect investors, not the insiders. Do not do this. The investors need this information. Do not let corporations hide this information from investors. Passing this rule will only help insiders, not investors. It will allow insiders to trade for more time and more profitably with their insider information while retail investors are left in the dark.

Melissa Kacher — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-19 From: Melissa Kacher The SECs job is to protect investors, not to be a political tool for the president. Do not do this. The investors want this information. Do not let corporations hide this information from investors.

Meryl Moran — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Meryl Moran Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

Michael Austin Mehrhof — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Austin Mehrhof I cannot think of a single benefit this wioll have for the retail investor. It will open up opportunities for corporations to reduce transparency in their corporate and financial dealings, to a massive degree. I completely am opposed to this new rule.

Michael Estep — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Michael Estep Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Thisvis not right! Keep it quarterly

---

Michael J. Blundell Non - I am a retiree — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael J. Blundell The proposal to go from quarterly reporting to semi-annual reporting is incredibly stupid and very dangerous to the citizens of this nation who have worked hard saved well and are heading to or are in retirement. It is imperative that the 1/4ly reporting remains intact. Do YOUR DUTY in the SEC and protect the citizens and THEIR investments. Respectfully Michael J. Blundell

---

Michael Jabara — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Jabara As a retail investor I rely on public information to make informed decisions about my portfolio. Allowing mid to large-cap companies to delay reporting would have a negative impact on publicly available information and would keep retail investors like me at a disadvantage when trying to plan for a future and participate in the market.

Michael K. Vernier Retired Attorney — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael K. Vernier In the absence of a mega-regulator, the Securities Acts created a regime of limited regulation and oversight, but with extensive disclosure on the theory that the "market," with sufficient and timely information, could provide a measure of discipline and self-interested review. The current system is imperfect and subject to weaknesses, but undermining the sufficient and timely information in the current scheme is moving in exactly the wrong direction. We need more, not less information, and a stronger regulatory presence, not less. I support retention of at least the current disclosure requirements.

Michael L Vazquez — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael L Vazquez As an individual investor having access to financial reports is essential to my ability to evaluate and maintain a portfolio of equities. As the burden of planning for retirement falls more and more to the individual investor via IRA's and 401K's, financial transparency is the primary method of leveling the playing field. The current regulation requiring financial updates every 3 months has served investors well and enabled the evaluation and monitoring of the financial status of companies. The proposal to extend the reporting to every 6 months will result in a loss of transparency and skew the flow of information to large investment firms at the expense of the individual investor. Financial reporting by public companies is not a burden as each of them must maintain their books at least monthly in order to remain viable. Changing the current reporting schedule to every 6 months creates an information void that will result in reduced valuations across the board and discourage investment in US based companies.

Michael Momberg — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Michael Momberg Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep the company reporting quarterly aa the investment community and general public deserves to know what is happening more frequently than semi-annual.

Sent From my iPad Michael Momberg

Michael Vitaly LLC — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Vitaly LLC Public Comment on File No. S7-2026-15: Semiannual Reporting Proposal To the Securities and Exchange Commission: As an individual investor managing my own retirement portfolio, and a new dad planning for the future for our family, I am writing to express my strong opposition to File No. S7-2026-15. Allowing public companies to drop quarterly Form 10-Q filings severely harms the transparency that regular investors rely on. Waiting six months to see a company’s financial health leaves retail investors completely in the dark, creates a massive information advantage for Wall Street institutions, and will likely trigger severe market volatility when bad news is finally delayed and dumped all at once. Corporate accountability requires consistent, timely data. I urge the SEC to reject this proposal and protect the integrity of the public markets for individual investors. Sincerely, Michael Vitaly Sazonov

---

Michelle Godin — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michelle Godin It's our money and they need to provide timely and accurate reportings instead of withholding that information before it's too late and we lose our money. Quarterly reporting keeps them more honest. The risk tolerance for most of us that have money in the market is a short window and time matters.

Michelle Leder, Editor, Founder, Footnoted — Jun 30, 2026
UNCOVERING ACTIONABLE INFORMATION IN SEC FILINGS SINCE 2003

849 N. LAKE AVE.
*SUITE 122 * PASADENA, CA 91104* MLEDER@FOOTNOTED.COM
June 30, 2026
Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission
Washington D.C. 20549
Re: Proposed Rule on Semiannual Reporting S7-2026-15
Dear Ms. Countryman:
I am the editor and founder of footnoted*
, a website that I started in August 2003 following the publication of my book, Financial Fineprint: Uncovering a Company's True Value (John Wiley & Sons). I started analyzing SEC filings 23 years ago after a failed investment in Qwest Communications. A post-mortem review of their 10-Qs revealed unusual related party transactions and aggressive accounting that, while publicly disclosed in Qwest's filings, were not widely known. Those few hours spent studying those filings would have saved me about $5,000 because I would have sold the stock before it essentially crashed.
Since then, I have probably read, or at least skimmed, more SEC filings than most anyone else out there.
I have used the information I have found over the years in my own investing, which has enabled me a level of financial security that I did not have growing up as the child of a single mother in pre-gentrified Brooklyn, NY. Over the past two decades, I have written extensively about many of the things that I have found on both my site, major media outlets and various social media sites, enabling other investors to benefit from my knowledge.
At the heart of the SEC's mission is investor protection. That is why I am strongly opposed to the proposal to allow companies to opt to file semi-annually via a new 10-S. The only thing that this will do is create additional informational asymmetry forcing individual investors to wait six months for critical disclosures that institutional investors may already have access to via other channels.
While it is fair to say that some of the material in a typical 10-Q filing is repetitive, these filings remain incredibly useful, especially to long-term individual investors like me. Requiring investors to wait six months between filings would significantly negate their value. Whenever I am considering making a new investment for my own portfolio, I read several prior 10-Qs, as well as the 8-Ks, proxy statement and 10-K (and all of the various exhibits). That's because the information in there, while written by the company and its attorneys, provides important information that I simply can't get anywhere else. Here are a few examples in relatively recent filings:
●
1
In its most recent 10-Q filed on June 3, 2026 Costco disclosed that it was facing four class action lawsuits over tariffs on imported goods. Only one of the lawsuits had been previously disclosed publicly prior to this filing.
●

2
In its 10-Q filed on May 4, 2026 Paramount Skydance added a lengthy section on risk factors related to its purchase of Warner Brothers Discovery. One risk factor, in particular, stood out to me, with the company warning about the potential for “retaining and attracting employees and creative talent…we compete with other content producers for creative talent, including producers, directors, actors and writers and if we fail to retain or attract new key employees or creative talent, our business, financial condition or results of operation could be adversely affected.
”

●
3
In the 10-Q that Palantir Technologies filed on May 5, 2026 , the company disclosed that co-founder and CEO Alex Karp had entered into a new 10b5 plan on March 12 that had replaced an earlier plan that had been adopted in November 2025 and disclosed in the 10-K that the company filed on Feb. 17, 2026. The new plan significantly increased the number of shares that Karp planned to sell to 7.1 million shares, compared with just 360,000 shares under the prior plans.
4
These are just three recent examples at very large companies. Over the years that I have been looking at SEC filings, there have been numerous examples where companies make seemingly subtle changes in their routine 10-Qs that no Wall Street analyst or media outlet reports on and yet which have an impact on the stock’s performance, both good and bad. This is particularly true at smaller companies – the ones that this proposal seems to be targeting for relief from regulatory filings – because they don’t get the analyst coverage that larger companies do. Peer-reviewed research from the Accounting Research Journal found a 17.8% decline in firm-specific analyst coverage between 2011 and 2021, most pronounced among 5 small-cap firms . It has likely declined further over the past five years, raising the question as to who exactly the SEC expects to provide this information to investors once companies decide to eliminate the 10-Q.
1 Costco Third Quarter 10-Q filed on June 3, 2026
https://www.sec.gov/Archives/edgar/data/909832/000090983226000051/0000909832-26-000051-index.htm2 Paramount Skydance First Quarter 10-Q filed on May 4, 2026
https://www.sec.gov/ix?doc=/Archives/edgar/data/2041610/000204161026000026/psky-20260331.htm
3 Palantir Technologies First Quarter 10-Q filed on May 5, 2026
https://www.sec.gov/ix?doc=/Archives/edgar/data/1321655/000132165526000028/pltr-20260331.htm
4 Palantir Technologies 2025 10-K filed Feb. 17, 2026
https://www.sec.gov/Archives/edgar/data/1321655/000132165526000011/0001321655-26-000011-index.htm 5The Great Sell-Side Sell-Off: Evidence of Declining Financial Analyst Coverage
https://www.emerald.com/arj/article-abstract/36/2-3/290/131629/The-great-sell-side-sell-off-evidence-of-declining?redirectedFrom=fulltext
One example that sticks out to me, in particular, although it is now more than a decade old, was at a small 6

cap company called GT Technologies. Back in Aug. 2014, the company disclosed in its 10-Q that it was facing potential issues with its contract with Apple Inc. noting that Apple “had no minimum purchase obligation” and going on to note that “Without significant Sapphire revenue from Apple, we would still be required to repay in cash significant amounts…which would limit our ability to invest in or operate other portions of our business.
” At the time of this disclosure, GT was trading at around $15 a share and 7 climbed to $18 by the end of August 2014. Three months later, the company had filed for bankruptcy and investors, including many retail investors, were wiped out. Five years later, the SEC charged both the 8 company and its former CEO with fraud under the leadership of former Chairman Jay Clayton . This case serves as a strong warning on the need for interim reporting and is frequently studied in business schools, 9 including Columbia University to demonstrate how fast a company can implode as well as the importance of these interim disclosures. Had this proposed rule been in place at the time, GT Technology investors would have been totally in the dark until the company had filed .
This is exactly the type of disclosure that would disappear under this proposed rule. In his comments 10 regarding this proposal Commissioner Mark Uyeda stated that this would enable the SEC to stop promoting short-termism. But this argument is duplicitous at best. It’s not 10-Qs that cause short-termism:
it’s the quarterly guidance, the emphasis on “beating the number”
, and the endless number of institutional investor events that individual investors have no access to. Not to mention executive compensation. Even when companies post their slide decks from these meetings via an 8-K under Regulation FD, those presentations are only a small slice of what really goes on at these conferences. Individual investors are not privy to the side conversations, chatter over meals, and other less formal exchanges of information that routinely go on at these events.
Institutional investors already have more access to information than individual investors do as a result of these very frequent events. Wall Street Horizon, a financial data firm that tracks corporate events, counts over 6,000 broker-hosted investor conferences and 24,000 individual company presentations annually .
11
Excluding weekends and holidays, that's roughly 24 conferences and nearly 100 presentations occurring every business day — events that individual investors have no access to. I can tell you, because I look at a lot of 8-Ks, that there is nowhere near enough FD disclosure of what really goes on at these events.

So I ask you: is it really the 10-Q that is leading to short-termism or could it be that all of these events and the quarterly earnings guidance are the real culprits? On pg. 110 of the proposed rule, you write: “On the one hand, some information intermediaries (e.g., financial analysts) could provide information that substitutes for at least some of the information that would have been included in the interim quarterly 6 GT Technologies Second quarter 10-Q filed Aug. 7, 2014
https://www.sec.gov/Archives/edgar/data/1394954/000144530514003496/gtatq2cy2014-10q.htm7 GT Advanced Technologies 8-K filed Oct. 10, 2014
https://www.sec.gov/Archives/edgar/data/1394954/000144530514004279/gtatq32014br8-k.htm
8 SEC Charges Sapphire Glass Manufacturer and Former CEO With Fraud https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/press-releases/2019-66
9 https://caseworks.business.columbia.edu/caseworks/gt-advanced-technologies
10 Statement on Proposing Semiannual Reporting May 5, 2026
https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-statements/uyeda-statement-proposing-semiannual-reporting-050526 11 Wall Street Horizon Investor Conferences https://wallstreethorizon.com/investor-conferences reports (i.e., Q1 and Q3), which could mitigate potential increases in information asymmetry.
” Does the
SEC really expect Wall Street analysts to provide this service? And at what cost to individual investors?
Since its founding 92 years ago, the SEC’s three-part mission has been “protecting investors, maintaining fair, orderly, and efficient markets, and facilitating capital formation”
. This proposal only focuses on the third mission, while ignoring the first two.
I believe there are numerous ways to improve the 10-Q, without getting rid of it, and am happy to discuss my ideas with any member of the SEC’s staff at their convenience. I strongly encourage the SEC to abandon this proposal in its entirety. As both an individual investor and a leading expert on reading SEC filings, I welcome a chance to engage further.
Sincerely,
Michelle Leder
editor/founder footnoted*

Michelle Walters — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Michelle Walters Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep it quarterly!
That is what works best and protects investors!

Modernassemblysoluti — Jun 30, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Modernassemblysoluti Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 No, keep it Quarterly. There is NO validity to going back to the “good ol’ boys” bi-yearly reporting.

Sent from my iPhone

Molly Callahan — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Molly Callahan Do not change to semi-annual reporting. Quarterly reporting is the minimum standard of reporting to which a publicly traded company should be held.

Moody Capital Solutions, Inc. Chief Executive Officer — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Moody Capital Solutions, Inc. June 30, 2026 Via Electronic Submission U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission 100 F Street NE Washington, DC 20549 Re: Comments on Proposed Amendments to Permit Optional Semiannual Reporting Commission Staff, I appreciate the opportunity to comment on the Commission’s proposed amendments that would allow public companies to file semiannual reports instead of quarterly reports. As Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Moody Capital Solutions, Inc., a FINRA registered broker dealer focused on capital formation for smaller issuers, I support regulatory reforms that reduce unnecessary burdens and provide issuers with flexibility to tailor reporting practices to their operational realities. The option to file one semiannual report on Form 10 S and one annual report on Form 10 K would meaningfully reduce recurring compliance costs for smaller issuers. Many foreign private issuers already report on a semiannual basis under existing SEC rules, and this structure has proven workable, transparent, and consistent with investor protection. Extending similar flexibility to domestic issuers is a logical modernization of the interim reporting framework. It is also important to recognize that even with this optionality, many larger issuers will likely take a wait and see approach. These companies have established quarterly reporting processes, broad analyst coverage, and investor relations practices built around quarterly cycles. As a result, they may not immediately elect semiannual reporting. This natural pacing further supports the conclusion that the proposal will not disrupt market expectations or impair transparency. For smaller issuers, the potential benefits are significant. The reduction in audit and review cycles associated with semiannual reporting would likely result in meaningful cost savings. These savings would flow directly to shareholders in the form of enhanced return, improved capital efficiency, and greater ability to allocate resources toward growth initiatives. Smaller issuers often operate with lean finance teams, and reducing the frequency of mandatory reporting would allow them to focus more on strategic execution rather than repetitive compliance cycles. Importantly, the shift to optional semiannual reporting would not diminish the flow of information to investors. Public companies routinely issue press releases, provide guidance, and communicate material developments throughout the year. These practices will continue regardless of the interim reporting frequency. Investors will still receive timely updates on performance, strategy, and material events, while issuers gain flexibility to reduce unnecessary regulatory friction. The proposed filing deadlines for Form 10 S, forty or forty five days depending on filer status, strike an appropriate balance between timely disclosure and operational feasibility. The related amendments to Regulation S X, which simplify financial statement requirements to reflect the semiannual option, are also constructive and aligned with the Commission’s broader effort to modernize disclosure obligations. From the perspective of reducing regulatory burdens, this proposal is a thoughtful and practical reform. It preserves investor protection, enhances issuer flexibility, and aligns domestic reporting practices more closely with global norms. I commend the Commission staff for advancing reforms that support efficient capital formation and encourage continued focus on modernizing disclosure requirements in ways that reflect materiality and economic reality. Respectfully submitted, Richard Kreger Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Moody Capital Solutions, Inc. FINRA Registered Broker Dealer

---

Motley Fool Community — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Motley Fool Community Hello, I feel that we need to keep the "owners" of companies informed as a share holder I am an owner. Corporations profits continue to grow at and unprecedented pace therefore we should be able to use some AI and keep the owners informed. Insider information is for select few give the average investors a chance.

Motley Fool Community — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Motley Fool Community Keep quarterly reports

---

Ms Terry Malarkey Pls Do Not Allow This To Happen. Full Transparency Always Best. — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ms Terry Malarkey Do Not Allow This To Happen. Full Transparency Always Best.

Nancy Malone — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Malone Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please do not remove the quarterly visibility we have into companies which will most likely impact trust and stock ownership.

Nancy Miller None — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Miller Investors deserve the superior transparency that comes with quarterly reports versus the proposed twice per year reporting. More information and transparency allows stockholders to make better-informed decisions regarding their investments. Less transparency allows companies to hide questionable decisions and actions from their stockholders, which is not fair to the people who invested with them. Please reject the proposed plan to reduce transparency into publicly-held companies. Please uphold the current rule that requires companies to submit quarterly reports. Thank you, Nancy Miller

---

NANCY NICODEMUS — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: NANCY NICODEMUS Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly!!!
We don’t need the chance for more fraud in the financial industry!

Sent from my iPhone

Nancy Sigrist Sr. Director, FFIC, retired — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Sigrist I respectfully request that the SEC retain quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. The benefits for companies are not great enough to justify the risk to investors. Let’s keep accountability and transparency in place to better protect the economic health of our markets. Thank you.

Nancy Sylvester — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Sylvester Keep the reporting quarterly to protect investors!!

Nancy VanAst — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Nancy VanAst Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 These companies have a duty to timely disclose. Period. Every 6 months is not timely.

Nancy Yamin — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Yamin If you are playing fair why do need less disclosure????

Natalie Barnes — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Natalie Barnes Natalie Barnes, retired. We are counting on our investments to get us through our senior years and have always appreciated those quarterly reports to help our decision making. This seems like a serious case of "if it ain't broke, don't 'fix it!"

Natalie Poston — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Natalie Poston I'm writing to oppose the proposal to move from quarterly to semiannual reporting requirements. Quarterly reporting protects individual investors. Cutting it to twice a year doubles the information gap between insiders and ordinary shareholders—and that gap is exactly where volatility, uncertainty, and mistrust take root. Less frequent disclosure doesn't make markets calmer; it makes them more opaque for the people with the least access. The short-termism rationale doesn't justify this change. Research from the CFA Institute, which examined this precise shift in the U.K. market, found that reporting frequency has no measurable effect on corporate investment behavior. So the SEC would be accepting a real, concrete cost—less transparency for everyday investors—in exchange for a benefit the evidence says won't actually materialize. The companies most likely to opt out are the ones where oversight matters most. Smaller, less-covered businesses already operate with less analyst scrutiny and less public attention. Reducing their reporting obligations makes them harder to monitor, not easier to own—precisely the opposite of what individual investors need. This is the wrong direction. Regulation FD moved markets toward a more level playing field between insiders and the public. This proposal moves us away from it. And it's worth asking: what is the problem this actually solves? As the WallStreetBets comment letter put it, "The companies we trade are not being held back from greatness by the obligation to file four reports a year. ... The entire S&P 500 files a 10-Q every quarter, and the S&P 500 is at an all-time high. If quarterly reporting is crushing American capitalism, American capitalism is hiding it well." I urge the Commission to keep quarterly reporting in place.

Nicholas Ness — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nicholas Ness This change is bad for the public and investors. It is only beneficial for companies to lag in their reporting and longer to hide problems. We should not institute this change

---

Nora Graves — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nora Graves I am against changing corporate reporting periods from quarterly to semi-annual. We see news that events are affecting the United States daily. War, tariffs, blockades, oil shortages, etc., have dramatic effects on all of us, including our US companies. Imagine that a major event occurs July 1, but the effect on the companies isn't known until next January. This is totally unacceptable. Changing the reporting period means that investors will not have the necessary information to determine where to invest their money. Investors could move their money to other countries, where reporting is more regulated. This does not serve the interests of either corporations or investors.

Norma Dockery — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Norma Dockery Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly. Stop the steal

---

Norma Gekakis Concerned citizen — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Norma Gekakis As a person who lost my 401k due to Enron, I feel strongly that quarterly reporting in essential.

Pamela Leduc — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Pamela Leduc Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it Quarterly please. It can't be too hard to do. We all need to have accountability. Thank you for doing it now.

Pat Morris — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Pat Morris Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly!!

Pat Rosenthal — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Pat Rosenthal Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Patricia Roman Retired Teacher — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia Roman This policy is not transparent or reasonable. Corrupt advantages hold financial consequences for those of us with fixed or low incomes.

---

phil herzer — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: phil herzer Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 I'm a blue collar guy, and I've worked my whole life, and I'm still working unlike most of you lazy guys in Washington. I can't retire because for the rules that have been made but I do have a partial retirement an Investments. What I can't do is lose that because you're willing to sell out to Big corporate entities. For once in your life grow some colonies and actually do the right thing, keep it quarterly!

Sent from my Galaxy

Phil Herzer — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Phil Herzer Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 I'm a blue collar guy, and I've worked my whole life, and I'm still working unlike most of you lazy guys in Washington. I can't retire because for the rules that have been made but I do have a partial retirement an Investments. What I can't do is lose that because you're willing to sell out to Big corporate entities. For once in your life grow some colonies and actually do the right thing, keep it quarterly!

Polly Garbutt — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Polly Garbutt Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 It beggars the mind. Semi annual reports were tried once. It didn’t work. Why are you going backwards instead of forward? Please don’t go this semi annual route. Keep the monthly reporting.

Sent from my iPad

Raeanne Bailor — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Raeanne Bailor Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
The SEC proposal to change to 6 month reporting would be disastrous to me. I am retired and rely on my pension and IRA to survive. This delay will cause fraud and a volatile stock market. It would be very unfair for me not to get reporting while bigger entities have access to information to line their pockets. Please do not make this change that would be so detrimental to me and thousands like me.

Renée gray — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Renée gray Re: File No. S7-2026-15 – Semiannual Reporting Dear Commissioners, I am writing as an individual retail investor to express my opposition to the proposal to reduce required financial reporting by public companies from quarterly to semiannual. Quarterly reporting has been a cornerstone of market transparency for decades. As an individual investor, I rely on timely financial information to make informed decisions about my retirement savings and investments. Reducing public reporting to twice a year would significantly increase the amount of time that everyday investors must make decisions without current financial information. While large institutional investors often have access to management meetings, industry analysts, and other resources, individual investors depend primarily on publicly available information. Less frequent reporting would widen the information gap between large institutions and retail investors and reduce confidence that all investors have fair access to material information. I understand the desire to reduce unnecessary regulatory burdens on public companies. However, I do not believe that reducing financial transparency is the right solution. The benefits of quarterly reporting—greater transparency, improved market efficiency, and increased investor confidence—outweigh the costs. I respectfully urge the Commission to maintain the current quarterly reporting requirements. Thank you for considering my comments. Sincerely, Renee Gray

---

Renee Independent — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Renee Dear USSEC: We, the American people respectfully "demand" that the quarterly requirement remain quarterly and NOT BIANNUAL. The SSA, and the Govt has failed the workers by taking "LOANS" against the compulsory salary withdrawals. Don't permit the reporting frequency to further Cloak our hard earned money! BR,

---

RIC DAVIS RETIRED, BUT STILL INVESTING FOR MY GRANDCHILDREN'S FUTURE. — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: RIC DAVIS BEING RETIRED, MY WHOLE FUTURE OF THE QUALITY OF MY LIFE ARE IN FUNDS IN SAVINGS AND INVESTMENTS THAT I NEED TO WATCH. QUARTERLY REPORTS ARE VERY IMPORTANT FOR MY DESCISION MAKING ON THAT KNOWLEDGE. THE RIGHT TO SEE THIS INFORMATION EVERY QUARTER SHOULD STAY.

Richard Rabin — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Rabin Reducing the number of public-company reports from 4 to 2 would be a big mistake and would be especially severely harmful for individual investors by reducing the information available to them. The reduction in transparency will increase uncertainty resulting in greater volatility. Supposed cost savings would be minimal at best and does not overcome the harm that will occur with the lack of information

---

Richard Robinson — Jun 30, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Robinson I am opposed to the proposed rule. For a retired, private investor like myself, the reduced timeliness of detailed financials and monitoring challenges represent real downsides when using paid advisors - like I do - who add value through oversight and timely insights. While many may argue the net effect would likely be small and depend heavily on how many companies actually elect the option, the potential delayed detection of problems — such as awareness of a company's operational mistakes, rising debt, fraud, failed investment schemes, or other malfeasance, could remain hidden for up to at least six months instead of three. This reduces the window for advisors - and individual private investors - to identify risks, advise adjustments, or exit positions before lifelong investments are lost. Therefore, I am personally against the blackout.

Robert Beers — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Robert Beers Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Robert Beers.
Keep it 4 times a year like it has been. It works so just let it be. Keep it simple stupid. Investors need to be informed to make good investment choices.

Robert Busch Individual Retirement Investor — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Busch More frequent transparency is preventative

---

Robert Componation — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Robert Componation Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 I saw the effects of Enron, and I got caught up in the Xerox scam with their fraudulent reporting. Lost a lot of money there and lo and behold you sweet, stupid ignorant, dumb bastards wanna give them the option to do it again to somebody else. How kind of you to let the CEOs crap on someone else. I hope it's your children. They have to suffer through it next time. Do you know why the rules were changed and you want to take them back to the way they were when they screwed everybody do it and I pray you eat shit and die the very next day.

Sent from my iPhone

Roberta Indano — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Roberta Indano Please keep quarterly reports. I want transparency. Stop this! Thank you. Yours truly, Roberta Indano

---

Roberta Jocius — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Roberta Jocius Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep it quarterly.

Rock Dodge Individual retail investor — Jun 30, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rock Dodge I am submitting this comment in my personal capacity as an individual retail investor. I am not submitting this comment on behalf of any organization. I oppose File No. S7-2026-15 and the proposal to allow public companies to replace quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting. As an individual retail investor saving for retirement, I believe this would create obvious risks for ordinary investors. Quarterly reporting gives investors timely, standardized, comparable information about revenue, earnings, debt, cash flow, margins, and business deterioration. Moving to semiannual reporting would create longer information gaps and make it easier for serious problems to remain hidden for months. This proposal would increase information asymmetry. Company insiders, large institutions, lenders, analysts, and connected market participants may still have access to better information, while ordinary investors would be left waiting. That is not fair to the public markets. It would also reduce comparability. If some companies report quarterly and others report semiannually, investors will have a harder time comparing companies in the same industry. Companies with weaker results may have the strongest incentive to reduce reporting frequency, which is exactly when investors need more transparency, not less. I understand the desire to reduce unnecessary compliance costs, but the answer should be to simplify and modernize quarterly reporting, not reduce it. With today's accounting systems, reporting technology, automation, and digital filing tools, the SEC should be improving the usefulness and efficiency of disclosure, not creating six-month blind spots. Quarterly reporting should remain the required baseline for public companies. Public markets depend on transparency, comparability, and trust. Reducing mandatory reporting frequency would weaken all three. I urge the SEC to reject this proposal and preserve quarterly reporting.

Rodney Hallsten — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Rodney Hallsten Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly. We need to know about what is happening to make good decision on investments.

Sent from my iPhone

Ronald Stalbaum Retired teacher — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ronald Stalbaum To whom it may concern, It's hard enough to keep those who want to create financial fraud in check. Please don't give them any for room to manipulate our investments. Please , please keep Quarterly Reporting in force. Thank you for your work on this very important issue. Ronald Stalbaum

---

Ronald Voyles — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Ronald Voyles Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly!!!

Ruby Hopkins — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Ruby Hopkins Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly

Sent from my iPhone

Russell Werkman — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Russell Werkman Dear Committee Members, I am against the proposal to reduce the number of required corporate reports from four per year to two per year. The reporting done by public corporations is so important to ensure that small investors, like me, have the information we need to make informed decisions. While I am aware that the reporting takes time, effort, and money, as a shareholder, I am willing to pay those costs to ensure I know what is going on. This is especially important in the current world, where information changes so quickly. Thank you for your consideration, Russell Werkman

---

Ruth Mendala-Thompson — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Ruth Mendala-Thompson Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please do not eliminate quarterly reports. Obviously, as an individual, I need to know what is happening to my investments. If there is no or little transparency, more fraud will follow. These new rules may help the multimillionaires but can certainly hurt the smaller investors like me and millions of others.
Suncerely,
Ruth Mendala-Thompson

Savanah Matin — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Savanah Matin RE: OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED FORM 10-S AND THE TRANSITION TO SEMIANNUAL CORPORATE REPORTING I appreciate the opportunity to submit comments regarding the Securities and Exchange Commission's proposal to make quarterly reporting optional and introduce a semiannual corporate reporting framework via Form 10-S. While I understand the Commission's intent to explore mechanisms that reduce administrative burdens and mitigate short-term market pressures, I write to express our strong opposition to rolling back the mandatory quarterly reporting framework (Form 10-Q). A robust, predictable, and frequent disclosure ecosystem is the bedrock of the U.S. capital markets. Moving from a quarterly mandate to a semiannual cadence introduces structural inefficiencies, increases system risks, and fundamentally undermines the Commission's core mandate of investor protection. I urge the Commission to preserve mandatory quarterly reporting based on the following critical considerations: 1. Proliferation of Adverse Selection (The "Bad News" Gap) If quarterly reporting becomes optional, the market will face a severe adverse selection trap. Stable, highly profitable corporations will likely continue to report on a quarterly basis to signal operational strength. Conversely, companies experiencing internal distress, financial deterioration, or emerging operational friction will be the first to adopt a semiannual schedule. Transitioning to an optional framework effectively permits underperforming companies to obscure critical operational realities, depriving investors of timely warning signs precisely when risk management is most vital. 2. Heightened Information Asymmetry and Insider Trading Risks A six-month gap between mandatory public disclosures traps material non-public information (MNPI) inside corporations for twice as long. This creates an unlevel playing field. Long disclosure gaps increase the risk of information leaking through private channels to sophisticated or well-connected market participants, to the severe detriment of retail investors. Furthermore, a semiannual cadence creates operational headaches for corporate insiders, who will face significantly extended blackout periods, curbing their liquidity and introducing unnecessary compliance friction. 3. Amplified Market Volatility and Severe Earnings Surprises Quarterly financial updates serve as an anchor for market expectations, enabling investors to price securities incrementally based on factual data rather than speculation. Spacing mandated disclosures six months apart forces market participants to rely on alternative data streams, rumors, and macro-proxies. When official data is eventually released after half a year of silence, any deviation from consensus will cause massive, erratic swings in equity and debt prices, driving up systemic volatility. 4. Capital Market Access and Debt Covenant Disruption The corporate credit and underwriting markets are fundamentally optimized for a 90-day reporting cycle. The vast majority of syndicated bank loans, credit facilities, and bond indentures strictly enforce quarterly financial covenants. Shifting the SEC timeline would force corporations into costly, complex contract renegotiations with private lenders. Additionally, under standard accounting guidelines, independent auditors can only issue "negative assurance" comfort letters if corporate financials are less than 135 days old. Semiannual filers would find their operational windows for raising quick, opportunistic capital via public debt or equity offerings severely compressed. 5. Illusory Cost Savings and Persistent Competitive Pressure While estimates suggest dropping two quarterly filings might yield modest administrative savings, these benefits are largely illusory. Because public corporations must maintain continuous Sarbanes-Oxley (SOX) internal controls and accounting personnel year-round, the baseline fixed costs of compliance remain. Moreover, the pressure to maintain analyst coverage and defend against shareholder activism would compel most competitive firms to provide quarterly updates voluntarily. A formal rule change would simply eliminate standardizability, leaving investors to parse fragmented, non-comparable data formats across competing entities. Historical global precedent supports the retention of this mandate. When the United Kingdom eliminated its mandatory quarterly reporting directive in 2014 in a similar bid to curb "short-termism," the vast majority of UK companies chose to continue reporting quarterly anyway, driven by explicit investor demands and capital market expectations. The shift did not change corporate investment horizons; it merely degraded standardization. For these reasons, we strongly discourage the Commission from adopting Form 10-S. Maintaining mandatory quarterly reporting ensures that transparency remains equitable, continuous, and standardized across the U.S. financial system. Respectfully submitted, Savanah

---

Shannon Valentine — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shannon Valentine I believe corporations should continue to file quarterly. There will be a loss of transparency if they move towards less reporting. Ultimately, that will hurt the investor.

Sharon Erpestad Citizen — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sharon Erpestad These reports need to stay quarterly to avoid fraud and abuse, which is what this administration wants! Right? Transparency is key to avoid fraud

---

Sherry Hlavachek Consumer — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sherry Hlavachek Keep quarterly reports.

Stephanie Brink — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Stephanie Brink Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: your job as a government agency is to work for the people of this nation, not protect the corruption of the rich and powerful and uphold corporations shady dealings. Moves like this only further hurt the poorest among us as well as destabilize an already failing capitalist system. Please reflect on how ACTUAL REAL PEOPLE will be affected/effected, and do your job of protecting SOCIETY, not corporations and lenders.

Stephanie Thylin — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephanie Thylin Keep the reporting quarterly!

Stephen Cook na — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Cook Quarterly business reporting is and must remain a gold standard. Investors rely on current information to maintain investment goals. Bi-annual reports shield businesses and open the door for fraudulent activity and lack of transparency adversely effecting investors.

Stephen Scott Senior Technician — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Scott Dear S.E.C. , I believe this proposal does nothing other than sew seeds of deception in the minds of an American public that craves to invest in this country. Many Americans put in hard work every day to become retail investors and they will start questioning why the S.E.C. would even consider keeping the well-being of any company from them for an extended period of time. They will also start wondering when the S.E.C. might extend this again. Companies report quarterly and that should never change. Americans as a whole are investing more than ever before and this idea of reporting twice a year could do irreparable harm. Yours Truly, Stephen Scott

---

Steve Davis — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Steve Davis Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it Quarterly!
Steve Davis
Retired Optometrist

Steve Fausett — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Steve Fausett Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 My name is Steven Fausett, I am an individual investor, invested in more than 200 individual stocks and multiple funds. I need to know company financial situations as soon as possible to maintain my investments success. Please keep Quarterly reporting requirements!

Steven Lee — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven Lee I oppose semi annual reporting to the SEC. I have an issue with quarterly reporting too in that I don't believe it's enough. I think citizens need to organize to implement DAILY reporting to the SEC! However our corporations are so corrupt even that level of scrutiny is not enough!

Sue Farnham — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Sue Farnham Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 KEEP IT QUARTERLY!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Sue Sweeney — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Sue Sweeney Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly!! The Country has a right to know what is going on with every company!!

Sent from my iPhone

Susan Campodonico — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Susan Campodonico Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Dear SEC,

I am a busy Mom/caretaker of older parent and I rely on honest quarterly reports to manage my very small portfolio. It's not much but I count on the dividends for extra expenses like home and car repairs.

Please Keep the existing quarterly report laws to protect my meager assets.
Thank you!

Susan Campodonico

Sent from my iPhone

Susan Nesbitt — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Susan Nesbitt Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I am adamantly opposed to this proposal.

Susan Nugent — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Nugent I am requesting you to reject half yearly reporting and stick to the quarterly financial reporting. Moving to half yearly reporting puts though who have retirement funds or who invest at risk and it is less transparent. Which sets us up for greater risk and volatility. The billionaires would be okay, as usual, during any financial crisis but the majority of the population would not. I'm asking you to please do what is in the best interest for the general public. Thank you.

Susan Spencer None — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Spencer Since the financial world operates in a global system, not just within the US borders, more reporting not less, makes much more sense. Making quarterly reports optional also seems to validate the sentiment the wealthy have no limits on them but the peasants can pound sand. We have a president making “deals” justified as serving national security or otherwise serving the United States when they come uncomfortably close to quid pro quo that end up, surprise!, his sons just got a big contract or Trump bought shares of a company after it is awarded a government contract. Keep quarterly reporting.

Sylvia Rocek — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sylvia Rocek Are you insane??? Quarterly reporting is one of the VERY few thing that keeps giant corporations even the tiniest bit honest and now you want to give them more time to hide their crummy business practices??? I absolutely oppose this idiotic change.

Tamara Johnson Lee Retired Registered Nurse — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tamara Johnson Lee Small investors have more potential and proportional loss without quarterly reports. Continue with quarterly reporting to prevent hiding problems from investors. They want your money, but not keep you informed of their progress or problems that will ultimately affect investors. As a retired person I do not have endless money to allow it to be misused. Tamara Johnson Lee, Retired Registered Nurse.

Tara Brown — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tara Brown Subject: Public Comment in Strong Opposition to Proposed Rule: Semiannual Reporting (File No. S7-2026-15 / Release No. 33-11414; 34-105368) To: Ms. Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary Securities and Exchange Commission 100 F Street NE Washington, DC 20549-1090 Dear Secretary Countryman and Commissioners, I am writing as an individual retail investor to express my strong, unequivocal opposition to the Commission’s proposed rule, Semiannual Reporting (File No. S7-2026-15). While the Commission frames this proposal as an effort to "reduce disclosure burdens" and "modernize rules" for public companies, the reality is that it actively harms individual investors by rolling back the clock on transparency, compounding market risk, and leaving the average American flying blind for half the year. As an individual investor, the stakes could not be higher. Main Street Americans can no longer count on structural guarantees like fully funded Social Security to carry them through retirement. The responsibility to fund our own futures has been entirely shifted onto our shoulders through hard work, sacrifice, and diligent personal investing. We have watched corporate leadership over decades produce shoddy, misleading, and fraudulent financial reporting, resulting in massive bailouts that were paid for at the expense of the American taxpayer. At a time when inflation and the everyday cost of living have skyrocketed, forcing individual investors to take on more uncompensated risk to protect their savings is completely unacceptable. The Commission must remember its historical lessons. Moving to a semiannual interim framework ignores the exact reasons the United States abandoned a semi-annual regime in the first place. Between 1955 and 1970, when the SEC experimented with semiannual interim reporting on the old Form 9-K, the market suffered from severe information asymmetry, long stretches of corporate opacity, and a massive vulnerability to delayed realizations of material financial declines. It was the absolute inadequacy of a six-month reporting gap—and the resulting harm to the public—that compelled the SEC in 1970 to establish the mandatory quarterly Form 10-Q framework we rely on today. Reverting to a version of this failed 1955 standard represents an anti-progressive step backward for consumer protection. Furthermore, I strongly reject the rationale of this proposal for the following reasons: A Dangerous Inequity for the Little Guy: Large institutional funds and corporate insiders do not rely solely on public filings. They possess expert networks, alternative data streams, proprietary consumer panel tracking, and direct C-suite access to gauge a company's financial trajectory. The Form 10-Q quarterly report is the single most important regulatory equalizer that ensures a retail investor has access to verified, identical information before it becomes stale. A Breeding Ground for Insider Trading and Delayed Bad News: Six months is an eternity in the modern economy. Under a semiannual cadence, a company can sit on failing product lines, collapsing margins, or legal liabilities for half a year before being legally forced to reveal them to the public. This extensive window grants corporate insiders a dangerous time horizon to quietly adjust or liquidate their own exposure while ordinary retirement portfolios and automated index funds continue to buy compromised equities blind. The Myth of Meaningful Savings: The SEC's own projections show that the compliance cost savings per issuer are minuscule relative to corporate revenues. Public companies will still maintain internal monthly accounting, review data quarterly, and brief their boards. This rule does not eliminate operational work; it merely eliminates accountability to the public. Saving a corporate entity nominal legal and accounting administrative expenses while shifting billions of dollars in structural risk onto individual Americans' retirement portfolios is a terrible and unjust trade. Failure of the Global Example: The Commission's proposal repeatedly cites international standards as justification. Yet, real-world data shows these experiments fail the markets they are introduced to. When the United Kingdom relaxed reporting cadences, it severely damaged analyst coverage and liquidity for mid-cap stocks. Singapore implemented a semi-annual shift in 2020 and has faced intense criticism over subsequent drops in trading volumes and a degradation of general corporate disclosure quality. The mandate of the Securities and Exchange Commission is to protect investors, maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets, and facilitate capital formation. This proposal blatantly prioritizes the convenience of corporate executives over the safety of the average American investor. We have lived through enough corporate shortcuts and taxpayer-funded bailouts. Do not strip away our visibility. I urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the mandatory, uncompromised quarterly reporting framework. Sincerely, Tara Brown

---

Terri Cheney Retired-43yr. Investment professional — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Terri Cheney The need for transparency has never been more important for disclosure of the health of a company.

Thea Cardamone — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Thea Cardamone Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep the reporting frequency as is. We investors need to have accurate oversight by honest regulatory authorities.

Theresa Boehm Citizen — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Theresa Boehm The current administration promised transparency--great transparency. I also understand that transparency can be perceived in two ways: one is that you are able to see everything or more of everything that is going on, nothing is hidden. The other is the medium itself - like the glass in a window or air - you can't see it. This ruling seems to be promising the former, but would result in the latter. With less frequent reporting, workings of corporations would not be as visible - and result in the erosion of trust an investor could have in those corporations the investor is entrusting their money in. Additionally, less frequent reporting could invited insider trading, eroding trust further. With the rise of AI, corporations should be able to generate these reports more easily, accurately and with less resources than ever before. There is no need to diminish the transparency - and I request that the reporting frequency not be reduced to to semi-annually.

Theresa Dudding Retired CPA — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Theresa Dudding As a CPA working in private and public companies for more than thirty years, I urge you to keep the quarterly reporting 10-Q. Public companies already have processes in place to complete the reporting, and with AI relieving some of the repetitive steps, it should become less burdensome for them. Executives should be held accountable for their company's reporting evidenced by quarterly signatures. Investors should be able to review results at least quarterly. Semi-annual reporting would reduce that visibility. Please don't remove any reporting and controls that have been put in place over the past few decades. They are as important now as they were when they were enacted.

Thomas Deinet, Executive Director, Standards Board for Alternative Investments (SBAI) — Jun 30, 2026 Standards Board for Alternative Investments Limited
7 Henrietta Street
London
WC2E 8PS
United Kingdom
www.sbai.org
Tel: +44 20 3405 9042
30 June 2026
Vanessa A. Countryman
Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission
Submitted by Email:
Re: Proposed Rule on Semi-annual Reporting (S7-2026-15)
Dear Ms. Countryman:
At the Standards Board for Alternative Investments (SBAI), we oppose the move to allow companies to file semi-annual reports on new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q.
1
• Maintaining quarterly reporting supports better investment decisions and more efficient capital allocation.
o Quarterly reporting provides investors with timely, standardized, and comparable information, enabling both retail and institutional investors to make better informed investment decisions.
o By improving the quality of information available to the market, quarterly reporting enhances valuation accuracy and promotes the efficient allocation of capital across companies and sectors.
• Promoting Broad and Equal Access to Information.
o Quarterly reporting ensures that material information is disseminated to all investors through a standardized public disclosure framework rather than through private relationships and information networks.
o Timely and consistent public disclosures reduce the advantages associated with corporate access, industry contacts, and other private information channels, allowing both retail and institutional investors to make investment decisions on a more level playing field.

o Quarterly reporting helps prevent the emergence of a two-tier information system. Debt investors, lenders, and other private stakeholders frequently receive quarterly financial information through lending arrangements, covenant reporting requirements, and direct engagement with issuers. Public investors should not be placed at a disadvantage by receiving materially less information than other market participants.
• Disclosure allows for discovery of fraudulent financial activities, and other warning signals in relation to the financial health of corporation.
• Better information encourages the presence of active investors in markets, who respond to new information, which results in better price formation, which benefits all investors, including passive ETF investors and uninformed retail investors:
1 https://www.sec.gov/rules-regulations/2026/05/s7-2026-15
o Less disclosure introduces uncompensated risk: If new information is reflected faster in prices, it reduces the risk of overpaying for an asset, as well as selling too low (for passive investors).
o Current developments in private markets provide a case study for the negative consequences of opacity (including bad allocation decisions).
2
• Investors have the choice of ignoring the quarterly information when making investment decisions, but this would be irresponsible for any fiduciary, removing this information is equally irresponsible.
The SEC has not demonstrated that the Proposal's modest and highly uncertain benefits outweigh its substantial costs. Reducing reporting frequency would diminish transparency, weaken market discipline, impair price discovery, and increase information asymmetries throughout the market. If the Commission wishes to encourage public-company formation or reduce the costs associated with being a public company, it has far less costly and less harmful alternatives available. The Commission should pursue those targeted reforms rather than weaken a disclosure framework that has long served investors and public markets well.
Timely and accurate quarterly disclosure is a core obligation of public companies in exchange for privileged access to public capital markets. The raising of capital in private markets can sometimes be more inefficient and costly. Therefore, providing investors with regular and reliable information is a valid and necessary trade-off.
Case Studies for comparison:3
The European Union eliminated mandatory quarterly financial reporting in 2013 by amending the Transparency Directive (also attempting to reduce the reporting burdens and discourage short term market pressures). Also, beginning 2007, UK financial companies were required to issues quarterly rather than semi-annual financial reports. The experience of these reforms has generated a substantial body of academic research that has found that reducing reporting frequency…
• weakens the information environment by reducing analyst coverage,
• impairs market quality by increasing bid-ask spreads and other trading costs, and
• raises companies' cost of capital.

