Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kheang Chang Do not report only two times aa year for the company.

Kim Harmon — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Kim Harmon Affiliation: Jun. 26, 2026 If CEOs and CFOs are truthful, there is no reason to stretch the postings. Keep it quarterly!!! Lengthening the postings puts investors, especially retirees, at great risk. K.A. Harmon,
Investor and Retiree

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Kirstin Gilmour, CPA — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kirstin Gilmour, CPA I am writing to express my strong opposition to any proposal that would reduce the frequency of corporate financial reporting from quarterly to semiannual. Moving to a semiannual reporting model would severely harm market transparency and investor protection. A six-month gap between financial disclosures is too long in modern markets. It creates a data vacuum allowing insiders to hold material information much longer than retail investors. This imbalance increases the risk of insider trading and uneven market advantages. Fewer reporting cycles mean larger surprises. Six months of accumulated operational changes will be crammed into a single report. Quarterly reports act as an early warning system for fraud, operational decay, and financial distress. Delaying these disclosures prevents investors from mitigating risks early and allows corporate mismanagement to go undetected for longer periods.

Less frequent data means higher risk. Quarterly reporting is the bedrock of the U.S. capital markets' global gold standard. While reducing compliance burdens is a valid goal, it must not come at the expense of market integrity. I urge the Commission to maintain the current quarterly reporting framework.

Kristin Broderick United States citizen — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kristin Broderick Keep quarterly reporting.

Larry B. — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Larry B. To the Commissioners: I am a retired individual investor who manages my own portfolio and relies on SEC filings when making investment decisions. I oppose the proposal to permit public companies to replace quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting. Less timely information is rarely beneficial to retail investors. Quarterly reports provide timely, standardized, and broadly accessible information that helps investors evaluate company performance and risk. Reducing reporting frequency would diminish transparency and likely increase the information advantage already enjoyed by large institutional investors. If the costs of complying with existing disclosure requirements have become excessive, companies should improve the efficiency of their reporting processes rather than reduce the information available to investors. Access to the public capital markets carries corresponding obligations to public shareholders, and timely disclosure is one of those obligations. The strength of the U.S. capital markets is built in part on transparency and investor confidence. Transparency is not merely a compliance cost—it is the consideration public companies owe in exchange for access to the public capital markets. I encourage the Commission to retain the current quarterly reporting framework. Respectfully submitted, Larry B. North Texas

---

larry p jones Missouri Embalmers and Funeral Directors — Jun 26, 2026 Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: larry p jones I do my books on a monthly closing. and should all others

---

Lauri Aunan — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lauri Aunan Dear SEC, I am writing about your proposal to allow companies to report twice a year instead of quarterly. We are retired and my husband and I rely on our investments to help support our current and future costs of housing, health care, food and services that have been rising and will cost more with inflation. We oppose the change away from quarterly reporting and ask that you withdraw the proposal. We rely on quarterly information to make decisions. Longer reporting gaps create an unfair advantage for corporate insiders. “Optional" doesn't fix the problem because companies that opt in are often the ones whose investors most need frequent updates. We know and you know that some companies do commit fraud and make unsound decisions that wreck the companies and devastate investors. The small savings to companies from this reporting change are not worth the cost to us.

Lawrence Nevers Jr — Jun 26, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lawrence Nevers Jr Please reconsider this move, I rely on quarterly information to make decisions, longer gaps create an unfair advantage for corporate insiders. "Optional" doesn't fix the problem because companies that opt in are often the ones whose investors most need frequent updates. The savings to companies aren't worth the potential cost to my retirement. Lawrence Nevers Jr Nampa, ID.

Linda Huffman — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Huffman Dear SEC Members, I strongly oppose biannual reporting. Quarterly provides timely and accurate financial information to us, the investors. It ensures transparency and maintains investor confidence in the capital markets. This requirement helps keep shareholders informed about the company's performance and any material events that may affect OUR investments and decisions. Thank you for taking our comments. Kind Regards, Linda Huffman - Data/Document Analyst -L3Harris, Rochester NY

Linda Van Couvering Real estate agent — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Van Couvering As I private investor I rely on the companies in which I invest to keep me informed through their quarterly reports. In my business I keep clients and investors informed weekly, it is how I stay accountable and they stay informed and are able to make decisions. I want to keep that information flowing on my investments too, quarterly has worked well, a balance between accountability and effort that I do not want changed.

Lisa Loftus American Citizen — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Loftus Keep reporting every 3 months. We want more transparency, not less.

Lori Allen Retired — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lori Allen As an individual investor, I rely on quarterly reports to guide my investment decisions. Unlike institutional investors, I do not have a cushion to protect me when a stock or fund begins to perform poorly. I need to be able to manage my portfolio in real time, not based on 6 month old information. A lot can change for a company in 6 months. Individual investors like myself make up a significant portion of the stock market. Our ability to invest to create wealth for ourselves AND the companies we invest in requires market oversight. The SEC is not supposed to make rules that benefit only a few while leaving the rest of us to fend for ourselves. You job is to regulate the market so every investor has a reasonably level playing field. Deregulation, which is what this is, benefits the few rather than the whole. Your job is to regulate for market security and accountability for investors (all). This proposed change is unacceptable.

Lydia Lang — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lydia Lang As a retiree and active investor, I vigorously oppose the idea of eliminating quarterly reporting. As a government watchdog, you have an obligation to the people, not to wealthy corporations, to maintain transparency so that we can make informed decisions. Do not enable corporations to hide what they are doing. Thank you.

M Glogowski — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: M Glogowski I object to switching to semi-annual reporting. Transparency is critical and quarterly reporting is desperately needed.

Madeline Dressel — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Madeline Dressel I am writing to voice my opposition to the proposed changes quarterly reporting requirements. I do not support the change from quarterly to semi-annual reporting. With today's technology and real-time access to data there is no reason to justify returning to a semiannual reporting. Investors rely on the most accurate up-to-date reports, and eliminating quarterly reports strips regular investors of key metrics and insight into business performance.

Marg Retail — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marg Absolutely NOT. This bending of ways has got to stop. Big Corps have too much say in our country. Pulling moves like this will let charlatans and peoples like the Trumps do more seedy business deals. Too many moves like these and the market will be damaged irreparably. Earning report must be 4 quarters. Less than that will create pockets for hidden earnings (true or e false), more claims of under earnings with us peons getting shoveled lines like 4% raise is a better/more than everyone else is getting this year. While they work ten weeks a year if that and get millions in bonus money with mansions plural.

Margaret Daniels Self — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Margaret Daniels Please retain 10Q reporting requirements. As an individual investor quarterly reports allow me to stay updated on conditions in the companies I invest in. This is crucial.

Margaret roberts None — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Margaret roberts Protect US citizens by requiring quarterly filings. Investors need to know how companies are doing snd the current required quarterly reports are essential to that !

Margie O'Hern — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Margie O'Hern Affiliation: Jun. 26, 2026 When you're retired, you're especially concerned with remaining solvent. Even if you planned ahead and saved your money, you're vulnerable because this administration keeps taking away the safeguards that WE WORKED FOR and count on having. Keeping tabs on your investments is necessary at least once a quarter, so you can make changes if an investment is failing. Six months is NOT OFTEN ENOUGH! Keep it quarterly!
Thank you,

Margie OHern, retired educator

Sent from my iPhone

Marie Bruzzi — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marie Bruzzi The SEC should not eliminate its quarterly reporting mandate for public companies, as doing so would deprive investors and markets of timely, material information, and thereby undermine informed investor decision making and the efficient allocation of capital among public companies. Timely and transparent information increases and broadens participation in markets thereby increasing stability and minimizing unwarranted disruptions.

Marina Garbutt — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marina Garbutt A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that’s a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When I own a piece of a business, I deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Marjorie Pennington — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marjorie Pennington I think companies should report every quarter so we can keep up to date about their situation.

Mark Wilson — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Wilson Please keep quarterly filing mandatory.

Marshall Mack Underwriting Support, Erie Insurance — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marshall Mack My name is Marshall and I work in the insurance industry. Working in the financial services field has made me appreciate having all the information I possibly can to accurately assess risk and reward. Quarterly reporting is a reasonable and reliable way for anyone with investments (including the most common ones such as a 401k or Roth IRA) to make informed decisions. Relaxing this requirement is a detrimental step back towards the unregulated market environment that gave us Enron, Worldcom, etc.

Mary Takahashi — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Takahashi This is an obvious effort to reduce transparency for investors and regulators. There is no obvious fair reason to make the corporate interests less accountable for and less transparent about their actions. Stop giving in to the corporate lobby and do your job. It is sickening how captive the SEC has become to the very interests they are duty bound to regulate and investigate.

Mary-Ann Pekalski — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary-Ann Pekalski I am against this proposal for several reasons. 1. I rely on quarterly information to make informed decisions. 2. Six months is a long time and will create an unfair advantage for corporate insiders. 3. Six months is also more time to engage in mischief and less time for any mischief to be discovered. 4. The saving money for the company argument is the worst argument particularly if the company is already making a solid profit. Do the right thing even if it costs a more!

Matthew Dudzik — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew Dudzik The proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake. The very foundation of an ownership economy is that of informed owners. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. When you reduce reporting requirements you weaken the connection between companies and their owners. As an individual investor I implore you to side with transparency and better informed owners.

Matthew Gamerdinger — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew Gamerdinger Keep reporting every quarter, 4 times a year. As an owner of business we deserve reporting 4 times a year to know how the company is doing.

Maureen Towner Individual Investor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Maureen Towner Less transparency and less timely transparency is never a goal or good idea. Please maintain the quarterly reports,

---

Mehdi Architect — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mehdi Dear SEC, I strongly oppose reducing corporate reporting from quarterly to semi-annual. Quarterly disclosures are essential for retail investors like me who rely on timely, accurate financial information to make informed decisions. Large institutional investors already have access to management and resources that individual investors do not, so cutting reporting frequency would widen an already significant information gap. In today's technology-driven environment, public companies can easily provide quarterly updates. Delaying reports to every six months would make information even staler, limit transparency, and create more opportunities for misstatements or hidden risks. Investors cannot properly evaluate performance without regular data and realistic forward-looking expectations. For those of us depending on 401(k)s and IRAs for retirement, timely reporting is not optional — it is fundamental to protect our financial future. The SEC should be moving toward more up-to-date reporting standards, not rolling them back. Sincerely, Abe Mehdi

---

MICHAEL CABRAL RETIRED LETTER CARRIER — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: MICHAEL CABRAL Why go backwards? What are they wanting to hide? In this age of AI and false information we need more transparency and accountability, not less.

Michael Griffith Investor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Griffith This is a terrible idea! Instead of hiding this important data, let's go the other way and require two month reporting!

Michael Hultgren — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Hultgren Comments attached

---

Michael Preis Retired Clinical Professor of Marketing, University of Illinois — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Preis Semi-annual reporting is a very bad idea. More transparency, more reporting, more information is important for investors to be able to evaluate companies they have an ownership stake in. The United States is a model for the rest of the world in terms of financial reporting and corporate governance----changing to semi-annual reporting would represent going backwards, not forward. The present system of reporting is not broken--don't try to fix it.

Michael Russo NAR & MARR Realtor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Russo If you implement this rule I will never buy another equity and I will recommend everyone I come into contact with exit all stock markets. Its only outcome is to hurt investors and benefit insiders.

Michael Scherer — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Scherer Keep the quarterly reporting so the end user does not get screwed again by the crooked billionaires. Keep them honest!

Michel Czehatowski — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michel Czehatowski Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their shareholders.

Mike Jared — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mike Jared Stockholders are owners of the companies they have invested in. As an owner I insist on being informed at least as present law provides: quarterly - not any less often. In this age of immediate access to information, we could easily be reported to monthly. The officers in charge of each department of a company have even more access on a daily or weekly basis. Thus, I am adamant that reporting continues AT LEAST quarterly.

Mitchell McKenna — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mitchell McKenna I oppose replacing quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting. As a retail investor, quarterly reports provide timely and consistent information that helps me make informed investment decisions. Reducing reporting to twice a year would decrease transparency and delay important information about company performance and risks. Public companies benefit from access to public markets, and regular disclosure is an important responsibility that helps maintain investor confidence and fair markets. I encourage the SEC to retain quarterly reporting requirements.

MJ Accountant — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: MJ Quarterly reporting holds companies accountable and allows insight into how they are doing financially per quarter for investors. Reporting every 6 months leaves investors in the dark on how the company is doing.

Motley fool community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Motley fool community Do not reduce the reporting to investors interval periods.

Motley Fool Community Research scientist — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Motley Fool Community To allow companies to reduce the number of public-company reports from four to two times a year is a mistake that reduces transparency! Companies would not even suggest this unless it was extremely favorable to their bottom line, while potentially negatively impacting that of their investors. Less transparency is never a good thing as it tends to keep things more honest. I strongly oppose passing such legislation.

Naomi Torres — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Naomi Torres Quarterly reporting is an absolute must. Reducing the reports to two a year won’t provide enough information for sound decision making regarding investments. It also allows for the opportunity of fraud to happen in real time without any eyes to assure accountability. History has demonstrated that clearly. We expect transparency from companies and accountability by the SEC to assure fraud doesn't become an issue due the proposed change. Keep the quarterly reporting.

Natasha Gyapjas Betau — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Natasha Gyapjas Betau As an investor, I strongly oppose the proposal to make quarterly reporting optional. Reducing the frequency of mandatory disclosures to twice a year will significantly impair market transparency. In a rapidly changing economy, six months is too long for the public to wait for material financial updates. This change would benefit corporate insiders over retail investors and likely lead to higher market volatility when semiannual reports are released. Please maintain the current quarterly reporting framework to ensure a level playing field for all market participants.

Nell Minow, ValueEdge Advisors — Jun 26, 2026
Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission 100 F Street, NE
Washington, DC 20549-1090
June 26, 2026
Subject: Proposed Rule on Semiannual Reporting, File No. S7-2026-15
To: Commissioners and staff:
I write in strong opposition to the proposal to reduce reporting to file semiannual reports on the new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q. I note that this was prepared entirely by me, without the aid of AI or any LLMs.
I agree with many of the thoughtful comments from investors, like the excellent comment from Marcie Frost, CEO of CalPERS, especially this:
If the Commission's objective is to lengthen corporate decision-making horizons, then the more effective and well-targeted lever, as we have urged in prior comment letters, is to discourage the voluntary issuance of forward quarterly earnings guidance, not to dilute the historical financial reporting on which investors depend.
And I second this comment from Omer Yousif, PhD:
True long-termism is driven by corporate culture and executive compensation structures, not by withholding material financial information from the public for six months at a time.
The most important point to remember in considering the frequency of financial reports is that as "the investor's advocate," the Commission must recognize that there will always be an inherent conflict between the investor's interest in all necessary information in order to make an informed decision about risk and return and the insiders (executives and board members), who prefer to limit transparency and oversight. It is the Commission's mandate to resolve those conflicts in favor of the people for whom capitalism is named, the people who have to ask the core question of capitalism: "Why should I trust you with my money?" The only answer to that question is accountability through disclosure, the market, government regulation, and, when there is no other alternative, litigation. Any reduction of the transparency that has, since the enactment of the '33 and '34 legislation and the creation of the Commission made the US capital market the envy of the world will make investors more hesitant, increase the cost of capital, and increase capital outflows to markets that show more respect for investor priorities.
1
As you know, the first Chairman of the SEC was Joseph P. Kennedy. When President Franklin

Roosevelt was criticized for appointing a man from the world of investments instead of an enforcer in the job, he said, “Set a thief to catch a thief.” He knew, as Adam Smith knew, that while business leaders may love to rhapsodize about the purity of the free market, they will always try to tilt the playing field in their own favor. Smith wrote: “People of the same trade seldom meet together, even for merriment and diversion, but the conversation ends in a conspiracy against the publick [sic], or in some contrivance to raise prices.” Economists call the problem agency costs. Lawyers call it conflicts of interest. Both recognize that it is accountability to the providers of capital through disclosure and shareholder rights that align the incentives of insiders and shareholders as closely as possible. Therefore, the Commission should consider very carefully any reduction in those rights.

I therefore suggest that the Commission review with great skepticism the claims that this proposal will reduce costs, including those from sock puppets funded by corporations but purporting to be from independent “think tanks” or others to make their initiative appear more credible. The claimed costs are nominal compared to, say, a CEO’s pay package. They are unaudited and provided without documentation. Corporate executives, who may think they will be less exposed to scrutiny and liability with fewer disclosures, have every incentive to exaggerate. What is especially telling is the absence of estimates of the benefits of the quarterly report, both for internal use and for board members. It is hard to imagine directors being able to meet their obligation as fiduciaries on behalf of long-term, sustainable value for investors if they have to wait six months for the next set of financial reports. And if they insist on getting them for every board meeting, why shouldn’t current and potential investors get them, too?

You do not have to use advanced math to figure out that quarterly reports are based on three months of numbers and twice-yearly reports are based on six months of numbers. They are still computing the results over the same period of time whether they report four times a year or twice a year. Their lawyers have to review the same volume of representations. Any savings from having to report on twice as many numbers/weeks have to be nominal at best.

Quarterly reports are an excellent discipline. They deter and mitigate any damage from misbehavior ranging from embezzlement to fraud. They promptly identify issues and opportunities in operations. They give investors what they need to evaluate risk and return.

This proposal comes at a particularly misbegotten time. Market volatility and the small number of companies behind the record-breaking highs are increasing uncertainty. The decision of major indexes to abandon the core principles of inclusion to allow in highly questionable new companies without seeking the permission of their investors is unsettling. Technology is advancing rapidly to reduce the costs of producing quarterly reports, and indeed more extensive and valuable ones, to a near-nominal amount. We can foresee a time when institutional and individual shareholders should be able to access financial reports on an almost daily basis, along the lines of the extensive market and individual security performance data they can already access when they check their brokerage accounts at Schwab, Vanguard, Fidelity and others or analysis through services like Motley Fool than Adam Smith or Joseph P. Kennedy ever dreamed possible.

It comes at a bad time for the Commission as well. Operating with a bare minimum of Commissioners, all from one party contrary to the fundamental conception of the independent agencies, makes any major policy change particularly vulnerable to challenge in court, especially given the uncertainty about the possibility of a de novo review rather than the pre-Loper Bright deference to the expertise and integrity of federal agencies.

I had an economics professor who ended every lecture with, “Of course, this depends on perfect information and no transaction costs.” We will never achieve that, of course. But it is clear that efficient markets do not run on money. They run on information and trust. It is disclosure requirements like the quarterly reports, public and subject to review by investors, the market, and the government, that take us as close as possible to that economic nirvana of efficiency.

Investors need to know what is going on at the companies they invest in or are considering investing in as promptly as possible. If they cannot get it when they need it, they will reduce their positions, increasing the cost of capital, provide more scrutiny through the proxy voting process, or make a very credible case in litigation that the corporate insiders were intentionally trying to obfuscate their results. In the words of the legendary John Louis, they will let portfolio companies know that they can run, but they cannot hide. And, always the underlying principle in Commission policy should be, in the words of Supreme Court Justice Louis Brandeis, “Sunlight is the best disinfectant.”
Sincerely.
Nell Minow
Chair, ValueEdge Advisors
nminow@valueedgeadvisors.com
3

Nicholas Tachtsidis The Motley Fool Community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nicholas Tachtsidis The idea to reduce the number of public-company reports from four a year to just two is a bad one. Investors need greater transparency to make informed decisions and hold executives to account. As David from Motley Fool says "At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners." I agree with him and I hope the SEC will too. Thanks, Nick Tachtsidis

---

Niki Danner — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Niki Danner Please keep quarterly reporting and the checks with leadership CFO/CEO’s in place. The c suite needs the checks and the public needs this to keep our businesses successful and fraud free: fraud is a huge problem and taking away the checks on that, leave too much wiggle room so fraud can occur. Please do not remove these policies, keep them at the current requirements. Decreasing the responsibility will not help anyone.

Oleksii Zakharenko Staff Software Engineer, Google — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Oleksii Zakharenko I am against proposed changes to allow companies to increase their investor reporting period from quarterly to 2 times a year. Introducing optionality in the reporting cadence makes lives harder mostly for individual investors who's don't have a lot of time to dedicate to studying them. While on the surface it seems like it should reduce the time to read reports for companies that opt into twice-a-year reporting, in practice it will add another variable in the investment decision making process (both initial and ongoing) - how frequently will we hear from the company and what important market and business signals could be delayed. The cost of reporting, while not trivial, is going down with the introduction of AI tools, so don't think it should be used as an argument.

Omar AL-Hajaya — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Omar AL-Hajaya I am filing a complaint regarding an email campaign by 'The Motley Fool' (sent in June 2026), where they are actively mobilizing their subscriber base to influence the SEC's rulemaking regarding 'Semiannual Reporting'. They are instructing users to insert 'The Motley Fool Community' in the Affiliation box, which potentially distorts the authenticity of individual investor comments and creates coordinated pressure on the regulatory process.

Oplis Malcolm Sloan Investor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Oplis Malcolm Sloan I wish to voice opposition to the reduction in financial reporting made by corporate entities. It is a significant indicator of business and investment health. Taking away visibility from private investors is treachery.

Pamela Taylor Retired — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pamela Taylor Pamela Scott Former International Affairs Specialist. Maryland Why is our country failing under a president who promised so much but gives nothing to the American people. Quarterly reporting is essential. DO NOT STOP QUARTERLY REPORTING!!!

Pat — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pat Bad idea. A solution in search of a problem. You can make semi-annual reporting for small cap stocks and smaller, not everything.

Pat J Porter Motley Fool Community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pat J Porter Please do not change reports from 4 to 2 per year. That does not keep owners(investors) aware of what is going on with their investment.

Patricia H. Oster - — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia H. Oster Re: File No. S7 2026 15 – Proposed Optional Semiannual Reporting Framework Commissioners: Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the Commission’s proposal to allow public companies to replace quarterly reporting with semiannual filings. I write as an individual investor who relies on timely, consistent, and frequent disclosures to evaluate performance, assess risk, and make informed decisions. I respectfully urge the SEC to preserve quarterly reporting as the standard expectation for U.S. public companies. 1. Quarterly reporting is not an undue burden in the modern era The proposal cites reduced administrative burden as a rationale for allowing semiannual reporting. However, most public companies today operate with real time or near real time accounting, inventory, and logistics systems. Enterprise platforms such as SAP, Oracle, Workday, and Microsoft Dynamics support continuous close processes and automated financial consolidation. Given these capabilities, the incremental effort required to prepare quarterly financial statements is minimal relative to the systems already in place. Quarterly reporting is not a manual, labor intensive process; it is a formatting and disclosure exercise built on data companies already maintain. 2. Longer reporting intervals increase information asymmetry and risk Extending the reporting interval from three months to six months creates a significantly longer period during which: • operational issues may go undetected • financial irregularities may compound • leverage or liquidity risks may escalate • management may delay disclosure of adverse developments Academic research supports this concern. Studies show that longer reporting intervals correlate with increased earnings management and reduced transparency. Research on quarterly versus semi-annual reporting further demonstrates that more frequent reporting improves market discipline and reduces the likelihood of undetected misstatements. Quarterly reporting is a proven safeguard. Semiannual reporting introduces unnecessary blind spots. 3. The optional nature of the proposal creates comparability problems The proposal allows issuers to choose between quarterly and semiannual reporting. This raises several concerns: • Comparability: If companies within the same sector report on different cadences, investors cannot reliably compare performance, trends, or risk. • Selective opacity: Companies facing operational or financial challenges may be more likely to opt for semiannual reporting, reducing visibility precisely when transparency is most needed. • Market distortion: Analysts, data providers, and valuation models rely on consistent reporting intervals. Optionality introduces noise and inconsistency into these systems. The question of “who has the option” — the issuer or the Commission — is less important than the structural effect: optional reporting periods create uneven information environments across the market. 4. Dividend focused investors are disproportionately affected Dividend sustainability depends on earnings, cash flow, payout ratios, leverage and capital allocation decisions. Under a semiannual framework, an investor may receive a dividend payment based on information that is three to six months stale, only to learn later that earnings deteriorated significantly during the period. This creates a mismatch between cash distributions and financial visibility. It also complicates the work of research providers whose models rely on quarterly earnings variances from the modeled projected earnings. With fewer reporting intervals, surprises become larger, more volatile, and less informative. 5. Fraud detection and risk monitoring depend on frequency The proposal does not present data or modeling comparing: • fraud detection timelines under quarterly vs. semiannual reporting • the likelihood of misstatements going undetected • the impact of longer intervals on increased risk of investor harm Given the historical role of frequent reporting in uncovering irregularities, this omission is notable. Transparency is not merely a compliance exercise — it is a risk mitigation mechanism. 6. Conclusion The U.S. capital markets are the global benchmark for transparency and investor protection. Quarterly reporting is a foundational element of that strength. While reducing administrative burden is a reasonable goal, the potential cost of diminished transparency outweighs the benefit. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to retain quarterly reporting as the standard for public companies and to proceed cautiously with any optional alternatives that may reduce the frequency of material information available to investors. Thank you for considering my comments.

Paula Thoele — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paula Thoele I strongly oppose changing reporting status to semiannual. Transparency and accountability will be negatively impacted. Everyday investors will not have key information available. Keep reporting quarterly.

Penelope Rodriguez — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Penelope Rodriguez Quarterly reports should stay as the minimum requirement.

---

perry teel The Motley Fool Community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: perry teel need to have quarterly reporting NOT twice a year

---

Peter Helten Investor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter Helten This amendment to reporting can really put investors behind in what is going on financially with a firm. As it is, reporting is late. This would add an additional 3 months on the wait for critical financial disclosure. Owners (shareholders) deserve to be in the know about corporate finances ASAP!

Peter Pounders — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter Pounders Peter Pounders, Machine Operator Tier 2 Ensure the integrity of the market by keeping the quarterly earnings reports quarterly not every six months. We as consumers deserve better insight and guidance about how our money is being used and spent per our 401k's and retirement portfolios. Six months is abysmal and out of touch with the average American. Preserve the integrity and the good name of the SEC by keeping it quarterly. Thank You.

Platinum Pelican Owner — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Platinum Pelican Less reporting, especially in an age when more, and more timely information is available and necessary, reducing reporting makes noe sense.

Rachel Dexheimer — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rachel Dexheimer Seems like some new way for companies to screw people over. Gonna be a no from me. Quarterly reports are vital, relied upon to make informed decisions, and must be continued.

Raj Pal — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Raj Pal It is imperative to keep the reporting of financial information on a quarterly basis rather than semi annually. As an individual investor I rely on this information to make my decisions. I feel in this case the benefits far exceeds the cost and the reporting should continue as usual and it's the cost of doing business as a publicly traded entity. I actually look forward to the quarterly reports and waiting an extra three months would cause extra anxiety and unnecessary stress.

Ramona Nelson — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ramona Nelson I am a retired senior citizen who is completely dependent on my investments. In my experience the more information I have the safer I am. "The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) operates under a three-part mission: protecting investors; maintaining fair, orderly, and efficient markets; and facilitating capital formation". Allowing companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two would be counter productive to all three missions - especially protecting investors.

Rauf A. Adil — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rauf A. Adil We need both accountability and transparency from the publicly held companies. Keep the current four times a year reporting law in place.

Retail Investor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Retail Investor Hell NO!!! Stop enriching the billionaires. Everyone knows these companies will alert their friends and families so they can enrich themselves while robbing retail investors. Absolutely deplorable!!!

Richard Killian Health Systems Manager (Retired) — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Killian Dear Sir or Madame, I think it is very important and strongly request the SEC to maintain the quarterly reporting requirement for public companies. Thank you for your consideration.

Robert — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert This is bullshit and there’s no reason for it other than plans already likely in place to deceive and extract in some way. What non-evasive, non-gaslighting “reason” could there possibly be for a change? Because what? It’s to hard? Bullshit. Something’s up.

Robert Fallavollita The Motley Fool Community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Fallavollita As a shareholder I own a piece the company. As an owner I want more information, not less. As a business owner I want more transparency, not less. It's needed to make informed investment decisions. Thank you

---

Robert Kevin Hill — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Kevin Hill We need transparency so I think cutting the quarterly reports would be a huge mistake!

Robert Kugler — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Kugler I think this is a bad idea and prevents us investors from getting updates even less than we get them now. I believe it could possibly lead to more insider trading as well!

Robert Zittleman — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Zittleman I'm against the reducing in frequency of financial reports from quarterly to semi-annually. With today's technology there is no reason this information can be continuously updated and available.

Roberto Minichello da Silva — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Roberto Minichello da Silva I am against reducing the number of public-company reports from 4 to 2 per year. This will reduce credibility, transparency and visibility for investors. Henceforth, I believe the SEC should keep an obligation for a company to provide 4 public-company reports per year.

Robin Carver — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robin Carver Absolutely not! No way for the semi-annual reporting. Stick with quarterly requirement.

Rod S. Industrial mechanic and Entrepreneur — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rod S. I think the semi-annual reporting is a good thing as it reduces volatility in the market. I'm a younger person who is not in need of immediate enablement of retirement. So for me, having a more stable outlook with how businesses report and more stable stocks is very important to me because then I know that the volatility reduction allows more predictability long-term, and allows businesses to maintain more self-control so they can direct their own growth besides having to deal with profit seeking. The longer that the reporting is permitted, the better the companies are because they're able to grow and manage within themselves. I think too many decisions are made for people who are already wealthy but not in the long-term interests of the youth of our nation, and I implore people to make considerations that create the stability we need to maintain America's health. This quarterly reporting thing has sucked a lot of value and autonomy out of businesses that created the value themselves that entice shareholders, and I feel like there's a large sense of entitlement within the shareholder class about how priorities should be assigned. By allowing this high period of reporting and distribution, it creates undue stress for temporary market changes on companies that directly affect young working-class people as they are not able to have faith in their managers to have all the resources they need to ensure longevity of their role. The more time they have, the smoother the ripples on the chart per period will be. Thank you, Rod S.

Rudy Moore — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rudy Moore Please keep reporting periods quarterly. There is already very little visibility into the workings inside companies. As an investor, I rely on this specific information to gauge how my investment is performing and to decide when I should invest or leave a position. Everything else out there is filled with less certain information. This reporting is a stabilizing force in the market by cutting through the disinformation that can appear in news, social media, and even from competitors. But it’s effect is market-wide. all public companies need to report quarterly for the system to work.

Russell S Worrell — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Russell S Worrell A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just

two. We think that’s a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right?

Rustymiles1960@gmail.com — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rustymiles1960@gmail.com Banks are required to send information about my account details monthly and so should any entity the deals with my money or other resources! No more Enron debacle!

SAMI L RICHTER, COMPASS FINANCIAL GROUP LLC The Modley Fool Community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: SAMI L RICHTER, COMPASS FINANCIAL GROUP LLC To allow companies to elect to REDUE the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that’s a MISTAKE!!! ---------- At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. ---------- Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. ---------- What isn’t debatable is that less information DOES NOT create better-informed owners. ---------- Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. ---------- Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. LESS transparency INCREASES UNCERTAINTY !! And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right? ---------- PLEASE DO NOT ALLOW LESS REPORTING. KEEP INVESTORS INFORMED AT LEAST QUARTERLY!!!

Sandra Lewis Marketing — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sandra Lewis DO NOT ALLOW THIS ACTION. COMPANIES

MUST REPORT QUARTERLY

Scarlett Orta — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Scarlett Orta I am writing to oppose the SEC's proposed Rule S7-2026-15, which would allow public companies to eliminate quarterly financial reporting in favor of semi-annual disclosures. As an everyday investor, I rely on quarterly reports to make informed decisions about where to put my savings. These filings are one of the few tools ordinary investors have to monitor the companies we invest in. Reducing reporting frequency from four times a year to twice a year would create a six-month window in which financial problems — including fraud — could go undetected and uncorrected. History has shown that corporate fraud does not announce itself. It festers quietly in the gaps between disclosures. Quarterly reporting shortens those gaps and gives investors, regulators, and the public a fighting chance to catch problems before they spiral into the kind of catastrophic losses that devastate retirement accounts and savings. Institutional investors and corporate insiders will always find ways to access timely information. Retail investors like me depend on mandated public disclosures. Cutting that cadence in half does not reduce regulatory burden — it shifts the burden onto the people least equipped to bear it. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal and preserve quarterly reporting requirements. Transparency is not a burden on good companies. It is the foundation of investor trust in our markets. Thank you for considering my comment.

Scott McLaren — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Scott McLaren Limiting the requirement for companies to report is a disservice to private investors who count on those reports to help make informed decisions.

Scott Yarbrough Motley Fools — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Scott Yarbrough We need more info,not less. Yes, telling investors how the company is doing costs money. NOT TELLING is dodgy. This is NOT an area to go cheap. Thanks for reading!

Sharon M. Gorman-McCall / Motley Fool Community, Charles Payne Community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sharon M. Gorman-McCall / Motley Fool Community, Charles Payne Community I am a retired small business owner and an investor in the U.S.A.! I object to a reduction in yearly reporting as it has potential to lead to less transparency making investment decisions weighted with potentially more risk. It would also allow more "sweeping under the rug" of issues relative to business governance. Reporting as it stands, creates stronger protections for everyone involved; the owners, workers and their communities and investors. It spurs creativity and innovation by allowing a responsible look at growth and success. I thank you in advance for your consideration.

Sheryl Harston — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Sheryl Harston Affiliation: Jun. 26, 2026 I am retired. Im just a regular lady of modest means who believes that most people are honest and trustworthy. The reality is that greed begets more greed and corruption follows. The world is in bad enough shape as it is. Here's your opportunity to do the right thing and not add to it. People are watching. Keep it quarterly.

Sent from my iPhone

Sofia Evalis Marina Lusignan Licensed Attorney and Civil Affairs Officer (US Army Reserves) — Jun 26, 2026 Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sofia Evalis Marina Lusignan Subject: PUBLIC COMMENT: Oppose the Reduction of Disclosure Frequency – Socioeconomic and National Security Risk Assessment To the Securities and Exchange Commission: As a combat veteran with over 17 years of experience conducting stability operations and civil affairs missions abroad, I am writing to strongly advise against any regulatory rollback of mandatory quarterly SEC reporting. For the last 60 years, the United States has monitored and historically utilized the specific socio-economic conditions that destabilize foreign governments and force regime change. The foundational catalyst for state fragility is always the same: an unaccountable elite monopoly weaponizing information, exploiting systemic opacity to extract rents, and driving hyper-inequality until the population decides the system is no longer worth preserving. By entertaining a reduction in reporting frequency, the Commission is actively considering the create of a critical, self-inflicted domestic security vulnerability. The Gini Coefficient: A Terminal Mathematical Threshold Socioeconomic degradation follows a mathematically predictable trajectory. When you dismantle high-frequency corporate disclosures like Form 10-Q, you create an unmonitored information vacuum. In that vacuum, institutional elites capture massive informational premiums, while systemically cannibalizing the capital base of the 58% of American households relying on public markets to build wealth. Consider the macro-metrics of state collapse when comparing wealth distribution (total net worth) under the Ancien Régime to modern America: Pre-Revolutionary France Wealth Gini was approximately 0.85, which led to terminal institutional collapse. The Contemporary United States Wealth Gini is currently sitting at approximately 0.83, just 0.02 points away from that historical threshold. Pre-revolutionary France operated on absolute structural opacity. The Crown and court favorites held an absolute monopoly on information, driving the pre-1789 wealth Gini coefficient to an estimated 0.85, culminating in total institutional collapse. Today, the modern United States is already sitting on a powder keg with a wealth Gini of 0.83. The primary structural dampener preventing our income distribution (Gini ~0.41 to 0.46) from matching the Ancien Régime's terminal income Gini (~0.59) is the SEC's enforced framework of continuous, democratic corporate transparency. Truncating this cadence means lighting the fuse on our own domestic stability. *Information Asymmetry as a Strategic Threat Vector * In stability doctrine, widespread institutional alienation is the primary precursor to civil unrest. If the Commission permits corporate boards to hide their financial performance, asset structures, and executive pay-ratios from the public for six months at a time, it triggers two severe vulnerabilities: 1) Severe Domestic Alienation: When everyday citizens realize the regulatory apparatus has modified the rules to explicitly favor insider networks, the social contract dissolves. Popular grievance inevitably channels into destabilizing, anti-state movements. 2) Adversarial Exploitation: A deeply fractured, economically insecure, and highly unequal domestic population is the ultimate soft target. Our foreign adversaries do not need to pierce our kinetic defense shields if they can simply exploit internal socioeconomic fractures through gray-zone destabilization operations. Strategic Assessment: Stabilizer vs. Fragility Catalyst - Information Equity: Under the current framework, continuous disclosure levels the trading field for retail investors. Under the proposed rollback, information monopolies thrive and retail capital is systemically expropriated. - Resource Safeguards: Under the current framework, Regulation S-K forces transparency on ballooning elite executive compensation. Under the proposed rollback, unmonitored rent extraction accelerates, aggressively pushing the wealth Gini past 0.85. - Systemic Legitimacy: Under the current framework, enforced regulatory guardrails preserve baseline trust in the state's economic architecture. Under the proposed rollback, widespread market distrust fuels popular mobilization and domestic instability. Conclusion It is the height of strategic arrogance to believe our domestic institutions are immune to the laws of socioeconomic physics. We have spent decades watching other nations adopt poor policies that concentrated wealth, destroyed public trust, and triggered systemic ruin. Quarterly reporting is not an administrative burden to be bartered away. It is a vital structural bulwark against hyper-inequality and state fragility. We proceed down the path of corporate deregulation at our own extreme peril.

Stephen Shek Owner Proprietor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Shek Quarterly report must be maintained. Information is important. Reduction of company information increases investor risk.

Steven C McDaniel — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven C McDaniel I am very much against this proposed change. Public companies are aware of the quarterly reporting requirements before they went public. This is one of the few ways individuals can have SOME idea of the financial stability of these types of companies. Moving to a semi-annual reporting just delays necessary information. Please do not make this change.

Susan Levinson — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Susan Levinson Comments attached

---

Tara Yaney — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tara Yaney Please do not change the requirements for publicly held companies to only have to report their financials twice a year. I read my quarterly statements and they are my only information sources to try and decide how to handle my investments. The financial world, especially now, changes so rapidly that even 3 months is a very long time in between finding out what companies are doing.

Taylor Steve — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Taylor Steve I believe this proposal would be a detriment to individual investors. Access to timely information is the most critical tool an investor has to evaluate risk. Quarterly reports are essential for staying accurately informed on my investments and serve as a vital foundation for my long-term wealth building.

Teresa Carmody — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Teresa Carmody I strongly oppose this proposed change. The change favors executives, their lawyers, and big institutional investors, while leaving everyday people in the dark about their investment accounts, which for many of us, is our sole source of retirement.

Teresa Pritchard Stockholder — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Teresa Pritchard As a stockholder and investor, I would like to see the SEC maintain quarterly filings for all companies. In my experience, the current system is not difficult to comply with and parameters are already in place and functioning well. I do not see any excuse to change it; “don’t fix what isn’t broken”. Why exactly has the proposed change been made? Many Americans have not forgotten the days of Enron and how many lives were subjected to financial ruin because of a small group of businessmen who lusted for corporate gain and greed. Keep those guardrails up with quarterly filings.

The Motley Fool Community None — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community As an investor in the stock market, it’s important to know a company’s objectives and financial condition. After all, it’s the stockholders who are bearing the weight of their actions. Quarterly reports are essential in order for stockholders to make informed decisions.

The Motley Fool Community Individual Investor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community Quarterly reporting is a must have for informed investing. At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

The Motley Fool Community None — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community The proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their shareholders.

Theodore O. Oster - — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Theodore O. Oster Commissioners: Let me begin with a simple observation: it is clear to anyone involved with investment in public companies that quarterly reporting is crucial and essential to effective and meaningful financial analysis and evaluation. But as this proposal being before the SEC suggests that the obvious now requires elaboration, I will spell it out clearly from my experience and perspective on the matter. I write as a long time investor who relies on timely, consistent, and frequent disclosures to evaluate performance, assess risk, and make rational capital allocation decisions. I urge the SEC to retain quarterly reporting as the standard for U.S. public companies. 1. Quarterly reporting is not burdensome for modern issuers The premise that quarterly reporting imposes undue administrative burden does not align with how public companies operate today. Most issuers maintain real time or near real time financial systems, including SAP, Oracle, Workday, and other enterprise platforms that support continuous close processes. The data required for quarterly reporting already exists in structured, automated form. The incremental effort is not in producing the numbers, but in disclosing them. Reducing reporting frequency does not meaningfully reduce operational workload; it simply reduces transparency. 2. Longer intervals create unnecessary opacity and risk Extending the reporting interval from three months to six months creates a longer period during which: • operational problems may compound • leverage or liquidity risks may escalate • earnings management opportunities increase • investors are left without material information Academic research supports this concern. Studies demonstrate that less frequent reporting correlates with increased earnings management and reduced transparency. Research further shows that more frequent reporting enhances market discipline and reduces the likelihood of undetected misstatements. Quarterly reporting is a proven safeguard. Semiannual reporting introduces avoidable blind spots. 3. Optional reporting undermines comparability and market integrity The proposal's optional structure raises significant concerns: • Comparability: If companies within the same industry report on different timelines and periods, investors cannot reliably compare performance, trends, or risk. • Selective opacity: Issuers facing operational or financial challenges may be more inclined to choose semiannual reporting, reducing visibility precisely when transparency is most needed. • Analytical distortion: Analysts, valuation models, and data providers rely on consistent reporting intervals. Optionality introduces noise and inconsistency into these systems. A disclosure regime that allows issuers to choose their reporting frequency risks creating uneven information environments, which is contrary to the SEC's investor protection mandate. 4. Dividend focused investors face timing mismatches under semiannual reporting Dividend sustainability depends on earnings, cash flow, payout ratios, and leverage. Under a semiannual framework, investors may receive dividend payments based on information that is three to six months outdated, only to learn later that earnings deteriorated significantly during the period. This mismatch between cash distributions and financial visibility is particularly problematic for income oriented investors. It also distorts the work of research providers such as Zacks, whose models rely on quarterly earnings "surprises." With fewer reporting intervals, surprises become larger, more volatile, and less informative. 5. Fraud detection depends on frequency The proposal does not present modeling comparing: • fraud detection timelines under quarterly vs. semiannual reporting • the likelihood of misstatements going undetected • the impact of longer intervals on investor harm Given the historical role of frequent reporting in uncovering irregularities, this omission is significant. Transparency is not merely a compliance exercise; it is a risk control mechanism. 6. Conclusion The U.S. capital markets are distinguished by their transparency and reliability. Quarterly reporting is a central component of that strength. While reducing administrative burden is a reasonable objective, the potential cost of diminished transparency outweighs the benefit. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to maintain quarterly reporting as the standard for public companies and to proceed cautiously with any optional alternatives that may reduce the frequency of material information available to investors. Respectfully submitted.

Thomas Hegarty — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Hegarty Way too much fraud and corruption as it is. It is important to keep all reporting quarterly.

Thomas Runge Retired president of Runge Consulting LLC for process chemistry R&D — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Runge I object to SEC proposal (File No. S7-2026-15) to scale back corporate financial disclosures from quarterly to semiannual. America was built on government policies that favor small business innovation. Reduction to semiannual reporting will save little business productivity and tax dollars compared to the decrease of timely information for the citizen investors and small business owners. Large companies and insiders trading will gain much more. Less frequent reporting means less transparency, reduced corporate accountability, and a much larger window for operational failures or malfeasance to go unnoticed. Market integrity depends on regular, reliable, and verified data. Corporate executives need to remain transparent on a predictable timeline.

Tiro Personal Investor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tiro Voting to maintain quarterly financial reporting.

Trishal Individual investor — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Trishal It is irresponsible to allow companies to only report twice a year. Only two reports destroys the vital financial transparency, and creates a gamblers market for options. The risk of insider trading also increases as, we have seen from congress and white house, world of mouth always gets out, this leaves public trust dwindling in the market. Retail investor like myself would find it too risky, and it would be better to remove all investments out of the market. Not to mention that the CEO of companies that have to file their sales or purchases at certain windows will now be able to benefit before everyone else.

VENKATESH Santapur — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: VENKATESH Santapur I still like the quarterly earnings reports for companies. For transparency of business financials. As I individual investor it helps a lot. Pls don’t change to semi annual.

Victoria Keinert — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Victoria Keinert No. This culture of Extraction has gone too far already. Don’t allow the companies to rip us off. It’s our retirement and future you are risking.

Vincent Campos The Motley Fool Community — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vincent Campos Please keep the 10-Q reporting requirement. As an individual investor, I rely on timely quarterly financial reports from publicly traded companies to make informed investment decisions, and reducing transparency would put everyday investors at a disadvantage.

Walter David — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Walter David Transparency builds trust, and in an era where trust is at a premium for government and other large institutions this seems poorly timed if not a bad idea all together. Saving corporations a relatively small amount of money, come at the high cost of investors feeling uninformed and thus reducing the propensity for them to invest. This would also put small investors at a disadvantage as large institutional investors have other means of obtaining this information.

Wanda . hurst50@gmail.com None concerned senior citizen — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wanda . hurst50@gmail.com Mmmmmmm

---

Wayne Massie — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wayne Massie Knowledge is power. Withholding information from the shareholder ownership puts all power in the hands of a select few. We've seen and know that doesn't work. Maintain transparency. Reject the notion on reducing reporting to only twice per year. Not enough. Not wise.

Wayne Tate — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wayne Tate Having quarterly reporting is a very important investment tool for individual investors such as myself. Don't we have enough special interests pushing the government in ways that benefit the few, in favor of what's good for the public? I strongly support keeping quarterly reporting as the norm.

We The People We The People — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: We The People Please stop being so damn greedy and destructive to every thing sacred and god about and to America!! Karma always catches up, even when you guys think- from your nuclear bomb proof shelters- and hope your immense wealth and your rampant theft of the public will not be noticed and protect you... Why is nothing ever enough for the already uber wealthy of the world who steal more and more from us every  minute?!

---

william Black Retired Investor living on stocks and bonds — Jun 26, 2026 Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: william Black We need quarterly reporting especially new issues

---

William Brennan Retired — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Brennan I sincerely believe that moving from quarterly to every 6 months reporting is an awful move for individual investors like me. A lot can change inside a 6-month reporting window Such a move would undermine trust and create too much opacity .

William oldacre None — Jun 26, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William oldacre Quarterly financial statements are critical to understanding a corporations health and overall function. As an investor I rely on them. I request the requirement for quarterly financial reporting remain as is for publicly traded companies.

Abhijit Patwardhan — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Abhijit Patwardhan I believe a proposal is on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I believe that’s a mistake as I think this goes against the principle of openness and transparency to investors. I would like to register my vote on this proposal and it is a NO.