The SBAI is an active alliance of managers and investors dedicated to advancing responsible practices, partnership, and knowledge in the alternatives industry. At our core is a community that is committed to knowledge sharing, informed dialogue, and innovation. We set clear standards and actively promote responsible practice to normalise quality and fairness. Together, our community of allocators and managers create real world solutions – in short, we solve for better.
Disclosure to enable better investment decisions is at the heart of the SBAI's Alternative Investment Standards4, which are supported globally by over 150 alternative investment managers representing more than US$2 trillion in alternative assets under management, and by over 100 institutional investors, overseeing more than US$9 trillion in assets. The SBAI is an Affiliate Member of the International Organization of Securities Commissions (IOSCO), and we support global efforts to facilitate fair and efficient markets, reduce systemic risk and enable investors to make well-informed investment decisions.
Yours sincerely,
Thomas Deinet
Executive Director
Standards Board for Alternative Investments (SBAI)
2 https://www.cfainstitute.org/insights/articles/private-equity-markets-transparency-development
3 Sources: CFA Institute: Impact of Reporting Frequency on UK Public Companies, Other
4 The Alternative Investment Standards ("Standards") address key areas of alternative investment practice including disclosure, valuation, risk management, fund governance, and shareholder conduct. Access here: https://www.sbai.org/standards.html

---

Thomas Edwards — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Edwards I strenuously oppose S7-2026-15 as another blatant blow against America Democracy by MAGA fascism in support of their billionaire enablers.

Thomas F LeMay Investor — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas F LeMay At the speed of today's information flow reporting two times a year is insufficient for making informed decisions. Owners and investors need the current information four times per year.

Thomas Jones — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Thomas Jones Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly! What are you trying to hide or cover up?

Thomas Jones — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Thomas Jones Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly! What are you trying to hide or cover up?

Timothy Green Software Project Manager — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Timothy Green I am against the proposed rule. It decreases transparency and increases the ability for insiders to take advantage of the public. I don't believe the resources it takes to report quarterly are burdensome.

Todd Addison The Motley Fool Community — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Todd Addison The frequent updates are critical for good investors to understand the direction and challenges the companies they invest in are critical.

Todd Owen — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Todd Owen There is no reason to change what has worked so successfully for many years. The small investor needs to be protected.

Tom bermingham — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tom bermingham Please keep reporting quarterly

---

Tom Dintaman — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Tom Dintaman Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Why limit information to the public on public companies? Make it monthly or keep it quarterly.

Tom Dintaman
tdintaman@gmail.com

Tom Schuster Phd Economics — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tom Schuster Reducing the frequency of reporting will impair economic and financial decision making and increase the incidence of insider trading

---

Tom Skinfill Retired International Designer — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tom Skinfill This is a horrendously bad idea . And ask yourselves . Who does this help the most? Most companies aren’t clamoring for this. And I guess transparency isn’t something you guys think is worthwhile ? It makes the small Investor even more of a sacrificial lamb with big investors and insiders reap the rewards. And why not study what happened we had this long ago. The market lost huge value and small investors bore the brunt . a big no on this cockamamie idea .

Tracy Kaeslin — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tracy Kaeslin I urge the SEC to continue to require quarterly reporting and to kill the proposed rule change of two times a year reporting. I imagine it can be expensive, but I also think that is part of doing business as a public company. Quarterly reporting is vital to transparency and CEO accountability. Additionally, quarterly reporting is important to me and helps me with the conversations I have with my financial advisor. Don't leave us in the dark and please continue to require quarterly reporting. Transparency and accountability depend on it.

Trevor Martin, Martin Stone Quarries, Inc. — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Trevor Martin Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. In a world where knowledge is power and knowledge is readily available to anyone with internet access, why would you want to limit it? Without quarterly reports, I would have to try and fill in the blanks from unreliable sources. Then when we would get the actual reports the swings could be magnified due to pent up inaccurate assumptions. I feel quarterly reports provide adequate accountability between companies and their shareholders. Allowing for less reporting seems to be taking a giant leap backwards for the individual investor. I fear this would encourage large investment firms to develop contacts at companies to try and gain access to insider information.... .this just seems like a bad road to go down and I hope to see quarterly reporting continuing.

Trish Hilton — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Trish Hilton Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly !

Trisha Mcguire — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Trisha Mcguire Trisha McGuire, retired. I am on Social Security and have a 401k therefore I need to know where I stand every 3 months.*

---

tyshammie cooper — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: tyshammie cooper Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly not supporting the rich!

US Tax payer! US Tax payer! — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: US Tax payer! Should be every three months! Less time for errors!

---

vivek sharma — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: vivek sharma Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Not a good idea to end quarter earnings

Wendi Evans — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Wendi Evans Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 Keep it quarterly!

Sent from my iPhone

Wesley Younger — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wesley Younger My answer is no. This creates too many opportunities for malfeasance. Keep the sun shining on the books to limit information asymmetry between insiders and outsiders.

William Bradshaw — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Bradshaw I am a retired self employed gardener who built a retirement account with hard work and discipline in contributions to my ROTH and SEP IRA's. Quarterly reporting leaves little room for surprises and demands transparency, anything less could jeopardize what took a lifetime of hard work to build. At 70 years old, I am in the same boat as many other small investors who would like to see the SEC stay the course and retain quarterly reporting.

---

william holt — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: william holt Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 We have enough problems already. Keep it quarterly

Sent from my iPhone

Y Webber Teacher — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Y Webber Please protect Americans who have worked their entire lives and saved. We are vulnerable and need to protect our savings. Help us do that by keeping companies accountable! Thank you! Y Webber Retired Teacher

---

Zachary Nurse — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Zachary Zachary - Nurse - Public companies want public money, but now some want less public accountability. Six months is too long for regular investors to wait for basic financial information while insiders and large institutions remain far closer to the action. The problem with markets is not too much transparency — it is unequal access to information. Keep quarterly reporting.

Zena Verros — Jun 30, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Zena Verros Affiliation: Jun. 30, 2026 June 29, 2026

SEC,
Keep Quarterly Reporting!!!
Zena Verros
Steven Verros

Get BlueMail for Mobile

A. Broccolino — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A. Broccolino Dear Secretary, I am writing to urge the committee to withdraw this proposal and continue requiring quarterly reporting. I express my strong opposition to the Securities and Exchange Commission's proposed rule that would allow public companies to opt out of quarterly reporting (Form 10-Q) in favor of semiannual reporting on the proposed Form 10-S. While the Commission frames this as a measure to reduce regulatory burdens and curb corporate "short-termism," the actual consequence will be a severe erosion of market transparency that disproportionately harms retail investors while providing an unfair advantage to institutional "big fish." The proposed rule undermines the core mission of the SEC—to protect investors, We the People, and to maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets. Reducing corporate compliance costs should never come at the expense of market integrity and investor protection. It is unethical, unconstitutional and the opposite of what the SEC stands for. It reeks of Corruption! And those of you who allow this will be rightfully viewed as corrupt and unpatriotic. If adopted, this rule will effectively re-privatize public market information, pricing out the everyday investor and turning back the clock on decades of transparency reforms. I strongly urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain mandatory quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q. The health of our public markets depends on equal, timely access to information for all participants, not just the wealthiest institutions. Sincerely, -- Anita B.

A. Ivetti retired CPA — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A. Ivetti Maybe the SEC can minimize the quarterly reporting requirements but keep some quarterly reporting requirements to the SEC so we can continue to have trust in these companies we invest in. We're losing our trust in institutions, don't add corporations to the growing list.

Aaron Auten — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aaron Auten Please keep the quarterly reporting requirements. A lot can change in just a month but six months! Investors deserve to have up to date information when our retirement investments are at stake. Keeping the shorter term of reporting makes fraud and errors less likely and easier to spot. There is NO benefit to investors in this. Companies still have to do their books and reports and update their boards. In my opinion, the only people benefiting from this are the companies. We investors will bear the cost of worse/less information - the people whose 401(k), IRA, retirement funds, etc hold that stock. Please safeguard the information transparency and keep the quarterly report requirements.

Albert Martin — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Albert Martin Do I read quarterly reports? No- not often. Do I read annual reports? Not often. Do I read reports generated by various stock advisors who DO read these report? YES. Certanly. And this is not limited to just The Motley Fool. These reports help AAII (American Association of Individual Investors) compile their verious reports on various stocks and various industries. Quarterly reports, as reported to myself, and probably many other individual investors, are essential for me to understand the company that I want to invest in. Please do NOT discontinue quarterly report filing.

Alex Heston N/A — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alex Heston I have worked for successful companies that expected weekly responses to differences between plan and actual performance. The rationale is that the business management will know before the end of the month what steps are needed to try to get back on track before month's end. Six months is too long for a problems to be addressed or hidden from employees, Investors often rebalance quarterly and should have accessibility to review the financial situation of the companies in which they invest.

Alex Thacker — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alex Thacker Less regulation hurts retail investors. Quarterly reporting is a minimum. Semi annual is only going to hurt us.

Alicia Tonnage — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alicia tonnage If the Commission determines that some reporting relief is appropriate, it should be limited to smaller reporting companies or emerging growth companies. Large public companies should continue to provide mandatory quarterly reports because they are widely held and relied upon by millions of retail investors.

Allison Warren- Bugger Registered Nurse — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Allison Warren- Bugger In an increasing digital world where markets are acting at lightening speeds, why on Earth would I allow LESS reporting on what is happening with the money I have invested? If anything I think reporting should increase to monthly in a digital format and continue with quarterly paper reports for those who have less or no access to digital formats.

Amanda Almon, Professor of Biomedical Visualization, Rowan University — Jun 29, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amanda Almon Re: File No. S7-2026-15 – Semiannual Reporting I respectfully urge the Commission to retain mandatory quarterly reporting for U.S. public companies. Quarterly reporting provides investors—particularly individual retail investors—with timely, standardized, and reliable information needed to make informed investment decisions. More frequent reporting promotes market transparency, improves price discovery, enhances corporate accountability, and helps identify financial deterioration before it becomes more severe. While reducing compliance costs is a worthwhile objective, the benefits of quarterly reporting to investor confidence and fair, efficient markets outweigh those costs. Less frequent mandatory reporting could increase information asymmetry between institutional and retail investors, reduce transparency, and delay the public disclosure of material trends affecting shareholders. I encourage the Commission to preserve the current quarterly reporting framework while continuing to explore targeted ways to reduce unnecessary compliance burdens without sacrificing transparency. Thank you for considering my comments.

Amy — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amy This isn't a good decision for the mass population. So NO, this isn't a good thing.

Amy McManus — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amy McManus keep us QUARTERLY .DON'T o fix what's Not Broken

---

Andrew woods — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew woods To whom it may concern, I dont believe that this change benefits retail/a companies investors. This creates less transparency and puts retail investors further in the dark compared to institutions, people affiliated with companys. Kind regards, Andrew woods

---

Anonymous — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous How does semiannual reporting benefit investors? It doesn't, stick to quarterly reports. The SEC is a joke and is only trying to make it harder for investors to hold companies accountable. Semiannual reports decreases transparency.

---

anonymous — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: anonymous Against this reduced number of reporting periods! Markets are to be transparent and fair, not hidden and at the whims of when a company chooses to disclose. They are using public funds, hence, public notifications need to be regularly scheduled and timely, period. Changing the rules only makes it easier for corruption and hidden activities. Stop this rule from being implemented.

Anonymous — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Man, you guys really don't want free markets to be a thing, huh? First the CAT, now this bi-annual stupidity? Why not go the other direction and make it a monthly report instead? Just curious. Why is it that the SEC keeps proposing less and less transparency as time goes on? Could it possibly be that the whole government and these mega-corps are involved in some shady things happening and they don't want to report on it? I'm sure that's not the case at all wink wink The same companies that have been involved in shady things for the past few decades, paying minuscule fines for their exploitation of the markets, now want to have even less transparency. Who could've guessed this coming?!?! I really hope you guys understand what's going on, which I'm sure at this point that you don't. I'm still trying to be the good cop with submitting comments that go nowhere lmao.

Anonymous — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I’m an individual investor, not a gambler or a trader. Meaning I make my purchase, hold and sell decisions with an eye toward the long term. I don’t rely on short attention span “news.” To make informed decisions, I need the information within the public reports which companies are required to file. I do not support allowing the companies I am invested in—or may invest in—to voluntarily reduce their reporting from four to two. My investments are a small ownership stake in these companies. It’s completely reasonable for me to expect to be kept up to date four times per year. For the public companies, these reporting costs are a very small line item on their budgets as part of the cost of doing business. If the reporting requirements are reduced, reactions to daily “news” will take the place of fact and this will add to the perception and practice that markets are where people place “bets” on stocks. Respect investors and our reasonable demand for transparency.

Anonymous None — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous It isn't broken, so don't break it. Keep reporting quarterly. Do not regress back to semi annual reporting. Who benefits from that delayed reporting? Not the average investor. Insiders with information not accessible to average investors, will have an unfair and damaging advantage. Please. Keep companies reporting QUARTERLY! It is vital to the health of our economy. Reporting semi annually has been PROVEN not to work.

Anonymous Software Engineer — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Please don't end CAT. It is an essential tool in the hunt for crooked market participants. I personally will no longer invest in American stock markets if CAT is permanently cancelled, or if CAT data is kept hidden from the public. It is our market. We deserve to know the truth. And you deserve to own this data. You arguably have a legal obligation to. So don't listen to Kenny or Vlad or whoever else is crying out that CAT is bad. It's only bad for the rotten apples. The obscene claims that these billionaires and their companies would be somehow hurt from publicizing this data is absolutely outrageous. Meanwhile, the average worker has ro document every single minute they spend at work. But these billionaires can't even pull their own data and submit it? Nah. That ain't right. I sincerely hope you will consider keeping CAT in effect, permanently, with full public access to all the data.

Ansen Armitage Westbrook — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ansen Armitage Westbrook We need a market that is transparent - this does not help transparency. Reporting semi annual does not help investors - as a retail investor, we wish to keep the reporting quarterly. Information assists us with making decisions when it comes to our money. Knowing less information about where we are putting our money does not help us at all. We really just want a fair market, that's it. Having to report semi annually will increase fraud & market manipulation by hedge funds, & institutions.

Arnold F Williams Retired — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Arnold F Williams There are so many public companies that the SEC website is a necessity. But if companies managed to keep up quarterly reporting up to the present, why should it be dropped when there are so many special purpose tools, some AI, making it easier to comply?

Austin Haseleu — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Austin Haseleu I oppose this proposed rule change because it is both unnecessary in the aim of it's proponents to allow companies to avoid short-termism. Semi-annual do not give companies large time spans for multi-year strategic plans by there nature. They only obscure what the current fundamentals and value of a company is for a longer period of time. This removes investors ability to properly assess companies and make strategic investments upon recent data. The less information is available to investors the greater the risk of instability in the market due to improperly allocated assets, incorrectly valued companies, and greater risk of mismanaged companies with longer time horizons to allow for fraud.

Barbara Griffin — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Griffin It is imperative to continue with the practice of CEO signing the quarterly reporting. This practice will maintain some accountability. I depend on my investments during my retirement and this accountability is needed. Barbara Griffin Retired Teacher

---

Barrett Braun None — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barrett Braun Keep the quarterly reporting rule. I rely heavily on this information to invest.

Belissa Del Valle None — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Belissa Del Valle I respectfully disagree with the proposed optional semiannual reporting framework under File No. S7-2026-15. Most public companies will continue to monitor financial performance internally on a quarterly—or even monthly—basis to support management decisions, budgeting, forecasting, and continuous improvement. If companies already produce and rely on quarterly financial information for operating the business, it is unclear what meaningful benefit is achieved by reducing external reporting to only twice a year. Rather than reducing burdens in a meaningful way, semiannual reporting could simply result in less timely information being available to investors while companies continue maintaining quarterly reporting processes internally. If quarterly reporting remains the practical standard for managing a business, investors should continue to receive that information on the same cadence to promote transparency, informed decision-making, and confidence in the public markets. This version focuses on the practical inconsistency in the proposal rather than making an emotional argument, which tends to be more persuasive in SEC rulemaking comments. The SEC's proposal specifically argues that semiannual reporting would reduce compliance burdens, so directly questioning whether those burdens are truly reduced if companies continue preparing quarterly internal financials addresses a central premise of the proposal.

Bill Hsrmon Retired attorney for public reporting companies — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Hsrmon I do not believe the changes proposed in S7-2026-15 are in the best interests of investors, reporting companies or the general public. I am a retired attorney with 30 years of practice a significant portion of which involved advising SEC reporting companies about their disclosure obligations. I believe, based on this experience, that continuing quarterly reporting is highly beneficial not only to the public but to the reporting companies themselves. Preparing the interim Form 10-Q provides a disciplined approach by company management to give careful review to the last quarter's financial and operating results. This careful review often uncovers important issues that need attention that might go un-noticed if review is delayed for another three months. The benefits proposed by the SEC have very little merit. Quarterly reporting has been a major factor in the growth of public confidence in the information provided by public companies. There is no need to "fix" something that is not broken. Bill Harmon Holly Springs, NC 27540

Bryce Lord — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bryce Lord Why reduce documentation when owning a business with investors given the ease of reporting using modern methods?

C Citizen — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C I am against the change because it reduces transparency. Keep the rule at quarterly.

Carl Scott Investor — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carl Scott The suggested reporting change from quarterly to semi-annual reporting for SEC registered companies is a pure step backwards. How does this improve the SEC's mandate of oversight and policing? Why isn't the SEC demanding MONTHLY financial reports? Possibly, it is simply an attempt to hide the oncoming depression, and the existing recession that our economy has been in since 2020, the COVID debacle. Furthermore, it is also an attempt to hide the insurmountable debt crisis that exists in all areas of our U.S and the world economies, including the zombie companies, the commercial real estate debt, the private credit, banking, and equity debts, the extension of bankrupt loans, payment-in-kind, auto repos., housing foreclosures; all are ballooning. Every company indeed does already generate internal monthly, if not weekly, financial reports; so that monthly reports are of no cost burden. Considering all the high-tech, automated, computerized, and A.I. financial and operations reporting in every company by their managements, there is absolutely no reason why every company should not and cannot provide MONTHLY reports to the public and the SEC. The SEC exists to protect the public and investors; yet it seems to be running backwards, away from its responsibilities. Again, why isn't the SEC demanding MONTHLY financial reports?

Carmen Bray — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carmen Bray Please keep reporting quarterly.

Casey Geist — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Casey Geist It should actually be monthly. A legitimate organization maintains integrity, accountability and transparency. Do you really want to enable more evil and corruption? Please do NOT continue to forsake and degrade this country by allowing fraudsters more leeway or by any other rollback or allowance.

Cathy Furtick Retiree, former IT mgr, retired math teacher, mother of 3, grandmother of 3 — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cathy Furtick This, quarterly statements, is a helpful and reasonable check (quarterly) to try to keep our well earned retirement funds SAFE in the hands of reliable trustworthy individuals who could possibly "play" behind a curtain. KEEP THE CURTAIN OPEN. We cannot afford FRAUD!!!

Chris Martis — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Martis Subject:Response to Proposed Rule: Amendments to Interim Reporting Requirements. File No. S7-2026-15 — Support for Optional Semiannual Reporting (Form 10-S) Dear Secretary, I am writing to express my strong support for the Commission’s proposal to allow public companies the option to transition from quarterly reporting (Form 10-Q) to a semiannual reporting framework via the new Form 10-S. This amendment represents a much-needed modernization of the U.S. capital market, one that balances investor protection with structural efficiency. While critics may reflexively view this proposal as a reduction in transparency, it is instead a pragmatic shift that enhances the quality of corporate governance and market health. Below are the primary reasons why this proposal is a significant step forward. 1. Fostering a True Long-Term Investment View The current 90-day reporting cycle forces an artificial, short-term focus on corporate America. Management teams routinely sacrifice long-term research and development (R&D), capital investments, and strategic planning just to meet or beat arbitrary quarterly consensus estimates. Shifting the mandatory baseline to six months allows executive teams the operational breathing room to execute complex strategies without the distraction of 90-day market noise. It realigns corporate reporting with realistic business and product development cycles, which naturally span years, not quarters. 2. Meaningful Cost and Time Reductions Preparing, auditing, and legally vetting a Form 10-Q three times a year is an incredibly resource-intensive burden. The SEC’s own economic analysis indicates substantial cost savings per year for companies that transition. For Small and Mid-Cap Issuers:These compliance costs are disproportionately heavy relative to revenue. Saving hundreds of thousands of dollars in accounting and legal overhead allows these companies to redirect vital capital toward innovation, job creation, and growth initiatives. For Management: The preparation of a Form 10-Q requires weeks of internal distraction. Reducing this frequency allows leadership to focus on running the day-to-day business.

3. Materiality Guardrails: Key Events Are Always Reported A common misconception is that semiannual reporting creates a six-month "dark period" for investors. This is fundamentally untrue. The U.S. disclosure ecosystem already has robust mechanisms to ensure investors receive timely, price-sensitive information: Form 8-K Requirements: Any material corporate event such as executive changes, major mergers, bankruptcies, or material financial obligation must still be disclosed to the public within four business days. Voluntary Updates: As seen in European markets (which successfully moved to a semiannual baseline), companies frequently choose to issue voluntary quarterly trading updates or earnings releases via Form 8-K to satisfy market demand, without the rigid overhead of a full 10-Q filing. Why This is a Positive Progress, Not a Step Backward Giving companies the flexibility to choose their reporting cadence does not inherently decrease transparency, it optimizes it. Data from global markets shows no statistical valuation penalty for companies that report semiannually. Rather than a "one-size-fits-all" mandate, this rule creates a competitive mechanism. Highly volatile or capital-intensive companies can choose to stick with quarterly filings to maintain investor confidence, while mature or R&D-heavy companies can protect their long-term strategies by opting for semiannual filings. Conclusion By adopting this proposal, the SEC will lower the barriers to being a public company, encourage more private companies to enter the public markets (promoting capital formation), and shift the American market mindset back toward sustainable, long-term wealth creation. I strongly urge the Commission to finalize and adopt this rule. Sincerely, Chris Martis

---

Chris Meyer — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Meyer Please keep the current practice of quarterly reports, not semi-annual.

Chris Woodward — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Woodward It is likely that reducing the frequency of public reporting would not coincide with reduction of reporting to private investors. This action would blind the public investors for the benefit of private investors. We are already in a system where trust is very low. Updating policies that increases that mistrust is inadvisable.

Christooher Mahanes — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christooher Mahanes Please retain quarterly reporting. It maintains some integrity to the process that otherwise would allow to much subjectivity and potential fraud/abuse.

Colleen Frost Retired — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Colleen Frost STOP THE INSANITY. The rich keep getting richer and the middle class is disappearing! Now, if this is passed it will become even worse.

Connie Montoya Na — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Connie Montoya I want the quarterly report to stay the same. Changes to it would leave us in the dark and we won't be able to react in time to moves that are made. Please don't change it !

Craig Holt Individual Investor — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Holt I am a retired 73 yr old senior, who depends on my investments to make ends meet. I pay particular attention to my stock portfolio, almost daily, to ensure they are performing well. I read the fine print to stay informed about them. Cutting back the reporting requirements to only two times per year greatly diminishes my chances of remaining informed about their success/troubles/profits/management style, etc. and make the necessary adjustments so they remain profitable. Please do not reduce this important, yet timely information that we, as investors, rely on. Craig Holt

---

Cynthia Wiley — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Wiley Individual investors need transparency. Continue with the quarterly.

D . G . Vann — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D . G . Vann Reducing timely transparency helps no one, unless there is something that a company doesn’t want revealed. Don’t make these proposed changes.

Dalia Thornton, Director, Department of Research and Collective Bargaining Services, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) — Jun 29, 2026
June 29, 2026
Ms. Vanessa Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street NE Washington, DC 20549
Submitted via SEC Comment Portal.
Re: Proposed Rule on Semiannual Reporting (File No: S7-2026-15)
Dear Ms. Countryman:
On behalf of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME), I am writing to provide comments on the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission’s (the SEC or Commission) proposed rulemaking entitled Proposed Rule on Semiannual Reporting (File No: S7-2026-15) (the Proposed Rule) to allow companies to file semiannual reports on the new Form 10S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q.
AFSCME's 1.4 million members provide the vital services that make America happen. With members in communities across the nation, serving in hundreds of different occupations — from nurses to corrections officers, child care providers to sanitation workers — AFSCME advocates for fairness in the workplace, excellence in public services and freedom and opportunity for all working families. AFSCME members participate in over 150 public pension systems, in private sector single-employer and multiemployer pension plans and public- and private-sector defined contribution retirement plans.
AFSCME appreciates the opportunity to submit comments. We urge the Commission to withdraw the Proposed Rule and keep current quarterly reporting disclosure as is, rather than making quarterly disclosure optional. Public companies have been disclosing quarterly reports on Form 10-Q since the passage of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and have been required to do so since 1970. The efficient and orderly operation of our markets depends on investors being able to make informed decisions. Quarterly reporting of timely, comparable and decision-useful financial disclosure is essential to the efficient functioning of our capital markets. Therefore, we believe the Proposed Rule is a solution in search of a problem and should be withdrawn.

What Gets Measured Gets Managed

Transparency is the foundation of our capital markets. Investors rely on quarterly reports to make sound investment, voting and engagement decisions, including by monitoring how companies are performing and implementing their strategies. Mandatory quarterly disclosure ensures material financial information reaches all investors at the same time. Investors rely on quarterly data for risk monitoring, whereas semiannual reporting would allow a company to delay information reaching the company's owners — the shareholders who are providing the capital. Quarterly reporting is an important element of transparency for investors, as well as a positive discipline for management. We agree with a recent editorial by Charles Elson, who notes that quarterly reporting aligns with basic corporate financial accounting, where boards measure management performance by meeting quarterly and reviewing financials that are quarterly based.1 Quarterly reporting is essential for providing investors with prompt and reliable information on how companies are actually performing and for providing management with discipline to provide regular reporting for measuring.

Arguments Have Not Changed Since the SEC's 2018–2019 Consultation

Arguments supporting the Proposed Rule — such as reducing burdens on issuers or promoting capital formation and long-termism — are largely unchanged from those previously made during the SEC's 2018–2019 Request for Comments on Earnings Releases and Quarterly Reports (File No: S7-2026-15). At that time, the CFA Institute found there was almost no support for changing quarterly reporting among investment professionals around the globe, who rely on financial reporting to manage assets.2 Fast forward to the Proposed Rule, and the views of investors have not changed: CFA's latest survey confirms investors globally, and not just in the U.S., continue to view quarterly reporting as an essential feature of transparent, efficient and trustworthy capital markets.3

From the previous consultation, we agree with the Council of Institutional Investors comment that the requirement to report historical earnings on a quarterly basis is a key element of the timely and accurate information flow that underpins the quality and efficiency of our capital markets.4 We also support the position of the AFL-CIO that rather than eliminating quarterly reporting requirements, the Commission should instead be focusing on ways to enhance the quality of information provided by public companies to investors, including environmental, social and governance (ESG), human capital management and political spending disclosures.5

The Need to Expand Private Market Disclosure

We also believe the SEC should focus on expanding disclosure rules related to private equity. A big reason for the decline in IPOs and public companies is the deregulation and disclosure exemptions for private financing, like private equity and venture capital, rather than public company disclosure requirements like quarterly reporting. AFSCME has regularly urged the SEC to strengthen oversight and enforcement of rules related to private equity,6 especially in the wake of the 2020 SEC

1 Charles Elson, "The Quarterly Disclosure Conundrum," Directors & Boards, June 3, 2026, available at:

https://www.directorsandboards.com/articles/governance/the-quarterly-disclosure-conundrum/.
2 Monica Singh, “Quarterly Reporting Works Very Well, Thank You,” CFA Institute, July 22, 2019, available at:
https://blogs.cfainstitute.org/marketintegrity/2019/07/22/quarterly-reporting-works-very-well-thank-you/.
3 “CFA Institute Survey Finds Investors Strongly Support Quarterly Reporting, Oppose Reducing Disclosure Requirements,” CFA Institute, June 10, 2026, available at: https://www.cfainstitute.org/about/press-room/2026/quarterly-reporting-survey-2026.
4 Council of Institutional Investors Comment Letter (March 21, 2019), available at:
https://www.sec.gov/comments/s7-26-18/s72618-5189776-183593.pdf.
5 AFL-CIO Comment Letter (March 21, 2019), available at: https://www.sec.gov/comments/s7-26-18/s72618-5177718-183526.pdf.
6 Americans for Financial Reform Education Fund, AFL-CIO, AFSCME, et al, Letter to Chairman Gary Gensler, (July 6, 2021), available at: https://ourfinancialsecurity.org/wp-content/uploads/2021/07/Letter-to-SEC-re_-Private-Equity-7.6.21.pdf.

Risk Alert,7 which highlighted the SEC’s findings of serious problems with private equity funds, including fund managers’ failure to make full and fair disclosure of conflicts of interest, charging improper fees and failure to implement policies to prevent staff from trading on material nonpublic information. We have endorsed strong standards of care required by the Investment Advisors Act; supported clear and consistent fee and expense reporting and permitting limited partners access to compliance deficiencies8; called for providing investors with necessary details on the fees, expenses, returns and compliance records of private funds9; and urged finalizing the private funds disclosure rule.10
The need for increased private markets disclosure has become only more urgent given the U.S. Department of Labor’s proposed rule to encourage private equity access to 401(k) plans with $13.8 trillion11 in assets. Allowing private offerings to retail investors, including through self-directed retirement plans, while failing to pair this access with required public disclosures, will leave plan fiduciaries and vulnerable investors without the disclosures necessary to distinguish between good and bad investments.
We appreciate the opportunity to share our views on the importance of keeping quarterly reporting rules. We urge the Commission to protect investors’ access to information and keep current quarterly reporting disclosure requirements so as to meet the evolving needs of the investing community. The efficient and orderly operation of our markets depends on investors being able to make informed decisions, including receiving material information in a uniform and timely manner. If you have any questions, or need additional information, please do not hesitate to contact John Keenan at jkeenan@afscme.org.
Sincerely,
/s/ Dalia R. Thornton
Dalia R. Thornton
Director
Department of Research and Collective Bargaining Services

7 “Observations from Examinations of Investment Advisers Managing Private Funds,” SEC Office of Compliance Inspections and Examinations, June 23, 2020, available at:
https://www.sec.gov/files/Private%20Fund%20Risk%20Alert_0.pdf.
8 AFSCME, AFT, CWA, NEA and SEIU Letter to Chairman Gary Gensler, (December 7, 2021), available at:
https://www.nea.org/sites/default/files/2021-12/Welcome%20Letter%20to%20SEC%20Chair%20-%20Public%20Sector%20Unions.pdf.
9 AFSCME Comment to SEC on Private Fund Advisers; Documentation of Registered Investment Adviser
Compliance Reviews (File No: S7-03-22), (April 25, 2022), available at: https://www.sec.gov/comments/s7-03-22/s70322-20126516-287162.pdf.
10 Americans for Financial Reform Education Fund, AFL-CIO, AFSCME, et al, Letter to Chairman Gary Gensler, (February 21, 2023), available at: https://ourfinancialsecurity.org/2-21-23-systemic-risk-letter-from-29-signers-to-sec-on-finalizing-strong-rules-for-private-fund-advisers/.
11 “Quarterly Retirement Market Data, First Quarter 2026,” Investment Company Institute, June 18, 2026, available at: https://www.ici.org/statistical-report/ret_26_q1.

Dan Mott — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan Mott I am against reducing the quarterly reporting requirements. History has proven that not all institutions are trustworthy. We need to hold individuals not corporations responsible for their actions. Thank you Dan Mott

---

Daniel Heye Investor — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Heye I want to see companies continue to submit quarterly reporting as well as forward guidance. I think it promotes transparency and I believe investors (owners of a publicly traded company) have the right to this information. One of the arguments for this proposal is that it would promote additional investment in companies. My understanding is that countries that have adopted this approach haven't seen significant change to the level of investment.

Daniel None — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Retail here. We know what you’re doing. We’ll have our day and we’re keeping receipts. You think you’re slick and you may have a lot of us convinced but we are the people, you’re just renting them and when your house of cards fall, we’ll be celebrating your fall. MAGAs time is short.

Daniel Pouliot Retiree — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Pouliot Please retain the current quarterly reporting standard. Quarterly reporting provides timely information for investors and traders, with less chance for manipulation and surprise.

Daphne Golliher — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daphne Golliher As an investor, I am against this rule change. Investors should receive as much information as possible. If companies are not required to make quarterly reports, as they have been since the 1970s, there will be reduced timely information for investors. I am for quarterly reports and against this rule change to semi-annual reports.

David Arp — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Arp I believe that companies should be required to submit quarterly reports. In this era of having massive computers that can look at figures and make adjustments instantaneously, there is no reason to go to semi-annual reports where the public has less knowledge. Additionally, some of these companies are the very same ones that build or participate in the use of data centers. So they want data to improve on their positions but want to deny the public a much smaller amount of data on which the public uses to make investments in their individual futures.

David M Trembley — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David M Trembley Make it monthly is what the public wants . Make it so.

David Schleicher — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Schleicher As a long-time investor, I am against any changes in the current corporate public reporting requirements. Reducing the frequency of reporting will hurt small investors such as myself in favor of larger, corporate investors who have more ways to try to learn what is happening with a given company and its fortunes.

Deborah R Prudhomme — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah R Prudhomme Extending the filing deadline by an additional quarter grants companies excess latitude in asset maneuvering and financial engineering, thereby exposing investors to unnecessary risk. Furthermore, timely and audited quarterly financial statements are a critical dependency not only for retail investors, but also for institutional capital managers, including employer pension plans and mutual funds.

Deborah Swauger Retired VP Finance for small furniture company — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Swauger - In today’s electronic, fast paced, information heavy world, companies should be easily able and willing to report earnings AT LEAST quarterly - I would push for MONTHLY reporting for even better transparency, not allowing companies to wait 6 months to report. Allowing 6 months is too much room for hiding issues and not letting investors know until it’s too late. BAD IDEA.

Denise L. — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Denise L. Dear SEC: I strongly urge you to continue with quarterly reporting to hold corporations and their CEOs accountable! We have experienced way too many leaders that have turned to unethical and/or illegal business practices which have ended in disasters in the past. We need to ensure that the quarterly reporting requirements remain in place! The Americans have far too many times suffered by poor judgement from CEOs! Thank you, Denise L.

Diana O. Retired state analyst — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diana O. Please keep quarterly reporting mandatory. Our country has been reporting quarterly for over half a century. I'm a retail investor and I rely on quarterly reports to make decisions about my retirement savings. Allowing a half a year to go by before reporting only gives insiders greater opportunities while leaving the rest of us holding the proverbial empty bag. There is no good reason to change it now.

Diane Oconnor — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diane Oconnor Leave it alone! CEO'S need to be continually reminded how serious their signature means!

Diane Ostdiek — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diane Ostdiek "Comments attached"

---

donn j viviani — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-26-18 From: donn j viviani I am against this change in reporting. As investor with a portfolio that constitutes two thirds of mt net worth, I rely on information from quarterly reports to make investment decisions. Going to semi-annual reporting will increase the opportunity for insiders taking advantage of the average investor. Do not finalize this rule

---

Dorothy Chambless — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dorothy Chambless I'm a retired Montessori Teacher and I'm still learning and educating friends and family about what the American discussion should be to protect our future. We are losing transparency at a rapid pace and this is just another current Government Mafioso stab at our rights and development of what America must be. If the Mafia is not happy with the American way of developing what Humanity is, they should find themselves another place to make their own and stop destroying the progress we have made.

Ed Constantine President, Branchwork, LLC — Jun 29, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ed Constantine I'm a serial entrepreneur, a US Citizen living in Canada, and a committed investor in US equities, limited partnerships, and startups. I manage my own investments, family and entrepreneurial. I'm an MIT grad (SM 90), and feel strongly about prudent analysis in investment decisions. I'm also a Motley Fool subscriber. Hearing about the idea of reducing SEC reporting from quarterly to semiannual startled me. In an age of stronger analytical tools and volatile markets, we most certainly don't need more speculation and less analysis. The semiannual proposal would be counterproductive. We'd become ever more beholden to the news cycle instead of the fact cycle. Please consider our feedback seriously. Semiannual reporting would change the character of public stocks to a much more speculative and news-cycle-driven investment category. Don't do it, please.

Edward T Wendt — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edward T Wendt Please keep the quarterly reporting in effect and prosecute any ceo who has an infraction. The corporations need oversight.

Elizabeth Alexander — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth Alexander As a retired RN, I need transparency and accountability from all the big companies that make our country great. My retirement depends on it. Please keep quarterly reporting required.

Fabian König — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Fabian König The proposal is very bad for the investment transparency. Allowing public companies to withhold critical financial information from its investors decreases the investors ability to make informed choices about their investments. This change would have the sole effect of making companies report bad news even later than they do now. Changing quaterly reports to semi-annualy is the WRONG CHOICE. If anything, a fair market requires more reporting of information, not less. The assumption that a public company, that operates for profit, would make reporting decisions that are focused on the benefit of their investors is misleading.

Fred Oliver Tax payer — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Fred Oliver Accoutability is needed

---

G Ayres — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: G Ayres I am against reducing quarterly reporting to any measure less than quarterly reports. Transparency for equity holders should be preserved and less transparency would not only create FUD but also increase volatility. I am strongly against quarterly reports being taken away.

Gail B. Zilch — Jun 29, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gail B. What a bad idea - fewer updates!?! - so bad news or bad decisions get a longer time to stay unnoticed?? And this is everybody's investments that are affected - a very bad idea!

Garrett Collins — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Garrett Collins I strongly oppose the proposal to let public companies drop quarterly Form 10-Q filings for optional semiannual Form 10-S reports. Under Securities Act Section 2(b) and Exchange Act Section 3(f), the Commission's explicit mandate is to protect investors and ensure market efficiency. This rule compromises that mission by directly reducing corporate transparency. Standardized public reports are an indispensable tool retail investors have to maintain a level playing field. Cutting mandatory reporting down to twice a year will create severe information asymmetry. While institutional managers can easily spend capital on alternative data channels, third-party research, and private collection networks to monitor corporate health during long gaps, everyday retail investors will be left completely blind. This creates an inherently unfair market that damages public trust. Combining two quarters into a single semiannual number also destroys financial granularity and hides business seasonality. The SEC notes that companies might still put out voluntary quarterly earnings releases, but these are a poor substitute. Voluntary updates are unstandardized, lack mandatory Inline XBRL tagging, and are merely furnished rather than filed. They do not require an independent public accountant review, which increases the risk that financial errors or manipulation go undetected. Six-month gaps in mandatory reporting delay investor and auditor oversight, allowing poor management choices or internal control failures to compound. This lack of timely feedback will cause corporate values to drift from reality and result in larger, higher-risk stock price jumps when companies eventually disclose their performance. The SEC must reject this rule and maintain mandatory quarterly reporting to protect the public

---

Gary Buffkin Retired Steamfitter, investor,U.S. citizen,voter, taxpayer! — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gary Buffkin Good morning, The U.S.A. has the best sysytem in the world kept that way by transparency. Quarterly reporting should be the minimum requirement to ensure continued success, No ifs, and, or buts! Pay to play, the average American does! Thank you.

Gary schuitema None — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gary schuitema Quarterly reporting is critical. Do not implement a travesty by removing the requirement.

Ged Cleary — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ged Cleary Less information to interested parties only assists the unscrupulous. One who wishes to hide an issue does not want information leaking out to those outside the inner sanctum. Information shared in any disclosure can be massaged to convey any purpose but if management has a directive to be honest, accurate and impartial then that should at the very least, ensure clarity of information to owners. The more often this information is disclosed should keep everyone on their best behaviour.

Gerald Story — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gerald Story Dear Secretary,I am writing as a retail investor to express my strong opposition to the proposed rule change under File Number S7-2026-15. This proposal, which allows public companies to replace quarterly financial reports with semiannual filings, will directly harm individual investors and damage market integrity. A fair marketplace relies on timely and equal access to information. Reducing the frequency of standardized reporting creates a dangerous six-month information blackout. While institutional investors have the resources to buy alternative data or gain private access to management, retail investors depend entirely on public SEC filings to make informed decisions. Passing this rule will widen the information gap and heavily disadvantage everyday market participants. Furthermore, less frequent data will cripple the price discovery process. Instead of steady market adjustments based on quarterly performance, investors will face extreme, unpredictable volatility twice a year when semiannual reports are finally released. Quarterly disclosures provide the essential oversight needed to hold corporate management accountable. Six months is simply too long for a company's financial health to remain unexamined by the public. I urge the Commission to protect retail investors, maintain market transparency, and reject this proposal

---

Greg demars — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Greg demars I need more frequent updates to make sound financial decisions giving me an update after I've lost everything is unacceptable. Give me the same update politicians get when they get it, there insider trading is on point just ask Pelosi, her quick information made her millions while waiting for quarterly updates didn't afford me the same opportunity. Your Semiannual Reporting proposal is garbage.

Heather Davis — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Heather Davis Please continue to require quarterly reporting from companies.

Holly Given — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Holly Given I oppose this change away from quarterly reporting because it reduced transparency and limits information available to individual investors like myself. Please, keep the quarterly reporting requirement.

IN2MONEY P/L Licenced Estate Agent — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: IN2MONEY P/L I support quarterly reporting remaining to inform investment decisions

---

Individual — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Individual I want to continuing to receive quarterly reports.

Individual — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Individual Keep Quaterly reporting.

Jacqueline Rixen The Motley Fool Community — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jacqueline Rixen Common Guys, we all know reporting is a drag, but we also know watched behavior is better behavior. The only reason I'm aware of to reduce reporting is the time and expense involved. Well, that's part of being a public company. If companies don't want to do that, they should go private. They can't say they're big dogs but just sit on the porch.