Adam Stanhope — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adam Stanhope I think this weakens the integrity of the US markets. The SEC has always stood for transparency so this feels wrong. Furthermore which the efficiency of reporting systems today it feels like the time saving benefits are over exaggerated. Less information can not be good and it takes investors further away from understanding the full picture of what they are investing in and will damage investor confidence, it also places those with an inside track at a greater advantage. It just is not a great look for markets that are so big and important.

Aesop Lim IT professional — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aesop Lim This concerns the proposal to reduce the public-company reports from four times a year to just two. As an individual owner of these public company, I'm against reducing the number of reports to two. We need more transparencies to ensure accountabilities.

Agnes Weber Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Agnes Weber I am an individual investor and I would like to express my opposition to the proposed reduction of public company reporting from quarterly to semiannual reporting. As shareholders, investors are owners of these businesses. Regular and timely disclosure is essential to making informed investment decisions and maintaining confidence in the public markets. Quarterly reporting provides transparency into a company's financial performance, strategic direction, and emerging risks. The decrease in transparency from quarterly to semi-annually would create greater uncertainty for investors. This could also increase market volatility as larger amounts of information are released at once and may make it more difficult to evaluate investments. Public markets function best when investors have access to timely, consistent, and reliable information. I believe quarterly reporting strikes an appropriate balance between transparency and reporting burden, and I encourage the SEC to maintain the current reporting requirements. Sincerely, Agnes Weber (Submitted as a member of The Motley Fool Community)

---

al piper Share Manager — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: al piper NO absolutely a RIPOFF We need more tranparency .

Alan Brooks None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Brooks The public is best informed on stock reporting company condition four (4) times per year.

Alan Day Individual Investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Day Since all listed companies on all stock exchanges do monthly plus quarterly statements for internal use I see no need to reduce filing information to the security request from 4 to 2. I would like to see you justify why going to just 2 would save any the companies or the govermment would save much money.

Alice Emry Retail investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alice Emry Please DO NOT change the reporting period to biannual. This gives too much time between decision making for stock hold/sell cycle. The change may make it easier for unscrupulous company executives to hide/misrepresent company information until it is too late.

Alok Kumar Motley Fool Community. — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alok Kumar Please keep the reporting period to quarterly. We need to be notified of company finances since we are owners of the said company.

Alun Williams — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alun Williams I am writing to oppose the proposal that would allow companies to issue reports just twice a year instead of quarterly. These reports provide vital information to shareholders about the performance and future prospects of the companies they are investing in. Reducing the frequency of these reports will disadvantage smaller shareholders who have less access to market intelligence, and I think it would also tend to increase the volatility of share prices since investors may well over-react to less frequent updates. It would also tend to make it easier for insider trading to take place and go undetected. No doubt some will argue that less onerous reporting requirements will help to give company managers more time to concentrate on making their companies more successful, and perhaps encourage longer-term thinking by managers. However, I believe the growing sophistication of IT and AI will make it much less onerous to produce the required reports, and I think shareholders, who collectively own the companies they are invested in, should, as a matter of principle, be entitled to receive timely information about how businesses are performing. I hope the SEC will reconsider this proposal, and ensure the interests of shareholders are protected should it still go ahead. Possible safeguards might be to require companies to obtain the support of shareholders before any reduction in the frequency of reports is allowed, to require annual confirmation of such reduced reporting, and/or to require more frequent reporting for companies above a certain size.

Amanda Rankin — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amanda Rankin Do not allow companies to report 2 times a year! We, investors, need MORE transparency...not less. AI now makes it easier to gather data. It's not getting harder, it's getting easier! Thank you for keeping companies accountable to their investors through quarterly reports.

Amanda Reiche Retired teacher with investments — Jun 25, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amanda Reiche We need greater protection rather than allowing for laws facilitating criminal procedures!

Ana S. — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ana S. As an independent investor, I support current public companies quarterly filings to the SEC and consider that as their obligations to inform the public, stockholders and investment communities in a timely manner. Large corporations manage their business based on weekly, monthly and quarterly sales performance, therefore all information are already available for public SEC filing. I oppose the proposal to change current quarterly SEC reporting into semiannual SEC reporting.

Andrew Bliss The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Bliss The Motley Fool advisors make a solid argument for the "closer-to-real-time" information provided by quarterly reporting. This helps investors stay informed about the performance of the companies they own. I support their position.

Andrew Resnick Data Munge — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Resnick This proposed change significantly increases the risk to the investing public of corporate fraud, manipulation, and misconduct, by obscuring and delaying critical investment information. The benefit to the investors of seeing quarterly, how management is raising and spending money out weighs the cost savings. All businessmen know that companies must do the regulatory minimum in order to stay competitive; there will be negligible quarterly filings under the new rule. For investors the pace of modern business requires quarterly reporting of how the management is raising and spending money to enable rational investment. The rule's discussion of additional information investors use ignores the fact that ALL investors use the 10-Q directly or indirectly from analysts. Look at the huge popularity of XBRL 10-Q data from data services. Semi-annual filing will obscure corporate operating fundamentals by netting bad results with better results from the other quarter, hiding management mistakes. Given the seasonality of many industries, this masking will make it significantly harder for investors to analyze results in important seasons. I will allow that the SEC's alternative Semiannual Reporting Only for Certain Registrant Categories has merit with the limitations described. The SEC should be expanding the XBRL reporting and regulating a core standardized taxonomy to improve transparency; Not going directly against your mission statement.

Angela Skaggs — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Angela Skaggs Transparency is key and we need to make everything as transparent as possible so giving big businesses a window to be quiet is anything but transparent. I've worked for multiple companies who said one thing and did another behind closed doors, and the only oversight was reporting.

Anita Bromfield Retired — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anita Bromfield I want corporate reporting to REMAIN

QUARTERLY. This government looks down on the poor and indigent, then at least let me maintain some control of my hard won savings so that I don't join those ranks through corporate sleight of hand. Anita Bromfield, retired

---

Annonymous — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Annonymous I feel reporting quarterly is not burdensome and should be NOT changed to semiannually. Changing to semiannually will increase market volatility. Thanks!

Anon — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anon Subject: Opposition to Proposed Reduction of Quarterly Reporting Requirements To the Securities and Exchange Commission: As an individual retail investor, I am writing to oppose the proposal to reduce public company financial reporting requirements from quarterly to semi-annual disclosures. Investing represents genuine ownership in businesses, not merely speculation. When shareholders invest capital, they deserve transparent, regular updates about how management is stewarding those assets. Halving the frequency of required disclosures weakens this fundamental connection between owners and the businesses they own. I understand some argue that quarterly reporting creates excessive short-term pressure on companies. However, market myopia stems from investor behavior, not the information itself. Removing transparency does not cultivate patience—it simply leaves investors operating with less information while companies continue making critical decisions daily. Products launch, strategies shift, customers are won and lost. Investors would only receive half as many official updates about these developments. Modern disclosure tools and AI have made frequent reporting more efficient than ever. The cost burden argument seems less compelling today than it might have decades ago. More importantly, reduced transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty—it amplifies it. When information finally arrives after longer gaps, surprises become larger and market reactions more volatile. In 2000, individual investors successfully advocated for Regulation Fair Disclosure, strengthening transparency protections. Now we have another opportunity to preserve meaningful communication between companies and their shareholder-owners. I urge the Commission to maintain quarterly reporting requirements. Individual investors need regular, timely information to make informed decisions about where they place their capital. Thank you for your consideration. Respectfully, anonmyous Motley Fool Member — Jun 25, 2026

---

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: anonmyous Please do not change the reporting rule. We need as much information from companies as possible to be good and informed investors. It is not a burden for companies - they do this kind of evaluations all the time for themselves. If we are going to live or die by capitalism, don't handicap the free market by limiting, removing or hiding information from investors.

Anonymous — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Please reject this proposal. Semiannual reporting would only decrease information for public investors and therefore decrease transparency. That is not helpful for owners of a business (i.e. shareholders).

Anonymous — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous As an investor who depends on income from my investments, I urge you, PLEASE maintain the requirement for companies to submit quarterly reports; do not revert to semi-annual reporting (from the 1950's). Companies and shareholders must have timely accountability to address issues such as market conditions, to encourage sound business decisions. A shorter timeframe between reports will also deter insider trading, waste, fraud and abuse. Frankly, from an investor's perspective, I would prefer MONTHLY reporting, to stay informed and to ensure accountability and transparency on the part of corporations who are using my money. Please do not be influenced by political pressure. We are counting on the SEC to act as an independent agency and do the right thing for American investors. Semi-annual reporting would be a disaster for our economy.

Anonymous — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous It seems that keeping investors informed would be part of a company's fiduciary responsibility. Semi-annual reporting is not frequent enough to keep investors informed. Investors deserve transparency from the companies they invest in. Please, honor investors and their right to be reasonably informed. Being updated on important information every six months is not being reasonably informed.

Anonymous — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Don't reduce the reporting frequency from four times a year to just two. We need more transparency.

Anonymous — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous The new SEC proposed rule to end quarterly reporting would keep investors in the dark and leave many insecure about their portfolios. I am a retiree and I spent decades socking away portions of my salary/income investing in stocks, money market funds and ETF's. Throughout this process, there was sense of security I felt knowing that a commission was created by our government to protect investors. Receiving quarterly reports allows me to make decisions about my portfolio and my retirement savings. Changing to semi annual reporting increases the chances for fraudulent activity, it will keep investors in the dark and increase the possibility of affecting stock prices. Please do not do away with the value provided in quarterly reporting. It keeps the every day investor in the light, informed, and on track when making investment decisions.

Anonymous The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I prefer to keep it 4. Much more transparent and with tech advancement, the argument for 6 doesn't make sense

---

Anonymous retiree — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Dear Securities and Exchange Commission, I am a retiree, and I strongly support keeping quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. Quarterly reports help people like me stay informed about how companies are performing, which is important for protecting retirement savings and making careful investment decisions. Reducing reporting frequency would make it harder for ordinary investors to get timely information and could give large insiders and institutions an unfair advantage. Please keep quarterly reporting mandatory so all investors can have regular, transparent updates. Thank you for considering my comment.

Anthony T Carideo Jr — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anthony T Carideo Jr I would like you to keep the quarterly reporting in place so that regular timely information is available about the companies I invest in.

B — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: B Please do not allow the reduction of public-company reports from four times a year to twice a year. That would be like I only talked to my children’s teachers at the begining and end of the school year. So much information would be missed-and some of that may be time sensitive.

Barbara Addleman Graphic Designer — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Addleman Do NOT end quarterly reporting! My life savings in mutual funds and IRAs will be at risk. 6 month blackouts will allow corporate fraud and cause volatile swings of stock prices. In a "fair" stock market, transperancy is essential - you must not blindfold every day investors. Barbara Addleman Graphic Designer

---

Barbara Hokanson Hicks Motley Food Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Hokanson Hicks Quarterly reporting gives more information to make informed decisions. Do not approve twice a year reporting, please.

Barbara Nueske Motley Fool — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Nueske To whom it may concern, I was dismayed to see that a proposal to reduce communication with boards, consumers, customers and interested parties was being considered. In today's world we have learned the importance of transparency and clear factual information on our investments, income, strategic plans and regulations in all industries. It is unconscionable to even consider a move in this direction. I highly urge this proposal to be dropped and would go one step further- that communication would be more than quarterly. Sharing the realities of daily, monthly, quarterly and annually in today's very quickly paced and electronic world is vital and necessary. To protect the industries and investors, customers, employees and all communication is vital and needs to be timely! We need more! Certainly not less!!

Ben Branford — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ben Branford "...reduce the compliance burden..." You know, this is how they operate in third-world countries which results in wheels popping off trucks, cigarette smoking in firework factories, and veterinarians operating on people, all usually with the unintended, though negligent, consequence of killing innocent people. While we're at it, let's go ahead and remove proven vaccines from the mandated list, reduce national visibility on mandated educational standards, get rid of security searches at airports, allow locomotive conductors to operate according to their own watch, and allow residential properties to be built by anyone with a hammer and nails. If there's too much of a "burden" for companies to comply with the current SEC regulations, they should be delisted, or become private. If it's the SEC's role to be responsible for overseeing U.S. securities markets, preventing corporate fraud, and protecting investors, reducing quarterly statements is tantamount to dereliction of duty and nonfeasance. This is possibly one of the worst proposals to ever come from the "good idea fairy."

Benjamin Humphrey Retail investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Benjamin Humphrey I am opposed to the rule change that would allow industry insiders and corporate entities to report stock ownership on a semi-annual basis instead of the currently quarterly basis. This change would harm retail investors like myself.

Beth Ann Short — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beth Ann Short Investors need the quarterly reports as currently required by law. These reports help investors know and understand more about the companies in which they are invested. With market volatility, uncertain global markets and supply chains, and the current state of geopolitics, quarterly reports help investors navigate trends and the health of the reporting companies. And quarterly reporting requires the companies to prove awareness of and how they are adapting to these forces. More transparency results in better and more timely awareness.

Beverly A. Bryant — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beverly A. Bryant I strongly oppose the proposed rule and form amendments that would give public companies the option of filing semiannual reports in lieu of quarterly reports to meet their interim reporting obligations under the federal securities laws. In today's technological world, most companies are capable of generating reports within a very short window of time, therefore giving public companies the option of reporting semiannually is unacceptable. Complete transparency must be required. The proposed ruling needs to be changed from semiannual to MONTHLY.

Bill Murray — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Murray As a holder of many securities, the transition to two reporting periods during the year is a big mistake. I cannot make informed decisions without the information supplied in regular SEC filings. More reporting periods would be better than less.

Bonnie Kallis — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bonnie Kallis Affiliation: Jun. 25, 2026 I'm not in favor of this change. As a retiree with a limited income, I am counting on my investments to carry me through my old age. My 401k already suffered losses during the market manipulation of 2008--I see no reason whatsoever to loosen regulations on CEOs especially when those regulations are not overly burdensome and at least a small bit of protection for the average investor.

Brandon D'Silva — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brandon D'Silva Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed and reduces transparency.

Brandy Unruh Caregiver at Express Professionals — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brandy Unruh How would people be able to help a business do better if they're hiding financial issues? If we know a business we love is struggling we can ban together and support them. If we as consumers know a business is doing well we can buy stocks and invest in the future. I'm a caregiver in Montana and I think keeping it transparent serves everyone involved. Hiding financial income seems shady and deceptive as well. If there's nothing to hide, report the money.

Brenda Noel The Motley Fool community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Noel Do not reduce public reporting. Maintain the required quarterly reporting.

Brian Maxwell Retired Veteran — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Maxwell I am a retired veteran. I do not want less accountability from the companies whose stock values directly determine whether my long-term retirement plan is sustainable, I want more. Please maintain the market accountability that is already in place and has proven successful over decades. Please keep the quarterly reporting requirements in place so that ordinary working Americans like me assess investment performance frequently. If enacted, this proposal is NOT intended to help middle class investors. I have read the proposed policy plan revision, and it's clearly structured to benefit large companies and large investors while reducing accountability to smaller shareholders - this at a time when corporate profits are at their highest point in history - EVEN when adjusted for inflation.

Bryan Andersen Investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bryan Andersen Quarterly reports need to stay around to keep corporations honest.

C Putnam Farmer — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C Putnam We need more transparency not less. Investors have a right and responsibility to monitor investment decisions. Keep filings quarterly.

C St Germain — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C St Germain No no no to 6-mos of “darkness “. We’re not the idiot public you think we are. We’re the backbone of every securities exchange.

Carlos Bielicki — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carlos Bielicki Hello, I'm writing to let you know that I DO NOT support reducing the number of public-company financial reports from four times a year to two. At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. It also increases the risk of unpleasant surprises.

Carol Anderson Steketee None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carol Anderson Steketee Carol Anderson Steketee. I consider this necessary information for investors. It would leave us blind for 1/2 a year! Too long in this market. Please leave it just as it is!

Carol Hagele — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carol Hagele I think public companies should continue to report their financial results every three months. Changing this to every six months is not good for individual investors. This would have a negative affect on 401(k)s, IRAs or college funds. People are counting on this money to be there when they retire or go to college.

Carrie L Cook Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carrie L Cook The potential time/cost savings of omitting 1/2 the required reports per year is far outweighed by the loss of timely investment information. This information is known for any decently-run company; it needs to be disclosed to all the owners/shareholders! Reduced transparency is NOT a wise idea for a fair, efficient marketplace. On a practical level, quarterly reporting provides more time for information to be absorbed in smaller chunks, meaning less chance of reports revealing something unexpected and, therefore, less market volitility.

Cat Comeaux — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Cat Comeaux Affiliation: Jun. 25, 2026 Im trying to close out my 401k and I don't have much left cause of covid 3 of my co-workers did and I was on there heals and had to take out half and fidelity took which was add on what I need too pay bill 20% so that left me less than half now I need to close Mt acct and they are giving me a run around had to get agent and a POA.. they got every thing they need that's my money every thing I did like the ask the big corporation I was working for even sçwèed me with the lawyer I do they are working together.

..I know and believe in karma it will come back to you in way one way are another..I'm a poor woman trying to get was and is owned to me.....money hunger rich people don't care about us little people that work our butts off for keep them fill there pockets... what's left they are still gonna still take 20% which they should go by what hae in your 401k account which I don't have much cause I lost a yr. Because getting covid from work and 2 of my co-workers died and I was so close mow. ... NOW !!! I have SPS and they just keep taking what little I have I left in my account just like with my last check.. .... I also would like to know how many lawyers that's suppose to help you tells u you are terminated.,. Not the company my lawyer now what little little money I have left I feel like a around about and taking most of it at 20 % .....what if u had 500.00 left in your 401k they will take 20 % of it . .. not far and not right when you put your hard working in your retirement and things happen and you don't ask for and need your money. Something you dont want to do but u had a emergency came up and have to just like when I was on my deathbed a yr and had to pay bills especially when your single.. Now this with SPS from covid which is still person syndrome...Celine Dion but hers is her lungs and chest... mine effected my whole right side with meds. And infusion 2 to3 xs on month and wand to increase 4xs a month from my Neurolgist... living the dream and at times it's hard to keep you faith I wounded why God didn't take me too with my 2 co-workers... cause if it wasn't for my sister and calling emt firedept and cops I would have been the 3rd one.... Thank you Henkel corporate from not caring just a number to fill your big corporation and the big boys pockets.... I deserve so much more I showed up MN. A darn good woker i was welling to learn different depts of yous corporation until I got covid from your corporation in are small town in Cannon falls Mn. Liquid dept. Main but was versatile in other departments too. Night shift we were a team... Thanks so much for not caring, cat comeaux

---

Chad Beitelspacher N/A — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chad Beitelspacher As a country we are mired in conspiracies, mis and disinformation, and seemingly acceptable insider trading from politicians, who don’t always report within the allowed timeframe yet face no real consequences. Every corner turned by retail traders and we run into these things and more. If you adjust down the current transparency and reporting guidelines we will move further into this environment of lost trust, appearances of crony capitalism and of political protectionism. It will make it easier for companies to hide financial and sales information and limit the peoples’ ability to assess good stock market trades.

Channing Hayden Motley Fool — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Channing Hayden As an investor in a company, I am a part owner in that company. As an owner, I deserve regular, accurate, transparent communication from the company. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners and the ability of the owners to exercise proper oversight of the companies they own. Warren Buffett's entire investment strategy was based on analyzing company data before buying a stock and keep the stock based on company performance. I think Mr. Buffett would strongly object to less information on publicly traded stocks rather than more. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. In an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information does not creates better informed owners or potential investors. I can't imagine owning a business and getting updates from my managers only twice a year. I worked for a company in the maritime business and as a member of senior staff we gave weekly operational updates. Financial updates were given monthly. It would have been impossible for management to run the business otherwise. For owners to have sufficient oversite of the company, four reports a year is not unreasonable. In fact, you should require all reports sent to top management be sent to stockholders (owners) within a week or two of receipt by top management. To change reporting to twice a year seem to be an effort to keeper owners in the dark rather than informed. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it for current and prospective owners. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Please do not allow public corporations to file only two reports per year. Keep the current requirement of quarterly reports or increase the requirement to monthly reporting.

Charles Short — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Charles Short Affiliation: Jun. 25, 2026 Charles Short , retired
,
With 401Ks backed by company stock , I believe that the Quarterly Reporting and the CEO signature provide a heads up to investors and stockholders ,and accountability

---

Charles W Rice Former Sr. Analyst IRS (ret 39 yrs) — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles W Rice As a retiree and investor, I believe relaxing the reporting requirements will significantly reduce financial transparency to the detriment of all parties.

Chelsea Glover — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Chelsea Glover Affiliation: Jun. 25, 2026 I'm a first generation highschool graduate in retail management and am reliant on my 401k and other investments to build future wealth. Quarterly reporting keeps companies more transparent and accountable to the public from whom they've gained their wealth. Without this accountability we would be taking a step backwards. Keeping the public informed and more public oversight can help battle unfair wealth distribution between the working classes and white-collar business executives who already make decisions that effect millions of citizens on a daily basis. They need to be kept accountable to the citizens whose lives are effected behind their closed doors.

Cheryl Mather The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Mather What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Christy Minnick — Jun 25, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christy Minnick I ask that reporting not be reduced. Being a share holder of company, I deserve to have more transparency not less. Less frequent reporting will simply create more questions, and it will take more time to dig through 6 months of data, rather than 3, to provide an answer.

Cin Mikoychik Retired Human Resources Director — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cin Mikoychik It is critical for accountability to continue quarterly reporting

---

Cindy Brocone — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cindy Brocone We, the people are constantly monitored as to our creditworthiness. With every employment, every loan, every major transaction or at any time we are transparent. It is not too much to ask for quarterly reporting on those corporations, companies, or any conglomeration of the same, who represent the assets of millions of people. You open the door ever wider for those who would deceive, cheat, and steal. Keep it as it is with quarterly reporting. It is the fiscally conservative thing to do.

Collin burnett — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Collin burnett A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that’s a mistake! Please do not allow

---

Corey Collins The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Corey Collins Request to keep quarterly reporting currently as they are to provide fair information to the public.

Craig Whitaker Individual Investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Whitaker Dear Secretary, I am writing as an individual retail investor to express my strong opposition to any proposal that would reduce or eliminate the mandatory quarterly reporting requirement through Form 10-Q filings. As a retail investor, I do not have access to proprietary research, private analyst networks, or direct communication with corporate management teams. Like millions of other individual investors, I depend on publicly available disclosures to evaluate companies, manage risk, and make informed decisions regarding my long-term investments and retirement savings. The standardized format and filing requirements of Form 10-Q help ensure that all investors receive the same material financial information at the same time. This promotes fairness and reduces the information advantage enjoyed by large institutional investors. Corporate earnings releases are valuable but are often selectively presented and may emphasize non-GAAP measures that can obscure underlying business performance. Form 10-Q filings provide a more comprehensive and balanced view of a company's financial condition and operating results, prepared in accordance with U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP). Quarterly reports are subject to review by independent auditors, providing an additional layer of oversight and credibility. This review process helps enhance confidence in the accuracy and reliability of reported financial information. Voluntary corporate updates do not offer the same level of assurance. If the Commission's concern is the potential for corporate short-termism, I encourage policymakers to focus on practices such as short-term earnings guidance rather than reducing disclosure requirements. Eliminating mandatory quarterly reporting would not reduce short-term trading activity. Instead, it would deprive retail investors of timely, verified information and increase information asymmetries in the marketplace. Mandatory Form 10-Q filings remain one of the most important tools available to individual investors. Preserving these requirements is essential to maintaining transparency, accountability, and investor confidence in U.S. capital markets. Thank you for your consideration and for your continued commitment to protecting retail investors. Sincerely, Craig Whitaker

---

curtis — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: curtis At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right?

Cynthia Roketa Retired Accountant — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Roketa File No. S7-2026-15 Secretary Securities and Exchange Commission 100 F Street, NE Washington, DC 20549-1090 Re: Opposition to Proposed Amendments Permitting Optional Semiannual Reporting (File No. S7-2026-15) Dear Secretary, I am writing to express my strong opposition to the Commission’s proposed rule amendments that would permit public companies to elect semiannual interim reporting on new Form 10-S in lieu of traditional quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q. While the proposal is framed as a measure to reduce compliance costs and promote long-term business strategies, I believe it will materially harm market transparency, disadvantage retail investors, and increase the risk of financial fraud. 1. Severe Reduction in Market Transparency and Information Flow Quarterly reporting has served as a cornerstone of the U.S. capital markets for over fifty years, providing investors with a consistent baseline of information. Expanding the mandatory reporting interval to six months would blind the market for extended periods. Key performance indicators, shifts in operational trajectory, and emerging risks would be hidden from public view for half a year. This creates a dangerous information vacuum where material changes could accumulate before the market has a chance to react. 2. Creation of a Disproportionate Information Advantage While the proposal claims to offer flexibility, it creates a concerning asymmetry. Institutional investors, analysts, and large shareholders who possess the resources for direct management engagement and alternative data tracking will continue to gather insights. Meanwhile, retail investors who rely primarily on public filings will be severely disadvantaged by the lack of timely disclosures. This undermines the core mandate of the SEC to protect investors and maintain fair, orderly markets. 3. Heightened Risk of Fraud and Financial Misrepresentation Mandatory quarterly reporting acts as a vital structural check against financial misrepresentation. Lengthening the period between mandatory filings reduces the frequency of auditor reviews, significantly increasing the opportunity for accounting irregularities and fraud to fester before detection. Regular, frequent disclosure forces companies to maintain robust, ongoing internal controls. Removing this cadence could inadvertently cultivate an environment ripe for manipulation. 4. Increased Volatility and Market Speculation Instead of reducing volatility, replacing quarterly filings with semiannual reports risks increasing it. When formal corporate disclosures are sparse, the market becomes heavily reliant on rumors, speculation, and unofficial management guidance. Rather than encouraging long-term focus, the lack of verifiable, standardized interim data will likely lead to sharp, disproportionate price swings when semiannual numbers are finally released. Conclusion The quarterly reporting framework is not an undue burden; it is a fundamental cost of accessing the public markets that guarantees investor trust and market integrity. Allowing companies to check a box to hide their interim financial data behind a semiannual cadence is a significant step backward for transparency. Therefore, I urge the Commission to withdraw the proposed amendments and maintain the mandatory quarterly reporting requirements. Sincerely, Cynthia Roketa

---

D Hayden none — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D Hayden The quarterly reporting requirement should be kept the same-we need more information and transparency from companies not less.

D. A. — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D. A. Quarterly reports and transparency are essential for making educated investment choices and reducing market volatility. Investors should be entitled to monitor the performance of the firms they invest in.

D.M.B. — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D.M.B. Financial reporting should be reported quarterly, NOT semi-annually.

Daniel Crane The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Crane Please don't reduce reporting from four times per year to only two.

Danny Culp — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Danny Culp Please, NO to semi-annual reporting. In today's investing environment I depend on (and look forward to) quarterly reporting/guidance in order to stay on top of my investments. Too much can change in 6 months that would put me, an individual investor, behind the 8-ball when evaluating potential holds, sales and purchases. Quarterly reporting reduces the possibility that a company's (or fund's) fundamentals have shifted substantially enough to adversely affect my investing decisions to a large, if not catastrophic, degree. Please...no semi-annual reporting requirements. Keep quarterly reporting!

Daphne Harris — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daphne Harris we need quarterly reports for transparency. There's no reason to change what has worked so well for decades.

Darrell Wofford — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Darrell Wofford Affiliation: Jun. 25, 2026 My name is Darrell Wofford. I'm a 57 year old electrician and am counting on my pension, annuity, and 401k to be able to retire with dignity. History has shown that anything other than quarterly reporting will cause massive swings in our retirement and investment accounts while allowing insiders to make great profits. I am tired of the rich getting richer on my back and the backs of the people who built this country. This whole last 18 months there has been nothing but inflation and higher prices for us blue collar workers while at they same time they are cutting Medicare, Medicaid and SS that we have paid in our whole lives. They have spent our money and we are not getting anything close to what the value that money should have earned us. Our monthly SS should be at least double what we are going to get if anything. Please do not cripple us more by killing our little investments because we are not millionaires. This could put into jeopardy our whole future and the chance to retire with dignity. There is no reason for this other than to let the rich get richer and the rest of us poorer. Learn from our nations historical mistakes. Please keep quarterly reporting and help the middle class. Thank you!

Sent from my iPhone

David Christopher None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Christopher It is my opinion that having quarterly reports provides more information and better transparency. This allows investors to make more informed decisions than by- annual reports will. I am in favor of keeping things as they are.

David Clardy — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Clardy The US at this time is in desperate need of transparency not more obfuscation. The total lack of transparency of the obama and biden terms showed us it is not good for us as a country. To move to allow corporations to hide there business from the very investors in their company is a disaster of ENRON proportions waiting to happen. I urge rejection of the semi-annual reporting proposal.

David Cronin The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Cronin Reducing reporting requirements will lessen the transparency of publicly traded companies which does not benefit the stockholders. Less reporting makes investors less informed and will add to uncertainty regarding company performance. The proposed change would weaken the connection between companies and their owners.

David Gunderson Teacher, National Education Association — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Gunderson Quarterly reporting keeps public companies honest. After Enron and WorldCom, Sarbanes-Oxley makes every CEO and CFO personally certify every quarterly and annual report. “No boardroom in America is above or beyond the law.” A certification costs an honest executive nothing to sign, it just exposes the fraudsters. Why roll them back? Four times a year, the CEO and CFO must each put their name to the company's books, certifying they've reviewed the report and that it contains no untrue statement of a material fact. Knowingly certify a false one: up to $1 million and 10 years in federal prison. Do it willfully: up to $5 million and 20 years. The proposal cuts those certified filings from four to two. Half as many moments when anyone at the top must stake their freedom on the truth. Enron's executives claimed ignorance of their own books, so Congress made ignorance impossible to claim. Every quarter, the CEO and CFO certify that they personally designed and evaluated the controls that surface bad news, and that they reported any weaknesses or fraud to the auditors. The law claws back executive bonuses even without proof the boss was personally involved. Halve the filings, and you halve the quarters where "I didn't know" is off the table. The SEC says current reports and press releases will fill the gap. Reading the fine print: earnings releases ride on Form 8-K as "furnished," not "filed." That category exempts them from the automatic liability filed reports carry. No outside auditor reviews them, and no certification is required even when an 8-K contains financial statements. The SEC's own proposal concedes the problem. The 8-K may contain information, but it lacks any accountability. Quarterly reporting keeps public companies honest.

David N. Gilyan — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David N. Gilyan Less transparency can never logically be argued as beneficial to the shareholders.

David Thomas The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Thomas This reduces transparency and increases risk to investors and in an age of AI should not significantly reduce costs to businesses. I therefore feel it is an unwise step and oppose it.

Davis Lisandro Cloward — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Davis Lisandro Cloward I am writing to express my strong opposition to the SEC’s proposed rule that would allow public companies to opt out of quarterly reporting in favor of semiannual reporting. While the Commission frames this as a measure to reduce regulatory burdens and curb corporate "short-termism," the actual consequence will be an erosion of market transparency that harms retail investors while providing an unfair advantage to institutional investors, hedge funds, and large private equity firms. The SEC should stick to it’s core mission: ”to protect investors and maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets”. Quarterly reporting protects individual investors. Semiannual reporting doubles the information gap between insiders and ordinary shareholders. That gap is where volatility, uncertainty, and mistrust grow. I strongly urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal and maintain mandatory quarterly reporting. The health of our public markets depends on equal, timely access to information for all participants, not just the wealthiest institutions.

Deborah Connelly — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Connelly Keep the filing at every three months. Large investment firms Must be held accountable for their actions to the little people Not just to the board and must be transparent in their dealings..

Deborah Wolf — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Wolf Do not change it! Quarterly!

Debra Austin Retired — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Debra Austin If the semi-annual change is made, my income (retirement) will be affected negatively! Why do that to an elderly person (actually, all elderly people living off their investments)?!

Debra Hunter-Bonner — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Debra Hunter-Bonner Affiliation: Jun. 25, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Re: Proposed Rule 33-11414 – Semiannual Reporting
I am writing as an individual investor to oppose the SEC's proposed amendments that would allow public companies to file semiannual reports in lieu of quarterly reports.
My primary concern is fraud detection. Quarterly reporting serves as a critical early-warning system. When companies must disclose financial results every 90 days, irregularities, misstatements, and deteriorating conditions are surfaced far sooner than they would be under a six-month reporting cycle. Reducing reporting frequency would give bad actors more time to conceal problems, manipulate results, or obscure a company's true financial condition before investors can react.
History bears this out. Many of the most damaging corporate fraud cases — Enron, WorldCom, and others — involved months of concealed losses that eventually devastated shareholders. Longer reporting windows do not prevent fraud; they extend its runway.
While I understand the SEC's interest in reducing compliance burdens and encouraging more companies to go public, these are not goals that should come at the expense of investor protection. The quarterly reporting requirement is not merely a regulatory formality — it is a cornerstone of market transparency and accountability.
I urge the Commission to reject this proposal and retain the current quarterly reporting requirement under Form 10-Q.
Respectfully submitted,

Delcy Newell — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Delcy Newell I believe quarterly reporting should be continued. As a private investor, I rely on quarterly information to make decisions. Longer gaps create an unfair advantage for corporate insiders. "Optional" doesn't fix the problem because companies that opt in are often the ones whose investors most need frequent updates. Supposed savings to companies aren't worth the potential cost to me .

---

denise shields — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: denise shields Denise Shields, retired , 79. At this point in my life I need to know what my money is doing more often not less. If this goes through I may consider pulling out of the stock market.

Devika Nair — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Devika Nair Less transparency means more fraud. There is absolutely no good reason to make this change. It enables corruption and hurts investors at all levels.

Devyn Folk — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Devyn Folk This proposal is just lazy. There should be more reporting information, not less.

Diane Steenstra Therapist — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diane Steenstra As I approach retirement, I NEED to monitor my investments closely to be able to make changes, if needed.

Donna Joslin None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Donna Joslin Absolutely keep the requirement to report biannually in place

---

Donnalynn Oakes Hospice Healthcare Manager — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Donnalynn Oakes In no way, shape, or form will we stand for such blatant unethical changes! You've gone too far!

Douglas L Nelson None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Douglas L Nelson Four times a year to credibly report fiscal responsibilities is barely adequate. Two times a year is NOT enough.

Douglas Myers Jr — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Douglas Myers Jr Publicly traded entities that produce profits and loss should be held fully transparent at no less than a quarterly frequency. To try to reduce this, is in complete contrast to the free market system and an attempt to monopolize information for the ownership vs the investors. Please do not allow reduction to occur and keep this amazing economic system healthy

---

Earl Jarosh Individual Investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Earl Jarosh At its heart, investing is ownership. When I own a piece of a business, I deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Transparency in investing is key; less information rarely creates better-informed owners.

Edward Coburn CEO, Cabot Heritage Corporation dba Cabot Wealth Network — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edward Coburn Reducing the reporting requirement for public companies from quarterly to semi-annually is not in the best interests of our country. While the intention of reducing the reporting burden for companies is laudable, particularly for small and medium sized businesses, it is precisely those companies where the more frequent reporting is so important. With the rapid pace of changes, both internal and external, there is far too much that change dramatically in 6 months. And the smaller companies receive less media and analyst coverage so the reports are even more important. If this rule were to be implemented, it would undermine confidence in the smaller corporations in particular, making them less attractive investments. This would cause further concentration of capital with larger companies. In addition, it would almost certainly raise the cost of capital for the smaller corporations. The end result would be to harm the same smaller companies this rule aims to help. I strongly encourage you to not proceed with this rule in its current form. It is bad for investors and bad for corporations.

Ehrich Weiss — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ehrich Weiss Bad idea

Eldon Williamson Concerned Citizen — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eldon Williamson The public wants Quarterly reporting. With the amount of corruption, fraud, outright lying, cheating, and market manipulation : On top of very fluid political and global market volatility, We need quarterly oversight. The Government wants the people to trust and believe in it. To do that We need consistent transparency .

Elisa Vetter — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elisa Vetter Do not reduce the required number of annual reports from four to two. Keeping investors and the public updated on a company’s performance and future developments is honorable and ethical. Lessening the amount of information creates ignorance and unaccountability. The world has plenty of both already.

Elizabeth Parker — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth Parker I do not support reducing the reporting requirements to twice a year as it is detrimental and increases risk for retail investors. Larger investors often have more sophisticated tools and analyists while retail depends on quarterly reports for their own management. I would argue that moving to twice yearly reporting would make an already uneven playing field much worse for retail . Less frequent reporting increases uncertainty, delays the release of important information, and makes it harder for ordinary investors to assess a company's performance and respond to changing conditions. Greater transparency through quarterly reporting helps promote fairness, confidence, and a more level playing field.

Elizabeth Sexton American Citizen — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth Sexton Keep the reporting quarterly. Everyone, executives, lawyers, and big institutional investors will still know exactly how the business is doing. It is interesting that the only one's who won't know are the regular citizen investor. The look for this is very bad for the SEC.

Ellen Seebacher — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ellen Seebacher I've been working with the Motley Fool for ten years now, and in that time I have read or consulted innumerable 10-Qs and 10-Ks. Before I got involved with the Fool, I had no idea of what kind of information was available to me as an individual investor; now I wouldn't invest without it. It's extraordinarily important that companies be honest and transparent with their shareholders -- not just their insiders -- both regularly and frequently. Twice a year is not sufficient for individual investors to monitor the direction each company is taking. Four times a year protects us.

Emlee Silverman — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Emlee Silverman I am against switching from Quarterly reporting to every six months. Transparency is key.

Eric Jacobshagen — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eric Jacobshagen We need to continue to require quarterly reporting for companies. As an investor, these timely reports help me evaluate my investments. Cutting the number of reports in half makes it harder to know what is happening with a company. These days, with the automated tools available, additional reports should be a minimal expense.

Ethan S — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ethan S In today’s day and age, there has never been a greater need for transparency and accountability. When the majority of the population is feeling squeezed by cost of living and broader financial realities, it’s absolutely critical that public companies be held to a standard of transparency

---

Farid Sheikh — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Farid Sheikh As shareholders one of the most important things is transparency. Reducing mandatory reporting from quarterly to semiannual would weaken transparency for investors while offering little evidence that it reduces short-term market pressure. Quarterly reporting is a core strength of US markets because it provides timely and consistent information that supports accurate price discovery and limits information gaps between insiders and the public. Experience in other markets, including the United Kingdom, shows no improvement in long-term corporate behavior after reducing reporting frequency, but it does show a decline in the availability of material information. Although companies may benefit from lower compliance costs, the overall effect for investors is reduced visibility into company performance and greater reliance on private or informal channels of information.

Feleica Harris The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Feleica Harris I fully support full transparency. The more times a year the better. Regards, Feleica Harris

---

Fran McCollum — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Fran McCollum The SEC should continue quarterly reporting for the sake of investors. The laws and reporting rule are there for good reason! Besides cautionary tales like Enron, there is too much that can happen in 6 months, and investors need to know how their funds are being handled. A decrease in accountability also sends the wrong message about whether ordinary people's accounts matter, and allows bigger entities an advantage over the average investor because they have more access than the public has. Even a housewife like me can see that S7-2026-15 is a bad idea. No to S7-2026-15!

Francine Leung — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Francine Leung Transparency in investments is essential for the consumer.

G Zupko Investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: G Zupko Please keep corporate quarterly reporting rules as is.

Garrett Campbell — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Garrett Campbell I believe quarterly reports should remain in place. A reduction to semiannual reports is bad for individual investors as it creates opacity and undermines trust. Semiannual reporting doubles the information gap between insiders and ordinary shareholders. The companies we trade are not being hindered by filing four reports a year. Keeping quarterly reports will maintain transparency and trust between corporations and their public owners.

Gary Greenwood Motley Fool — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gary Greenwood Need 4 reports a year for my information to stay invested or not! Tks

---

gary tressler retired — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: gary tressler As a sharholder in multiple companies, I believe it is unwise to reduce the number of company reports to shareholders. I prefer a brief monthly report followed by a more complete report on a quarterly basis. This gives us, shareholders, more information on how well the business is being managed. I firmly believe we need, at least, quarterly reports.

Gary V. Garfunkel retired — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gary V. Garfunkel While I do not wish to see companies unduly burdened with reporting requirements, I have seen too many instances where companies such as Enron, World Com and others would have likely caused even greater harm if semi-annual reporting was in place. Those also happen to be disgusting examples of poor SEC oversight. I, for one, think it is a terrible idea to go away from current quarterly reporting requirements. Leave things as they are.

Gavin Hoffman — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gavin Hoffman Reducing the reporting requirements from quarterly to semi-annually is a mistake. One of the key tenants necessary for a perfectly competitive market is perfect information. While perfect is impossible in real life it is the role of government to make us as close as humanly possible. Therefore reducing the amount of information is vote against a perfectly competitive market, the free market, and capitalism.

George Macke Individual investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: George Macke As an individual investor, I appreciate the transparency granted to people such as me through regulation FD and similar regulations, which aim to give me the same access to significant company information that is also given to institutional investors. Although I would use more frequent financial reports, such as monthly releases of key metrics, quarterly financial reports are a minimum. I choose not to invest in foreign companies that have more opaque financial reporting practices, such as bi-annual reports or opportunities not to report significant information, such as insider trading. I understand that the SEC is considering giving publicly traded companies the option to report twice per year instead of the current requirement of four times each year. As an individual investor, I object to any action that reduces my ability to evaluate company performance, executive management, and the impact of activities, good and bad, which change the trends for revenue, profit margins, cash flow, and other matters that have a direct impact on the value of my investments. Please reject the proposal for reduced frequency and transparency in financial reporting.

Gerald Auker — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gerald Auker Quarterly reporting is one of the most important tools for retail investors to get information. A lot can go wrong in half a year: Ballooning debt, lawsuits, vanishing customers. Quarterly filings force it into the open. Transparency is the bedrock of a free and fair stock market. Corporate scandals where investors lose their money are often the result of gaps in financial disclosure. Quarterly filings don't prevent fraud, but they dramatically shorten the window in which it can fester. Retail investors need clear, accurate and timely information to make informed investment decisions. Insiders and institutional investors will always have the resources and relationships to get the information they need. Without quarterly reporting, retail investors are on an unlevel playing field, with no way to get timely information about public companies.

Geraldine Johnson Retired — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Geraldine Johnson We have enough crooks in DC - we need transparency! Keep the reports quarterly!

Glenda Rubin — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Glenda Rubin This comment is to oppose the elimination of quarterly corporate financial filings. Reporting only every six months is too long an interval for investors to receive information on the companies they are invested in or are considering to invest in. In today's global and ever-shrinking economic system, having important information about companies' earnings sat on for six months is too long. Investors will be flying blind. It facilitates trading on inside information and makes it more difficult to uncover. I believe this is bound to have the most adverse effects on the small, individual investor. I'll wager that companies will still hold their quarterly earnings calls with the financial community and institutional investors, which essentially shuts out small investors from receiving timely information. I was formerly director of investor relations for a publicly traded company and know that the 10-Q and accompanying earnings press releases were of significant interest. Please keep the current quarterly earnings reportings requirements. Sincerely, Glenda Rubin

---

Gloria McMillan from WILPF US — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gloria McMillan from WILPF US Dear SEC, I believe that in a democracy, the public have a right to know. Cutting the reports by one-half certainly is not my definition of a demotic move toward greater transparent communications, esp. for small investors and those seeking to understand market trends who are not billionaires with a staff of hundreds to find alternative means of information. I am surprised that this option is even being considered. Please do not decrease the number of times that SEC reports go out from quarterly.

Graeme Stuckey The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Graeme Stuckey I am retired and I rely on investments to fund my retirement. The State Pension helps, but is not a Government Gold Plated pension and is taxed! I read updates, reports and trading information to enable me monitor my investments. I have to be very careful to act sensibly and in a timely manner. Reducing the frequency of company reports will mean that I will not get reasonably up to date information.

Greg Hill — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Greg Hill Keep the reporting period quarterly. Technology is making it easier, not harder for companies to update investors. A lot can change with a company in 3 months, pushing communications to 6 months puts investors even more at risk.

Gregory Stanley — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Gregory Stanley Affiliation: Jun. 25, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Do not mess with our control and transparency of our retirements. It makes absolutely no sense to change things. Now st the same time my employer is trying to switch our 401ks into some blanket fund if their choosing. I've always chose my own individual funds and performed well.

Guy Fiorentini Music instruction and performance — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Guy Fiorentini This proposed rule to change from quarterly reporting to semi annual reporting will in no way serve the general public. This proposed change will make it easier for companies to sneak changes past their shareholders that benefit those at the very top and cost both shareholders and employees. Was this rule not instigated in the first place to stem fraud and malfeasance? The need to rein this in exists just as greatly, if not more, today as it did when the rule was put into place.

Hilary Kellar The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Hilary Kellar In an age where AI is dramatically reducing reporting burdens and accounting, we should be increasing reporting not lowering it. 2 times a year is not conducive to proper ownership. It will result in a lack of transparency.

Hollie B Pavloff — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Hollie B Pavloff It is critical that the SEC protect individual investors by continuing quarterly reports of public companies to ensure we have the best information available to manage our financial situation.

Holly Robison Retired — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Holly Robison It’s crucial to receive quarterly reports from publicly traded companies. Investors need current data to make informed decisions. Semi annually is not timely enough to determine performance and quality of an investment. This change to semi annually should not be made. I prefer to keep publicly traded companies accountable 4 times per year.

Howard Grossman CPA — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Howard Grossman Less frequent reporting will introduce more uncertainty into the investor's already clouded access to the financial condition of publicly held corporations, funds and ETFs. The proposed change to semi-annual from quarterly further removes the investor class from corporate owners.

Hudson Sattler — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Hudson Sattler As investors we rely on information available to the public to help us make informed investment decisions. Reducing access to the current performance information from a company from 4 to 2 times a year is a 50% reduction in how a company is performing throughout the year. As markets react to news on a daily basis and in the times we live in with AI providing the heavy lifting (and it has great potential to improve current reporting burden) we should be looking as more regular data not less. This proposal would benefit those companies with data to hide and is at the heart of what the Trump Administration is doing to the global marketplace. Its just a terrible idea and should never have been proposed. I support the efforts of groups like the Motley Fool Community to help spread good information.

Ian Wishart — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ian Wishart Investors need quarterly reports to make informed decisions and keep the business accountable. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Irene ONeill — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Irene ONeill Affiliation: Jun. 25, 2026 As a retired employee, I depend on continued returns on my 401K, my IRA, Social Security, and my meager pension from my last, most recent job. With major cuts to Social Security and Medicare threatening my retirement income,I beg you not to cut back on quarterly earnings reports. I don't purport to understanding exactly how or why this will hurt the little guy, but I can see how this would help the insiders and fat cats. Please keep it quarterly.
Sincerely, Irene O'Neill from West Chicago, Illinois.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Isabel Barber Motley Fool and Fidelity — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Isabel Barber I expect and want transparency in the stocks I choose to buy and my choices are made by following fundamentals. It is imperative that quarterly reports remain the norm. I surely wouldn’t want my bank account to report twice a year. Thank you.