Jade — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jade Theres enough crooked ultra wealthy people in the world. We want more regulation. NOT LESS.

James Engel — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Engel Decreasing reporting to twice a year will make markets for more labile. Quarterly reporting is markedly favorable.

Janice DiRose, Esq. The Florida Bar — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Janice DiRose, Esq. Dear Secretary: I urge you not to scrap quarterly reporting. Have we not deregulated enough? I would think that since the SEC was created in the aftermath of the 1929 crash, it would want to move forward, not back. History repeats itself: 2001 Enron led to SOX and the derivatives-caused financial crisis of 2007-2008 led to Dodd-Frank. Yet here we are, seeking to decrease reporting thereby decreasing transparency for individual investors. Do your job! You know this is not the right thing to do so please do the right thing. Many people in this country are hurting and cannot afford to lose their 401(k)s, another greed mechanism that corporations were allowed to exploit in exchange for eliminating pensions. Some exchange. The reasoning behind this proposed move is faulty, unnecessary, and highly likely to cause significant harm. For example, if quarterly reporting is made voluntary, investors will be left comparing apples to oranges instead of apples to apples. Please do better! Sincerely, Janice DiRose, Esq.

Jared Riddle Concerned Investor — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jared Riddle I oppose replacing quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting. Quarterly financial disclosures are foundational to transparent capital markets. Six months is too long — especially in today’s volatile economic environment — for investors to operate without standardized financial information. The compliance savings and long-term planning benefits of less frequent reporting do not justify the resulting loss of transparency and accountability. Individual investors in particular depend on timely, comparable disclosures to make informed decisions. Reducing reporting frequency would widen the information gap between insiders and retail investors, undermining market confidence and fairness. If the Commission’s goal is to reduce regulatory burden, the better path is simplifying what companies disclose — not how often they disclose it. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal.

Jarod DeWeese — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jarod DeWeese As an investor and professional with a portion of my income in the form of stock, it is absolutely vital that traded companies be transparent about their reports as frequent as possible so that Americans investing in companies have the most up to date information to make informed decisions about their investments

---

Jeff Smith — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeff Smith We need more transparency, not less.

Jeffrey Brown — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeffrey Brown I count on updated company information each quarter to help in my investing for my future. Being an individual investor I cannot count on knowing what is going on with a company by accident. Moving the mandatory reporting to six months from three months increases the unknowns of a company, its operations, and financial status. The cost to the companies is minimal to the bottom line in comparison to the information being shared with real people who own a portion of the company. Being an owner I would receive updated and frequent reports on the company.

Jerry LAllwn Retired — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jerry LAllwn I'm opposed to the change from quarterly to semiannual reporting primarily because it reduces transparency for investors. The cost reduction is minuscule in comparison to the financial value and profit power of the companies involved. I personally will feel much less comfortable in investing in the market should the change be approved. Definitely will need to evaluate moving away from stocks to more secure investments. Definitely don't want to endure another investment collapse due to companies hiding losses until they've unloaded them on unsuspecting investors. Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

Joan Cowperthwaite N/A — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joan Cowperthwaite KEEP THE QUARTERLY TO KEEP IT CLEAN

Joe Neumann — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joe Neumann I dont think corporate reporting should be limited to twice a year. I understand the possible cost savings that could result in that to corporations but I dont think it is worth those savings to leave stock holders with less information about a company they are invested in. I think it leaves the door open to stock price manipulation.

Joel Roth — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joel Roth Transparency should be at the forefront. If public companies' reporting is hidden or goes dark, they're doing something wrong and or a coward. No if ands or buts.

Johanna Brandt Individual investor — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Johanna Brandt Dear SEC Commissioners, as an individual investor with 70% of my portfolio invested in US-based companies, I am writing to strongly oppose the proposed rule change allowing public companies to replace quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting on Form 10-S. Reducing the frequency of corporate reporting directly threatens market efficiency and individual shareholder rights in four critical ways: 1) Severe Loss of Transparency: Investing is ownership. When we own a piece of a business, we deserve regular, transparent communication. Taking reports away does not make anyone more patient; it simply leaves owners less informed while companies continue to operate, win or lose customers, and alter strategies every single day. 2) Increased Market Volatility: Less transparency does not eliminate uncertainty—it amplifies it. Reducing updates from four times a year to just two means that when information finally arrives, the corporate surprises will be larger, market reactions will be sharper, and stock volatility will significantly increase. 3) Heightened Risk of Insider Trading: Widening the information gap to six months creates a dangerous window for information asymmetry, giving corporate insiders an unfair advantage over Main Street investors who are kept in the dark. 4) Disproportionate Harm to Retail Investors: While institutional investors have direct access to management, individual investors - such as myself - rely entirely on public disclosures. In an era of AI and highly efficient disclosure tools, the compliance cost argument is weak. Taking away quarterly reports creates an unlevel playing field that actively harms individual shareholders. Fewer public reports will rarely create better-informed owners. I strongly request the Commission to protect individual investors and maintain the current, vital quarterly reporting framework. Thank you for your time and consideration. Sincerely, Johanna Brandt

---

John Geisler — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Geisler I want the quarterly transparency to company results as an individual investor with ~25 equities. I think it's imporant for companies to disclose results on a quarterly basis. Doing this twice a year is not enough.

---

john gold CEO — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: john gold Wrong direction. In the course of history, things are moving faster and faster; we should be moving to monthly reporting. The longer things go unreported, the more dramatic the swings. Those swings only enable insider information to be utilized to greater effect, to the detriment of people not on the inside. And the creation of a gambling mentality that is unmoured from the fundamentals. Increasing the risk of crashing an already unstable and overvalued market as more chaos is injected into the market. Also, with the amount of insider information/market manipulation being available to elected US government officials, extending the reporting period only encourages further market manipulation/exploitation. Creating an incentive to exploit the now-larger market swings, leading to even larger oscillations as effects compound.

John T. Compton, Director, ABC Foundation — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John T. Compton I spent many years on Wall Street as an analyst, an investment banker, and a bond trader. Markets thrive on information and transparency. The more you know about a company in real time, the better your ability to assess its financial health and potential. To abandon quarterly reporting---the gold standard---in favor of semi-annual reporting would assault and diminish these principles, making it much harder for investors to assess risk and allocate investment capital. The system works very well as it is. Why risk market turmoil and uncertainty? Why choose opacity over transparency? Why remove critical information from a robust market ecosystem? I urge the SEC to leave the reporting regulations as they are. It isn't broken, so there's no need to fix it.

JPRO Consulting Inc — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: JPRO Consulting Inc I am appalled that you would even be considering making such a blatantly anti-consumer anti-retail change to the reporting rules. Transparency is crucial to free and fair markets and halving the transparency requirements is absolutely enabling the big players to get away with even more infractions than they already do. This must be stopped immediately.

Jps Artist — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jps Disgraceful corrupt unlawful We see what you are doing

---

Julia MCINTYRE Retired engineer — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Julia MCINTYRE I am opposed to this regulation reducing financial reporting from four times a year to two times a year. Information is the lifeblood of the financial system. We need more information, not less.

Karen Fleet N/A — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Fleet I do not support the change to financial reporting. We cannot react as consumers until it is too late. Do not make this change!

Kathryn J Ricchio — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathryn J Ricchio Quarterly reports are essential to keep everyone honest. Our country today is all about hiding what you can and making the rich get richer. I want accountability!

Kathy Haugan — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathy Haugan Keep the quarterly reporting, remember Enron?!

KENNETH EGELAND N/A — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: KENNETH EGELAND In today's environment, 6 months is a very long time to allow companies not to report their financial statements. So much can happen in a six month time period and I believe it would put investors financial futures at risk. I am not in favor of the new six month reporting proposal. Let's keep quarterly reporting for all companies. Thank you.

Kevin Conley Manager, Virginia Travels — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin Conley Please do not change the rules requiring public companies to regularly report to investors like me. Thank you!

Kevin Hanson — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin Hanson Allowing companies to release financial reports only semianually rather than quarterly would be unfair to investors. Transparent, frequent communication with investors should be standard.

KH — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: KH Reducing the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two would be a mistake. Investors, as partial owners of the business, deserve and require more transparency and information not less. The burden of producing the quarterly reports is not that significant, since well run companies have the data collection and processes in place already and they could also use AI to generate the reports. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

KPMG LLP — Jun 29, 2026
KPMG LLP Telephone +1 212 758 9700
Two Manhattan West Web www.us.kpmg.com
375 9th Avenue, 17th Floor
New York, N.Y. 10001-0102
June 29, 2026
Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street NE
Washington, D.C. 20549-1090
RE: File Number S7-2026-15; SEC Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140
Dear Madam Secretary:
We appreciate the opportunity to respond to the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC or Commission) request for comment on its proposed rule, Semiannual Reporting (the Proposal or Proposed Rule). KPMG LLP supports the Commission's continued efforts to modernize the reporting framework and promote capital formation, while continuing to protect investors and maintain orderly and efficient capital markets. We recognize the importance of evaluating reporting requirements with a fresh lens to ensure they remain appropriately calibrated to current market conditions and evolving stakeholder needs.

Specifically, we acknowledge the Proposal's benefits of permitting reporting companies to elect their interim reporting frequency. We also believe it is important for the SEC to consider how changes to reporting frequency interact with the current financial reporting ecosystem as a whole, including existing governance structures, other regulatory requirements, and market transactions. Given the breadth of current and anticipated rulemaking initiatives[1]
, the Commission should evaluate how these initiatives may cumulatively interact with one another and the aggregate effect they may have on reporting companies if adopted. The financial reporting system is the backbone to the capital markets and should continue to provide reliable, transparent, and timely information to market participants and other stakeholders.
Financial information with these attributes supports a foundation that fosters investor protection, informed capital allocation, and preservation of the overall integrity of the markets.
We encourage the SEC to continue its comprehensive review of Regulation S-K and consider incorporating its review of existing interim disclosure requirements as part of these efforts. It is important that the SEC continues to carry out its initiative to review interim disclosures by engaging with reporting companies and other financial statement users. This would enable the Commission to determine the root cause of underlying cost-benefit concerns of reporting companies with respect to interim reporting. That is, is frequency of reporting a main concern, or is the volume of required and other disclosures on a quarterly basis more concerning?[2] 1 See also, for example, SEC Concept Release: Foreign Private Issuer Eligibility, File Number S7-
2025-01, and SEC Proposed Rule: Enhancement of Emerging Growth Company Accommodations and Simplification of Filer Status for Reporting Companies, File Number S7-2026-18. We have submitted or intend to submit comment letters on such rulemaking.
2 See Quarterly Questions: Statement on the Proposed Amendments to Allow Semiannual Reporting and A Quarter for Your Thoughts: Remarks at the Meeting of the SEC Investor Advisory Committee.
© 2026 KPMG LLP, a Delaware limited liability partnership, and its subsidiaries are part of the
KPMG global organization of independent member firms affiliated with KPMG International Limited, a private
English company limited by guarantee.

We also encourage the SEC to continue its collaboration with other standard-setters and rule-making authorities to develop an operable framework that is calibrated between various sets of requirements, as we further describe herein.

Our observations and recommendations that follow are limited to those informed in our capacity as independent accountants and by our experience working with reporting companies, their management teams, those charged with governance, investors, and underwriters. We believe our observations require consideration by the SEC due to the potential impact on financial reporting and capital formation.

KPMG Observations and Recommendations

I. Financial reporting frequency is influenced by a variety of factors beyond Form 10-Q filing requirements. The frequency of financial reporting is embedded in a broader reporting ecosystem that extends beyond the SEC's requirements. It is driven by internal business needs, external obligations and investor expectations, among other factors. As a result, many reporting companies are likely to continue producing financial information on a quarterly, or more frequent basis, even if semiannual reporting is permitted for regulatory purposes. For example, reporting companies electing semiannual reporting frequency may need to continue to produce financial information quarterly to satisfy contractual obligations. We believe the Proposal may not, in all cases, meaningfully reduce the cost and complexity of interim reporting for many companies in practice. Costs that go beyond the creation of two additional Forms 10-Q per year may remain, which in turn would reduce the potential benefits of permitting optionality in interim reporting frequency.

II. Optionality in interim reporting frequency may introduce greater variation in the form, content, availability and reliability of financial information available in the capital markets. Optionality in interim reporting frequency – resulting in a mix of semiannual filers, quarterly filers, and semiannual filers voluntarily disclosing information on a quarterly basis3 – may introduce increased diversity in the consistency and comparability of the form and content of financial information provided to the external marketplace. This could in turn result in greater reliance on alternative disclosure practices, such as Form 8-K, that are subject to different levels of assurance than Form 10-Q or Form 10-S. We believe clearly articulated requirements and guidance that provide comprehensive guardrails around the reporting of interim information and the level of auditor involvement would help preserve transparency and investor understanding.

III. Alignment with existing accounting, auditing, and regulatory frameworks is necessary for the operability of financial reporting requirements. The financial reporting system, including other SEC rules and regulations, U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (U.S. GAAP), IFRS® Accounting Standards, and standards promulgated by both the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (PCAOB) and American Institute of Certified Public Accountants (AICPA), exists within a quarterly (or interim) reporting framework today. As changes are made to interim reporting requirements, it is important to consider how accounting, auditing and regulatory standards and requirements should be updated to maintain compatibility and reduce confusion for the sustained functionality of the financial reporting system.

3 The Proposal refers to these issuers leveraging other voluntary disclosure channels as 'hybrid reporters'.

© 2026 KPMG LLP, a Delaware limited liability partnership, and its subsidiaries are part of the KPMG global organization of independent member firms affiliated with KPMG International Limited, a private
English company limited by guarantee.

Clear and conformed rules and guidance will be critical to support consistent application and achieve the intended objectives of the Proposed Rule. The following sections expand upon each of these observations in greater detail, including their potential effects on reporting practices, capital markets participants, and the broader financial reporting system. We have also provided specific operational questions that supplement these thematic observations in Appendix A to this letter.

I. Financial reporting frequency is influenced by a variety of factors beyond Form 10-Q filing requirements

Reporting companies prepare timely interim financial information to address internal strategic planning, fulfill external stakeholder expectations and requirements, meet contractual obligations, and support governance processes. We believe the Commission should consider carefully weighing these and other influences over the frequency of financial reporting when assessing the potential cost and time savings the Proposal aims to address, including feedback received from reporting companies as part of the SEC's stakeholder outreach.

Strategic decision-making and governance and oversight

Decision-makers within reporting companies require timely financial information to evaluate performance, allocate capital and other resources, and execute strategic objectives. Financial reporting processes have been established to produce timely financial information to achieve these objectives, notwithstanding regulatory reporting requirements. A reporting entity's processes to create financial information for purposes outside of a Form 10-Q filing, and the frequency at which they produce such information, are unlikely to change significantly solely in light of a decision to report on a semiannual basis with the SEC. Rather, they are likely to continue to produce the information an entity needs to operate and conduct its business.

Similarly, boards of directors and their committees rely on periodic financial information to effectively monitor the performance of management and fulfill their responsibilities to shareholders. Even without a Form 10-Q, the type and frequency of financial information needed to fulfill a board's oversight and governance responsibilities is unlikely to change.

The production of a Form 10-Q is a separate and distinct output of these processes that support management and oversight functions. In addition, reporting companies have distinct processes designed specifically to produce required full financial statements and note disclosures required for a Form 10-Q filing. Beyond the cost savings associated with not preparing and filing Form 10-Q, we encourage the SEC to consider how the financial burdens of the interim reporting needs of a reporting company may be impacted, and the savings that may ultimately be realized in practice. To the extent an entity elects to continue to produce interim financial statements with notes or receive assurance over those financial statements from an audit firm, cost savings may be further reduced.

Investor and analyst information expectations

Investor expectations and capital market practices exist with a quarterly reporting paradigm in place. A change in standardized reporting frequency will likely reduce the consistency, comparability, and availability of information used by investors and analysts. Established practices and the needs of

© 2026 KPMG LLP, a Delaware limited liability partnership, and its subsidiaries are part of the KPMG global organization of independent member firms affiliated with KPMG International Limited, a private investors and other financial statement users are likely to continue to drive the frequency of financial information provided by reporting companies and may limit the extent to which the Proposal reduces interim reporting burdens.
English company limited by guarantee.

Underwriter expectations and the comfort letter process

Extending the interim financial reporting period can also affect the level of comfort auditors are allowed to provide in connection with registration statements and exempt offerings. We support the proposed amendments to Regulation S-X that simplify and streamline the age of financial statement requirements for registration statements under Rule 3-01. However, for semiannual filers, existing auditing standards would constrain the level of comfort auditors may provide over financial information included or incorporated by reference in offering documents for certain periods. Underwriters and financial intermediaries typically request comfort over a ‘change period’ (i.e. the period following the most recently audited or reviewed fiscal period). Accountants are currently prohibited under PCAOB Auditing Standard AS 6101, Letters for Underwriters and Certain Other Requesting Parties (AS 6101), from providing negative assurance during the change period if the most recent financial statements are aged 135 days or more4. Without amending AS 6101 (and AICPA AU-C 9205), the level of comfort auditors may provide 135 days or more after fiscal period-end may not meet underwriter expectations. This may be accentuated when the change period does not closely align with a semiannual reporting cadence. In addition, 134 days or less does not align with the proposed revisions to the staleness dates under the Proposal, or with the proposed revisions to staleness in the Registered Offering Reform proposal6
.
We recommend the SEC continue coordination with the PCAOB and the AICPA to reconsider auditing standards governing comfort letters concurrently with the rulemaking process specific to the Proposal.

Compliance with other regulatory requirements

Internal control environments established to support informed and timely strategic decision-making also support processes to comply with existing SEC rules and regulations. Many are necessary to prepare financial statements in accordance with U.S. GAAP and comply with management’s internal control over financial reporting (ICFR) obligations under Section 404(a) of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 (SOX 404(a)). More broadly, processes and controls that are responsive to operational needs, as well as requirements across regulatory frameworks7, will continue to operate regardless of a reporting company’s interim filing frequency.

We support the fresh lens approach assumed by the Commission in its rulemaking agenda; focusing on a re-evaluation of the nature and extent of existing disclosure obligations may be helpful to the Commission as it pursues its initiatives8 to reduce the burdens borne by reporting companies. Absent changes to those 4 See PCAOB AS 6101.47, requiring the auditor to have performed an annual audit or interim review on such financial information to provide a comfort letter to an underwriter.
5 See AICPA AU-C 920.59.
6 See SEC Proposed Rule: Registered Offering Reform, File Number S7-2026-17.
7 For example, Disclosure Controls and Procedures (DCP) established by reporting companies to comply with obligations under Sections 13(a) and 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the Exchange Act) to timely identify and accurately disclose specified events and other material information on Current Reports on Form 8-K (Form 8-K) may also support elements of recognition, measurement or other provisions in accounting for transactions under applicable U.S. GAAP.
8 See Statement on Reforming Regulation S-K.
© 2026 KPMG LLP, a Delaware limited liability partnership, and its subsidiaries are part of the
KPMG global organization of independent member firms affiliated with KPMG International Limited, a private English company limited by guarantee.

rules, regulations, and standards as part of a more comprehensive rationalization of interim disclosure requirements, these processes and controls may remain when a reporting company elects to report on a semiannual basis.
Quarterly reports currently serve to provide financial statement users with interim financial statements and related disclosures prepared under a consistent framework. Form 8-K disclosure mechanisms are currently intended to supplement9, as opposed to replace, these interim reporting requirements to provide financial statement users with material, timely, event-driven transparency. While the Form 8-K disclosure will continue to provide timely material information to users, we observe that reliance on these disclosures is likely to increase absent information provided on a Form 10-Q each quarter. We encourage the SEC to consider the role of Form 8-K in an environment with optional semiannual reporting and whether amendments to the form and content of Form 8-K's disclosure obligations may be appropriate for the Form to remain fit for purpose.
Finally, the Proposal acknowledges regulatory requirements for discrete industry sectors and specific state laws requiring Form 10-Q or some other form of quarterly financial reporting. Unless conforming amendments to such industry- and state-specific regulations are made, we agree with the Commission's observation that impacted reporting companies may continue filing quarterly reports on Form 10-Q and therefore might be unable to benefit from potential cost savings of the Proposal.

Reporting obligations under contractual arrangements and internal business processes Interim financial reporting may be required by contractual arrangements and needed for operational purposes. For example, lenders often require borrowers to maintain compliance with certain financial covenants based on quarterly financial information to provide visibility into the borrower's ability to service the debt. Other arrangements, such as revenue contracts with customers, supplier arrangements, and employee compensation incentives (e.g. sales commissions, bonuses), may also require metrics-based reporting on a quarterly or more frequent basis. Certain contracts may leverage the quarterly reporting framework by permitting reporting companies to use a timely filed Form 10-Q to satisfy the contractual requirement for timely financial information. Contracts and other arrangements will continue to drive financial information processes on a quarterly, or more frequent, basis despite an option to report semiannually with the SEC. As such, reporting companies that wish to change the frequency of their interim reporting will need to consider contractual arrangements that require interim reporting on a different cadence.
For these reasons, we recommend the Commission carefully evaluate the feedback received from reporting companies regarding the effect the Proposal may have on existing financial reporting frequency and processes. The reduction of compliance costs and regulatory burdens borne by reporting companies electing semiannual reporting may be limited in circumstances where more frequent financial and operational reporting is necessary for a reporting company's continued business. Consideration of the nature of these other factors may help inform the expected benefits of the Proposal to permit semiannual reporting on Form 10-S and where those benefits are most likely to be realized, consistent with the Commission's objectives.
9 See Exchange Act Form 8-K Compliance and Disclosure Interpretations, Question 101.01 [April 2, 2008].
© 2026 KPMG LLP, a Delaware limited liability partnership, and its subsidiaries are part of the
KPMG global organization of independent member firms affiliated with KPMG International Limited, a private
English company limited by guarantee.

II. Optionality in interim reporting frequency may introduce greater variation in the form, content, and timing of financial information provided to the capital markets Optionality in interim reporting frequency is likely to impact what and how information is provided to users and may create inconsistency, even among peers. With that inconsistency, user reliance on alternative disclosure practices is also likely to increase. Therefore, it will be important to provide clear requirements and guidance to ensure that the capital markets receive reliable, transparent, and timely financial information. A transparent framework for interim financial reporting, including comprehensive requirements and guidance on alternative disclosure practices, would help investors navigate the differences in company-to-company interim reporting practice including form, content, availability and the level of auditor assurance provided, if any.

Comparability, consistency and the use of alternative disclosure practices

Comparability across industry peers will be impacted when reporting companies within the same sector elect different interim reporting frequencies. Currently, investors and analysts evaluate performance using structured periodic financial information prepared in conformity with U.S. GAAP, which is made available relatively consistently across reporting companies. If different reporting companies elect to provide financial information on Form 10-Q, Form 10-S, and using a hybrid reporting model, investors and other users will be forced to evaluate investments and make capital allocation decisions using information that differs in frequency, form, and content.

Providing financial information on Form 8-K provides market participants with timely and material information important to the capital markets. However, the reliability, transparency, and timing of financial information may vary significantly with increased optionality, due to a lack of presentation requirements and no required level of assurance. In contrast, presentation and level of assurance requirements are both currently standardized on Form 10-Q10
.

Increased periods between interim financial reporting could introduce incremental layers of judgment in determining what constitutes a material event requiring disclosure between periodic filings. Because semiannual filers will have an increased timeframe between mandatory financial reporting, they may need to assess what events are reported on Form 8-K given the absence of another mechanism, i.e. Form 10-Q, to disclose that information. For example, an event (e.g. material weakness) that would have previously been disclosed on Form 10-Q in the normal course may now necessitate a Form 8-K filing to disclose that information timely.

We encourage the SEC to consider the views raised by stakeholders and users of interim financial information as to how they may operate differently when reporting companies provide information through different disclosure channels at different frequencies.

Auditor involvement and a potential ‘expectation gap’

We believe financial statement reviews performed by auditors in connection with current Form 10-Q requirements provide value to all users of financial statements. There are no auditor review requirements
10 ASC 270-10-45-20 requires SEC registrants to refer to Rules 10-01 and 8-03 of Regulation S-X for purposes of preparing interim financial statements and notes in accordance with U.S. GAAP.

© 2026 KPMG LLP, a Delaware limited liability partnership, and its subsidiaries are part of the KPMG global organization of independent member firms affiliated with KPMG International Limited, a private
English company limited by guarantee.

in the Proposal for interim financial statements (and other financial information) provided through alternative disclosure channels (e.g. Form 8-K). As the Proposal acknowledges, earnings releases or other financial information provided today on Item 2.02 of Form 8-K and other material disclosure releases provided today on Item 7.01 of Form 8-K are typically furnished, not filed, and are not subject to auditor review under AS 4105. We expect that, under the model proposed, some reporting companies will choose to obtain assurance over interim financial statements, while others will not. Whether assurance is obtained may not be transparent to users of financial information that is provided on Form 8-K. The requirements to obtain assurance should be transparent to investors and other users of the financial statements in an environment with increased diversity in disclosure practices.
We encourage the SEC to provide clear requirements and guidance as to whether reporting companies are required to obtain assurance if they present complete condensed interim financial statements with notes on a Form 8-K and differentiate if those requirements only pertain to Forms 8-K filed (rather than those furnished). To support investor protections in a dynamic reporting environment, we believe clarity would provide decision useful information to users and help mitigate ‘expectation gaps’ regarding the level of assurance associated with the information provided to those users.
III. Alignment with existing accounting, auditing and regulatory frameworks is necessary for the operability of financial reporting requirements
As the Proposal acknowledges, we agree that alignment among SEC rules and regulations, U.S. GAAP, and PCAOB auditing standards (as well as AICPA auditing standards) will be integral to the operability and security of investor protections in an optional semiannual reporting framework.
U.S. GAAP and interaction with the FASB Codification
The interim reporting framework for reporting companies is currently governed by Rule 10-01 of Regulation S-X and ASC Topic 270, Interim Reporting (Topic 270). Should the Commission move forward with the Proposal as currently written, we believe that coordination with the FASB to adopt conforming amendments to Topic 27011, as well as various other accounting topics, would be necessary for the operability of the Proposed Rule.
Topic 270 is designed as an update-focused model. For example, Topic 270 contemplates that interim disclosures are primarily intended to explain material changes since the last annual reporting date

and that entities are not required to repeat information previously reported unless necessary for an understanding of the current interim period. At the same time, certain required interim disclosures exist that do not follow the principle of an update-focused model.
Considering the existing interim disclosure requirements under Rule 10-01 and Topic 270 and how disclosure practices evolved over time, the volume of disclosures made in interim reporting is large. The preparation of interim disclosures by reporting companies consumes resources and is costly. The volume of interim disclosures reduces their effectiveness for users who need to sift through to determine what updates are material. We therefore suggest that the SEC continue to consider whether disclosure volume 11 For example, ASC 270-10-50-10 requires note disclosure in the annual financial statements over disposals and other unusual items, the aggregate effect of year-end adjustments, and the effect of accounting changes that are material to fourth quarter results in the absence of separate fourth quarter financial statements.
© 2026 KPMG LLP, a Delaware limited liability partnership, and its subsidiaries are part of the
KPMG global organization of independent member firms affiliated with KPMG International Limited, a private English company limited by guarantee.

has a greater impact on the interim reporting concerns outlined in the Proposal than frequency of reporting. Focusing disclosure requirements on the principle of an update-focused model could provide relief to reporting companies while maintaining investor protection through the provision of material updates.
By way of further example, certain accounting topics within the FASB Codification have either incorporated quarterly mechanics12 into their respective Implementation Guidance and Illustration subsections or reference explicit recognition, presentation or disclosure13 guidance for interim financial statements.
Additionally, U.S. GAAP and IFRS® Accounting Standards require that financial statements, including interim statements, include note disclosures to comply with the respective framework. As such, auditors cannot perform applicable review procedures over statements that do not include the required notes and reach a conclusion that the statements do not require material modifications. As such, auditors are not able to perform such procedures on information that is included in an earnings release, unless that information is in the form of a complete set of interim financial statements with notes. The SEC should consider whether an alternative reporting framework would enable auditors to provide assurance over interim information, for the benefit of all stakeholders.

While the examples we cite may not be exhaustive, the Commission may at a minimum wish to consider whether additional guidance around semiannual reporting for certain accounting areas could help eliminate potential confusion and reinforce how this update-focused disclosure model operates when interim reporting occurs less frequently. This could be accomplished as part of a more comprehensive review of existing interim disclosure requirements we suggest previously.

Auditing standards and capital markets practices

To perform a review of interim financial statements, paragraph 16 of AS 4105 indicates that the accountant should apply analytical procedures to specified quarter-to-date and year-to-date periods, certain of which would not be disclosed on Form 10-S. We believe that conforming amendments to AS 4105 would be necessary to redefine what analytical procedures are required for semiannual filers. Also, as previously discussed, conforming amendments to AS 6101 (and AU-C 920) may be necessary to avoid delays in capital raising efforts when auditors provide comfort letters to underwriters. Should the Commission move forward with the Proposal as currently written, we believe that coordination with the PCAOB and AICPA would be necessary for the operability of the Proposed Rule.

SOX 404(a) disciplines and SEC framework

Reporting companies electing to be semiannual filers under the Proposal will experience reduced frequency and fewer feedback cycles for period-end controls (i.e. controls that were re-designed to operate on a semiannual basis). Because of longer intervals between control observations, deficient controls may go undetected for a greater portion of the year and expose reporting companies to increased levels of detection and aggregation risks. Further, reporting companies may have limited 12 See ASC Topic 740, Income Taxes, ASC Topic 260, Earnings Per Share.

13 See ASC Topic 280, Segment Reporting, ASC Topic 250, Accounting Changes and Error Corrections, ASC Topic 810, Consolidation, and ASC Topic 815, Derivatives and Hedging.

© 2026 KPMG LLP, a Delaware limited liability partnership, and its subsidiaries are part of the
KPMG global organization of independent member firms affiliated with KPMG International Limited, a private English company limited by guarantee.

opportunities to design, implement and test remediated controls, or to demonstrate sustained operating effectiveness. Misstatements arising from such control deficiencies may remain undetected for longer periods, allowing these misstatements to accumulate and potentially result in larger misstatements when ultimately identified. If the Proposal is adopted as currently written, we recommend the Commission update current staff guidance14 on application of ICFR disciplines to support SOX 404(a) and Item 308 compliance under the semiannual reporting option.

The Proposal also introduces certain requirements related to the voluntary disclosures of quarterly financial information for semiannual filers, mechanics of electing reporting frequency, presentation of comparative period information, and acquisitions, among other items. We see certain opportunities

to provide clarifications that would enable reporting companies to effectively comply with the requirements of the Proposal if adopted as currently written, and for other relevant stakeholders to have a better understanding of the final regulatory requirements. We have elaborated upon these within Appendix A.
They are intended to supplement our recommendations that the Commission consider where further amendments to Regulation S-X and coordination with other standard-setters and rule-making authorities may be necessary for the operability of the Proposed Rule.
* * * * * * * * *
We appreciate the opportunity to comment on the Proposed Rule. We support the Commission's objective to evaluate the effectiveness of the periodic reporting framework and encourage careful consideration of the potential impacts on reporting company operations, financial statement user needs, and the broader financial reporting ecosystem. Consideration of how changes to reporting frequency interact with existing reporting practices, capital markets dynamics, and the professional and regulatory frameworks that currently produce reliable, transparent, and timely information and support high-quality financial reporting will be important in evaluating the overall effects of the Proposal.
If you have any questions regarding our comments or further information included in this letter, please do not hesitate to contact Angela Storm at astorm@kpmg.com or Timothy Brown at tdbrown@kpmg.com.
Sincerely,
KPMG LLP
14 See prior staff views on Management's Reporting on Internal Control Over Financial Reporting, Management's Report on Internal Control Over Financial Reporting and Certification of Disclosure in Exchange Act Periodic Reports, and Division of Corporation
Finance: Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 – Frequently Asked Questions.
© 2026 KPMG LLP, a Delaware limited liability partnership, and its subsidiaries are part of the
KPMG global organization of independent member firms affiliated with KPMG International Limited, a private English company limited by guarantee.
Appendix A
We submit the following implementation questions and considerations that we have identified to date, if the Commission were to adopt the Proposed Rule as currently written. These questions primarily relate to the mechanics and implications of electing to be a semiannual filer, as well as the consequences of switching interim filing frequency in subsequent fiscal periods. While this is not necessarily an exhaustive list of opportunities to provide clarifying guidance associated with adopting the Proposed Rule, it reinforces our recommendations to continue collaboration and engagement with other standard-setters and rulemaking authorities, including within the SEC. Such clarifications may mitigate the potential for unintended consequences, reduce the likelihood of implementation complexities, and address other uncertainties if the Proposal were adopted as currently written.
No. Relevant

Question
framework
Core Financial Reporting Requirements (Regulation S-X / S-K)
1 Regulation S-X Rule
10-01
If a semiannual filer voluntarily includes quarterly financial information on Form 10-S as permitted under the Proposal, is the reporting company also required to report comparative period financial information on a quarterly basis?
2 Regulation S-X Rule
10-01, AS 4105
If a semiannual filer voluntarily includes quarterly financial information on Form 10-S (i.e. Q1 and/or Q2 of the fiscal year) of the first semiannual period of the fiscal year, is the reporting company required to include quarterly information on Form 10-K (i.e. either Q3 and/or Q4 of the fiscal year) for the fiscal year's second semiannual period? If so, would the voluntarily disclosed quarterly information filed on Form 10-K also require AS 4105 review by an independent accountant?
3 Regulation S-X
Rules 3-01, 3-02, 3-20; Regulation S-K
Item 302
If a semiannual filer voluntarily includes quarterly financial information on Form 10-S as permitted under the Proposal, is the reporting company required to make required Article 3 disclosures for retrospective changes recorded in the voluntarily disclosed quarters?
Transactions Reporting (Regulation S-X Rule 3-05)
4 Regulation S-X Rule
3-05
• Under Rule 3-05, which historical financial statements should a reporting company that acquires a significant business (the acquiree) present on Form 8-K or in a registration statement if the acquiree elected a different interim reporting frequency than the interim reporting frequency of the acquirer? Would this depend on significance?
• What interim reporting frequency may be elected for an acquiree that is not a reporting company? Would this depend on significance?
© 2026 KPMG LLP, a Delaware limited liability partnership, and its subsidiaries are part of the KPMG global organization of independent member firms affiliated with KPMG International Limited, a private
English company limited by guarantee.

Financial Statement Presentation and Review Considerations
6 AS 4105 • If a reporting company includes a complete set of condensed quarterly financial statements and notes that are compliant with Rule 10-01 and Topic 270 on a Form 8-K that is filed, are such financial statements required to be reviewed by an independent accountant, subject to AS 4105?

• What if the same Form 8-K is furnished rather than filed?
7 AS 6101, AS 4105 If a reporting company voluntarily files a complete set of condensed quarterly financial statements and notes that are compliant with Rule 10-01 and Topic 270 in a Securities or Exchange Act registration statement, are such financial statements required to be reviewed by an independent accountant, subject to AS 4105?
Election and Reporting Mechanics
8 Check the box
mechanics
The Proposal permits a reporting company to elect its interim reporting frequency when it files its annual Form 10-K. The Proposal also allows for corrective amendments to erroneous elections up until the Form 10-Q due date. Depending on filer status, reporting companies will have varying levels of knowledge regarding Q1 financial performance when Form 10-K is due and will know Q1 financial performance by the Form 10-Q due date.
• Does the proposed timing of electing quarterly or semiannual reporting provide reporting companies with opportunities to either hide or delay disclosure of poor Q1 financial results within a fiscal year's first semiannual period on Form 10-S?
• What monitoring and/or enforcement protocols has the Commission considered to protect the capital markets from such scenarios?
9 Check the box
mechanics
Would a company that has yet to file an Exchange Act report make its initial election to use semiannual reporting when it submits a registration statement for confidential review, upon the first public filing of the registration statement or when such registration statement is effective?
© 2026 KPMG LLP, a Delaware limited liability partnership, and its subsidiaries are part of the KPMG global organization of independent member firms affiliated with KPMG International Limited, a private
English company limited by guarantee.

Kristian Jaeger — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kristian Jaeger Hello, please do not move away from quarterly reporting. A lot of individual investors, like myself, depend on this data to make informed decisions! Thank you for your consideration.

Kristy Kaiser — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kristy Kaiser I think this is a bad change for several reasons. A six month period allows fraud to go unnoticed. My wealth managers will have far less information to go on, potentially losing me money. Less reports will be a cost savings. But will consumers or investors see that? And even if this change is "optional", I don't see how any companies wouldn't make the change

---

L Perrone — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: L Perrone My 48 year career in Finance between Banking Cash Management & Adjustment Research including Due To/ Due From issues, along with many years in Reinsurance Finance & Reporting on 40 companies exposed how critical it is to continue to report Quarterly for Fraud prevention & quicker restitutions of funds & an effective deterrent to corruption within the company! Quarterly reporting MUST remain if not changed to Monthly!

Larry Johnson — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Larry Johnson Keep the reporting.

Larry Stumpf Investor - retired sales manager — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Larry Stumpf I am opposed to this regulation change. It will do nothing to hurt the large institutional investors who can pick up the phone and get any information they need at any time. The small investors like myself believe companies should be transparent in their activity and reporting. Semi annual reports would allow too much time between reporting periods for important information to be neglected or ignored if not favorable to management or board members.

Laura Duvall Investment Consultant — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Duvall Public companies should have complete transparency and continue to be required to report quarterly. As history shows, it hurt the individual investor when semi-annual reporting was allowed from 1955-1970. SEC, you have an obligation to uphold transparency for the individual investors. Please continue quarterly reporting.

LaurieNovetsky No professional affiliation — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: LaurieNovetsky Do not censor our reporters ! Or the women on the VIEW! You will loose big audiences! It feels like you have been bought off by this government. You have lost our trust! Laurie Novetsky devoted viewer of 60 minutes & CNN.

Lee Johnson — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lee Johnson We need accountability and transparency

---

Leslie Austin — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leslie Austin To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I oppose the proposed rule allowing public companies to replace quarterly Form 10-Q reporting with semiannual reporting on new Form 10-S. I understand the stated goals: reducing compliance burdens, giving companies more flexibility, and reducing pressure around short-term quarterly results. Those are legitimate concerns. But the proposed remedy is too broad and would weaken one of the most important protections in the public markets: regular, standardized, mandatory disclosure available to all investors at the same time. Quarterly Form 10-Q reporting creates a common information floor. It gives ordinary investors, analysts, creditors, regulators, employees, and the public a recurring and comparable view of a company's financial condition. That public reporting discipline matters. It helps investors see trends before they become crises, compare companies on a consistent basis, and hold management accountable. Semiannual reporting would not mean companies disclose nothing for six months. Companies would still have material-event reporting obligations, and many companies might continue issuing earnings releases or voluntary updates. But that is not an adequate substitute for mandatory quarterly Form 10-Q reporting. Earnings releases are not the same as standardized SEC filings. Voluntary disclosures may be selective, less comparable, less complete, and less reliable. Companies facing bad news may have the greatest incentive to say less, not more. The optional nature of the proposal is also a weakness, not a safeguard. If companies with strong performance keep reporting quarterly while companies under pressure switch to semiannual reporting, investors will face an adverse-selection problem. The market may interpret reduced reporting as a warning sign, and ordinary investors may be left with less information precisely when more transparency is needed. I am also concerned about information inequality. Large institutional investors often have access to analysts, management calls, alternative data, and professional research tools. Ordinary investors rely much more heavily on public filings. Reducing mandatory public reporting would likely widen the gap between sophisticated market participants and everyone else. The proposal also assumes benefits that have not been proven. It is not clear that reducing quarterly reporting would meaningfully increase IPOs, keep companies public, or solve short-termism. Short-term pressure is real, but it is also driven by quarterly guidance, executive compensation, analyst expectations, and market culture. Weakening mandatory public disclosure may not solve those problems; it may simply reduce transparency. If the Commission believes Form 10-Q is too burdensome, it should consider targeted reforms instead: simplify duplicative requirements, scale requirements for smaller issuers where appropriate, discourage quarterly earnings guidance, or improve the usefulness of interim reporting. But the Commission should not allow broad replacement of quarterly public reporting with semiannual reporting. Public markets depend on public information. The burden of reporting must be weighed against the cost to investors when information becomes less frequent, less comparable, and less reliable. On balance, I believe the proposed rule would move the markets in the wrong direction. I urge the Commission to withdraw the proposal or substantially narrow it, and to preserve mandatory quarterly Form 10-Q reporting as the baseline for public companies. Respectfully, Leslie Austin

---

Leslie Klug — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leslie Klug Please reconsider this plan to permit companies to issue fewer reports per year. At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Lillian Hadley None — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lillian Hadley I am a private individual who is relying on stock market investments to fund my retirement. I will be using these funds to pay for my assisted living facility, groceries, car insurance and payments, and medical care. It is essential that my stock market investments have transparency so that I can make informed decisions regarding minimizing losses and hopefully maximizing returns. This is imperative for all retail investors, regardless of life circumstances. If my investments devalue significantly, then I run the risk of becoming reliant on government programs for subsidized housing, more medical care expenses, and government provided senior services. The cost of keeping SEC filings quarterly is minimal in comparison to the vast cost to the government to take care of the elderly population who lose their retirement savings and turn to the government for subsidized living. The quarterly reporting keeps the public eye on companies and helps keep the CEOs accountable to all investors. I watched in horror as the Enron scandal unfolded and have been extra vigilant in scrutinizing the financial information provided by the companies ever since. The quarterly reports are vital to keep companies transparent and the retail investors informed. Please keep the current reporting requirements and thresholds in place.

Linda Coop — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Coop Please keep quarterly reporting. We do not want to wait 6 months to see how our investments are doing.

Linda Maisch — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Maisch As an individual with private retirement holdings in the stock market, I find the proposed reduction in reporting (and accompanying lack of transparency) concerning. Quarterly reporting mandates a level of accountability that is not overly burdensome as quarterly reports to stockholders are commonplace. Therefore, this potential argument is false. As private citizens, we are dependent on the expertise of the SEC to ensure the protection of our interests and maintenance of fair and orderly markets. Given the volatility of the market and the growth of large conglomerates, reporting requirements should not be reduced. It is my opinion that transparency should be increased to ensure investors have the opportunity to make timely decisions regarding their holdings. Thank you.

Linda McAlister — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda McAlister With rapid changes in the markets, etc. waiting 6 months is too long. We rely on having current information,. Keep the reports quarterly!

Lisa Grewar — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Grewar I am against the proposed change from quarterly reporting to semi annual reporting as I feel it creates less transparency and more uncertainty. As a shareholder, we deserve regular, transparent communication to effectively keep us up to date on the businesses we own. In the age of AI, I think the cost of preparing quarterly reports should be minimal so this should not be a big factor.

Lisa Stanley Academic facilitator, Academic Enhancement Center, Oklahoma State University Athletics — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Stanley I am writing to request the SEC keep reporting quarterly. These are my investments and I have the right to see reports on a regular basis before any surprises arise. I check my bank accounts daily. My investments weekly. Seeing reports only 2 times a year means things can be hidden and not able to be dealt with in a timely fashion. Moving it from quarterly to biannually is very suspicious. If anything, the SEC should be more transparent. As a former public education teacher and currently an academic facilitator at a major university athletic department, I am on top of the savings and investments I have worked hard to acquire. I expect transparency. DO NOT CHANGE FROM QUARTERLY REPORTING!! It only benefits fraud within the SEC.