---

j bunsavage — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: j bunsavage dont pass the bill for less reports.. stay w/ quarterly reports

---

Ja Harper Independent Individual Investor, of the Investing Public — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ja Harper Ja Harper, an Individual Retail Investor, of the Investing Public! These Quarterly Reports are extremely Important and NEEDED for my planning preparation for our retirement savings. Quarterly Reporting helps to level the playing field for us ‘little folks' over corporation insiders, and allows for the most frequent updates. The 'optional' aspect isn't an answer, it allows anyone, and eventually everyone, to 'opt out' thus eliminating timely information for investors. That certainly isn't an effective strategy for the investing public. Any cost advantage is minimal in comparison to the losses incurred due to lack of timeliness of information. This tells one that Quarterly Reports are NEEDED to make informed decisions based on the most current, updated information. Submitted 6-25-26

James Bennett — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Bennett I DO NOT agree with S7-2026-15. As an individual investor and owner of several publicly traded companies, I rely on quarterly reports to manage my portfolios and make sound financial decisions. Transparency and regulations are an important part of our public financial system. Reducing reporting and transparency is not a positive move for shareholders, the company owners

---

James Hoerner — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Hoerner 4 times a year reporting is the minimum that should be required for stock holders to follow a company

---

James M Weldon — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James M Weldon Every Publicly traded Company has the absolute duty to keep all investors informed of any and all information pertaining to investors investments, Reducing reporting from 4 times a year to 2 times is completely unacceptable... James M Weldon

---

James Palmer — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Palmer Regular accounting means fewer chances that finances will be monitored to insure clients have a clear view of their financial accounts.

James Zaleschuk None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Zaleschuk I am retired, living off my invested savings. I want more company disclosures, not less.

Janet Li — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Janet Li As a retail investor I would like to be informed more than 2 times a year on how the companies that I have an investment interest are doing. It would allow me to have a more up to date information in terms of my decision making process.

Jason Riley — Jun 25, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jason Riley I oppose proposed rule S7-2026-15, Semiannual Reporting. As a retail investor, I rely on quarterly reporting to evaluate companies, monitor risks, compare performance, and make informed decisions. Reducing required reporting from quarterly to semiannual would weaken market transparency and create longer periods where deteriorating financial results, liquidity issues, operational problems, or governance concerns may remain hidden from ordinary investors. This proposal would likely widen the information gap between retail investors and large institutions. Large investors have more access to management, analysts, private research, and alternative data. Ordinary investors rely much more heavily on standardized public disclosures like Form 10-Q. If quarterly reporting is burdensome, the SEC should simplify quarterly reporting requirements rather than eliminate them. Public companies should continue to provide regular quarterly financial disclosure. The SEC's priority should be investor protection and fair, transparent markets. This proposal moves in the wrong direction, and I urge the Commission not to adopt it.

Jeanie Derr, Derr Advisory Services — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeanie Derr, I worked for over 30 years for large, publicly traded companies in financial management positions. I found that even quarterly reporting was insufficient to properly inform the general investor community. Unknowing investors were unpleasantly surprised, while company insiders either benefited or had the ability to reduce their personal risks. I strongly recommend that quarterly reporting be maintained for all publicly traded companies.

Jeff Mahoney, General Counsel, Council of Institutional Investors — Jun 25, 2026
Via Electronic Comments
June 25, 2026
Vanessa Countryman
Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street NE
Washington, DC 20549–1090
Re: File Number S7-2026-15, Semiannual Reporting
Dear Secretary Countryman:
The Council of Institutional Investors (CII)1 respectfully submits this letter in response to the Securities and Exchange Commission's (SEC or Commission) request for comments on its proposed "amendments to allow companies to file semiannual reports on Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q to meet their interim reporting obligations under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ('Exchange Act')" (Proposed Rule).2 CII opposes the Proposed Rule.
CII is a nonprofit, nonpartisan association of U.S. public, corporate and union employee benefit funds, other employee benefit plans, state and local entities charged with investing public assets, and foundations and endowments with combined assets under management of approximately $5.2 trillion. Our member funds include major long-term shareowners with a duty to protect the retirement savings of millions of workers and their families, including public pension funds with more than 15 million participants – true and real "Main Street" investors through their pension funds. Our associate members include non-U.S. asset owners with about $5.8 trillion in assets, and a range of asset managers with more than $74 trillion in assets under management.
CII has long held the view that the requirement to file on a quarterly basis data-tagged financial statements and related footnotes on Form 10-Q and have those statements subject to an independent auditor review and management certification is a key element of the timely and accurate information flow that underpins the quality and efficiency of the U.S. capital markets.

That requirement helps ensure that important information is promptly and transparently provided to the marketplace, allowing investors to assess concrete progress against strategic goals. In addition, CII believes that permitting less frequent reporting would lead to greater share price volatility, and more intense investor focus on short-term share price fluctuations, as investors

1 For more information about the Council of Institutional Investors (CII), including its board and members, please visit CII's website at http://www.cii.org.

2 See Semiannual Reporting, Securities Act Release No. 11414, Exchange Act Release No. 105368, Trust Indenture Act Release No. 2563, Investment Company Act Release No. 36140, 91 Fed. Reg. 24,968 (proposed May 5, 2026), https://www.federalregister.gov/documents/2026/05/07/2026-09095/semiannual-reporting.

expend effort guessing how well the company is performing. As such, requiring quarterly financial reports on Form 10-Q is an important reality check for investors on stock valuation. Conversely, CII does not believe that requiring quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q materially reduces the number of U.S public companies or initial public offerings (IPO). The Proposed Rule does not provide an adequate basis for us to reach a different conclusion.

The remainder of this letter addresses select questions raised in the "Request for Comment" sections of the Proposed Rule that are directed at investors or for which we have strongly held views.

3

1. The proposed amendments would allow Exchange Act reporting companies to elect to file interim reports on a semiannual basis in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10–Q. Should companies have this option, or should all companies continue to be required to file Form 10–Q? What types of companies are likely to elect the option to file semiannual reports? Are companies in certain industries more likely than those in other industries to elect to file semiannual reports?4

As in 2019 when the Commission last solicited comments on quarterly reports,5 CII believes that all reporting companies under the Exchange Act should continue to be required to file quarterly reports on Form 10-Q.6 The Commission considered and rejected a move to semiannual reporting in 2019 on considerations that remain valid today.

7

We also continue to believe that requiring quarterly reporting benefits investors, companies, and the U.S. capital markets.8 More specifically, we believe having timely, accurate, and comparable information from all reporting companies allows long-term investors to make more informed investment and voting decisions which leads to more accurate market

3 Id. at 24,978-83, 24,985-86, 25,011.

4 Id. at 24,978.

5 See Request for Comment on Earnings Releases and Quarterly Reports, Securities Act Release No. 10,588, Exchange Act Release No. 84,842, 83 Fed. Reg. 65,601 (Dec. 21, 2018), https://www.govinfo.gov/content/pkg/FR-2018-12-21/pdf/2018-27663.pdf.

6 See, e.g., Letter from Jeffrey P. Mahoney, General Counsel, CII to Brent J. Fields, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, Re: File No. S7-26-18 at 1 (Mar. 21, 2019), https://www.sec.gov/comments/s7-26-18/s72618-5189776-183593.pdf ("CII believes that investors, companies, and other market participants benefit from the current reporting frequency model, which requires from domestic issuers filing quarterly reports on Form

10–Q.”).
7 See Letter from Shivaram Rajgopal, the Roy Bernard Kester and T.W. Byrnes, Professor of Accounting and Auditing to Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission Re: File No. S7-2026-15; Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140 — Semiannual Reporting (Proposed Rule) (June 3, 2026), https://www.sec.gov/comments/S7-2026-15/s7202615-799759-2420026.pdf.
8 See, e.g., Transcript of U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Investor Advisory Committee Meeting, Bloomberg Gov’t 21-22 (Mar. 12, 2026) (statement of Stephen Berger, Managing Director, Global Head of Government & Regulatory Policy, Citadel) (on file with CII) (“I do believe that quarterly reporting benefits investors, benefits the broader market, and benefits issuers themselves.”).

valuations that better optimizes the allocation of capital to the U.S. economy.9 This view is confirmed by empirical research finding that less frequent reporting creates excessive swings in stock prices harming the efficiency of the financial markets.10
In addition, according to researchers, neither the United Kingdom (UK) nor the European Union has enjoyed better valuations, better capital raising, or a healthier IPO market as the result of their voluntary quarterly reporting framework.11 To the contrary, researchers have noted unwelcome earnings surprises, increased stock volatility, and reduced analyst coverage 9 See id. (“So having quarterly reporting, having that timely, accurate, and comparable information from all publicly listed companies allows investors to make more informed investment decisions that leads to more accurate market valuations that better optimizes the allocation of capital to the real economy.”); Recommendation of the Investor Advisory Committee Regarding Quarterly vs. Semiannual Reporting 10-11 (June 4, 2026), https://www.sec.gov/files/recs-iac-re-quarterly-vs-semiannual-reporting-062026.pdf (“[T]he SEC should not eliminate its quarterly reporting mandate for public companies, as doing so would deprive the markets of timely, material information, and thereby undermine informed investor decision making and the efficient allocation of capital among public companies.”); cf. Letter from Paul Schott Stevens, President & CEO Investment Company Institute to Vanessa Countryman, Acting Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, Re: Request for Comment on Earnings Releases and Quarterly Reports (File No. S7- 26-18) 4 (Mar. 21, 2019), https://www.sec.gov/comments/s7-26-18/s72618-5164794-183439.pdf (“Changing from quarterly to semi-annual reporting would diminish the amount and timeliness of information available to fund managers, thereby hindering their ability to analyze company performance and make informed investment decisions [and] . . . [s]emi-annual reporting would diminish the amount and timeliness of information available to investors and inhibit their ability assess the fundamental value of securities [and] . . . [a] change to semi-annual reporting also may increase the cost of equity capital for public companies and thereby diminish their long-term prospects.”).

10 See The Benefits of Quarterly Reporting with Salman Arif, CII Voice of Corp. Governance (Sept. 10, 2018), available at https://www.buzzsprout.com/202904/episodes/799945 (“What we find is . . . the stock prices of these semi-annual firms, they go down too much because investors sort of don't know what the impact of this news is going to be on the actual firm and they just prefer to sell the stock immediately than wait many months to figure out what the impact was [and] this makes these stocks much more risky, it creates excessive swings in asset prices and it harms the efficiency of financial markets.”); Letter from Paul Schott Stevens, President & CEO Investment Company Institute to Vanessa Countryman, Acting Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, Re: Request for Comment on Earnings Releases and Quarterly Reports (File No. S7- 26-18) at 4 & n.9 (citing “Financial Reporting Frequency, Information Asymmetry, and the Cost of Equity; Renhui Fu, Rotterdam School of Management, Erasmus University; Arthur Kraft, Sir John Cass Business School, City University of London; and Huai Zhang, Nanyang Business School, Nanyang Technological University, available at:
https://pdfs.semanticscholar.org/6a2d/be34a31acfd4f8a5841719656a4727a385f3.pdf [and commenting that] [t]he study examined the cost of equity capital for these two groups of reporting companies and concluded that the cost of equity capital decreased significantly for those companies that adopted quarterly reporting.”).
11 See Shivaram Rajgopal, The SEC’s Semi-Annual Reporting Proposal: A Solution in Search of a Problem, Forbes.com (May 5, 2026), https://www.forbes.com/sites/shivaramrajgopal/2026/05/05/the-secs-semi-annual-reporting-proposal-a-solution-in-search-of-a-problem/ (“As the Goldman Sachs European equity strategists examined, the outcomes were not obviously favorable: not better valuations, not better capital raising, and not a healthier IPO market.”); see also Letter from Shivaram Rajgopal, the Roy Bernard Kester and T.W. Byrnes
Professor of Accounting and Auditing to Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, Re: File No. S7-2026-15; Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140 — Semiannual Reporting (Proposed Rule) (“The empirical evidence from the United Kingdom — the natural experiment the proposal’s proponents cite as the model — shows no reduction in short-termism, no increase in investment, and no improvement in market quality from reduced reporting frequency.”).

that counsel against a shift.12 Finally, we believe that the discipline resulting from requiring quarterly reporting keeps corporate management more accountable, in turn enhancing investor confidence in the U.S. capital markets.13

We note that our view is supported by the results of the 2026 CFA Institute member survey (2026 CFA Survey) which finds only 35% of respondents supported moving from quarterly to semiannual reporting.14

3. Our proposal would permit semiannual reports for all Exchange Act reporting companies that file Form 10–Q today, regardless of filer status, revenues, market capitalization, or other criteria. Should the option for semiannual reporting be available only for Exchange Act reporting companies that satisfy certain criteria? If so, what criteria should be imposed and why? For example, should only emerging growth companies or smaller reporting companies be allowed to report semiannually?15

CII does not support making semiannual reporting available to Exchange Act reporting companies that satisfy specified criteria such as emerging growth companies, smaller reporting companies, or companies below alternative quantitative or monetary thresholds. We support quarterly reporting for all public companies, regardless of size. We believe investors need to be able to compare the performance of companies, large and small, across a given industry. Any regulatory change to permit semiannual reporting, including allowing semiannual reporting by emerging growth companies or smaller companies, would frustrate such comparisons and even create disincentives for investors to invest their capital in those companies.16 If anything, investors are likely to want more frequent reporting by emerging

12 See Shivaram Rajgopal, The SEC's Semi-Annual Reporting Proposal: A Solution in Search of a Problem, Forbes.com ("[C]ompanies that voluntarily moved back from quarterly to semi-annual reporting after 2014 in the UK have experienced a reduction in analyst coverage [and] . . .. [l]ower analyst following means less price efficiency, higher bid-ask spreads, and higher costs of equity capital — outcomes that are precisely contrary to the stated goal of encouraging more companies to go and stay public."); see also Transcript of U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Investor Advisory Committee Meeting, Bloomberg Gov't at 22 (statement of Stephen Berger, Managing Director, Global Head of Government & Regulatory Policy, Citadel) ("And it benefits, I think, the issuers themselves because it increases the amount and quality of analyst research coverage and academic research has also shown that it can help lower bid-ask spreads and increase trading liquidity in their publicly traded stocks.").

13 See, e.g., Transcript of U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Investor Advisory Committee Meeting, Bloomberg Gov't at 22 (statement of Stephen Berger, Managing Director, Global Head of Government & Regulatory Policy, Citadel) ("So having quarterly reporting, having that timely, accurate, and comparable information from all publicly listed companies allows investors to make more informed investment decisions that leads to more accurate market valuations that better optimizes the allocation of capital to the real economy.").

14 See Sandra Peters, CPA, CFA & Matthew Winters, CPA, CFA, Investors Perspectives: Quarterly Reporting, CFA Institute 38 (Draft Apr. 2026), https://rpc.cfainstitute.org/sites/default/files/docs/research-reports/investor-perspectives-quarterly-reporting-2026.pdf.

15 91 Fed. Reg. at 24,978 (emphasis added & footnote omitted).
16 See, e.g., Letter from Paul Schott Stevens, President & CEO, Investment Company Institute to Vanessa Countryman, Acting Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, Re: Request for Comment on Earnings growth companies and smaller companies because their business prospects are less certain and likely to change more quickly over time as compared to larger companies.17

Our view was confirmed by the results of the 2026 CFA Survey which found:
[T]here was . . . 27% . . . [support] among survey respondents [23% of respondents in Americas region] for reducing reporting frequency for smaller companies . . ..
[And] [s]upport for this alternative was lower than what we observed in our 2019 survey (38%) by 11 percentage points.
Comments suggest that investors favor uniform reporting frequency so they can compare results across the companies they cover and because heterogeneous reporting frequency introduces undesirable complexity.18
6. If adopted, would semiannual reporting have an impact on investors' ability to compare same-company performance over time? Why or why not?19
CII believes that, if adopted, semiannual reporting would compromise the ability of investors to compare same-company performance over time.20 As Jonathan Weil of the Wall Street Journal recently commented: "For investors [the Proposed Rule] would mean less transparency and less frequent updates on the data they crave."21 Less frequent reporting reduces the number of observations available to investors, making it more difficult to identify trends in same-company performance in a timely manner. As explained by the SEC Investor Advisory Committee (IAC) Chairman George S. Georgiev at the June 2026 IAC meeting:
The way I think about these issues is . . .do we lose something by doing away with quarterly disclosure requirements. And so we've known for a very long time that disclosure improves the informational efficiency of securities prices. And price is the most important aspect of any purchase. So an investment can be a good Releases and Quarterly Reports (File No. S7- 26-18) at 4 ("Any move toward greater 'flexibility' in reporting frequency, such as allowing semi-annual reporting by smaller companies, would frustrate such comparisons and even create disincentives for investors to invest their capital in smaller companies).
17 Id. at 4-5 ("If anything, investors are likely to want more frequent reporting by smaller companies because their business prospects are less certain and likely to change more quickly over time as compared to larger companies.").
18 Sandra Peters, CPA, CFA & Matthew Winters, CPA, CFA, Investors Perspectives: Quarterly Reporting, CFA
Institute at 39-40.
19 91 Fed. Reg. at 24,979 (emphasis added).
20 See, e.g., Letter from Jeffrey P. Mahoney, General Counsel, CII to Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, Re: SEC Solicitation of Public Comment on the Foreign Private Issuer Definition, File No, S70-2025-01 at 5 (Sept. 4, 2025), https://www.cii.org/files/issues_and_advocacy/correspondence/2025/09-
04-2025%20Comment%20Letter%20to%20SEC%20re%20Foreign%20Private%20Issuers%20(JPM)%20BM%20(Fina l).pdf ("The exemption from filing Form 10-Q may compromise the ability of investors to assess how a company is progressing in its performance over time.").

21 Jonathan Weil, No More Quarterly Reports? What the SEC is Proposing Instead, Wall St. J., May 8, 2026, https://www.wsj.com/livecoverage/april-jobs-report-stock-market-05-08-2026/card/watch-no-more-quarterly-reports-what-the-sec-is-proposing-instead-3aT8CCtzHuFEsjCFvLA1.

investment or a bad investment depending on the price at which you buy it. And the information that is provided as a result of disclosure is impounded [in] the price of securities. And without information, you can't actually be sure that the security is worth as [much] . . . as it is worth. And of course, quarterly earnings provide a very strong indicator about performance in the business, which impacts price.22
7. What effect would our proposal have on investors' ability to compare the relative peer company financial performance of a quarterly filer to a semiannual filer? For example, can an investor reasonably compare a quarterly filer to a semiannual filer where the companies have the same fiscal year and the comparison is sought to be made in the second quarter (when first quarter information that would be subsumed in the semiannual filer's semiannual report on Form 10–S is not yet available) or made in the fourth quarter (when third quarter information that would be subsumed in the semiannual filer's annual report on Form 10–K is not yet available)?23
As indicated in response to Question 3, CII believes the Proposed Rule would impair investors' ability to compare the relative peer company financial performance of a quarterly filer to a semiannual filer. Our view is supported by the 2026 CFA Survey results which found that "84% of respondents . . . agreed that different companies having different reporting frequencies will make comparing companies and industries more difficult."24
15. As an alternative to the proposal for optional semiannual reporting, should we instead revise the disclosure requirements of Form 10–Q to reduce the burden on reporting companies of filing this form, such as amending the current rules for the required interim financial statement review by an independent public accountant, XBRL data tagging, MD&A, information about unregistered sales of registrant securities pursuant to 17 CFR 229.701 (Item 701 of Regulation S–K), or year-to-date comparisons involving financial statements and MD&A? How should these requirements, or any other requirements of Form 10–Q, be revised? What aspects of Form 10–Q's current reporting framework are most burdensome for reporting companies?25
CII would not oppose as an alternative to the Proposed Rule, the suggestion by SEC Commissioner Hester M. Peirce, that the SEC consider potential revisions to the disclosure requirements of Form 10-Q.
26 We note that a number of commentators to the Proposed Rule
22 Transcript of U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Investor Advisory Committee Meeting, Bloomberg
Gov't 129 (June 4, 2026) (on file with CII) (remarks of George S. Georgiev, Chairman, Investor Advisory Committee).
23 91 Fed. Reg. at 24,979 (emphasis added).
24 Sandra Peters, CPA, CFA & Matthew Winters, CPA, CFA, Investors Perspectives: Quarterly Reporting, CFA
Institute at 103.
25 91 Fed. Reg. at 24,979 (emphasis added).
26 See Transcript of U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Investor Advisory Committee

Meeting, Bloomberg
Gov't at 10 (remarks of Hester M. Peirce, Commissioner, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission) ("should we streamline the reporting burden rather than adjusting whether that burden happens quarterly or not?");
Commissioner Hester Peirce, Statement, Quarterly Questions: Statement on the Proposed Amendments to Allow Semiannual Reporting (May 5, 2026), https://www.sec.gov/newsroom/speeches-statements/peirce-statement-have expressed support for a similar alternative.27 As explained by Stephen Berger, Managing Director, Global Head of Government & Regulatory Policy at Citadel during the March 2026 IAC meeting:

> [F]or investors, I think that cost benefit is pretty clear. [That] . . . more information is going be more helpful. But I think we shouldn't just assume it's only a one-way street in terms of that additional disclosure is only a cost to the companies themselves. I think, again, if we right size the disclosure that's required, then we can sort of better reduce the cost associated with the reporting and disclosure, but preserve the benefits that companies would get in terms of investor eyeballs, research analyst eyeballs, the better quality metrics in the market -- secondary market trade.28

We, however, note that our long-standing view is that each of the following four existing requirements of Form 10-Q should be retained because they provide incremental net benefits to investors and the capital markets by "increas[ing] the quality and usefulness of the information and foster[ing] discipline and accountability for the company's reporting practices":29

[1] Independent Auditor Review: The independent auditor's review and report on the company's quarterly financial information contained in the Form 10-Q provides the accountant with a basis for communicating to the investor and the public whether he or she is aware of any material modifications that should be made to the quarterly financial information for it to conform to with generally accepted accounting principles;

[2] Management Certification: The Chief Executive Officer and Chief Financial Officer certifications accompanying the Form 10-Q state, among other things, that the report "fully complies" with the requirements of Exchange Act Sections 13(a) and 15(d) and that "information contained in the periodic report fairly presents, in proposing-semiannual-reporting-050526 ("an approach that focuses on slimming down the Form 10-Q—instead of or in addition to making it optional—could be helpful").

27 See Letter from Shivaram Rajgopal, the Roy Bernard Kester and T.W. Byrnes Professor of Accounting and Auditing to Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, Re: File No. S7-2026-15; Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140 — Semiannual Reporting (Proposed Rule) ("If the Commission wishes to reduce the burden of quarterly reporting, the correct instrument is to streamline the contents of the 10-Q while preserving its frequency [and] [t]hat reform would reduce genuine costs without degrading the public-information commons that investors, analysts, creditors, index providers, derivatives desks, auditors, and the Commission's own staff have built their work on."); The Editorial Board, Investors Benefit From More Financial Data, Not Less, Bloomberg Gov't (May 13, 2026) (on file with CII) ("The SEC, which lost about 18% of its staff last year, shouldn't be wasting its depleted resources on an unnecessary regulatory change [and] [i]ts time would be better spent streamlining disclosure demands . . . .").

28 Transcript of U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Investor Advisory Committee Meeting, Bloomberg
Gov't at 33.
29 See, e.g., Letter from Jeffrey P. Mahoney, General Counsel, CII to Brent J. Fields, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, Re: File No. S7-26-18 at 3.

all material respects, the financial condition and results of operations of the issuer";[30]
[3] "Filed" versus "Furnished:" Filing rather than furnishing the Form 10-Q to the SEC subjects company management to enhanced civil liability for false or misleading statements contained in the quarterly reports; and [4] Data Tagging: extensible Business Reporting Language (XBRL) data tagging is generally required "for all primary financial statements, notes, and financial statement schedules filed with the SEC."[31]32
We continue to believe the above requirements provide incremental information that provides net benefits to investors and the capital markets. Our view is generally consistent with the 2026 CFA Survey results finding that 69% of respondents have had their views of a company impacted by the incremental information included in a Form 10-Q filing as compared to the information in an earnings release.33 16. What impact would the flexibility to file semiannual reports on Form 10–S, instead of quarterly reports on Form 10–Q, have on a private company's decision to become an Exchange Act reporting company? Would more companies choose to go public under the proposed flexible approach to interim reporting? What impact would the proposed 30 The Shadow SEC and Quarterly Reports with Professor James Cox, CII Voice of Corp. Governance (Nov. 10, 2025), available at https://open.spotify.com/episode/4cghCrwvUtKG1Ig5aneYPq (commenting on the importance of management certification of Form 10-Q: "So it's truly prophylactic to have these quarterly reports because what it does it makes people sit down [and] [w]e . . . forget that [prior to the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002] the number of large publicly held companies that the CEO had not looked at the quarterly reports or the annual reports when they were released . . .. [t]hey were just delegated [and] [s]o we're a long ways from the dot com era, thank God [and]
[l]et's don't go back to it.").
31 See Letter from Shivaram Rajgopal, the Roy Bernard Kester and T.W. Byrnes Professor of Accounting and Auditing to Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, Re: File No. S7-2026-15; Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140 — Semiannual Reporting (Proposed Rule) ("The serious policy frontier in disclosure is timelier and more structured data, machine-readable XBRL, and potentially continuous assurance — not cutting the equity market's fundamental-data feed in half [and] [t]he Commission is proposing to march public companies in the one direction the rest of the financial plumbing has already rejected.");

The Shadow SEC and Quarterly Reports with Professor James Cox, CII Voice of Corp. Governance ("But one of the great benefits of SEC reporting is we made this stuff all machine readable [and] [i]t's all searchable [and] . . . it enhances comparability [a]nd so we don't want to go to a regime which is we're going backwards in time and saying, well, gee, we know computers can all those do these comparisons, but we're going to let people put things in a way that really makes them not comparable."); Letter from Eric Veiel, Vice President, Co-Head of Global Equity &
Andrew McCormick, Vice President, Head of Fixed Income, T.Rowe Price to Ms. Vanessa Countryman, Acting
Secretary, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, Re: File No. S-26-18 (Release Nos. 33-10588 and 34-84842)
Request for Comment on Earnings Releases and Quarterly Reports 3 (Mar. 20, 2019), https://www.sec.gov/comments/s7-26-18/s72618-5169967-183490.pdf ("The content provided in 10-Q reports of most value to us includes standardized, XBRL tagged, GAAP data that we ingest into numerous data systems; . . .
.").
32 Letter from Jeffrey P. Mahoney, General Counsel, CII to Brent J. Fields, Secretary, Securities and Exchange
Commission, Re: File No. S7-26-18 at 3-4 (footnotes omitted).
33 See Sandra Peters, CPA, CFA & Matthew Winters, CPA, CFA, Investors Perspectives: Quarterly Reporting, CFA Institute at 69 ("Exhibit 28: Incremental Form 10-Q Information Can Affect Decision-Making").

flexible approach have on existing Exchange Act reporting companies' desire to remain public companies?34
CII believes the proposed flexibility to file semiannual reports on Form10–S, instead of quarterly reports on Form 10–Q would not: (1) have a material impact on a private company's decision to become an Exchange Act Reporting company; (2) lead to materially more companies choosing to go public; or (3) materially impact Exchange Act reporting companies desire to remain public companies.
The basis for our view is generally consistent with the analysis contained in the June 4, 2026,
Recommendation of the Investment Advisory Committee Regarding Quarterly v. Semiannual Reporting (IAC Recommendation).
35 The IAC Recommendation raises unanswered questions about whether the Proposed Rule would reduce Exchange Act reporting company costs and whether those reduced costs (to the extent they exist) would increase the number of IPOs or public companies:
The cost-reduction premise underlying the Proposal is also poorly substantiated by the empirical record. Although shifting from a quarterly disclosure mandate to a semiannual mandate would reduce the direct public disclosure filing costs for public companies, the [Proposed Rule] . . . itself estimates that the approximate net reduction in direct compliance costs would be only $198,000 per fiscal year for each issuer that switches to semiannual reporting. Public companies would still need to maintain accurate financial information as part of their ordinary operations, including for purposes of day-to-day business management. As a result, the costs associated with maintaining complete, accurate and reliable financial information would remain even without a quarterly disclosure mandate.

Moreover, the premise that the compliance cost burden of being a public company deters firms from going public has been undermined by empirical work, which

34 91 Fed. Reg. at 24,979 (emphasis added).

35 Recommendation of the Investor Advisory Committee Regarding Quarterly vs. Semiannual Reporting at 7.

found that the observed declines in IPO activity have been driven by demand-side and market-structure factors rather than by the cost of disclosure compliance.[36]37

18. What is the likelihood that companies that elect semiannual reporting will continue to issue quarterly earnings releases (to the extent they did so previously when they reported quarterly)? Why would semiannual filers still issue earnings releases on a quarterly basis? Would this practice create any new or heightened investor protection concerns? For example, would there be any new investor protection concerns if an Exchange Act reporting company with a December 31 year-end elects to file semiannual reports and issues an earnings release for the first quarter of the fiscal year, with the semiannual report for the first six months of the fiscal year (which includes that first quarter) not due until months later (e.g., in August of that fiscal year)? Would companies that currently issue quarterly earnings releases but elect to become semiannual filers change their earnings release practices either: (1) to issue earnings releases semiannually, or (2) to cease issuing earnings releases? Please provide any data or analysis regarding any experience with earnings releases in foreign jurisdictions where issuers report semiannually.38

36 See Michael Ewens et al., Regulatory Costs of Being Public: Evidence from Bunching Estimation, 153 J. Fin.
Econ. 103775 (2024), available at https://www.sciencedirect.com/science/article/abs/pii/S0304405X23002155 ("Removing SOX only increases the average annual IPO likelihood after 2000 from 0.95% to 0.96%, because many potential IPO candidates are small enough to be exempted from this regulation [and] [r]emoving all estimated regulatory costs increases the average annual IPO likelihood after 2000 from 0.95% to 1.4%, which explains only 7.3% of the decline in IPO likelihood from pre-2000 to post-2000."); Regulatory Costs of Being Public: Evidence From Bunching Estimation with Michael Ewens, CII Voice of Corp. Governance (Aug. 22, 2024), available at https://www.buzzsprout.com/202904/episodes/15626339-regulatory-costs-of-being-public-evidence-from-bunchingestimation-with-michael-ewens ("[O]ne explanation for the decline in public firms is the huge increase in capital available to private firms [and] [t]hat is, the cost of private equity has fallen dramatically. . .. [and] [t]hat explains, . .
. a big fraction of what we've seen over the last 20-plus years in the US."); cf. Letter from Shivaram Rajgopal, the
Roy Bernard Kessler and T.W. Byrnes Professor of Accounting and Auditing to Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary,

("This is not a recipe for more IPOs [but rather] . . . a recipe for skeptical investors demanding a higher risk premium to buy newly public shares — which, if anything, makes the IPO market worse."); Transcript of U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Investor Advisory Committee Meeting, Bloomberg Gov't at 134 (Investor Advisory Committee member James R. Copland, Senior Fellow and Director, Legal Policy at Manhattan Institute commenting: "I think that the laudable goal that the SEC is engaging in here, which is to try to increase the number of public listed companies and have more companies want to IPO and fewer go private is probably not particularly related to quarterly reporting . . . ."); John Coates et al., Shadow SEC Statement No. 8: Comment on SEC Proposal to CLS Bluesky Blog (June 1, 2026), https://clsbluesky.law.columbia.edu/2026/06/01/shadow-sec-statement-no-8-comment-on-sec-proposal-to-allow-companies-to-file-semiannual-reports-on-new-form-10-s-in-lieu-of-quarterly-form-10-q-filings/ ("The notion that offering companies the option to report semiannually will make much difference to company decisions to register with the SEC or remain private is fanciful.").

37 Recommendation of the Investor Advisory Committee Regarding Quarterly vs. Semiannual Reporting at 7 (footnotes omitted).

38 91 Fed. Reg. at 24,980 (emphasis added).

CII believes that companies electing semiannual reporting that continue to issue quarterly earnings releases would heighten investor protection concerns. As indicated in response to Question 15, there are at least four critical investor protections that accompany the Form 10-Q financial statements and related footnotes that do not currently accompany quarterly earnings releases: (1) independent auditor review; (2) management certification; (3) "Filed" versus "Furnished"; and (4) data tagging.

Moreover, we are note that the recent CFA Institute Survey findings that (1) "[m]ost investors (57%) expect quarterly earnings releases in a semiannual reporting regime to contain less or significantly less information than earnings releases today"39 and (2) "[t]here was very strong disagreement (78%) that the Form 10-Q should be abandoned, even higher disagreement in the Americas (83%)."40

Many of our investor protection concerns with the potential replacement of Form 10-Q with quarterly earnings releases are explained in a recent Forbes.com article authored by Professor Shivaram Rajgopal, Roy Bernard Kester and T.W. Byrnes Professor of Accounting and Auditing at Columbia University Graduate School of Business:

> There is . . . a structural reason why voluntary quarterly earnings releases cannot substitute for mandatory Form 10-Q filings even if companies want to provide them. Mandatory 10-Qs require independent accountant review under PCAOB standards, follow a standardized format under Regulation S-X, carry strict Exchange Act Section 18 liability for material misstatements, and must be filed in machine-readable XBRL format. Voluntary earnings releases on Form 8-K have none of those properties. They are unaudited, selectively formatted, furnished rather than filed (lower liability), and not required to include XBRL data. The value of the mandatory 10-Q to investors is not just the information it contains—it is the standardization, comparability, third-party attestation, and legal accountability that surround it. Voluntary disclosure produces some of the signal but none of the verification infrastructure.41

39 Sandra Peters, CPA, CFA & Matthew Winters, CPA, CFA, Investors Perspectives: Quarterly Reporting, CFA Institute at 95.

40 Id. at 57.

41 Shivaram Rajgopal, Make Markets Opaque Again: The SEC's IPO Fixation Could Cost Investors Trillions Forbes.com (May 24, 2026), https://www.forbes.com/sites/shivaramrajgopal/2026/05/24/make-markets-opaque-again-the-secs-ipo-fixation-could-cost-investors-trillions/; cf. Letter from Paul Schott Stevens, President & CEO, Investment Company Institute to Vanessa Countryman, Acting Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, Re: Request for Comment on Earnings Releases and Quarterly Reports (File No. S7- 26-18) at 3 ("Thus, unlike with Form 10-Q, the information presented in earnings releases varies from issuer to issuer [and] [t]his approach would diminish the reliability and comparability of quarterly reporting, to the detriment of investors.").

22. Would the option for semiannual reporting result in an overall reduction in material information for investors? Or would other regulatory requirements, such as Form 8–K filing requirements and Regulation FD, elicit sufficient information to offset the less-frequent interim reports and address any investor protection concerns? Would market forces or demands on a company's business—such as contractual obligations, investor expectations, and potential for shareholder activism— encourage semiannual filers to: (1) voluntarily disclose more information than required, (2) disclose information more frequently than is required, or (3) opt not to become semiannual filers at all?42

CII believes, consistent with results of the 2026 survey of the CFA Institute referenced in response to Question 18, the option for semiannual reporting would result in an overall reduction in material information for investors that would negatively affect their ability to value companies' securities. We also continue to believe the Form 8-K filing requirements and Regulation FD, are not a "substitute for the more holistic picture provided by quarterly reports."43

Our views are generally consistent with the remarks of John A. Gulliver, Assistant Secretary, IAC, Executive Director, Committee on Capital Markets Regulations and Program on International Financial Systems at the June 2026 IAC meeting:

[I]nvestors in companies that elect semiannual reporting will have less information to act on. And less information leads to wors[e] decisions that can reduce investor returns. Longer gaps between mandated disclosures leave investors with fewer opportunities to spot deteriorating performance or emerging opportunities at public companies and therefore [a] weaker basis for valu[ing] . . . securities.44

23. With semiannual reporting, would there be an impact on investors or other market participants as a result of less frequent certifications by management relating to internal control over financial reporting and disclosure controls and procedures, as well as less frequent disclosures of changes in such controls?45

As indicated in response to Question 15, CII believes the incremental net benefits of the existing required Form 10-Q disclosures to investors and the marketplace include certifications by management.

26. For semiannual filers, what impact would a shift to semiannual reporting have on: (1) companies' disclosure controls and procedures, (2) companies' internal control over financial reporting, and (3) independent public accountants' strategy and approach for the annual audit of companies' internal control over financial reporting or financial
42 91 Fed. Reg. at 24,980 (emphasis added).
43 Letter from Jeffrey P. Mahoney, General Counsel, CII to Brent J. Fields, Secretary, Securities and Exchange
Commission Re: File No. S7-26-18 at 3.
44 Transcript of U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Investor Advisory Committee Meeting, Bloomberg
Gov't at 127 (remarks of John A. Gulliver, Assistant Secretary, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Investor Advisory Committee).
45 91 Fed. Reg. at 24,980 (emphasis added & footnote omitted).

statements? With semiannual reporting, is there a potential for a material increase in the risk that material misstatements (either due to error or fraud) or control deficiencies are not timely detected by or communicated to the independent public accountant thereby limiting potential remediation of these issues by the issuer? Please provide any data related to these questions.
46
CII believes that with semiannual reporting there is a potential for an increase in the risk that material misstatements (either due to error or fraud) or control deficiencies not being detected in a timely manner or communicated to the independent public accountant. This limits potential remediation of these issues by the issuer. More specifically, we believe semiannual reporting would likely result in less frequent evaluation of the effectiveness of disclosure controls and internal controls over financial reporting. As a result, we believe management and auditors may detect internal control deficiencies on a less timely basis, increasing the risk of material misstatement in interim and annual periods.
Our view is consistent with our response to Question 15 regarding the importance to investors of the independent auditor review of the companies' quarterly financial information. Our view is also consistent with the 2026 CFA Survey results finding that 68% of respondents agreed that Form 10-Q filings are important because they are reviewed by the companies' auditor.47
In our response to this question, we generally agree with the comments of Professor Rajgopal:
Each quarterly review is an occasion in which an auditor catches an error, challenges judgment, or detects a going concern problem forming. Cut interim reviews from three to one and these problems do not vanish – they surface later, bunched at year-end, with larger restatement risk. Less frequent independent review is not self-evidently a feature.48
More broadly, we generally share the concerns of the Shadow SEC that the Proposed Rule provides insufficient consideration of how permitting semiannual reporting has the potential to materially increase the risk of fraud:
There is little analysis of the possibility of an increase in fraud as a result of companies being able to report less frequently. . .. The [Proposed Rule] . . . does recognize what it terms a likely increase in "information asymmetries" and the risk 46 Id. (emphasis added).
47 See Sandra Peters, CPA, CFA & Matthew Winters, CPA, CFA, Investors Perspectives: Quarterly Reporting, CFA

Institute at 71 ("Exhibit 30: Investors Value Review of Form 10-Q by Auditors").
48 Letter from Shivaram Rajgopal, the Roy Bernard Kester and T.W. Byrnes Professor of Accounting and Auditing to Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission; cf. G. Bradley Bennett & Richard C.
Hatfield, Do Approaching Deadlines Influence Auditors' Materiality Assessments and Audit Sampling Decisions?, 36(4) Auditing 29-48 (2017), available at https://publications.aaahq.org/ajpt/article-abstract/36/4/29/6008/Do-Approaching-Deadlines-Influence-Auditors?redirectedFrom=fulltext (Discussing how auditors' materiality judgments and procedures flex with deadline pressure).

that agency costs may cause companies to choose to report less frequently than would be in the interest of shareholders. This is quite different than recognizing that there have been major securities frauds in recent years because of obscuring or misstating financial data such as Enron, WorldCom, and most recently FTX.
Historically, the SEC had long provided detailed data on disclosure requirements that could be correlated with the presence or absence of such information about material transactions with insiders, disclosure of bonuses, profit-sharing arrangements, the incidence of restatements, or the failure of companies to disclose all material financial information, a key issue in several crypto cases, which the SEC dismissed, about companies that engaged in overseas transactions to avoid full disclosure and United States oversight. . . . Although, Chair Atkins is correct that investor protection is one of the core elements of the SEC mandate, the [Proposed Rule] . . . seriously underemphasizes the extent to which the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 were adopted to deter fraud and to allow enforcement actions to spot what does occur.49
32. Would there be an increased risk of insider trading at companies that elect to report on a semiannual basis? If so, please provide the basis for this view, as well as data. Could companies enhance their insider trading policies or improve their self-enforcement of these policies to help address this concern? What other actions could companies or the Commission take to mitigate any increase in the risk of insider trading?50
CII believes that there would be an increased risk of insider trading at companies that elect to report on a semiannual basis. The less timely information and greater stock price volatility would, in our view, invite more insider trading, which we believe would undermine confidence in the U.S. markets.51
49 John Coates et al., Shadow SEC Statement No. 8: Comment on SEC Proposal to CLS Bluesky Blog.
50 91 Fed. Reg. at 24,981 (emphasis added).
51 Letter from Jeffrey P. Mahoney, General Counsel, CII to Brent J. Fields, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, Re: File No. S7-26-18 at 9 ("Less timely information and greater stock price volatility also would invite more insider trading, which CII believes undermines confidence in the market.").

We observe that our view is generally consistent with the view of many other experts,52 the results of the 2026 CFA Survey,53 and the following analysis contained in the IAC Recommendation:
A shift to semiannual reporting would also increase insider-trading concerns because more frequent disclosure reduces insiders' ability to profit from nonpublic information. By extending the interval between mandatory reports, semiannual reporting would widen the gap between inside and public information, increasing the risk that insiders could trade while possessing material information not yet available to the market. The Proposal acknowledges this heightened risk and suggests that it may warrant longer blackout periods, as the value of material non-public information and the potential for misuse would be higher. A shift to semiannual reporting would also weaken corporate accountability. For example, poor quarterly results present corporate management with market discipline that can help them make necessary business changes to improve future returns. Shifting to semiannual disclosures would therefore reduce market discipline.54

33. How would the proposed flexible approach to semiannual reporting affect the competitiveness of U.S. reporting companies vis-a-vis foreign competitors? For Exchange Act reporting foreign companies that would not be foreign private issuers (which report semiannually as discussed above) and that would report quarterly under the current system, would the proposed option to report semiannually make these foreign companies more likely to list on a U.S. exchange? What would be the competitive implications of the proposed optional semiannual reporting approach between U.S. reporting companies (which report quarterly under the current system) and foreign private issuers (which report semiannually under the current system as a 52 The Editorial Board, Investors Benefit From More Financial Data, Not Less, Bloomberg Gov't ("Information gaps create other problems . . . including increasing the opportunity for insider trading."); Shivaram Rajgopal, The SEC's Semi-Annual Reporting Proposal: A Solution In Search Of A Problem, Forbes.com ("This is not hypothetical: some capital markets participants see quarterly financial reporting to be necessary for reducing insider trading risk and protecting investors, and higher reporting frequency has been associated with lower information asymmetry."); Salman Arif, Op-Ed., opinion contributor, I'm an Accounting Professor. Semi-annual Reporting is a Half-baked Idea, Hill, Sept. 22, 2025, https://thehill.com/opinion/finance/5514191-trump-semi-annual-reporting/ ("[A] switch to semi-annual reporting [would] shroud[] corporate performance for longer periods of time heighten[ing] executives' information advantage when trading their firm's securities in their personal accounts [and] [i]n particular, the public disclosure of bad news would take much longer, and executives would be able to sell stock far in advance of the revelation of trouble."); The Benefits of Quarterly Reporting with Salman Arif, CII Voice of Corp. Governance ("I think it's worth pointing out also that when performance is hidden for longer periods of time by companies, then that will increase the information advantage that executives have when they trade their firm stock or their personal account [a]nd so this creates higher information symmetry between insiders and investors and allows these insiders to earn higher profits from their trade at the expense of ordinary investors.").

53 See Sandra Peters, CPA, CFA & Matthew Winters, CPA, CFA, Investors Perspectives: Quarterly Reporting, CFA Institute at 115 ("Exhibit 62: High Concern About Insider Trading with Less Frequent Reporting").

54 Recommendation of the Investor Advisory Committee Regarding Quarterly vs. Semiannual Reporting at 10
(footnotes omitted).

practical matter)? Should there be different periodic reporting for foreign private issuers compared to domestic issuers? Why or why not?55
CII generally believes that the Commission should not have different periodic reporting for foreign private issuers (FPIs) compared to domestic issuers. As we explained in our September 2025 letter in response to the SEC Solicitation of Public Comment on the Foreign Private Issuer Definition:56
[T]he absence of a requirement to file quarterly reports is a critical gap in today's disclosure rules for FPIs. CII believes that investors, companies, and other market participants may benefit from the current reporting frequency model, which requires domestic issuers to file quarterly reports on Form 10-Q. In our view, the requirement to report historical earnings on a quarterly basis is a key element of the timely and accurate information flow that underpins the quality and efficiency of our capital markets. The requirement helps ensure that important information is promptly and transparently provided to the marketplace allowing investors to assess concrete progress against strategic goals. In addition, CII believes that less frequent reporting likely leads to greater share price volatility, and more intense investor focus on short-term share price fluctuations, as investors expend more effort guessing how the company is doing. As such, quarterly financial reports are an important reality check for investors on stock valuation.
Conversely, CII does not believe that requiring quarterly reporting leads public company managers to focus on short-term results to the detriment of long-term performance.18 The notion that quarterly reporting encourages short-term thinking is outdated and generally not supported by empirical evidence.
In this context, quarterly reporting principles should apply to FPIs as well domestic issuers. The exemption from filing Form 10-Q may compromise the ability of investors to assess how a company is progressing in its performance over time.57
48. What would be the benefits to investors from reporting companies' flexibility to file semiannual reports on Form 10–S, instead of quarterly reports on Form 10–Q? Are there certain types of companies or industries for which such benefits would be greater than for others? Would the benefits to investors be limited to the pass-through of cost savings, or would there be other kinds of benefits, such as improved managerial
55 91 Fed. Reg. at 24,981-92 (emphasis added).
56 Concept Release on Foreign Private Issuer Eligibility, Securities Act Release No. 11,376, Exchange Act Release
No. 103,176, 90 Fed. Reg. 24,232 (June 6, 2025), https://www.federalregister.gov/documents/2025/06/09/2025-10428/concept-release-on-foreign-private-issuereligibility.
57 Letter from Jeffrey P. Mahoney, General Counsel, CII to Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, Re: SEC Solicitation of Public Comment on the Foreign Private Issuer Definition, File
No, S70-2025-01 at 4-5 (footnotes omitted).

incentives or reallocation of company resources to potentially more productive corporate activities?58
CII does not believe there would be benefits to investors from reporting companies' flexibility to file semiannual reports on Form 10-S. The Proposed Rule provides no evidence to the contrary with the possible exception of the alleged indirect benefit of mitigating managerial focus on short-term financial metrics at the expense of long-term value creation.

59 We strongly disagree such a benefit exists,60 even the Proposed Rule admits that the "academic literature is mixed"61 on this benefit. Moreover, we note that Commissioner Peirce downplayed the significance of this alleged indirect benefit at the June 2026 IAC meeting observing that the Proposed Rule "really only briefly raised that point and declined to put much weight on it."62
More broadly, we generally agree with the Shadow SEC that "the SEC [did not] candidly acknowledge that estimated costs and benefits of its rule change are so uncertain that the net benefits of the proposal cannot in fact be reasonably quantified.63
49. What would be the costs to investors from providing reporting companies with flexibility to file semiannual reports on Form 10–S, instead of quarterly reports on Form 10– Q? Would the option for semiannual reporting increase information asymmetries in ways that impair investors' abilities to make investment and voting decisions? To the extent there are such costs or information is reduced, would other regulatory requirements (beyond those requiring interim reports) or market forces mitigate such factors?64
58 91 Fed. Reg. at 25,011(emphasis added).
59 Id. at 25,000 ("To the extent that quarterly reporting contributes to managerial focus on short-term financial metrics at the expense of long-term value creation, reduced reporting frequency could mitigate this behavior and associated resource misallocation.").
60 See, e.g., Letter from Jeffrey P. Mahoney, General Counsel, CII to Brent J. Fields, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, Re: File No. S7-26-18 at 2 ("We do not believe that requiring quarterly reporting leads public company managers to focus on short-term results to the detriment of long-term performance [and] [t]he notion that quarterly reporting encourages short-term thinking is in our view outdated and generally not supported by empirical evidence.").
61 91 Fed. Reg. at 25,000.
62 Transcript of U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Investor Advisory Committee Meeting, Bloomberg
Gov't at 9 (remarks of Hester M. Peirce, Commissioner, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission).
63 John Coates et al., Shadow SEC Statement No. 8: Comment on SEC Proposal to CLS Bluesky Blog.
64 91 Fed. Reg. at 25,011 (emphasis added).

CII believes that the costs to investors from providing reporting companies with the flexibility to file semiannual reports on Form 10-S, instead of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q, would be substantial and would impair investors' ability to make investment and voting decisions. Those costs would include the following:
• Fewer opportunities per year to reallocate positions based on standardized updates on company performance and outlook, including financial statements.65
• Investment in poorer performing companies or companies with diminished outlooks for longer than they would today.66
• Longer waits to reallocate their capital to better-performing companies or companies with a more promising outlook.67

• Overreactions to alternative sources of information for non-reporting periods leading to over or under valuation of public companies.68
• Less information for cross-firm comparability, making it harder to assess relative performance and industry conditions.
69
• More delays in the disclosure of bad news which would adversely affect the price discovery function of capital markets.70
• Give company insiders who have a longer period of time to act on information that the public does not have.71
• Ownership in more companies with weak corporate governance.
72

65 See, e.g., Recommendation of the Investor Advisory Committee Regarding Quarterly vs. Semiannual Reporting at 8 ("By eliminating a quarterly reporting mandate, investors would have fewer opportunities per year to reallocate positions based on standardized updates on company performance and outlook, including financial statements.").

66 Id. ("In practice, eliminating a quarterly reporting mandate will likely mean that investors remain invested in poorer performing companies or companies with diminished outlooks for longer than they would today.")

67 Id. ("Investors would have to wait longer to reallocate their capital to better-performing companies or companies with a more promising outlook.").

68 Id. at 10. ("when firms report only semiannually, investors rely on information provided by peer-firms, often overreacting to those signals and leading to over or under valuation of public companies [and including a footnote citation to] . . . Salman Arif & Emmanuel T. De George, The Dark Side of Low Financial Reporting Frequency: Investors' Reliance on Alternative Sources of Earnings News and Excessive Information Spillovers").

69 Id. at 9 ("less frequent reporting reduces cross-firm comparability, making it harder for investors to assess relative performance and industry conditions [and including a footnote citation to] . . . Jesper Haga et al., Peer Firms' Reporting Frequency and Stock Price Synchronicity: European Evidence, 49 JOURNAL OF INTERNATIONAL ACCOUNTING, AUDITING AND TAXATION 100505 (2022)").

70 See. e.g., Sandra Peters, CPA, CFA & Matthew Winters, CPA, CFA, Investors Perspectives: Quarterly Reporting, CFA Institute at 111 ("nearly 75% of respondents are concerned or very concerned about delays in the disclosure of bad news, which will adversely affect the price discovery function of capital markets").

71 Id. at 115 ("Among the most significant concerns with respect to moving to semiannual reporting . . . is that lengthening the reporting period provides insiders with a longer period of time to act on information that the public does not have.").

72 See Keren Bar-Hava, Switching to Semi-annual Financial Statement Reports - Market Reaction, Audit Fee and Corporate Governance Quality 249 (July 12, 2024), Switching to Semi-annual Financial Statement

50. What compliance cost savings would be realized by companies that would elect the proposed semiannual reporting option? Please provide any data regarding the cost of preparing quarterly reports, including employee and director time, legal counsel fees, external accounting advice or independent public accountant review fees, costs for XBRL data tagging, and other costs associated with filing Form 10–Q. To what extent would the option to file one semiannual report, rather than two quarterly reports for the same period, result in lower costs, such as independent public accountant review fees? Would semiannual filers' audit fees paid—in connection with an annual audit of their financial statements or management's assessment of the effectiveness of internal control over financial reporting—be materially different in any way compared to the fees that would have been paid if the same company were a quarterly filer? 73
CII believes it is uncertain as to what compliance cost savings would be realized by companies that elect the proposed semiannual reporting option. The Commission should obtain and analyze more data relevant to this issue before considering whether to issue a final rule. We note the recent comments of Jonathan Weil of the Wall Street Journal:
It won't save much . . .. The SEC estimated 20% of companies would switch to semi-annual reporting and save $236 million a year combined on net compliance costs, plus about $97 million a year on paperwork. Those amounts are minuscule. The S&P 500's combined market cap exceeds $66 trillion. The Russell 2000, a benchmark for small cap stocks, has underperformed the S&P 500 for years. Less data means less liquidity and likely further underperformance.74
Similarly, in his remarks at the June 2026 IAC meeting, John A. Gulliver, Assistant Secretary, IAC, observed:
Even without this quarterly disclosure requirement, public companies would still need to continuously monitor and track their financials to achieve operational goals.[75] The reduced cost would be in the time spent publicly reporting these results, which the commission itself estimates at roughly $200,000 per company each fiscal year. It's not clear that this would be enough to move the needle for public companies in terms of compliance cost or to encourage substantially more private companies to go public.76 lower corporate governance quality and decreased external audit effort which characterized the firms that adopt the relief represent an increased risk for information asymmetry for investors in such firms thus further reinforces the importance of frequent financial reporting.").
73 91 Fed. Reg. at 25,011 (emphasis added).
74 Jonathan Weil, No More Quarterly Reports? What the SEC is Proposing Instead, Wall St. J.
75 See, e.g., The Editorial Board, Investors Benefit From More Financial Data, Not Less, Bloomberg Gov't (May 13, 2026) (on file with CII) ("Most of the cost of producing quarterly filings involves functions such as internal audits and investor communications that needed no matter how often the reports are published.").
76 Transcript of U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Investor Advisory Committee Meeting, Bloomberg
Gov't at 126-27 (remarks of John A. Gulliver, Assistant Secretary, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Investor Advisory Committee).

53. What general economic consequences would result from companies electing to report semiannually under the proposed flexible approach? Would semiannual filers reallocate any resources freed up from a potentially lower reporting burden to alternative uses, such as capital expenditure or other business needs?77

CII believes, that consistent with our response to Question 50, it is uncertain as to whether semiannual filers will have a lower reporting burden under the Proposed Rule. We again, respectfully request the Commission obtain and analyze more data relevant to this issue before considering whether to issue a final rule.

On this point we generally agree with the IAC Recommendation:

The cost-reduction premise underlying the Proposal is also poorly substantiated by the empirical record. Although shifting from a quarterly disclosure mandate to a semiannual mandate would reduce the direct public disclosure filing costs for public companies, the Proposal itself estimates that the approximate net reduction in direct compliance costs would be only $198,000 per fiscal year for each issuer that switches to semiannual reporting. Public companies would still need to maintain accurate financial information as part of their ordinary operations, including for purposes of day-to-day business management. As a result, the costs associated with maintaining complete, accurate and reliable financial information would remain even without a quarterly disclosure mandate.78

We note the conclusion contained in the IAC Recommendation is generally consistent with a key takeaway from the April 2026 Fordham Responsible Business Center/Metrix Advisory Roundtable which brought together prominent investors, regulators, board members, and legal experts:

For companies that have . . .quarterly disclosure processes—controls, calendars, review cycles, external auditor coordination—dismantling that infrastructure is neither simple nor obviously beneficial. The burden may shift from mandated reporting to market-driven reporting, but it does not disappear. And market-driven reporting tends to be less standardized, which creates its own problems for comparability.
79

77 91 Fed. Reg. at 25,011 (emphasis added).

78 Recommendation of the Investor Advisory Committee Regarding Quarterly vs. Semiannual Reporting at 7.

79 Fordham Responsible Business Center, Responsible Reporting Roundtable, Disclosure Effectiveness: Fit for Use or Fit for Filing? (Apr. 2026), https://drive.google.com/file/d/1nPXlBcCA0tMSOiw9zCAd8ZoLRmFtcB_4/view?pli=1.

55. For semiannual filers who would not voluntarily release earnings quarterly, would stock price movements around the release of semiannual financial information be more volatile compared to movements around quarterly releases? If so, what are the reasons this would occur? If so, how would this affect investors, companies, and markets?

CII believes that stock price movements around the release of semiannual financial information would be more volatile compared to movements around quarterly releases as investors expend more effort guessing how the company is doing. Our view is supported by empirical research.

80 That research is briefly referenced in a single footnote to the Proposed Rule.81 The co-author of that research, Salman Arif, Associate Professor, Curtis L Carlson Professorship Accounting at the University of Minnesota, discussed the study's findings and their implications for investors in a CII Voice of Corporate Governance podcast:

There are many firms outside the US that report semi-annually, and so it's possible to actually study the effects of semi-annual reporting on those firms. A recent study by myself and Emmanuel DeGeorge, who's an Assistant Professor of Accounting at London Business School, uses actual data on semi-annual firms around the world to look at how investors in those firms behave under semi-annual reporting. What our findings indicate is that because semi-annual reporting causes investors to operate in an information vacuum for longer periods of time, they end up overreacting to other types of news that they believe is value relevant.
Essentially, semi-annual firms have missing quarters because they don't report a Q1 and a Q3 report. A first quarter and a third quarter report is actually missing for those firms. What we find is that investors overreact to other alternative news sources for those periods. For example, let's say there's negative industry news or some negative macro news that investors hear about for those missing quarters that are not reported by the company itself. Well, they're going to have to wait a long time until the firm actually reports its financial statement. Investors essentially, they shoot first and ask questions later. In other words, what I mean is that the stock prices of these semi-annual firms, they go down too much because investors sort of don't know what the impact of this news is going to be on the actual firm and they just prefer to sell the stock immediately than wait many months to figure out what the impact was.
Now it turns out that when the semi-annual firm actually eventually reports earning many months later, then stock prices rebound. But the point is that all of this makes these stocks much more risky, it creates excessive swings in asset prices and it
80 See Salman Arif & Emmanuel T. De George, The Dark Side of Low Financial Reporting Frequency: Investors'
Reliance on Alternative Sources of Earnings News and Excessive Information Spillovers, 95(6) Acct. Rev. 23-49
(2020) available at https://publications.aaahq.org/accounting-review/article-abstract/95/6/23/4226/The-Dark-Side-of-Low-Financial-Reporting-Frequency.
81 See 91 Fed. Reg. at 24,998 n.250 (quoting a single phrase from the Salman Arif & Emmanuel T. De George research: "'investors are unable to successfully offset the information loss arising from low reporting frequency, thus impairing their ability to value firms and adversely affecting the quality of financial markets'").

harms the efficiency of financial markets. So relatedly, other academic research suggests that under semi-annual reporting, investors will require compensation to invest in stocks that report semi-annually because of the increased risk and volatility of these stocks. Basically it's more risky for investors to hold stocks for which they can't assess the actual performance for long periods of time. So what this means is that the cost of capital for semi-annual firms is higher and the liquidity of these stocks is lower. And so this creates higher interest rates and lower stock prices for these firms and damages their ability to raise financing and grow.
82
We believe this and other empirical evidence relevant to the Proposed Rule should be more thoroughly analyzed by the Commission before considering whether to issue a final rule.
56. If the proposal were to reduce securities analyst coverage of Exchange Act reporting companies that elect the semiannual reporting option, what effect would this have on investors and companies? How would such a reduction in analyst coverage affect stock market price efficiency? How would such a reduction affect liquidity of semiannual filers' securities?83

CII believes that reduced coverage by securities analysts of Exchange Act reporting companies that elect the semiannual reporting would harm investors. Our view is generally consistent with the conclusion of Professor Rajgopal, who studied the impact on securities analysts' coverage of these companies when the UK mandated quarterly reporting in 2007, then eliminated the requirement in 2014:

The UK experiment gave us the evidence we needed. A shift from semiannual to quarterly reporting does have a significant impact on the relationships between UK public companies and security analysts. That relationship — analysts doing the work of translating company performance into market prices — is part of what makes the U.S. equity market the most liquid, efficient, and investor-friendly in the world. The SEC's proposal risks degrading it, for speculative benefits that a decade of real-world evidence from the UK has failed to materialize.84

58. Would a company's valuation or cost of capital differ based on whether the company is a quarterly filer or a semiannual filer? Please explain the reasons why there would be a difference and provide any specific data. Would less frequent interim reporting negatively affect the ability of investors or other market participants to value the company's securities? If cost of capital would increase for semiannual filers, would this result from an increase in the cost of equity or cost of debt (or both)? How?85

As indicated in response to Question 22, CII believes that less frequent interim reporting would negatively affect the ability of investors to value the company's securities.

82 The Benefits of Quarterly Reporting with Salman Arif, CII Voice of Corp. Governance.

83 91 Fed. Reg. at 25,011 (emphasis added).

84 Shivaram Rajgopal, The SEC's Semi-Annual Reporting Proposal: A Solution in Search of a Problem, Forbes.com.

85 91 Fed. Reg. at 25,011 (emphasis added).

June 25, 2026

We appreciate the opportunity to provide CII's investor-focused perspective on the Proposed Rule. Please contact me (Jeff@cii.org) if you have any questions about the content of this letter.

Sincerely,

Jeffrey Mahoney

General Counsel

Jennifer Blanc — Jun 25, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Blanc Do not change to semi-annual reporting. Keep quarterly reporting.

Jennifer Lamberth The Motley Fool Community; Individual Retail Investor — Jun 25, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Lamberth I am submitting this comment as an individual retail investor and member of The Motley Fool Community. I respectfully oppose the proposed rule that would allow public companies to replace quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting. As an individual investor, timely and consistent access to information is essential. Public companies continue to make strategic, operational, and financial decisions every day. Receiving official updates only twice a year would reduce transparency and make it more difficult for investors to evaluate management performance, monitor risks, and make informed investment decisions. I regularly listen to quarterly earnings calls because I want to stay well informed about the companies

I own. Those calls provide valuable context that goes beyond financial statements. They allow investors to hear management explain strategy, discuss risks, answer difficult questions from analysts, and communicate their vision for the future. Reducing official reporting from four times a year to two would significantly reduce opportunities for investors like me to stay informed. While I understand the desire to reduce compliance costs and administrative burdens, I do not believe reducing the flow of information to investors is the right solution. Advances in technology, automation, and artificial intelligence have made preparing and distributing disclosures more efficient than in prior decades. The benefits of maintaining transparent capital markets outweigh the potential cost savings of less frequent reporting. I also question whether companies would truly save money over the long term. If a company chooses to reduce communication with its shareholders in the name of cutting costs, it risks reducing investor confidence. Some institutional and retail investors may decide that the reduced transparency no longer justifies the investment. Any savings from filing fewer reports could easily be outweighed by a higher cost of capital, lower investor demand, or increased stock price volatility. I also question whether semiannual reporting would reduce short-term market behavior. Investor reactions are driven by uncertainty and material events, not simply by the existence of quarterly reports. Delaying official disclosures may instead increase uncertainty, contribute to larger information gaps, and lead to larger price swings when reports are finally released. Quarterly reporting has been an important part of investor protection and market transparency for decades. It promotes accountability, supports efficient price discovery, and helps ensure that all investors, especially individual investors without access to private research resources, have regular access to material information. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission not to adopt the proposed optional semiannual reporting framework. Thank you for considering my comments.

Jennifer Roberts — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Roberts I am opposed to this proposed changes for several reasons. The primary one being that it will be a step backward for the individual investor as it results in less public information, less often. Insiders and analysts firms will still be receiving information, this just cuts out the individual investor. It will also likely result in more volatility when reports are issued due to the surprises that are likely to occur. I've read the theory that it will save money for small public businesses since they won't have to report as often. Well, tough...they knew what they were getting into when they went public, it should be built into their costs to do this and they are definitely doing internal reporting more frequently that quarterly so they won't be saving too much by not conducting public quarterly reporting. Please do not pass this regulation. Thank you

---

Jenny Russell — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jenny Russell I am very concerned about reducing required reporting by publicly traded companies. Already, there are too many opportunities to manipulate the market and stock prices. Reducing the amount and frequency of information will harm small investors like me. Please do not change the current reporting rules.

Jesse Smith Fulia Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jesse Smith Fulia I'm writing to ask that you not change the rules so that companies only need to report two times a year. In the interest of transparency individual investor interests, more oversight and information is better than less.

Jim Fellows None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jim Fellows I am disappointed and quite surprised to be writing the SEC on the topic of quarterly reporting. It would seem it is your job to enforce quarterly reporting, but here you are trying to remove it. This, as you must know, can only destroy investor confidence, confidence in the SEC, and thoroughly undermine the very concept of publicly owned companies. I have to wonder what would motivate you to proceed down this path. Jim Fellows

---

Jo White retired — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jo White Reporting should be no less than quarterly. Even monthly should not be out of the question. A company can go bottom up pretty fast. If they don't report but 2 times a year, the investor doesn't have enough info to make valid decisions quickly.

JoAnn Wozniak — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: JoAnn Wozniak Information, early and often, is essential to democracy.

Joe Kenty — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: joe KENTY This is another example of withholding information from individual investors to favor corporations, the rich, and the well connected. I am retired, and my finances depend more on my investments than Social Security. Timely information is key to my success as an investor, so please, KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING

Johanna Ingabire Employee, The Motley Fool — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Johanna Ingabire I write as an individual investor and as an employee of The Motley Fool, an investment advisory firm, to oppose the proposed amendments in File No. S7-2026-15 that would permit public companies to substitute semiannual reporting for quarterly reporting. In both roles I rely on timely, frequent financial disclosure, and I see firsthand how much ordinary investors depend on it. Cutting the frequency of interim reporting in half would widen the information gap between corporate insiders and the investing public, leaving people to make decisions on data that could be more than six months old. Quarterly reporting is a cornerstone of market transparency. It surfaces deteriorating performance, accounting irregularities, and emerging risks before they compound, and it gives every investor, not just institutions with private access to management, a timely and level basis for valuing securities. Allowing some companies to report twice a year while others continue reporting four times a year would also undermine comparability across issuers, making it harder for analysts and individual investors alike to evaluate companies on equal footing. The asserted benefits of reduced compliance cost and less management distraction are modest and accrue mainly to issuers, while the cost in lost transparency falls squarely on investors and on the integrity of our capital markets. I respectfully urge the Commission to preserve the existing quarterly reporting requirement and to reject the optional semiannual framework. Thank you for your attention.

John Baist — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Baist Please do not allow organizations to reduce their reporting to 2x/year. As stakeholders, transparency is critical and quarterly reporting must stay in place.

John H. Kolb The Motley Fool Community. — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John H. Kolb As a do it myself, individual investor, I need more transparency, not less, from the public companies I have or am considering investing in.

John Kruciak — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Kruciak We allready tried the only twice a year reporting and it was a total lost to the average investor, keep it qtrly.

John Plant — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Plant Less frequent information leads to bigger shocks and bigger corrections. The proposal for semiannual reporting should therefore be discarded, particularly in light of the unprecedented geopolitical instability that the world finds itself in.

John Roberts — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Roberts This is John Roberts iChicago and I totally against moving away from quarterly reportly to the SEC. The quarterly reportly has brought stability to the marketplace over the years and keep corporations from going unchecked. It has enabled regulators and investors alike to spot companies that may have problems happening within their respective company. We need quarterly reports.

Jon Burgon Motley Fool — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jon Burgon Ridiculous idea to go down to only two annual shareholders reports. Keep it at four

---

Jon S — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jon S I do NOT think that allowing companies to report 2x/year is a good idea. It will lead to more insider gains and more losses for the average person. More information is better for the people.

Joseph Kalgren — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joseph Kalgren Keep quarterly reporting in place. Semi-annual reporting will just result in less transparency, which will only increase uncertainty. Under the guise of cost-cutting, which may not be significant, this reduction in more frequent information could potentially mean greater volatility. Eliminating quarterly reports won't make anyone more patient with a company's status, just less informed about it.

Joseph Valrose — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joseph Valrose Strike down proposal to reduce the number of public company reports from four times to two.

Joyce Tomas — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joyce Tomas We deserve thorough information on equities before investing!!

Julie Audi Educator — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Julie Audi My husband and I have worked hard for over 30 years to provide both for our family and our finacial security in the future. To rob families of their investments they have worked hard for over decades it deceitful and be unlawful. Finacial must remain quarterly as it has always been. To do otherwise would be actually ROBBING American citizens!!

Julie Conti — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Julie Conti I could not agree more with the statement below this message as much of my retirement are in stocks and mutual funds. Changing the requirement of quarterly reporting is designed to only advantage insider trading, a practice that must end TODAY! We have had enough fraud and deception as each year regulations are rolled back to the benefited of corporate America. My votes and donations will only be given to the political candidates who support this position A lot can go wrong in half a year. Failed product launches, ballooning debt, lawsuits, vanishing customers. Today the law forces companies to surface that information every quarter. Under the new rule, they can sit on it for six months at a stretch. Plenty of time for insiders to quietly sell their shares to you (or your ETF) before the bad news tanks the stock. Enron. WorldCom. Madoff. The run-up to 2008. Every major modern accounting scandal was enabled by gaps and opacity in financial disclosure. Quarterly filings don't prevent fraud, but they dramatically shorten the window in which it can fester before someone outside the company can see it. What if Enron only had to cook their books twice a year? The framing is voluntary, but the dynamics aren't. Once large companies start filing twice a year, smaller competitors face pressure to follow. They can't justify "more compliance than the bigger guy." Investor expectations adjust downward. What started as a choice quietly becomes the new normal. Almost no rule like this stays optional for long. Companies still have to keep their books. They still have to brief their boards. The actual savings from skipping a public filing are modest legal and accounting fees, and those savings flow to the company and its executives. The cost of worse information falls on you, the person whose 401(k), IRA, or college fund holds the stock. That's a bad trade for ordinary investors.

Julie Masters retired — Jun 25, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Julie Masters The SEC should not drop requirements for quarterly reporting. Already the lessened regulations allowing the SpaceX IPO have made the market more opaque and allowed the richest man and his ilk to get away with raising money they should not be entitled to, by having the company included in indexes without vetting. This would be another blow to private investors' ability to know what's happening to their investments. Thank you, Julie Masters Retired

---

Justin Quimby — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Justin Quimby I strongly opposed reducing the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. This is bad for individual investors.

Karen Gee The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Gee As an investor, it's very important to me that I receive transparent reporting from the companies in which I participate as an owner. Reducing reporting requirements from four times a year to just two times doesn't provide the information I need to make decisions about my ownership. This is particularly important in these times when political forces can cause significant market fluctuations at any time. Reporting just two times a year creates too big a time gap that doesn't give me indicators about a company's performance trends. I have worked too hard for the money I invest, and I don't want a politically motivated proposal to place my investment decisions at risk. There is too much at stake for the American investor, and we shouldn't pay the price so corporations can have more convenience in reporting their financial positions. I strongly oppose the Semiannual Reporting rule that is proposed to the SEC.

Karen R Hill The Motley Fool — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen R Hill So, the company I am investing $10,000 only has to tell me twice a year how they are doing? I need those quarterly reports so I can tell how my investments are doing. Thanks, Karen

---

Karen Trumbo — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Trumbo My husband and I are retired and we depend on our investments to support our household for the remainder of our lives. Quarterly reporting of companies finances is important to ensure we and our stock fund owners are making investments decisions based on the most current information possible to reduce our risk.

Kathleen Vega We want quarterly reports — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathleen Vega Quarterly reports are necessary if I'm going to keep my funds in the stock market, etc.

Kathryn J Ricchio N/A — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathryn J Ricchio Comment attached

---

Kay Cortazzo — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kay Cortazzo As a senior I need quarterly reports to keep abreast of my financial status. Tv, stock exchange and media do not cut it. I want to see it on paper. As should all seniors. Thanking you for your attention. KC

KD of AZ — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: KD of AZ This is a terrible idea, and at a time when maintaining a quarterly cycle is cheaper and easier than ever, as well as more critical than it has ever been for investors to know how and where their investments are being spent. Reducing the frequency of reporting benefits no one who is honest, and only serves the interests of predators and those who seek to hide from accountability or who do not want to represent the interests of their investors. This proposal to reduce reporting to shareholders and investors makes no sense. Quarterly reporting is the absolute longest period that should be permitted. High quality decisions cannot be made on the basis of less frequent updates, and reducing the availability of up-to-date information to investors only serves to incentivize insider trading and fraud, which harms not only investors of a company, but of the market over all, and all publicly traded organizations impacted by this change. It will be a disaster for the market and for all honest investors.

Kee Haspel Investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kee Haspel I oppose SEC Rule S7-2026-15. It seems like a very bad idea for me, an investor, AND for businesses. More transparency through quarterly reporting builds and maintains investor trust in businesses, which is good for market health and good for those companies. Slower investment activity due to the extra wait-time of a semi annual report is bad for businesses and the market. If a company is doing well or is in trouble, I want to know sooner than later. Keep the mandated reporting quarterly!

Kelly Motley Fool — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kelly Reporting twice a year from company's I have a significant amount of money invested in, is NOT acceptable and reduces accountability! I do NOT agree with the SEC's proposal and companies should continue providing quarterly reports. PERIOD.

Kerri Dyer AICPA — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kerri Dyer More reporting, not less. 4 times a year is not too much.

Kim Muir — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Kim Muir Affiliation: Jun. 25, 2026 My name is Kimberlee Muir,

I am retired after working for the state of Utah for 35 years. I'm a lucky one, I got a pension when I retired. And the inheritance that I have invested. If companies are allowed to keep their finances secret for 6 months that could damage my Financial investments. Because I would not be privy to their financials for 6 months. A lot can happen in that short period of time. We are a small business owners, our family and I know how hard it is. Thank you did your time.

Kristian Walesby Trader — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kristian Walesby Please keep at four times per year. Thank you

---

Kurt Low — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kurt Low US individual investors are the pulse of the country's economy, as the SEC and Treasury Department are well aware. Please stand by the standards that require as much transparency as possible with respect to company reports and norms, including the number of public reports required by the SEC per year. Thank you for your service, and for your thoughtful consideration of this comment.

L. Fielding Retiree, investor and licensed attorney — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: L. Fielding As an investor and retiree, I rely on the quarterly reporting. Six months is entirely too long a period to wait for information from companies; it adds to the risks of investing in the stock market. Too much can be hidden and obscured during six months. I hope that the SEC doesn't change this rule; it will hurt investors, and, the burden of the rule and the paperwork is nominal and not expensive for companies; the balance of the equities should favor disclosure, transparency, and timeliness to ensure that our stock markets are viable and fair. Thank you for considering this comment.

Laura Eberle — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Laura Eberle Affiliation: Jun. 25, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Before any regulation is removed, we need to look at the activities that proceeded it and understand why the regulation was created. In this case it is because corporations are able to hide shady or illegal actions if they are given the chance. As pensions become rare and 401Ks become the norm, traded companies need more transparency rather than less. Millions of people's retirements depend on it.

Laura Friesen Social worker, Esterseals — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Friesen I work with non profits but we rely on for profit funds for our retirement and grant money. We go through regular audits and it keeps the trust level for the vulnerable people who depend on us. This idea of less frequent accountability is not a good idea. So much corruption has been reported in the past two years, we need more accountability for every one., not less.

Lawrence Wight — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lawrence Wight As an investor, I prefer more information concerning where I have my investments. At the very least, quarterly reporting is expected. Semi-annual reporting is not sufficient.

Lee R. Foster, Jr. Retired Engineering Technician and Lab Supervisor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lee R. Foster, Jr. I think it is extremely important that they DO reduce reporting to twice per year. Company leadership should be focusing on the running the company instead of worrying about these reports every 3 months! The American people have become way too short-sided and they really need to start doing more long term investing in great companies. You know, the way Warren did it! I also believe that if they are going to do this, then stronger penalties should be given to those companies who are found to give misleading information, so that the semi-annual reports are more reliable.

Leonard Olijar — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leonard Olijar As an active investor for over 50 years, I have never heard of a proposal that was less investor friendly than this. This will make it harder for investors to understand the operating environment of the companies that they own or are interested in investing. The US stock market is the envy of the world and this proposal significantly reduces transparency. As the former CFO of a billion dollar company, I readily acknowledge it was a challenge for us, but the disciple it required and information it provided was essential to an efficient company and stock market. Don't try to fix was isn't broken.

Leslie A Pratt None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leslie A Pratt I have no affiliation with any corporations except as a private investor with a brokerage firm. I DO NOT favor reporting on a six month basis as opposed to quarterly. It seems to me that a quarterly reporting allows more flexibility and investor reaction to market conditions. A longer period would give corporations more time to manufacture solutions when they screwed up, switch money around to hide mistakes, and assure more money ends up with the corporations and their cadre than investor opportunity. It reeks of boardrooms who don't care about investor money or returns, just pocket padding. I also think mistrust will grow. I don't trust much now, but it will be less if this is adopted. Just my opinion.

Lewis Goldstein Founder & CEO Pennybacker Labs — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lewis Goldstein To the Commissioners, I am writing to strongly oppose the proposal to reduce public company reporting requirements from quarterly to semiannual. This shift is a direct assault on market transparency and undermines the fundamental rights of individual investors. Investing is ownership. Owners deserve a continuous, clear window into the businesses they fund. By moving to semiannual reporting, the SEC is effectively endorsing an information blackout that will: Increase Market Volatility: Less frequent reporting does not encourage long-term thinking; it simply hides operational failures and successes for longer. This inevitably leads to larger, more disruptive market shocks when delayed information is finally released. Create Information Asymmetry: In the digital age, companies possess more tools than ever to report efficiently. Reducing the cadence is not a "cost-saving" measure; it is a retreat from the standards of accountability that keep our markets fair. Weaken Owner Oversight: Business happens every day. Keeping investors in the dark for six months at a time creates a dangerous disconnect between management and shareholders, leaving individual investors at a permanent disadvantage. Twenty-six years ago, the SEC set a global standard for transparency with Regulation Fair Disclosure. This proposal would dismantle that legacy. I urge the Commission to reject this regression and prioritize the rights of owners by maintaining the quarterly reporting standard. Respectfully, Lew Goldstein

---

Lisa Morin — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Morin When is the corruption coop going to stop? Safety against fraud needs to stay in place and people need to be held accountable if they are fraudulent.

Lisa Nagy — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Nagy I request that the SEC maintain the quarterly requirement for companies in place preserving the Regulation Fair Disclosure (Reg FD). Reducing the reporting to only 2 times per year will limit the transparency required by individual investors such as myself to maintain confidence that companies are presenting the most timely and accurate information about their company results and earnings reports. Please accept my statement as opposing semiannual reporting. Thank you.

Louis Auletta Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Louis Auletta Good Day, As a stock market investor of 50 years, I rely heavily on the quarterly communications from the entities I invest in. The proposed rule to change reporting to semi-annually is an affront to those of us who rely on timely reporting each quarter. Please note my strong disapproval of this new plan. Best Regards, Louis Auletta

---

Lynne Clark — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lynne Clark Transparency helps keep people honest.

Malcolm Brodie — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Malcolm Brodie If costs are such a big deal perhaps companies should reduce the CEOs salary package amounts to cover the extra 2 reports. A lot can happen in 6 months, investors need all the information they can get in this difficult time.

Marco Lange — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marco Lange Reducing the number of reports per year leads to a lack of transparency to the detriment of shareholders.

Marilyn Williams — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marilyn Williams We need more frequent reporting and more transparency, NOT LESS!

Mark Fleet Private Investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Fleet I believe that corporate financial reporting should continue to be required on a quarterly basis. The current economy moves quickly, and businesses must adapt quickly to the changing environment. Quarterly reporting is necessary for owners/investors to remain informed regarding the current state of their investments. I believe that the current rule should remain in place. Best, Mark R. Fleet

---

Mark OBrien — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark OBrien Chipping away at regulations that were put into place since the 08-09 financial crisis is bad enough. Doing away with quarterly reports will set up another Enron accounting fraud that will negatively impact everyone's financial stability

---

mark stevens none — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: mark stevens i think this is a bad idea and wish to record that the period should not be reduced. many thanks

---

Marla Yonamine None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marla Yonamine Quarterly reports are necessary to keep companies accountable. Please adhere to that policy. Thank you.

Martin — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Martin I think there should be monthly reporting, as corps already do this in house, taking away 1/2 of the reporting would definitely hurt the small/individual investors who rely on the most current information. Please do not change the quarterly reporting information.

Martin McGratb — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Martin McGratb The rule for semiannual reporting is an important way for not only the professional market, but more importantly the consumer market to measure the market and make decisions. We have witnessed over the many decades, decisions that have lead to great market catastrophes. The savings and loan issue of the 1980's, the internet bubble of the late 90's, the inexcusable and criminal actions that lead to 2008. This, coupled with the over valuation of spacex as well as overvaluation of the entire Ai market will lead to another bubble and crash. This is also stripping away one of the most important parts, accountability. This is a move to keep hidden information from those it affects greatest, the average consumer market trader. It is important, if we are going to enforce laws that govern how companies operate and trade that the most simple and, honestly not that demanding of reporting continue so that, every investor have a clear indicator of what they are investing in. while semiannual reporting only gives a small picture, taken over time and amongst peers in category it gives a more nuanced understanding of performance, risk and growth. Semiannual reporting should not end at all.

Marvin Lambert — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marvin Lambert Please keep the laws in place as they are now. No changes.

Mary Campbell — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Campbell As a regular investor, which makes me also part owner of a company, I want regular updates as to its financials. Less transparency is not a good idea. Is it better NOT to know what your kids are up to or to get regular health checkups? Do not dial back reporting requirements - these came in the face of ponzi schemes and fraud and are designed for everyone's protection.

Mary DePaull Concerned Citizen — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary DePaull I am against allowing SEC filings only twice yearly. We need to keep companies accountable and one way to do that is to keep filings at their quarterly level. This is VERY important to me and like minded citizens. DO NOT change this!

Mary Ustas — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Ustas Please do not change quarterly reporting. And definitely do not change to only two. Thank you!

Mathieu D. White — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Mathieu D. White Affiliation: Jun. 25, 2026 SEC,

As a young professional, investing is how my wife and I prepare for the future alongside the more typical 401k. Without quarterly reporting, people like us are less informed about the health of the companies we invest in, and have elevated risk exposure in the market that larger shareholders and insiders don’t.

Please keep quarterly reporting to protect the everyday Americans investing in companies we believe in!

Regards,
Mathieu D. White
Architectural Project Manager

Matthew Rappaport — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew Rappaport Paraphrased from the Motley Fool Stock Advisor: producing fewer reports is unlikely to reduce costs in an age of AI and efficient disclosure tools. And short-termism arises from how people react to information and how incentives are structured - not the information itself. Less information won't change this behavior. Taking reports away makes folks less informed and makes businesses less transparent, which increases uncertainty, as well as volatility, when information finally is reported. Surprises are likely to be bigger, reactions sharper, etc.

Mekonnen Kelly The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mekonnen Kelly Good Evening, This proposal to reduce the number of public company reports will not benefit those of us who have invested and purchased the shares of these companies, as we would then become less informed about the companies' health, prospects and intentions. In fact it would almost be akin to slipping money beneath a closed door without possessing the full extent as to what is happening inside that room. I, as an investor, am against this proposal. Kind Regards, Mekonnen Kelly

---

Michael Foley Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Foley Not in favor of reducing the financial reporting period to twice a year. Investors need more frequent reporting, not less.

Michael O'Boyle — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael O'Boyle At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right?

---

michael patterson — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: michael patterson Semi-annual reporting is not in the best interest of the individual investor. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. No Way!!!!

---

michael r ferenz jr None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: michael r ferenz jr Allowing companies to report only twice a year makes a PUBLIC company hide from those who invest in them. As an investor, I NEED to know what my companies are doing and how well they're doing. I need to know if management is doing their job or syphoning off value for their own good and not the good of the people who OWN the company.

Michael Smith Principal, Michael Smith Consulting — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Smith I favor the 6-month reporting rule. That seems often enough to keep the public informed. Quarterly reporting burns more resources and creates pressure on management to focus on short term results instead of the longer term "big picture". I think business and investors will be served better by a 6-month rule.

Michelle Riehl — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michelle Riehl As a stock holder I take the time to vote on every action I am invited to. I read all of the quarterly reports and am up to date on any new products coming out from the companies I hold, and large leadership changes they are making and just the general public perception of them in the media. Less reports means less up to date information. This could not only have a negative effect on the volatility of the market but would encourage me to hold less potentially volatile stocks since I would have less forewarning of upcoming risks. As an investor I feel that less reports are detrimental to the market itself and my personal ability to make informed decisions. Thank you for taking the time to read this.

Mick jensen — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mick jensen Why this matters to me is that this just seems to represent the equality gap in the information gap. Publicly traded means public information

---

Mike Surel — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mike Surel I strongly believe that the US financial markets are some of the most trusted financial markets in the world. A big part of that trust is based on the transparency provided by US companies in their financial reporting. Quarterly reporting is a big part of that transparency. I have been around long enough to remember the fight to get Regulation FD passed to help level the playing field for individual investors. I believe that adopting semi-annual reporting would be a big step in the wrong direction, providing less transparency and information to all investors. Please keep the quarterly reporting requirement. Thank you.

Mirek Towster — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mirek Towster To allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake! Investing is ownership. When I own a piece of a business, I deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. If I owned a business and got updates from my managers only twice a year. I'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. It would still run every day. Companies would continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. All that would NOT be better and I am against the proposed Semiannual Reporting rule! Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

MM Investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: MM I oppose any changes to the quarterly reporting requirement that is currently in place. Less reporting for CEO's to own their activities and performance means more risk for the investors. I am one of those investors, and I manage some of my own assets, and have others managed by brokerage houses. I want the all the people who help manage my assets to have frequent (quarterly) updates on what is going on inside a company in order to make more timely decisions and reduce my risk. Thank you.

Mohammed V Rahaman (individual) None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mohammed V Rahaman (individual) Giving publicly traded companies an option of quarterly or semi-annual financial filings will cause harm to the investors as the investors will be blind for full 6 months on the business performance and P/L numbers. PLEASE DO NOT CHANGE THE STATUS QUO. publicly traded companies must file paperwork every quarter.

Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Motley Fool Community As a private investor I do not support this new proposal by the SEC.

Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Motley Fool Community Nothing positive can result from this proposed change. Rather, the only result will be diminished accountability and an increase in insider trading.

Motley fool community Stock holder — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Motley fool community Support the effort to keep companies reporting quarterly.

MUCHMORE none — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: MUCHMORE I am against the proposal to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two.

Nancy McGahey — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy McGahey Cutting reporting time in half is not a good idea for investors. How would parents feel if schools decided to change the report card reporting to twice a year. And take away progress report? Why would you want to give investors a headache after previous scandals? Do you not care about our lives and our retirement? Do you not care about protecting our investments? Keep the quarterly reporting to protect us.

Nancy Niemela — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Niemela Changing reporting to Semi Annual from Quarterly will be harmful to all investors, in particular retirees who rely on the information to maintain their portfolios. The more information that is available, and the more frequently that information is available, will protect all investors with little or no harm to the corporations submitting the information.

Natasha Kimmins — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Natasha Kimmins As a shareholder in a public company I am also an owner. More transparency, not less, is needed to protect my investments. I am completely opposed to the semi-annual reporting rule. I spent my career working in the C-suites of investment firms doing M&A and private equity and saw first hand how quickly a company's financial condition can change. To force a shareholder (and bond holder) to wait every six months for updates on how the company is doing, particularly if struggling or hit a rough patch, has the potential to cause tremendous damage to not only individual investors but those that invest through mutual funds and retirement plans as well. Conversely, if the firm has really good news to report, sitting on it for months increases the chances of insider trading, thus cheating the other shareholders and other investors from fully participating in the bonanza. Further, in cases of executive malfeasance, the lack of timely reporting simply gives more time for the bad actor(s) to carry on. Executives may whine about the "burdensome" reporting requirements but that is what the company agreed to when it decided to sell shares to the public. To change the reporting requirements is a grave disservice to the public at large and should not be permitted under any circumstances. The potential financial losses greatly outweigh any perceived benefit by reducing the frequency of reporting requirements Tell these whiners who are pushing for this change to suck it up and report quarterly. If they don't like it, buy out my shares and take the company private if they don't want to be transparent about what is going on in the firm.

Niall Buckley The Motley Fool — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Niall Buckley Please retain the current reporting requirements. AI allows for rapid preparation of reports. Individual investors need to be informed every quarter.

Nicki Childress The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nicki Childress As an investor putting hard-earned money into public companies, I rely on and deserve regular quarterly financial information. Transitioning to semiannual reports will severely reduce transparency and increase market uncertainty. With longer gaps between official updates, business developments are likely to result in larger surprises, ultimately causing greater stock volatility and higher risks for everyday shareholders.

None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: None There changing the rules because they just want to cheat the public more. It must be a fucking trumpy dumpy thing!! Gangsters

---

P. A. Van Etten — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: P. A. Van Etten Quarterly at least. Less would be irresponsible of you.

Pat Blackman — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pat Blackman I need the quarterly reports, to be able to keep track of and balance my investments. And we all need the companies to be held accountable every quarter.

Pat Whiteman N/A — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pat Whiteman I am completely against reducing reporting periods. Four times a year is not too burdensome and as an investor I need quarterly reporting information to make informed decisions. I also believe that companies create quarterly data for internal use anyway so I don’t see that reducing public reporting requirements will actually save much time or money for companies.

Patrice — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patrice I believe stock investors should receive quarterly reports from companies in which they invest.

Patrick Heidal individual retired investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patrick Heidal Please do not revise the company reporting requirements from quarterly. I rely on the timely information to make decision on how a business is performing. As an investor in public companies, less information is not helpful. I've concerned with the degradation of rules and practices adversely affecting the US stock market reputation as a place to invest. The public needs to be able to rely on timely, accurate information. Thank you, Pat Heidal

---

Paul F. Healy — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul F. Healy My name is Paul Healy, 154 Greenwood Avenue, Wyncote, PA. I am a retail investor who is three years from retirement and who relies on quarterly reports to make critical decisions regarding my retirement savings. It is imperative that quarterly reporting be maintained. Thank you.

Paul Greguoli — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Greguoli I am happy hearing from my company investments every quarter. I feel it keeps me better informed and more attuned as to where the company maybe headed.

PAUL HANLEY — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: PAUL HANLEY This greatly benefits the wealthy who are the more informed than the average investors. When less information is provided to the retail investor, then it's the wealthy that ultimately take advantage and become relatively better off than everyone else.

Paul Murray — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Murray As an owner in many ASX listed companies i believe that i am more informed to the positive or negatives about the companies i am a part owner of if i get regular quarterly updates about the progress/financials and targets/KPIs. The reports could possibly be brief/scaled down version every second report, however 4 reports minimum is what i believe would be best.

Paul Stocklin — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Stocklin I am a single family investor. I want to increase transparency for corporate reporting, not reduce it.

Pauline Lee The Motley Fool Community. — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pauline Lee The proposal on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two, we think is a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. We ask that companies continue providing, at a minimum, quarterly reporting.

Pauline Soehren — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pauline Soehren I do not agree with decreasing reporting requirements for corporations down to only 2 times per year. Investors deserve information more frequently than that regarding businesses they have ownership in. Please keep the current quarterly reporting requirements.

Peter L Boynton — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter L Boynton I disagree with the proposal to allow companies to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Investors deserve regular, transparent communication from the businesses they own shares of. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. I have considered the arguments, such as cost reduction and others, and do not believe they outweigh the benefit of maintaining quartlerly reporting. Please do NOT proceed with this proposal.

Phil Blanchard PBC Consulting, LLC — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Phil Blanchard A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. It's a serious mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Philip Borlin None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Philip Borlin I am a long term retail investor and I rely on experts to provide me with quality information about stocks I own or am considering buying. As a long term investor I am interested in the leaders of the company and their strategy and I am specifically less interested in quants. If we were to reduce reporting to twice a year, the analysts that I rely on would have less access to information and my buy/sell analysis which comes quarterly would come twice a year. This would double my chances at missing a signal I am relying on.

Pok Lee — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pok Lee Oppose

Randall Shucart Independent Investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Randall Shucart I am opposed to reduced company reporting. This would lead to less visibility of important information investors need to make informed decisions.

Randy Unger Motley fool community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Randy Unger As an investor and trader in the financial markets I strongly oppose changing the existing reporting rules which requires all companies to report quarterly. Too much can happen in a six month period and this could ultimately hurt investors with the lack of transparency quarterly reports offer. The current system is not broke so please don't try to fix it by changing these requirements. Thank you

---

Ray McGinley The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ray McGinley Please retain the status quo

---

Rebecca Peak — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Rebecca Peak Affiliation: Jun. 25, 2026 I am writing to ask the SEC to put the needs of ordinary investors like me first. Do not change reporting of financial results by publicly traded companies from quarterly to semi-annual because it is bad trade for us. First, as an ordinary investor I rely on quarterly information to make investment decisions. Second, not providing quarterly reports to ordinary investors creates an unfair advantage for corporate insiders. Third, ordinary investors will not see cost savings from this change, and cost savings these companies and their executives will see will from fewer public filings will be modest legal and accounting fees because regardless of financial reporting requirements these companies still have to keep their books and brief their board. Again, this change would be a bad trade for ordinary investors, so please don't finalize this proposed rule.