Lori L Meetze Retired IT professional from Blue Cross Blue Shield of SC — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lori L Meetze Lori Meetze Retired IT professional from BCBS of SC I am against bi-annual reporting. Quarterly is more transparent and less opportunistic for fraud. Actually, monthly reporting would be more transparent. As someone who worked in IT in the insurance industry, we ran daily, weekly monthly, quarterly, and yearly reporting once the reports are set up in your software. It’s pretty easy to set out the process to automatically run. The only reason you wouldn’t want to report more often is to give you the opportunity to fudge the numbers.

Luke Grantham — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Luke Grantham Please do not allow this law to pass. As a retail investor I know bi-annual reporting will obscure transparency for myself and many others. I make a motion to make reporting more frequent, 6x a year. We need more transparency. More reporting, not less.

Luke Ture N/A — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Luke Ture The 10-Q is important to investors to provide us the information we need to make smart decisions. The quarterly information helps keep companies accountable to their promises and accountable to shareholders. The information shareholders need is in the 10-Q and quarterly reports is the right amount of time to share the financial information. Please don't do away with these reports. Please don't change this, that would be the wrong move to make for our country. This is the best way for us to continue to do well through the businesses we own a part of. Please please do not make this change to take away 10-Qs. Thank you.

Marilyn Orr None — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marilyn Orr The SEC was established to protect investors. This propsed rule, S7-2026-15, would NOT protect an investor. It would enable company executives and their cronies who have nefarious intentions. Please cancel S7-2026-15.

Marissa Hutton — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marissa Hutton As an investor approaching retirement, I depend on timely, reliable financial information to protect my savings. Allowing public companies to move from quarterly to semiannual reporting would create a harmful information gap between insiders and ordinary shareholders. In fast-moving sectors like technology, waiting six months for verified financial data exposes investors to unnecessary risk. With modern tools and systems, maintaining quarterly reporting is entirely feasible and remains essential for transparency, market discipline, and investor confidence. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal and preserve mandatory quarterly disclosures to protect retail investors.

Marjorie Spencer — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marjorie Spencer While there is an undisclosed serious drop in earnings; serious overleveraged impact, planned insider sell offs, the corporate and big investors have a heads up even though its not reported for six months and the small retail investor, usually relying on informed analysis which would invariably been affected by the 6mos delay, he will get burned. Keep the quarterly reports.

Mark Asman No profeesional affiliation — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Asman I strongly object to the proposal to roll back reporting requirements from quarterly disclosures to semi-annual reports. We tried this before in the runup to the great depression of the 1930s. Individual investors like myself need more data, not less data. Less data makes it more difficult for individual investors like myself to do the kind of research required before investing or holding current investments and is, in my opinion, a step backward for the US capital markets. Mark Asman, CPA (Inactive), PHD(Accountancy)

Mark Garcia n/a — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Garcia The companies would still do their quarterly financing and reporting internally. So there is no savings nor benefit to waiting. But the downside harm to the public can be huge because they would not have current information on the health of their investment in that company. Protect the public. Don't set them up for a fall. Continuing the quarterly reporting incentives companies to address problems asap, and not wait longer to fix them. If a company elects to go public and receive public investment, then it must adhere to best and fair practices that protect the public. If they don't want to, then they can not publicly trade their stocks and investments. Changes like these are all just more attempts to advantage corporations and disenfranchise investors. SEC should protect everyone, especially investors. Get the sunlight on the bad actors and poorly run, or poorly performing companies. Let the market do it's work. Don't allow the companies the ability to manipulate or hide the information.

Mark Schwartz — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Schwartz I disapprove of this rule. And in this day and age more information sooner is better. Waiting on financials for a longer period of time put investors in bad shape.

Marsha Smith — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marsha Smith I am opposed to switching to semiannual instead of quarterly reporting. I rely on the transparency provided by quarterly reports to make decisions on investing. It will be too easy for bad actors to mislead investors with only semiannual reports.

Mary Riley-Jacome — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Riley-Jacome I am writing to urge the SEC to maintain quarterly reporting. Transparency is important to protect investors and this is not an undue burden on companies. Please protect investors by continuing quarterly reporting. Thank you!

Matt Denney The Motley Fool Community — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matt Denney Please do not reduce the reporting requirements for companies to only 2 times per year. As an individual investor I feel this would harm my ability to make informed decisions about my investments. Thank you.

Melanie Vanlandingham — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Melanie Vanlandingham Keep reporting QUARTERLY. Technology shifts in the blink of an eye, with immediate global impact. Now more than ever, financial reporting at every level needs to follow it accordingly for personal, business, governmental, and global security. Today's world is all about more information, not less. Particularly where financial data is concerned! KEEP REPORTING QUARTERLY.

Michael Bembeneck — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Bembeneck Retail investors are already at a significant advantage to institutional investors. Allowing semi-annual reporting only will make the disadvantages retail investors have even greater. This is not justified, there are many retail investors, especially ones that have been invested longer than a few years who have a long term investing focus. Respectfully submitted. Michael Bembeneck, P. Eng.

Michael Faust — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Faust I understand that a proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that's a mistake! As a professional business broker for over 20 years, I recognize the importance of timely interim financial reporting. Quarterly reporting by public companies should remain the minimum.

Michael McCarroll — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael McCarroll Dear Sirs, I am opposed to this proposed rule. Less information makes it harder to track the behavior of companies and directly affects investment decisions. Maintain current requirements. Sincerely, Michael McCarroll

---

Michal Trelski Retail Investor — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michal Trelski Re: File No. S7-2026-15 My name is Michal

Trelski, and I am an individual retail investor from Connecticut. I oppose allowing public companies to replace quarterly Form 10-Q reports with semiannual Form 10-S reports. I make investment decisions using public filings, not private calls with management. Quarterly reports give retail investors a regular, standardized view of revenue, cash, debt, dilution, and whether management is delivering on its promises. Six months is simply too long between complete financial updates. I understand that reporting carries costs, but the answer should be simplifying unnecessary requirements, not reducing the frequency of essential disclosures. Access to public capital comes with a duty of public transparency. Reporting less often does not eliminate risk. It transfers more of that risk to investors with the least access to information. Please retain mandatory quarterly reporting. Respectfully, Michal Trelski Individual Retail Investor New Britain, Connecticut

---

Nathan Unterseher N/A — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nathan Unterseher A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that's a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right?

Nghi Luu none — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nghi Luu Hello, I believe this move away from quarterly reporting would be disastrous for retail investors. Less reporting requirements would create LESS transparency and allow for more insider dealings that could prove detrimental to investors. Please stop with making it easier for corporations to skirt regulatory oversight and allowing them to have more opportunities to hide poor business decisions from their investors. This is a terrible ideal.

Nick Kucirek Retired Government — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nick Kucirek Respectfully, I am against semi annual reporting in this proposal and consider quarterly reporting to stay in place. Thank you

---

No to bi annual reporting — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: No to bi annual reporting Making reporting bi annual is stupid and removes transparency. It means insiders will be able to move with knowledge that won't be public for 5 to 6 months. The SEC is a joke, you are meant to be helping retail, not hindering it.

Patricia Egenberger Retired teacher — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia Egenberger I am opposed to changing the reporting. Because I think letting companies go dark for a long period of time makes it possible for more cheating and insider trading.

Paul Coop — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Coop Please keep quarterly reporting. We do not want to wait 6 months to see how our investments are doing.

Paul Nawrocki — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Nawrocki It is essential that quarterly reporting not be changed! It prevents a lot of illegal manipulation.

Paula Zitterkopf Concerned citizen — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paula Zitterkopf With all the FRAUD being uncovered how this can even be a consideration is unfathomable! Make the laws TOUGHER! At the very least keep CEO’s accountable with quarterly reports

---

Phillip J. Kortas — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Phillip J. Kortas I am opposed to the SEC's eliminating quarterly reporting. I think it is very important to have such information at hand AT LEAST on a quarterly basis. I am an active investor and rely on quarterly statements along with management commentary to make investment decisions.

Phyllis Attisano — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Phyllis Attisano I am vehemently against the proposal to change SEC reporting from quarterly to semi-annually. As a senior living on retirement savings, it's vitally important for me as an investor to be as informed as possible. I should not have to rely on 6 month old information for making investment decisions. Also the lack of transparency within that 6 month time period leaves a lot of room for market manipulation by Wall St. firms. Investors deserve better!

Ray Cowden None — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ray Cowden Thank You.

Richard Barish none; retired attorney — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Barish Investors need the information provided by monthly reports. This rule would allow companies to hide problems for months. It would create uncertainty in the markets. It would favor those with insider information at the expense of other investors. Please reject this rule.

Richard Butler — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Butler Comment now on the proposed Semiannual Reporting rule! Please do not change this present reporting structure! This current transparency and reporting requirements give' US' investors the necessary information to make the right decisions for our investments in a timely manner! To even consider this change would be a flagrant disregard for your constituents well being and protection of their hard earned financial $! DO NOT CHANGE Current policy!

Richard T. McRee 50 years as a Registered Architect — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard T. McRee KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTS. ... SHAME from OurYouth belongs to anyone who would undermine the frequent oversight of the scoundrels of corporation allowed to hide cowardly and unconstitutionally behind a paper-thin logo. ... There may be no greater BETRAYAL of OurFounders' aspirations for OurDemocracy and the potential of Individuals for common benefit to the people of OurCulture than the post WWII 1952 Patent Act that secretly pitted them against the powerful corporations, and the cunningly misnamed 2010 Citizens United that swamped Voters with the great secretive wealth of PACS - Political Action Committees.

RK Cradit — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: RK Cradit I am writing to express my opposition to Proposed Rule S7-2026-15 which would allow companies to elect semiannual reporting, as opposed to the currently required quarterly reporting requirement. It is my assertion that quarterly reporting provides valuable information for individual investors like me when considering investment decisions. It is my hope that quarterly reporting continues to be the requirement.

Robert Barnier — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Barnier I am against this proposed change as it foes not make sense as the current rull has not hindered the growth of the markets to unprecedented levels. There is no reason to change. Quarterly reports allow the public to stay informed. An extra 3 months to see what is happening in a company or sector could be disasterous .

Robert McClure Consulting Biologist - independent — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert McClure I urge the SEC to NOT approve this proposal as it is extremely important to the public that the transparency afforded by quarterly reporting be maintained. Without quarterly reporting, it will be much less clear to the public investment community and to those financial institutions representing that community what the activities of these companies is and allow them to respond to those activities. In order to provide fair opportunities, through transparency, quarterly reporting should remain mandatory.

Rochelle Chase — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rochelle Chase No flexibility should be given to publicly traded companies. They have the resources to be able to file and have been, so far. If they can't meet the demand, maybe they shouldn't be in business. A lot of the working class money is wrapped up in retirement investments. We don't want another Enron, right? I worry about the validity of this proposal and whose pockets are getting lined. Again, accountability, is at stake here and we should be demanding more as stakeholders not less.

Russell Chase — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Russell Chase As an individual stock investor if changed to a semiannual report it will be a lot harder to track all the information to analyze each stock. Keep it on a quarterly basis. Please do not change this.

Russell Lowell — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Russell Lowell This ruling, if passed, would continue in making these markets less and less fair for retail investors. Less visibility into revenue and cash burn, so companies can mismanage retail investor money, for longer, without telling anyone?! Less visibility into dilution and debt, which could be horrific for investors, and FAR less visibility into whether or not management is following up with their promises. This ruling would be an embarrassment to the American markets, and quite frankly, a joke.

Ruth Lynn Beasley — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ruth Lynn Beasley My husband and I are both retired and live on a combination of Social Security benefits and funds from our various investments. We watch the stock market very closely as it is critical that we know precisely how our stock portfolio is doing on a frequent basis. We do not have large investments so every dollar counts as we plan necessary home improvements, potential purchases, and trips to visit family. Quarterly reporting is essential for us, so please do not go to a semiannual basis.

---

sandra I doran — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: sandra I doran Having seen much shady shite in my data center/telecom days, quarterly reports aren't nearly enough. 2x yearly is a recipe for rampant corruption. Wages have not kept up with COL and inflation. Telecom salaries for the "average" worker have not increased since the late 90s. C level compensation is out of control, lawmakers making money on illegal insider trading is out of control. The 98% want a shot at a decent life, not one of corporate servitude, drowning in insurance costs, unattainable homeownership, mounting federal debt that will be up to the 98% taxpayers to door the bill, not millionaires and billionaires nor corporations who benefit from the shady shite. Enough is enough. Keep quarterly reports.

Sara Collins — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sara Collins Keep the reports quarterly!

Satyavrat Purohit None — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Satyavrat Purohit Please do not relax the rule to 6 months. It will never be for the better of investors especially small investors such as myself who already have less access to timely data. It can only encourage companies to hide poor performance leading to a greater likelihood of Enron like failures.

Saundra Holloway — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Saundra Holloway Please accept these comments in strong oppososition of the proposal to make quarterly financial reporting optional for public companies. Even as someone who does not have the financial means to invest in the stock market, I believe this change directly undermines the public's ability to hold corporations accountable. Corporate actions impact everyday workers, local communities, and the broader economic stability of our country—not just wealthy investors. Requiring companies to report their financials only twice a year instead of every three months creates a dangerous six-month window of darkness. This extended period makes it significantly easier for corporate mismanagement, financial instability, or outright deceptive practices to be hidden from public view, independent auditors, and journalists. When corporate scams or failures finally come to light after months of being concealed, it is the ordinary working-class people who lose their jobs and livelihoods while executives cash out. The SEC should be championing greater transparency and protection for the public, not reducing corporate oversight to save companies a compliance fee. I urge the Commission to reject Proposal S7-2026-15 and maintain the mandatory quarterly reporting framework. Subnitted for the public record, Saundra Holloway

---

scott richardson none - private investor — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: scott richardson Dear SEC, ALthough I undersand the arguemnts for less frequent reporting, the need for investor transparency and information as the owner's of public companies far out weighs any burden on these companies. Their complaionce and accounting will only get easier with the added help of AI. Short term thinking is a decision of leadership, regardless of how informed they have to keep their owners. Please do not reduce the frequency or amount of informaiton we get as investors, it is vital to us and it makes the US market the most invetable in the world. Taking away information will put us closer to the information wall created in places like China, which to me, make it uninvestable. Thank you, Scot RIchardson

---

sean kim Physician — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: sean kim More information and transparency benefits individual investors ,and limit fraud and surprises in the market. In the age of A.I, more information is better than opaqueness into investments that we depend our retirement on.

Sheppard Gibson — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sheppard Gibson Ending the requirement for quarterly reporting is a self-evidently horrible idea. Offering less accountability to corporations will continue, and increase, the undue economic and political power these companies hold. Keep quarterly reporting!

Sophia Badillo Senior HR Business Partner — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sophia Badillo Hello, I oppose the proposed amendments that would allow public companies to replace quarterly reporting with semi-annual reporting. I submit this comment as an individual investor. Public companies have access to public capital. Regular public reporting is part of that bargain. All financial markets rely on timely information. Individual investors rely on quarterly reports because we do not have the same access to information available to institutional investors. If required reporting becomes less frequent, the information gap between ordinary investors and larger market participants will widen. A six-month reporting cycle is too long in modern markets. Investors should not have to wait half a year for financial statements from a public company. A company that seeks public capital should be prepared to report to the public on a quarterly basis. Quarterly reporting supports investor protection, market discipline and sound corporate governance. The public markets need more transparency, not less. I respectfully urge the Commission to not adopt the proposed semi-annual reporting framework. Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this proposal. Thank you, Sophia Badillo

---

Sounak Das — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sounak Das A majority of Americans have wide exposure to publicly-traded companies via their retirement portfolios. We deserve some level of accountability regarding the health and finances of our publically traded companies. We understand that this poses some burden on publically traded companies but it is not a burden without the potential upside of public, democratized funding; nor has it been a burden that stops companies from going public (see: all of the current IPOs, which are seeking to tap into that public money). If it were not economical and capital-producing, it wouldn't be done. I thoroughly reject the statement "Ultimately, this flexibility might reduce some of the burdens of being a public company and potentially influence a company’s decision to become or remain public." - we see evidence against this with the sheer volume of IPOs that we have historically and continue to see.

Stephen Byrd FinTech — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Byrd Do NOT do this. Changing reporting to semi-annually is not the way to go. The people (not corporations) need more help! Change requirements for reporting, but make it monthly or weekly, or daily. Hell, make it hourly. They're already tracking it, we already have real time tracking for money movement, we should be able to have real time tracking for this.

Stephen Teixeira — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Teixeira As an individual investor who has benefitted from the SEC's Regulation FD and its requirements, the proposed changes to company disclosure to allow semi-annual reporting by companies represents a complete 180-degree turn toward obfuscation. One of the beauties of the American markets is the ability for an individual to follow their own vision for their portfolio, building for themselves a tool that addresses their needs and goals. Indispensable to that vision is the 10-Q. In an era of access-at-a-cost, the one tool that levels the playing field for the individual investor is the quarterly report, ensuring that all who invest have equal access to the material information. In short, the 10-Q is the most important tool for democratizing access to the information that moves markets and impacts the individual investor. Data from the UK's moves to less-frequent reporting show that reduced reporting did not drive corporate investment or long-term focus; in fact data shows that the factors impacting a company's focus on short-term vs. long-term to reside completely within the company - most typically executive compensation - rather than external factors like reporting requirements and schedules.

Susan H Weller N/A — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan H Weller Comments attached Quarterly reports are vital to keep companies actions transparent. Corporate profits have soared in the past few years they have paid outrageous bonuses to their CEOs, board of trustees and lobbyists. As an investor I demand better accountability and transparency to maintain honesty in our companies which are publicly traded.

Tamara Cornett Personal Investor — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tamara Cornett Greetings, I respectfully disagree with allowing companies to only report semi-annually. I depend on quarterly reporting to make financial decisions and so does my broker and other friends who invest their hard earned savings. I employ you to do right by all the millions of people who depend on the money from their investments to pay their bills and be financially secure and not succumb to any business or politically pressure to move to semi-annually reporting! I am counting on you to protect the investors and in my opinion feel this would move people away from investing in companies and stock. I personally will consider other forms of investment if quarterly reporting is no longer required. Thank you for your careful consideration and support of the people who invest, Tamara

---

Tammy Fehrer — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tammy Fehrer In an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, quarterly reports should remain the standard. Taking reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed.

Tammy Miller — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tammy Miller Please don’t stop quarterly reporting for banking institutions. They need to be held accountable for the safety of the public.

Taylor D Hanna the motley fool community — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Taylor D Hanna I want more frequent reporting from my investments' boards of directors rather than fewer reports. Quarterly reports are too infrequent. Given that my investments are in Stocks and Bonds of large corporations and US government instruments, I'd like to have reports of all actions that affect the future value of my positions.

Thomas A. Andreano — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas A. Andreano Please retain quarterly reporting. As an individual investor, it is the only means of following the financial health of public companies the we, as individual investors, own a part of. Let's keep analytical information available. Changing the current system will cause market unrest, as it portends to a lack of transparency. We want to be able to check on the health of the companies that we own. Kind Regards Tom Andreano

---

Thomas J Kerchner Small investor — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas J Kerchner As a small investor I depend on having information that is available in a timely, transparent, and up to date manner, therefor I am opposed to doing away with quarterly reporting by the companies which I am supporting with my hard earned money...

Tom Lagona — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tom Lagona I am against this propised change. Retail investors, and the public in general, should be getting MORE visibility into markets and companies on a more regular basis. Delaying and slowing down the flow of information will make it harder to make timely, informed, decisions. With how advanced we are, technology-wise, and with AI models becoming more reliable and accurate, I see no reason for this proposed change. Companies can easily get out this information in a timely manner and should be required to do so to keep as much transparency as possible within our markets.

Tom Taylor retired — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tom Taylor Reduced information delivery sounds like an attempt to increase the number of uninformed, to establish an opportunity for enactment of changes without input or response from share holders ie to close the closet door and enjoy more secrecy. A rubber band effect like traffic on a freeway will be the result which causes far greater alarm (volatility)when delayed realization takes place

---

Tristan Henderson — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tristan Henderson Bi-annual reporting instead of quarterly is a terrible idea. I am invested in the US markets. As a private investor, (or quite frankly, any investor), quarterly reporting offers insights into a business' viability and performance that bi-annual reporting simply won't deliver. It will keep investors of all types in the dark. Tragically bad idea. Keep quarterly reporting and lets keep things as transparent as possible.

Valarie Cressman — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Valarie Cressman Please protect investors rights to know what they are investing in. Individual investors deserve more information not less. This is fair and healthy for the economy and our country. As an investor, I am in complete opposition to semi annual reporting.

Valerie Green Motley Fool — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Valerie Green Semi annual reporting is NOT acceptable, with AI the reports should be monthly

---

Vic Vince — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vic Vince This proposal will lead to: -Less investor insight -Less retail engagement -Less accountability for public companies -Less transparency into company performance -Less visibility into debt, dilution, cash burn, and operational progress -Less ability for investors to make informed decisions I strongly oppose the proposed amendments that would allow public companies to move from quarterly reporting to semiannual reporting. Public companies receive the benefit of access to public capital markets. In exchange, investors should receive regular, standardized, and timely information about the companies they own. Quarterly reporting is one of the few tools that allows both retail and institutional investors to evaluate company performance on a consistent basis. Reducing required interim reporting from quarterly to semiannual would create longer periods where investors are left without updated financial information. This is especially harmful for retail investors, who do not have the same access to management, private channels, analysts, or institutional research as large market participants. Less frequent reporting would reduce visibility into important matters such as revenue trends, cash burn, debt levels, dilution, working capital, risk factors, and whether management is following through on prior statements and guidance. These are not minor details. They are core pieces of information investors need in order to make informed decisions. The proposal suggests that companies could choose the reporting frequency that best serves the company and its investors. I believe this creates the wrong incentive. A company may prefer less frequent reporting because it reduces scrutiny, reduces administrative burden, or gives management more time before having to disclose poor performance. That does not necessarily serve investors. Investors benefit from more transparency, not less. In modern markets, where information moves instantly and technology has made reporting and analysis easier than ever, reducing reporting frequency feels like a step backward. If anything, regulators should be encouraging greater transparency, better disclosure, and more frequent access to standardized information. Semiannual reporting would not create a fairer market. It would widen the information gap between companies and investors, and between institutional investors and retail investors. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission not to adopt this proposal. Public companies should continue to provide quarterly reports so investors can make informed decisions based on timely, comparable, and legally filed information.

Vickie N/A — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vickie It is the unconscionable that a federal agency which is supposed to be in the interest of citizens would reduce oversight of business' gains and losses which are tied to the financial stability of investors and especially retirees. I submit that semi-annual reporting be voted down and not implemented for the greater good of American citizens.

Victoria A Glickman Wife, Mother, Grandmother. Sister, Aunt, and Designer — Jun 29, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Victoria A Glickman Please keep disclosures quarterly!

Virginia Blanton Professor/University of Missouri-Kansas City — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Virginia Blanton Keep reporting quarterly, please! We need to know about gains/losses.

Virginia Hawn — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Virginia Hawn Keep all the billion and trillion dollar companies and smaller businesses accountable!!!!! If this goes what next!!

Virginia Selby Re tired legal assistant — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Virginia Selby These are usually prepared by an underling anyhow. There is way too much corruption in the world all ready - don't make it worse by not making them accountable on a quarterly basis.

Warren L Caulton Retired - Software Developer — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Warren L Caulton Please retain the quarterly filings. The market is more volatile, and the opportunity for trends to be missed grows when less data is collected. More transparency is better.

William Anderson Retired — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Anderson Submit Comments on S7-2026-15 This legislation should not be passed. It does not favor keeping individual investors properly informed.

Zubair Syed — Jun 29, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Zubair Syed i believe less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it.

A. Brown Mom of 2 and investor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A. Brown The last thing America needs is less regulation of the stock market. Small time investors who rely most on investment income due to retirement etc in order to survive and support their families are the ones who will be hardest hit by this change. It is critical that earnings reporting remain quarterly. Sincerely, A. Brown. mom and investor, NJ

Adenia Wockenfuss Retired Real Estate Broker — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adenia Wockenfuss I feel that reporting should continue four times per year. Businesses are satisfied with the reporting. Only providing reports twice a year is just too long without the information

---

Aileen Curfman — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aileen Curfman, Individual Investor To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I strongly urge you to reject Rule S7-2026-15. This rule would be harmful for investors. With many investments, even quarterly reports are barely enough to follow changes that affect my investment decisions. Semiannual reporting would deprive me of more up-to-date information that makes it possible for me to fund my retirement wisely. This is particularly true for smaller and less well-known companies, which are often more volatile. The tendency for individual investors like me would be to stick to larger companies, discouraging the growth of smaller companies and undermining the free enterprise system which has been the basis of this nation's success. Companies are complaining that the quarterly reports create too much work. With the current automated accounting systems, the reports are designed in advance, and pulling new reports four times a year instead of twice a year adds very little work. The information in those reports is valuable to the company as well as to the investors, as it guides (or should guide) the company's financial decision making process. In short, semiannual reporting would benefit no one except for the few insiders who have first hand knowledge of a company's financial performance. It's bad for investors, bad for the economy, and it contradicts the principles of full disclosure and fairness in the marketplace. Please reject Rule S7-2026-15 and do not adopt it.

Al Werner Motley Fool community — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Al Werner I'm commenting in the hopes that there is more transparency rather than less. Individual investors as well as institutional can only benefit from more information. The publicly held companies it seems would be less inclined to take short cuts and pursue detrimental actions if they knew they were being held accountable, which is only a good thing in the long term. Thank you for your time, Al Werner

---

Alan Kernc — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Kernc Keep quarterly reporting. Six months is way to long to keep silent.

Albert Tolbert Individual investor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Albert Tolbert Please keep the reporting rules as they are now. More frequent reporting is in the best interest of us average investors.

Alethea Schroen — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alethea Schroen We deserve MORE transparency, not less. Our hard earned dollars are NOT being protected by this move....it is just another way our money can be stolen. We need laws for protecting the people.

Alicia Suso The Motley Fool Community — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alicia Suso WE MUST KNOW. WE MUST NOT BE IN THE DARK. WE CANNOT TRUST THE UNKNOWN. WE WILL LOOSE FAITH IN ALL INVESTING!!!!!! PEOPLE STEAL, PEOPLE LIE, COMPANIES STEAL, COMPANIES LIE. WHY ARE THEY TRING TO HIDE ANYTHING?????? MANIPULATING DATA 2x A YEAR IS SO MUCH EASIER TO DO!!!!!! WOULD YOU WANT TO KNOW ONLY 2 TIMES A YEAR ABOUT ALL YOUR HARD EARNED MONEY???????? WOULD YOU INVEST MONEY WITH ANYONE WHO DIDN'T CALL YOU MORE THAN 2x IN A YEAR??????? WHAT PURPOSE COULD LESS TRANSPARENCY BE FOR…. HMMMM LET ME THINK….OH! SO NOBODY WATCHES WHAT YOU DO!!!!!!!!!!

Amy Stenoien — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amy Stenoien I am writing as an individual investor who believes regular corporate financial reporting is an important part of maintaining fair, efficient, and transparent capital markets. While I understand the desire to reduce unnecessary regulatory burdens on public companies, I am concerned that reducing the frequency of required financial reporting could make it more difficult for investors to identify emerging risks and assess company performance in a timely manner. For many individual investors, quarterly reports provide one of the few standardized, comparable sources of financial information. Less frequent reporting could also increase information gaps between company insiders, large institutional investors with extensive research resources, and ordinary investors who rely primarily on public disclosures. Markets function best when all participants have access to timely and reliable information. Even more critically is the potential impact on financial sector stability. Longer periods between required disclosures is likely to increase uncertainty, potentially contributing to larger price swings when significant information is finally released. While less frequent reporting would not necessarily lead to fraud, timely disclosure can help investors identify problems earlier and strengthen accountability. I encourage the SEC to carefully balance the goal of reducing compliance costs with its core mission of protecting investors, maintaining fair and orderly markets, and promoting capital formation. Transparency is one of the foundations of investor confidence, and any changes to reporting requirements should preserve that principle.

Anne Fletcher — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne Fletcher Public companies should continue to be required to submit quarterly reports. More frequent reporting protects the interests of small scale investors- ie the middle class. Plus, the expenses for filing reports when companies are already keeping financial records and reporting to their board are extremely modest. Changing to semi annual reports could increase fraud, decrease transparency, and overall funnel money away from the middle class to corporate insiders. Quarterly reports help support the American Dream.

Anne Zavadil — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne Zavadil Keep Quarterly Reporting. Changing it between 1955 to 1970 didn't work. It certainly won't work now with the existing corruption. All investors need the quarterlies to make data supported decisions.

Anonymous — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Please maintain the quarterly reporting standards. We are already struggling and financially stressed. Losing a third of our savings is not acceptable. Countries with quarterly reports have greater returns, semiannual reports failed in the US. Why would we bring that back? Thank you for your consideration.

Anonymous — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous The SEC must preserve quarterly reporting. One of the pillars of creating SEC after the stock market crash of 1929 was to protect investors. Eliminating quarterly reporting is ludicrous, as it does the very opposite of that. I will be watching the results of this vote very carefully.

Anonymous — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Do not allow this to pass.

Anonymous Retired — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Our retirement account is very important to us, we need to keep track of it so that we don't over draw from it. Waiting six months between reports is too long!!

Barbara Burke retired, small individual investor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Burke I am writing as an individual investor to object to the Commission’s proposal to allow public companies to transition from quarterly reporting to semiannual reporting. Corporate insiders, executives, and institutional partners will possess continuous, real-time knowledge of a company’s operational and financial health. Allowing insiders to possess material, non-public information for half a year before mandatory public disclosure invites severe information asymmetry and increases the risk of undetected insider trading at the expense of retail investors. The voluntary, fragmented nature of this proposal will create an inconsistent disclosure landscape, making it difficult for everyday market participants to accurately evaluate equities on equal footing. Shifting to semiannual reporting offers relatively minor annual compliance savings for corporations. Sacrificing market transparency, investor confidence, and fair play for a negligible boost to corporate cost-cutting compromises the SEC's core mandate of protecting investors. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal and maintain mandatory quarterly reporting to ensure that the public markets remain transparent, fair, and equitable for all participants—not just corporate insiders.

---

brenda concerned stakeholder — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: brenda NO!!!!!!

Brian Popp — Jun 28, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Popp I feel the more information I have on a company the better when considering stock purchases. I have not been investing very long but long enough to know timely information is very important. I do have a membership with Motley Fool investing, Schwab and Robinhood. All contribute a lot of investing knowledge, and all suggest more is better. Please do not limit the information available to me

---

C Brad Robertson — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C Brad Robertson Having less knowledge isn't helpful in today's market. While I'm all for eliminating forward guidance, all the other data is crucial to my investing decisions.

C. L. Sexton — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C. L. Sexton Comments attached.

Carolyn Warren — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carolyn Warren I really do believe in this day and age, that companies should be reporting regularly to their shareholders. An extended period between reports would give more time for rumours to take hold, mistakes to be covered up and may lead to more volatility in the markets.

Catherine Barista — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine There's enough distortion of stocks with this current administration that letting the reigns looser is only going to lead to MORE CORRUPTION ON THE BACKS OF ALL THOSE NEEDING THEIR RETIREMENTS TO AFFORD LIVING. When something negative happens to a company and everyone other than insiders need to wait 6 months to hear about it while their stock actually plummets, as insiders get the scoop and sell off their shares multiplying that loss... only the wealthy will survive this. Our economy is already tanking under this corrupt administration. Keep reporting quarterly, for EVERYONE'S benefit.

Cecilia Cheng — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cecilia Cheng Dear SEC, I am writing to express rejection at the notion reduced visibility of financial reporting is an improvement. Please reject proposed rule S7-2026-15. Cecilia Cheng

---

Charles Gaiennie — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Gaiennie As a business owner, I require my managers to report to me quarterly on the business's finances. As a stockholder, I expect to receive the same. Less transparency increases uncertainty. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. I believe that public companies should continue to report four times a year.

Charles Owen Retired — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Owen Need more transparency, not less. Trust in government policies and actions is already badly waning!

Charlie Wright — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charlie Wright I manage my own investments and depend on regular quarterly reporting to stay informed. I am not wealthy enough to have any special access to the management of companies I invest in and so I rely on those quarterly reports. I also believe that fewer reports will produce less transparency and greater opportunity for corporate management to go off the rails of good governance.

Cheryl Boggs Savage — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Boggs Savage Europe has semiannual reporting, as is reported to be being proposed here, by the US Securities and Exchange Commission. However, Europe's public company FinRept is "Principles Based,"" and their countries' leadership is far more participatively involved and invested in regulatory oversight of their financial markets. (And far less susceptible to their political favoritism being bought and paid for than ours is, by way of our fast and loose campaign finance permissiveness - we've basically LEGALIZED bribing our pols!) US Accounting is "Rules Based," with millions of them awarding Special Treatment allowances which allow the DEPARTURE FROM FOUNDATIONAL ACCOUNTING PRINCIPLES for certain transactions and industries. Again: millions of them! Quarterly reporting is therefore crucial in our case. As is far MORE regulatory oversight than our government is presently interested in, apparently. Therefore I view the SEC's reported present endeavor to undertake a reduction from 4 financial statement filings (3 forms 10-Q, for companies' quarters 1-3, and then their annual 10-K) to 2 as an imminent threat to the stability of our financial markets.

Chet Carey Individual Investor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chet Carey Please retain quarterly 10-Q filings for publicly traded securities - please do not change Federal policy to allow only semi annual SEC filings by publicly traded companies - quarterly SEC filings supply average investors with more TIMELY information on which they can make more prudent investing decisions. Thank you

---

Christine Venezia — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Venezia Do not do this. The American public has already been robbed by the Trump administration.

Christopher Edmundson — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Edmundson As an individual investor with holdings across numerous public companies, I am strongly opposed to replacing quarterly reporting with a semi-annual schedule. My investment strategy relies entirely on timely, transparent, and regular data to conduct thorough research, assess risk, and make informed portfolio decisions. Reducing the frequency of financial disclosures creates significant blind spots for retail investors. Shifting to a six-month reporting cycle drastically increases the gap between corporate insiders and everyday shareholders, leaving individual investors at a distinct disadvantage. A half-year is an eternity in today's fast-paced market. Waiting six months to learn about shifting material risks, capital allocation changes, or operational downturns severely hinders my ability to protect and manage my capital. For me, consistent and frequent transparency is a non-negotiable prerequisite for owning public equities. Without the regular cadence of quarterly reports, I cannot confidently maintain my positions or continue investing in public markets. I urge regulatory bodies and corporate boards to maintain the current quarterly standard to protect retail investor confidence and market integrity. Sincerely, Christopher Edmundson

---

Christopher Haag — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Haag Business performance is a significant anchor is determining the value of a business. Over time business performance is not linear, so routine reporting on a quarterly basis allows individual investors to properly understand business trajectory for companies they are invested in The SEC has a responsibility to protect the interests of individual investors who invest their retirement savings into these companies and NOT to cater to the lobbying interests of various corporations. Effective companies are able to automate part of this reporting process anyhow, so any complaint of "burden" for quarterly reporting is bogus.

Cindy Edwards Citizen — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cindy Edwards Please keep quarterly reporting. There's enough that goes on behind the public's back and we find out too late. Keep the actions of companies in the sunshine so they will learn to have both to hide!

Collette J. — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Collette J. This proposal is a terrible idea, and hurts American investors. Retail investors need more reporting and more transparency from the companies they invest in, not less.

Concerned citizen None — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Concerned citizen This rule would allow companies to go dark for 6 months. I oppose this rule on behalf of myself

---

Dan Steavenson Maintenance Planner W. L. Gore & Associates — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan Steavenson Quarterly reporting needs to stay as the minimum requirement. I don't see how the newly proposed rule does anything to help protect investors which is what the SEC is there to do. There will be negligible cost savings for the company but they get the benefit of hiding their books for 6 months. To much can change in that amount of time, which is why quarterly was set as the original standard. Please don't gamble on our retirements by letting struggling companies hide their books.

Daniel Thompson Engineering Manager — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Thompson Individual investors deserve more information, not less

---

Danielle Sewer — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Danielle Sewer The consumer deserves transparency from companies we buy from.

David Raidman — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Raidman I do not support this proposal.

David Torrey — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Torrey At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Please continue to require publicly traded companies to report their financials on a quarterly basis. I understand why companies may want this. As an investor, I think this is a bad idea. Don't do it!

David Warren — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Warren File No. S7-2026-15 I oppose the 6 mo. blackout reporting period. This constitutes double jeopardy for individual investors 1. Personal monitoring of market activity 2. Does not allow the invested individual to move portfolios or make safer accounting investments

---

Deb Bacon — Jun 28, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-23 From: Deb Bacon Public companies have reported their financial results every three months for over half a century. Please DON'T allow public companies to not release their financial results for six months at a time. This would be disastrous for all investors!

Debra Alzner, BA, Economics, Enterprise Data Architect — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Debra Alzner As an individual investor, I am opposed to reporting requirements changing from quarterly to semi-annually. In this day and age, information should be available in a more timely, not less timely manner. Data analytics are pervasive throughout companies. As an individual whose profession is in data analytics, it is unconscionable to me that we would provide people with less timely information when corporate executives are always clamoring for quicker access to information. Insiders already have an advantage and it is not appropriate for individual investors to be at even more of a disadvantage information wise by moving public reporting from quarterly to semi-annually. Companies still have to keep their General Ledger software up to date and they still have to brief their boards. So, the information is available and to keep the markets fair this information needs to be provided to ordinary investors including 401K, 403b, 457, IRA, 529, and other ordinary investors! Instead of making the information less timely, the SEC should be investigating how information can be made available even more timely than it already is. Technology exists for a reason. Leverage it!

Debra Martel — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Debra Martel Please keep reporting on quarterly earnings. Every investor, including the retail investor, should have access to quarterly reporting, which is key to making necessary financial decisions for current and future investments in their businesses, or for their personal portfolios. Reporting quarterly serves us all. Thank you, Debra Martel Retail Investor Newburyport Ma

---

Deena Ackerman — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deena Ackerman Quarterly reporting is a terrible idea. I rely on those reports to make sure my taxes are paid and my end of year planning is in order. It is not reasonable for me to place so much blind trust in my broker. I am small potatoes, and not where firms and brokers will focus their energy. A half-yearly "check-in" with me takes away one of my few planning tools. In this world where people like me must accumulate our own retirement security (largely through defined contributions and tax preferred savings vehicles), it is unfair and exploitative to leave us blindly trusting a firm and its (revolving) staff. I have always paid any tax on my investments out of current income to limit cash in the accounts and enforce additional savings. Will there simply be funds sent to IRS on my behalf without my having a chance to be part of that conversation? Will I have to start keeping cash in my accounts to avoid a quarterly sell-off (perhaps at the wrong time) because there will be no reporting to me? I am unsure how this will work without usurping some of my control over my own funds. Thank you for your attention. Please remember your regulatory role is ultimately to protect ordinary Americans.

Denise Beason Social Worker — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Denise Beason Denise Beason, social worker Quarterly reporting keeps us informed and making best decisions for ourselves as well as keeping accountability of what is happening. My bank gives me monthly statements, and I can check anytime what is going on with my money. Only corruption wants to keep things hidden for 6 months!

Denise Cathlina Wildman — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Denise Cathlina Wildman I will NOT invest in a company that only does semi-annual reports. We live in a global economy that is often chaotic and changes quickly. Plus, companies are synergistic. What one does can quickly affect others. Example: A1 chips. Additionally leadership and their poor decisions in corporations can quickly destroy a company. Like leadership did to JCPenney. More fraud will take place and be harder to track. I support quarterly reporting to protect investors.

Dennis Sheline member — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Sheline I believe companies should report at least every quarter. I also believe it could be sooner. As an investor I need to know what the company has done and what it could be doing. why would I invest in something that I no nothing about. I already did that once and lost my shirt. No No do not extend the reporting periods. Thank you

---

Derek Furbank — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Derek Furbank In my opinion the number of public-company reports should remain at four times a year. From both a corporate and investor standpoint, more information on business performance, finances and economic trends is better than less information. Companies need to review the all-around status of their business regularly so that both adverse and beneficial events can be addressed in a timely manner. Investors need the same information so that they can invest their savings confidently and potentially reduce any surprises resulting in greater volatility and loss of stock value. Only two corporate reporting periods per year would make this much harder.

Diana Frazier Miller — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diana Frazier Miller I oppose this rule change. Many decades ago I was a corporate and securities lawyer. The standard of securities law was that investors should receive all relevant information to make informed decisions. It does not serve investors to make relevant information less readily available. The SEC should protect investors, not focus on making things easier for companies.

Diane Katlic Investor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diane Katlic This is a horrible idea which will allow a basis for further distrust of our government's failure to protect individual investors. The SEC is supposed to be OUR watchdog not a supporter of non transparency!!!!

Dixie Arnold — Jun 28, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dixie Arnold I am concerned about what I'm hearing about company reporting moving to semi annual instead of quarterly. Keeping reporting quarterly keeps companies honest and transparent, in an environment where we are seeing more and more corruption we need to keep corporations accountable. Please keep reporting requirements quarterly.

Drew Davis — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Drew Davis This is completely wrong-headed. Less transparency doesn't alleviate uncertainty, it increases it. In a world of AI, the cost of quarterly reports compared to semi-annual reports is negligible.

E. Henry — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: E. Henry I am opposed to the rules change from quarterly reporting to semi-annual reporting. Transparency is critical to both large and small investors, but this rule change would especially affect small investors who lack other resources by which to judge the health of a particular company.

Ed Albano — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ed Albano Investors need constant and frequent information.

Ed Isenberg Owner, Shared Investments LLC — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ed Isenberg You want to reduce the number of public-company reports? Frankly, I'm against it. Keep them as they are.

Elbert Gesink — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elbert Gesink Keep reporting quarterly financial reports!!

Elizabeth D Dolan — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth D Dolan As an owner of corporate stocks, I believe this change will be to the detriment of investors by denying us access to timely information. Eliminating the requirement of quarterly reporting would only serve to extend further opportunities for the corruption inherent in trading on privileged information.

Ellen Buermeyer — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ellen Buermeyer Keep investors & the public informed by keeping mandatory quarterly reporting!

Eugene Blue None — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eugene Blue Leave it alone. Don't change anything.

Frank J. Ginther — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Frank J. Ginther Most of my investing is done through an investment club. We frequently examine small companies. The quarterly reports are very important to the members.

Frank Keller — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Frank Keller Please keep quarterly reporting.

G. L. Gratton Retired — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: G. L. Gratton Definitely continue to require quarterly reporting. With corporate insiders, wealthy investors, and government personnel acting on insider, confidential information with little or no penalties, and governmental actions taken to manipulate the stock market, regular investors must at least continue to get the benefit of quarterly reporting.

Gail Cheek The Motley Fool Community — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gail Cheek I am writing to express my opposition to the proposed change to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. In my opinion, this is a mistake. At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Please do not allow companies to reduce transparent reporting to investors like myself.

Gerard A Hauser Jr Shareholder — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gerard A Hauser Jr After much research and consideration, I'm writing to let you know that I'm a U.S. citizen and opposed to this suggested change in regulation.