Sincerely,

Rebecca Peak

Rebecca Poh Pastor, Waymaker Christian Church — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rebecca Poh Rebecca Poh, pastor. It is important to have fiscal accountability. Financial reporting helps to prevent bigger problems.

Rhonda Accordino Retired Teacher — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rhonda Accordino I am respectfully asking for your office to keep the quarterly reporting requirements. I am a retired teacher. The COLA that was promised when I began my teaching career has been suspended and has not been returned. It is imperative that I have current information to make decisions in order to maintain my standard of living. I urge you to protect the citizens who rely on this information.

Rhonda Griffin Retired — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rhonda Griffin Semi-annual reporting will cause great reduction in transparency and reduce investment income to the American public. This was unsuccessful between 1955-1970. Please do not ignore history. Please support the American people and not just investment corporations.

Rich Lamb — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Rich Lamb Affiliation: Jun. 25, 2026 Please keep reporting on a quarterly basis. The stock market has been performed well in recent history. I have a lot of money saved in 401K which is invested in the stock market. Rich Lamb. Delta Air Lines pilot instructor.

Richard A Wilson — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard A Wilson I believe the current quarterly reporting requirement should be retained.

Richard Bock The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Bock I am opposed to a proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Less information rarely creates better-informed owners.

Richard Contier — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Contier I respectfully request that any requirements to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two be rejected and voted against.

Richard J Rassel — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard J Rassel I do not support the reduction of reporting from 4 times a year to 2 times a year as the reduction will increase uncertainty on company risks, and increase volatility in market responses. This concern is aligned with the The Motley Fool Community of individual investors that are actively engaged in understanding market conditions and individual company performance as investors with ownership in the companies we invest.

Richard Martin — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Martin I am not in favor of loosening the financial reporting requirements for public companies. I believe that transparency in business is essential to ownership and as such, reducing the number of required reports from 4 to two annually, would adversely affect this relationship between company and owners. Please do not allow this change. Respectfully, Richard Martin

---

Richard Steele DVM None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Steele DVM I oppose the transition to twice yearly reporting by companies to stockholders. It reduces transparency and increases uncertainty.

Richmond Musicians' Association American Federation of Musicians — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richmond Musicians' Association Please retain the current quarterly financial reporting requirements. Do not let financial institutions and corporations get away with bi-annual reporting because that is not in the best interest of the shareholders, the public and the common good.

Rita Giovinazzo — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rita Giovinazzo I am writing to comment on File No. S7-2026-15, the proposal to move public companies from quarterly to semiannual reporting. I am a retail investor who joined The Motley Fool many years ago. I owe my investing success and greater understanding of the 10-Q to The Motley Fool. Quarterly financial statements provide retail investors like me, who own shares in publicly traded companies, with the information necessary to make informed investment decisions. Institutional investors have access to this information through data sources, and other professional associations inaccessible to retail investors. Institutional investors have an abundance of information, and retail investors have the 10-Q. Quarterly reporting protects retail investors. Semi-annual reporting doubles the information gap between institutional and retail investors. The information gap is where uncertainty, volatility and mistrust grow. There are no signs anywhere that quarterly reporting is hurting publicly traded companies. Do not create a problem where one doesn’t exist. Retail investors deserve better.

Robert Birds — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Birds As a private investor I object to reducing the reporting frequency for companies. Saying it will reduce costs is very weak as all companies will be producing monthly management accounts regardless and with the advent of AI creating suitable external reports will be simple. Of course management will still want to add their spin but I think in general I prefer open accountability and reduced reporting is not going to achieve that.

Robert Boyle Retired — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Boyle If the system allows for semi reporting then I will simple pull my monies out of the ones that can’t report quarterly. I know what can happen with value in 4 months anyone remember 2008?

Robert Erdman Individual Investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Erdman Subject: Comment Opposing File No. S7-2026-15, Semiannual Reporting To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I am writing to oppose File No. S7-2026-15, the Commission’s proposal to permit public companies to move from quarterly reporting to semiannual reporting. At its heart, investing is ownership. When investors own shares of a public company, they own a piece of that business. Owners deserve regular, transparent communication from the companies they own. Reducing the number of required periodic reports would weaken the connection between companies and their owners, particularly ordinary retail investors who rely heavily on public filings. The current system requires annual reporting on Form 10-K and quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q. The SEC’s proposal would permit companies to file a new Form 10-S semiannually instead of filing quarterly reports, with comments on the proposal due July 6, 2026. The Commission describes this as an optional framework, but if adopted, it would still reduce the baseline level of timely public information available in the market. I believe that is a mistake. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. That claim should be viewed skeptically. In an age of artificial intelligence, automation, improved accounting systems, structured data, and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, it should be getting easier — not harder — for reporting companies to prepare accurate, timely filings. The Commission should be asking how technology can make public disclosure better, faster, and more useful, not how to reduce the number of times public companies must communicate with their owners. Others argue that quarterly reporting encourages short-term thinking. But short-termism comes from how market participants react to information, not from the existence of the information itself. Taking away reports does not make investors more patient or managers more long-term oriented. It simply makes everyone less informed. Less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a private business and being told that the managers will update you only twice a year. The business would still operate every day. Products would still be launched. Customers would still be won and lost. Costs would still rise and fall. Strategies would still succeed or fail. Risks would still emerge. You would simply know far less about what was happening. That is effectively what this proposal would allow in the public markets. Public companies do not stop changing between semiannual reports. Revenues, margins, debt levels, cash flow, customer demand, competitive conditions, regulatory risks, cybersecurity risks, and business strategy can all change materially within a quarter. Quarterly reporting provides investors with a regular, standardized checkpoint. Reducing that cadence would increase the amount of time during which investors are left to rely on press releases, rumors, selective commentary, analyst interpretation, private meetings, and alternative data. That is especially concerning for retail investors. Large institutional investors may have access to management meetings, expert networks, industry consultants, credit-card data, web-traffic data, satellite data, and other alternative sources of information. Ordinary investors generally do not. For many retail investors, the Form 10-Q is one of the most important tools for understanding a company on equal footing with the rest of the market. Reducing quarterly disclosure would likely widen, not narrow, the information gap between large institutions and individual investors. The proposal could also reduce comparability. If some companies continue to report quarterly while others report semiannually, investors will have a harder time comparing companies within the same industry. Markets work best when investors can compare companies using consistent, timely, standardized information. Optional semiannual reporting would move the market in the opposite direction. Less transparency does not eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be larger, the market reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Investors may demand a higher risk premium for companies that report less frequently, particularly smaller or more volatile companies. That would not necessarily help capital formation. I recognize that disclosure imposes costs. But the appropriate policy response is to improve the efficiency, quality, and usability of filings — not to reduce the flow of information to investors. The SEC should encourage modern reporting tools, machine-readable disclosures, AI-assisted compliance, better tagging, improved plain-English presentation, and more efficient review processes. These approaches would reduce burden while preserving investor protection. For these reasons, I urge the Commission not to adopt the proposal. Public companies should continue to provide quarterly reports. Investors are owners, and owners deserve regular, transparent, standardized information about the businesses they own. Respectfully submitted, Robert Erdman

---

Robert Humphries — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Humphries I disagree with this proposal. I am a small individual investor who takes a long term view of wealth generation and growth. Corporate transparency is therefore essential to me. A reduction in reporting requirements would reduce transparency and increase the asymmetry of information between shareholder and management. This would be unlikely to benefit the shareholder and reduced transparency would erode my trust in the governance of the corporations that I invest in or might choose to invest in. In short, I do not trust the motivations of a corporate management class that seeks to tell me less about how they are managing the corporation that I own....albeit in very small part.

Robert Lemmons Stock holder — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Lemmons I do not agree with changing to semi-annual reporting. It should remain as quarterly reporting.

Robert S Carroll — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert S Carroll The quarterly reporting made law in 1934 was in response to a real need for corporate reform and to help prevent the financial catastrophe that had occurred at that time from repeating itself. We are now in as great a peril as we were at the end of the 1920s. Corruption and financial instability is just as great or greater as it was just before the 1928 financial crisis and the need for oversight and transparency should increase, not decrease. The requirement for quarterly reporting should remain in place and not be lessened.

Robin Simpson None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-22 From: Robin Simpson I oppose the change in corporation reporting. There is greater potential for fraud with the lack of transparency if only reporting bi-annually.

Robin Young Gilliam none — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robin Young Gilliam I am an active investor for myself and family, and for clients whom I serve. When deciding when to invest or sell, I want the newest information I can get. Several companies in Europe only report twice a year, and it has made me so grateful that U.S. companies are more forthcoming with their information. Quarterly reporting is the way it should be done. Think of 2020 - should investors have had to wait until July or August to find out exactly what their companies were doing to cope with the crisis, and how well they were doing it? No!

Rodney Ross — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rodney Ross June 24, 2026 Vanessa A. Countryman Secretary U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission 100 F Street NE Washington, DC 20549-1090 Re: File No. S7-2026-15 — Semiannual Reporting Dear Secretary Countryman: I am writing to respectfully oppose the proposal that would allow public companies to elect semiannual reporting in place of quarterly reporting. While I understand the desire to reduce administrative burdens on public companies, I believe this proposal would weaken transparency, reduce accountability, and place many investors—especially individual and smaller investors—at a disadvantage. At its heart, investing is ownership. When investors buy shares of a public company, they are not merely trading symbols on a screen; they are becoming owners of a business. Owners deserve regular, clear, and standardized communication from the companies they help finance. Quarterly reporting helps maintain that connection. Reducing mandatory reporting from four times a year to two would create longer periods where shareholders are left with less reliable information about the business they own. One major concern is fairness. Large institutional investors often have access to alternative data, private research, management meetings, analyst networks, and sophisticated technology. Smaller investors generally do not. Quarterly reports help level the playing field by giving all investors access to the same standardized financial information at the same time. Moving to semiannual reporting would likely increase the information gap between professional market participants and everyday investors. The proposal also risks weakening market confidence. Public markets depend on trust. Investors are more willing to commit capital when they believe the market is transparent and fair. Less frequent reporting could increase uncertainty, widen information gaps, reduce liquidity, and make investors demand a higher return for taking on greater risk. In practical terms, that could raise the cost of capital for companies—the very opposite of what healthy public markets need. Quarterly reporting also provides discipline. Preparing quarterly financial statements forces management, finance teams, auditors, disclosure committees, and boards to review performance on a regular schedule. That discipline helps identify trends, weaknesses, internal-control issues, accounting concerns, cash-flow problems, and operational risks before they become larger problems. Semiannual reporting may delay the discovery or disclosure of issues that shareholders deserve to know about sooner. There is also a governance concern. Less frequent required reporting creates longer periods where company insiders may know far more than outside shareholders. Even with insider-trading rules in place, the perception that insiders have a longer informational advantage can damage trust. Investors should not have to wonder whether management and insiders are operating with months of information that the public has not yet received. Voluntary disclosure is not an adequate substitute. A company may still choose to issue press releases or hold earnings calls, but voluntary updates are not the same as standardized SEC filings. Press releases can be selective. Earnings calls can emphasize favorable points. Non-GAAP presentations can vary widely. Quarterly Form 10-Q filings provide a consistent framework that allows investors to compare companies, track financial performance, and evaluate management with greater confidence. Supporters of the proposal argue that quarterly reporting encourages short-term thinking. But the better answer is not to reduce transparency. The better answer is to discourage short-term earnings guidance, improve executive-compensation incentives, and encourage companies to communicate long-term strategy more effectively. Long-term investing and regular reporting are not enemies. A company can focus on long-term value while still keeping its owners informed every quarter. Public companies receive a tremendous benefit by accessing public capital markets. In return, they accept a higher standard of transparency. That tradeoff is reasonable and necessary. If a company wants the benefits of public ownership, it should also accept the responsibility of regular public accountability. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission not to adopt the proposed semiannual reporting option. Quarterly reporting should remain the standard for public companies. Investors deserve timely, consistent, and transparent information—not less of it. Respectfully submitted, Rodney Ross Founder & CEO New Mind Holdings Inc Sierra Madre California

---

Roger Pierson None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Roger Pierson My vote would be NO on this. Do not reduce the frequency on reports required by corporations. This is a bad idea and I believe would cause great volatility and greater gaps in stock prices.

Ross Basile — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ross Basile Hello, Not only do I not think we should reduce corporate reporting; but I think it should be done monthly. Americans, including myself, invest in the Stock Market for only one reason, we are giving money to companies based upon their performance. The only reason we do this is based upon information that the companies are forced to report. This is our right as investors and we need timely information. The only reason you are submitting a bill to change this is based upon either lobbyists or insider trading; no normal investing American asked for this. So, vote with Americans and not with lobbyists representing Companies (not investors) and not for yourselves.

Ruben Gordillo Investor — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ruben Gordillo As a share holder, timely information sharing regarding a company's financial status is of the essence in order to make timely and educated financial decisions. Therefore, I STRONGLY OPOSE the semiannual reporting proposition and encourage the continuation of the quarterly reporting or a more frequent reporting if possible. Thank you for your understanding and support. Ruben Gordillo

---

S Anderson — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: S Anderson Dear SEC Commissioners, I am writing as a partner and contributor through investing. I strongly oppose the proposal to allow public companies to reduce financial reporting from quarterly to semiannual. Investing is ownership. Shareholders deserve regular, transparent updates about the businesses they own. Halving the frequency of required reports would weaken the direct connection between companies and their owners, leaving investors with significantly less timely information while companies continue to operate, launch products, win and lose customers, and execute strategies every single day. The argument that fewer reports would meaningfully reduce costs is debatable in an era of AI-powered tools and modern disclosure systems. More importantly, less information does not create better-informed investors or reduce short-termism. It simply increases uncertainty. When information finally arrives, the surprises are likely to be larger, market reactions sharper, and volatility greater. I urge the SEC to preserve the quarterly reporting standard that has served individual investors well and to reject this proposal. Thank you for considering these views. Sincerely, Shannon Anderson

---

S. Borsetti Concerned owner of a 401K — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: S. Borsetti Decreasing the amount of information available to investors is NOT OK. This will give insiders unfair investing advantage, at a time when the economy is already suffering and the wealth gap between ordinary Americans & the ones at the top is extreme. We need more info. We need info that is easier for the average investor to easily understand and use. And we need fair trading. Period. Please do not allow companies to mask their losses and take advantage of small investors who are relying on their 401K to get them through retirement. Thank you.

Sam Falkoff — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sam Falkoff I am in favor of semi-annual reporting. The quarterly reporting requirement is onerous and unnecessary

---

Sankar M. — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sankar M. As an investor, transparency about the company affairs is paramount to me. Reducing the frequency of reporting will impact this.

Sean Albert — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sean Albert I do not think less transparency is good for retail investors. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here — most recently reflected in the SEC's push to ease quarterly reporting requirements for smaller public companies. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. History supports this: studies of markets with less frequent mandatory disclosure have shown that when information finally arrives, price movements tend to be larger and more abrupt than in higher-frequency reporting regimes. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe — though that case weakens considerably as AI and modern disclosure tools continue to drive down the time and expense of financial reporting. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners.

Sean Burton The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sean Burton Fewer business reports about what a shareholder sees regarding company ownership is a mistake. Publicly owned companies will continue to operate and generate income through commerce. How that performance is measured should be indicated to it's shareholders as frequently as reasonable. "Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater." ~ Motley Fool Newsletter 23 JUN 2026. If a corporate board is nervous about latency in business results from previous reporting and finds that 10Q reporting is to laborious then that would indicate a problem within the board of directors governance and their latency in data procurement. Artificial Intelligence can expedite this process. Also, the humans who make the business decisions could benefit from managerial rotation where they get to see what the other hands are doing by preventing data loss and misinformation to share holders through human error. Personally, I do a lot of options trading. Having a modicum of predictability in market behavior helps a lot when determining the direction of price for an underlying security. Therefore, I have a strong bias to having the SEC File Number S7-2026-15 not approved. If this ruling is passed, what does the SEC think will happen to the data procured from options traders when it comes to predicting variables and other regulations that are in sync with market behaviors induced by options traders?

---

sebastian santiso — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: sebastian santiso I believe that semi annual reporting will remove transparency from investors as to how their investments are doing and we need more transparency not less. please do not move forward with semi annual reporting. semi annual reporting very bad.

Sharon Berte — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sharon Berte I believe that you should continue requiring quarterly reporting. My husband & I have been investing since 1981. Now my children & grandchildren are investing in the stock market for their future retirement, college, emergency needs. With other saving options not keeping up with inflation, I feel more & more $$ are being poured into the stock market. Now is not the time for us to lose our savings. Thank you.

Shawn — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shawn Why would this even be considered when we already have well-established history as to why the rule(s) were put in place in the first place; this smacks of just rot at the SEC.

Sherlyn Heard Retired — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sherlyn Heard I am requesting this bill be stopped. It allows wall street to further cheat by buying and selling stock while the public has no idea what is happening. You're making it difficult to post comments as well.

Sherry Dillender — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sherry Dillender After working in Corporate America for years, it is imperative that Corporations know that the shareholders need and want information. In addition, Corporations and Boards need to communicate more than quarterly to really keep shareholders happy.

Shirley Pigott The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shirley Pigott As a small business owner, I know that quarterly data is very important to keep control over a company's success. As an investor of many public companies in the stock market, I feel quarterly data is even more important to monitor progress. It's the analyst who sometimes make too much of every change in a quarter. If we look at the quarter within the context of trends and broader reviews of the data, it wouldn't force companies to spend so much energy justifying every small change. We must keep Quarterly Corporate reporting for confidence in the Market.

Shirley Warren — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shirley Warren Comments attached: Quarterly reporting is too keep company's honestly reporting strength, weaknesses of company who offer stock on public market. And to stop another Enron incident.

Sonia Vargas — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sonia Vargas Quarterly reporting is needed for better decision making, trend tracking, and transparency. The minimal savings is not worth the clarity and transparency lost. Please keep reporting quarterly.

Stephen Beck The Motley Fool — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Beck To whom it may concern, As a business owner, I make decisions based on information. Old news is no longer news. Having a degree in Economics, my strength is forward looking projections. These are only as good as the information I have is timely and accurate. I've heard that Chinees businesses do not have to comply with the same reporting standards as American companies. Less reporting can lead to purposely not disclosing information that is relevant to business leaders. Let's keep businesses honest by keeping reporting coming at regular, quarterly, intervals. To say it may save money in accounting expenses overlooks the savings that could be had by regularly examining all expenses. Thank you!

Stephen davis — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen davis I am 79yr old and as a small investor the proposed change only serves the large investors and insiders while keeping me in the dark. Monthly reporting would do much to level the playing field.

Steve Cratchley — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve Cratchley Any good and sensible company has meetings of the Board of Directors every month, so why is it being proposed to reduce the number of reports that will be able to be published ? The only companies that would want to reduce the annual reporting are those where the management either know the company is heading towards serious financial problems - (which may possibly due to their inept management ?) - or the management are knowingly participating illegal activities, so need time to cover their tracks and hide the truth.

Steve Partain Motely Fool — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve Partain The decision to lower quarterly corporate reporting to 2 times a year is unfair to investors who put there hard-earned money into these companies. We deserve to keep the reports on a quarterly basis.

---

steve sturm — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: steve sturm Keep the reporting quarterly. There is too much room for publicly traded companies to deceive the public. Don't take more away from us. Enron would like a word. So would ZZZBest

---

steve szumacher — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: steve szumacher Once again you all want to screw the little guy. The little guy needs to pull all their money out and create the largest crash ever.

Steven Kuhn — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven Kuhn We need to keep quarterly reporting for transparency reasons. Only reporting twice a year is not often enough. With the way this market has been we cannot wait half a year to react. Trying to say that this is to save money it’s just another ridiculous excuse.

Stuart Schaefer — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stuart Schaefer A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that’s a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed.

Sue Michalsky The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sue Michalsky I do not support allowing companies to report financial progress only twice per year. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Please leave reporting requirements at quarterly.

Sunit M — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sunit M Changing the required reporting from quarterly to semi-annually is a bad idea for investors. It provides less transparency. Please don't go forward with this change.

Sylvia Rogers n/a — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sylvia Rogers I’ve been doing some research, and I understand there are pros and cons to maintaining quarterly reporting. Shifting to semiannual reporting could reduce the reporting burden for firms, and maybe incentives for managerial opportunism. It seems that the benefit would likely be relatively small if the focus shifts from quarterly to semi-annual earnings reports. MORE IMPORTANTLY, making financial statements less frequently available to investors could make the market less efficient and could cause volatility in prices. We need to ensure trust and transparency in these volatile times. Quarterly reports provide important insights into the company's budget, revenue, profits and losses. The markets need to kept informed on a regular basis in a transparent manner. Quarterly reports provide investors with protections because they are certified by the officers, have more legal liability and are reviewed by auditors. Investors would be disadvantaged by less frequent reporting. Companies benefit from providing quarterly reports because investors are better informed and it raises confidence and trust. If retail investors (like me) stop trusting stock markets, they will avoid investing in stocks altogether and this would depress their retirement income. Could there be another way? New technologies are changing the use, creation and timeliness of all kinds of data! How about using these technologies instead of reducing the transmission of information to investors!

Takács József Professor of Economics, — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Takács József Do not reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two.

Tamara Tobian Nurse — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tamara Tobian I've worked as a nurse for 46 yrs. It is important to hold people in power accountable because the sick and the poor are too busy surviving. Keep the SEC reporting quarterly.

Tatjana Grenewitz The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tatjana Grenewitz My investments are my retirement! I need to be able to follow some of my investments more closely, than others. Creating progress reports on a business success should not be a chore for any business - they need that to watch their performance. Four times a year is just right. Thank you.

Teresa Kinsall — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Teresa Kinsall I respectfully disagree with reducing required investor reports to only twice a year. I feel like we deserve regular communication and transparency. More frequent reporting helps investors stay informed and make better decisions about their investments.

The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community I currently own a small business. I can't imagine only looking at the P&L every six months. So, if need to look at it monthly, then surely it is not too much to do it quarterly. Thanks!! Scott

---

Thomas Auffenorde — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Auffenorde Please do not enact this rule. Less information doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Thomas Boyd — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Boyd Reporting is so sparse already, having less it not OK with me. I want the Quarterly reports to be available. Without them it just makes rumors and insider information, more powerful.

Thomas M Johnson Merrill Lynch part time assistant — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas M Johnson Please allow the option for companies to report semi-annually. Any turn towards freer markets is beneficial for everyone.

Tim in MD — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tim in MD Tim in MD. This is not okay. I strongly oppose SEC Rule S7-2026-15. Regular people should not have to wait six months to find out what is happening inside the companies where they invest their retirement and savings. Reducing required reporting from quarterly to twice a year would make markets less transparent, give insiders and large institutions an even bigger advantage, and leave everyday investors with less information and less protection. I would not feel comfortable with my life savings in places that are more likely for fraud to occur.

Timothy Thompson — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Timothy Thompson I rely on regular information about the performance of my and my wife's portfolio holdings. Reducing the frequency of such reports will negatively impact my ability to make timely decisions about performance against my investment theses. Please do not change from quarterly reporting requirements to semi-annual.

Todd D. Matthews — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Todd D. Matthews I am opposed to any reduction in the number of public-company financial reports below the current four (4) times per year. Both I and the managers who make investment decisions on my behalf rely on timely accurate information to make decisions in my best interest. A publicly traded company has a responsibility to be transparent with its investors about the current health of its finances and the minor cost savings of producing fewer reports would not make up for the amount of time investors would be flying blind without up to date information. In this age of AI when reports can be generated with accelerated ease and efficiency it would be irresponsible at the very least to keep up to date information from investors.

Todd Little — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Todd Little RE: File Number S7-2026-15 (Semiannual Reporting) As a long-time personal investor, I vehemently oppose the proposed amendments to allow semiannual reporting on Form 10-S. Publicly traded companies need more transparency and reporting, not less. The Commission's argument that eliminating the quarterly Form 10-Q will provide meaningful cost relief ignores modern technological realities. Having spent a career architecting complex enterprise software systems, I know firsthand that today's corporate environments track financial and operational data continuously. These systems are specifically designed for real-time visibility. The marginal administrative cost of publishing this already-compiled data quarterly rather than semiannually cannot possibly justify keeping investors in the dark for six-month stretches. Extending the reporting gap to six months disproportionately harms retail investors. While institutional investors have the capital to access alternative data and continuous management access, everyday investors rely on the mandated, standardized cadence of the 10-Q to make informed decisions. Please withdraw this proposal and maintain the quarterly reporting requirement that has made U.S. capital markets the most trusted in the world.

Tom Leith N/A — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tom Leith As an investor we need more information not less. Do lessen the quarterly requirement.

Tom Lewis Retired Generalist Practitioner Social Worker — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tom Lewis Please continue the policy of keeping investors aware of their company’s current P&E on a quarterly basis. T.R. Lewis, retired

---

tony tanner — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: tony tanner Quarterly reports are a significant tool utilized by investors such as myself to track a company and gain insight into sales/earnings be it up or down on a timely basis. Reducing information by 50%, in a time where transparency is key and it becomes significantly easier to achieve with the help of AI, is a ridiculous proposal. Please help maintain quarterly reports as such; a move to twice a year reporting in the 10-s and 10-k makes no sense for the small investors who actually do their homework. Best Tony

---

Travis Basford — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Travis Basford Companies should be encourage to be transparent with shareholders by providing reports at least 4 times a year.

Trey Piccoli — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Trey Piccoli Hello, I believe that this is the wrong direction for encouraging and supporting everyday investors. I don't think the idea behind this makes sense, especially considering past SEC decisions. Reg FD protected fairness among company financial information, allowing people like me to learn about the financial health of companies I'm invested in at the exact same time as billion dollar institutional investors. If we remove quarterly reporting, these companies that have vastly more resources than me (such as satellites to view parking lots to estimate demand changes) now have a significant advantage over me, and I will be left guessing how the company is doing for six months. I understand the idea behind this as promoting long term strategy, but the research suggests this change does not work. A study in the UK market by the CFA tested this exact problem over seven years, and there were no significant changes in capital or long-term investment behavior when reporting requirements were changed. The study found effects on the information environment, which I believe would further the informational gap between institutional investors and retail investors. The idea also falls apart when you consider the different types of investing. Long term investors, such as myself, understand that companies will have periods of loss where they are investing in themselves and preparing for the future. We are welcoming to those periods, because we know the investments will be strong when we need them to be. Changing the reporting requirements will not change these companies and encourage them to focus more on long term strategy. It will only require them to report less, but for long term, multi-million or multi-billion dollar projects, reporting every three months vs every six months is not making a significant enough change to justify the lack of information to investors. I am planning on buying a house in the next 10-12 years, and I am using my investments to help me buy the house in cash. If we change the requirement, I will only have 20 chances to learn about the financials of companies I am betting my future on. If we keep it the same, I have 40 chances. I believe that the risk of not being able to get out of an investment in time is not worth it to allow companies the flexibility to report earnings less often to achieve an outcome that research has said does not follow. Please consider everyday investors such as myself when preparing to make this decision. Thank you. (https : / / rpc . cfainstitute . org / research / foundation / 2017 / impact-of-reporting-frequency-on-uk-public-companies)

Troy Hensley — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Troy Hensley I am adamantly opposed to this proposed change. Faith in the markets is fickle at best and lowering reporting requirements will further erode trust and have a severe impact on perceived values. I disagree with the argument that quarterly reporting represents an undue burden. Transparency is the cost of doing business to gain access to investor dollars. Additionally, as AI continues to automate business process the burden of gathering and processing company financial data is becoming less burdensome by the day. Personally if this rule were to pass I will withdrawal from the market. I'd rather miss a growth opportunity than leave my money in place for some company to steal it.

US Citizen — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: US Citizen To an average citizen the SEC is in place to police investment, banking, etc entities. I get that is a very basic broad definition. The point is in today's environment too many are willing to act in "grey areas". What I mean is if some of the heads of industry are not always trustworthy or law abiding. Reducing your oversight to once a year could potentially wreck havoc on our economy. Do your job continue with oversight in place. Thank you.

ValueMachinesFund Fund manager — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: ValueMachinesFund Price swings driven by Mr. Market not having regular information will increase...

Warren D. Holloman Sr. — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Warren D. Holloman Sr. Remember the collapse of Enron, which held more than $60 billion in assets, involved one of the biggest bankruptcy filings in the history of the United States, and it generated much debate as well as legislation designed to improve accounting standards and practices, with long-lasting repercussions in the financial world. The collapse of Enron also hurt workers, their pensions, their life savings, and the credibility of the markets while those responsible where not held to account. Why does corporate America want to take a step back into the dark ages with less transparency, openness, and honesty about the operations of big business, finance, and the financial world? The emergence of AI, software, and critical business accounting infrastructure has made it easier and cost effective to share data in real time with average investors and the market in general. We hear that data is what drives markets and decisions yet big business wants to curtail the sharing of data. I ask the question WHY? Is it to perpetuate a free, fair, and level playing field of the stock market or for some nefarious reason. I have bought into the idea of the markets operating freely for everyone, not just the wealthy, big business, or those with faster computers and software. The SEC should not change the quarterly reporting frequency or the guidelines of reporting timely and accurate information for the entire financial market to see.

Wayne Terry Willard Jr Non — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wayne Terry Willard Jr I agree with a return to semiannual reporting. The change to quarterly reporting did not slow down or stop fraud, proper enforcement of existing laws has made a difference. Quarterly reporting takes the focus away from company growth, customer service and Employee retention.

Wendie K. Karpinski None — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wendie K. Karpinski The corruption currently going on should underscore the need for quarterly reporting. There was a reason for this law. Please keep the quarterly reporting requirement intact. Thank you.

Wesley McCall — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wesley McCall Change is not always progress. The Securities and Exchange Commission’s (SEC) proposal to shift publicly traded companies from quarterly (10-Q) to semiannual (10-K/SAR) reporting is a dangerous step backward for market integrity. While reducing corporate administrative burdens is a valid goal, this policy would severely compromise market transparency, harm retail investors, and increase volatility. First, a six-month reporting window creates a massive information vacuum. In today’s high-speed, technology-driven financial markets, three months is already a long time. Stretching that period to six months means investors would operate in the dark for half the year. This lack of visibility increases investment risk, as critical shifts in a company's financial health, supply chain, or operational efficiency would remain hidden from the public for far too long. Second, this policy would disproportionately harm retail investors. Institutional investors possess the resources to conduct proprietary research, track alternative data, and maintain direct access to corporate management. Retail investors, however, rely heavily on standardized, public SEC filings to level the playing field. Reducing the frequency of these disclosures strips everyday investors of timely data, widening the information gap between Wall Street insiders and Main Street. Finally, less frequent reporting will spike market volatility. When corporate performance data is released only twice a year, the markets will face massive, unpredictable price swings as six months of accumulated news is digested all at once. Furthermore, a longer reporting gap creates a fertile breeding ground for insider trading, as corporate insiders hold material, non-public information for extended periods. The current quarterly reporting system is the bedrock of the American capital markets. It fosters the trust, transparency, and liquidity that make our markets the safest and most vibrant in the world. I urge the SEC to reject this proposal and maintain quarterly reporting to protect investors and preserve market efficiency.

Will Mitchell The Motley Fool Community. — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Will Mitchell Do not allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. This is bad for the market and bad for investors. It will create more surprises and volatility. Uncertainty is always bad for the market itself. Do not change the rule.

William — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William I think reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners--the owners being the stockholders. Reducing the quarterly reports doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. We need more clarity, not less.

William F Doyle, Jr — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William F Doyle, Jr for me, monthly would be best. otherwise, quarterly

---

WILLIAM H HARRISON III — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: WILLIAM H HARRISON III Company financial reporting should remain quarterly, not the reduced reporting now being considered. Giving companies the lattitude to report only twice per year allows unscrupulous operators to have more time for accounting trickery to develop into major deception and fraud. Thank you for considering my response.

---

yogesh naik The Motley Fool Community — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: yogesh naik Public-company reports should be four times a year as it is mandated. This should not be changed. We need better transperancy.

Yudith Maria Cestero de Kozlowski Individual Investor" — Jun 25, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Yudith Maria Cestero de Kozlowski I am writing to express my formal opposition to the SEC’s proposal to allow semiannual financial reporting. In my experience as a retail investor and as an Authorized Executor currently engaged in federal forensic audits regarding systemic record suppression and financial fraud (Ref: COMP-26-004946), I have found that even the current quarterly reporting cycle is insufficient to protect retail investors. Allowing companies to extend the interval between disclosures to six months will further empower bad actors to conceal misappropriated assets and 'zero out' verified accounts without timely regulatory oversight. The SEC should be moving toward greater transparency, not less. Retail investors require granular, timely data to verify the integrity of their holdings. I strongly advocate for the Commission to mandate monthly financial reporting for all public companies. A monthly cycle would create a necessary 'early warning system' against the types of systemic financial discrepancies I have documented, forcing fiduciaries to maintain accurate ledgers and ensuring that retail assets remain protected from prolonged periods of operational opacity. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal for semiannual reporting and adopt a high-frequency disclosure standard that prioritizes retail investor confidence and account transparency."

Eric J Helgeson — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eric J Helgeson I would ask that you keep quarterly reports from companies rather than reduce it to two. It creates less transparency and more instability . With the rise of AI and data it will not decrease costs to reduce reporting but actually increase uncertainty as financial markets ebb and flow. When the information finally does arrive the reaction will be be sharper when data finally arrives and faith in those businesses less. Enron and the 2008 banking crisis comes to mind.

A R Consultants, LLC. Motley Fools Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A R Consultants, LLC. It is incredible to believe such a mesure is being considered. The elimination of quarterly reports places investors in a risky situation. It would seem that after the 2008 disaster, the SEC would not consider reducing reporting requirements that investors count on.

---

aaron vansieleghem — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: aaron vansieleghem We need transparency, otherwise this will lead to a corrupt stock market where insiders have all the power. Also, sharing critical/non critical info creates a sort of bond/trust between investor and company regardless if it good or bad news. Transparency is of upmost importance to everyone, even people who do not invest!

Abu Joseph the motley fool, market briefs — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Abu Joseph Please do not change the reports to twice a year instead of quarterly because it provides better transparency with companies.

---

adrian desi boysselle — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: adrian desi boysselle This change is not acceptable. In the current economic environment, speculation and rumors dominate narrative more than facts. The entire purpose of the SEC and FNRA is to ensure that retail has a fair stake at the market, and keeping all involved as honest as possible. Never is human history has lack of timely information forced integrity and honesty. This change purely aids companies in cost reduction, not transparency. I work for a fortune 500 company. I am involved in many high level decisions. Transparency forces accountability. This change would not only reduce transparency, but will put the retail investor at a clear disadvantage. Today info is extremely valuable, yet high value decay based on time. 6 month old news to make a finacial decision is beyond unacceptable. There should be a push more more regular updates. Not less. I refuse to participate in a market that continues to decrease trust. Instead of this dumb change, SEC should focus on going after obvious stock manipulation from chinese and Hong Kong stocks registered in the US

Adrian Wisner The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adrian Wisner Your proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake and I do not support your proposal.

Aivy Reinfelds — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aivy Reinfelds When I buy shares, I have ownership. When I have ownership I expect regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. The initiative being undertaken is in contrast to an everyday investors interest. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. It's not about costs. I would rather have a company (especially those with large market caps) incur those costs to keep me informed. They can afford it. It's a small price to pay, and perhaps even smaller if AI were introduced to assist with the endeavour. Look elsewhere to save costs, and don't weaken accountability.

Al Bigonia Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Al Bigonia Less transparency makes no sense.

Alan H. Mayhew — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan H. Mayhew By owning stock, I own a percentage of the company. Quarterly reporting is part of the checks and balances that allow stock owners to monitor the positioning of the company's management. By going twice a year, you place my investment in jeopardy by not properly informing me of the company's financials.

Alan McKellar Cybersecurity Assessor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan McKellar Dear Members of the SEC Commission, Thank you for considering transformative changes that would promote innovation and efficiency. I think the proposed change to reporting rules would not meet the Commission’s goals as it would not provide the transparency that investors and institutions have come to expect and value. While not made mandatory, semi annual reporting would allow public firms to operate in a more closed manner that would not serve investors. Furthermore, the current pace of reporting is accepted by the ecosystem and has no direct impact to long term strategy or value creation. The quarterly reporting provides an important signal to investors of all types. Thank you for considering my thoughts on the proposed change to reporting requirements. Warm regards, Alan

---

Alan Mitchell — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Mitchell I believe this to be a terrible proposal, an unforced error. Please do NOT adopt this. There is no way less information can be a good thing for public investors. Taking the reports away won't make anyone more patient. It will make everyone (particularly public investors) less informed, more vulnerable to rumors and more apt to panic ! Public investors are already struggling to adapt in this new AI-juiced world of Volatility. "Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater." (Motley Fool) Please do not adopt policies that will 'juice' market volatility ! Thank you for listening. Alan Mitchell At 82, a lifetime of investing experience.

Alan Murdock — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Alan Murdock Affiliation: Jun. 24, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep quarterly reporting as a requirement for publically traded companies. The SEC has been flying fast and loose with investments, allowing unprofitable companies to go public at exorbitant IPOs. Removing quarterly reporting puts investors and the economy at risk.

Dump Trump and all of his schemes.

Alan Schultze — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Schultze When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Alan Woods na — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Woods Quarterly reporting protects individual investors. The short-termism diagnosis doesn't justify this remedy. The SEC is accepting a real cost – less transparency for individual investors – for a benefit that the evidence says simply won't materialize. The companies most likely to opt out are the ones where oversight matters most. Smaller, less-covered businesses operate with less scrutiny. Reducing their reporting requirements makes them harder to monitor, not easier to own. This is the wrong direction. Reg FD moved toward a more level playing field. This proposal moves away from it.

Alastair Dodwell The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alastair Dodwell I think that more transparency is a good thing. Reporting to shareholders every quarter is Important so we can seek more information on the business. I have urged the UK government to implement quarterly reporting for UK listed companies.

ALBERT DE LORGE — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: ALBERT DE LORGE In this incredibly complex market with more markets and more talking heads giving you their reasons to sell or go all in on particular stocks or strategies, transparency is more important than ever. Please don't allow companies to keep us more in the dark!!!

Albert Rivera Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Albert Rivera As an investor, which is a partial owner of a business, reducing reporting and communication would lessen my knowledge and decision making capacity. Less information, in almost any context, is never beneficial to thoughtful debate and reaching conclusions. As a business owner, I could not rely on making proper decisions if my information was sporadically or rarely provided. Most likely knee-jerk, poorly-informed decisions would be made. I personally do not support less required reporting for the good of the stockholders and broader market. Thank you.

Alex Allan Accountant 30 years experience — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alex Allan I think 3 monthly reporting should be the standard, for the information I need. As an Accountant I understand the system, I did monthly reporting for the company management, and this became the basis for quarterly public reporting. Once this system is established it is easy and relatively cheap to maintain. The cost to the company is irrelevant, if its a problem look to the CEO's salary and bonus to cover it, The lack of information to me , a shareholder, is more important because the relative cost for an investing mistake by me because of a lack of information will be relatively greater. As an investor I am a small player, but as an investor my opinion needs to count. As an Investor and an Accountant who understands the reporting system my opinion is more valuable. My opinion is "we need Quarterly Reporting" Alex Allan

---

Alex Lehmann CPA, Chair, Board of Directors, NCACPA — Jun 24, 2026
June 24, 2026
Vanessa A. Countryman, Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, NE
Washington, DC 20549-1090
Re: Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140; File Number S7-2026-15
Semiannual Reporting
Via email to: rule-comments@sec.gov
Dear Ms. Countryman:
The North Carolina Association of Certified Public Accountants (“NCACPA”) representing more than 12,500 members in public practice, industry, government, and education, welcomes the opportunity to comment on the Securities and Exchange Commission’s (“SEC”) release (Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; 39-2563; IC-36140; the “Proposing Release”) of its Proposed Rule on Semiannual Reporting (the “Proposed Rule”). This response represents the views of the NCACPA Board of Directors with input from the NCACPA Accounting & Attestation Resource Group; NCACPA members in the preparer, auditor, academic, and investor communities; and NCACPA staff.
NCACPA appreciates the opportunity to provide our views and input on the Proposed Rule. While we agree with the observation in the Proposing Release that quarterly reporting may not be the ideal interim reporting frequency for every Exchange Act reporting company, given the varied circumstances each company faces, we believe the potential negative impacts of interim reporting frequency optionality across all issuers as proposed outweigh the potential benefits. Some of those costs or negative impacts were identified in the Proposing Release and we highlight ones we believe are most significant below.

Impact on Smaller Reporting Companies

We believe the existing quarterly reporting frequency achieves an appropriate balance providing for efficient markets, investor protection and capital formation. However, we recognize smaller companies are likely to have a larger proportional benefit and are more likely to avail themselves of some form of the proposed compliance relief, and allowing optional semiannual reporting for some class of smaller issuers (e.g. smaller reporting companies as currently defined in SEC rules) would limit the negative impacts of reduced reporting frequency. Information asymmetry may be reduced for smaller reporting companies (e.g., increased engagement with investors) which would support a semi-annual frequency versus the larger reporting companies. If the Commission proceeds, we recommend limiting eligibility to a narrow, defined category of smaller issuers, preferably for a specified time subject to a post-implementation review.

Inconsistent Disclosure Frequency

As noted in the Proposing Release, the efficiency of financial markets rests on material information becoming public in a timely fashion. In addition to protecting investors, greater availability of material information allows securities prices to better reflect their issuers' fundamental value and ultimately promotes capital formation as issuers have access to lower cost of capital and investors in those issuers' securities have access to higher liquidity. Additionally, research shows that longer gaps between issuer disclosures increase information asymmetry between investors, which may be exacerbated by recent advancements in alternative data collection, surveillance, and data processing technologies. Such asymmetry is associated with reduced liquidity and increased transaction costs for investors.

The potential inconsistency in disclosure frequency would make it more difficult for investors and information intermediaries to compare disclosures over time and across companies and arrive at accurate company valuations in a timely fashion, which could decrease the informational efficiency of share prices even for companies that would continue to file quarterly reports. Similarly, potential inconsistencies in the nature of the information provided, e.g. companies voluntarily furnishing information on Form 8-K versus filing information on Form 10-Q, and the attendant differences in legal liability and involvement of the independent audit firm may serve to confuse investors or reduce the perceived quality or reliability of the financial information provided. Collectively, this could raise the cost of capital to issuers that choose to reduce disclosure frequency, and potentially even those continuing to report quarterly. We also question whether the optional reduced reporting frequency would have a positive impact on capital formation or participation by more companies accessing public capital markets.

Cost Implications, Information Asymmetry, & Capital Formation

We believe that in order to maintain efficient financial reporting processes, adequate internal controls over financial reporting, and provide timely information to investors, many companies, especially larger companies, are likely to experience limited cost savings with optional semiannual reporting and may not avail themselves to the optional reporting relief. As noted in the Proposing Release, a CFA Institute Research Foundation study found that when quarterly reporting was no longer required of UK companies in 2014, less than 10% stopped issuing quarterly reports as of the end of 2015.[1] Additionally, debt agreements routinely include periodic reporting requirements, including quarterly reporting. Accordingly, we believe few larger Exchange Act reporting companies will cease filing quarterly reports, at least initially.

1 CFA Institute Research Foundation brief Impact of Reporting Frequency on UK Public Companies

The Proposing Release notes one of the potential benefits of reducing the frequency of periodic reporting is to reduce potential managerial incentives to overly focus on short-term outcomes to the detriment of long-term performance ("short-termism"). While some surveys indicate management feels pressure to meet short-term earnings benchmarks which could increase the probability of inducing short-termism, there is little empirical evidence that is the case, or that a move from quarterly to semiannual reporting would lead to management taking a longer-term approach to investment. The CFA Institute Research Foundation study evaluated corporate investment between quarterly reporters and those that stopped, finding no statistically significant difference.2 Further, semi-annual reporting would exacerbate the information asymmetry, potentially creating a chasm, between issuer management (who would continue to receive information daily) as compared to investors (who would only receive information every 6 months),

We believe the analyses, studies and surveys of periodic reporting frequencies continue to support the current quarterly reporting frequency, as the cost savings from reduced reporting frequency cited in the Proposing Release is small relative to the size of the U.S. capital markets, and do not offset the costs to capital markets efficiency such as those discussed above. However, we think that the benefits of the optionality in the Proposing Release would be proportionately greater for smaller companies, and smaller companies may have fewer other pressures to report more frequently than otherwise required. Accordingly, if the Commission were to adopt optional semiannual reporting requirements, we believe such allowance should be limited to a subset of smaller companies, such as smaller reporting companies as currently defined under SEC rules.

Additionally, we have heard from our membership there are other sources of costs that are not addressed within this proposal for current and potential new issuers, such as the volume of disclosures currently required and are constantly being added to under FASB guidance, additional disclosure requirements in Regulations S-X and S-K, as well as the intensity of internal control requirements being enforced through the external auditors by the PCAOB. We suggest the Commission expands the scope of its review to reduce regulatory burdens to these areas as well.

Other Considerations

For the reasons noted above, we believe the potential negative impacts of interim reporting frequency optionality across all issuers as proposed outweigh the potential benefit. However, smaller companies may receive proportionately greater benefits from semiannual reporting depending on specific circumstances and business life stage, and we recommend limiting the option for semiannual reporting to a class of smaller issuers for a specified pilot period.

2 Ibid

Recommendations

If the Commission decides to go forward with optional semiannual reporting for all or a class of Exchange Act reporting companies, coordination with other regulators and standards setters will be necessary to amend or clarify financial reporting and auditing standards. Examples include generally accepted accounting standards relating to interim financial information, such as earnings per share, and standards related to reviews of interim financial information and letters for underwriters and certain other requesting parties. We encourage the SEC to work closely with the Financial Accounting Standards Board and the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board to amend standards or provide interpretive guidance to address questions that will arise as a result of changes to the periodic reporting requirements.

We appreciate the Commission's thoughtful consideration of how to modernize the periodic reporting framework. We support efforts to reduce unnecessary burden while preserving the integrity and efficiency of U.S. capital markets. Based on the considerations outlined above, we believe a more targeted approach — focused on smaller reporting companies — would better achieve the Commission's objectives without introducing unintended consequences for investors, issuers, and the broader financial ecosystem. We welcome continued dialogue and stand ready to assist the Commission as it evaluates next steps.