Greg Miller Retail Investor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Greg Miller I have serious concerns regarding reducing the reporting requirements. One of the strengths of the current investment environment is the level of transparency for all investors which is supported by the quarterly reporting requirement. There is little, if any reason, to reduce the requirement. I hear cost reduction and such but given the heavy encroachment of AI into reporting the cost will come down. Possibly even allowing more frequent and deeper reporting and analysis by investors of all levels. There are too many examples of corporations fudging numbers and not being straight on their results. The continued pressure on CEOs to deliver on stock price versus corporate performance will cause more concern on data. The currency of data for investors is key, especially in an environment of meme investors and AI driven modeling. Moving to less frequent reporting only increase investment risk. Please do not reduce the current reporting requirement.

Greg Wolf None — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Greg Wolf WE NEED TO KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING !!! Quarterly reporting is important to ALL investors !! Companies Need to be on a Short Leash !! Consumers/ Investors will Not get fair trades otherwise. KEEP REPORTING QUARTERLY !!!

H. Sue — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: H. Sue I am in favor of continued quarterly reporting. The reasons why we have moved to quarterly reporting remain unchanged in my opinion, Thank you.

Harry Yates The Motley Fool Community — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Harry Yates Please DO NOT adapt the proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that's a mistake! As stockholders of a company we have part ownership of that company. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Ignaz Gyulai — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ignaz Gyulai Reducing the reporting required of publicly traded companies is just plain Bad. The SEC exists to protect the public interest, not be an enabler of corporate confidentiality at the taxpayers expense. The requirements of public reporting for public trading are longstanding, beneficial to the public, and force disclosure by corporate entities to their stockholders. Reducing the requirements of quarterly reporting is such a bad idea that it defies belief. Only an administration fully colluding with the worst intentions of corporate America could have dreamt this up. You work for the people , not corporations - Do your damn job!

Individual — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Individual As an individual, I oppose the proposed changes to Quarterly reporting. Quarterly reporting reduces information asymmetry. Mandatory quarterly disclosure helps ensure that material financial information reaches all investors on the same timely schedule, reducing the advantage held by corporate insiders and sophisticated market participants. Extending the interval between required reports would widen that information gap and increase the likelihood that security prices are influenced by selective disclosures, rumors, or proprietary alternative data available only to a limited number of investors. Quarterly reporting enables meaningful trend analysis and risk monitoring. As an individual investor, I rely on quarterly financial statements to monitor a company's operating performance and identify emerging risks. Four reporting periods each year provide a much clearer picture of trends than only two. Semiannual reporting may delay the identification of important changes in revenue, profitability, working capital, leverage, or cash flow until those developments have already had a significant impact on company value. Semiannual reporting would create a significant disclosure gap under the current U.S. regulatory framework. Supporters of this proposal often cite jurisdictions such as the United Kingdom, Australia, or the European Union, where many companies report semiannually. However, those jurisdictions generally operate under continuous disclosure regimes that require companies to promptly disclose all material information. The United States instead relies primarily on the specific reporting triggers contained in Form 8-K for disclosures between periodic reports. Simply extending the reporting interval to six months without adopting a comparable continuous disclosure framework would leave investors without timely access to material developments that do not trigger an 8-K filing. Important changes—such as deteriorating margins, declining sales trends, or worsening competitive conditions—could remain undisclosed for up to six months. This outcome would undermine investor protection and impair fair, orderly, and efficient markets. Quarterly reporting preserves comparability among companies. Because the proposal would allow companies to choose annually whether to report quarterly or semiannually, investors could face an inconsistent disclosure environment in which companies within the same industry report on different schedules. This would make it more difficult to compare financial performance, assess relative risks, and conduct meaningful fundamental analysis across competitors. Quarterly reporting supports informed investment decisions. Investors should have access to timely, comprehensive financial information when making decisions about buying, selling, or holding securities. Allowing companies to go as long as nine months between comprehensive financial reports would reduce transparency and make it more difficult for investors to evaluate a company's financial condition and operating performance. Quarterly reporting supports informed shareholder voting. Most public companies hold annual shareholder meetings during the spring. Under the current quarterly reporting system, first-quarter financial results are generally available before investors vote on director elections, executive compensation, auditor ratification, and shareholder proposals. Under a semiannual reporting system, many shareholders would instead be forced to cast these votes based on financial information that is already five or six months old, reducing the effectiveness of shareholder oversight. Quarterly reporting helps deter fraud and strengthens internal controls. More frequent reporting requires more frequent reconciliations, management reviews, audit committee oversight, and independent auditor review procedures. These recurring checkpoints increase the likelihood that accounting errors, internal control deficiencies, or fraudulent activities are identified and corrected sooner. Reducing the frequency of reporting could allow problems to remain undetected for longer periods. If the Commission's objective is to encourage companies to focus more on long-term performance rather than short-term earnings expectations, reducing historical financial reporting is not the appropriate solution. A more effective approach would be to discourage the widespread practice of issuing voluntary quarterly earnings guidance. Historical quarterly reports simply inform investors about what has already occurred. By contrast, quarterly earnings guidance encourages management to prioritize meeting short-term earnings targets, a practice that has been associated with earnings management, delayed research and development spending, end-of-quarter discounting, and other behaviors that may not serve shareholders' long-term interests. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to withdraw the proposed amendments and retain the existing quarterly reporting requirements under Form 10-Q. In my view, the available evidence does not support reducing reporting frequency, while the potential costs to investor protection, market transparency, price discovery, and market efficiency are significant. If the Commission wishes to encourage longer-term corporate decision-making, it should focus on policies addressing voluntary forward earnings guidance rather than reducing the frequency of historical financial reporting upon which investors depend.

J Fong — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: J Fong I highly object to the the elimination of quarterly filings with the S7-2026-15 filing. Quarterly filings can be difficult enough; transparency and information in a timely manner are essential.

Jacqueline Zhou — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jacqueline Zhou While I understand the argument that semiannual reporting reduces the incentives of company executives to focus on quarterly, short-term returns, semiannual reporting does not adequately address the fundamental problem that publicly traded companies are incentivized to look toward the next report, whether quarterly or semiannual. However, semiannual reporting only risks obfuscation of company activities and finances, and it reduces transparency regarding investments. The current attempt to reduce amount of information given to investors does not solve any fundamental problems and only reduces trust and increases confusion in the market.

James Dean Small Business Owner — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Dean To the Commission: I am writing to express my strong opposition to File No. S7-2026-15. As an individual investor managing a portfolio of both individual stocks and index funds, this proposal directly harms my ability to evaluate risk and allocate capital effectively. Cutting mandatory financial disclosures from quarterly to semiannual is a massive step backward for market transparency: A six-month data void is an eternity in modern markets. It leaves everyday investors completely in the dark while corporate insiders and institutional players leverage non-public data, eroding basic market fairness. To properly evaluate individual equities, I rely on timely, consistent quarter-over-quarter data to track operational execution, debt covenants, and shifting business fundamentals. Waiting half a year to spot corporate distress or operational drift is unacceptable. For my index holdings, reducing reporting frequency across a broad basket of underlying companies means prices will react violently to massive biannual data dumps rather than pricing in information incrementally. This artificial volatility undermines the stability individual investors rely on. The current quarterly framework ensures American markets remain the most liquid and trusted in the world. Reducing transparency only increases investor risk and raises the cost of capital. I urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the current Form 10-Q reporting requirements.

James Kleen — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Kleen I do not support the proposed rule change referenced in S7-2026-15. The potential for increased risk and fraud to investors substantially outweighs any benefits cited in support of extending the reporting frequency from quarterly to semi-annual (every six months). Reducing the frequency of required disclosures would weaken transparency and investor protections, which could ultimately harm market integrity and public confidence. I urge the Commission to retain the current quarterly reporting requirements.

James M. Collins — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James M. collins My name is Jim Collins. I retired in the fall of last year following thirty-eight years of public service. I sincerely hope that the SEC will NOT play games with the investments of the American people by modifying the quarterly reporting requirements that assure some level of transparency and accountability and help inform investment decisions. As a recent retiree, I've made my life course decisions based upon the knowledge that our investment system has appropriate transparency through mandated legal quarterly reporting that must be conducted under the authority of company executives. This reporting offers a level of accountability that contributes to my investment decisions. History has shown that lacking this reporting negatively impacts on the prosperity of the market for the majority of Americans. As a public servant for thirty-eight years, I consistently saved toward a retirement that will allow me to continue to live in comfort and provide for my family. The accountability of quarterly reports has played a significant role in my investment decisions. These reports help moderate the risk that is inherent in all investment decisions. Now, in my retirement years, that accountability becomes even more critical to maintain the investments I have made and support the lifestyle that I have earned. The only interests served by halving the reporting frequency are the interests of the corporate elite who are the ones whose actions lead to the need for these rules in the first place. It makes no sense to lessen that requirement. The lives and livelihoods of millions of investors are at stake. Transparency and accountability are critical to the protections of our public investments. DO NOT CHANGE THE QUARTERLY REPORTING REQUIREMENT.

James Maurer — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Maurer I think its a mistake also.

James Michael Mannion Independent Psychotherapist LCSW and Addictions Counselor CADC — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Michael Mannion I agree with The Motley Fool Co-founder David Gardner that reducing transparency increases uncertainty and the corresponding risk of bigger surprises engendering sharper reactions thus volatility spikes. Meanwhile arguments in favor of reducing requirements towards merely Semiannual Reporting, including cost reduction and easing the pressures toward short-termism are debatable at best and otherwise highly suspect as less information cannot creates better leaders, owners, nor even regulators. In fact, in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, perhaps we should be increasing the frequency of disclosure and current business leaders should find pride in figuring out how to implement this ahead of regulations rather than looking to hide behind so called "burdensome" oversight.

James Rosin — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Rosin Leave quarterly filings keep it fair. Keep it honest keep me informed.

Janice Lien — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Janice Lien you prefer we buy silver, gold or copper ? Quarterlies are essential - Investors have the right to know how company is managing. to cut back on information to ordinary investors, and select late June to announce this is patently unfair. going semiannual will lead to petitioning Congress. who does SEC think they work for ?

Jeannette Lin — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeannette Lin Quarterly Reportings were established to keep companies report legally & keep them legit after ENRON Fiasco. Keep it SO

Jeff Fleming — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeff Fleming I do not support this proposed change. The idea that giving me less information is better is insane. As an investor I need current and accurate information to make good investments. Things change very rapidly in today's world and it is only getting faster. This proposed change will weaken my ability to manage my investments in an effictive way. This rule should not pass.

Jeri Minford Individual investor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeri Minford Thank you for the opportunity to comment. My investing strategies depend on quarterly reports. To change that weakens my knowledge of markets and leads me to invest less. Keep the quarterlies!

Jesse Nobile Jesse Nobile — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jesse Nobile I have over 500k invested in the stock market. To me quarterly reporting makes the most sense and keeps me informed of what the companies I invest in are doing. I would be really at a loss without it. Please don't get rid of this important check and balance that keeps everyone safe.

Joan Keiser — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joan Keiser Keep . quarterly reporting for all companies big and small to keep transparency for the purpose of financial management of all funds. Unfair to small businesses and non profits which uphold a chunk of our economic stability in the US and keep many families from deterioration. I have worked in yhe non profit world as a social worker and families ate already struggling. Let us not make things worse. Let us things as a equsl level . if transoarency. Thsnk you, Joan Keiser LCSW in Mechanicsville VA

Joan M Most none — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joan M Most Please keep quarterly public company reporting. Thank you.

John Leo Farnan Retired Engineer — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Leo Farnan My retirement savings is all I have to live on for the rest of my life. Social Security will not cover my bills. With all of the "legal" insider trading going on by elected officials and their families and friends, this just seems to me to be a blatant free for all to open that window to include many other well connected individuals. And who stands to lose here? People like me, who made everything they had without lying, cheating or stealing. If this goes through and things go south, those resposible be remembered.

John McKeague — Jun 28, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John McKeague Keep company reporting transparent and reduce fraud.

Jolene Self Retail Trader — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jolene Self Earnings are important to me because it allows me to make better decisions on the stocks I trade. By changing the quarterly requirement, you take away current information about a business.

Jonathan McGlumphy — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jonathan McGlumphy I do not agree with reducing the number of annual financial reports from four to two. More transparency in publicly traded companies is a good thing for the entire investment community.

Jorge M Cortes Retired Accountant — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jorge M Cortes I am in disagreement with reducing the public reporting as it is imperative that public companies report to their owners as this keeps transparency. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Joseph Randall Lacey None — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joseph Randall Lacey I strongly oppose increasing the reporting time for public companies to six months. Shareholders are owners and NO owner of a business should only hear about their business every six months. There is already enough insider trading and market manipulation that most shareholders are at a disadvantage already. Please do not take away the quarterly reporting. All investors need the transparency of more frequent reporting.

Juhara Yusuf Ummu Amir — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Juhara Yusuf Welcome back and thank you

---

Karen Hogan — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Hogan Unfortunately, we have found that companies will take advantage and veer towards unscrupulous if left unsupervised. I wish it weren’t true, but since historically it has been true, I don’t believe less supervision is better. Please don’t do this.

Karen Kosoy — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Kosoy Date: 6/28/2026 Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission 100 F Street NE Washington, DC 20549-1090 Re: File No. S7-2026-15; Release No. 33-11414 – Semiannual Reporting Dear Secretary Countryman, I am writing as an individual investor to strongly oppose the proposal to allow public companies to switch from quarterly to semi-annual reporting. While reducing compliance costs is a worthy goal, eliminating mandatory quarterly disclosures will severely harm market transparency and retail investors. I urge the Commission to maintain the current quarterly framework for the following reasons: 1. Information Asymmetry: Retail investors rely on timely, mandated quarterly disclosures to remain on a level playing field with institutional investors who have direct access to corporate management. 2. Market Volatility: Waiting six months for financial data will disrupt smooth price discovery. Packing half a year of operational data into a single release will inevitably trigger massive, unpredictable swings in stock prices. 3. Adverse Selection: The companies most likely to opt out of quarterly reporting are underperforming or struggling entities looking to delay accountability and hide poor quarters from shareholders. 4. Insider Trading Risks: A six-month reporting gap creates dangerously prolonged windows where corporate insiders possess material, non-public information, increasing the risk of unfair trading advantages. For over 50 years, quarterly reporting has been the bedrock of trust in U.S. capital markets. Reducing visibility will not foster growth; it will only degrade investor confidence. Please withdraw this proposal. Sincerely, Karen Kosoy Ft. Pierce FL

Katherine Carpenter — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Katherine Carpenter American people deserve honest, accurate & TIMELY updates. Not covert operations of greedy political agendas

---

Kathleen Miller Registered Nurse — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathleen Miller Don’t change the quarterly reporting. I need that for keeping updated and making changes to my retirement savings. Medical charities need it to follow companies progress in developing life changing medicines, treatment, and therapies. Thank you for listening. Kathleen Miller

---

Kaylene Tesso Retired School Employee — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kaylene Tesso News article

---

Keep transparency, Quarterly report are necessary. Angie R Cook, 2025 Valley View Rd, West Columbia, SC 29173 — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Keep transparency, Quarterly report are necessary. Angie R Cook, 2025 Valley View Rd, West Columbia, SC 29173 Keep everything open so secret cannot be hidden, Quarterly reports are needed.

---

ken bates — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: ken bates Cutting required business reporting from four times a year to just twice a year—especially under the constraints of Regulation Fair Disclosure—would be a step backward for market transparency and investor protection. Quarterly reporting has long served as a critical mechanism for keeping markets informed, enabling investors to evaluate performance, identify risks, and respond to emerging trends in a timely manner. Reducing this cadence would create longer periods of uncertainty, during which companies could face significant operational or financial changes without any obligation to update the public. Reg FD already limits selective communication, which means companies cannot fill the gaps between formal reports with candid conversations or incremental disclosures to analysts. If reporting frequency is cut in half, the combination of fewer official updates and strict communication rules would leave investors with even less information. This would likely increase volatility, widen information asymmetries, and reduce the efficiency of price discovery. Semiannual reporting also risks encouraging more “lumpy,” overly polished disclosures. With fewer touchpoints, companies may feel pressure to bundle complex developments into large, highly curated reports that obscure short-term challenges or emerging risks. Quarterly reporting, by contrast, forces a more consistent rhythm of accountability and reduces the temptation to bury bad news. The proposal may promise reduced compliance costs, but those savings come at the expense of market clarity. Investors—especially retail investors—depend on frequent, standardized reporting to make informed decisions. Cutting that frequency undermines fairness, transparency, and the healthy functioning of U.S. capital markets.

Ken Kaleta — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ken Kaleta At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right?

Kimberly Parker — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kimberly Parker No reason to reduce requirements, other than to hide things.

Klaas van Rukkum — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Klaas van Rukkum This is not good for investors, this point of view only takes the company into consideration. Not the 'owners' of the shares.

Kris Rich Public Corporate Executive — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-26-18 From: Kris Rich Keep quarterly reporting!!! While I understand the long term limitations, it is outweighed by the short term transparency.

Krystina Melville Aerospace Technical Writer — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Krystina Melville Krystina Melville is a millenial aerospace technical writer that has served several government contractors, especially NASA, and has invested in several cryptocurrencies. She has served and earned everything she has and deserves a financial future that doesn't result in working until death.

Kunal Malhotra — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kunal Malhotra I write in opposition to the proposed amendments under File No. S7-2026-15, which would permit public companies to file semiannual reports on Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q. As an individual investor who actively monitors holdings across U.S. and international markets, I rely on quarterly disclosure as a primary tool for assessing company performance, risk, and management execution in near-real time. Moving to a six-month reporting cadence would materially widen the information gap between companies and retail investors, particularly during periods of rapid business change (e.g., earnings deterioration, leadership turnover, regulatory exposure) where a six-month lag could mean significant capital is allocated on stale information. The cost-savings rationale for this proposal does not, in my view, outweigh the disclosure cost to investors. For most reporting companies, the underlying financial close, internal controls, and audit processes operate continuously regardless of filing frequency - the incremental burden of packaging that information quarterly is comparatively small relative to the value quarterly transparency provides the market. I urge the Commission to retain mandatory quarterly reporting under Form 10-Q and decline to adopt the proposed semiannual alternative.

Kurt North — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kurt North Information being available for the investor is the only platform for gauging risk. The quarterly reports should be maintained. Business will only use any rule change to their benefit. Keep inventory security tool in place

---

Laura Zahn — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Zahn I have no sympathy for companies who feel it's too much work and too expensive to report four times a year rather than two. They've been doing this for decades and it served everyone well. It's about transparency and information. The change will make market more volatile and more reactive and less informed, none of which we need.

Laurie Villarreal — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laurie Villarreal Keep corporate financial reporting quarterly. Quarterly financial reporting according to GAAP standards keeps the integrity of our financial system and capital markets the envy of the world. Reducing this to twice a year is unacceptable to every sensible investors. This encourages "insider information" to become more valuable and to proliferate in the absence of regular quarterly reporting.

Lawrence A Hurlburt — Jun 28, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lawrence A Hurlburt SEC, I am in firm opposition to this change. In this era where information spreads so quickly, reducing the reporting period for companies to provide information to investors is counter to the interests of the American public. There are so many tools, such as AI, to help generate this information, it should not be a significant burden for companies to continue to provide quarterly reporting. When a company chooses to be publicly listed, they understand the reporting requirements. If they no longer wish to follow those requirements, they can pursue private financing to be taken private where there are no reporting requirements. No good can come from this - the next Enron is waiting to happen and this will only make it worse.

Layne Ivy, CEO, Fun & Done — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Layne Ivy I believe less communication is always a mistake. There is no such thing as too much understanding and this takes the burden off of companies to disseminate information in a timely manner and places the burden on investors to try and read between the lines with no clear communication. Please do not allow this.

Lesley Lefler None — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lesley Lefler Do not pass it. Take care of the American people and not the current Administration. If it's not broken, leave it alone.

Leslie D. Cunningham Vascular Surgeon, Retail Investor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leslie D. Cunningham The trial of bi-annual rather than quarterly reporting has been tried. And while it may benefit some companies to achieve more opacity in their operations, as an owner of company shares, regular quarterly reporting is the only way I, and others outside boardrooms and without direct industry connections have to see that my investment is being managed well. Reducing the reporting gives an upper hand to traders and inside information brokers who are always looking for ways to take advantage of those of us who are simply investing in the "Great American Enterprise" and trying to secure a future for ourselves and our families. I object to the move to bi-annual reporting as it will disadvantage the "everyman" (like me) who until now, has worked very hard to become a part of the market.

Leslie Figler — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leslie Figler As someone who is close to retirement, my future income is heavily dependent on financial returns. Cutting the reporting timeframe in half creates risk that is not needed and the impact on retired people is significant. Average people cannot afford this risk. Keep quarterly reporting.

Linda B Former Vanguard software developer — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda B I am currently retired now & must live on my investments. I cannot afford to wait 6 months to determine if I must change or reallocate my investments. 6 months is too long to wait for financial status of the companies I invest in. This is especially important with bonds investments that provide the interest that I live on! Please leave the reporting at quarterly! There’s a reason it was changed to quarterly in the first place! Now in the age of AI & internet, scams & other illegal activities can take place transparently & rapidly! Investors need more protection not less from unscrupulous companies & insider trading! This is a horrible idea intended to let companies commit fraud!

Linda Johns — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Johns Comments attatched!

Linda Koewler None — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Koewler Comments attached. (Do not change reporting schedule.)

Lois Mitchell Lois Mitchell — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lois Mitchell Quarterly reporting is an important and essential task. It keeps companies honest and the public informed. It's also important to those who have a financial stake in these companies so they have knowledge, thus more control or say, in how there investment is being managed. No secret spending. Sincerely, Lois A Mitchell

---

Lou Simons — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lou Simons Reduced reporting is NOT sensible policy!

Louis E Klar — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Louis E Klar The sole authorized purpose of every single government agency is to serve the American people And this proposed act perverts that.

Lydia Lewicki Retired — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lydia Lewicki Keep quarterly reports. Thank you

---

Lynn Kramer Retired Professional Engineer — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lynn Kramer Please do not change quarterly reporting to semiannually. I rely on my investments for my livelihood and the change to semiannual would create a long period without data to see how my investments are doing.

Malcolm Thomas I am part of the Motley Fool Community — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Malcolm Thomas I am writing to express my concern about the proposal to reduce corporate reporting from quarterly to semi-annually. I understand that the proposal has potential for some minor benefits but I see the reduction in information and frequency as being a potential significant loss to the investing community.

Manish Arya — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Manish Arya I truly feel that reducing the frequency of information sharing would make it harder for investors, especially individuals like me, to know how companies are doing. Going to a twice-yearly cycle would give even more power to institutional investors over individuals because the former have more access to non-public information. If you want to lessen the reporting burden on companies, simplifying the reporting the reporting burden would be better than reducing the frequency.

Marian Cosgrove — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marian Cosgrove Please do not change to time period for financials from public companies from 3 to 6 months. This gives more time for fraud to grow.

Mary Ann Hubbard — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Ann Hubbard Leave reports quarterly it will stop fraud and speculation.

Mary Harrison — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Harrison As a shareholder, I demand quarterly reporting. I have the right to know how the companies I invest in are growing, shrinking and managing. I worked for WorldCom prior to, during and after their bankruptcy. Every shareholder deserves truth and honesty in a timely manner.

Matthew Harlow — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew Harlow I am writing to express my strong opposition to the SEC's proposed rule, File No. S7-2026-15, which would replace quarterly Form 10-Q filings with semiannual Form 10-S filings. As a retail investor, I believe this change would severely harm market transparency, disadvantage individual investors, and compromise the core mission of the Commission to protect investors and maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets . Eliminating quarterly reporting will significantly widen the information gap between institutional insiders and ordinary retail investors. Wall Street firms possess the resources to conduct proprietary research and maintain direct access to corporate management. Retail investors, however, rely heavily on the regular, standardized disclosures provided by Form 10-Q to make informed financial decisions . Furthermore, moving to a six-month reporting cycle introduces substantial risks to market integrity. A longer period between public disclosures increases the likelihood of insider trading, as corporate insiders will hold material, non-public information for much longer windows. It will also likely result in extreme, concentrated market volatility when financial data is finally released twice a year, rather than allowing the market to smoothly price in corporate performance every 90 days . While reducing regulatory burdens for corporations is a notable point of discussion, it should never come at the expense of investor protection and market integrity. Frequent transparency is the bedrock of trust in the U.S. financial system.I urge the Commission to reject proposal S7-2026-15 and maintain mandatory quarterly reporting. Thank you for your time and consideration of my comments. Sincerely, Matt Harlow

---

Matthew Hoffman — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew Hoffman I have been an individual investor for nearly 30 years. I heavily rely upon the quarterly reporting of the companies I invest in to have timely insight as to each company's financial performance and governance. Quarterly reports are also essential to the due diligence research I perform prior to investing in any company. I do not want my investment decisions to be based on stale information, and waiting for an additional three months in between reporting mileposts is too long to make actionable decisions. In addition, as an observer of equity options flows, futures trades, and prediction market "bets", I strongly believe that insider information is being used to trade in securities more now than at any point in my investing experience. Delaying publicly-traded companies' reporting requirements for another three months will only provide more opportunity for corporate insiders and others with direct or indirect access to non-public information additional opportunities to profit at the expense of individual investors. For all of these reasons, I strongly OPPOSE this proposal.

Matthew Ivan — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew Ivan To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I strongly oppose File No. S7-2026-15 and urge the Commission to reject this proposal in full. The proposal would allow Exchange Act reporting companies to replace quarterly interim reporting with semiannual reporting, cutting the frequency of mandatory public disclosures in half. That is not modernization. It is a deliberate reduction in transparency that would make public markets less fair, less efficient, and more vulnerable to abuse.
Quarterly filings are the primary mechanism through which retail investors obtain timely, standardized, and legally accountable information about public companies. Sophisticated institutions can often supplement public filings with private research channels, management access, proprietary data, and industry intelligence, while ordinary investors generally cannot. Reducing the frequency of mandatory public reporting would widen the information gap between insiders and the public and between large professional investors and everyone else. The Commission should be candid about what this proposal would actually do; it would leave investors in the dark for longer periods, increase the amount of time during which material developments can remain outside standardized public reporting, and create a market structure that rewards those who already possess the most access and informational leverage. That is the opposite of investor protection. It also undermines confidence in fair and orderly markets, because a regime with fewer required disclosures creates more room for selective advantage, rumor-driven pricing, and strategic opacity. The cost-savings argument is especially weak. Public companies already operate with digital accounting systems, automated close processes, cloud infrastructure, structured reporting workflows, and standardized electronic filing tools, which substantially reduce the marginal burden of quarterly reporting. For most issuers, quarterly reporting is not an extraordinary operational hardship. It is a basic obligation of participating in the public markets. To claim providing investors with four required updates per year is too burdensome in a world of highly automated financial systems is not persuasive at all. Even the proposal's optional structure does not solve the problem. Allowing issuers to elect reduced transparency would still create a two-tier disclosure environment in which some public companies report on a normal quarterly cadence while others provide materially less frequent updates. Investors in index funds, retirement accounts, and diversified portfolios often cannot practically avoid exposure to less-transparent issuers. As a result, the harm would not be limited to investors who knowingly choose a particular stock. It would spread across the broader market. The deeper concern is that this proposal moves U.S. securities regulation in the wrong direction. Public markets function best when material information is released broadly, regularly, and in comparable form. If anything, the direction of reform should be toward more timely and more accessible disclosure, not less. In an economy where conditions can shift rapidly within a single quarter, reducing the minimum reporting cadence to semiannual updates is a regression. For those reasons, I urge the Commission to reject File No. S7-2026-15 in its entirety. The SEC's mission is to protect investors and promote fair, orderly, and efficient markets, and this proposal would do the opposite by reducing transparency where transparency is most needed. If the Commission nevertheless declines to withdraw the proposal in full, then at a minimum any final rule should preserve mandatory quarterly reporting for issuers with a public float or market capitalization above $50 million. Companies above that threshold have sufficient scale, market impact, and investor reach that reduced interim disclosure would impose unacceptable costs on the investing public and negligible legitimate benefits to the company. At that size, the argument that quarterly reporting is too expensive becomes even less credible, while the consequences of reduced transparency become more serious. In addition, any fallback regime should require an issuer electing semiannual reporting to provide prominent, standardized disclosure of that election, the reasons for it, and the resulting reduction in reporting frequency. Investors should not have to discover after the fact that a company chose to provide less timely public information. The proper course is straightforward: reject the proposal in full and preserve quarterly reporting as the minimum baseline for public-company transparency. Better yet, encourage companies to report more frequently. The Commission should be working to improve disclosure quality, timeliness, and accessibility for all investors, not authorizing a weaker reporting regime that benefits opacity over accountability. Respectfully, Matthew Ivan

---

Maureen Morgenthien — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Maureen Morgenthien Moving away from quarterly reporting is just a move away from transparency - which seems to be typical with the current administration. I can only imagine the reasoning behind the proposed move. As an individual stock owner - I expect to keep up with my investments. I read the reports. Semi annual reports are not enough. There is a reason the current cadence has existed for decades. Do no change the quarterly reporting.

Megan Willan Public Librarian — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Megan Willan Folks deserve the right to have information that allows them to make educated decisions when they invest. Quarterly reporting could help the public understand seasonal effects on business that could help with timing an investment or the selling of an investment. It would allow for more agile selling if things go south for a company so hardworking Americans investing on their retirement aren't holding the bag when the poor choices of a business leader put a company into financial issues. For the companies themselves, with the advent of AI, generating those reports has to be easier than ever. There is no reason to change this rule. Keep quarterly reporting a requirement. Allow the public to be informed about their investments.

Melanie Blake US Citizen — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Melanie Blake My name is Melanie Blake and I am an American citizen of the United States of America. Our corporations have long been required to provide quarterly reporting. It is a matter of transparency to our consumers and our consumer watchdogs. We NEED to keep this in place! We are shifting too much toward less government oversight of corporations. We NEED to protect consumers from predatory practices! Keep the quarterly reporting in place! Melanie Blake

Melissa Boos Technology Professional — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Melissa Boos Subject: Comment Opposing SEC File No. S7-2026-15 (Semiannual Reporting) I respectfully oppose the proposed rule S7-2026-15 because it would significantly reduce the amount of timely information available to investors and weaken market transparency. Quarterly reporting has been a cornerstone of U.S. securities markets for decades. Investors depend on regular, standardized disclosures to evaluate a company's financial condition, risks, cash flow, debt levels, and management's discussion of material developments. Moving to semiannual reporting would double the amount of time between mandatory public disclosures. This proposal would disproportionately disadvantage retail investors. Institutional investors often have greater access to company management, analysts, and other sources of information. Individual investors rely primarily on public SEC filings to make informed decisions. Reducing the frequency of those filings creates a larger information gap between sophisticated market participants and ordinary investors. Less frequent reporting also increases the likelihood that important financial deterioration or operational problems remain undisclosed for longer periods. Investors could unknowingly buy or continue holding securities based on outdated financial information, leading to increased market volatility when significant developments are finally reported. The proposal may also reduce market efficiency. Accurate stock prices depend on timely dissemination of material information. Extending mandatory reporting intervals may delay price discovery and increase uncertainty, resulting in wider price swings when new information is eventually released. While reducing compliance costs for issuers is a legitimate objective, those savings should not come at the expense of investor protection. The SEC's mission includes protecting investors, maintaining fair and orderly markets, and facilitating capital formation. In my view, this proposal weakens the first two objectives while providing uncertain benefits regarding the third. For these reasons, I urge the Commission to retain the current quarterly reporting framework.

Melody Downie-Dack — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Melody Downie-Dack To Securities and Exchange Commission, I oppose the proposed rule change that would allow for semiannual reporting in place of quarterly reporting for companies. Quarterly reporting of financials to investors and the public is essential for planning, transparency, and efficiency of U.S. capital markets for sectors across the economy. The stock market may experience more volatility because information will be reported less frequently and potentially more at one time. Ordinary Americans who have their retirement savings in investment accounts and their financial advisors will have less reliable, timely information to make decisions that might have long-term consequences for the retirements. In general, less regulation of the stock market and of businesses is not beneficial to the American people. This is why the SEC was created in the first place, to protect Americans and the U.S. economy from speculation and fraud (which will be more possible with less reporting). I oppose these proposed rule changes regarding optional semiannual reporting, respectfully and thoughtfully. Melody Downie-Dack

---

Member Motley Fool Retired VP Merrill Lynch — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Member Motley Fool It is difficult enough to evaluate companies activity, internal changes, reorganization, and earnings progress among many other categories four times a year. I can only imaging how difficult it will be with 2 times. If the concern is expense and efficiency, i am convinced AI will mitigate that. No reason for the change resonate with me or any friends and colleagues I associate with. I strongly urge you to refrain from making any changes.

Michael Letcher — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Letcher It is critical to continue requiring quarterly reporting for public companies. Things are happening so fast that in some cases even quarterly reporting does not help an individual investor keep up with critical events affecting the value of a company. During a 6 month gap period, the risk increases significantly that there will be major, unexpected changes in a company's earnings and cash flow. Going to semiannual disclosures will not be adequate for individual investors to monitor publicly traded companies. Quarterly reporting also results in companies holding quarterly earnings conference calls that we can dial into and learn even more. Please do not move forward with eliminating quarterly financial reporting. Instead, maintain in in its current form.

Michelle C. — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michelle C. I disagree with this proposed change. Quarterly reporting was put into place to ensure a more transparent outlook on publicly traded companies. Given the majority of the American people are now responsible for managing their own financial and retirement portfolios - it is inappropriate to limit access to the performance of the companies in which they invested and own.

Michelle Thomsen — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michelle Thomsen Corporations need MORE oversight, not less. They hide behind shareholder primacy when they fire workers, damage the environment, and close hospitals and factories. It is unjust to let them be literally half as accountable to the public. As a finance professional, I know that corporations have the resources to easily report their financial health. It’s not that hard to produce reports quarterly. What are they trying to hide? Thank you.

Mike — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mike Enough already you greedy bastards!!

Mike Strain Small business owner — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mike Strain This letter is in regard to proposal S7-2026-15, which would allow publicly traded companies to report semiannually instead of quarterly. I am opposed to this proposal and respectfully request that companies continue to be required quarterly. For the last 35 years, I have been investing in stocks, and that has changed my family’s life financially. I worked in the newspaper business and my wife is a public educator. We would never be wealthy with those salaries, but our stock portfolio has us on the verge of a comfortable retirement. Quarterly reports were a vital part of building that portfolio and allowing it to grow over extended periods of time. Here is just one example of why the transparency of filing quarterly is so important: About 10 years ago, I started buying stock in NVIDIA. Back then, its graphic processing units (GPUs) were primarily used for video games, but cryptocurrency miners also had begun using them. Demand for GPUs increased dramatically until late 2018, when the price of cryptocurrencies crashed. When crypto miner demand evaporated, NVIDIA was left with a glut of inventory it couldn't sell. The price of GPUs crashed, and NVIDIA's stock lost about two-thirds of its value. It was a difficult time, and I wondered if I should sell the stock? In hindsight, it was a critical moment in my investment journey. Every three months, I awaited an update from NVIDIA management. I was trying to determine if this was a short-term problem or a crisis that had revealed a poor management team? I needed to hear their plan. More importantly, I needed to see if management was executing that plan. In the absence of quarterly reports, I would have received only one required update between the January report in 2019 and the January report in 2020. It would have been an extremely difficult time to have only one report every six months. Thankfully, that wasn't the case. I followed the quarterly reports closely and held the stock. Shares I purchased at a split-adjusted $2.50 and are now worth $200. This is far from the only example I could provide about the importance of quarterly reports in my investing career. When I buy a stock, I view myself as a part owner in companies. I currently get four times a year to hear from my management teams. I can ask them no questions and give them no advice; but I can listen to their plans and see if they're executing them. At this time, quarterly reports seem more important than ever with the rise of artificial intelligence. Businesses of all kinds are being dramatically affected, and hearing from leaders on a quarterly basis during a time of such change is vital. I believe any efficiencies or cost savings a company might gain would be significantly outweighed by the loss of transparency for investors. I respectfully request that companies continue to be required to report quarterly. Thank you for your consideration.

Myra Sandor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Myra Sandor Based on the history of semi annual reporting in the US, we should keep the reporting on a quarterly basis mandatory.

Nancy Colpetzer — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Colpetzer I am a retail investor. Please keep the requirement for signed quarterly reporting. Professional investors already have information that retail investors lack. Reducing reporting requirements leaves retail investors in the dark even more. It also invites more fraud on the part of improperly managed companies.

Nancy Wilson Investor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Wilson Quarterly reporting need to remain to ensure companies are kept accountable, Please do not change this!

Norm Baxter Retired Educator — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Norm Baxter Retired Educator Don't change quarterly reporting! This will lead to even more corruption and will undoubtedly affect my investments which fund my and my dependent's retirement. Norm Baxter, Retiree

---

Nuno Gouveia — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nuno Gouveia In my view, maintaining quarterly reporting is very important to enable good investing decisions. As a shareholder of the companies, I want to be informed on the regular basis.

ODonnell Iselin Former Public Company CFO and Individual Investor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: ODonnell Iselin I oppose the proposal to reduce the quarterly reporting requirement to a semi-annual exercise. As it is, the amount of publicly available information about companies has been declining. It is a good idea for management to have to prepare quarterly financial statements, and this has been a common practice since I entered the business world as a securities analyst and later a corporate financial manager in the 1970s. Quarterly reporting promotes good financial oversight within companies and helps companies to regularly review their financial performance and update internal forecasts. The litigation exposure related to the public reporting has created a burdensome and expensive review process around the release of the quarterly results, and that might be addressed. However, the underlying financial data has not changed significantly, and the information is of great value to the investors following the company's progress and trying to predict future financial and operating performance. Elimination of the quarterly reporting will create additional equity market volatility and will expose creditors to greater risk because problems can be hidden for longer periods of time. One might expect that banks and bond holders will demand quarterly financial statements reviewed by independent third party accounting firms whether or not these rules are adopted. If a change is to be made, I would advocate for a reduced level of disclosure, elimination of management narratives and additional protection against errors in accounting judgements and estimates.

Olga G Alvarez — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Olga G Alvarez Please keep the requirement for quarterly reporting. This will protect individual investors.

Pam Nielsen — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pam Nielsen Retain quarterly reporting. It helps prevent financial corruption

---

Pat H Retired — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pat H Patricia - Retired - This will affect my retirement income. But I wouldn't know about it until the semi-annual reports came out. I live on my retirement income, barely what with prices rising everywhere, and can't absorb more expenses.

Patricia Hemby — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia Hemby keep it four times a year it's bad enough that the big wigs in corporate world profit so highly off the backs of the lower people that pay their paychecks this would just give them more of an opportunity to raise their bonuses without having to report how

---

Patricia La None — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia La Please keep quarterly reporting as it is now.

Peter Lidiak — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter Lidiak The Commission should continue to require quarterly filing.

Philip Baggaley Managing Director, S&P Global Ratings (retired) — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Philip Baggaley I was a credit analyst following transportation, aerospace and defense companies with S&P Global Ratings from 1985 to 2022, during which time I testified before Congressional committees regarding the airline industry on several occasions. My experience analyzing airlines, in particular, highlighted the importance of receiving financial and other relevant information on a timely basis, given the volatility of that industry. Quarterly reporting was and is really only a minimum requirement for adequate surveillance of such companies (many of which even report some limited operating statistics monthly). Semiannual reporting as allowed in some other countries (which I had reason to use when assisting S&P analysts in other offices around the world) is distinctly inferior, and allows for the possibility of substantial financial deterioration before investors and analysts can become aware of changing circumstances. While airlines may be an extreme example of volatility, the current rapid developments in the tech industry, which accounts for a leading share of stock market capitalization by sector, suggest that they are not unique. Companies that use equity and debt capital markets of the U.S. benefit from the depth and pricing efficiency of those markets. And investors rely on timely access to material information when they acquire securities in those markets. The incremental cost to companies of quarterly reporting is small (particularly as semiannual reporting would still require gathering the same types of information) compared to the benefits of using U.S. capital markets. Furthermore, less frequent disclosure would likely lead to more volatile price movements of equity and debt securities, as a larger amount of new information is digested by the markets upon semiannual reports. Reliance on 8k filings to update material information, while helpful, is not a substitute for the more complete financial picture provided by 10Q filings, and is subject to some flexibility as to what is deemed material. At a time when individuals increasingly rely on separate investment accounts such as 401ks and IRAs for retirement savings, rather than traditional defined benefit pensions, it would seem both unwise and unfair to scale back the timeliness of information that investors, both individual and institutional, rely on. The benefits, for both companies and investors, of the deep and efficient U.S. capital markets far outweigh the incremental cost of reporting on quarterly, rather than a semiannual basis. These opinions are my own and are not intended to represent those of S&P Global Ratings.

R White — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: R White I am opposed to having only twice yearly reporting by public companies. As investors, it is important to keep informed about the companies in which we are invested. The more information we have, the better decisions we can make. Please continue to require quarterly reporting. Thank you.

Rebecca & Jack Retired — Jun 28, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rebecca & Jack Keep reporting quarterly. Its hard enough to keep corporations honest without allowing them 6 mos. to blindside investors. Self regulation doesn't have a great track record, so lets keep eyes on what they are doing.

Renae Cowley Banking — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Renae Cowley Semi-annual reporting would not have tight enough disclosure requirements, creating a greater risk of fraud and collusion among insiders. Quarterly reporting provides tighter oversight and a higher level of transparency and accountability, hence, less fraud risk and insider trading corruption.

Richard Hausler CEO, Integrated Forestry Solutions — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Hausler Transparency FOR YOUR AGENCY MUST BE COMPLETELY ABSOLUTE AND 100% truth regardless of who’s President or Agency chairman!!!!!

Richard W. Hallinan Retired individual investor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard W. Hallinan More accountability instead of less is preferable. Small investors have their retirements at risk. Enron and Worldcom still resonate as well as the new dot . com called AI. Please do not yield to pressure from Big Corporations.

Robert Poynter — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Poynter Keep the quarterly report in place,anything less is hiding the facts.

Robert Saenz — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Saenz We all know what this will do, it will set criminals in suits to be criminals again. The people who came up with this scheme of non-accountability (= no accountability) are criminals with criminal intent, otherwise there’d be no reason to even think to focus a minute of time writing such a ridiculously evil proposal. I don’t even know how it’s legal to create such things.

Robert Smith — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Smith I am writing to formally oppose the proposed rule amendments (File No. S7-2026-15) that would allow public companies to abandon quarterly reporting. Quarterly filings provide the essential, verified "heartbeat" of market information. Cutting mandatory disclosure frequency in half would result in informational "dead zones," forcing investors to rely on speculation and increasing market volatility. I feel that that the burden on companies to report quaterly is worth the costs and all investors benefit by being in a very transparent market. Furthermore, extended reporting gaps widen the information asymmetry between institutional insiders and everyday retail investors. In an era where AI and automation have drastically reduced reporting friction, scaling back transparency is a step backward for investor protection. I urge the Commission to maintain the current quarterly reporting cycle.

Robert Wolk The Motley Fool Community — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Wolk Investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Rod Conti Capt USN (Ret) — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rod Conti Keep reporting quarterly for private investors. Do not water down reporting for corporate interests!