Thank you for the opportunity to submit comments on the proposed rule change. Please direct any questions or concerns to NCACPA Vice President of Advocacy Robert Broome, CAE, at rbroome@ncacpa.org or (919) 481-5160.
Sincerely,
Alex Lehmann, CPA
Chair, NCACPA Board of Directors
cc: NCACPA Board of Directors
NCACPA A&A Resource Group
Mark Soticheck, CPA, CGMA, NCACPA CEO
4

Alexander Keith King — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexander Keith King I object strongly to the proposed retrograde change.

Alexandra LaBelle — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexandra LaBelle Quarterly reporting protects individual investors. Semiannual reporting doubles the information gap between insiders and ordinary shareholders. That gap is where volatility, uncertainty, and mistrust grow. The short-termism diagnosis doesn't justify this remedy. Research from the CFA Institute, which studied this exact maneuver in the U.K. market, shows that reporting frequency has no measurable effect on corporate investment behavior. The SEC is accepting a real cost – less transparency for individual investors – for a benefit that the evidence says simply won't materialize.

Alfred DiFronzo The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alfred DiFronzo I prefer to have 4 reports per year as opposed to 2. Keep it as is.

Allan Woodruff — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Allan Woodruff Please keep quarterly reporting. We rely on our accurate, timely info for our investing decisions. Cutting the frequency of reporting is not a good idea, and can allow bad players to hide one-half year before being noticed.

Alvin Westerman None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alvin Westerman The reduction of number of reports is both unwise and unfair to the individual investor. If anything I would like to see the reports increased to 6 (six) time per year to give us a more up to date and accurate assessment. For small time investors, more information is always better than less and corporations should be required to accommodate their investors, not the other way around. The reason they are called "public companies" is for that very reason and they should comply with the wishes of ALL their investors, not just the big ones.

Amanda Norton none — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amanda Norton I feel strongly that businesses should maintain frequent reporting (much more often than twice per year) to owners/investors. How can one have faith in the strength of growth, or make sound financial decisions without proper information? Twice per year is not nearly often enough. Period.

Amy Hoyt — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amy Hoyt I do not agree with the proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. A strong aspect of the USA's economic strength is our transparency, and regular reporting. Investing is ownership. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Amy Pulitano Accounting — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amy Pulitano Knowing less about investments only creates the opportunity for fraud and nefarious activity. Only open, quarterly or monthly reports, honest and accurate reporting keep businesses and people honest and investors in the light. People invest to support a company, usually for their ethics and services, we do not need untrustworthy companies out there taking our hard earned money. Plus, investments are our retirement funds, we need to be assured that corruption isn't going to destroy our futures.

Amy wilson None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amy wilson Do not reduce the number of times investment firms are required to issue public reports. This is transparency I rely on for my financial well being.

Ana Marie — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ana Marie To SEC - The S7-2026-15 proposal is of grave concern not only to me but to experts in the financial realm who understand the consequences. Just yesterday, I viewed an interview with one such expert and he compared this type of action with a set of conditions that triggered the crash of 1929. What is the rationale behind this proposal? We must keep the guardrails intact in a capitalist system, and the quarterly reports are on of them. Please uphold your duties to the public good and economic health of the U.S. Thank You

---

Anaya Meszoros — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anaya Meszoros I am a Senior citizen and depend on my investments to survive . I cannot make good investments without full disclosure in a timely manner. Please do not limit my ability to acquire information on companies in a regular, timely manner . I vote .

Andrea Serra — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrea Serra Please do not reduce the number of public-company reports from four to two times a year. This change would create less transparency and would create more uncertainty. As a business owner, I deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connections between companies and their owners.

Andreas Burger — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andreas Burger The "burden" of reporting quarterly is needed for investors, and is allowing light into the dealings of publicly traded companies. Cutting this in half will allow more darkness.

Andrew Beazley Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Beazley Owning a company should allow transparency into the company’s performance regularly

---

Andrew Ellison — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Ellison Dropping the number of reports is a bad move for investors and for the economy. This is an example of how is administration is pushing towards filling the swamp instead of draining it.

Andrew Goldsmith The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Goldsmith I do not believe it is in the interests of investors to reduce the disclosures to twice per year. As an investor in US companies, I would rather more information than less, otherwise I am less able to make a decision on where my money should be invested.

Andrew Kling — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Kling While quarterly earnings may not be ideal for Cos, they are ideal for investors. CEOs should be able to set long term strategy while managing short term metrics - even if those quarterly metrics aren't beneficial. I'd rather see you take on executive comp than something that directly benefits investors.

Andrew Marold — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Marold I think this proposal is a bad idea. Less information never leads to better decision-making. Investors need more information than twice-a-year snapshots to gauge how a company is doing.

Andy Cookingham Shareholder — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andy Cookingham Disclosure is necessary for investors to make wise decisions for their own fiscal health. Lack of disclosure would erode public confidence in the companies.

Anette Powell — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anette Powell Keep the quarterly reporting please. Anything less is irresponsible and will lead to a more volital market.

Angela Augustine — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Angela Augustine I oppose this proposed rule change. Reducing reporting frequency from quarterly to semiannual reporting would decrease transparency and provide investors with less timely information about a company's financial condition, operating performance, risks, and material changes. Public markets function best when investors have access to current information. Quarterly reporting helps investors make informed decisions, promotes accountability, and allows market participants to identify emerging issues before they become larger problems. Extending the reporting interval to six months would increase information gaps, potentially increase volatility around reporting periods, and leave investors relying more heavily on management guidance, analyst estimates, and speculation. While reducing compliance costs for issuers may be a worthwhile goal, those savings should not come at the expense of investor protection and market transparency. The SEC's core mission includes protecting investors and maintaining fair, orderly, and efficient markets. Quarterly reporting has long been an important component of that mission. I encourage the Commission to retain quarterly reporting requirements or, at a minimum, provide compelling evidence that the benefits to issuers outweigh the reduced transparency and increased information risk imposed on investors.

Angela Hottinger — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Angela Hottinger To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I am writing as an individual retail investor to express my strong opposition to proposed rule S7-2026-15, which would allow public companies to replace quarterly reports (Form 10-Q) with semiannual reports (Form 10-S). Quarterly reporting is not a burden on companies — it is the foundation of trust between public markets and the investors who participate in them. Financial markets serve as guiding lights of opportunity, helping everyday investors like me make informed decisions about where to put our savings and build our futures. Reducing disclosure frequency to twice a year would leave that system open to abuse. Fraud, deteriorating financials, ballooning debt, and failed business strategies could go undetected for six months at a time — with ordinary investors bearing the consequences. Perhaps most importantly, this proposal moves in exactly the wrong direction. The trajectory of modern capital markets has been toward greater transparency and higher-frequency disclosure, not less. Pulling back now would erode the trust that makes our markets function and would disproportionately harm retail investors who lack the access to private briefings and insider relationships that institutional players enjoy. I urge the Commission NOT to vote in favor of eliminating quarterly reporting requirements. Please protect the transparency and integrity that American investors depend on. Sincerely, Angela

---

Ann — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ann At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements to twice a year weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Receiving less information fails to adequately inform owners. Less transparency also increases uncertainty and often leads to illegal insider activity. I believe the SEC quarterly reporting requirements should remain in effect to inform and protect all investor owners.

Ann T Chapman — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ann T Chapman It is important that companies report FOUR times a year. Two times is an inadequate time to access what is happening in a company.

Anne Donovan — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne Donovan We should NOT allow this semiannual pattern of reporting. We need more transparency, not less; we need information for the public, not just insiders.

Anne Orth retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne Orth Please decide to keep the quarterly reporting information about how a public company is doing and don't change it to only twice/year. More timely information and transparency is always appreciated and makes for better decisions on the part of individual investors, like myself.

Anon — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anon Proposal to reduce reporting is a bad idea. Less is not transparent enough. Companies trying to take advantage of a situation. Do not support this.

Anonymous — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I oppose the proposed move to semiannual reporting under File No. S7-2026-15. Quarterly reports are essential for investors, especially retail investors and retirement savers, who rely on timely public information about earnings, revenue, risks, and company performance. Reducing reporting would give investors less transparency and make it harder to make informed decisions. This change would hurt smaller investors the most. Large institutions have access to more data, analysts, and company insight. Regular public reporting helps keep the market somewhat fair. I do not believe reduced reporting is justified by cost concerns. Public companies already track performance constantly, and in today's technology-driven environment, quarterly reporting should remain a basic responsibility. If workers are measured daily or weekly, public companies should at least report quarterly to the investors who fund them. Please preserve quarterly reporting requirements.

Anonymous — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I am strongly opposed to the proposal to reduce the reporting requirement from quarterly to semiannual (S7-2026-15). The proposal, if adopted, will further increase market speculation and fraud by withholding material information from investors. It reduces the reporting requirement for public companies at the expense of investors' trust and confidence in public markets. Any rule change that reduces the availability of timely, material information to investors and the public should be met with intense scrutiny and ultimately rejected. Thank you.

Anonymous — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous A reduction of oversight at times of extreme volatility is a reckless, unconscionable proposal. I do not disagree with the criticism that quarterly earnings incentivise some poor decisions in companies, but that is not remedied by removing the duty to report quarterly, it needs wholesale rewiring of incentives elsewhere. This is neither the moment nor the way to make this change, and that anyone in power would currently consider it is just symptomatic of institutional disconnect with the present moment.

Anonymous — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous As a retail investor (individual) I rely on quarterly reports to make investment decisions. Less frequent information will lead to poorer investment decisions and give insiders even more of an edge over individuals like me. Please give power to the people, not corporations.

Anonymous — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Obviously, I'm writing about the proposal that's now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. As a shareholder/investor in multiple companies, I think that's a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. Please say NO to semi-annual reporting! Investors deserve to be informed!

Anonymous — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: Quarterly reporting From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 24, 2026 As an American citizen and someone whose retirement (assuming it ever arrives) is tied to the market, I object vehemently to the proposal to get rid of quarterly reporting and move to semi-yearly reporting. I'm talking about the May 5th 2026 (File No. S7-2026-15, I believe?) proposed amendments to allow companies to file semiannual reports on new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q.
Why I object: I am NOT okay with letting the companies who control my future halve their reporting responsibilities and halve the transparency that they are currently legally required to provide. I am NOT okay with getting news about disastrous December profits the following July, long after I could've used that information to make decisions about my investing. I am NEVER okay with LESS oversight of corporate greed and potential corporate crime than we already have, because NO industry can be trusted to regulate itself, ever, ever, ever, and history has shown us this over, and over, and over. I lost 40% of my retirement in 2008, when I was forty. I can't afford for it to happen now, when I'm nearly sixty and considering actually retiring sometime in the immediate future.
Finally, this proposal is a giveaway to corporate oligarchs and insider traders (many of them the same people, shocker!) at the expense of individual investors; you know that; we know that; and it is not acceptable.
Don't do it. Don't let it happen. Don't abdicate your responsibility to average investors just to bend over the table and allow the already obscenely wealthy to give us the shaft yet again, as they've done so often before. Stand up. Do what you're charged with doing.
Thank you for considering my input. It reflects my sincere convictions, and it was NOT written with any help from AI or copy-and-paste.
Catherine Carter

Sent with Proton Mail secure email.

Anonymous — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous DO NOT move to semi-annual reporting. THIS IS WRONG AT EVERY LEVEL. Keep transparency and provide true consumer information.

Anonymous — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous The shareholders are effectively the owners of companies they invest in. Regular flow of information about companies performance is vital to keeping this relationship honest. Reduced transparency will diminish trust, which ultimately harm both investors and companies. A very large number of people participate in the markets. Reduction of information and transparency doesn’t help the average market participant like me (whose life savings, collectively, bolster the markets) to make independent and timely decisions (good or bad). When a government reduces people’s ability to protect themselves from real or perceived risks, they take much higher responsibility for the inevitable risks from bad actors. When a government has reduced transparency, It would be easier to blame it for negative market outcomes affecting large number of investors. So why would the government risk that? Companies big and small are doing great, and investors are happy to have decent amount of information to guide their decisions individually or through companies like Motley. So why subject the investors to higher risks? Surely, with a booming AI marketplace, the cost of record-keeping and providing regular guidance is falling rather than rising. A lot of imbalanced reactions in the market is the result of automated trades. The only weapon against irrational selling or buying dominating the markets these days, is the ability to use real and timely information to assess a company's real performance. Investors need more information not less. The proposed change would perhaps benefit some companies by reducing costs, but it would also make it easier for bad actors to hide critical information for a longer period of time. In an ideal situation, companies performance should be available in real-time, at least to the executives of that company. This would probably happen in majority of the companies in near future. So, lack of enthusiasm for sharing that information, only a few times a year, is troubling. Yes, markets swing every time they get information. But surely such swings would exaggerate even more if the frequency of data sharing is reduced. In the final analysis, less information cannot help a data-driven and rational market. As such the proposed changes cannot be good for the majority of investors and stakeholders.

Anonymous — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I don't believe it is in the stock holders best interest to allow companies to change reporting from 4 times a year to 2. As a stockholder, I should be informed quarterly not semi-annually. Stock holders need transparency to make informed decisions. Allowing companies to report twice a year puts the stock holder at more risk.

Anonymous — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Reducing the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a disservice to investors. As part owners of businesses, investors deserve regular, transparent communication. Also, less information/less transparency increases uncertainty, which is bad for business because when information finally arrives, investors are likely to have bigger surprises and bigger reactions which creates greater volatility.

Anonymous — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Investors have historically trusted the US markets because of their commitment to transparency: companies are required to make information available so that investors know what they are buying and can perform due diligence on it at regular intervals. A key part of that transparency is visibility into what companies are doing during the year and the smallish window in between reporting snapshots. A smaller window reduces the opportunity for gaps to emerge between public and private information. As such gaps can lead to sudden repricing of companies a smaller window is desirable in the interests of free and fair markets. Reducing the frequency of reporting will make it easier for companies to hide problems and make it harder for investors to perform due diligence. A weak argument for a slower reporting cadence can be made as an appeal to reduce bureaucracy. It misses the fact that the downside of reducing reporting is much greater: a longer reporting period increases the ease with which companies can spin/adjust/market their reporting numbers for those reports. Whilst, presumably, only a minority of companies would do so, the incentives are greatest for those gradually getting weaker which is precisely where the market most needs transparency. Given that it is increasingly easy to process information and extract it automatically, there is, conversely, a much stronger argument for reporting at a higher cadence, perhaps monthly or aligned with board meetings and other governance. That would make it more difficult for companies to engage in forms of "window dressing" reports and thereby make misleading financial statements more difficult. That would be to the benefit of both investors and company officers in reducing the potential for behaviour that either is, or could be construed as, unethical. As such differences of opinion tend to lead to litigation, avoiding increasing the opportunities for that is surely desirable?

Anonymous Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous The proposal is not in the best interest of the investor

---

Anonymous Motley fool community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Twice a year is not enough.

Anonymous None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous SEC Rule S7-2026-15 Will be the stock market version of the Wild West for insider trading. One more reason why I will pull all my investments out of the stock market.

Anonymous None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous It seems to me that the information to be reported is available to every company as part of normal accounting cycles. What extra work would it take to report normal quarterly accounting totals?

---

anonymous private trader — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: anonymous IMO, quarterly reporting should remain the standard. The possibility of large dynamic shifts in ratios, etc. biennially could cause huge swings in prices that may or my not be warranted. That can be seen now with quarterly reporting. The chances for chaotic swings in the market is too great with bots controlling a large amount of the trading.

Anthony Davit President, Horsemen Engineering and Consulting LLC — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anthony Davit As I've recently heard, a proposal is now on the table to allow companies to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. That is a mistake and a slight against the transparency that these companies should have with their owners. Investing is ownership. Owning a piece of a business requires regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some would argue that fewer reports reduce costs. I believe that is a fallacy. In this digital age, transparency comes at a decreased cost. Less information rarely creates better-informed owners and allows operators of OUR businesses to be less transparent. I urge you to oppose this proposal.

Anthony Guarisco Jr. — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anthony Guarisco Jr. Comments attached

---

Antonio Oliveira The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Antonio Oliveira Dear team, As an investor, I need accurate and up to date information to make my investment decisions. Reducing reporting requirements reduces transparency and will make me more likely to invest in markets where I see that transparency. In the age of AI and automation, I'm sure companies are more than capable of coping with that requirement.

Aparajetha Mohan — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aparajetha Mohan I want quarterly reporting

---

Armando Sarasua Retired Engineer — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Armando Sarasua My retirement savings would be put in jeopardy if we were to go back to the old way of doing things. Keep them honest. Keep the quarterly reporting !!!

Auditing Standards Committee of the Auditing Section of the American Accounting Association — Jun 24, 2026
Comments of the Auditing Standards Committee of the Auditing Section of the American Accounting Association on the SEC's Semiannual Reporting Proposal
Participating Committee Members
Dereck Barr-Pulliam
University of Louisville
College of Business
School of Accountancy
Sean A. Dennis
University of Central Florida
College of Business
Kenneth G. Dixon School of Accountancy
Travis P. Holt
Auburn University
Harbert College of Business
School of Accountancy
John D. Keyser (Committee Chair)
Arizona State University
W.P. Carey School of Business
School of Accountancy
Michelle McAllister
Northern Arizona University
The W.A. Franke College of Business

Department of Economics, Finance, and Accounting
Aleksandra B. Zimmerman
Florida State University
Herbert Wertheim College of Business
Department of Accounting
Note: The views expressed in this letter are those of the participating members of the Committee and do not reflect an official position of the American Accounting Association. The comments do not necessarily reflect the views of every member.

Comments of the Auditing Standards Committee of the Auditing Section of the American Accounting Association on the SEC's Semiannual Reporting Proposal

SUMMARY: On May 5, 2026, the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) issued a request for comment on its proposal to allow its registrants the option to reduce the frequency of interim reporting from quarterly to semiannually (SEC 2026). This comment letter summarizes the views of the participating members of the Auditing Standards Committee of the Auditing Section of the American Accounting Association. We raise concerns about the proposal to provide issuers with the option to reduce the frequency of financial reporting from quarterly to semiannually.
Generative AI technology has not been used in the preparation of this manuscript.

I. INTRODUCTION

In May 2026, the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC or the Commission) issued a proposal to provide registrants with the option to file their interim financial information semiannually rather than quarterly (SEC 2026). We appreciate the opportunity to provide feedback on this proposal. This comment letter summarizes the participating committee members' observations related to the proposal. Overall, we have concerns that the proposal could be harmful to investors, particularly retail investors who rely on SEC filings to obtain information used for decisions to buy, hold, or sell securities.

II. OVERALL OBSERVATIONS

Quarterly Reporting is Useful to Investors

Prior accounting research suggests that investors find quarterly financial statement information decision-useful, as evidenced by the strong market reaction to quarterly earnings announcements (Landsman and Maydew 2002). In fact, market reactions to quarterly earnings announcements have increased over time, particularly in the post-SOX era (Beaver, McNichols, and Wang 2018). This research suggests that investors place greater value on quarterly financial information today than in prior decades.

Quarterly earnings announcements also elicit a stronger market reaction than other firm news events, indicating that financial statement users view these disclosures as an important source of information about firm performance (Beaver et al. 2018). A likely explanation for this difference is that quarterly earnings announcements are accompanied by auditor-reviewed financial statements, increasing the perceived reliability of the disclosure relative to other firm communications (Schroeder 2016). Moreover, improvements in financial reporting quality and internal controls following the SOX legislation may have strengthened investor confidence in quarterly financial information, increasing its usefulness to capital markets.

Timeliness of Financial Information Impacts its Usefulness

The Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB) Conceptual Framework suggests that the proposed change could diminish the usefulness of financial information:

> Timeliness means having information available to decision makers in time to be capable of influencing their decisions. Generally, the older the information is, the less useful it is. (FASB 2024, 44).

Information that is provided semiannually is less timely than information provided quarterly. Generally accepted accounting principles recognize the importance of interim financial reporting in providing users with timely information regarding changes in a firm's financial position and operating results between annual reporting periods. According to ASC 270-10-45-1, “Interim financial information is essential to provide investors and others with timely information as to the progress of the entity” (FASB 2026).

Comparability and Consistency of Financial Information Impact its Usefulness

The FASB’s conceptual framework emphasizes the importance of comparability as an enhancing qualitative characteristic of accounting information:

Users’ decisions involve choosing between alternatives, for example, selling or holding an investment, or investing in one reporting entity or another.

2

Consequently, information about a reporting entity is more useful if it can be compared with similar information about other entities and with similar information about the same entity for another period or another date (FASB 2024, 43).

The proposal could impair both intertemporal (within-firm) and cross-sectional (across-firms) comparability. In addition, the proposal's annual election mechanism may reduce consistency in reporting practices over time. Under the proposed framework, a firm could report quarterly in one year, elect semiannual reporting in the next, and subsequently return to quarterly reporting in a later period. Collectively, reductions in timeliness, comparability, and consistency may make it more difficult for financial statement users to evaluate performance trends, benchmark firms against peers, and interpret changes in reported results, thereby reducing the decision-usefulness of financial information.

Potential Adverse Impacts on Investors and Investees

While quarterly reporting imposes regulatory costs on firms, reducing reporting frequency could place investors at a disadvantage by providing fewer timely updates on firm performance, increasing information asymmetry and uncertainty. This reduction in the availability and reliability of information may contribute to greater market volatility, reduced liquidity, and a higher cost of capital as investors demand additional compensation for bearing increased risk. In addition, quarterly earnings releases without reviewed financial statements may be viewed as less reliable, potentially reducing investor confidence in the disclosed information. Accordingly, any proposal to reduce reporting frequency should be evaluated not only in the context of the loss of information timeliness but also in the context of the potential loss of information credibility associated with reviewed interim financial statements. Collectively, less frequent information could decrease its decision usefulness.

3

The proposal may also create unintended signaling effects in capital markets. Although it is ultimately an empirical question which firms would elect to report semiannually, investors may interpret reporting frequency as a signal of firm quality, transparency, or governance. This concern is consistent with prior research showing that corporate disclosure reduces information asymmetry between managers and outside investors and plays an important role in capital-market functioning (Healy and Palepu 2001). For example, larger firms may continue to report quarterly, while smaller firms disproportionately elect semiannual reporting. Over time, quarterly reporting could become a de facto best practice, causing investors to view firms that elect semiannual reporting less favorably, regardless of their underlying economic performance. Such signaling effects could harm investors by introducing new uncertainty into the market – and may, at the same time, harm firms seeking to raise additional capital. Relatedly, prior research finds that more frequent financial reporting is associated with lower information asymmetry and a lower cost of equity capital (e.g., Fu, Kraft, and Zhang 2012).

Beyond these concerns, the proposed rule may also reduce the availability of standardized, machine-readable financial information. Although many firms may continue to issue quarterly earnings releases, a shift away from quarterly SEC filings could substantially reduce the amount of XBRL-tagged financial data available to investors and other market participants. Unlike SEC filings, earnings releases are not subject to the same level of standardization, making them more difficult to aggregate, compare, and analyze across firms. The loss of XBRL-tagged quarterly information may increase information-processing costs for investors, analysts, researchers, and automated trading systems while reducing the accessibility and comparability of financial information. Consequently, the proposal may impose unintended costs on financial statement users even if it reduces reporting costs for certain firms.

Structural Costs, Constraints, and Market Frictions
The proposed rule may create significant transition costs for firms that elect semiannual reporting and later return to quarterly reporting. This concern is particularly relevant because the proposal contemplates an annual election, allowing firms to change reporting frequencies from one year to the next (SEC 2026). Currently, SEC Regulation S-X requires interim financial statements included in quarterly reports on Form 10-Q to be reviewed by the auditor. The proposed changes would maintain the interim review requirement, clarifying that the interim financial statements may be “included in quarterly reports on Form 10-Q or semiannual reports on Form 10-S” (SEC 2026, 175). Since the proposed rule would not require reviews of quarterly information included in Form 8-K for issuers electing semiannual reporting, the first and third quarter financial information for companies electing semiannual reporting may not have been subject to review by the independent auditor. Consequently, if a firm subsequently returns to quarterly reporting, auditors would be required to perform additional procedures to obtain sufficient support for comparative quarterly information presented in future filings. This reporting pattern would require reconstructing and reviewing previously unreviewed quarterly information. As a result, any short-term compliance savings associated with semiannual reporting may be partially offset by substantial transition costs when firms change reporting frequencies across reporting periods.
The proposed rule change may provide fewer benefits than anticipated because a significant portion of firms may be functionally unable to implement semiannual reporting due to existing regulatory, contractual, or governance requirements. For example, many financial institutions and insurance companies are already subject to separate quarterly regulatory reporting requirements. In addition, many private debt agreements and lending arrangements require borrowers to provide creditors with quarterly financial information. Firms may also continue preparing quarterly financial information to satisfy the information needs of boards of directors, audit committees, investors, and other stakeholders. As a result, many firms may be required to continue preparing quarterly financial information regardless of SEC reporting requirements, thereby limiting the proposal's anticipated cost savings.

Potential Audit Consequences
Quarterly reviews provide recurring auditor involvement that may facilitate the earlier identification and resolution of accounting issues before they affect annual financial statements. This role is consistent with PCAOB interim review standards, which describe interim reviews as involving analytical procedures and inquiries of financial and accounting personnel and requiring auditors to update their knowledge of the company’s business and internal control as they relate to interim financial reporting (PCAOB AS 4105). Because reviews occur throughout the year, they create multiple opportunities for auditors to identify accounting errors, challenge management estimates, evaluate unusual transactions, and address emerging financial reporting issues before they become entrenched. Eliminating two review periods may increase the time during which material weaknesses go undetected, potentially increasing the costs to remediate when eventually discovered. This concern is particularly important because PCAOB standards recognize that a material weakness can exist even when the financial statements are not materially misstated and that the ICFR audit is designed to support the auditor’s opinion on internal control effectiveness as of year-end (PCAOB AS 2201). In some cases, issuers may not have sufficient time to remediate material weaknesses before the reporting period ends, leading to more adverse internal control reports and opinions (and the related capital market consequences). Consistent with this concern, Barr-Pulliam, Brown-Liburd, and Sanderson (2022) find that internal control opinions affect perceptions of audit quality, assurance, and auditor negligence, highlighting that adverse ICFR reporting outcomes, in some settings, can have consequences beyond the disclosure itself. In addition, auditors currently identify and resolve many issues during quarterly reviews before they materially affect annual financial reporting. Delays in identifying and resolving financial reporting issues may increase the magnitude of any required year-end corrections or adjustments (making these adjustments more difficult for auditors to negotiate).

Quarterly reviews also allow auditors to maintain a current understanding of client risks throughout the year. Recurring interactions with management provide opportunities to identify changes in operations, personnel, information systems, internal controls, and economic conditions that may affect the risk of financial reporting. Less frequent auditor involvement may reduce awareness of these developments and impair the timely identification of emerging accounting issues. As a result, risk assessments may become less timely, requiring auditors to modify planned procedures later in the engagement. This may reduce audit efficiency and increase audit effort as issues that could have been identified and addressed earlier are instead resolved closer to year-end.

In addition, reducing the number of quarterly reviews may not eliminate audit work; instead, it may shift a portion of that work to periods when audit firms already face significant resource constraints. Prior audit research finds that workload compression and high auditor workloads are associated with lower audit quality, including through increased pressure on audit teams and reduced capacity to perform and review audit procedures effectively (e.g., López and Peters 2012; Persellin, Schmidt, Vandervelde, and Wilkins 2019). To the extent that accounting issues, material weaknesses, or unusual transactions are identified later in the review or audit process, auditors may require additional time to investigate and resolve those matters under tighter deadlines. Such workload compression may negatively affect audit quality and harm investors. In some cases, the additional time required to investigate and resolve issues identified later in the process could delay the issuance of audited financial statements, thereby creating other compliance costs for firms and further reducing the timeliness of financial information available to investors.

If companies continue issuing quarterly earnings releases after quarterly reviews are no longer required, the perceived reliability of those disclosures may decline as auditor involvement becomes optional. Under the proposed framework, firms may continue providing quarterly information to investors while no longer obtaining auditor reviews of the underlying financial information. This concern is consistent with evidence that preliminary earnings releases issued before audit completion are more likely to be revised, suggesting that auditor involvement can improve the reliability of earnings information released to capital markets (e.g., Bronson, Hogan, Johnson, and Ramesh 2011). Companies facing pressure to meet earnings targets may have greater discretion over unreviewed quarterly disclosures, potentially increasing uncertainty regarding the credibility of reported results. As a result, investors may place undue reliance on risky and unreviewed interim disclosures. Prior research finds that lower financial reporting frequency can increase investors' reliance on alternative sources of earnings news, which may create excessive information spillovers from peer firms (e.g., Arif and De George 2020). Over time, this could lead to investor losses, greater market volatility, and higher costs of capital for registrants.

Potential Unintended Consequences for the Audit Market

The proposal may also have unintended consequences for the audit services market.

Some audit firms may view firms that elect semiannual reporting as presenting greater engagement risk (e.g., Johnstone 2000). First, electing semiannual reporting will reveal valuable information about registrants' control environment. Doing so could easily become an important risk factor for audit firms to consider in their engagement acceptance/continuance decisions, risk assessments, and pricing. Prior research finds that internal control weaknesses are associated with audit fee premiums and that audit fees may remain elevated for some firms even after material weaknesses are remediated (e.g., Hogan and Wilkins 2008; Munsif, Raghunandan, Rama, and Singhvi 2011). Additionally, auditors will inevitably interact less with management under a semiannual reporting routine, relative to a quarterly reporting regime. This will result in fewer opportunities to evaluate emerging accounting issues and identify potential financial reporting problems before year-end. As a result, certain audit firms may become less willing to serve firms that elect semiannual reporting or may require higher fees to compensate for the additional risk. To the extent this occurs, affected firms may face reduced auditor choice and potentially higher audit costs. In addition, if firms electing semiannual reporting are concentrated among a smaller subset of audit firms, the proposal could have unintended consequences for audit quality and competition within the audit market.

III. ECONOMIC ANALYSIS

Critique of the Economic Analysis and Short-termism Assumptions

The Commission's economic analysis suggests a causal link between quarterly reporting and managerial short-termism and there is some evidence consistent with this view (Kajuter, Lessenich, Nienhaus, and Van Gemmern 2022). For example, Kraft, Vashishtha, and Venkatachalam (2018) find that companies decreased investments in fixed assets after the United States increased the frequency of interim reporting to quarterly. However, there is also evidence that contradicts the view that increased reporting frequency leads to higher levels of managerial myopia. For example, Nallareddy, Pozen, and Rajgopal (2021) find that changing the frequency of reporting requirements has essentially no impact on firm investment decisions.

9

In its proposal, the Commission argues that "it is difficult to empirically estimate the counterfactual value of semiannual reporting" with respect to "the issue of what reporting frequency would be optimal for investors and companies" (SEC 2026, 98). However, research confirms that higher reporting frequency reduces information asymmetry and financing frictions, with higher frequency associated with a lower cost of equity capital (Fu, Kraft, and Zhang 2012). Moving to a semiannual cadence doubles the length of the inter-announcement window, leading to a broader buildup of adverse selection risk and a potentially higher net cost of equity capital.

Adverse Impact on Continuous Monitoring Framework

The Commission acknowledges in the proposal that "less frequent reporting could delay the identification and resolution" of misstatements and control deficiencies (SEC 2026, 119). Less timely involvement of the auditor in significant unusual transactions and new types of transactions will delay the detection and correction of misstatements as well as the identification and remediation of internal control deficiencies. This may lead to higher audit fees that offset any savings from eliminating reviews of the first and third quarters. For example, unremediated control deficiencies will increase the risk of material misstatement and the extent of required audit procedures necessary to address the heightened risk.

10

Potential Impact on Market Competition for Audit Services

The Commission notes that firm size and operating complexity are likely to affect issuers' reporting frequency decisions (SEC 2026, 122). We suspect that smaller issuers will be more likely to choose less frequent reporting. These issuers are more likely to be served by smaller audit firms. Thus, the estimated 12% reduction in audit fees resulting from this proposal may fall disproportionately on smaller audit firms and could lead to further concentration of the audit market, a systemic risk that is not currently addressed in the proposal.1

IV. RESPONSES TO SELECTED QUESTIONS

Question 20: In connection with any adoption of the proposal, should there be a new requirement for semiannual filers that announce or release earnings for the first or third quarters of their fiscal year (i.e., the periods that would later be subsumed in Forms 10-S and 10-K but for which there would be no quarterly report filed with the Commission)— that financial information in any first or third quarter earnings releases be reviewed by an independent public accountant? If so, would any changes to current auditing standards (e.g., governing reviews) be required?

Semiannual filers that choose to announce or release quarterly earnings should be required to have their financial statements reviewed by their external auditor. At the time the Commission adopted the rule to require interim reviews, it cited the need for more discipline in the financial reporting process to address increasing concerns about inappropriate earnings management (SEC 1999). Ettredge, Simon, Smith, and Stone (2000) find that quarterly reviews result in more adjustments in the quarters and fewer adjustments at year-end. Moreover, allowing companies to choose semiannual reporting to avoid interim reviews while still reporting quarterly earnings does not seem appropriate.

1 See page 94 of the proposal for the Commission's estimate that the reduction in fees will be approximately 12%
(SEC 2026).

Paragraph .03 of PCAOB Auditing Standard (AS) 4105 refers to the SEC requirement for registrants to file quarterly reports on Form 10-Q or Form 10-QSB. In addition to revising this requirement to refer to Form 10-S, the language would also need to be revised to address circumstances where the auditor reviews interim financial statements included in an 8-K.

Question 24: Would the nature and extent of procedures that an independent public accountant performs during a review change depending upon whether the independent public accountant is performing a review over a fiscal semiannual period or a fiscal quarterly period? Would independent public accountants conducting reviews do the same amount of work for a fiscal semiannual period as they currently do for two quarterly fiscal periods on a combined basis? Would an independent public accountant experience any impact on efficiency or economies of scale when conducting reviews and annual audits under semiannual reporting versus under quarterly reporting for the same company? Would any changes to independent public accountants' review or audit procedures or any impact on efficiency or economies of scale result in changes in costs to companies? If so, describe the impact and whether the impact could vary depending upon the size of the registrant subject to the review.

Interim reviews consist primarily of inquiry and analytical procedures. However, auditors typically perform audit procedures on significant unusual transactions in the period in which those transactions occur. Reducing the number of interim reviews from three to one will adversely affect the auditor's ability to identify and perform relevant audit procedures, delaying those procedures until later in the year. Moving audit work to busier times has the potential to significantly adversely impact audit quality (Heo, Kwon, and Tan 2020; Lopez and Peters 2012).

Question 25: Would companies that elect semiannual reporting retain their independent public accountant to perform a review of their financial statements at the end of each quarter either to: (1) support financial information that is used for purposes of a quarterly earnings release (notwithstanding that, as noted above, there is no Commission requirement for a quarterly earnings release to be reviewed by an independent public accountant), or (2) guard against the possible need for a quarterly review to be performed should the company decide to change back to quarterly reporting in a future period (where that period would require comparative quarterly data for the prior year)?

We do not know whether semiannual filers would voluntarily elect to have their quarterly financial statements reviewed by their external auditors. We therefore recommend that the Commission require semiannual filers who choose to announce or release quarterly earnings to engage their auditor to perform interim reviews prior to release.

Question 26: For semiannual filers, what impact would a shift to semiannual reporting have on: (1) companies' disclosure controls and procedures, (2) companies' internal control over financial reporting, and (3) independent public accountants' strategy and approach for the annual audit of companies' internal control over financial reporting or financial statements? With semiannual reporting, is there a potential for a material increase in the risk that material misstatements (either due to error or fraud) or control deficiencies are not timely detected by or communicated to the independent public accountant thereby limiting potential remediation of these issues by the issuer? Please provide any data related to these questions.

The shift to semiannual reporting will result in less frequent evaluation of the effectiveness of disclosure controls and internal controls over financial reporting. As a result, management and auditors may detect internal control deficiencies less timely, increasing the risk of material misstatement in interim and annual periods.

REFERENCES

Arif, S., E.T. De George. 2020. The dark side of low financial reporting frequency: Investors' reliance on alternative sources of earnings news and excessive information spillovers. The Accounting Review 95 (6): 23-49. https://doi.org/10.2308/tar-2017-0018.

Barr-Pulliam, D., H. L. Brown-Liburd, and K-A. Sanderson. 2022. The effects of the internal control opinion and use of audit data analytics on perceptions of audit quality, assurance, and auditor negligence. Auditing: A Journal of Practice & Theory 41 (1): 25-48. https://doi.org/10.2308/AJPT-19-064.

Beaver, W. H., M. F. McNichols, and Z. Z. Wang. 2018. The information content of earnings announcements: new insights from intertemporal and cross-sectional behavior. Review of Accounting Studies, 23(1): 95-135. https://doi.org/10.1007/s11142-017-9417-z.

Bhaskar, L.S., P.E. Hopkins, and J.H. Schroeder. 2019. An investigation of auditors' judgments when companies release earnings before audit completion. Journal of Accounting Research 57 (2): 355-390. https://doi.org/10.1111/1475-679X.12262.

Bronson, S.N., C.E. Hogan, M.F. Johnson, and K. Ramesh. 2011. The unintended consequences of PCAOB auditing standard Nos. 2 and 3 on the reliability of preliminary earnings releases. Journal of Accounting and Economics 51 (1-2): 95-114. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jacceco.2010.06.002.

Ettredge, M.L., D.T. Simon, D.B. Smith, and M.S. Stone. 2000. The effect of the external accountant's review on the timing of adjustments to quarterly earnings. Journal of Accounting Research 38 (1): 195-207. https://www.jstor.org/stable/2672928.

Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB). 2024. Conceptual framework for financial reporting. Norwalk, CT: Financial Accounting Foundation. Available at: https://fasb.org/page/ShowPdf?path=Conceptual%20Framework%20for%20Financial%20Reporting%20(September%202024).pdf&title=Conceptual%20Framework%20for%20Financial%20Reporting.

Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB). 2026. Accounting Standards Codification. https://asc.fasb.org/Login.

Fu, R., A. Kraft, and H. Zhang. 2012. Financial reporting frequency, information asymmetry, and the cost of equity. Journal of Accounting and Economics 54: 132-149. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jacceco.2012.07.003.

Healy, P.M. and K.G. Palepu. 2001. Information asymmetry, corporate disclosure, and the capital markets: A review of the empirical disclosure literature. Journal of Accounting and Economics 31 (1-3): 405-440. https://doi.org/10.1016/S0165-4101(01)00018-0.

Heo, J.S., S. Y. Kwon, and H-T Tan. 2020. Auditors' responses to workload imbalance and the impact on audit quality. Contemporary Accounting Research 38 (1): 338-375. https://doi.org/10.1111/1911-3846.12612.

Hogan, C.E. and M.S. Wilkins. 2008. Evidence on the audit risk model: Do auditors increase audit fees in the presence of internal control deficiencies? Contemporary Accounting Research 25 (1): 219-242. https://doi.org/10.1506/car.25.1.9.

Johnstone, K.M. 2000. Client-acceptance decisions: Simultaneous effects of client business risk, audit risk, auditor business risk, and risk adaptation. Auditing: A Journal of Practice & Theory 19 (1): 1-25. https://doi.org/10.2308/aud.2000.19.1.1.
14
Kajuter, P., A. Lessenich, M. Nienhaus, and F. Van Gemmern. Consequences of interim reporting: A literature review and future research. European Accounting Review 31 (1): 209-239. https://doi.org/10.1080/09638180.2021.1872398.
Kraft, A.G., R. Vashishtha, and M. Venkatachalam. 2018. Frequent financial reporting and managerial myopia. The Accounting Review 93 (2): 249-275. https://doi.org/10.2308/accr-51838.
Landsman, W. R., and E. L. Maydew. 2002. Has the information content of quarterly earnings announcements declined in the past three decades? Journal of Accounting Research, 40(3): 797-808. https://doi.org/10.1111/1475-679X.00071.
Lopez, D.M. and G.F. Peters. 2012. The effect of workload compression on audit quality. Auditing: A Journal of Practice & Theory 31 (4): 139-165. https://doi.org/10.2308/ajpt-10305.
Munsif, V., K. Raghunandan, D.V. Rama, and M. Singhvi. 2011. Audit fees after remediation of internal control weaknesses. Accounting Horizons 25 (1): 87-105. https://doi.org/10.2308/acch.2011.25.1.87.
Nallareddy, S., R. Pozen, and S. Rajgopal. 2021. Consequences of more frequent reporting: The U.K. experience. Journal of Law, Finance and Accounting 6 (1): 51-88. https://doi.org/10.1561/108.00000051.
Persellin, J.S., J.J. Schmidt, S.D. Vandervelde, and M.S. Wilkins. 2019. Auditor perceptions of audit workloads, audit quality, and job satisfaction. Accounting Horizons 33 (4): 95-117. https://doi.org/10.2308/acch-52488.
Public Company Accounting Oversight Board (PCAOB). 2026. AS 4105: Reviews of interim financial information. Available at: https://pcaobus.org/oversight/standards/auditing-standards/details/AS4105.
PCAOB. 2026. AS 2201: An audit of internal control over financial reporting that is integrated with an audit of financial statements. Available at: https://pcaobus.org/oversight/standards/auditing-standards/details/AS2201.
Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). 1999. Audit Committee Disclosure. Final Rule. Release No. 34-42266; File NO. S7-22-99. https://www.federalregister.gov/documents/1999/12/30/99-33849/audit-committee-disclosure.
SEC. 2026. Semiannual Reporting. Proposed Rule. https://www.sec.gov/files/rules/proposed/2026/33-11414.pdf.
Schroeder, J.H. 2016. The impact of audit completeness and quality on earnings announcement GAAP disclosures. The Accounting Review 91 (2): 677-705. https://doi.org/10.2308/accr-51182.

Baharak Motley fool community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Baharak Please keep transparency alive and well and not limit how often the public gets reports. Quarterly is the minimum mandate.

Barb Henry R.N. — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barb Henry Three times a year would be a more palatable compromise. Isn't the citizenry presently demanding more transparency rather than less.

Barbara Roelofs — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Roelofs Semiannual reporting is insufficient, as those who have a vested interest in a company are actually engaged in ownership and have a right to the information essential for them to make decisions in managing investments. In order for the investors to engage the decision-making process it is essential that they have up-to-date, transparent, and comprehensive information regarding the performance, on all levels, of the company in which they have invested. Quarterly reports are synoptic and do not represent real-time, comprehensive information upon which decisions can legitimately be made. Semiannual reports likely would be deemed useless. It should not become an onerous task for one to obtain information in order to make informed decisions. Semiannual reporting would not provide timely information and may not be in any way pertinent in light of the dynamic nature of the markets. This would leave investors in the dark.

Barbara Ruhnke-David retired accountant — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Ruhnke-David less information is never good when financial decisions have to be made. electronics today make it cheap and easy to report.

Bardia Alavi — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bardia Alavi I think having less frequent earnings is not helping with investors. This might result in pulling funds from US companies and into International markets.

Bart Hopkins — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bart Hopkins Company Reports should continue to be issued quarterly

---

Becky Wharton — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Becky Wharton Investors need accountability and access to information. Do not limit this by reducing the reporting requirements

---

Ben — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ben I oppose the proposal to allow public companies to reduce reporting from quarterly to semiannual. As an individual investor, I rely on regular financial disclosures to make informed decisions and monitor the companies I own. Less frequent reporting would reduce transparency, increase uncertainty, and could lead to larger market reactions when information is finally released. The benefits of timely and consistent information for investors outweigh any potential reduction in reporting costs. Please maintain the current quarterly reporting requirements.

Ben Lapsley — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ben Lapsley As a retired investor, I rely on timely information from public companies. Quarterly reporting is a reasonable requirement to access the public markets and we should NOT change the reporting cycle. Good company leadership can handle the "pressure" to meet earnings on a quarterly basis, including variances from whatever the analysts project. Going six months between reports is not a good thing.

Benjamin Cunningham — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Benjamin Cunningham I would like to express my opposition of the requirement of public companies moving to semi-annual reporting. As a partial owner of many companies, I would find more infrequent reporting troubling and would like the current quarterly reporting requirements to remain in place.

Benjamin O'Connor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Benjamin O'Connor As an engaged investor, I rely heavily on quarterly reporting from companies that I invest in to validate my investment decisions and keep abreast of new developments. Reducing reporting to semiannual reduces my ability to make informed decisions around my investments. With less timely information released to the market, it makes it harder to pick up on opportunities / threats / trends for listed companies and will likely result in more volatility around reporting season.

Bert Whetstone — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bert Whetstone SEC, we investors need MORE transparency, not less! We need at least four reports from public companies per year, and in this day and age where information flows more freely than ever it's hard to imagine why these reports can't be monthly. But four is what it has been and it should never be reduced from that requirement. Thank you!

Beth Fuegy None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-17 From: Beth Fuegy This proposal is a gift for Wall Street, corporate insiders and corporate executives. Retail investors who rely on public filings do not receive this same information and expanding the length of time invites fraud, debt increase and hiding product failures. This should not move forward

---

Beverly Debel — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beverly Debel Do not allow the safety of public information to be undermined again as it has so many times in the past. This lesson does not need to be repeated at the expense of a great many peoples' financial well being and security. Your agency name says it all.

BH & LJ Phillips Private investors — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: BH & LJ Phillips It is so important that we are kept up to date with all the company news. The more news and reporting the better we can keep our investments on track. This is a case of no news is bad news

---

Bhanu Subramanya Individual Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bhanu Subramanya Dear Sir/Madam I personally believe the proposal on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a serious mistake. IT is critical that as individual investors, we receive as much public information as possible from all the public companies to ensure the desired transparency as well as timely availability of information for individual investors to be effective in making their investment decisions. While the claim that reducing this frequency from 4 times a year to twice a year could reduce overall cost for a public company, as individual investors and technically owners of the business, we deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and us as the investors. Further - we are in the world of AI where companies have significant opportunities to reduce the cost of generating their quarterly reports via suitable automation techniques -- which should alleviate any concerns about the cost. Finally, with my experience as an executive of a business line in my working experience, companies have significant additional opportunities to reduce cost and it is unclear why reporting four times a year would be seen as a burden. We request you to reject this proposal and continue to continue to maintain the requirement for public companies to report every quarter. Sincerely, Bhanu Subramanya

---

Bhuvi Gupta — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bhuvi Gupta Egregious move that will dilute shareholding and transparency, and is harmful for trust. When I own a piece of a business, I deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Bikram Raychaudhuri Doctor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bikram Raychaudhuri Semiannual Reporting i am not sure this is a good idea. it will dilute regulation standards and transparency for investors, reducing trust in the system.

Bill Lemond — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Lemond As a long time and long term investor, I find quarters reports to be very helpful and am opposed to changing public company reporting to twice yearly.

Bill McNaughton — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill McNaughton This is a bad idea, shareholders require more information not less and cutting to semi-annual from quarterly will cut the information flow. I think with new developments in reporting methods there is no cost saving but there is a significant risk of manipulation of shareholders and the financial markets that could lead to increased bad behaviour, including and up to fraud. Do Not implement semi-annual reporting.