Ronald Burkholder, Molosser Enterprises — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ronald Burkholder Molosser Enterprises As an investor I believe in transparent quarterly reporting and will have to lessen my exposure to stocks, at least, if insiders in a company are allowed to only report every 5 months. Lessening faith and trust will only hurt the market.

Rosemarie Ourlian — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rosemarie Ourlian Quarterly statements are the best way to keep everyone in the know. Six months is too long to wait on something as important as the financial health of companies I am invested in. Rosemarie Ourlian Retired, Living on my Investments

---

Ruthie Scheidel — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ruthie Scheidel I would want the SEC to keep quarterly reporting so we can know how the business/ companies are doing. We don't want to be the last to find out and there will be less transparency for us.

S Ryan — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: S Ryan One that wants to be informed more than twice a year

---

Sandra DeMers, MEd, NBCT, National Federation of Teachers Member — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sandra DeMers, MEd, NBCT As a retired school teacher, I rely on my portfolio to make ends meet. It is imperative that investors be kept up to date on how their investments are doing. Please keep the quarterly system, or better yet, make it every two months! Going back to twice a year would be a disaster for investors! Thank you for your consideration.

Sarah Strobell Medicaid Care Connect Program — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sarah Strobell This will add more corruption. This should not be allowed! I'm so sick of all the corruption under this president! Corporations like everyone else should be held accountable! Sarah Strobell Complete Health Medicaid Care Connect Coordinator

---

Sheila Fossen — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sheila Fossen I vote for quarterly reports.

Sheila O'Brien — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sheila O'Brien Please keep transparency and keep reporting quarterly.

Simon Green Private Investor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Simon Green This will reduce transparency and reduce the attractiveness to investors

---

Sonia Harmon — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sonia Harmon Keep quarterly reporting. Small investors need access to timely information.

Stephen P Grimes Jr. Small Business Owner — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen P Grimes Jr. I think that reducing the number of public-company reports from four a year to two a year is a mistake! As an investor, getting reports once a quarter makes much more sense! It helps to determine if the position I help is solid or at risk. Waiting until two quarters pass might be too late!

Steve Buck Retired — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve Buck I am opposed to reducing the Financial Reporting from Quarterly to Semi-annually. This would increase the risk of financial impropriety by individuals and corporations, thereby reducing their obligation to remain stewards of financial honesty.

Steve Lowe Motley Fool Community — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve Lowe To preserve increased transparency I need the companies that I own to report quarterly. Semi annually is not often enough

---

Steven Swaney — Jun 28, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-26-18 From: Steven Swaney I do not want the regulations loosened to semiannually from quarterly. Companies need more oversight than less to keep investors like me and my family up to date and protected.

Stuart Lange Retail Investor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stuart Lange It is my understanding that the SEC is being asked to do away with the requirement for quarterly reports by companies regulated by the SEC. If this is true, please, PLEASE do not make this change. I do not have the time or resources available to institutional investors to evaluate potential stock buy/sell/hold decisions and I rely on quarterly reports in making these decisions. In addition, I have to believe that quarterly reports place any kind of unreasonable burden on companies. It seems to me that if company management doesn't already have access to the audited data reported in the quarterly reports the company cannot be at all well managed. In short, quarterly reports provide information to retail investors that semiannual or annual reporting can never provide. Please do NOT change this requirement.

Susan Howard — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Howard As an individual investor, I strongly oppose Proposal S7-2026-15 to reduce public company reporting from quarterly to semiannual. Regular, transparent financial reporting is essential for maintaining fair, efficient, and informed markets. Quarterly reports provide investors with timely information to evaluate company performance, identify emerging risks, and make sound investment decisions. Reducing the frequency of required disclosures would increase information gaps, reduce transparency, and potentially disadvantage individual investors relative to institutional investors with greater access to management and private research. Public companies benefit from the trust and capital provided by shareholders, and in return they should continue providing regular, standardized updates. The modest burden of quarterly reporting is outweighed by the significant benefits of transparency, accountability, and investor confidence.

Susan Rayberg — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Rayberg No. Keep REPORTING quarterly. It's ti.e to rout out corruption.

Tara L Blas — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tara L Blas Transparency is the key to a strong and healthy economy. Lessening reporting requirements will decrease transparency.

Tara Rellihan — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-26-18 From: Tara Rellihan I do not want this regulation relaxed from quarterly to semi annually. Companies need to give investors more transparency not less. The playing field is already so far skewed against mom and pop investors and this would further disadvantage us.

Teresa Jefferson Retired — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Teresa Jefferson Please continue quarterly reporting! We need as much information as often as possible to make good decisions!

Teresa O Staff Nurse — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Teresa O Teresa Staff Nurse Transparency Matters. Timing Matters. Keep the quarterly reporting. Monthly is better and prefered. If someone is mishandling or stealing my Eggs I want to know that night not a month or 6 months later. I rember loosing money from a 401k and not knowing about it immediately. Knowing of everyday workers investing for years and to find they have basically nothing at retirement. Not to mention the many other scams, yes scam because the people at the top was aware inflicted on people like me. People who just want to be able to manage housing, have meal, an occasional outing and maybe a pet for companionship. To be able to buy a grand child a Birthday or Graduation gift without it being a struggle and decent healthcare at the end of their working days aka as Retirement. Without money-impossibe. It was such a deflating, humiliating and sickening feeling after trusting someone with your income and future to realize they didn't really care about you. They weren't on the side of your future but using your money to protect theirs. Homelessness at any age is scary. 3 to 6 months even a month is along time be losing money unaware. I TRUST you with my money RESPECT me enough to care about it. Document Document Document and Report frequently. TRANSPARENCY, TIMING, ADAPTATION AND QUICK RECOVERY MATTERS.

Terrence Lode The Motley Fool Community — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Terrence Lode Keep the quarterly reporting. Transparency is essential to good investment decisions. Important business decisions are limited to 2x per year, and neither should reporting requirements. Technology has advanced and reduced the time and effort to produce quarterly reports.

Terry White Retired — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Terry White Leave things as they are. We don't need laws that allow executives another way to cheat!

The Ozark Wood Smith "Darin" WOOD SMITH — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Ozark Wood Smith "Darin" So why go to halvesies after the time from the fifties to almost the seventies they changed from the halvesies a year for a reason, so why does this administration want to go backwards with so many of the nations protocols? This is nontrustworthy behavior from the SEC, so tell me sense you only want to work twice a year with this halvesies instead of quarterly meaning only half the work load, does that mean that the SEC department only gets half it's annual salary for it's divisions employees!?!?

Thomas Libbey N/A — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Libbey Please don't authorize semi-annual reporting.

Tjm — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tjm Reduction of corporate reporting from quarterly to semi-annually hurts individual investors in favor of the large institutions. The benefit of joining a public market should come at the cost of informing the public about the goings on of your company every 3 months. Please don’t sell out to the big money yet again.

Valerie Escott — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Valerie Escott We meed this transparency every three months!!!!!Do not take this away!!!!!!!!!

Vance DeHart — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vance DeHart Let's keep the law as it is currently written. Trust in our government that benefits its people is critical. Corporate greed and corruption is already a problem. The law was enacted for a reason, more transparency! My investments should be protected, I need the ability to make sound decisions based on data in timely fashion.

Vanessa Moran State job counselor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vanessa Moran As an investor, I strongly oppose semiannual reporting. This allows fraud and allows companies to prevent people like me and my financial advisors from making good financial decisions. Please keep reporting quarterly.

Vicki Stover — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vicki Stover Do not go back...Keep Quarterly reporting... .ACCOUNTABILITY.

Vince Autrey — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vince Autrey This is the right thing to do for all involved. Keep corporate reporting frequent, fair, and transparent for the public. Keep quarterly reporting!

Vincent Randy Yopp American Citizen — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vincent Randy Yopp Face book post

---

Wendell Short None — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wendell Short Hi, I believe that reducing public reporting from quarterly to semi-annually is not a good practice. Individual investors need as much information as we can get to make a well informed decision on stock ownership. What problem are you trying solve? Too much effort to file quarterly? It is better to be held accountable more often than be able to go 6 months between reports. Thanks for your consideration on this matter!

William Alvarado Investor — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Alvarado The SEC Needs to keep quarterly reporting in place. They have our money, they should be obligated to reporting to us what they are doing with it. We have given them our money, and they have a fiduciary obligation to us to keep us in the loop of those transactions frequently Especially in these days of automation, and their ability to disseminate that information with the push of a button. There is no reason not to keep us advised. They don't have to do any mass mailings, or additional expense to do this. They just have to select a frequency of report generation. It is a do it once, and it will continue doing that automatically without any additional input from the companies. We are their customers, and their investors. Our money makes their ability to invest happen. They are obligated to report to us for our education and information. Remember, Enron, If you don't remember, or weren't in the business at that time, refer to that documentation. There is little or no financial burden for them to do this, in this day and age. Any evasion of quarterly reports, or even more frequently, is an invasion of their responsibility to the investors to keep them adequately, advised as to what they're doing with OUR money.

William Buermeyer — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Buermeyer Continue to mandate quarterly reporting for companies!

ZiQi Xia — Jun 28, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: ZiQi Xia Dear U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission,I am submitting a formal complaint regarding potential regulatory changes that would reduce public company financial disclosures from quarterly to semi-annually. This change directly threatens investor protection . As a 17-year-old investor, I believe that if this policy is passed, it will make companies far less transparent, allowing them to hide crucial information. It would also give corporate insiders a much larger window to trade on material, non-public information, creating an extremely unfair advantage over ordinary traders like me. Furthermore, waiting half a year for financial updates will cause extreme market volatility when the data is finally released. This risks causing stocks to either skyrocket or be completely wiped out, as markets will be forced to price in six months of unknown variables all at once.v To ensure fair, orderly, and efficient markets, I implore the SEC to protect individual investors like me by maintaining the mandatory quarterly reporting framework.

A. E — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A. E Don't decrease investor information by reducing the frequency of the reporting. Less transparecny is bad for the market and bad for investors.

Adam S. Grant — Jun 27, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adam S. Grant I am a semi-retired investor with IRAs, SEP and personal accounts. I rely on QUARTERLY reporting to assess the health of my investments. I write in opposition to proposed Rule S7-2026-15, which would allow public companies to substitute semiannual reports on new Form 10-S for the existing quarterly Form 10-Q filings. If adopted, this would represent the biggest rollback of investor disclosure requirements in more than 50 years. I urge the Commission to reject it. Quarterly reporting is not a burden on healthy, well-run companies - it is a basic expectation of transparency that public markets were built on. When I invest in a public company, I give up liquidity and take on risk. Quarterly disclosures are part of what I get in return. Moving to semiannual reporting would leave investors like me without timely information for six months at a stretch. A lot can change in six months: revenue trajectories shift, debt levels change, management makes capital allocation decisions that affect shareholders. Delaying that disclosure doesn't reduce short-termism - it just reduces accountability. The argument that quarterly reporting pressures companies to focus on short-term results is not an argument for less transparency. It is an argument for better management. If a CEO cannot explain quarterly results without sacrificing long-term strategy, the problem is not the reporting requirement. Semiannual reporting benefits insiders and institutions who have access to private management briefings and industry data that retail investors do not. Retail investors depend on mandatory public disclosures precisely because we do not have those back channels. I urge the Commission to retain the quarterly reporting requirement. Reducing disclosure frequency would shift the information advantage further toward sophisticated market participants at the direct expense of ordinary investors.

Alan McIvor Software Development Manager (Retired) — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan McIvor Earning Season, quarterly reports these are things that guide my investments. As a stakeholder in a public company or I should say an owner in a public company I have a right to see what is happening within that company. Regular financial reporting is key to understanding how the companies that I own are performing. Like any owner I want to contain costs, but cutting back on reporting is not going to save significant costs (particularly when AI agents can pull the data together quicker than ever) while at the same time making the company managers less accountable to the shareholders (owners). How many of us dreaded creating the weekly or monthly status report, but we do it because we know the business can't be managed correctly unless the managers above you have all the facts. Similarly as an owner of a public company I can't evaluate how the company is doing without the appropriate data. It is hard enough these days to manage our finances, please don't cut back on the amount of required reporting.

Alfredo Saloma, CEO, QuimiNet.com — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alfredo Saloma I am AGAINST the proposal to reduce results information from quarterly to twice a year. I understand it's a cost for public companies, but as an external investor, it's the only way to have a feeeling and information of what's really going on with a company. 6 months between reports is too long for me. In case some companies change to this practice I may withdraw my investments from these companies. Thanks

---

Amber Warehouse laborer — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amber My name is Amber and I believe quarterly reporting is essential in keeping everything fair and so no shady practices can happen as easily. As a working class person my entire life, mainly warehouse laborer, I definitely believe the little people need as much protection as possible, especially their money.

Andria Coutoumanos Retired — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andria Coutoumanos Andria Coutoumanos, Retired Now more than ever, transparency and accountability are vital to a properly functioning economy. I was once a member of the disappearing middle class, but now in my senior years have slipped into the poverty level. It's imperative that we keep corporate America as honest as possible with quarterly reporting.

Ann Newland Retired University System of Georgia — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ann Newland Keep quarterly reporting. I rely on quarterly reporting to make decisions about my retirement investments. Semiannual reporting provides a blackout window in which fraud can fester. It's the investors who are left in the dark without the critical information they need about the companies they invest in.

Anna Marketing — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anna I think it is important for companies to be transparent, and allowing slower reporting is a step away from that.

Anon Professor of Contracts — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anon We cannot reduce transparency. The material required is not additional data, but the data companies are already tracking to manage the entity.

Anonymous — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous This change to reporting requirements would deeply harm the transparency available to investors and would be extremely detrimental to a fair market. I urge you to re-consider this proposed rule.

Anonymous individual — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous individual I oppose the reduced requirements for public companies for financial reporting. Removing required quarterly reports will hurt the information space retail investors rely on to make informed investment. I support continuing required quarterly reports for publicly trades companies.

Antoinette Cheryl — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Antoinette Cheryl I strongly oppose the proposed amendments to allow public companies to replace quarterly reporting with semi-annual reporting. I am an individual retail investor who is concerned about the transparency of public companies if their financial reports become less frequent. The public markets need more transparency. I urge for this proposed amendment not to be adopted. Thank you.

ASHISH CHAUDHARY — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: ASHISH CHAUDHARY I strongly oppose the proposed amendments to allow public companies to replace quarterly reporting with semi-annual reporting. I am an individual retail investor who is extremely concerned about the transparency of public companies if their financial reports become less frequent. The public markets need more transparency. I urge for the proposed semi-annual reporting amendment not to be adopted. Thank you.

Aylin Regulski — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aylin Regulski I strongly oppose the option for companies to be able to report on a semi-annual basis. I would not trust companies that chose this option since a lot can happen in half a year and a company could bottom out before you were even aware there was an issue. There is no transparency for the investors.

Beth Kelley Division Dean, Fullerton College — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beth Kelley I disagree with reducing annual reporting to two times per year. As an owner, it is important for me to stay informed.

Brad Graybehl N/A — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brad Graybehl Cutting reporting in half doesn't make a company more stable, it just means investors find out about problems six months later instead of three. And letting companies pick whether they report quarterly or semiannually doesn't add flexibility, it adds confusion: now I have to guess which standard I'm even being held to. The "savings" here aren't real savings either, they're costs quietly shifted from companies onto the investors who own them, in the form of less warning before something goes wrong.

Brett Stoll — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brett Stoll Do not eliminate quarterly reporting. This is vital information for those of us in the retail investing segment.

Brian Russell Stellantis — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Russell Come on folks. More information not less...pls & thank you.

Brian Wonsever Retired — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Wonsever Keep quarterly reporting by CEOs and other c-suite executives a requirement. Add surprise audits too. My retirement nest egg depends on the SEC keeping people honest and less foolhardy.

C. Bassin — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C. Bassin Dear SEC Chair- I am a retired American educator who, along with her husband, has numerous investments and who rely on transparency of the market and of all publicly traded companies for our financial security. Quarterly reporting is the gold standard and helps keep companies and individuals accountable. We cannot weaken our markets by removing this transparency. This move to remove quarterly reporting is a mistake in my opinion . Thank you for your consideration.

Carolyn Southwick — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carolyn Southwick Please preserve the requirement for public companies to report four times a year. Thank you, Carolyn Southwick

---

Chase Hardy — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chase Hardy It is essential that organizations continue to release quarterly reports and are not allowed to release reports semiannually. The information that comes from those reports is crucial for investor decision making, and one report every six months is not enough. Please protect the investor community by not allowing organizations to release reports semiannually. I oppose this proposed rule and urge the Commission not to adopt it.

Chris High — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris High Re: File No. S7-2026-15 - Proposed Semiannual Reporting I oppose this proposal. Quarterly reporting has been the foundation of retail investor access to material financial information for over 50 years. This proposal would let corporate insiders, institutional investors, and legal counsel continue to access real-time business performance while ordinary shareholders wait six months for basic disclosures. That is not flexibility - it is a two-tiered information market that structurally disadvantages the public investors this Commission is mandated to protect. The argument that quarterly reporting burdens companies is unpersuasive. Public companies voluntarily access public capital markets. Timely, accurate disclosure is the price of that access. Companies that prefer less disclosure have the option to go private. Reducing reporting frequency does not reduce the underlying business complexity - it simply delays the public's ability to respond to material developments, including fraud, deterioration, and management failure. The historical record shows that information gaps are precisely when abuse occurs. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal and reaffirm that investor protection, not corporate convenience, is its governing mandate.

Cilla Black Investor — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cilla Black Leaves the investor in the dark and invites even more theft, insider trading, etc. So NO to this proposal.

Cindy Robinson Accountant — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cindy Robinson There shouldn’t be hidden facts from any business that goes or is public. When a person purchases stock they become part owners, no matter how small they deserve to know everything about that company. They should be able to pull up financials every month! If I owned a business that would be customary, therefore, it should be available to stockholders.

Dan Fitzpatrick Retired Educatir — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan Fitzpatrick Please keep the reporting of financial transactions on a quarterly basis. Living on a fixed income makes it important to monitor and adjust any decisions, small as this might be, in my investments.

Dan Wittmayer, individual Retired professional photographer — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan Wittmayer, individual The SEC must never lose its teeth. As the evil of the Robber Barons again rears it's ugly head, we're in danger of allowing oligarchs to run amok. Our existing laws are hard won. Don't let them go! Fight the evil. Punish the offenders.

Darrell Zemitis — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darrell Zemitis Darrell Zemitis, business development executive and active stock investor. I rely on quarterly reporting to ensure the companies I invest in are hitting their growth targets, cash goals, and staying on track with stated company objectives. A move to semi annual reporting would only benefit these companies and put the retail investor at a significant disadvantage.

David Magnus Sigurdson None — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Magnus Sigurdson I would vote NO on allowing more time to or for submission of 10k or any kind of financial information.

David Mason Personal Investor — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Mason Don’t take away our quarterly reporting. It will hurt small investors and help corporate insiders.

David Seger SVP, Data Analytics — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Seger I strongly oppose this rule. Allowing companies to go six months without public reporting only helps insiders.

David Thurow — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Thurow Don't reduce the reporting requirement! Less transparency increases uncertainty.

David Zimmerman — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Zimmerman I don’t like the idea of only being able to listen to only two earnings calls per year. I depend on them very much for my up dated information about the company’s that I have invested in. I believe that investors will be getting short changed if this happens.

Dianne Gokey Lidiak President, Cobbossee Consulting LLC — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dianne Gokey Lidiak I do not agree with the new proposal to allow public companies to move to semiannual reporting. For full transparency for investors we need to receive information on a quarterly basis.

Douglas T Maines The Motley Fool Community — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Douglas T Maines Writing to urge that quarterly reporting requirements not be reduced to semi annually. Less information for shareholders, regulators, employees, vendors and the general public could be detrimental. Not sure the benefit of this proposed change outweighs the risk. Sincerely, Doug

---

Earle Watson Retail shareholder — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Earle Watson Less transparency has shown to be terrible for retail investors after reviewing the billions in fines since 2000 against institutions. The fines should have been way higher but the citizens are finally waking up to realize that we are an occupied nation that has been robbed by traitors. The Sec is becoming to be viewed as an enemy of the people because you have allowed rampant fraud for far too long. You allow most trades to be routed off exchange when this option was originally created for institutional orders to not affect the tape. Now it has been abused to completely control the price and not allow true price discovery. Countless companies have been bankrupted because of the practice and also because the Sec won't enforce trade settlement. It's disgraceful what the strongest stock market in the world has become. Other countries like South Korea, India and China are becoming more attractive to investors due to their strong stance against naked shorting and enforcing of trade settlement. Yet all the Sec can do is further reduce transparency and push back against the consolidated audit trail. The Sec still can't address the MMTLP fiasco. Every share holder needs to be reimbursed with interest if anything regarding that situation. Look at how investors are against this proposal. We have called out the circular financing taking place in Nividia for over two yrs and it's evident to see in their quarterly reports yet the Sec does nothing but wants less light to be shined on fraud. I am totally against this proposal and am still waiting for that new day at the Sec to begin like Atkins said that restores investors faith.

Emma Goudy Graduate student Duke university — Jun 27, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Emma Goudy The inevitable limitation a switch from quarterly to biannual reporting will place on transparency and accountability to shareholders and the public writ large is unconscionable. An SEC that cares about public welfare will ensure our access to information about what is happening inside the companies that shape American and global markets, impacting the economic health of billions. We hardly have enough information about publicly or privately traded companies as is, and of course the effects are extraordinarily deleterious when unforeseen issues arise (again made inevitable due to lack of reporting).

Frances McLaughlin Early None — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Frances McLaughlin Early Continue quarterly reporting

---

Francine Joy Allen Retired librarian and child care giver — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Francine Joy Allen The wealthy and powerful are creating a two-tiered system in which they have total freedom with the goal being to take away the freedom of the rest of us. Francine Allen, Retired librarian and child care giver, Bergen County, NJ

Garrett Brown None — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Garrett Brown There is virtually no reason to conceal stock market information other than to encourage corruption and insider trading. Shame on you all. Let retail investors keep seeing quarterly reports you have rigged the system in your favor already. How greedy can you get?

Gayle Miller — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gayle Miller I am 100% opposed to this idea. We need more transparency, not less. Has history taught us nothing? We don’t need another Enron, especially now that dishonesty is more rampant than ever. Protect my investments. Keep quarterly reporting. Please!

Gene Tarantino GTM Auto Repair CEO — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gene Tarantino I respectfully oppose replacing quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting for public companies. Quarterly reporting has long been a cornerstone of market transparency in the United States. Investors, both large and small, rely on timely financial information to make informed investment decisions. Extending the reporting interval from three months to six months would significantly increase the period during which investors have limited access to standardized financial information. Retail investors are particularly dependent on periodic SEC filings because they generally do not have access to the same information channels available to institutional investors. Maintaining quarterly reporting helps preserve a level playing field and supports confidence in U.S. capital markets. For these reasons, I believe quarterly reporting continues to serve an important role in promoting transparency, investor confidence, and fair, efficient markets.

George Hawn — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: George Hawn Comments attached

---

Gregory Fraser P . Eng, Retired — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gregory Fraser Semi-annual reporting reduce the company transparency and investor will receive less timely valuable company information.

Gwen Peterson — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gwen Peterson Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Harry Brooks NA (personal investor) — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Harry Brooks Allowing public companies to report semi-annually is a MASSIVE mistake. It would reduce transparency and allow for more corruption. It will hurt small investors by giving them less information while simultaneously benefiting the rich by giving them information that ordinary people don’t have access to. PLEASE don’t do this.

Heidi Brownell — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Heidi Brownell Less information doesn't create better-informed owners. We've spent billions on systems to automate reports. There is no excuse for reporting less. Less transparency creates more uncertainty. Please retain quarterly reports.

Henry R Nyce Retired Professor, Sociology — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Henry R Nyce It is important that we continue to have at least quarterly reports from my holdings in corporations, trusts and reits. Please make sure that this continues.

Hillary Melechen — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Hillary Melechen An informed public makes the best decisions.

Hope M. Anderson — Jun 27, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Hope M. Anderson I oppose File No. S7-2026-15. Reducing corporate financial reporting from quarterly to semi-annually destroys market transparency and directly harms everyday American investors. Individual investors need timely, reliable quarterly data to protect our savings and make informed decisions. Please withdraw this proposal and maintain the current quarterly reporting framework.

Imtiaz Kalani — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Imtiaz Kalani To Whom It May Concern, I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposed rule allowing public companies to opt out of quarterly reporting in favor of a semiannual schedule. While reducing administrative burdens is a notable goal, this shift severely harms retail investors and regular corporate employees. Moving to a six-month reporting cadence creates a massive "dark period" that directly fosters information asymmetry. Institutional investors and corporate insiders will have an unfair advantage to trade on company performance indicators while retail investors are forced to wait months for transparent data. This significantly undermines public market integrity and investor confidence. Furthermore, this change directly threatens workers. Many public companies tie compensation, performance bonuses, and merit cycles to quarterly financial metrics. Moving to semiannual reporting will likely push these review periods back, delaying earned compensation and complicating employee equity and exit strategies. The SEC's primary mission is investor protection. Reducing transparency and timeliness of data does the exact opposite. I urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the current mandatory Form 10-Q quarterly reporting structure. Sincerely, Imtiaz

---

J Lutton — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: J Lutton My name is Jennifer Lutton and I work for a public school as a behavior analyst. I could go into the behavioral science of human motivation, schedules of reinforcement and clinical defined punishment on why things SUCH a bad idea. Instead, im going to focus on the HUMANane side. I’m a public school employee with a public school salary. My investments are my retirement. And just because my network and connections are with amazing children with autism, and NOT C Suite execs, and financial traders, that doesn’t mean I don’t deserve to know the same information. They will have information significantly sooner than I will simply because you’ve cut me out of the process. This is not a hardship or “ease of burden” , it is a cost of doing business. And if it is a burden, divert some of the C-suite salaries so it is not. Keep it fair. Thank you

---

Jacob Aldridge — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jacob Aldridge Reducing the reporting period obfuscates important potentially fraudulent information without reducing the burden on the companies. All of the numbers in quarterly reports are tracked in an autonomous way. Public companies should be advanced enough to be subject to judicious reporting requirements, and this is accomplished without undue burden. Please do not enact this change.

Jacob Emde — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jacob Emde I am concerned that the reduction of reporting requirements to twice annually, instead of quarterly, would be detrimental to a company's obligations to its shareholders, and the public, due to the decreased transparency of information.

James Edward Ablard and Alexandra Dorr Lawyer and investor — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Edward Ablard and Alexandra Dorr I favor the transparency of the current quarterly reporting. I have suffered with investments where the insiders knew that the product had failed in the market and the quarterly reports did not provide a warning. I favor more disclosure rather than less to keep the capital market strong and investor confidence high.

James Gregory Jones — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Gregory Jones Dear Secretary Countryman, I am writing as a retail investor to share my feedback on the proposed shift from quarterly to semiannual corporate reporting. While I understand the desire to reduce compliance burdens and eliminate short-term corporate thinking, I strongly believe that moving to a six-month reporting schedule will severely harm market transparency. Reducing the frequency of updates will increase information asymmetry, disadvantage everyday investors who rely on timely data, and potentially increase market volatility around the fewer remaining reporting dates. Quarterly reporting ensures a fair, well-informed market. I urge the Commission to maintain the current quarterly filing requirements. Thank you for considering my perspective. Sincerely, Greg Jones Raleigh NC

James Holland — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Holland Semiannual reporting will only hedge companies allowing them more time between reporting to commit fraud and/or mislead investors with hyperbolic rhetoric inferring successful results without the regularly reported data to back it up. Public companies have a fiduciary responsibility to share financial results with investors on a regular basis and semiannual reporting is far from regular...

James P . Owchsker None — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James P . Owchsker News ad

---

James Williams — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Williams To The Securities and Exchange Commission, I am an investor and active stock trader of about eight years, now. Amending S7-2026-15 to allow companies to have the option of semi-annual reporting over the current quarterly requirements would lead to retail traders and investors missing vital, shorter term information that helps to guide them and helps them to make their decisions of investing into companies with more sound confidence. This will inevitably lead to more market-wide volatility where corporate insiders are more likely to have their capital gains while the general public and retail investors are left out with less timely information. The public as a whole deserves to know the most up-to-date financial information possible of any publicly traded company, and by passing this amendment, those relied-upon reports won't be available as quickly, and the above mentioned consequences are sure to ensue. I urge the Commission to reconsider this amendments intended and all possible unintended results. -James

Williams

James Zylstra — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Zylstra The world is changing faster now than ever more. Information is at our fingertips. This would be going backwards a 100 years by making information less timely. The world moves too fast to only have semi annual reports.

Jared Henry Independent Investor — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jared Henry I demand that companies must report each quarter! How I am I as in individual investor supposed to keep track of all the companies I invest in with twice a year. This is not enough. Jared

---

Jeanette M. Ouellette — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeanette M. Ouellette I cannot fathom how the SEC thinks removing quarterly reporting and allowing companies to hide their actions for 6 months at a time will benefit the average investor. How do I benefit? I don't. I can't react. I can't trust the dated information. My economic vision becomes limited and I can’t get ahead in that scenario. I trust the SEC to stand up and protect the small individual investors and not big business and large scale investors.

Jeffrey Utter — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-26-18 From: Jeffrey Utter Do not change the reporting requirements. Otherwise, we’ll just seeing why the requirements were established all over again.

Jennifer Hauser The Motley Fool — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Hauser KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING!!

Jenny — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jenny Quarterly reports are important to investors to gain insight on how a company is doing. Shrouding this information in semiannual reports is a recipe for financial disaster. This will have a negative impact on the economy. People need accurate information when they're deciding where to invest money. This can hurt retirement accounts. This will definitely lead to more fraud and insider trading. Keep quarterly reports to ensure a more level, accurate playing field.

Jim Phelan N/A — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jim Phelan I oppose cutting back 4 required reports to 2.

Joan Cash None — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joan Cash Do not change the reporting calendar for businesses. They should be reporting the required data QUARTERLY, not twice a year in order for investors and customers to make informed decisions and benefit financially.

Joanne Milhoan Retired — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joanne Milhoan Six months is too long a period without transparency Americans know this.

John Nagle N/A — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Nagle Comments attached

---

John Shaw Motley Fool Community — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Shaw as an owner, i need quarterly reports. benefit accrues to the company. this is of no benefit to the investor.

Jonathan Smith — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jonathan Smith I want companies to continue reporting quarterly earnings. This is very important to me as a private investor. I track my companies closely and I think that quarterly earnings holds them to account and gives me a clear picture of what is happening.

Jose Emmanuel Sanchez ENRON Victim — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jose Emmanuel Sanchez I didn’t recover the money that I put in Enron, so as other investors who trust the system, but failed us miserably, so, I’m asking you to keep the reporting of SEC quarterly! In Jesus name!🙏

Joseph Chang Principal Electrical Engineer — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joseph Chang Reducing the number of public company reports from four times a year to two makes investors less informed and should not be allowed to happen.

Judy Mattson — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Judy Mattson Americans want "quarterly"!!!!

Julie Balster — Jun 27, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Julie Balster I am opposed to the proposed rule. Any business operating in good faith is keeping ongoing records to monitor its performance and profit. Quarterly reporting protects not only the company, but the consumers, general public and our tax system.

K Morice Na — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-23 From: K Morice This changes in regulations does not help consumer protections in any way. It only exists to help companies and decrease their accountability to consumers and stock holders. Do not make this change.

K. Allison — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: K. Allison When you invest in something, you own part of the company. It is only right for shareholders to have access to information about a company's financial health. Providing financial reporting quarterly allows shareholders the ability to make more informed decisions, while also potentially reducing their risk in an investment.

Kare van Dijke The Motley Fool — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kare van Dijke Dear people, i,m very worried about the plans, that companys may give there financial resultnumbers just 2 times in a year in stead of 4 times in a year. I Hope this idea will not allowed. The time between the moments is far to long for controlling there financial development. Thank you for reading my concerns.

Kaye Campbell — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kaye Campbell Does anyone there remember WHY this was put in place in the first place? I do. Lot's of folks lost EVERYTHING and no one was held accountable. I strongly disagree with increasing the time frame between reporting. Leave it alone.

Keith Boyes — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Keith Boyes Company reporting should remain at 4X per year. Quarterly reporting to the shareholders updates the shareholders. Moving to Semi annual reporting would dramatically reduce transparency. All considerations should NOT just be to the firms but rather informing "the owners"/ shareholders must be a requirement. Cost is a very minor issue to the companies as this isn't the 1980's with someone stuffing envelopes and applying postage. I urge you to reconsider this motion and maintain balance and transparency to the shareholders. Thank you. (Province is Not enabled in your drop downs.)

Kevin D Corse Individual investor — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin D Corse Thank you for this opportunity to comment. As an investor, I value information, this proposal to reduce reporting requirements is not a good idea. When research only includes a couple looks into a company, I’m not convinced it’s enough. Please keep 4 times a year as a standard, for transparency purposes.

Kevin Hagen Retired — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin Hagen Please eliminate mandatory quarterly reporting. Business strategy books and business experience demonstrate that “Shorttermism” is a key driver of poor decision making. Reallocating the time, resources and executive attention now spent on quarterly reporting would help and would serve long term investors better. Short term investors drive shortsighted behavior- let’s put the corporate focus (and resources) on long term profits.

Kimberlie Miller — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kimberlie Miller I need to remain quarterly!!

---

l. garrett — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: l. garrett Semi-annually hurts small investors and leads to less oversite. These have poorer returns. Quarterly gives greater returns to smaller investors due to more reviews and more transparency. Don't be so lazy.

Lawrence kopp Citizen — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lawrence kopp Keep quarterly filing, fraud will run rampant if you do not. 6 months before oversight - way too long. Keep 10-q filings quarterly - shine a light on companies activities - reducing it only enables evil doers.

LeAnn Baker — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: LeAnn Baker Quarterly reporting should remain the standard. The only thing that keeps this industry accountable is regular reporting, and removing this guardrail will certainly result in bad behavior. Any honest and trustworthy company should welcome the transparency. This is not my opinion, it is a fact. Sincerely, LeAnn Baker BSN,RN Retired

---

Leslie Margolis — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leslie Margolis Having worked in the Corporate environment, I agree that the quarterly reporting process is laborious and can be a distraction from productivity. I also feel as an investor that twice a year is too little to know if the company is on track. Perhaps 3 times a year could be a good compromise.

Linda Cotterman Retired — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Cotterman Keep Required Quarterly Reports rule in force to protect investors

---

Lisa Glickenhouse None — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Glickenhouse Do NOT allow semi-annual reporting. Maintain quarterly reporting. I can't say this forcefully enough. Quarterly reporting works for the investors. If it ain't broke (and it ain't), don't fix it.

Lisa Hubbs — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Hubbs Having lived through the bankong crash of 2008, the panic of 1999 heading into the new millenium, and so many volatile times, those quarterly reports were the only vehicle that maintained investor faith in a system to either uphold or crash our fragile economic system. Without quarterly reporting, there is zero trust that the industry as a whole will do upstanding measures to keep this country running. Nothing. We are talking heading towards 1929 all over again. Investors put hard earned dollars in companies they trust. No reporting = no trust. The SEC members should be ashamed, and all should be relinquished from their positions who vote for this measure. Only those who wish to do unscrupulous things would approve of this. as it protects the rich few in power and leaves the vast majority of Americans investing in what hard little earned dollars they have for an even more uncertain future. How dare you even consider this. I personally will strongly consider taking my assets and relocating them to either companies who choose to retain quarterly reporting or out completely.

Lori Corsello — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lori Corsello "Those who do not learn from the past are doomed to repeat it." I'm paraphrasing, but the point is no less true. Eliminating quarterly reporting is how you repeat the Stock Market crash of 2008. Please DO NOT eliminate the thing that will help keep the economy from imploding again! Don't end quarterly reporting!

Lorraina McMinn — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lorraina McMinn SEC, You are supposed to be the agency that protects investors from misconduct! That is what quarterly reporting is in place to do. Do your job. Keep quarterly reporting in place. Government corruption is running rampant in this country. It has to stop. Again, do your job. Protect investors from misconduct. Lorraina McMinn

---

Mara Roccaforte retired/investor — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mara Roccaforte As a stockholder, I believe that each publicly held company has a responsibility to report to their shareholders and to the market on a quarterly basis in order to share the activities of the company and to share the outlook for the company. Please do not change the reporting period to every 6 months. Leave it at quarterly.

Marie Mischel — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marie Mischel I oppose this proper change. As a stockholder, I believe less frequent reporting could increase market volatility and delay the disclosure of pertinent information to investors like myself

---

Marilynn Hoss Retired (USA) — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marilynn Hoss Please, please keep the quarterly reporting. This is an example of we don't need history to repeat itself. Semi-yearly would most likely harm smaller investors!

Mario Nelson Bragança — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mario Nelson Bragança I am writing to express my opposition to the proposed rule that would allow public companies to replace quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting. As an individual investor, I believe that timely, transparent, and consistent disclosure is fundamental to well-functioning capital markets. When investors purchase shares in a company, they become owners of that business. Owners deserve regular updates on the financial performance, risks, and strategic direction of the companies they own. Reducing the frequency of mandatory reporting from four times a year to two would significantly reduce transparency. While companies operate continuously—making strategic decisions, introducing new products, responding to market conditions, and managing risks—investors would receive official updates only every six months. This would leave shareholders with longer periods of uncertainty and fewer opportunities to make informed investment decisions. Supporters of the proposal argue that reducing reporting requirements would lower compliance costs and encourage companies to focus less on short-term results. However, advances in technology, automation, and artificial intelligence have made the preparation and dissemination of financial information more efficient than ever before. Moreover, short-term market behavior is driven by investor reactions and incentives, not by the mere existence of quarterly reports. Limiting the availability of information does not encourage long-term thinking; it simply leaves investors less informed. Less transparency is unlikely to reduce market volatility. On the contrary, extending the time between official disclosures may increase uncertainty and result in larger price movements when significant information is finally released. More frequent reporting helps markets incorporate information gradually, promoting fairer pricing and more efficient capital allocation. The strength of the U.S. capital markets has long rested on high standards of corporate disclosure and investor protection. Weakening those standards risks reducing investor confidence, particularly among individual investors who rely on publicly available information to make informed decisions. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to reject the proposed semiannual reporting rule and to preserve the existing quarterly reporting requirements. Maintaining regular, transparent communication between public companies and their owners is essential to protecting investors and sustaining confidence in our capital markets. Thank you for considering my comments.

Marisa Elrick B.S. Accounting - CPA candidate — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marisa Elrick I want to thank the SEC for considering this rule. I am strongly in favor of it as an accountant who has assisted in 10-Q and 10-K preparation. First, I believe that this rule would reduce the burden on accountants. Before launching my own practice, it was common that I would work 60-80 hour weeks during a quarter end close. That is not sustainable for accountants, especially as the number of skilled accountants goes down. Working these hours twice a year is much more manageable. I vehemently disagree that allowing semi annual reporting would increase fraud risk, as some organizations would have us believe, as the time when fraud is caught is typically during an annual release. Quarterly financials are unaudited, and the UK has not had increased incidents of fraud since mandating semi annual reporting. Third, the SEC needs resources to better investigate actual cases of fraud. Currently, it takes years after fraud a has happened for the SEC to complete an investigation. Whether they can collect on behalf of the victims is often up in the air. Reducing the time for these investigations would allow the SEC to recoup losses for actual victims of fraud. I do believe there should be limits on companies that are allowed to do semi annual filings. First, I think there should be a threshold for annual revenue where companies would be allowed annual vs semi annual filings. Second, I think that any company who has been fined in an SEC investigation should be restricted to quarterly reporting.

Mark Padgett — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Padgett I believe that reducing the required number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake. Investors deserve transparency/visibility of the various positions of each and every publicly traded company of which they own a stake. Companies regularly produce reports (many as often as monthly) for use by their management to make decisions in order to ensure success. Sharing data/info from these reports with investors four times a year is, in my humble opinion, the least a company should be required to do. Ideally, a company should voluntarily share reports with investors at least four times a year. Requiring this will prevent any potential information sequestration by lackadaisical management or nefarious actors.

---

mark Palmer SEC Large Trader — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: mark Palmer I am classified as an SEC large trader. Financial information about companies needs to be as transparent and timely as possible for equity markets to function efficiently. I see no benefit to companies from decreasing their reporting requirements, But a huge detriment to investors. In fact in the age of AI, it should be possible to create a agentic financial agents which would continuously summarize accounting data and make it available in real time This would cost even less than doing quarterly reports So if you're going cancel quarterly reporting requirements go to the opposite extreme.. Make real time financial summaries available on a daily basis.

Marvin Knight no affiliation — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marvin Knight Subject: Opposition to the FCC's Proposed Semiannual Reporting Changes To the Federal Communications Commission: I respectfully submit this comment in opposition to the FCC's proposed changes to the Semiannual Reporting requirements. While the proposal may be presented as an effort to streamline administrative processes, I am concerned that reducing the frequency or scope of reporting could diminish transparency and public accountability. Regular reporting serves an important role in allowing regulators, stakeholders, and the public to monitor compliance, identify emerging issues, and evaluate whether regulated entities are meeting their obligations. Any reduction in reporting requirements should be supported by clear, publicly available evidence demonstrating that such changes will not weaken oversight or reduce the availability of information necessary for effective regulatory review. I have not seen sufficient justification showing that the proposed changes would maintain the same level of transparency and accountability currently provided by the existing reporting framework. Public confidence in federal regulatory agencies depends on openness, consistency, and meaningful oversight. Changes that reduce reporting obligations risk creating information gaps that could make it more difficult to identify noncompliance, assess industry practices, and ensure that regulatory objectives continue to be met. I encourage the Commission to retain the current reporting requirements or, at a minimum, provide a more comprehensive analysis of how the proposed changes will preserve transparency, accountability, and effective oversight. Thank you for considering my comments. Respectfully, Marvin Knight

---

Mary Andersen The Motley Fool Community — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Andersen An extremely poor idea. Our country needs the increased transparency that comes with more reporting. Less reporting = less transparency and more secrecy. This must not go forward.

Mary B Mackin Enrolled Agent — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary B Mackin This is a terrible idea. The rules exist because of those who take advantage of limited reporting. Quarterly reporting is no hardship given that the process is largely automated these days. Keep business honest.

Mary Garland — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Garland I was deeply disappointed when I learned of the proposed rule to change reporting from quarterly to semi annual. The SEC's mission is to protect investors; maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets; and facilitate capital formation. Quarterly reporting offer shareholders greater transparency and serve as a check on corporate activities. Without that check, insider trading will most likely increase (although no one would know because activities would be hidden) and individual investors will be at a disadvantage due to lack of timely information. This is another example of the rich getting richer. I debated even submitting a comment since the committee of five commissioners is now only three (Republicans of course) as trump so far has ignored his responsibility to fill the two open democratic seats. And my guess is those three Republican Commissioners are no different than Congress Republicans - they cannot think for themselves, have no spine or morals, and allow themselves to be ruled by a bully. I hope I'm wrong.

Mary Malhotra — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Malhotra I worked at a W-2 job long enough to have a 403(b) plan that I care about. I am also a small-business CFO who recently went back to school for formal accounting training. I am old enough to remember scandals and crises that turned the regular business cycle into a devastating roller coaster. All this experience has led me to appreciate the work and the requirements of the SEC. The SEC is part of our protection against the next ENRON or sub-prime lending debacle. Reporting is our power tool. Do not diminish it. Do not make it easier to hide malfeasance and deceit. Keep SEC reporting requirements quarterly.

Mary Martin — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Martin These are not the regs that need cutting! Large corporations are more than capable of revealing the quarterly financials - which they will be compiling regardless of SEC requirements. We need more transparency, not less! Remember the bank failures? Remember the collapse of Wall Street brokerages?

Mary Williams — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Williams For 50 years publicly traded companies have reported financial information on a quarterly basis, and that system should continue. We are in a period of time where there is distrust among stock-buyers because of insider trading reports, and companies may be stacking the deck against unsuspecting investors. Now is not the time to extend the reporting period for financials from 3 months to 6 months. This is a bad proposal.

Melissa Garnett — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Melissa Garnett I think it's best that companies continue to report quarterly due to the fact that investors would be left in the dark about the companies financial status and may not be able to make decisions regarding their investment until it's too late. Quarterly reports keep investors abreast of how the company is performing and gives them an advantage on knowing if the investment is continuing to serve them or if they need to pull out and invest elsewhere. For the sake of transparency and investor interest, keep the quarterly earning reports.

Michael Crispo None — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Crispo RE: Opposition to S7-2026-15 As an investor approaching retirement, I object to the reduction of the quarterly reporting requirements. I rely on this regular information to be sure that my investment goals are being met and significant changes within the companies are not hidden for up to six months. This change in reporting will put smaller investors such as myself at a significant disadvantage. This rule change would appear to create additional opportunities for insider trading upon non-disclosed information that is not available to the general public. Efficient markets rely upon everyone knowing what is happening with the company and it's prospects. Properly managed companies are not excessively burdened by these requirements and it is more likely to keep them honest. I strongly oppose changes that would replace mandatory audited quarterly reporting with something more optional. Internal financial monitoring should be frequently occurring and audited reports should be available for the public, not just insiders.

Michael J Powers Retired — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael J Powers I support the move to semi annual reporting. Organizations will still be influenced by investor market forces to provide quarterly updates. The market will punish unreliable or divergent inconsistencies in voluntary quarterly vs mandatory semi annual reports. Quality of material vs quantity/frequency matters. Quarterly vs semi annual does not decrease likelihood of fraudulent reporting. In the past, my oath was a 90 day declaration of integrity and transparency. In the future, my attestation would be across 180 days. The fraudulent manager will still be outed during annual audits. No one is audited quarterly.

Michael Robichaux — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Robichaux With technology, we could almost make a report even quicker to the point of monthly or by monthly. but as many people said, keeping quarterly, keep investors such as myself who has my money tied into a 401k which many use as supplement for a possible underfunding of social security by the time I retire knowledgeable and to not loose money because business officers and politicians cashed out due to insider information due to the longer term between reports. These reports are used by 401k managers to insure funds are making maximum amount for clients. By pulling this, they could be invested in a company which is going bankrupt and not know it as a quarterly would force to let them know revenue is trending down. Not get this oh hey we are almost bankrupt .

Michael Schuette — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Schuette Reducing a corporation's requirement for quarterly reporting does not serve the interests of shareholders. This reduces the amount of available information for shareholders to make informed decisions. If the rationale is that quarterly reporting is costly, who loses more in its absence? As the agency responsible for overseeing regulatory requirements, why would you remove or weaken your rules to exercise oversight?

Motley crew community — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Motley crew community Every major modern accounting scandal was enabled by gaps and opacity in financial disclosure. Quarterly filings don't prevent fraud, but they dramatically shorten the window in which it can fester before someone outside the company can see it. Companies need to keep reporting every 3 months

---

N. Pyle — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: N. Pyle Dear SEC, I am retired on SSDI. I am dependent on my investments in order to be able to afford to pay my monthly bills. Quarterly reporting helps me do this. Quarterly reporting allows me and all retail investors be informed investors. I can know what's happening with the companies I invest in, plus different sectors and the whole of the economy. Less frequent reporting hurts everyone, but mostly individual retail investors like me. Please keep the quarterly reporting requirement. It should remain one the small costs operating a public company. Thank you U.S. Citizen and voter

---

Nancy K Dahl N/A — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy K Dahl I am writing to support no proposed changes to corporate reporting. Investors need regular and comprehensive information to responsibly manage the funds they have invested in a company, especially since they do not have the benefit of insider information.

Nancy Murtaugh — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Murtaugh Keep quarterly reporting. It is important for us to know what is going on and insure accountability.

Nancy Zirbel — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Zirbel Keep quarterly reporting as is. I want to be able to see how companies that I have directly or indirectly invested in are doing. Six months is too long of a time to be operating without that information. Too much can be happening and economic conditions can change how corporations are reacting to those changes. If it ain't broke, why fix it?

Natalie L. — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Natalie L. I write as an individual investor and American citizen to strongly oppose the proposed transition from quarterly to semiannual financial reporting for public companies. This proposal, however it may be framed as a regulatory efficiency measure, would fundamentally undermine the transparency and accountability that form the very foundation of a free and fair market. When a company sells shares to the public, it enters into a covenant with its investors: in exchange for capital, it will operate openly and be held accountable. Quarterly reporting has been the standard expression of that covenant for decades, and for good reason. Reducing disclosure to twice a year does not lighten a burden, it breaks a promise. Individual shareholders, unlike large institutional investors, do not have analysts on call, private access to management, or alternative intelligence channels. For the average American investing in their financial future, a quarterly earnings report may be the only substantive window into how their money is being managed. Information asymmetry is already a structural disadvantage for retail investors. Institutional investors, hedge funds, and corporate insiders benefit from a continuous flow of market intelligence unavailable to ordinary shareholders. Quarterly reporting is one of the few mechanisms that forces a level of informational parity. Cutting reporting frequency in half does not simplify the market, it widens the gap between those who have information and those who do not. In practice, this means individual investors will be the last to know when a company is struggling, mismanaged, or heading toward crisis. The public bears the cost when companies fail. We cannot ask taxpayers to absorb the consequences of corporate failure, through bailouts, pension losses, and economic cascades, while simultaneously giving those same companies less obligation to disclose how they are operating. Accountability and access to capital must go hand in hand. If a company participates in public markets, it must be held to public standards of transparency. Loosening those standards sends the wrong message: that the obligations of public companies flow in one direction only. A free market depends on informed participants. Market efficiency is not abstract, it is the product of millions of investors making decisions based on available information. Restricting that information does not liberate the market, it distorts it. Prices will less accurately reflect reality. Risk will be harder to assess. Fraud and mismanagement will have longer runways before discovery. None of this serves investors, and none of it serves the health of American capital markets. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal and preserve the quarterly reporting standard that has served American investors and the integrity of our markets for generations. If the SEC's goal is truly to protect and empower investors, it will choose more transparency, not less.

Nicholas Kolman — Jun 27, 2026
Oops! Page Not Found. Error 404 Please check the web address or try searching below. Search Search To report a broken link, please email webmaster@sec.gov. We regret any inconvenience and we thank you for your interest in the SEC website. Last Reviewed or Updated: Sept. 1, 2021

Olga Roig Investor — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Olga Roig As an investor and former financial professional having worked for a Wall Street Investment Banking Firm as well as a large Public Financial Services company it is imperative that publicly traded companies continue to submit Quarerly

Reports to maintain transparency of the material events and changes in financial condition of a company with Managment discussions explaining those events and changes so that investors and lenders know the most current financial condition and be able to make fully informed investment decisions within reasonable time frames. Six month intervals for reporting is too long of time to be able to make sound investment decisions and make adequate risk assessments of the future financial condition of a company. Quarterly reporting ensures accuracy because internal accountants must reconcile accounts monthly and quarterly to ensure GAAP reported amounts are accurate and not under or overstated. Six months of financial data is a lot more difficult to identify anomalies or inaccuracies. Current processes and procedures already exist to support quarterly reporting so keeping the quarterly submission is not costing extra. Eliminating quarterly reporting will incentivize companies to reduce financial accounting staff increasing the reporting auditing and data integrity burden on a significantly reduced staff. Delayed reporting of material events will also cause mor market price volatility as investor react to unexpected financial or material events. CEO and CFOs must be held accountable quarterly for the performance of their companies.

Pam Crawford Retired — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pam Crawford Pam Crawford, retired. No changes. Keep it at quarterly. We're tired of robber bparons. We well remember Enron and how many citizens ruined by corporate greed.

Paúl Marcelino García Fernández The Motley Fool Community — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paúl Marcelino García Fernández Not agree on reducing the number of reports per year.

Peter Kral — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter Kral As a shareholder and an owner, quarterly reporting assists with transparency for me to make informed decisions about the company(ies) I invest in. Changing this requirement is an erroneous action.

Phil Heron — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Phil Heron Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Rajesree Patel (Individual) — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rajesree Patel (Individual) I write in strong opposition to the proposal to reduce reporting to file semiannual reports. As an individual investor I believe in transparency and reducing the number of reports to semiannual removes that transparency. I also fear that with reduce reporting requirements the chances of maleficent will increase and hurt the small individual investor like myself. In this day and age of AI and technology it should not be burdensome for companies to continue to provide quarterly reports. Thanking you for consideration of my comments

---

Raymond Shillito none — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Raymond Shillito US companies are becoming larger and more secretive. History shows that they and their auditors can and do obscure their business decisions and practices in order to hide illegal activities. This was exemplified by Enron and other business disasters for investors, such as the tech bubble, and the 2008 crash when excessive speculation on property values by financial institutions led to huge losses and a need for the government to bail out large companies, while small companies had no resources to fight the disaster. We are in danger of another bubble in the so called "AI" industry that will again require taxpayers to fork out millions of dollars and severely damage our 401K and other investments. As a retired person I strongly object to making it easier to hide business practices by reducing company reporting, and instead we should be pushing for more transparency.

Rebecca Hartung — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rebecca Hartung Comments attached

---

Renita Galbreath Teacher — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Renita Galbreath Keep corporate reporting frequent, fair, and transparent for the public. Keep quarterly reporting!

Richard Floyd Democratic party — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Floyd None of your business

---

Richard Hunter — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Hunter Quarterly reporting is essential to keep corrupt CEOs and CFOs in line. Don’t stop it.

Robert Dressel — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Dressel I am adamantly against this proposal. Semiannual reporting will decrease transparency, disadvantage retail investors, and increase the likelihood problematic issues inside public companies go unnoticed for longer resulting in a more volatile market.

Robert Martin — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Martin The proposed amendments eradicate existing transparency. Not only are reporting frequencies reduced, but the quality of the reports degrades substantially. There are no significant restrictions on the age of the data. The proposed rule change should not be approved .

Robert Peeler Motley Fool Community — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Peeler Transparency is integrity. If you want me to invest in a company, reporting and research must be current, not 6 months in arrears....I would encourage more reporting not less.

Ronald — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ronald Don't you dare we the people need access quarterly to see the hidden off shore .money accounts the way it know they steal and hide enough

---

Rosalva V. Lopez — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rosalva V. Lopez Comments attached

---

Ruthann Davis concerned American — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ruthann Davis concerned American "We The People" is precisely what this is all about. Our government should be working for us, not Special Interest Groups! Get America back on track.

Sameep Shah — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sameep Shah Keep reporting and transparency to 4 times a year

---

Scott Christeson None — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Scott Christeson KEEP REPORTING QUARTERLY!!

Sean Harris Rutgers MBA and Public Policy student — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sean Harris History doesn’t repeat itself but it’ll surly rhyme when you don’t learn from it. Great Depression of ‘33 gave us the Glass Steagall act which we then wrongly repealed for the sake of growth and it allowed for the Great Recession of ‘08. The 70’s and ‘02 disclosures gave us quarterly reporting and CEO certification which improved legitimacy and consistency in corporate earnings. In an age where the middle classes only refuge is to take the little savings we do have and put it into the stock market for retirement after stripping corporate responsibility for pensions. Don’t destabilize the one thing that provides consistency and accountability for returns if nothing else.

Sean Millikan — Jun 27, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sean Millikan Dear Secretary, As an individual retail investor, I am writing to express my strong opposition to the SEC's proposal to permit public companies to elect semiannual reporting in lieu of quarterly Form 10-Q filings. The current quarterly framework provides vital transparency that levels the playing field between institutional firms and everyday retail investors. Extending the reporting window to six months creates a massive information vacuum, increasing information asymmetry and giving institutional market participants an unfair advantage. Frequent disclosures are critical for monitoring corporate health, assessing executive execution, and managing investment risk. Reducing the frequency of these filings will decrease market efficiency and harm retail investor confidence in the integrity of the public markets. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal and maintain mandatory quarterly reporting. Sincerely, Sean Milliken

---

Sharon Parker — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sharon Parker Need to stay informed.

Shawn McComb Citizen — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shawn McComb It is fair to report quarterly and should continue. Reporting less is too likely to give insiders more information than the public leading to opportunities for the wealthy and lack of opportunities for the rest of the population. The possibility for fraud increases with less reporting.

Sheila Reed None — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sheila Reed I am not in favor of companies submitting less financial reports than is currently required for public view.

Snehal Shah None - just an individual foolish investor — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Snehal Shah Deregulation, reduced information only protects companies large enough to be on the exchange.

Stephanie Fields Attorney — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephanie Fields Absolutely not. This change cannot be permitted. Quit selling out to the billionaire class. The people united will never be defeated. Do not try us. Just be fair. Greed is gross.

Stephen M. Codd — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen M. Codd Keep the 10-Q. Nothing shows Europe's way is better. More information is better.

Sterling Spencer — Jun 27, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sterling Spencer Should make it monthly, do not let them hide and illicitly move money at the expense of the people ever again!

Steve Willey — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve Willey As an investor, I oppose this rule change. Please keep the quarterly reporting.

Steven B. Rebarber MD Motley Fool Community — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven B. Rebarber MD As an active investor, I rely on timely follow up from companies' addressing current challenges, successes and events. Please do not decrease the frequency of quarterly reports from companies.

Steven Berline — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven Berline This proposal is a disaster. Reputable companies will continue to provide quarterly reports in part as an assurance to the public of their openness and honesty. Scammers, on the other hand, will now get an additional weapon in their arsenal to hide their misdeeds. As the WallStreetBets comment letter put it: "The companies we trade are not being held back from greatness by the obligation to file four reports a year. ... The entire S&P 500 files a 10-Q every quarter, and the S&P 500 is at an all-time high. If quarterly reporting is crushing American capitalism, American capitalism is hiding it well.""

Susan Chambers — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Chambers You will be hiding critical information from my family. We invest. We are elderly. We are smart. We know SEC, and government for that matter, are doing their best-all to hide inconvenient truths. We Know delayed information hurts us Americans hurts us. Delayed information helps SEC and the companies we study and research. So… what’s it gonna be? Hide or reveal. Lie for a while and wham truth arrives too late for us lowly investors. For shame. And how dare you.

Susan Gates investor/retired banker — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Gates I think it is an epically bad idea to move from quarterly to semiannual financial statements for publicly held companies. As a retired banker and current investor, I have seen great swings in revenues and expenses, as well as balance sheets during quarters, much less 6-month periods. Investors and analysts need to have a more real time view of companies, not let management do "whatever" and hope to sort it out by the end of the 6-month reporting period. Think Enron, the Dot Com Bomb, current fast movements in AI companies and the pace of their increases in debts vs revenue/profits, increases in publicly held companies going bankrupt. The world moves to fast to dial back financial reporting. Do you want to look at YOUR investment portfolio only every 6 months????? I can't believe this is being seriously considered at this point in the economic cycle. What do you want to hide? The effects of poor government policy on the economy/companies?

Tamera Pugh Retired — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tamera Pugh Tamera Pugh, Parma, ID Please do not change the quarterly reporting. It is already hard enough to make sure we are not getting stolen from or hacked into poverty. By making the reporting less often it will be impossible to find the hackers and or the thief's who have stolen our hard earned money.

Teresa Brugman, APRN, BC Retired nurse practitioner — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Teresa Brugman, APRN, BC My investments deserve the same protection that they currently have through Charles Schwab. I am worked since age 13, according to Social Security, and worked for50 years as a highly skilled nurse. I have invested and saved for my grandchildren's futures. They will face historic deficits, and greater challenges than previous generations. If opportunities for corruption arise due to less frequent oversight, corruption WILL occur. I receive scam attempts and phishing attempts every week. We know that bad actors attempts to hack into financial institutions and instruments daily. If you reduce oversight, you jeopardize the financial future of the next generation. There is no wisdom in risking the financial health of our society. Please consider my request and those of hundreds of others. Thank you, Teresa Brugman, APRN, BC

Teresa Tarantino Investor — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Teresa Tarantino I am an avid investor. Changing the reporting for companies from quarterly to every six months is a mistake in my opinion. Investors should be kept aware of everything a company is doing throughout the year. The ability to hide indiscretions or failures will be much easier with this new reporting you are purposing. Public companies need to be kept accountable on what and how they are running a company. They went public for a reason and everyone deserves to know if they are profitable or not and what their plans are.

The Motley Fool Community. UE consultant Directive 2006/42 Ue — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community. Concordo con il parere negativo espresso dalla comunità e prego di considerarlo Grazie Buon lavoro

---

Thomas Bayrer Retired Executive, MBA — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Bayrer As an investor I am against eliminating the quarterly reporting for publicly traded companies. A semi annual regime will add more volatility and risk and would amplify any results that are considered sub par, leaving it to analysts to guess about results over a 6 month lag. Please vote no on semi annual reporting.

Thomas Sutherland Engineer — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Sutherland Do not change from quarterly to semi-annually. This will increase market volatility and greatly reduce transparency.

Tim Giacomino — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tim Giacomino Transparency is the basis of investing. It it of the utmost importance, and needs to be preserved, The cost benefit "saving" of reducing the reporting requirements is tough to believe. With technology changing with increasing autonomy by the day, if this even was a valid concern it could be overcome. What could not be is companies withholding information from the public/investing community which will hurt generally more than any current reporting burden. Making everyone less informed is not the correct path to take, and urge to not reduce the reporting requirements. Thank you.

Tim Jarrett Retired-Quasi Govt — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tim Jarrett Semiannual reporting allows potential material matters to stew and become very much worse, thus potentially harming small investors while benefiting insiders, etc. This is a horrible idea!!

Tobe Daum Educator — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tobe Daum It is important to preserve quarterly reporting. Preventing fraud and repeating episodes such as the Enron disgrace is to be avoided in our country.

Tom Zeneberg Motley Fool Community — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tom Zeneberg I think companies need to be reporting their financial status a minimum of quarterly.

Vernon Carr None — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vernon Carr I oppose S7-2026-15 which would eliminate the need for corporate quarterly reporting. Eliminating the quarterly reporting would severely hamper my ability to research corporate financial health. Reducing the transparency the public deserves of corporations using their invested funds is not responsible. This rule change increases the investment risk to the individual investor in particular.

Vini E Nielson The Motley Fools co1mmunity — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vini E Nielson This seems to be another really, really stupid idea. I think companies could easily report once a month without increasing costs. The idea of reducing reporting is just asking for trouble. We need MORE transparency not less. Please, this isa bad bad bad idea.

Vivi Wickersjam — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vivi Wickersjam We, the investor, need as much information that is public information as possible. These stocks are publcly traded. Seems like someone is trying to rip off the people who support open markets. SEC should be a more strict commission and say NO and regulate!!!!

W. L. Carbrey — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: W. L. Carbrey I am opposed to changing to semiannual reporting. The current quarterly reporting is working well and in this computer age I see no valid reason to change. It just opens the system up to more potential fraud and abuse. Thank you!

Waylan Owens — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Waylan Owens Two reports a year are not enough. Maintain the quarterly reports cycle. Do not change. Thank you.

William Cronk, CFO, Novak Warren Private Capital, LLC — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Cronk To Whom It May Concern, I am writing to express my strong opposition to any proposal that would reduce the frequency of public company reporting from quarterly to semiannual. Such a change would significantly weaken market transparency and disproportionately disadvantage smaller, everyday investors who rely on timely information to make sound financial decisions. Quarterly reporting provides a consistent flow of data that helps level the playing field. Large institutional investors already have access to sophisticated analytics, direct company engagement, and alternative data sources. Retail investors, by contrast, depend heavily on standardized, SEC-mandated disclosures to understand a company's performance, risks, and trajectory. Extending the reporting cycle to six months would widen the information gap between those with privileged access and those without it. Longer periods without required disclosures also increase the likelihood that material issues - such as deteriorating financial conditions, governance failures, or emerging risks - remain hidden until they become far more damaging. Quarterly reporting acts as an early-warning mechanism that protects smaller investors from being blindsided. Additionally, the argument that quarterly reporting is overly burdensome is increasingly outdated. Modern technology, including AI-driven financial tools, has dramatically reduced the cost and complexity of preparing accurate disclosures. AI can automate reconciliation, detect anomalies, streamline narrative drafting, and ensure compliance with reporting standards. These advancements make more frequent, higher-quality reporting not only feasible but efficient. For the protection of retail investors and the continued integrity of U.S. capital markets, I urge the SEC to maintain the current quarterly reporting requirement. Thank you for your consideration. Sincerely, William Cronk

---

William J Brice NA — Jun 27, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William J Brice Less reporting is just dumb. How are investors to understand what they are investing in with less information? Stop this from passing.

Aaron Means CEO ACTIVATE Business Solutions — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aaron Means This change should not be made, we need more transparency, not less. Protect the retail investors, protect all investors.

Adam Field Motley Fool Community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adam Field It is absolutely critical to well functioning markets that investors continue to get the quarterly reports they have been getting. Going to semi-annual reporting would be HIGHLY dangerous leading to greater market volatility and the potential for bubbles. It is madness to consider this.

Alexander Reyers — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexander Reyers I am writing as an individual investor to express my strong opposition to the proposal that would allow public companies to reduce their reporting frequency from quarterly to semiannually. At its core, investing is ownership. When individuals purchase shares in a business, they deserve regular, transparent communication regarding the operations and financial health of that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the fundamental connection between companies and their shareholders. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal for the following reasons: Obscuring Information Does Not Cure "Short-Termism": Some argue that semiannual reporting would ease the pressure on management to perform quarter-to-quarter. However, short-termism is driven by how people react to information, not by the availability of the information itself. Taking away quarterly reports does not make the market more patient; it simply leaves investors less informed. Reduced Transparency Increases Market Volatility: A business operates every day—launching products, acquiring customers, and executing strategies. Limiting official updates to twice a year creates significant information gaps. Less transparency does not eliminate uncertainty; it amplifies it. When semiannual reports are finally released, the surprises are likely to be larger, causing sharper market reactions and greater volatility. Technology Has Mitigated Reporting Costs: While proponents may argue that fewer reports reduce administrative costs, this perspective is outdated. In an era of artificial intelligence and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, the cost and burden of producing quarterly reports have been vastly reduced. Less information rarely creates better-informed owners or more efficient markets. I urge the SEC to prioritize investor protection and market transparency by maintaining the current quarterly reporting standards.

Alice Medalia — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alice Medalia I am writing this comment to express fervent opposition to the SEC proposal to allow public companies to abandon quarterly reporting in favor of semiannual disclosures. Quarterly reports protect individual investors and are the single most important leveling mechanism between retail and institutional investors in U.S. equity markets. Semiannual reporting doubles the information gap between insiders and ordinary shareholders, and will lead to volatility, uncertainty, and mistrust. The arguement that quarterly reporting burdens corporate investment behavior is not supported by research that shows reporting frequency has no measurable effect on corporate investment behavior. The SEC is accepting the real cost of less transparency for individual investors, for a benefit that the evidence says simply won't materialize. Furthermore, the companies most likely to opt out require oversight most. Smaller, less-covered businesses operate with less scrutiny. Reducing their reporting requirements makes them harder to monitor, not easier to own. As the WallStreetBets comment letter put it: "The companies we trade are not being held back from greatness by the obligation to file four reports a year. ... The entire S&P 500 files a 10-Q every quarter, and the S&P 500 is at an all-time high. If quarterly reporting is crushing American capitalism, American capitalism is hiding it well."

Allan Stamler — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Allan Stamler This is a very bad idea. But then I think you know that. This proposal reeks of corporate corruption. Save us all some trouble down the road. Don’t do it!

An wells — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: An wells Please do not make this change to make quarterly optional. Quarterly reporting is critical for investors to understand their investments and provides important information used to hold companies accountable. Without quarterly reporting, how can we know what we’re investing in or what it’s worth? This proposed change is highly concerning.

Angel L Lopez Accountant and Small Business Owner — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Angel L Lopez To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I write to you today in Support for Quarterly Reporting. Removing and reducing reporting requirements for publicly traded companies will decay the economic resiliency of small businesses and the communities they operate in. I urge you to reconsider moving forward with S7-2026-15. First, the proposed rule if implemented will raise a red flag to international investors and banks who depend on quarterly reports that are reviewed and audited to make sound financial decisions. This will slow down investment earnings and wind down lending to working class individuals and "mom and pop shops." Second, no quarterly reporting requirements will allow promotional propaganda to become an investor's compass. I would like to remind you of ENRON. An energy company that used Marketing campaigns to fool their own workers, leading to the biggest collapse in savings that I have seen in my lifetime. The result of ENRON triggered the initial decay of the middle class, dismantled Arthur Anderson (one of the then, big five accounting firms) for complicity, and harmed many businesses and communities with their "energy scheme." Business markets are more volatile today than prior to Covid-19. Quarterly reports contribute to the long term investor confidence. Third, we meaning humans are currently being comfronted by the examination of our own value as humans because of Artificial Intelligence (A.I.) propaganda. Rule S7-2026-15 is creating room for a coded program or A.I., to determine and communicate to the public what a sound investment is. Even, the Office of Professional Responsibility within the Internal Revenue Service communicates that A.I. does not replace due diligence. Quarterly Reports are diligent acts regulated by your Agency. The US economy needs quarterly reporting now more than ever. In conclusion, No Quarterly Reports will lead to less accurate reporting. If a bank will deny a small business a loan because of messy books, why should the public be encouraged to invest in a company that can bypass quarterly reporting. The SEC should place sanctions and fines on those companies for negligence. The priviledge of being a publicly traded company should be maintained instead of preserved for nepotism. Thank you for taking the time to read this. Angel Lopez Providence, RI

Angelo Dieguez — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Angelo Dieguez I don't understand how this could be considered. Regardless of the word of mouth, or news media coverage. The quarterly report gives the investor a true picture of what they're investment is doing. I've been a small investor, most of my life. However, if financial reporting goes to semi-annual. I, and I suspect many other retirees will be forced to abandon the market.

Anna P Gordon Republican — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anna P Gordon I am a private citizen with over$200k invested in the stock market. I am opposed to only receiving statements twice a year. I need to know what is happening to my investments as well as make decisions to protect them.

Anne Adams — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne Adams Dear SEC members, I am an individual investor and I do not support moving from quarterly reporting to semiannual reporting. Th proposed amendment should not be approved. As a retiree, now more than ever, I and my advisors rely on reviewing quarterly reports to help with our investment knowledge and strategy. The proposed change will negatively impact trading and monitoring of companies. It will create uncertainty, lack of comparability over time, and impact trend analysis that is needed for investors. With semiannual reporting there is a huge knowledge gap to the investors. Six months is a long time for lack of access to information on companies' finances, investments, debt, and possible lawsuits. Quarterly filings can help prevent company fraud as there is more timely access to and scrutiny of company information.

Anne DeCarufel None — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne DeCarufel Please keep reporting quarterly! It's hard enough to follow what companies are doing, waiting 6 months for a report is too long to make accurate decisions.

Anne Henderson — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anne Henderson Affiliation: Jun. 26, 2026 The more light we put on corporations, the better. People are good, but when they become corporations, they often find for the good of corporations, not individuals.

Please keep it quarterly.

Anne Henderson

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anonymous — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 26, 2026 The entire reason the SEC exists is to protect investors from corporate greed, malfeasance, and outright lawlessness. Why on earth would a regulation designed to provide minimal insight into corporate operations be cut in half, reducing the ability for investors to have some understanding of what is going on inside the companies in which they invest? KEEP IT QUARTERLY! In fact, make public reporting a BI-MONTHLY event! Make it MONTHLY! But in NO WAY should reporting requirements be relaxed at all.

Anonymous — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their shareholders. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it.

Anonymous — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Are you crazy or are you in the pocket of the crooks? This is not an undue burden and investors like myself consider it a small price to pay for an additional level of protection of our investments. I lived through the S and L crisis, junk bonds, keating 5, worldcom, Enron…. One thing I've learned is crooks will exploit every loophole they can find. Don't open one with this proposal. It does not serve the stock holders.

Anonymous — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Please don't change from quarterly to semi annual reporting. Our family lost significant money during the Enron debacle. Corporations need to be held accountable. If I can file quarterly returns to the state and IRS for a very small LLC, a giant corporation can file quarterly SEC reports with no problem. The risk is too great to go to semi annual reporting.

ASHOK KAJI MOTLEY FOOL — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: ASHOK KAJI Investors deserve more transparency not less. Their 401 k and retirement are at stake. It will be too late before they will know what is happening with the company they invested in. Urge SEC to reject this proposal.

Audit Committee Council (ACC) — Jun 26, 2026
June 26, 2026
Vanessa A. Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securi
es and Exchange Commission
100 F Street NE
Washington, DC 20549
Re: File No. S7-2026-15 – Proposed Rule to Allow Semiannual Repor
ng
Dear Ms. Countryman:
The Audit Commi
ee Council (ACC) appreciates the opportunity to share our views and provide input on the Securi
es and Exchange Commission's ("Commission" or "SEC") Release No. S7-2026-15, Proposed Rule to Allow Op

onal Semiannual Repor
ng (the “Proposed Rule”).1 The ACC is an independent advisory commi
ee of the Center for Audit Quality (CAQ) comprised of ten independent audit commi
ee members, including audit commi ee chairs. This le er reflects the ACC’s views based on their collec
ve experience as audit commi ee members and chairs and does not necessarily reflect the views of the CAQ, its member firms, or CAQ Governing Board members.
The ACC supports the Commission’s important ini a ve to foster an environment in which more companies are willing to enter - and remain in - the public markets. For this reason, we support the objec
ve of simplifying the regulatory obliga ons associated with public company repor ng. This is a worthwhile goal while preserving trust and transparency that is founda onal to the capital markets.
We support the Proposed Rule providing all companies with the op on to report on a semiannual basis.
This op
onal framework can modernize the repor ng regime to enable companies to determine the repor
ng cadence that best aligns with their business, industry dynamics, and investor expecta ons.
Our support for the Proposed Rule is grounded in its op onality.
Quarterly repor ng may very well be the right choice for a company and its shareholders. We are not suppor
ve of a regulatory mandate that would limit the frequency of financial repor ng to a semiannual cadence. Permi ng companies to calibrate repor ng frequency to their circumstances will be er align disclosure prac
ces with business needs. A one-size-fits-all repor ng cadence does not reflect the diverse needs and circumstances of public companies.
1 Proposed Rule to Allow Op
onal Semiannual Repor
ng; Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140;
File No. S7-2026-15)
It is appropriate for a company’s management, along with its audit commi ee, based on stakeholder outreach, to determine the appropriate frequency of interim financial repor

ng.
We recognize that some stakeholders may ques on whether less frequent mandatory repor ng could adversely affect investor protec on. This Proposed Rule is not manda ng semiannual repor ng, and we are not suppor
ve of such a mandate. Investors, analysts, lenders, and other stakeholders will con nue to demand
mely and comparable informa on. Companies that do not meet these expecta ons may face higher costs of capital or diminished investor engagement which could create strong incen ves for companies to maintain repor ng prac
ces that meet the needs of their shareholders.
When we think about the repor ng regime in its totality, beyond just Form 10-Q, there are other important safeguards to provide investors with mely disclosure of material developments between repor
ng periods which will preserve transparency even if repor ng frequency changes. For example, Form 8-K - used for earnings releases and other material events - remains a cri cal safeguard that is a well-established and understood mechanism for such disclosure.
Regardless of the cadence or the form, financial informa on provided to the capital markets must con
nue to be reliable.
There is a strong discipline within companies at quarter-end to comply with the current regulatory regime to file quarterly repor ng on Form 10-Q. Reliability of financial informa on is the product of a company's discipline related to the frequency of the opera on of disclosure controls and procedures, internal control over financial repor ng, the ming of audit work performed by the external auditor to support the annual audit, and the interim review of financial informa on by the independent public accountant as required by Regula on S-X2 in accordance with Public Company Accoun ng Oversight
Board (PCAOB) standards.3
In our view, the review of interim financial informa on by the independent public accountant is an important requirement. However, there is no requirement for the independent auditor to review a company's earnings release. The earnings release furnished to the SEC on Form 8-K is cri cally important. If a company elects to file interim financial statements on a semi-annual basis and furnish an earnings release on Form 8-K during the first and third quarters, we encourage the Commission to consider whether the independent public accountant should be involved and perform procedures related to the earnings release. Further, we encourage the Commission to work with the PCAOB to consider whether PCAOB standards related to review of interim financial informa on may need to be modernized as SEC rules and stakeholder expecta ons evolve.

For many companies, it may be appropriate to con nue with quarterly repor
ng. Audit commi
ees are well posi
oned to oversee that the appropriate rigor and auditor involvement is maintained rela ve to the size and complexity of the company contribu ng to investor protec on and trust to the capital markets.
2 SEC Rule 210.10-01(d), Interim review by independent public accountant
3 PCAOB AS 4105, Reviews of Interim Financial Informa
on

For these reasons, the ACC supports the Commission's Proposed Rule to permit—but not require—semiannual repor ng for all issuers. We believe this approach advances regulatory flexibility while maintaining strong investor protec
on.
We also support the Commission's efforts to streamline Regula on S-K (qualita
ve descrip
ons) and S-X (financial statements) to eliminate redundant disclosures, focus on materiality, and reduce compliance costs as appropriate. The frequency of interim financial informa on is one but not the only regulatory burden with which public companies contend. Focusing on reducing the regulatory burden and barriers to enter the public markets on mul ple fronts is important to achieve the Commission's objec ves.
We appreciate the Commission's though ul considera on of this important topic. As the Commission gathers feedback from other interested par es, we would be pleased to facilitate a mee ng of the Audit
Commi
ee Council with the Commission or its staff regarding the views expressed in this le er. Please address mee

ng requests to hello@thecaq.org.
Respec
ully submi
ed,
Members of the Audit Commi ee Council
cc:
SEC
Paul S. Atkins, Chairman
Hester M. Peirce, Commissioner
Mark T. Uyeda, Commissioner
Kurt Hohl, Chief Accountant
Heather Rosenberger, Chief Accountant, Division of Corporation Finance PCAOB
Demetrios (Jim) Logothetis, Chairman
George R. Botic, Board Member
Mark A. Calabria, Board Member
Steven D. Laughton, Board Member
Barbara Vanich, Chief Auditor

Barbara Leclerc Business Professional in the Payments industry — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Leclerc Companies listed on the NYC Stock Exchange should not be allowed to reduce the number of public records provided. If anything, we should require them to be more transparent of their company growth and earnings. Quarterly reports are not frequent enough to know and understand a company's growth and financial state. The proposal to reduce the number of reports to twice a year should be blocked/denied/rejected.

Barbara Voter in The USA! — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara I am asking for the reporting on files of reporting to yo to continue quarterly. We do not need more fraud. Our tax paid money needs to go for what it is intended. No more being slack in keeping tract of what is going on with the tax money. Thank you

---

Barry Rabichow None — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barry Rabichow Do not eliminate quarterly reporting.

Ben Nieves — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ben Nieves I believe more information & transparency is better for the individual investor and this proposal would reduce both to the detriment of the individual investor (consumer).

Beth Babich — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beth Babich Quarterly reports are critically important to understand what's going on in a company. Maintaining this requirement protects investors. Keep the requirements for quarterly reports

---

Beth Jupp Owner, Infocore Inc. — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beth Jupp I saw this pending rule change in a news article. I vehemently disagree with changing the rule to allow companies to submit filings less than 4 times a year. The filings were put in place to hold these companies accountable to their shareholders and avoid any false reporting. Having more time between reports gives these companies more time to change/hide information and gives shareholders much less transparency. In addition, shareholders need to be able to analyze trends in the companys' performance including P&L and balance sheet activity in order for shareholders to adjust their investments accordingly. This rule change would unduly impact small investors and retail investors who already are not privy to better and earlier buying options that the larger investors have beyond what the general public have. The general public must be protected!! The SEC was formed to do exactly that, and passing this rule will potentially interfere with the sole reason the SEC began.

Beverly Newell — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beverly Newell 88yr Widow, worked till 70th yr, wages lower than a male, no retirement, lived paycheck to paycheck. Living frugality on small SSI & small investment 🙏🏻compassion & wisdom prevail, this SEC gift to Wealthy never sees the light of day. Survivor as a working poor should be applauded not punished for without them there would be no America

---

Bill Bliss — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bill Bliss Affiliation: Jun. 26, 2026 My name is William Bliss and I am a retired teacher, and I keep a close eye on my investments because I need to make important and hopefully wise decisions on my limited income. This would be more difficult and murky if the change to six months were made. The technology is more available than ever. Please keep it quarterly.

Sent from my Verizon, Samsung Galaxy smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

Brenda Grippi NA — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Grippi Let's not repeat Enron; keep quarterly reporting. If it's not broken, don't fix it!

Brian Le Blanc NA — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Le Blanc Please do not eliminate the quarterly reporting requirement or the requirement for CEOs and other corporate officers or board members to sign financial reports attesting to their truthfulness. Small investors like myself are not privy to the "talk on the street" and rely on 10-Q and 8-K reports to monitor company performance. Leaving a six month dark period leaves small investors without information and provides too much opportunity for corporations to hide poor performance. additionally, I advocate for increased accountability for corporate officers and board members, including incarceration for corporate crimes that currently carry only a fine for the company, which amounts to the cost of doing business in some cases. If corporations are people, as posited by the Supreme Court, they, or controlling persons, should be incarcerated for crimes for which a natural person would be incarcerated. An alternative to incarcerating corporate officers would be to "incarcerate" the corporation by diverting all earnings to the government for the duration of the sentence.

Bruce Fischer Motley fool member — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Fischer Require quarterly reports

---

Bruce Thayer — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Thayer Stockholders are company owners. We are all entitled to the same information available to corporate leadership every quarter. It is a small thing to deliver quarterly results to investors in exchange for the money they receive from stockholders. Please continue to require QUARTERLY reporting for all public companies and corporations. Thank you.

C. T. Ryther — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C. T. Ryther Greetings, I am writing to strongly oppose this rule change. Quarterly reporting a good business practice and is not a significant burden on businesses. Semiannual reporting would open up greater opportunities for mismanagement and fraud. As investors, we are owed the maximum amount of transparency possible. Given the maleficence that has occurred in our markets in the recent past, it is your job to make sure that markets are not manipulated in a way that damages our economy or harms individuals. This rule change will cause investors like myself to have less confidence in the market. Many will change the way they invest to hedge against the extra risk you will be creating with this rule change. Do not end mandatory quarterly reporting.

Carmine — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carmine Please leave earnings reports at 4 times per year. Why would you propose otherwise?

Carolbelle Branch Communications Professional — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carolbelle Branch Keep quarterly reporting. There are NO valid reasons for not doing it. In fact, computerized communications systems and AI have made reporting easy, so easily it could be done monthly. More than ever, we need transparency to protect investors, and never again should dishonest, greedy corporations and their officials get a pass for illegal activities

---

Cary Toor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cary Toor DO NOT ELIMINATE THE REQUIREMENT FOR PUBLIC COMPANIES TO FILE EARNINGS QUARTERLY. If the SEC allows public companies to only provide earnings every six months instead of every quarter, this will put small, individual retail investors at a significantly disadvantage to institutional investors who have their own research departments and can figure the earnings out on their own. The system of filing 10Qs has worked well for both public companies and investors for a long time. Eliminating it would provide less transparency and allow companies to hide information from their investors for an extra 3 months. Please continue to require public companies to submit earnings quarterly.

Cat marcasciano Business manager — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cat marcasciano There not valid reason to be doing this. We need financial accountability for all companies.

Catherine Dickert — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Dickert Please keep quarterly reporting requirements in place for companies. Investors need this information to make better informed decisions. Thank you.

Catherine McFeeters — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine McFeeters A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that’s a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Cathy Taylor The Motley Fool Community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cathy Taylor I disagree with the proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Reducing the available information to stockholders would mean more surprises and lead to more market volatility

---

Cee — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cee Keep corporate reporting frequent, fair, and transparent for the public. Keep quarterly reporting!

Charlie Willis — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Charlie Willis Affiliation: Jun. 26, 2026 Charlie Willis, Retired. keep it Quarterly. Without open transparency fraud and decisions made will negatively affect this country as a whole. We need Quarterly reporting for our democracy.
Please stop allowing current leaders to influence and take away what you know is basic American Rights. Think of how this will affect your kids and grandchildren. Stand up for all our basic needs by voting Keep It Quarterly

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Chris — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Do not pass this proposal.

CLAYTON throop — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: CLAYTON throop Companies need to report to keep investors informed of how their business is doing so investors know how their business is being run.

Colleen Rodgers — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Colleen Rodgers Accountability

---

concerned citizen — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: concerned citizen This is a bad idea. Why is the SEC taking away safeguards that protect citizens who own stock in 401K's and IRA's?

Cynthia Simpson Primary Teacher — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Simpson Cynthia Simpson, Primary Teacher. It’s essential for me to view transparent, up to date information about a company for me make investment decisions. If I’ve already invested, I insist on a minimum of published quarterly results.

D. N . Wright — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D. N . Wright I'm commenting to express my displeasure at your consideration of reducing the frequency of corporate reporting. As a retiree, I depend on quarterly reporting to help me make investing decisions. I am concerned that longer gaps in reporting will create an unfair advantage for corporate insiders while the company saves money that won't be passed on to their customers. The savings is not worth the cost of non-reporting. Other countries have tried this and did not see the results expected. Please do not implement this change.

Dale Barnes — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dale Barnes Absolutely NO 6 month reporting. It needs to stay quarterly. What is everyone trying to hide? This makes absolutely no sense for investors!

Daniel Cates Motley Fool Community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Cates Please don't change quarterly reporting. This is important for investors to understand what is happening at their companies!

Daniel Housley Attorney — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Housley I whole-heartedly oppose moving to a less frequent reporting scheme. I depend on quarterly disclosures to manage my investment strategy. Reducing the frequency of disclosures hampers everyone's ability to make sound investment decisions. This will have negative impacts for most investors, but it will have an outsized effect on retirement accounts and portfolios of those who do not manage their investments directly. In our age of technology, our ability to report financial information more frequently has increased, and so reducing frequency not only hampers sound investing, but it flies in the face of sound public policy, as we should be requiring MORE FREQUENT disclosures to leverage technological advancements. To do otherwise simply allows bad actors to remain obscured, which causes poor business decisions to have even larger effects on the market, which is a main driving factor toward inflation. In short, this rule would be negative for all involved, and it will drive up inflation, and it will disproportionately impact individual investors, retirement accounts, and other non-corporate parties.

Daniel Longbottom — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Longbottom Don’t support the recommended changes

---

Daniel Nevin Partner, NF Holdings Ltd. — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Nevin Reliable quarterly reporting is foundational to our public markets which are the envy of the world. Having traded both European and US markets attempts to emulate European standards are foolish in the extreme. American financial markets are vastly superior to their global competitors. Let's keep it that way.