Bill W. Davis — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill W. Davis As an investor I believe having quarterly reports is much more likely to keep me up to date on the publicly traded companies that I own a portion of. I would hope that most companies would continue to provide those reports quarterly even if the regulation is changed but I do not see a reason to change the regulation. All publicly traded companies should be required to provide financial reports on a quarterly basis.

Billy Hulsey — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Billy Hulsey Quarterly reporting is a reasonable balance of transparency and regulatory requirements. Public companies have a fiduciary duty to their shareholders. If they do not want this responsibility, they have the choice to stay private. An equitable capitalist system requires sensible oversight and regulation. Please maintain the status quo.

Bob Rathbone — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bob Rathbone Quarterly reports are the only way for me to be aware how the companies I own are performing. Semi annual reports leave me guessing for months. Unfair!

Bobbie Palmer — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bobbie Palmer Please keep the American general investing public informed and protected from fraud by insisting and maintaining quarterly reporting by publicly traded companies.

Bonoplus Family Office (Italy) Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bonoplus Family Office (Italy) I totally disagree with the proposal. Less frequent info is a minus for investors. It just favors an oligarchic community of privileged people while commoners stay more in the dark. Please accept my plain, still true, comment.

Brad Huggins — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brad Huggins I believe semiannual reporting rather than quarterly is a bad Idea and detrimental to my and other portfolios. I am requesting that this proposal be rejected and the status quo remain. Thank you, Brad Huggins

---

Bradley C. Sugg None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bradley C. Sugg Stop rolling back regulations on corporations. They need more regulations not less!!!

Bradley McGraw — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bradley McGraw I oppose reducing reporting from quarterly to semi-annual for publicly traded companies. As an investor, having regular, transparent communication and data from the business is critical. Reducing reporting undermines my ability to make informed decisions regarding my investments. Given that each company must maintain records regarding its performance as an essential part of operations, and that reporting is done digitally, I am skeptical that making the reporting less frequent will result in any material savings to the company, much less that any such savings would outweigh the interests of investors whose funds are directly impacted. Please take no action that undermines the interests of individual investors. My comment is part of a coordinated, informed community of individual investors in The Motley Fool Community.

Brandon Swensen — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brandon Swensen As an investment analyst for a buy-side firm that manages both private client and retirement plan assets, consistent and timely reporting is vital to ensuring the best treatment and investment selections for clients. Moving away from quarterly reporting would double the time between when due-diligence can be conducted on individual securities. Whether it is an equity or a fixed income instrument, the absence of timely and frequent reporting will decrease visibility into a companies operations while subsequently increasing volatility. The proposed changes will have profound negative effects for clients in the form of reduced due-diligence on investment assets, heightened volatility when trading in accounts, and slower decision making from investment managers. In summary, quarterly reporting allows consistent visibility and enables investment managers to more effectively manage client assets in a prudent manner and ensure all clients are positioned appropriately with high quality investment assets that align with their objectives. Thank you for considering my comment.

Brendan — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brendan Dear Commissioners I respectfully urge the SEC not to adopt the proposed rule allowing public companies to replace quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting. The fundamental purpose of the securities laws is to promote transparency and ensure that investors have access to timely, reliable information. Public-company shareholders are owners of the businesses in which they invest. Owners deserve regular communication regarding the performance, risks, and strategic direction of those businesses. Reducing reporting frequency from four times per year to two times per year would move in the opposite direction. Supporters of the proposal argue that less frequent reporting could reduce compliance costs and alleviate pressure on management to focus on short-term results. While those concerns deserve consideration, they should be weighed against the costs imposed on investors by having less information. In today's environment, where advances in automation, artificial intelligence, and digital reporting tools have significantly reduced the burden of preparing disclosures, the benefits of cutting reporting frequency appear increasingly uncertain. At the same time, the costs to market transparency are clear.

Importantly, reducing the flow of information does not reduce uncertainty. It increases uncertainty. Companies continue operating every day regardless of when reports are filed. Customers are gained and lost. Products succeed and fail. Capital is allocated. Risks emerge. When investors receive fewer official updates, they are forced to make decisions with less verified information and greater reliance on speculation, rumors, and incomplete data. The likely result is not a more stable market but a less informed one. Delaying information often causes uncertainty to accumulate over longer periods, making eventual disclosures more consequential and potentially producing larger price adjustments when information finally becomes available. Several market participants have already expressed concern that less frequent reporting could increase volatility and reduce valuation accuracy because investors would have less timely information on which to base decisions. Investors and asset managers cited by Reuters warned that reduced reporting frequency could impair transparency, contribute to mispricing, and increase market volatility rather than reduce it. (Reuters) Recent research conducted by the CFA Institute found strong investor support for retaining quarterly reporting and significant concern about reducing disclosure frequency. Professional investors overwhelmingly view quarterly reporting as an important component of transparent and efficient capital markets. (CFA Institute) Even commentators who support the proposal often acknowledge that investors demand regular information and that many companies may feel compelled to continue providing quarterly updates voluntarily to maintain credibility with shareholders and access to capital. The SEC itself has specifically requested comment on how semiannual reporting could affect the timeliness of information available to investors and the comparability of disclosures among issuers. (DART) The argument that quarterly reporting creates short-termism is also unpersuasive. Short-term thinking is a matter of incentives and management behavior, not the existence of information itself. Investors cannot make better long-term decisions by receiving less information. Transparency is not the cause of short-termism. Rather, transparency allows owners to evaluate whether management is creating long-term value. If there are concerns about compliance burdens for smaller issuers, the Commission could consider targeted relief for those companies rather than reducing disclosure standards across the public markets more broadly. However, for most investors, particularly retail investors who lack access to private information channels, quarterly reporting remains one of the most important mechanisms for maintaining a fair and informed marketplace. For more than fifty years, quarterly reporting has served as a cornerstone of U.S. market transparency. The Commission should preserve that standard and reject proposals that would reduce the frequency of mandatory public-company disclosures. Thank you for considering these comments. Respectfully submitted, Brendan

---

Briam Doerfler — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Briam Doerfler As an investor, I rely on quarterly reports to make informed investment decisions. I strongly urge you to keep the requirement for QUARTERLY reports. Thanks

---

Brian J — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian J I urge to not reduce the frequency of filing requirements.

Brian Minnillo Motley Fool community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Minnillo More transparency is better than less transparency. I oppose the changes to semi annual filings/reportings. The companies owe it to the public and their shareholders to keep them informed at least 3-4 times per year. Thank you

---

Brian P - The Motley Fool Community none — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian P - The Motley Fool Community I believe in greater transparency for public companies in America and that we should continue with the quarterly reports. Please don't make this change. Thank you, Brian

---

Brian Tasler — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Tasler Changing the reporting requirements from quarterly to bi-annually should not even be considered. For investors sake and to avoid repeating Enron/ World Comm scenarios we need more reporting and transparency, not less.

---

brian wiglesworth none — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: brian wiglesworth Already Sent Comment

---

Brij Joshi — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brij Joshi As a shareholder of any company, I would like to see a minimum update every quarter as it’s the case today. A lot can happen and shareholders simply wouldn’t know what’s going on in the company which they own, if an option for the reporting is reduced to twice a year. There should be no argument about costs relating to public company reporting. In any event the costs are coming down as a result of AI and even if this wasn’t the case, it’s a cost that more than meets its purpose and fundamental to keep the management of company answerable to the shareholder. Strongly feel that in return of the public’s investment in the company the least a company can do is to report on quarterly basis and not reduce it any further. Thank you

---

Brittany Fitzgerald The Moutlet Fool community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brittany Fitzgerald At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Brock Greene — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brock Greene Reducing the reporting requirements for large public companies will hurt the small, individual investor who relies on quarterly reports to gauge how these companies are performing. It will help the institutional and very rich investors who have access to other sources of information. Which, honestly, is probably why you are considering doing this.

Bruce A. Ernst — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce A. Ernst Keep the number of public-company reports to 4/ year.

Bruce Carlsten Member of the Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Carlsten I am strongly against the proposal currently on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I do not want to be kept in the dark for long period of time when significant happenings are occurring in a company that I own.

Bruce Kimmerle — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Kimmerle I think this proposal would be a great disservice to the individual investor, leaving us in the dark for one-half a year, with the time for informed decision making already passed.

Bud Beavers Citizen — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bud Beavers We need more accountability and transparency, not less

---

Buford D Jones The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Buford D Jones As an investor, I know that quarterly reporting vs semi annual reporting is better for me. In a world that is increasingly moving faster, access to information is vital. Please keep quarterly information. Thank you.

Calvin L Young Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Calvin L Young To me, less reporting means less information when needed. Do not change reporting requirement's to twice a year. I oppose the proposal wholeheartedly, and in it's entirety!!!

Campbell Pryde, President and CEO, XBRL US — Jun 24, 2026
June 24, 2026
Vanessa Countryman
Secretary
Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, N.E.
Washington, D.C. 20549-1090
Dear Ms. Countryman:
RE: Semiannual Reporting File Number S7-2026-15
We appreciate the opportunity to provide feedback to the Commission’s proposed rule on Semiannual Reporting.
XBRL US is a nonprofit data standards organization, with a mission to improve the efficiency and quality of reporting in the U.S. by promoting the adoption of business reporting standards. XBRL US is a jurisdiction of XBRL International, the nonprofit consortium responsible for developing and maintaining the technical specification for eXtensible Business Reporting Language (XBRL), a free and open data standard widely used around the world to report quantitative and qualitative information.

XBRL is not a product or service. It is an open, freely available standard that improves the transparency and accessibility of information by rendering it machine-readable. XBRL is technology-neutral. It represents the semantic data model and today it can be used with multiple technology formats including XML, JSON, CSV, and XHTML. XBRL is designed to adapt to technological advancements over time. Millions of public and private companies, banks, governments, and utilities report in XBRL to more than 130 regulators worldwide (see XBRL Project Directory).
While we support the Commission's aim of reducing regulatory burden, we do not see evidence supporting the theory that optional semiannual reporting would be an incentive for companies to go public and to remain public. The Commission's proposal suggests that the current disclosure regime of quarterly reporting is overly burdensome and that less frequent financial reporting would make the public markets more attractive.
As pointed out in a 2025 article1 from Better Markets, there were 7,000 public companies in 1998 compared to fewer than 4,000 today. Private market funding however, has more than doubled from 2019 to 2024, from $6.88 trillion to $14.24 trillion (compared to 54% growth in public market funding over the same period), according to Ocorian's Global Asset Monitor2. The Commission
1345 Avenue of the Americas
27th Floor
New York, NY 10105
Phone: (202) 448-1985
Fax: (866) 516-6923
1 Better Markets, The SEC is Killing IPOs, February 25, 2025: https://bettermarkets.org/wp-content/uploads/2025/02/SEC-is-
Killing-IPOs-Fact-Sheet-02.25.25-Final.pdf
2 Ocorian Global Asset Monitor: https://www.ocorian.com/knowledge-hub/insights/global-private-equity-assets-hit-record-
108-trillion-following-2022-dip proposal suggests that more limited private funding disclosure requirements may be, at least in part, the reason that companies are turning to alternative funding sources.
The Institutional Limited Partners Association (ILPA), an industry organization representing 600 member institutions that set practices and standards however, suggests that quarterly reporting of financial performance metrics by portfolio companies is common practice for private equity.
The ILPA published the Portfolio Company Metrics Template3 , described as offering a "best-in-class format for reporting details about the individual companies held by a limited partner's (LPs) fund investments" and template instructions note that it should be provided on a quarterly basis.
Furthermore, an article4 authored by investment banking firm Zachary Scott, notes private equity firms require detailed annual, quarterly, and monthly reporting, along with monthly budgets and long-term forecasts of financial performance, "Private equity owners have a desire to institutionalize management systems so they are repeatable, data-driven, and not reliant upon a single person. Because they are removed from everyday management, private equity firms rely on institutionalized financial reports and key performance indicators (KPIs) to understand how the business is performing."
This suggests that organizations opting for private equity markets rather than public, are not doing so because private equity firms ask for less information.
Companies may choose private market funding because of the greater confidentiality it affords, access to expertise which may be offered by private market investors, and often more flexibility as they are beholden to a limited pool of owners. An analysis by Better Markets notes the plethora of options for private financing including venture capital and private equity, as well as exemptions allowed by the SEC in programs such as Regulation Crowdfunding, Regulation A, and Regulation D. These options are free from the traditional registration and disclosure requirements of public offerings.

The SEC proposal suggests that the savings per company for transitioning to semiannual from quarterly is $198,000 per year although the Commission has provided no estimate of the cost to the company, its shareholders, and prospective investors for reducing its disclosure regime.
A 2026 CFA Institute survey5 of 2,500 analysts found:
● 62% oppose replacing quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting.
● 70% oppose granting issuers the flexibility to choose or change their reporting cadence.
Only 35% agree with semiannual versus quarterly reporting.
3 ILPA, Portfolio Company Metrics Template: https://ilpa.org/resources-tools/resource-library/portfolio-company-metrics-template/
4 Zachary Scott, PE Reporting Requirements: Burden or Benefit? https://zacharyscott.com/pe-reporting-requirements-burden-or-benefit/
5 CFA Institute, WHAT INVESTORS TELL US ABOUT QUARTERLY REPORTING WHY IT MATTERS AND WHY THEY SUPPORT IT IN AN ERA OF ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE, April 2026 : https://rpc.cfainstitute.org/sites/default/files/docs/research-reports/investor-perspectives-quarterly-reporting-2026.pdf

● 62% do not support a scaled approach for smaller companies.
● 69% disagree with allowing companies to change their reporting frequency.
The rationale behind retaining quarterly reporting cited in the survey results centered on the need for comparability and consistency across companies and industries. The study also pointed out that quarterly earnings releases are not a substitute for quarterly filings and pointed out the value of structured Form 10-Q filings. Earnings releases are viewed as complementary to quarterly filings as they serve a different purpose.
Concerns raised by respondents about semiannual reporting included lack of comparability, greater reliance on voluntary disclosures, heightened potential for insider trading, and unequal information access. Respondents disagreed with the premise that semiannual reporting would reduce “short-termism.”
Advocates for semiannual reporting often cite practices around the world where semiannual reporting has been adopted. The CFA Institute study points out, “By both number of exchanges and aggregate market capitalization, quarterly reporting remains the more common approach among the world’s largest capital markets, even when you exclude the US as the largest capital market. “
U.S. equity markets represent nearly half of global market capitalization (49.1% in 2024), according to the SIFMA Capital Markets Fact Book, which suggests a high degree of investor confidence in the accessibility and transparency of U.S. equities.
While efficiency and reporting burden reduction are important, the disclosure regime established and maintained by the SEC today is an important factor in the strength of U.S. markets compared to those in the rest of the world. We therefore disagree with the proposal which would give companies the flexibility to opt for semiannual over quarterly reporting.
Below are responses to individual questions posed in the proposed rule.
1. The proposed amendments would allow Exchange Act reporting companies to elect to file interim reports on a semiannual basis in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q. Should companies have this option, or should all companies continue to be required to file Form 10-Q? What types of companies are likely to elect the option to file semiannual reports? Are companies in certain industries more likely than those in other industries to elect to file semiannual reports?
We support maintaining the current cadence of quarterly reporting. While there are conflicting studies on the impact of transitioning to less frequent reporting, we believe the disruption to US capital markets would be significant.

Potential positives of a move to semiannual reporting that are cited in a Harvard Law School article6 include the potential for greater long-term focus, reduced regulation, potential alignment with non-US jurisdictions and with foreign private issuer reporting and registration requirements. Negatives pointed out in the same article include decreased transparency, quality, and availability of information; plus, the possibility that more frequent reporting (voluntarily) could lack the same level of uniformity as required semiannual reporting. This in turn could increase confusion among stakeholders and the potential for increased shareholder litigation.

Quarterly reporting benefits, as noted in the CFA Institute survey cited earlier, include comparability and consistency, equal information access, and less risk of insider trading. The survey results also dispute the theory that less frequent reporting would encourage greater management focus on long-term planning and strategies.

Results from a German study7 found that deregulation reverses beneficial regulatory effects and, on average, increases information asymmetry and decreases firm value. The study notes that this effect is stronger for “first-tier” (larger, more visible) stocks, highlighting the importance of quarterly reporting for these firms.

A study8 focused on the Vienna Stock Exchange found that firms that terminate quarterly reporting or substantially reduce the content of quarterly reports experience an economically significant reduction in liquidity, but not a deterioration in analyst forecast properties.

2. We are proposing amendments that would permit, but not require, all Exchange Act reporting companies that file Form 10-Q today to file semiannual reports. Should we instead require all companies to file semiannual reports? What would be the benefits and costs of such a mandatory approach? Would mandatory semiannual reporting, with the option to file quarterly reports, lead to more companies electing to forgo quarterly reporting?

Studies have shown that optional quarterly (with mandatory semiannual) reporting can result in a significant split in reporting cadence across the universe of reporting entities. A study9 from September 2025 by Goldman Sachs noted that “European companies have been roughly equally split between semi-annual and quarterly reporting frequencies. On the other hand, nearly all UK listed companies report semi-annually.”

6 Harvard Law School Forum on Corporate Governance: The End of Quarterly Reporting in the United States, October 5, 2025:
https://corpgov.law.harvard.edu/2025/10/05/the-end-of-quarterly-reporting-in-the-united-states/

7 CESIFO Working Papers: The Deregulation of Quarterly Reporting and Its Effects on Information Asymmetry and Firm Value,
July 2024: https://www.ifo.de/DocDL/cesifo1_wp9344.pdf

8 Taylor & Francis Online: The Consequences of Abandoning the Quarterly Reporting Mandate in the Prime Market Segment,
August 2023: https://www.tandfonline.com/doi/full/10.1080/09638180.2023.2239298?utm_source=chatgpt.com#d1e156

9 Seeking Alpha: Goldman analysis of European firms finds reporting frequency has no impact on valuations, September 20, 2025: https://seekingalpha.com/news/4496798-goldman-analysis-of-european-firms-finds-reporting-frequency-has-no-impact-on-valuations

While we disagree with semiannual reporting versus quarterly, giving companies the option to choose is likely to result in different cadences across companies, causing confusion and making analysis more difficult.

3. Our proposal would permit semiannual reports for all Exchange Act reporting companies that file Form 10-Q today, regardless of filer status, revenues, market capitalization, or other criteria.

Should the option for semiannual reporting be available only for Exchange Act reporting companies that satisfy certain criteria? If so, what criteria should be imposed and why? For example, should only emerging growth companies or smaller reporting companies be allowed to report semiannually? Should only companies below alternative quantitative or monetary thresholds be allowed to report semiannually? Should the Commission consider a pilot program to permit optional semiannual reporting for a subset of reporting companies and, if so, what would be the benefits of such a pilot program? What types of companies should be included in the pilot program?
We support uniform reporting cadence across all companies, regardless of size or industry. Our position is in line with the results of the CFA Institute survey which found that most analysts (62%) believe in uniform reporting across all entities.
6. If adopted, would semiannual reporting have an impact on investors' ability to compare same-company performance over time? Why or why not?
Comparability across companies will likely be impaired, particularly in the short term as companies consider transitioning to a different cadence of reporting.
7. What effect would our proposal have on investors' ability to compare the relative peer company financial performance of a quarterly filer to a semiannual filer? For example, can an investor reasonably compare a quarterly filer to a semiannual filer where the companies have the same fiscal year and the comparison is sought to be made in the second quarter (when first quarter information that would be subsumed in the semiannual filer's semiannual report on Form 10-S is not yet available) or made in the fourth quarter (when third quarter information that would be subsumed in the semiannual filer's annual report on Form 10-K is not yet available)?
Analyzing companies with mismatched reporting cadence will likely require standardizing the timeframe by aggregating data into semiannual or annual figures.
10. Our proposal would require Exchange Act reporting companies that elect to file semiannual reports to continue with that interim reporting frequency for the rest of the fiscal year in which the election was made. Therefore, companies would not be allowed to file a semiannual report on Form 10-S for the first six months of a fiscal year and then file a quarterly report for the third quarter for that fiscal year. Likewise, companies would not be allowed to file a quarterly report on Form 10-Q for the first quarter of a fiscal year, file a semiannual report on Form 10-S for the first six months for that fiscal year, and not file a quarterly report on Form 10-Q for the third fiscal quarter. Would this proposed approach help avoid potential confusion that could be caused by changes in interim reporting frequency during a fiscal year? Is it necessary to add any language to the proposed rules to make more explicit the requirement to maintain the selected frequency for the full fiscal year? Rather than the proposed approach, should we allow: (1) semiannual filers and quarterly filers to make a change in interim reporting frequency during the fiscal year, or (2) only semiannual filers to switch to filing quarterly reports during the fiscal year? Should issuers that elect semiannual reporting be required to commit to that disclosure frequency for a certain period of time? Why or why not?

While we disagree with the proposed move to semiannual reporting, if the proposal moves forward, companies should not be allowed to switch the cadence of reporting midway through the year. This could result in companies choosing to report when they have good news and not reporting when they have bad news. Continuity is important to the capital markets ecosystem.
We suggest that the Commission consider requiring companies to file a Form 8-K or provide some kind of more prominent alert when making a change to their reporting cadence. Transitioning to quarterly or semiannual frequency will be a significant decision for companies and will likely be triggered by an event, for example, the need to refinance or enter a new credit agreement which could lead companies to report more frequently to satisfy lenders.
13. We are proposing a new Form 10-S for companies that elect to file semiannual reports. Is the proposed new form needed? Should there be one form for all interim reports, regardless of whether they are for a fiscal quarter or a semiannual period? If so, why?

While again, we disagree with a move to semiannual reporting, if the proposal moves forward, providing a separate form for issuers choosing to file on a semi-annual basis would give investors the ability to easily identify those companies.

14. Proposed Form 10-S would mandate the same narrative and financial information as Form 10-Q, albeit for semiannual periods rather than quarterly periods. Should Form 10-S require narrative or financial information that differs from what is required in Form 10-Q? If so, please specify what information should be different and why this information is or is not needed in Form 10-S. Are there any disclosure items, such as mine safety violations, in proposed Form 10-S that should be required instead to be disclosed in other forms, such as Form 10-K, Form 8-K, or Form SD?

Disclosures required under 10-Q should also be included under 10-S.

15. As an alternative to the proposal for optional semiannual reporting, should we instead revise the disclosure requirements of Form 10-Q to reduce the burden on reporting companies of filing this form, such as amending the current rules for the required interim financial statement review by an independent public accountant, XBRL data tagging, MD&A, information about unregistered sales of registrant securities pursuant to 17 CFR 229.701 (Item 701 of Regulation S-K), or year-to-date comparisons involving financial statements and MD&A? How should these requirements, or any other requirements of Form 10-Q, be revised? What aspects of Form 10-Q's current reporting framework are most burdensome for reporting companies?

We urge the Commission to retain XBRL preparation of reported data. XBRL tagging is a standard part of the disclosure process and in most companies, is embedded in reporting requirements through disclosure management tools used by issuers to prepare and submit their regulatory filing. Eliminating XBRL tagging from disclosure management reporting would have minimal cost reduction, if any, for filers.

Furthermore, we disagree with the cost estimates included in the rule proposal from a NASDAQ study which states that the median XBRL tagging cost is $26,000 adjusted for inflation, with a high of $446,200. The NASDAQ study was based on 183 individuals at public companies self-reporting what they believed to be their annual cost for XBRL preparation. A study conducted by the AICPA10 which was based on the actual annual reported cost of XBRL preparation for more than 1,000 small reporting companies found that the median price was $4,500 for the year. Today, XBRL preparation is bundled into disclosure management applications which are used by the majority of public companies for reporting.

Furthermore, XBRL reported SEC data from public companies and investment management companies is a robust and powerful resource for the plethora of AI tools in active use today. AI is most efficient (faster, less resource intensive, more consistently accurate) when it uses data in structured format. With AI, SEC regulators can create automated rules that can be run against SEC corporate filings in structured format to identify anomalies and situations where company financials are not in compliance or where they trigger potential problems. Company disclosures can be reviewed more broadly to identify weaknesses. Queries can be run more efficiently against structured data to glean insights.

AI used with corporate XBRL formatted data is a powerful addition to the regulator toolkit. Validation can be automatically, inexpensively conducted against structured company financials to identify issues such as incomplete or missing disclosures, or errors in how accounting standards were applied. Automation allows more robust analysis. Reviewing 5,000 companies can be conducted as quickly and efficiently as analyzing a single company on a manual basis. While today, access to AI powered tools is inexpensive as offerings are heavily subsidized to encourage widespread use of AI, the cost of these tools has already begun to increase and is likely to rise substantially as investors seek to recoup their investments. In the near future, efficiency in the use of AI will be critical to reducing the electricity and infrastructure costs that come with these tools. Sourcing structured, standardized data will be a crucial ingredient for effective, efficient AI to keep regulatory costs low.

The Commission should also consider the fact that the Financial Data Transparency Act (FDTA) will require U.S. regulators including the SEC, to collect more data (not less) in structured, standardized format, using standards associated with a taxonomy/ontology.
10 AICPA: XBRL Cost Study reveals lower than expected filing costs: https://www.aicpa-cima.com/professional-insights/download/xbrl-cost-study-reveals-lower-than-expected-filing-costs

In the age of AI and when the U.S. government, through legislation like the FDTA, are quickly recognizing the need for structured, standardized regulatory data, any pullback in XBRL reporting would be imprudent.
The Commission should instead, consider other ways to streamline the 10-Q to make its preparation more efficient as pointed out in a comment letter submitted by Columbia Business School11 which notes, “The right reform is to make the quarterly report shorter, more decision-relevant, and more structured — not to make it less frequent.”
The IPO process itself could be more standardized and streamlined, which would make it easier for companies to conduct an initial offering and to maintain it going forward.
16. What impact would the flexibility to file semiannual reports on Form 10-S, instead of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q, have on a private company’s decision to become an Exchange Act reporting company? Would more companies choose to go public under the proposed flexible approach to interim reporting? What impact would the proposed flexible approach have on existing Exchange Act reporting companies’ desire to remain public companies?
As noted earlier, we do not believe that giving companies the flexibility to report semiannually rather than quarterly will significantly impact their decision on whether to access the public markets versus private markets. Reporting frequency is similar between PE versus public markets; if anything, PE investors demand more frequent reporting. The potential savings to public companies is minimal compared to the costs to U.S. capital markets which will impact not only investors but issuers as well.
22. Would the option for semiannual reporting result in an overall reduction in material information for investors? Or would other regulatory requirements, such as Form 8-K filing requirements and Regulation FD, elicit sufficient information to offset the less-frequent interim reports and address any investor protection concerns? Would market forces or demands on a company’s business—such as contractual obligations, investor expectations, and potential for shareholder activism—encourage semiannual filers to: (1) voluntarily disclose more information than required, (2) disclose information more frequently than is required, or (3) opt not to become semiannual filers at all?
We believe that the reduction in quarterly reported financials would reduce material information for investors. Only investors can decide what is material information about a company, therefore they should have all the facts at their disposal as soon as the data is available.
30. Should we require the second semiannual period financial information (for semiannual filers) or the fourth quarter financial information (for quarterly filers) to be included in Form 10-K so investors do not need to back out this information if companies do not voluntarily provide it? Would having a longer period (six months for semiannual reports versus three months for quarterly reports) make it more difficult for investors to back out this information? Relatedly, should we require semiannual filers to break out financial statement information for the six-month period covered by Form 10-S into two three-month periods and provide similarly broken-out three-month information for the fiscal year covered by Form 10-K?
11 Columbia Business School, June 3, 2026: https://www.sec.gov/comments/S7-2026-15/s7202615-799759-2420026.pdf

If quarterly financials are required to be provided, reports should be published on a quarterly basis rather than waiting to report until two periods are available.
50. What compliance cost savings would be realized by companies that would elect the proposed semiannual reporting option? Please provide any data regarding the cost of preparing quarterly reports, including employee and director time, legal counsel fees, external accounting advice or independent public accountant review fees, costs for XBRL data tagging, and other costs associated with filing Form 10-Q. To what extent would the option to file one semiannual report, rather than two quarterly reports for the same period, result in lower costs, such as independent public accountant review fees? Would semiannual filers' audit fees paid—in connection with an annual audit of their financial statements or management's assessment of the effectiveness of internal control over financial reporting—be materially different in any way compared to the fees that would have been paid if the same company were a quarterly filer?

There are likely to be some savings when reporting two times per year rather than four times, but cost and resources will not be reduced by half. There are fixed costs when licensing or purchasing software applications and there is also a learning curve for staff tasked with reporting. XBRL tagging costs today are mostly embedded in reporting software applications like disclosure management tools, therefore the XBRL costs are unlikely to be reduced by reducing reporting frequency.
Furthermore, while reporting burden may be lowered to some extent, reducing the frequency of reporting will require reporting managers to climb a steeper learning curve each time they are required to report.
XBRL US appreciates the opportunity to provide feedback on this proposal and remains at FDIC's disposal to further discuss and support your work. Do not hesitate to engage us in your discussions and questions related to standards. I can be reached at Campbell.Pryde@xbrl.us or (917) 582-6159.
Sincerely,
Campbell Pryde
President and CEO, XBRL US

Capt Luke Warfield — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Capt Luke Warfield Adding darkness to the system is a formula for much evil to occur. Why is this even an issue? I expect many may lose their life savings!

Carlo Coronato — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carlo Coronato This is wrong we need 4 reports per year to have a clear view

---

Carmen Valdes — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carmen Valdes My investments are made to finance my eventual retirement. As such, it is vital that I stay informed, in a timely manner, regarding the companies in which I have invested. It would be a grave mistake to allow public-company reports to be reduced from the current four times a year to just two. Without quarterly reports, investors will be left in the dark regarding vital information concerning the companies in which they invest. Investors would not be able to make informed decisions pertaining to their investments, thus eliminating opportunities to divert their investments before potentially losing a substantial amount of funds. I respectfully ask that you do not allow this change to occur and keep company reports issued on a quarterly basis.

CAROL L COLOMBO Private Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: CAROL L COLOMBO Any good business/management team looks at their own monthly and quarterly reports, and we investors rely on that information to make informed investment decisions. Semi-annual reporting has no benefits while adding to risk. The frauds of the past are why these reporting and attestation requirements exist and by weakening these safeguards, you weaken our entire investment system.

Carolyn Cagle retired Banking City Executive — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carolyn Cagle Quarterly reporting is very important to keep investors informed and to assure more accountability in a timely manner. Carolyn Cagle Retired Banking City Executive

---

Cary Hitsman — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cary Hitsman I feel it is a mistake to allow publicly traded companies to reduce their financial reporting from 4 times a year to twice a year. It is not in the best interest of the public who rely on current information when making decision with their investing dollars.

Catherine Bourke — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Bourke Quarterly reports should not be reduced to bi-yearly.

Cathy Hussung — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cathy Hussung Quarterly reports are an important way to get information out to the public. Also helps keep corporations and individuals honest.

Cedric Reuter — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cedric Reuter I believe that reducing the frequency of reporting is a mistake and disservice to shareholders without a measurable benefit significant enough to justify it. Please keep reporting regulations in place. Thank you.

Charles — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles At 6 months between reports one must realize conjecture and rumors will take hold . I would like it to be every 4 months as that would calm investors and be a chance to see that companies are not up to any chicanery . And as always markets go up and they will go down . That 6 months window on a down time frame will not be well received. Slow and steady on changing helps everyone long term ,go like gang busters and you may not like the outcome. Thank you for reading this, Charles Taylor

---

Charles D. Hawk None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles D. Hawk Stand firm for oversight and accountability.

Charles Dixon — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Dixon Semiannual reporting should NOT replace quarterly reporting. As an investor and holder of shares in companies, I should be informed regularly of the state of the company. Semiannual reporting is not sufficient nor timely enough. Quarertly reporting ensures that the directors of the company 'keep watch' on the state of the company and not tempted to 'let things slide' until it is too late to address issues. The question of saving reporting costs is irrelevent in view of the amount of cost incurred compared to the cost of the damage done by reduced reporting. Transparencey, and regular timely reporting is essential for a healthy business.

Charles Ellul CFP — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Ellul quarterly reports is a must

---

Charles Hall — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Hall Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Keep them honest!

CHARLES HUBERT Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: CHARLES HUBERT Financial reporting by public companies is a necessary requirement. I have been investing for over 50 years and rely on the quarterly financial information to determine my investment decisions. Additionally, I believe that having to submit quarterly financial information helps to keep companies honest. Please do not change the current reporting frequency. Thank you.

Charles Luevano — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Luevano To whom it may concern. As an investor, quarterly filings are of paramount importance to ensure investors are aware of the risks and benefits of the company and their stock. Removing these regulations is foolhardy at the minimum as many companies are heavily held accountable by these regulations. I humbly request that we DO NOT go to a semiannual reporting. Please retain the quarterly reports!! Thank you.

Charles Roberson The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Roberson I do not agree with the idea of companies reporting only 2 time per year. As a stock holder I deserve to see results more often. Thanks!

---

charles tatum Bus. Analyst/IT Professional — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: charles tatum I think 2 times a year is too little, a lot can happen in 6 months. 3 times a year seems more reasonable for investors and cost effective as well. Large to med companies would have more time to view and evaluate changes. Also, they have more time to alter their direction. 90 days should be for smaller companies which are more susceptible to the volatility in the economy quicker and at lower levels. This could give large/med companies business data to use to in Business Intelligence (BI) forecasting/ projections, validation.

Charles Waxlax — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Waxlax Re: File No. S7-2026-15, Semiannual Reporting I am an individual investor, and I am writing to oppose this proposal. Quarterly reporting is one of the few moments when retail investors and institutions see the same financial picture at the same time. Cut it in half and you widen the gap. Institutions have analyst access, paid data, and direct lines to management. Most of us have the 10-Q. Remove two of those filings a year and you hand the already-informed an even bigger edge. That runs against this agency's core job of protecting ordinary investors. I understand the proposal is optional. That does not make it harmless. It splits the market into companies that report fully and companies that do not, which makes comparison harder for the people with the fewest resources to do that work. And every company that elects it normalizes less disclosure as the default. The business does not slow down between reports. Products ship, customers come and go, margins move, debt gets taken on. Under semiannual reporting, owners simply learn about all of it less often. Less information does not remove uncertainty. It stores it up. When the next report lands, the surprises are bigger and the price swings sharper, and the investors least able to absorb that volatility are the ones holding small positions. The cost savings are modest and they land on company balance sheets. The cost of cutting interim reporting in half lands on millions of dispersed owners who cannot negotiate for more. That is a bad trade. If short-term pressure is the worry, this does not solve it. Earnings releases, guidance, and analyst noise all continue. The proposal strips out the reviewed financial detail while leaving the noise in place. That makes investors less informed, not more patient. Please keep quarterly reporting as the standard for public companies. Ownership means the right to regular, transparent information about the business you own. Respectfully submitted, Charles Waxlax

---

Cheng Alvin Investment Management — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cheng Alvin Whereas it is seldom that corporate executives provide opportunities for Individual Investors to have direct access to discuss company performance and outlook, the reduction in corporate reports by way of regular reporting will further reduce the necessary information flow so that there will be more shocks and uncertainties suffered by the investors.

Cheryl Beckwith AARP — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Beckwith Please keep the reporting on a quarterly basis.

Chris Daniels — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Daniels Reducing reporting two twice a year would be a mistake. Information is knowledge, knowledge is power.

---

chris felstead company owner — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: chris felstead To whom it may concern. As an investor in US & European stocks i require the greatest transparancy when making decisions. Reducing quartley reporting would make me think twice before investing in US companies.

Chris Fry — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Fry A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that's a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. Please do not make this change!

Chris Green Democrat — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Green I believe it would be a mistake to move away from the quarterly reporting system currently in place. Having less information about companies I invest in provided less frequently will degrade my ability to be an informed investor. Please don't change the current system.

Chris Grippo Individual Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Grippo I believe it is a bad idea to allow public companies to only report twice a year. I understand that this is to encourage long term thinking but 6 months between reports encourages fraud and invisibility. Price discovery will only take longer if earnings are only reported twice a year and as an individual investor with ownership in the company I should be able to have visibility into what is going on at least on a quarterly basis.

Chris Renninger — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Renninger I am completely opposed to a reduction in reporting requirements. In an age when information and opinion moves at the speed of light, we should require greater accountability and transparency from our leaders and business executives.

Rumor, fear, and unbridled enthusiasm will have greater impact on stock markets than they do now when there is less bona fide information available upon which to judge whether to buy or sell stock in any company. Uncertainty leads to volatility, and volatility reduces confidence in both individual companies and the markets on which they are traded. My opinion is that information serves to stabilize markets as a whole, reduce volatility, and increase investor confidence that their retirement funds are safe in the long term. Quarterly reporting should remain as a minimal interval.

Chris Tilley — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Tilley Please keep the public company reporting rules as quarterly. 6 months is way too long and does not allow investors adequate information for making and monitoring investments. It also allows way too much time for insiders to buy or sell stock prior to good or bad news before that information is available to the public. Thank you.

Chris warren — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris warren Motley Fool Community Repainding to a really damaging idea of reducing recording. All this will do is increase the ability to hide things in the age of AI. It should be very easy to do reporting especially going forward brings transparency to investors and they deserve that.

Chris Wilber NCAA Coach — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Wilber Investors deserve more transparency in reporting company updates and it should be in a more frequent interval.

Christie McNickle Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christie McNickle The proposal now on the table will allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that’s a mistake. We need more transparency, not less. Four times per year should be the minimum. Please do not drop the minimum below this. Thank you.

Christine — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine It is difficult to take arguments against quarterly reporting at face value when the same government entities are simultaneously promoting data centers, surveillance technologies, and flock cameras on the grounds that more data is essential for planning, management, and public safety. If data is valuable enough to justify expanding collection and monitoring systems, then public access to government performance data should be treated as equally important. Reducing reporting requirements does not increase transparency or accountability; it reduces the public's ability to evaluate government actions and outcomes. From my perspective, this is less about efficiency and more about control over who has access to information. The inconsistency is apparent, and many citizens recognize the hypocrisy. If you want to keep your seat, maintain quarterly reporting. Administrations come and go, but the American people are forever. Never forget.

Christopher Brown Registered Investment Advisor w/ CFA, CFP — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Brown Frankly it is a terrible idea to reduce audited public disclosures from quarterly to semi-annually. Currently, big money professional investors have a significant information advantage over small individual, investors with respect to information. Even myself with over 25 years of investing experience and running a small wealth management firm has a significant disadvantage to large investors that can pick up the phone and get access to analysts and management at will. I understand there is a small marginal cost to the increased disclosure. However the trade off would not be close to being worth it and would significantly harm individual investors.

Christopher Daniel Burke Accountant — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Daniel Burke It's a mistake to encourage any publicly traded organization to report its earnings fifty percent less frequently. Would we likewise encourage people to report legal citizenship fifty percent less frequently, or likewise encourage violent crimes to be reported by municipalities fifty percent less frequently? It's outrageous to consider that legislation like this is being considered as law. I'm an accountant, a military veteran, and an investor who can only make sound decisions with solid information and a serious review of a businesses' prospectus, to include analysis of past performance. When you shy away from information and facts, it tips the balance of power squarely towards a business and well away from investors. Sadly, that is precisely the effect the ambassadors of this legislation are backing.

Christopher Evans Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Evans I'm writing in opposition to the proposal to allow publicly traded companies to reduce the frequency of their financial reporting. This proposal would decrease transparency for individual investors and would also result in more Americans being less informed about public traded companies. This proposal is not good for our democracy, our economy, or our financial systems and I encourage that the SEC keep current reporting requirements as is for all publicly traded companies.

Christopher Muirhead — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Muirhead I support the SEC’s proposal to reduce annual reporting from four times a year to two. It would cut compliance costs by around two hundred thousand dollars per year, ease the short-term pressure on management, and give companies useful flexibility. Investors would still get plenty of updates through earnings calls and 8-K filings, so I don’t see a big transparency problem. Smaller companies in particular would benefit from this change.

Christopher Raphael Christhemacguy Consulting Services — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Raphael Please leave the due diligence reporting at every three months. We learned about reliance on “self monitoring” years ago. That didn’t work then and won’t work now. Leave the existing requirements in place.

---

chuck bosomworth — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: chuck bosomworth I am opposed to the change to semi annual reporting as it weakens my ability as an investor to monitor company plans, forecasts and performance for those companies I'm a part owner of. I do not buy the purported savings as being material to a publicly held company This is especially true as technology eases the burden significantly If the leaders of these businesses don't continue to assemble the information currently presented quarterly, they are not doing the job shareholders expect and should be replaced. Presenting it is minimal incremental effort

---

Claude Taylor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Claude Taylor Your proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake! Investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Claudia Costello None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Claudia Costello It is important to have as much transparency as possible in investing. Quarterly reporting is important. I am opposed to changing to twice a year reporting. This only benefits the company's management not the shareholders or investors.

Clayton Scott Greer (Individual) Bank President and CPA — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clayton Scott Greer (Individual) I oppose reducing the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. It is doubtful this change would generate any meaningful efficiencies but it will reduce transparency to investors.

Clifton Hosmer The motley fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clifton Hosmer This is not a good idea at all as a shareholder of quite a few companies I need quarterly reports to make sure my investments are doing well and if they aren't I need accountability and the ability to make informed decisions, possibly to exit a position or reduce the size of it, or maybe the company did well and I would like to take profits and pay taxes on those profits, I cannot do that as often if I don't have the quarterly report. Semi annual reporting actually takes away from possible tax revenue and opens the door to not only myself but other investors using losses to offset gains as semi annual reporting will only cause more extreme swings in the market allowing for people to take advantage of the loophole that allows using losses to reduce tax liability on gains. How the IRS hasn't actually complained and convinced the sec to keep quarterly reporting in place blows my mind

---

Colin Alistair Earl Motley fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Colin Alistair Earl Keep reporting annually

---

Colin Buckley — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Colin Buckley I invest my own money in companies. Reducing the reporting requirement to twice / annum from four / annum is wrong. It is these reports that give me information into how the company is operating. Do not reduce the reporting requirement!!!

Colin McWilliams — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Colin McWilliams Affiliation: Jun. 24, 2026 Imagine waking up to find that the value of your retirement savings has shifted dramatically—and you have no clear explanation why for months. That's the reality this proposal risks creating for ordinary investors. I oppose it because it creates a two-tiered market: one for insiders and institutions who already have access to management, analysts, and private briefings, and another for ordinary investors who depend on public disclosures to understand what they own.

The argument that quarterly reporting is somehow an unnecessary burden strikes me as backwards. Public companies are public because they accept capital from the public. In exchange, they owe the public timely transparency. That is not red tape; it is part of the social contract of public markets.

Six months is an eternity in modern business. Entire product cycles can fail. Debt can accumulate. Major customers can disappear. Litigation can emerge. Management can make strategic mistakes that materially affect shareholder value. Under this proposal, investors could be left in the dark for half a year while those closest to the company continue to possess a far more complete picture.

Supporters describe the change as voluntary, but market incentives rarely work that way. Once a critical mass of large companies adopts semi-annual reporting, pressure will build for others to follow. What begins as an option tends to become the new expectation. We've seen that movie before.

History provides ample warning. Financial scandals thrive in environments where information is delayed, obscured, or difficult to verify. Quarterly reporting does not eliminate fraud, but it narrows the window in which misconduct can remain hidden. Less frequent disclosure moves us in the wrong direction.

And I keep coming back to a simple question: who is actually asking for less transparency?

I don't know many ordinary investors who wake up in the morning wishing they had less information about the companies they own. The people pushing for this change are generally the people who already have the most access, the most resources, and the most ways to understand what's happening behind the scenes.

We're told the benefit is lower compliance costs. Fine. But public companies still have to keep their books. They still have to report to their boards. They still have to track performance internally. The savings seem relatively modest, while the reduction in transparency is very real.

Meanwhile, the costs don't fall on executives. They fall on retirees, workers with 401ks, parents saving for college, and ordinary investors trying to make informed decisions. That's a trade I'm not eager to make.

If anything, modern markets should be moving toward more transparency, not less. Information is what allows markets to function. Information is what helps investors price risk. Information is what helps keep management accountable.

Maybe there's a case for simplifying certain reporting requirements. Maybe there are ways to reduce compliance costs without reducing visibility. But simply telling the public less, and less often, feels like the wrong answer.

Public markets work because investors trust that material information will eventually be disclosed and disclosed in a timely manner. Weakening that standard doesn't strengthen markets. It weakens them.

Sunlight remains one of the cheapest and most effective forms of oversight ever invented. I'm not convinced we should be getting less of it.

Thanks,

Colin McWilliams
Bozeman, MT

Constantin B. — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Constantin B. I am against allowing companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two.

Cornela Koch — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cornela Koch I strongly disagree with the proposal to reduce public reporting from 4 to 2x annually. Shareholders need ongoin transparency to judge the performance odf a public company. Especially in the age of AI with blockbuster IPOs soon to join mega ETFs, quarterly reporting is a must for proper risk assessment.

Corrie Minteer — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Corrie Minteer At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Craig Gaskill The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Gaskill Please keep the quarterly reporting. I depend on that for my investing. Reducing the amount of information available will make investing more risky and in the age of AI I see there is probably little cost savings potential.

Cristie L Emrath The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cristie L Emrath Reducing the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is short-sighted and foolish. Any responsible owner/investor is going to be desirous of receiving regular and timely updates on his/her business and/or investment. Anything less than regular, quarterly updates will, at the very least, make you (the company) look like a charlatan or a thief. Not a good look!!

Cullen Black — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cullen Black The incremental benefit reduced reporting responsibility brings to companies is marginal at best. The loss of transparency to owners and potential investors, especially those non-insiders is tremendous. Please don't move forward with this proposal.

Curt Caldwell — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Curt Caldwell I do not support the semi annual reporting. As a shareholder I expect to receive timely updates from the companies I am investing in, along with companies I am considering investing in. Moving to every 6 months a lot can change which we as investors would not be informed. This would help the people in the know and would promote greater insider trading issues.

Cyndi Burkle Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cyndi Burkle Do not change the quarterly report to twice a year. The quarterly reports allow personal decisions on investments quicker when knowing how the company is responding to market changes.

D chapman Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D chapman investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Do not change the rules to require less reporting.

D G — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D G This is a betrayal of all investors - especially in the light of various high profile corruption cases being aired currently. With so much IT available to save time/ cost, there is no excuse for anything other than up to date reporting.

D Gary Nix Concerned stockholder — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D Gary Nix At a time when information is something people crave in all phases of life, I find it strange that this proposal has come forth. We are in the Information Age and we want it especially from the companies we own stock in. Reducing the number of reports gives less power to the common person and more to the insiders. Please don't reduce the number of required reports of publically owned companies.