David Campbell None — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Campbell There must be transparency and accountability at all times! Yes for in forcing quarterly reporting!

David Field The Motley Fool Community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Field A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that's a mistake! We need more transparency, not less. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Keep the quarterly reporting rule.

David Lockhart Motley Fool Community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Lockhart Less information does not a better market make. It will make it more difficult to make investing decisions, increase volatility and incentivize insider trading and consequently act as a drag brake on markets. Opaqueness only benefits the unscrupulous and disadvantages the individual investor.

Dean Chang — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dean Chang Dear Securities and Exchange Commission, Thank you for the opportunity to comment on SEC S7-2026-15 and for your continued work to improve the efficiency and integrity of U.S. capital markets. I respectfully oppose the proposal to move from quarterly to semiannual earnings reporting. As a retail investor, I rely heavily on timely financial disclosures to evaluate company performance, assess risk, and make informed investment decisions. Reducing reporting frequency would significantly limit the amount of current information available to individual investors like myself. Quarterly reporting provides an important level of transparency and accountability. It helps investors detect changes in business fundamentals earlier, respond to evolving risks, and maintain confidence that markets are fairly informed. Moving to semiannual reporting would increase information asymmetry between large institutional investors—who may still have access to alternative data sources—and retail investors who depend primarily on public filings. While I understand the intent to reduce compliance burden on companies, I am concerned that this change may unintentionally disadvantage smaller investors and reduce overall market transparency. I encourage the Commission to consider maintaining quarterly reporting or, alternatively, preserving quarterly disclosures for key financial metrics even if full reports are reduced in scope. Thank you for considering my comments. I respectfully urge the Commission to preserve the current level of reporting frequency in the interest of transparency, fairness, and investor protection. Sincerely, Dean Chang

---

Deb — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deb The SEC should work for all Americans. Trickle down economics has already been recognized as only benefitting the richest Americans. Leave the guard rails alone.

Debbie — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Debbie Keep it quartely and hold everyone accoyntable

---

Dennis Webb None. Private Investor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Webb Please maintain current reporting schedule to give investors better transparency.

Diane Palmer Southwestern College Humanities professor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diane Palmer I am writing to insist that you do the obvious right thing and keep quarterly reporting. I am a teacher a year from retirement and my pension will be my income going forward. I need to know I can rely on it. Diane Palmer

---

DM — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: DM SEC Officials, I am writing to oppose proposed Rule S7-2026-15, which would allow public companies to replace quarterly Form 10-Q reporting with semiannual reporting on Form 10-S. While efforts to streamline compliance requirements for public issuers have merit, the proposed rule would come at the expense of market transparency and investor confidence. By eliminating quarterly reporting, the rule would limit access to consistent, reliable financial information, impairing investors' ability to accurately assess corporate performance and increasing information asymmetry in the market. Moving from quarterly to semiannual reporting would significantly extend the period between standardized public disclosures, leaving investors with fewer timely opportunities to evaluate a company's financial condition and operating performance. During these longer reporting gaps, material developments may occur without the benefit of comprehensive public financial information. While insiders, institutional investors, and other sophisticated market participants often have access to management discussions, industry intelligence, analyst networks, and alternative data sources, ordinary investors rely primarily on periodic public filings. As the availability of reliable, standardized information declines, investment decisions are more likely to be driven by speculation, rumors, and incomplete information rather than objective financial analysis. The resulting increase in information asymmetry would weaken market transparency, reduce the efficiency of price discovery, and place retail investors at a distinct disadvantage. Furthermore, claims that quarterly reporting imposes an excessive compliance burden should be evaluated in light of the substantial technological advances that have occurred since these requirements were adopted. Modern accounting software, enterprise data systems, cloud computing, and digital communications have dramatically reduced the cost and complexity of collecting, analyzing, and reporting financial information. Any assessment of compliance costs should reflect these efficiencies rather than assume that the burdens of decades ago remain unchanged. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to reject the proposed rule and preserve quarterly reporting requirements. Doing so will help maintain transparent, efficient, and fair capital markets while protecting the interests of ordinary investors.

Donald D Marchand — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Donald D Marchand I believe we need to continue having quarterly 10-Q reports. I don't believe continuing to report on a quarterly basis will be a significant cost to the companies that have to do the reporting.

Dr. Robert K Alexander ` — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dr. Robert K Alexander In regard to the proposed biannual- only reporting by companies in which we own shares, we absolutely have the right and responsibility to continue to receive quarterly financial reporting from any and all companies we own. Share holder monitoring and input is critically important to us and to the companies themselves!

E . Medina — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: E . Medina I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposed rule that would allow public companies to opt out of quarterly reporting in favor of semiannual reporting (Form 10-S). Everyday investors will be left entirely in the dark, destroying the principle of fair disclosure . Increasing Volatility and Risk: Waiting six months for certified financial data means that when material changes are finally disclosed, the stock price reactions will be massive and volatile, disproportionately wiping out retail wealth. Compromising Market Integrity: A long, 180-day gap between official financial disclosures creates a fertile breeding ground for insider trading and information leaks, further eroding trust in our public markets . While reducing regulatory compliance costs is a noble goal, it should not be achieved by sacrificing market transparency at the expense of regular citizens trying to build their retirement savings. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal and maintain the mandatory quarterly reporting framework.

E.M Kaye — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: E.M Kaye As an investor in a company, I provide money in return for owning a share of the company. I have every expectation that the company, as part of the condition of taking and using these funds provide adequate transparency into their financial activates. The rules and regulations that have historically governed how and on what the companies report have always been to protect shareholders. Removing the need for quarterly reporting flies in the face of nearly every other financial reporting standard in effect today. Even the US government expects QUARTERLY tax payments even from individuals if you under withheld the prior year. companies need to consider the cost of quarterly reporting just part of the price of doing business and must continue to do so. The world has been subject to far too many Macro economic events in the last 10 years to not have at the very least quarterly visibility into a companies performance, business trajectory, management activities etc. If this proposal were come to pass, I would need to seriously re-evaluate my comfort level with investing in many companies, especially those known as "growth" companies. If other like minded investors also chose not to risk investing in such companies this would have a devastating impact on the country's ability to remain at the forefront of technology and medical developments and breakthroughs as the cost of capital would likely become astronomical and therefore untenable as a sustainable business model.

Earnestine Moss — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Earnestine Moss Affiliation: Jun. 26, 2026 Hello SEC,
I oppose the proposed rule change. That means six months between disclosures. If that happens, insiders benefit, retail investors lose. I say keep it quarterly! It matters to me because transparency is critical to protect investors, and quarterly reporting helps to prevent corruption. There was a reason the quarterly reporting was instituted, and that reason is still valid, especially in today economy.

Earnestine Moss
Retiree
Investors need protection

Earnestine Moss — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Earnestine Moss Affiliation: Jun. 26, 2026 Hello SEC,
I oppose the proposed rule change. That means six months between disclosures. If that happens, insiders benefit, retail investors lose. I say keep it quarterly! It matters to me because transparency is critical to protect investors, and quarterly reporting helps to prevent corruption. There was a reason the quarterly reporting was instituted, and that reason is still valid, especially in today economy.

Earnestine Moss
Retiree
Investors need protection

Eileen Marie Haworth — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eileen Marie Haworth Semi annual reporting is a very bad idea. I would not support any legislation proposing a lessening of public companies reporting requirements to its shareholders.

Electa Bessler Retired Limited Partner/Edward Jones — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Electa Bessler As a retired financial adviser, I cannot imagine trying to adequately advise an investment client on stock investments with semiannual corporate reporting. Semiannual corporate reporting does not adequately provide enough valid/timely data to make informed investment decisions. As a retired investor I would feel like I'm flying blind with only semiannual data being available. If the proposed change is adopted it may result in an increase in market volatility and reduced ownership of stocks by the investing public. No one wants to buy/own a "pig in a poke". Please maintain quarterly corporate reporting requirements.

Elizabeth Miller — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth Miller Investors both small and large rely on quarterly reporting to make decisions about investments. The requirement for quarterly reporting is not an onerous one - as public companies still need to provide this information for their own board and company. Quarterly reporting as an essential feature of transparent, efficient and trustworthy capital markets. We need only look at companies such as Enron who were able to fool the markets even with the quarterly requirement. There is no good reason to relax these rules, it can only do damage.

Evan Lemker — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Evan Lemker I oppose this proposal because quarterly reporting is a cornerstone of market transparency and investor confidence. More frequent financial reporting helps investors make informed decisions based on current information rather than stale data. Reducing required reporting to semiannual intervals would increase information gaps, making it easier for material developments to go undisclosed for longer periods and potentially increasing information asymmetry between insiders and the investing public. While reducing compliance costs for issuers is a worthwhile goal, those savings should not come at the expense of transparency, market efficiency, and investor protection. I encourage the Commission to retain quarterly reporting requirements while pursuing more targeted approaches to reducing unnecessary reporting burdens.

F Gudmundsen — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: F Gudmundsen There is not enough transparency now so this would not be helpful. It gives those in the know an extra advantage over the average investor.

Faisal Masood — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Faisal Masood I have serious concerns if you change the reporting from quarterly to six months.

Frank Phillips Retired — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Frank Phillips Continue to require CEO signatures on quarterly reports.

Gail Loverud — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gail Loverud CEOs should absolutely continue quarterly certifications to prevent fraud. We don’t want another Enron. Something tells me Trump has his greedy little hands in this issue.

Ganapathy Sivakolunthu — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ganapathy Sivakolunthu Hello, With AI and technological advancement company's should report quarterly earnings like now not changed to half yearly. This is my thought thanks Gana

---

Gary Austin Retired CPA and CFO in the financial services industry — Jun 26, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gary Austin I worked in the highly regulated financial services industry for over 50 years serving as a CFO, SEC Reporting Manager, Risk Manager, Compliance Manager, etc. for numerous public entities. Now I invest in publicly traded companies. I am in opposition to converting from a quarterly reporting process to a semiannual process. The quarterly process allows public companies the opportunity to report on their progress in a timely manner. Reporting every six months does not give the investment community enough data on which to make investment decisions. Please reconsider this change in SEC reporting.

Gary Kane — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gary Kane I think it is huge disservice to all investors if public companies are allowed to lessen the times they have to report their earnings.

George G Van Nostrand Private investor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: George G Van Nostrand Do NOT change quarterly financial reporting. Less information rarely creates better-informed owners.

Geraldine Phells CPA — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Geraldine Phells As an accounting professional, timely financial results are critical to making good decisions. Most organizations need monthly financial data. To remove quarterly reporting to investors put them at a disadvantage of knowing what is going on within the company. I understand the desire to streamline reporting. Should you want to simplify, then consider 2 robust quarters of reporting (2Q and annual 4Q) and simplify the other quarters, but do not eliminate the requirement to officially report results to owners-the investors timely.

Glen Okita Semi-retired Tech Executive — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Glen Okita Another ill-advised action by our chief buffoon, er... goon! US equity markets have the highest valuations due to the most transparent and timely corporate reporting in the world. It seems clear that moving away from the this standard will damage valuations and hurt both corporate and individual investors. If our domestic markets lose leadership, then why wouldn't capital flows head to London or even Singapore or China? There is so much chatter about "meritocracy" for unfair and idiotic ideas. So don't take the obvious stupid action - what will your legacy be?

Guy G — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Guy G I respectfully oppose the proposal to reduce public company reporting from quarterly to semiannual. As an individual investor, and one for whom investments comprise the majority of my assets and income, I believe timely and transparent disclosure is essential to making informed investment decisions. Public shareholders are owners of the companies they invest in, and regular reporting helps ensure accountability between management and shareholders. Reducing the number of required reports would not eliminate short-term market behavior. Instead, it would leave investors with less information for longer periods, increasing uncertainty and potentially leading to greater market volatility when new information is finally released. Strong, transparent markets depend on the timely flow of accurate information. Quarterly reporting has long been an important part of that framework, helping investors evaluate company performance, governance, and risk. Therefore, I encourage the SEC to maintain the current quarterly reporting requirements. Thank you for your consideration.

Gwendolen Blair, Financial Advisor, Empire Financial Architects — Jun 26, 2026

Helen Cortissoz — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Helen Cortissoz This is absurd, and should not be allowed, more corporate corruption and to only benefit the ultra rich! Many investors, who invest in the market that are middle class/ retirees trying to survive in this economy, that has been turned upside down by Trump and his corrupt GOP Republicans!

Helen S Vaughan The Motley Fool Community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Helen S Vaughan A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that's a HUGE mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners.

Holly Giles Investor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Holly Giles Our economy is built around trust in the information reported to shareholders. Reducing the frequency of reporting will reduce transparency, and therefore trust in companies, which will likely result in reduced investment by people like me. I would like to see more reporting, not less.

I. H. Terrill Retired. — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: I. H. Terrill Investors / stockholders need current information on company performance. I can appreciate how companies would want to operate with semi-annual reporting requirements, instead of quarterly reporting, but the risk to investors would increase too much if they lost access to quarterly reports. Please keep the standards as they are now: quarterly reports. We need a stable system. We need transparency.

Investor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Investor Keep quarterly reporting because as someone with millions in investments I'll pull every cent and nobody will have anything to report

---

Isabelle Cote the motley fool — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Isabelle Cote very important to have 4 rapports by year

---

Jackie Kaplan Teacher — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jackie Kaplan Please do not change from quarterly to twice a month! It will not benefit us to do so. It is important to keep big Corporations transparent and hopefully honest. These are tough times for Americans and we do not need more to worry about, especially those of us approaching retirement age.

James Courtright — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Courtright Stockholders are owners, and need the four reports per year. Savings are questionable, with new tools available to help automate quarterly reporting. Part of my activity before choosing a company to invest in, is to review current activity reports. They do not need to be chopped in half in frequency.

James H. Porter None — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James H. Porter DO NOT reduce reporting requirements. Maintain quarterly reporting. Period. Full stop. We, the shareholders, own these companies and we demand frequent reporting to support informed decision making and to hold company managers accountable. History shows clearly that less frequent reporting leads to lower returns. This is unacceptable. Maintain quarterly reporting. Period. Full stop.

Jamil Scott Enjoy reprise Architect, Peraton — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jamil Scott As an investor, i don’t understand how less information is helpful to stockholders in any way. This sounds like an opportunity for self-interested boards to extract money from shareholders. I’m opposed to this change.

Jan Kuttner The Motley Fool Community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jan Kuttner We all need to be involved when ot comes to financial decisions and having more frequent and transparent reporting is a great based from which to STAY informed.

Jan Moore — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jan Moore I support the current system of reporting four times per year. Do not reduce the reporting to two times per year. Consumer should be more informed not less informed in order to make better decisions. Online reporting is very efficient and cost-effective.I subscribe to the Mötley Fool and stand with it supporters

---

Janice Borgwardt Retired — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Janice Borgwardt What is the point of this other than to cheat investors? Please demonstrate more honesty and concern for the public. Billionaires don’t need your help to get richer on the backs of the rest of us.

Jay Donovan — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jay Donovan It is absolutely unconscionable that you would consider allowing companies that we own a piece of, to report only twice yearly. Can you imagine your small business manager only giving you information twice a year? If so; I sure wouldn't want to be an investor in your company. Thank you for your consideration.

Jeff Petroski — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeff Petroski As an individual investor, I rely on quarterly reports to assess my investments. Biannual reporting is not sufficient for us to keep informed.

Jeffery McClellan — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeffery McClellan The change in quarterly reporting rule will disadvantage individual investors and those with mutual funds,401k and index funds investors. In order to faithfully invest, we need the most accurate and up to date financial information, otherwise we might as well invest our monies in Vegas at the crash or roulette table.

Jeffry Lester — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeffry Lester PLEASE KEEP REPORTING WHERE IT IS!! DO NOT REDUCE THE REPORTING PERIOD.

Jesse Wright — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jesse Wright Two reports per year is unsound.

Jessica Day — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jessica Day Do the right thing. Keep public companies accountable and keep the standard with quarterly reporting.

Jin Bae The Motley Fool — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jin Bae Hello, I am opposed to changing the reporting cadence to be semiannual. It just does not provide enough updated information for stock holders; a lot (too much) can happen in 6 months. The stocks that I hold are my golden retirement egg and I would like to continue keeping close watch on those companies. Thank you.

John C. Coates (on behalf of the Shadow SEC) — Jun 26, 2026
June 26, 2026
Via Electronic Submission
Vanessa A. Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, NE
Washington, DC 20549
Re: Comment on SEC Proposal to Allow Companies to File Semiannual Reports on New Form 10-S in Lieu of Quarterly Form 10-Q Filings
Release No. 33-11414; File No. S7-2026-15
Dear Secretary Countryman:
The undersigned members of the Shadow SEC respectfully submit the attached statement, "Shadow SEC Statement No. 8: Comment on SEC Proposal to Allow Companies to File Semiannual Reports on New Form 10-S in Lieu of Quarterly Form 10-Q Filings," for inclusion in the public comment file for the above-referenced proposed rule.
The attached statement sets forth our views regarding the Commission's proposal and is submitted for the Commission's consideration during the rulemaking process.
Respectfully submitted,
John C. Coates
Harvard Law School
John C. Coffee, Jr.
Columbia Law School
James D. Cox
Duke University School of Law
Merritt B. Fox
Columbia Law School
Joel Seligman
Washington University School of Law
Shadow SEC Statement No. 8: Comment on SEC Proposal to Allow Companies to File Semiannual Reports on New Form 10-S in Lieu of Quarterly Form 10-Q Filings
By John Coates, John C. Coffee, Jr., James D. Cox, Merritt B. Fox and Joel Seligman
June 1, 2026
In a statement published last September, here, we argued that the SEC should maintain its current system of mandatory quarterly reporting and not adopt President Trump's recommendation that the United States shift to a system based on six-month filings. We provided a number of reasons why we believed this change would be unwise but stated that if the Commission were to make any change to the reporting system, a second-best solution would be to provide registrants with the option of either providing six-month reports or retaining the current quarterly system. On May 5, the Commission issued its Proposal Release to Allow Companies to File Semiannual Reports on New Form 10-S in Lieu of Quarterly Filings, Sec. Act Rel. 11,414 that is consistent with our recommendation. We appreciate that the SEC rejected scrapping the quarterly reporting system altogether, but in this statement we reiterate that the May 2026 SEC proposal represents the lesser of two evils. The better course of action is to maintain the current mandatory quarterly reporting system.
The question of timing of mandated disclosures should be understood against the background that the United States does not have a continuous disclosure system by which a covered firm must announce promptly any new material information in its possession. We instead have a system requiring firms to periodically answer a set of specific questions in its annual Form 10-K report, quarterly 10-Q reports, and the updating Form 8-K reports for specified events. This system has the advantage of greater clarity as to what must be disclosed and when, but the disadvantage that some information useful to the market remains undisclosed until it is called for by one of these forms. The current quarterly reporting system represents an effort to balance this disadvantage versus the advantages of the current system.

Giving firms the option to move to six-month reporting would ignore the primary reasons for making disclosure mandatory in the first place. Any optional disclosure system risks leading to a lower equilibrium: Firms are often disinclined to voluntarily disclose information useful to their competitors, major suppliers, and major customers, even when the information is useful to current and potential investors and accordingly likely would have a positive impact on share prices. If all firms are required to disclose, the share prices will reflect these positive impacts, while each firm not only provides information to these other firms, but also receives from them comparable information. Moreover, even if only one or a few firms in an industry were to choose not to disclose what is now required information, comparability would be lost. The disclosure of each firm in an industry helps investors and potential investors understand the meaning of all firms in that industry.

We are deeply skeptical of the wisdom of adopting even an optional semiannual reporting system as proposed. We have previously recognized the virtues of an independent Commission, see Shadow SEC Statement No. 1, The Value of an Independent SEC, available here. Since our initial statement on the wisdom of retaining quarterly reports, Commissioner Caroline Crenshaw, the sole Democrat on the Commission, ended her term on January 5, 2026. The Commission is now led by a 3-0 Republican majority. The Commission has broken with decades of tradition and with Congress' statutory design to maintain a one-party agency with solely Republican commissioners wielding power over United States capital markets. As a result there are no commissioners at the SEC with the practical ability to ask hard questions of proposals that emanate from the White House, as the proposal for semiannual reporting system did. The unlikelihood of internal commissioner-level debate is amplified by President Trump's insistence that he has the right to fire independent agency commissioners at will.

We also have recognized the risks associated with the deep cuts in SEC staff—recently stated to be 20 percent or so of earlier staff—and the loss of morale and experience associated with high staff turnover. See Shadow SEC Statement No. 2: The Crisis Deepens as SEC and Budget Cuts Are Directed, available here.

The semiannual reporting proposal should be understood in light of these facts—a one-party proposal that likely has received less internal review and debate from fewer experienced attorneys, economists, and analysts than historically would have been the case had the SEC been operating normally as an independent agency.

This likely has resulted in the exclusion of concepts self-evidently important to any fair reading of this proposal. For a critical example, SEC Chair Atkins in a May 5, 2026 statement making the case for semiannual reporting explained that "companies and their investors" need to determine for themselves "the interim reporting frequency that best serves their business needs and investors." We agree that if an optional semiannual reporting system were to be adopted, it is preferable that investors be part of any company's decision to adopt this change. If managements of reporting companies simply opt for semiannual reporting, they may alienate many investors. Companies could suffer a significant loss in share value that greatly exceeds any cost savings from moving to a six-month reporting interval if investors felt differently and discounted the registrant's shares because of lesser transparency. Under existing SEC statutory authority and rules such as Rule 14a-8, shareholders could be asked to vote before a company could move to ending quarterly reports. This could be framed as a precatory vote as would be consistent with current Delaware law. Hypothetically, if 90 percent of shareholders voted in favor of retaining quarterly reports, this would be important for management to know. Ignoring such information or failing to obtain it could result in activist hedge funds seeking board representation in order to challenge management's decision. This would be expensive to both sides and could be avoided if management sought a serious census of its shareholders before proceeding.

The SEC semiannual rule proposal is strikingly unusual for its approach to judging new disclosure standards. There is little analysis of the possibility of an increase in fraud as a result of companies being able to report less frequently. See the Proposing Release at pages 67-78 and 110-115. The Proposing Release does recognize what it terms a likely increase in "information asymmetries" and the risk that agency costs may cause companies to choose to report less frequently than would be in the interest of shareholders. This is quite different than recognizing that there have been major securities frauds in recent years because of obscuring or misstating financial data such as Enron, WorldCom, and most recently FTX. Historically, the SEC had long provided detailed data on disclosure requirements that could be correlated with the presence or absence of such information about material transactions with insiders, disclosure of bonuses, profit-sharing arrangements, the incidence of restatements, or the failure of companies to disclose all material financial information, a key issue in several crypto cases, which the SEC dismissed, about companies that engaged in overseas transactions to avoid full disclosure and United States oversight. See Louis Loss, Joel Seligman & Troy Paredes, Securities Regulation 51-54, 730-751, 849-862 (Wolters Kluwer 7th ed. 2024). Although, Chair Atkins is correct that investor protection is one of the core elements of the SEC mandate, the Proposing Release seriously underemphasizes the extent to which the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 were adopted to deter fraud and to allow enforcement actions to spot what does occur.

The SEC's semiannual reporting proposal also lacks a serious attempt to synthesize the results found in studies of comparable rule changes outside the United States such as the Robert Pozen, Suresh Nallareddy & Shiva Raigopal 2017 study, the Impact of Reporting Frequency on UK Public Companies, Research Found. Briefs 3, No. 1 which found that only 10 percent of covered companies elected to move to semi-annual reporting. It cites a study of such a rule change in Israel, Keren Bar-Hava, Audit Fee and Corporate Governance Quality, 9 J. Fin. & Acct. 249 (2021), but solely for the finding that semi-annual reporting reduces audit hours, and not for the effects reported in that study that suggest that such a switch would produce harms such as negative stock-price reaction to announcements by companies that were making such a switch and the positive associations with good governance at firms that did not make the switch.

The SEC instead arbitrarily assumed without citing reliable data that 20 percent of listed companies will elect to use semiannual reporting, see Proposal notes 313 and 332. This assumption is based on a single survey from Nasdaq that did not report the response rate, the size of the surveyed universe, or any basis for believing that the companies that did respond were representative of public companies generally. Seventy-five percent of 183 responding companies did report in this survey that they would move to semiannual reporting. Left unaddressed in the assertion is that there are roughly 3500 Nasdaq companies. This amounts to 4 percent of the total Nasdaq firms.

Nor did the SEC candidly acknowledge that estimated costs and benefits of its rule change are so uncertain that the net benefits of the proposal cannot in fact be reasonably quantified. The proposal does recognize the possibility of increased costs of capital, lower liquidity, increased insider trading, and increased costs for analysts searching for information to replace quarterly reports by companies that choose to move to semiannual reporting. It also recognizes that there would be a diminution in the ability of prospective investors or institutional investors to engage in comparable financial analysis if some firms now report on the semiannual Form 10-S once a year and others three times a year on the quarterly Form 10-Q. Indeed, the potential harm to investors due to the lack of comparability is broader than that between firms that continue to report quarterly on Form 10-Qs and those that instead report semiannually on Form 10-S. Additional comparability concerns are posed by firms who cease to file on Form 10-Q but supply some quarterly information to the market in a nonconforming format outside the language mandated by the SEC in Form 10-Q. While the SEC proposal states that it lacks a basis for estimating the magnitude of such harms, it nowhere clearly acknowledges that as a result of the lack of data it has no basis for estimating the net costs and benefits of the rule. This, in effect, is hiding the ball when it comes to the very serious risks of its proposal.

Is there a strong need for this proposal? The stock market is up approximately 20 percent since President Trump took office in January 2025. The Dow Jones Average opened 2025 at 42,660 and recently and consistently has traded above 50,000. The Commission's Investor Advisory Committee asserted before its March 12, 2026 meeting: "The disclosure requirements for public companies have increased dramatically in recent decades at a significant cost to public companies." But this can be viewed as the cost of doing business. United States capital markets' total equity market capitalization increased by $11 trillion in 2024 alone with substantial increases since then. The costs of the SEC mandatory disclosure system should be compared with their benefits. As Luzi Hall and Christian Leuz, International Differences in Costs of Equity Capital: Do Legal Institutions and Securities Regulation Matter?, 44 Acct. Rev. 485 (2004), states, "firms from countries with more extensive disclosure requirements, stronger securities regulation and stricter enforcement have a significantly lower cost of capital."

SEC Chair Atkins has repeatedly expressed interest in increasing the number of publicly traded companies. This is within the SEC's power to achieve by reducing the breadth of its current exemptions. See Renee Jones, Untamed Unicorns (Harvard Univ. Press 2026 forthcoming). The notion that offering companies the option to report semiannually will make much difference to company decisions to register with the SEC or remain private is fanciful. What might make a difference is changing disclosure requirements, proposals for which the Commission has made in separate releases. We will analyze these releases soon.

The bottom line here is simple. If it ain't broke, don't fix it. We have the most stable, highly regarded securities markets in the world today. We should celebrate, as Chair Atkins once did, markets that are the "envy of the world."

This post comes to us from the Shadow SEC, whose members are professors John Coates at Harvard Law School, John C. Coffee, Jr. at Columbia Law School, James D. Cox at Duke University School of Law, Merritt B. Fox at Columbia Law School, and Joel Seligman at Washington University School of Law.

Publicly published at: https://clsbluesky.law.columbia.edu/2026/06/01/shadow-sec-statement-no-8-comment-on-sec-proposal-to-allow-companies-to-file-semiannual-reports-on-new-form-10-s-in-lieu-of-quarterly-form-10-q-filings/

John Martin — Jun 26, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Martin Lack of integrity in American business makes it important that the SEC continue quarterly reporting requirements. I am opposed to reducing the frequency of any oversight.

John Schoenecker, American Petroleum Institute — Jun 26, 2026

John Schoenecker
Director
Tax, Trade, and Accounting
schoeneckerj@api.org
(202) 682-8000

June 26, 2026

Vanessa A. Countryman

Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, N.E.
Washington, D.C. 20549-1090
Re: File Number S7-2026-15, Proposed Amendments to Permit Optional Semiannual Reporting by Public Companies
Dear Ms. Countryman:
The American Petroleum Institute ("API") is the national trade association representing America's oil and natural gas industry. Our industry supports nearly 11 million U.S. jobs and accounts for approximately eight percent of U.S. GDP. API's approximately 600 members, from fully integrated oil and natural gas companies to independent companies, comprise all segments of the industry. API's members are producers, refiners, suppliers, retailers, pipeline operators, and marine transporters as well as service and supply companies providing much of our nation's energy. API was formed in 1919 as a standards setting organization and has developed more than 800 standards to enhance operational and environmental safety, e iciency, and sustainability.
We appreciate the opportunity to comment on the SEC's proposal to amend reporting requirements from quarterly to semiannually, and we support the Commission's broader e orts to modernize the disclosure framework in a manner that enhances e iciency, reduces unnecessary complexity, and provides flexibility, while preserving robust investor protections. We believe the Commission's disclosure regime should be principles-based and scalable, recognizing that a one-size-fits-all approach does not reflect the diversity of issuer profiles, business models, or investor needs across the public markets, including those represented by API's member companies.
API supports optional semiannual reporting, when considered alongside existing disclosure mechanisms and the requirements of Regulation FD. API believes the Commission's proposal appropriately acknowledges that the public disclosure ecosystem has evolved significantly since the onset of periodic reporting. Investors today access and consume information through a wide range of channels beyond periodic reports, including earnings releases furnished on Form 8-K, investor presentations, webcasts, and issuer websites. Based on feedback from market participants, including investors and analysts who follow API member companies, there is substantially greater emphasis on these more timely communications than on the Form 10-Q itself.

John Schoenecker
Director
Tax, Trade, and Accounting
schoeneckerj@api.org
(202) 682-8000
In this respect, the proposal reflects modern market practices and investor behavior rather than legacy reporting conventions.
API agrees that disclosures should focus on material information that is most relevant and useful to investor decision-making. The value of interim reporting lies in the quality, clarity, and relevance of the information provided, rather than frequency alone. Semiannual reporting, when considered alongside existing disclosure mechanisms and the requirements of Regulation FD, can preserve the flow of material information to the market.
Rather than responding to the Commission's requests for comment on a question-by-question basis, API has structured its feedback around several overarching themes that are central to the e ectiveness of this proposal.
1. Continuing Availability of Timely and Material Information to Investors API does not believe a move to semiannual reporting would result in a reduction of material or timely information available to investors. Feedback from investors and analysts across the energy sector indicates that they increasingly rely on earnings releases, webcasts, investor presentations, and other timely communications, rather than the Form 10-Q itself at quarter end, as their primary sources of information. The proposed framework appropriately recognizes that investor information needs are met through a broader, more dynamic, and often more immediate disclosure ecosystem, not solely through periodic reporting forms.

Importantly, this shift in investor consumption patterns has not diminished market transparency, market e iciency, or outcomes for market participants, whether institutional or retail investors. Regulation FD, along with Form 8-K filing requirements, continues to provide a substantial framework for the timely dissemination of material information. Issuers remain strongly incentivized to communicate material developments promptly to maintain investor confidence. API expects its members will continue to adapt disclosure practices to investor expectations and market demands, irrespective of changes to periodic reporting frequency.

Furthermore, issuers electing semiannual reporting will likely continue to provide a consistent cadence of financial and operational updates through earnings releases furnished on Form 8-K and investor presentations. These communications allow issuers to meet investor expectations, provide transparency into performance, and address significant developments a ecting their businesses. API expects that its member companies, as well as other issuers, will likely continue to maintain robust voluntary disclosure practices. When combined with annual and semiannual reports, these communications should preserve comparability across issuers, both at the individual company level and among industry peers.

Accordingly, semiannual reporting would modernize the reporting framework to better align with how investors access, evaluate, and use information today, without compromising investor protection.

John Schoenecker
Director
Tax, Trade, and Accounting
schoeneckerj@api.org
(202) 682-8000

2. Expected Reduction in Compliance Costs and Regulatory Burdens

API believes that providing issuers with the option to elect semiannual reporting o ers a meaningful opportunity to reduce compliance costs and allow for more e icient resource deployment. While the precise magnitude of these e iciencies will vary across issuers, including API member companies of di ering sizes and operational complexity, there is an expectation of tangible reductions in the time and e ort required from employees, management, boards of directors, and independent registered public accounting firms in preparing, reviewing, and filing interim reports.

Although foundational activities, such as maintaining data integrity, executing disclosure controls, and sustaining e ective internal control over financial reporting (ICFR), will appropriately continue throughout the year, the overall cadence for required SEC reporting would likely become more e icient. API expects a net positive e ect, with reduced reporting frequency enabling clearer prioritization, lower incremental e ort, and more e icient governance processes.

More broadly, this shift would allow management teams to focus more fully on operational execution, long-term strategic objectives, and shareholder value creation, outcomes that ultimately benefit investors and the broader market.

3. Treatment of Earnings Releases and Form 8-K Item 2.02

API supports maintaining the current framework under Item 2.02 of Form 8-K, which permits issuers to furnish, rather than file, earnings releases. API does not believe a transition to filed status is warranted.

The Commission has long recognized a deliberate and important distinction between information that is “furnished” and information that is “filed,” and earnings announcements are a clear example where furnished treatment is appropriate. This framework promotes substantial, timely, and candid disclosure by recognizing that earnings releases are management communications intended to convey current information to the market.

By appropriately limiting liability exposure relative to filed documents, the furnished framework encourages issuers to provide prompt disclosures that include supplemental context, operational insights, and forward-looking information valued by investors. This structure aligns with Regulation FD's objective of broad and timely dissemination of material information without discouraging informative communication.

John Schoenecker
Director
Tax, Trade, and Accounting
schoeneckerj@api.org
(202) 682-8000

4. Access to Capital Markets and Financial Statement Staleness

Under the current framework, financial statement staleness is governed by Rule 3-12 of Regulation S-X, which deems financial statements "stale" after specified periods, generally 130 days for accelerated filers and 135 days for other filers. This framework is closely tied to the existing quarterly reporting cadence. Without a change to this requirement, if issuers were to elect semiannual reporting without corresponding updates to Rule 3-12, a structural misalignment would arise. The current construct relies on quarterly Form 10-Q filings to refresh financial information incorporated by reference into registration statements. To address this issue, the SEC has proposed that a registrant would no longer assess the number of days from the filing date or from the e ective date of the registration statement (or mailing date of a proxy statement) to the date of the most recent balance sheet to determine if the balance sheet falls within 130 days or 135 days, as applicable. Rather, under the proposed amendments to Rules 3-01(c)(2) and 8-08(b)(2), a registrant, in determining if interim financial statements are required when audited financial statements for the most recently completed fiscal year are included in the filing, would include the interim financial statements as of the end of the most recently completed fiscal quarter (for quarterly filers) or semiannual period (for semiannual filers) that has been filed, or is required to be filed on or before the filing date, in a Form 10-Q or Form 10-S.1

API supports this proposed change, which would not have an adverse e ect on investors receiving timely, continuous, and material information from registrants, as discussed above. Furthermore, as noted in the SEC's proposal,2 registrants that might opt for semiannual reporting would also have di iculty complying with Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (PCAOB) Auditing Standard (AS) 6101, which requires that negative comfort letters provided by auditors in support of public o erings be made within 135 days from the end of the most recent period for which the accountants have performed an audit or a review. API recommends that the SEC coordinate with the PCAOB so that the proposed changes to Rule 3-12 align with PCAOB's AS 6101 so that both requirements are timed to a semiannual cadence, rather than just the former. This could be achieved either through extending AS 6101's 135-day window to something that matches a semiannual cadence, such as 225 days, or simply tying that window to the registrant's reporting cadence, similar to the SEC's proposed changes discussed immediately above.

1 Semiannual Reporting, Securities Act Release No. 11414, at 53 (May 5, 2026), https://www.sec.gov/files/rules/proposed/2026/33-11414.pdf.

2 Id. at 41-42.

John Schoenecker
Director
Tax, Trade, and Accounting
schoeneckerj@api.org
(202) 682-8000

* * *

In conclusion, we support the Commission’s proposed amendments to permit optional semiannual reporting by public companies. If you have any questions, please contact me at the number or email address listed above.
Sincerely,
John Schoenecker
5

Jon Taylor President - Village Art & Frame — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jon Taylor Quarterly reporting is essential to allow all investors to be comprehensively informed.

Joseph Golson — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joseph Golson I would like to ask you some questions. If you owned a business, would you like to know how your business is doing more often or less often? As an independent investor, how do you make informed decisions about your investment portfolio when you only see financial results twice a year? As a shareholder I won a piece of the business I have invested in more often, not less often. There are too many internal and or external problems that can and do affect a business's bottom line and they can happen overnight. In my opinion, receiving financial information from businesses I won is a bad idea because I believe that will make investors even more anxious than they already are. Please do not change financial reports to only twice a year.

Joseph M Fallecker — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joseph M Fallecker I believe more information is better for investors to be able to make informed decisions. It is also the case that having more regular reporting keeps companies "honest" by being unable to hide or deny their reality from investors.

Joshua Luthy — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joshua Luthy Dear Secretary Countryman, I am writing to express my strong opposition to the Commission’s proposed amendments that would allow public companies to opt out of quarterly reporting in favor of a semiannual framework (Form 10-S). While the proposal is framed as a measure to reduce regulatory burdens and encourage long-term corporate vision, stretching the reporting window to six months poses severe risks to market transparency, investor protection, and efficient capital allocation. Specifically, I urge the Commission to consider the following consequences: 1. Increased Window for Undetected Insider TradingA six-month reporting gap creates a dangerous informational vacuum. In today’s fast-moving markets, three months is a lifetime; six months is an eternity. Extending the reporting window drastically increases the risk of material, non-public information being utilized for insider trading before retail investors or the public have any visibility into a company’s true financial health. The proposed cooling-off adjustments under Rule 10b5-1 are insufficient to mitigate the sheer advantage that corporate insiders will hold over a six-month stretch. 2. Destructive Effects Beyond the Financial Markets (e.g., Medical Research and Philanthropy)The damage of this informational deficit extends far beyond traditional Wall Street portfolios. For example, non-profit organizations dedicated to funding childhood cancer research rely heavily on transparent, timely, and audited quarterly reporting to evaluate the trajectory, financial stability, and scientific progress of biopharmaceutical firms. Without quarterly data, philanthropic institutions and research foundations are forced to make high-stakes funding and partnership decisions in the dark. A six-month delay in reporting could easily mask a biotech firm's operational distress or a quiet pause in a drug pipeline. This risks misallocating precious, donor-funded resources toward unstable ventures, ultimately slowing down the development of life-saving cancer therapies for children. Conclusion The current quarterly reporting system (Form 10-Q) has been the bedrock of trust in U.S. capital markets since 1970. Sacrificing this frequency will not solve "short-termism"; it will simply degrade market integrity and harm the diverse ecosystems—including critical medical non-profits—that depend on a steady stream of verifiable facts.I strongly encourage the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain the mandatory quarterly reporting cadence. Respectfully submitted, Joshua Luthy

---

Joshua Weil — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joshua Weil Joshua Weil Recruiting Agency Owner There needs to be more transparency not less.

Judith Lamothe Motley Fool — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Judith Lamothe I am opposed to reducing the number of required financial reports. The transparency of quarterly reports is an important tool for investors and stock holders to assess their risk in an investment. Please leave this rule as is. You have a responsibility to act in the interests of the public in this matter. The proposed change does the opposite. Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

Julia Alexander — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Julia Alexander Affiliation: Jun. 26, 2026 Favoring corporations over the everyday citizens who support them through investing has resulted in financial ruin for the investors such as with the 2008 housing crash. Dont stack the deck even higher against the common investor. #keepitquarterly.

K Mahoney — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: K Mahoney This proposed change is a bad one. Reducing transparency doesn't reduce uncertainty, it increases it -- when the surprises arrive they are bigger. It also does nothing for short term thinking, which is not caused by the information, but by people's reactions to it, and reactions to bigger surprises will be bigger and more reactionary. Investors are owners, and we deserve more regular updates, not fewer. Reducing the requirements for reporting also weakens the connection between companies and their owners. If this is being proposed as a cost saving measure, that is deeply misguided, as current and developing technologies make reporting easier than ever before. I strongly urge you to reject this proposed changed.

Karen Kavanaugh The Motley Fool community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Kavanaugh Dear Regulators- I believe that information is power and informed decisions are the healthiest. I am writing to urge you to reject the proposal to allow companies to reduce their annual reporting from quarterly to semi annually. The more information we have as investors the better we can adjust and the calmer we can react leading to a less volatile and healthier market. Thank you

---

Karin Knowles None — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karin Knowles Please keep the reporting as it is. 4 times a year to report is NOT unreasonable! Thanks so much!

Karl Kramer Retired Attorney — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karl Kramer This is an obvious effort to reduce transparency for investors and regulators. There is no obvious fair reason to make the corporate interests less accountable for and less transparent about their actions. Stop giving in to the corporate lobby and do your job. It is sickening how captive the SEC has become to the very interests they are duty bound to regulate and investigate.

Kate Curran Estate Planning Attorney, North Carolina Bar — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kate Curran Quarterly reporting is critical to informed investing. If you change the reporting requirements to allow semiannual reports, I will pull every penny I have out of the market and I won't be the only one. Market manipulation will double and trust in the markets will plummet. Chaos will reign and the people who made the decision to change the rules will be blamed. You don't want to be that guy, mobs can get ugly.

Katja F. — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Katja F. Quarterly reports are a vital source of information and promote accountability to investors. As one of many US citizens whose financial well-being in retirement depends largely on personal investments, I am strongly opposed to allowing public companies to "go dark" for six months at a time, and I urge you not to move forward with this proposal. Less stringent regulations that allow for opacity are a fertile breeding ground for fraudulent accounting (see Enron, Bernie Madoff, WorldCom, etc.). In short, any perceived convenience on the part of public companies would be strongly outweighed by the risks to ordinary, non-institutional investors.

Kelly Miller-Sanchez — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kelly Miller-Sanchez As an active investor I must protest the proposed rule to decrease required reporting from four times a year to only twice a year. This would have devastating results for investors. Part of the social contract between shareholders and companies is transparency regarding business operations. Decreasing this transparency puts shareholders at a severe disadvantage and damages this longstanding social contract. Shareholders have the right to know what the companies they invest in are doing and to exert pressure on companies when needed. Please do not diminish shareholder agency by changing this rule.

Kesrah — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Kesrah Affiliation: Jun. 26, 2026 My name is Kesra Hoffman and I'm an artist and instructor. I'm also an investor relying on quarterly reports to make decisions about my retirement saving.
Semiannual reporting shows less transparency for investors and these longer gaps create unfair advantages for corporate insiders.
As well, the small savings to companies keep investors in the dark for longer gaps of time and aren't worth the cost to me.
It's a reckless plan at the expense of everyday investors. The greed of big business shows irrefutably they need to be held more accountable, not less.
Keep it quarterly.

Kevin Buck Owner, Lakes Gas Co.; Student, University of Colorado Law School — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin Buck My name is Kevin Buck, I am an investor, business consultant, and law student. I demand that the SEC preserve the current rules on quarterly earnings reports as is to ensure more fairness and equality in the market. Without rules ensuring a level playing field, will not the play the public stock market. Private investment opportunities will lead, and the backbone of American political and economic power, our financial markets, will lose its control.

Kheang Chang — Jun 26, 2026