D. Burnell — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D. Burnell Motley Fool community

---

Damian Pickup-Bowker — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Damian Pickup-Bowker Reducing the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake. We need more information, not less and in an age of AI tool, the reports are easier prepare now than they ever have been.

Dana 3 — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dana 3 The quarterly reporting law was created for a reason and it is unacceptable to change it as the players are still the same. Quarterly reporting is vital to keeping Wall Street on the street and arrow.

Dana Lampert The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dana Lampert I think the public-company reports should stay at four times a year not be reduced to two. It's easier to keep track of the financials on a quarterly basis. Thank you,

---

Dana renee Military spouse — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dana renee Please don't change the 3 month reporting rule. I co-parent my disabled children with my military spouse. Our kids are almost grown, but I will likely need to stay and take care of our oldest indefinitely. We have just recently reached the point where we can invest in order to start saving for retirement. Without transparency every 3 months to check in on how companies are doing, it will make it harder for us to protect what little bit of income we can spare to put towards retirement. 6-month corporate check-ins are just too long in between to not know what's going on with the companies we are investing in. I urge the SEC to not change the reporting period from 3 months. I feel that that would negatively impact our faith in institutionalized companies.

Dane M — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dane M Do not give the top 1% another unfair advantage against us by passing this law for them. As a stock trader (not insider trader) quarterly reports help us to make decisions on our investments. We should be talking about making these companies report more, if anything. It's plain to see who this 6 month reporting would benefit, and it isn't the bottom 99% of american citizens who's taxes pay for the SEC to operate and serve OUR interests.

Daniel — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Giving companies the choice to reduce annual reports is negative to all investors, reducing transparency and even further reducing the information that individual traders have access to, therefore giving an even bigger edge to institutional investors. Investing is ownership and therefore reporting and other financial information should be public to the average person so they can make informed investment decisions.

Daniel Boyd — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Boyd more reports, not fewer. more transparency, not less. evil hateth the light

---

Daniel Cooke — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Cooke Reducing public company reporting from four to two times per year is a dangerous and frankly stupid idea. Has the SEC forgotten that shareholders are the OWNERS of a company?? Owners absolutely need to know the financial and business details of their company on a quarterly basis. Most individual investors monitor the businesses they own more frequently than that. Perhaps this President's administration prefers ignorance but Do Not force it on investors.

Daniel Gavrilescu — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Gavrilescu Would be useful and investor friendly if for transparency sake to make available and advertise the rationale behind the proposed changes supported by validated studies and trusted sources as an accesibile reference for anyone who wants to validate it. thanx for your attention.

Daniel Gray — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Gray Please don't reduce the number of reports from four to two.

Daniel Kelsh — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Kelsh The idea that owners of a company i.e. shareholders would only get bi-annual updates is ridiculous. There does not seem a reasonable argument to do so. The cost of preparing and disseminating quarterly filings continues to shrink with the evolution of tech tools each quarter. Please maintain quarterly filings at a minimum.

Daniel M Gantenbein Individual Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel M Gantenbein A fair playing field with timely, pertinent disclosure gives the retail investor a fighting chance to make informed decisions. Access of corporate management through private channels, conferences, and roadshows gives institutional Investors many advantages. Semiannual reporting will only worsen this asymmetrical information disadvantage for retail investors. I support and value Market efficiency and Valuation accountability. Quarterly rather then semiannual reporting reduces speculation and reduces and smoothes volatility.

Daniel Rodriguez — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Rodriguez Waiting six months to get important financial reporting from companies in which one has hundreds of thousands invested is far too long for me.

Daniel Troy — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Troy I do not support a reduction in information provided to investors. People owning shares in a company have a right to regular updates and disclosures from the firms they invest in. Please maintain quarterly reporting requirements.

Daniel W Dipert Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel W Dipert Public companies must file reports four times per year. Do not change it to twice per year. I am a retired investor living off my earnings and changing the four times per year requirement is unacceptable.

Daphne Mathias The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daphne Mathias I understand reducing costs, but reducing visibility does not seem to be the answer. Perhaps companies can use AI to generate the bulk of their reporting requirements. In any event, I'd rather not allow companies more time to surprise me with bad news.

Darrell Feldbusch - — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darrell Feldbusch Quarterly report is the bedrock of a good and heathy monetary system that rewards the good and faithful businesses. Less reporting will encourage deceit and deception not worthy of any investment.

Darrie Garth — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darrie Garth I would like to know how the companies I invest in are performing quarterly not twice a year.

David aberkowitz — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David aberkowitz Please continue to require publicly traded companies to report at least four times a year. Two times is not sufficient transparency and would make it unfair and difficult to know what a company I am invested in is doing.

David Breed — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Breed This proposed change would put individual investors at a severe disadvantage.

David C Smith The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David C Smith We need more transparancy from companies not less. Reporting twice a year will increase uncertainty in the market. Reporting four times, as it is now, seems reasonable.

David Forrest — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Forrest Strongly oppose this bill due because it reduces visibility into a company's financial condition and makes it easier to hide things from the company's investors. The idea that this introduces an unnecessary or unfair burden on companies is nonsense. They already do internal reporting and that won't stop. CEO's won't want to know how their business is doing less often than they do now. The idea that this is preventing companies from coming public is also nonsense. If you don't have the financial wherewhithall to do simple reporting to the SEC and your investors, you don't have a strong enough business to be participating in the public markets. Full stop.

David Herzweig — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Herzweig Affiliation: Jun. 24, 2026 The UK ran this exact experiment — mandatory quarterly from 2007, dropped in 2014. Researchers tracked CapEx, R&D, and property/equipment before and after; reporting frequency had no material impact on corporate investment. Companies that stopped reporting quarterly didn't invest more. (The Motley Fool) The remedy doesn't fix the diagnosed problem.

Quarterly reporting is associated with higher analyst coverage, greater liquidity, more transparent information, and lower cost of capital; when releases become less frequent, information asymmetry and insider-trading risk rise. (CFA Institute) Semiannual roughly doubles the blackout between insiders and ordinary shareholders.

Short-term pressure comes from the quarterly guidance/beat-or-miss game, not the 10-Q itself. The LTSE petition conflates the two and doesn't explain how extending the reporting period to six months alters guidance pressure — and indicates guidance would continue. (CFA Institute) You can attack short-termism directly without blinding investors.
Large caps will keep quarterly because their investors require it and their cost of capital depends on it. (Leanrs) The firms most likely to go dark are smaller and less-followed — exactly where timely information matters most. Opting out becomes a negative signal, and the savings accrue to issuers whose investors can least absorb the opacity.

David Johnson Retail Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Johnson I am opposed to allowing a reduction in reporting requirements. It must remain at four times per year. As a retail investor, retired, 70% of our life savings are invested in the stock market. Reducing reporting requirements gives us less opportunity to react to negative or impactful situations thus placing even more risk on these valuable savings. The argument that reporting takes a lot of work and time is grossly in opposition to the concept of AI making our lives more informed. Conceptually AI, which we are investing in worldwide, should be opening up avenues for companies to be reporting more frequently. Less reporting translates to less oversight and the possibility for more negative manipulation. There is too much risk for any agency involved to consider a reduction.

David Kayser — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Kayser I think this change will hurt individual investors/owners. Would any business reduce the frequency of reports in half from their management. With the proliferation of AI, associated costs with reporting quarterly should decrease. Please leave the requirement to report quarterly in place.

David King — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David King I think that reporting 4 times per year and not onerous - especially in light of technology advancements. As an oner in these companies, I would not like to see the amount of information on which I make decisions to be both cut in half and less timely.

DAVID KUNKEL MOTLEY FOOL COMMUNITY — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: DAVID KUNKEL LESS INFORMATION HELPS NO ONE

David L. Sieving The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David L. Sieving I'm responding to an advocacy email from The Motley Fool, who are of the opinion that semiannual public company reporting is inadequate for keeping investors constructively informed. Based on the rate at which modern markets move in response to political developments and economic shifts, I must say I agree with this opinion.

David Laino — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Laino As a private, individual investor in the stock market, I rely on information provided by individual companies to guide my investment decisions. Less information yields more uncertainty, and as such I am AGAINST this proposal to reduce the required frequency of public reporting. Reporting to the public is a responsibility of a public company. It not only is a disservice to investors to reduce the frequency of reporting, but it will only serve to reduce investments as the market abhors uncertainty. Please choose to keep investors better informed through quarterly reports.

David Meldrum The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Meldrum We need continued transparency in public-company reporting. Cutting it from 4 to 2 in an age of technology and ever-flowing news seems counterproductive. We should advocate for greater certainty among shareholders and potential investors to reduce market volatility.

David Mitchell Retired Chartered Accountant — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Mitchell Accounting reporting should remain as is.

David Moncur — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Moncur I and many others invest as a way to protect our wealth and treat investing as a business. Reducing the volume of information available to us on our investments is effectively hampering our ability to run our business efficiently. If any changes are needed they are for greater transparency and more frequent and timely reporting.

David Moore — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Moore I am a retired aerospace engineer and depend on my investments for my retirement. I believe that quarterly reporting should remain in place. If a company's reporting system is efficiently set up, then quarterly reporting given the AI tools available should not be a greater burden the twice a year reporting. Rather a model should be developed that offers continuous real time reporting. Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

David O'Donnell — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David O'Donnell As a private investor, it is NOT reasonable to assume that I can make a MORE informed decision with less information. As the owner of multiple businesses, I know how critical it is to stay abreast of developing trends. When I invest my life savings to "own" a portion of a business, I deserve to know what I am buying and how management's strategies are playing out. Full public disclosure twice a year is woefully inadequate. Thank you for your attention to this matter.

David Orkin — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Orkin The US has among the best-informed investor communities in the World, because we've always followed the dictum that the best decisions come from INFORMED decision makers. Why would we abandon tools that have served us so well for so long? Let the information flow. Companies on US markets are already used to the current reporting structure and have the people and policies in place to meet them. The knowledge benefit to the business and investor community far outweighs any small financial savings to individual companies from reducing their reporting schedule. A lot can happen in 6 months!

David Parrent — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Parrent To reduce the number of required public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a bad idea. Imagine how more poorly informed stockholders would be, especially in this fast moving economy. And AI likely makes creating these reports less costly to companies.

---

david schoenberg — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: david schoenberg As an investor in the US markets, I am opposed to public companies I own or any companies for that matter to report only twice a year. This puts me at a disadvantage. even though I am a long-term investor, I want to know what's going on a quarterly basis… in this age of AI. The expense argument does not hold. Please uphold quarterly reporting and updates. I would go as far to suggest that people who actually own the company should get monthly (if not every other month) updates/reports.

David slimak Private investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David slimak . I think in this new age of AI that monthly reporting would be a breeze. I think more information is critical for investors to make informed decisions. I also think it is very typical of people in power to desire less oversight. Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

David Wallace — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Wallace I (retired) have nearly all my life savings tied directly or indirectly to the stock and financial markets. Please don't cut reporting requirements. 4 times a year at a minimum. Less information and I will start pulling my money out.

Dawn Morse — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dawn Morse Continued quarterly reports allows investors to have the most accurate financial picture of a companies health and earning potential. Reducing the reporting to semi annual would allow to much time to elapse, and investors will see profit losses. This will cause some investors to find other more secure ways to invest with less risk. We will see markets fall.

Dayle Collins — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dayle Collins Less reporting means less transparency. Less transparency increases the risk of surprises. As an investor / owner I can't support that.

DB — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: DB Investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting reduces oversight, insight, accountability, and trust.

Dean Garrett Retired ag (farmer) — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dean Garrett I need information about stocks I invest in quarterly, not twice a year . To much can happen in 6 months for me to be an informed investor. I need quarterly information.

Dean Mulla retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dean Mulla I am an individual investor. I rely on quarterly reports to determine how well companies I invest in or want to invest in are performing. I urge you to maintain the requirement for quarterly reporting to investors and potential investors on company performance. Please do not relax the reporting requirements to allow for less than quarterly reporting.

Debbie Kelly — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Debbie Kelly I greatly disagree and disapprove of the proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I deserve regular, transparent communication from companies I invest in, and I actually find it outrageous! This proposal is not in the interest of the American public, but rather in the interest of corporate America.

Deborah J. Kelley — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah J. Kelley I believe this proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two times a year is a bad idea. Quarterly communication and reporting is not to much to ask from a company that you are investing in. Reducing reporting requirements only weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Please do not let this proposal pass. We need to maintain the current four times a year public-company reports for investor transparency.

Deborah Wolf — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Wolf No, no, no we need to be able to have quarterly information. Do not change a thing.

Deneen Lee — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deneen Lee I strongly oppose the SEC's proposed transition to semiannual reporting. Reducing corporate disclosure requirements from four times a year to two will severely degrade market transparency, delay the dissemination of critical material information to investors, and ultimately increase market volatility. The quarterly reporting system remains essential for accountability. Thank you for your attention to this important matter. Deneen Lee

---

Denise Janecke — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Denise Janecke What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. I am an owner of many businesses now. I need to know what decisions are being made, how the company is running, numbers etc., to make good decisions for my investments and my family.

Dennis Jones Portfolio Manager — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Jones As an independent portfolio manager overseeing my own personal account, I have no institutional safety net — every decision I make lives or dies on the quality and timeliness of the information available to me. Quarterly reporting isn't red tape; it's the heartbeat of informed ownership. Every 90 days, I get a structured window into how capital is being deployed, whether management is executing on its promises, and where risks are quietly building beneath the surface. Cut that to twice a year and you don't reduce pressure — you just delay the reckoning. Problems that could be caught and corrected in March fester until August. That's not patience. That's negligence dressed up as reform. The argument that less reporting reduces short-termism has it exactly backwards. Uncertainty breeds volatility, not the other way around. When earnings finally arrive after six months of silence, the market doesn't respond with calm, long-term thinking — it overreacts, because the information gap is wider and the surprises are bigger. Individual investors like me, who already operate at an information disadvantage compared to institutions, get hurt the most. Quarterly reporting levels the playing field. Semiannual reporting tilts it back. I stand firmly with David and the Motley Fool community on this: transparency is not the enemy of long-term investing — it is the foundation of it.

Dennis Michalak Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Michalak You should not institute a new law requiring less reporting.. we need at least quarterly reporting from companies, it is minimal. Thank you

---

DENNIS townsenddennis811@gmail.com FORMER BANKER/ RETIRED ENTREPRENEUR — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: DENNIS townsenddennis811@gmail.com Comments attached

---

Derek Evans — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Derek Evans The suggested reduction in reporting requirements is considered to be a retroactive step reducing the availability of information and transparency

---

Derek West The Motley Fool Community. — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Derek West I wish to continue with quarterly reporting. Tracking actions and information is bad enough without reducing the source of such information.

Derick Technician — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Derick Semi annual reporting would balloon the market.

Dermot Noonan Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dermot Noonan Keep investors informed and the USA will be stronger for it.

Derrick Niemann — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Derrick Niemann Public companies are are owned by The Public! The reporting requirements and earnings are one of the few times investors collectively receive information together, and the small investor is the one most at risk. So reducing the reporting requirements from 4x to 2x / year is HUGE detriment to all traders, especially those with smaller accounts. THE CHANGE CANNOT HAPPEN in good conscious!

Deuard Bowden subscriber of Motley Fool advisors. — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deuard Bowden Reducing the number of reports to stock holder would be a real negative for all.

Diana Huang — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diana Huang every month is good ,six months very bad

---

Diane Sheridan — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diane Sheridan We need more transparency not less. With the level of corruption, insider trading and eroding public confidence, it is vital we continue to see regular SEC company filings so WE can make informed investment decisions.

Diane Taylor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diane Taylor At its heart, investing is ownership of a company. As the owner of even a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. If reporting requirements are reduced, the connection between companies and their owners is weakened. As the owner of a variety of stocks, I appreciate having quarterly reports. Reducing the number of reports to only two a year will not give me the information I need to continue reasonable and responsible decisions concerning my involvement with the company. Please continue the requirement for quarterly reports by companies.

Dianne — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dianne I think being an individual investor is challenging enough because of the 80% or greater trading volume done by algorithms. As stock holders we are owners of the company and therefore have a right to receive timely information

---

Dianne Akers retired financial professional — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dianne Akers I do not support the move to semi annual reporting for publicly traded companies. This limits transparency for individual investors like myself and other in the Motley Fool Community which I participate. This can only benefit insiders. Please to not make this change to semi annual reporting.

Dianne Leonetti Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dianne Leonetti Keep the quarterly reporting. I want to have a heads up on what's happening with companies that I own a part of.

Dominic Cole CEO & Founder Heartfelt Care Ltd — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dominic Cole A proposal now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two, that’s a mistake! When I own part of a Company, I would like to see how that Company is doing, and not twice a year. With the help of AI, it is not that difficult to put current information on a report in how the Company is preforming each quarter. This is a mistake and needs to not be allowed. I am a member of the Motley fools community, if this ruling goes ahead it could put my investments at risk, will also affect future investing!

Don McAllister None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Don McAllister Please increase in all ways investor transparency.

Don McCan — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Don McCan Please retain the quarterly reports, as they are most likely to be produced internally for tracking KPI metrics. These reports provide a clear view of the company's progress or decline, delivering timely and actionable information. This is evidenced by the significant growth many companies have experienced within a single quarter. In contrast, semi-annual reporting is insufficiently frequent for individual investors who require more regular updates. Best regards, Don McCan

---

Don Zwick — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Don Zwick It is important for investors to have current company information. I do not support reducing public-company reports from four times a year to just two. That impacts the ability to evaluate the current performance of a company.

Donald A. Orr My wife and I are very active personal investors. — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Donald A. Orr This action makes very little sense. Due to AI use it will not reduce costs, but definitely delay oversight.

Donald J. Jackl American Institute of Architects — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Donald J. Jackl Bill S-7-2026-15 is not a case of "less is more". Common sense dictates that four rather than 2 corporate quarterly reports better informs corporate shareholders (owners). The bill should be defeated.

Donald L Smith with Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Donald L Smith with Motley Fool More reporting ,,not less is indicated.

Donald R. Hicks Attorney/Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Donald R. Hicks Publicly traded companies should continue to be required to release quarterly reports about information relating to their complete operations. In this era when corporate philosophies and policies continually are structured to minimize information available to shareholders and the public, the financial and economic positions of the citizens of our nation are undermined.

Donna Shaw Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Donna Shaw Do not halve the number of reports. In today's chaotic and polarized times, we need more information, not less.

Doreen Bourdeau — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Doreen Bourdeau Keep the reports quarterly! Period!!!'

Dorothy Knapke Arters The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dorothy Knapke Arters The quarterly reporting is essential to keep citizens informed and reporting above board!

Dorothy Townsend — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Dorothy Townsend Affiliation: Jun. 24, 2026 To the SEC: Keep quarterly reporting with signatures. As a retiree, after nearly 44 years working as an adult, I prefer to keep quarterly reporting as a tool to help prevent fraud and abuse of my long term investment funds. Honest, verifiable reporting with a signature is a must. I sign my income tax statements which is miniscule compared to the large amount of funds controlled by SEC monitored companies. I have worked closer to 55+ years if I include working on my Dad's farm as a child. I wanted to work as a child to earn my own money. Dorothy Townsend, retired since 2018, and currently living in Spokane, WA.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Doug Thorpe — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Doug Thorpe Reducing Public reporting reduces my ability to asses the investments I have made and delays my ability to react to Company changes in a timely manor. This reduces needed communication and fair disclosure and timely disclosure. I read the annual and semi-annual reports and rely on these communications when making my investment decisions and am not in favor or reduced reporting. Thank You

---

Douglas A Atkins Private investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Douglas A Atkins Corporate management is always looking for ways to lighten the workload and cut expenses, regardless of the cost to investors. I vote no to cutting back the financial reports to twice a year.

Douglas Greer — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Douglas Greer Quarterly reporting by public companies should continue, because: (1) External factors such as wars, catastrophes, the imposition of new tariffs, or technological developments can materially and rapidly impact a company's financial performance; (2) Individual investors don't have the resources to independently estimate the impact of those events on sectors or companies; (3) Accordingly, they need to understand management's perspective on those events, and semi-annual reporting is not frequent enough.

Douglas L. Despain Business owner — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Douglas L. Despain Good, sucessful business is grounded in honesty and trust. Owners, shareholders, managers, customers, and public alike deserve timely and transparent communication from legal business entities. Self-governance based on honesty and mortality allows capitalism to work and thrive. Reducing quarterly reporting in favor of anything less would compromise clarity and timely feedback from a business's constituents.

Dov Bloom — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dov Bloom Prefer the continuation of quartery reports. After all, we investors are the owners of all these companies, we deserve frequent information. Thank you for attention to this matter.

Dr . HHale Clinical Psychologist (Michigan) — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dr . HHale Elongating reporting so that investors are not fully informed on a quarterly basis would be too risky for the middle and middle-upper class to invest. Without our contributions, which have a cumulative effect, markets will fall. The draw-backs to lengthening the time between reporting will way outweigh the benefits for companies and the American economy which is already struggling right now. I won't be able to trust in the investments we have put in for Apple, Harley Davidson, Marvel and several others. Clinical Psychologist, Michigan

---

Drew LLC The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Drew LLC Please do not reduce the frequency or amount of information investors receive. Companies can find cheaper and easier and faster ways of collecting and distributing information. Investors need timely (and accurate) information for better decisions, better management, and less risk.

Duncan E Jones — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Duncan E Jones As à retired teacher, my wife and I depend on our 40 years of investing to support us for the rest of our lives. Our investments have been conservative rather than speculative to protect them. We expect industry to maintain its history of quarterly reporting for dependable investments of the American people. Please don't risk our future!

Dustin Palmer Share holder of many publicly traded companies. — Jun 24, 2026 Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dustin Palmer I am writing as an individual investor to express my strong opposition to any proposal that would allow public companies to reduce regular reporting from quarterly to semiannual reporting. As a shareholder, I view investing as ownership, and owners deserve consistent, timely, and transparent communication from the companies they own. Reducing the frequency of official reporting would weaken that connection and leave individual investors with less information about material business developments, financial performance, risks, and management decisions. I understand the argument that fewer reports may reduce costs or relieve short-term pressure, but I do not believe less information leads to better long-term decision-making. Companies operate every day, and investors should not be asked to wait six months at a time for meaningful updates. Less transparency increases uncertainty, creates the potential for larger surprises, and can make markets less fair for individual investors. I respectfully urge the SEC to preserve quarterly reporting requirements and continue supporting clear, timely disclosure for all shareholders.

E. L. Mather — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: E. L. Mather I am opposed to eliminating quarterly reports in favor of twice yearly. Owners deserve to be informed in a timely manner.

E. Thomas Smiley None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: E. Thomas Smiley Please DO NOT approve the proposed SEMI-ANNUAL REPORTING RULE. Less information leads to less informed decisions when it comes to individual investors. Keep the quarterly reporting. Thank you.

Ed Benger — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ed Benger As an individual investor I would be very much against losing the required quarterly reports. It represents a real lack of transparency and would lead to increased volatility in the market. It would hurt my ability as an individual investor to compete with institutional investors and give them an unfair advantage. I'm sure they would still have the ability to gather information that I would not have access to. This bill should not pass! Thank You

---

Ed Taliaferro — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ed Taliaferro We need more up to date information,especialy in the current enviroment.

Edhem Ablakovic — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edhem Ablakovic Please have companies continue to report quarterly, not semi-annually. Investors need to this know information, so they may make decisions on best available information, which is now quarterly, and should remain the same, if not monthly.

Edna Doak Retired Financial Analyst — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edna Doak I strongly believe in transparency in business reporting and practices. Changing reporting requirements to semi-annual instead of quarterly encourages secrecy and activities that camouflage the truth. Keep the reporting at quarterly to enable investors to make more informed decisions about where to position their funds. Less reporting will most likely lead to greater skepticism and mistrust of the financial reports.

Eduard West — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eduard West I like to see the results of a company every 3 months; it is essential for me for my investing decisions. And the technical changes go faster and faster, no reason at all too slow down the reporting to your investors.

Edward Blachman — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edward Blachman Ed Blachman, Software Engineer. My entire retirement plan rests on the assumption that public American companies will be transparent in publishing and reporting on their finances. The requirement that they do this once a quarter is important because it reduces the ability of these companies to obfuscate what's really going on. Historically we know that relaxing this requirement would result in poorer outcomes for everyone. As an investor, as a someday-retiree, as a taxpayer, I strongly believe that maintaining the quarterly reporting requirement is good governance— good for companies generally, good for the market, good for the country.

Edward Charles Winthrop Reitired Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edward Charles Winthrop As an individual investor who manages much of my own investments, I think changing the regulations to permit less than quarterly reporting is a terrible idea. Information is the basis for making thoughtful investment decisions and anything that diminishes that is bad for investors. With todays technology tools, reporting quarterly is not a burden on any public company and if it is, they should go private. Keeping all public companies honest and transparent is the most important priority of the SEC. Keep the rules the same!

Edward Cumming — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edward Cumming I'm concerned about reducing the number of reporting periods. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Edward Fischer None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edward Fischer Semi-annual reporting puts individual investors at a strong disadvantage to institutional investors who have other sources of data to monitor a company's performance. It will lead to earnings results that are less reliable and problems that take longer to emerge. One of the reasons that I favor the US market is the quality of the information released each quarter. Don't change that!!!

Edward Veres The Motley Fool community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edward Veres Please keep quarterly reporting for public companies. Switching to semi annual reporting is not in the best interest of investors, especially individual investors. Thank you Mr. Edward Veres

---

Edwin Selden Retired, but an investor — Jun 24, 2026 Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edwin Selden I know from my days in government and the non-profit community the less frequently I was required to provide information the less I took the reporting SERIOUSLY. Semi- annual reporting is a serious mistake to the investing community AND to management of the company reporting AND company's Board of Directors.

Edwin Strisower — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Edwin Strisower We should not be reducing the amount of information provided to shareholders. Quarterly reporting is already established. With advanced technology reporting quarterly should not be burdensome or costly. In light of the 2008 financial crisis we should maintain as much transparency as possible.

Elaine Ainsworth — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elaine Ainsworth Less transparency increases uncertainty.

Elena Sosa The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elena Sosa I have read Motley Fool's comments regarding reducing a company's public reporting from quarterly to only twice yearly and agree that less reporting reduces operating transparancies. We have Edward Jones accounts for our retirement funding. I appreciate knowing which companies our investments are into and reading updates on their performance. Please keep reports active throughout the year (4x) to keep us investors up to date on economic activity so we can put our money where it is best invested. Thank you.

Eli Stern — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eli Stern The following is an excerpt from a Fool email. Since I couldn't explained it better myself, here goes: A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that’s a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right?

Elisa Johnson — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elisa Johnson Consumers and stockholders in a generally free-market economy need MORE transparency and MORE accountability, not less. The free market only works if people are truly free to make choices about what they buy and invest in. They cannot make free choices without robust, truthful, and timely information about the companies they are invested in or considering investing in. As stockholders, we are part owners of businesses and should have the power to hold those businesses accountable, which we cannot do effectively if businesses are required to report less. This move would be in direct conflict with the whole reason the SEC was established- to restore confidence in the stock market. Lower reporting requirements, and therefore decreased transparency, does exactly the opposite.

Elizabeth A McCleary — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth A McCleary Please don't reduce the amount of times that companies need to report information. Stock holders should not have to guess about the health of things that they own.

Elizabeth Ann Molter Retired Texas Certified Educator — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth Ann Molter The Quarterly Reports are a key to keeping investors informed and corporate officers in check. It should NOT be overturned and revert to less oversight and more potential for corruption and abuses. We have witnessed it and made former problems less likely by the current system if checks and balances. Why change what is working and is the solution to protections for investors? KEEP IT AS IS! KEEP CEO & CFO and directors honest and accountable. As a retired Texas educator & schoolteacher, with hard earned investments, I need all coverage and protections as possible. Thank you for hearing our voices. Sincerely, Elizabeth Molter

---

Elizabeth Hendricks — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth Hendricks Keep Quarterly reporting. It is absolutely necessary to require direct accountability by corporate executives and CEOs for truthful financial reporting. Taking away quarterly reporting and direct accountability by corporate executives will erode the stability and credibility of their share value and stability. We do NOT need another spate of ENRON like fraud and failure to hold companies accountable for their financial reporting. Keep executive financial reporting responsibility and keep Quarterly reporting. Protect both investors and employees!! Thank you!

Elizabeth Ronnau CPA and CEO of Queen City Accounting and Technical Services — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth Ronnau I believe dropping the reporting requirements to semi-annually is not the right answer for consumers. In an age where information is craved instantly, providing fewer data points is not a step in the right direction. Investors need to be regularly informed to be able to make their best decisions.

Elizabeth Wiedmann — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Elizabeth Wiedmann I am not in favor of reducing public filings by public corporations. The SEC promotes informed investing, but how can that happen if the information is restricted? If this measure goes forward, I do not see good things for the investing community - especially those of us who rely on services like The Motley Fool to help us gain a level of independence so we do not HAVE to rely on a Social Security system that may not be there in the future.

Ellen Sabor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ellen Sabor Reporting must continue to be required quarterly. Reducing to semiannual reporting serves only nefarious purposes. No good comes of providing less information and less timely information to investors and the public.

Emily Alldredge None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Emily Alldredge Keep corporate reporting quarterly. Quit trying to hurt us consumers!

Eric McPherson — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eric McPherson Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Erica Sommer The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Erica Sommer Please keep transparency with the SEC filings and keep them at 4 times a year, not the 2 you want to go to. This is paramount for investors to know what a company's finances are looking like. As an investor we deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Essie The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Essie Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty, it increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. DO NOT change the reporting requirement from four times a year to just two.

Esteban Millan — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Esteban Millan I agree 100 percent with Motley Fool's transparency is key! Less information rarely creates better-informed owners, and it keeps us in the dark about what you're really doing as a company. I invest to be a small but part-owner and to have ownership in a company I believe in. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. I believe 4 times is not enough with the lack of transparency and regulations that are being put in place right now by these companies and this administration! Blinding us isn't making us better, it's making us weaker. I want the part of companies like that!

Eva P. Samaan N/A — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eva P. Samaan Keep the quarterly reporting. Transparency and accountability are not an option for investors; they are a necessity,

---

Eve Andreas — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Eve Andreas Changing the reporting regulations only helps companies. It does not help investors. Less transparency will increase uncertainty and cause bigger surprises. I t makes one wonder what are companies trying to hide. it will be hard for investors to stay informed. Shouldn't you be protecting the public instead of large corporations?

Farouk Chemam — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Farouk Chemam Dear Secretary, I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposal that would allow public companies to reduce their financial reporting frequency from quarterly to semiannually. As an individual investor and a member of The Motley Fool Community, I believe that reducing the number of public-company reports from four times a year to two is a step backward for market transparency and investor protection. At its core, investing represents true business ownership. As owners, individual investors require and deserve regular, transparent communication from the companies they fund. While proponents argue that semiannual reporting could reduce costs or curb short-termism, these arguments fall short in the modern era: Technology Defeats Cost Barriers: In an age of advanced AI and highly efficient digital disclosure tools, the administrative burden of quarterly reporting is lower than ever. Information Does Not Cause Short-Termism: Short-term market pressure stems from how certain market participants react to data, not from the data itself. Eliminating reports will not magically create long-term thinking; it will simply leave investors in the dark. Increased Volatility and Risk: Companies operate, launch products, and win or lose customers every single day. Cutting official updates in half does not eliminate uncertainty—it amplifies it. When information is withheld for six months at a time, the market surprises will be larger, reactions sharper, and market volatility significantly greater. Less information rarely, if ever, creates better-informed owners. To maintain a fair, orderly, and efficient market, individual investors need consistent data to make educated decisions. I urge the Commission to preserve the current quarterly reporting framework and maintain the robust transparency that makes the U.S. capital markets the gold standard of the world. Thank you for your time, consideration, and dedication to protecting individual investors. Sincerely, Farouk Chemam

---

Filip Oles — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Filip Oles The quarterly reporting is needed to ensure fair management and helps guiding public.

Flora McDonnell Individual investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Flora McDonnell Please retain the at least quarterly release of public-company reports in order to at least maintain the existing level of visibility for owners of investments in companies. We will be unable to properly and regularly assess performance if this is reduced and not able to manage our investments to the best of our ability if this is reduced. Reports should be able to be created much more efficiently nowadays using AI at a reduced cost so this cannot count as a credible reason. Reducing visibility of investors into company management and results amounts to gross misconduct so please refrain from approving. Thank you.

Frances C. Thomas Retired Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Frances C. Thomas Commentshttps : / / www . sec . gov / comments / s7-2026-15 / semiannual-reporting? fbclid=IwVERDUASop5lleHRuA2FlbQIxMABzcnRjBmFwcF9pZAwzNTA2ODU1MzE3MjgAAR6T5AbjV_TW0XiFGaosRax3jAElDnZOCeDEiBnQc04dCnI4Xdp0_YtFxXnYqg_aem_BiRoc20hIltVz8xWIBx4jw#no-back

---

Francisco Fabro No comment. — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Francisco Fabro This proposal is only an attempt for companies and any organizations to cover up their mistakes and mislead their investors. Less information equals to false information , as history shows.

Francisco Javier Cano Sandoval Software Engineer — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Francisco Javier Cano Sandoval Reducing the number of reports makes companies more opaque and reduces trust. I am reluctant to invest in a company that does not publish clear information regularly, and I've seen so many cases where this allowed companies to hide vital information for retail investors like me. From my point of view, this is not working at all in Spain markets and I think it would be very bad for US markets reliability as well.

Frank Allen — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Frank Allen Please keep quarterly reporting. SOX is a good control to keep officials honest. No good can come from reducing the burden on companies to report their financial status.

---

fred macklin — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: fred macklin I don't believe reports twice a year are good for investors.

Freddie Harris None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Freddie Harris Please don’t reduce the yearly reports from four to two. We deserve more transparency in this post-truth era, not less.

Frederick Martin Schroeder — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Frederick Martin Schroeder I am writing to express strong opposition to any proposal that would reduce the frequency of key regulatory reports from quarterly to semi-annually. I believe maintaining the current reporting frequency is essential for effective prudential supervision, timely risk identification, and overall financial stability.

G. Sjonning — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: G. Sjonning Twice a year is not sufficient for securities reporting. The changes of speed in trading (algorithm); AI cyber crime increasing for companies; and 24/7 trading to become a standard, all potential problem areas of securities,which potentially 6mths later revealed is problematic. Odds are volatility increased. Want to lesson reporting; mostly due to expenses, move to 3 times a year. Follow that change a multitude of years and compare stability to the markets.

Gail Jones — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gail Jones We absolutely need quarterly reporting to hold CEOs accountable and to minimize further corruption.

Garen Corbett Motley Fool Personal Investor Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Garen Corbett The world is undergoing accelerating change. I believe that asking questions or finding ways to improve efficiency is a productive and reasonable approach. But reducing the transparency of financial results from four to twice a year is a mistake. At its heart, and to many, investing is ownership, not speculation. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. And I don't think that helps our economy, our corporations, or our investor community. Some may argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. But even that may be dubious. In an age of burgeoning use of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. I suspect that others might argue that this proposed rule change would ease the pressure to manage quarter-to-quarter. That too would be a compelling by-product. But ultimately, short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. Ultimately, transparency and being informed is why our public trading markets are among the best in the world. We should keep sound corporate governance and transparency one of the hallmarks of our nation's public markets. Please reject the proposed rule. Thank you for your consideration.

Garry Star — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Garry Star Please keep quarterly reporting. Investment safety is critical.

Gary Dopp — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gary Dopp No reason to reduce the information investors want/need.

Gary Gomolka The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gary Gomolka 6 months is too long. Can be detrimental to my holdings.

Gary Holbrook The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gary Holbrook Please keep the quarterly reporting requirement. As a business owner or investor I want to know what is happening at least quarterly. Any less than that allows problems to grow harmful quickly.

Gary Spivack, M.D. — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gary Spivack, M.D. I have decades of experience managing major enterprises - health care related - and also founded and led a business consulting firm. It is my conviction that reducing the amount of information available to the public by having semiannual rather than quarterly reporting - makes my job as an informed investor much more difficult - even though I invest for the long term - 5-10 years. In today's complex world - the rate of change continues to accelerate - so the need for information on a timely basis is ever more necessary. Please reconsider the change to semiannual rather thatn quarterly reporting.

Gavin Trowsdale — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gavin Trowsdale Regular reporting keeps investors informed. Reducing reporting requirements will make investors less informed, less able to make timely buy and sell decisions and increase stock price volatility. It is a bad idea

---

Gemma — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gemma It seems reckless to create the blanket option for companies to report only semi annually. As an average investor (e.g. retirement accounts) regular reporting on company health and performance is essential. Adjustments should be made to the proposed rule so that all major corporations are still required to report quarterly. One alternative would be making semi annual reporting only an option for companies under a certain size, another would be to reduce the amount of required information in every other report (the semi annual reports) to reduce the burden of assembling a full quarterly report.

Gene R Quist — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gene R Quist Laziness should not be condoned within any of the organizations tasked to provide paths to total and timely transparency. With new methods, these reports can be prepared with little time and energy spent. The few dodging their responsibilities have a huge impact on the many awaiting their timely, quarterly reports.

Geoffrey Arnold-Pinchin — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Geoffrey Arnold-Pinchin I oppose the proposal to reduce company reports to only two per annum. If the company is not monitoring its own processes that regularly, it is not functioning efficiently. Investors need to know the situation.

Geoffrey Rocca Professional Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Geoffrey Rocca Dear Commissioners: I write, regrettably, in opposition to this proposed rule permitting semiannual reporting among publicly traded corporations. Timely and accurate information is the lifeblood of all investors, and any attempt to weaken the reporting regime is likely to result in substantial uncertainty among the investing community which will be reflected in increasing required returns on equity. To put this effect into numbers, it is estimated that even a 1% increase in required return on equity could cost 10-15% of the US market cap, or a total of 7-10 trillion dollars. Since the Commission claims (https : / / finance . yahoo . com / economy / policy / articles / semiannual-reporting-could-cut-costs-144043394 . html) that this switch could save firms only $200,000 a year in compliance costs, or $1.1 billion a year when spread across the roughly 5500 publicly traded companies in America, I find a severe imbalance in the cost-benefit analysis. The proponents of this rule seem to rely on two arguments, first that companies could be permitted to take a longer term approach without having to manage quarterly earnings, and second based on compliance costs. As to the first point, long-term thinking for companies has a time horizon of several years, not six months instead of three, and no rational investor could advocate switching to, say, a quadrennial reporting regime simply as a spur for longer-term thinking. As to compliance costs, I cannot deny that they are substantial, particularly for smaller firms. However, I am confident that with the advent of AI-assisted accounting these costs can be reduced significantly, and for the larger and more economically significant firms, financial reporting costs benefit from economies of scale and are much reduced on a percentage basis, so these firms at least are not desperate for relief from the burden of financial reporting. Wherefore, I would call upon the commission to withdraw this proposed rule, or in the alternative delay its implementation or at least limit it to the smaller firms (sub-$250 million in market cap, possibly) that would derive a greater benefit from a comparatively minor ($200,000, per your own announcement) reduction in reporting costs. Respectfully yours, Geoffrey Rocca

---

George Goff — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: George Goff Making information more relevant rather than less frequently should be the goal! By more relevant I suggest paring down the amount of required data. I read SEC required reports and always hope "there is a horse in here somewhere" because useful info is often hidden/ obscured by the chaff.

George Hayden Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: George Hayden As an individual investor, I make decisions based on quarterly reports on companies. I would like to have even more information sometimes. Cutting back on information to the individual investor only handicaps good decisions. With all the new technology, companies are not hamstringed with reports like they used to be.

George Hodges — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: George Hodges This is nothing less than an unveiled attempt to further corporate corruption. It harms the investing public and allows insiders & investors an enormous advantage by reducing transparency. This will further destroy confidence in the markets & the agencies that are tasked with policing them. Any new policy should do the opposite of what is being proposed. Absolutely unacceptable.

George Pandelios — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: George Pandelios As an investor, I strongly OPPOSE the elimination of quarterly reporting. This is proposed rule change is diametrically opposed to the mission of the SEC to protect investors. It reduces visibility into corporate financial states, and assists large investors (who have other methods of obtaining such information) while blinding smaller investors.

Georgios Georgeles — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Georgios Georgeles Under this proposal, shareholders will receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own, which will result in less transparency and less information.

Gerry Carter The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gerry Carter Bi-annual reporting would be a retrograde step if implemented because it reduces the timely information available to investors/shareholders/owners about their own financial interest. This is important because a well informed market is a more efficient market. Quarterly reporting does not mean short-termism. It just means that progress towards longer term goals is reported more regularly.

Giovanni Greco The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Giovanni Greco When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. This is a bad idea and needs to be tabled permanently.

Glen Maddess Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Glen Maddess As a part owner of several companies through share ownership, it is important to be updated at least 4 times per year as to how the company is doing. Particularly in today's volatile markets !

Glenn White The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Glenn White I urge you to reject semiannual reporting. It will harm individual investors like me by making it more difficult to evaluate and monitor companies that I have invested in or am considering investing in.

Gloria Austin — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gloria Austin I am very oppposed to changing to semi-annual reporting. It's important to maintain quarterly reporting.

GloriaAndersen Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: GloriaAndersen News article. Please keep quarterly reporting. Gloria Andersen.

Grace & Mark Jones Educators — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Grace & Mark Jones Keep the rules transparent for small investor security. Punish the rule breakers and those trying to make regulations that are opaque!

Graciel Mendoza Lead TA Partner Hussmann Corporation — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Graciel Mendoza This rule will hinder maximizing my retirement investments as well as my family stock portfolio. We need to understand a company's financial outlook to make smart financial moves as this is the only security net in this country for my family.

Graham Evans — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Graham Evans This rule would reduce transparency and increase uncertainty for investors. It would also lead to more severe and disruptive market volatility around semiannual reports instead of less severe and more frequent reporting periods. I do not support this rule that would be harmful to investors and negatively impact the ability to create financial independence and security for individuals and families.

GREG RAAB GREG RAAB — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: GREG RAAB Leave it on the quarterly

---

Greg Scown — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Greg Scown Dear SEC: I'm writing to OPPOSE S7-2026-15 / Semiannual Reporting. Investors are part owners of publicly traded businesses and as such expect regular, transparent information on the financial status of our investments. Quarterly reporting is a good balance between providing that information to investors and the work required of companies to produce it. While Semiannual Reporting reduces the work required of companies to produce information, it also deprives investors of financial information at reasonably actionable intervals. Please do not proceed with S7-2026-15 / Semiannual Reporting. Thank you for your consideration. Greg Scown

---

Greg Smith — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Greg Smith As an investor with a significant portion of my retirement savings invested in US equities, I would prefer continuing with quarterly reporting. I believe the burden on companies has lessened with improvements in technology and I greatly value the transparency and accountability that comes with quarterly reporting.

Greg W — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Greg W Twice a year reporting would have made more sense 20 years ago and earlier, when technology and information moved much slower. In today's markets, information changes pricing and investment strategy in the blink of an eye. Companies should actually be reporting every month going forward. By switching to twice per year, it will allow companies to hide information that will harm investors in the long run. Please do not change to twice per year reporting. Thank you.

Gregg Tetreau Individual Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gregg Tetreau Under these proposed reporting changes. They would dramatically change the investment horizon. It would greatly create a gambling arena of who is really going to succeed by a guess not factually looking at the data. The quarterly report keeps companies honest about their future intentions. It also signals whether there strategies have taken shape. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. So the long and short is , it is the cost of doing business to report quarterly , investment owners need clarity not less. I learned about this in an article from the Motley Fool.

Gregory Backst CFO, Toyota of Puyallup, Kia of Puyallup, Toyota of Tri-Cities — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Gregory Backst Reducing required reporting from quarterly to semiannually would impair the transparency and accountability of businesses who are presumably seeking long-term investors for stable funding. Such a move would discourage me from investing in companies choosing to report less frequently.

Griff Smith Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Griff Smith I do not support semiannual reporting. Anyone that relies on investing, whether they do it personally or they invest in funds that are managed by someone else, needs to have the reporting continue to be reported quarterly. There is no honest reason to make this change.

Haley Purdum — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Haley Purdum Hello, Quarterly Reports are a mainstay in corporate culture and in stock trading. Short termism may be bad, but regular reports are crucial for the public to understand what is happening at a company. If there is an effort to reduce short-termism perhaps we can work on educating people or persuading investors to filter out the noise and take the long view vs making corporations more opaque.

Harold Faulkner The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Harold Faulkner I strongly urge you to maintain quarterly reports for publicly traded companies. It is important for us as investors to have as much transparency on company operations as possible. Thank you for your consideration of retaining quarterly reports.

Harvey Brown — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Harvey Brown It would appear regressive to reduce reporting requirements from four times to twice a year. Investors or their professional advisors need access to reporting information to better manage investmements.

Haydon Rochester Jr — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Haydon Rochester Jr The proposed decrease from quarterly to semiannual reports will only help insiders and specialists who have their own ways of finding out the information found in such reports. If a company is in trouble, it will be known to insiders, but not to ordinary investors until it is too late. Markets function best when people trust them. Decreasing the number of reports will encourage online rumor-mongers to create their own replacement versions, furthering distrust in US markets. Levels of suspicion that markets favor insiders and people who have acquired privileged information are already very high. Reducing the number of reports will only further this perception. In the long run, this suspicion will only grow under semiannual reporting. If US markets are perceived as "rigged," investors will move their money to other markets.

Heather Manning — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Heather Manning I write to object to the proposal to reduce public-company reports from four to only two reports per year. As an investor, I rely on regular, accurate reporting of the health of the businesses in which I invest my money. Less timely information risks increasing uncertainty amongst investors large and small as well as risking a concomittant volatility that destabilizes the market overall. The role of the SEC should be, among other things, to balance investor risk with unnecessary, onerous demands on individual companies. Filing quarterly reports is something companies have been doing for decades without suffering undue strain. Reducing reporting to a bi-annual event only forces companies to collate more data, making for larger, more unwieldy reports, while doing nothing to improve investor insight into a company's health. I strongly urge the SEC to reject the suggestion to reduce company public reporting from quarterly to bi-annually and to simply leave a good thing alone. Respectfully, Heather Manning

---

Henry Russo The Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Henry Russo I VOTE NO to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two.

Holsen Inc — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Holsen Inc We need more Transparency NOT LESS. Please let the reporting remain QUARTERLY. AI will shortly remove these perceived barriers and provide for more information sharing not LESS

Houston Itzen Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Houston Itzen This is a grave mistake. Our governance system is already failing us. With modern financial systems and for our newer AI Native companies, we should be able to see results in real time. Failing that, quarterly is the least we canbuse

---

Hugh Partridge — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Hugh Partridge Public companies should issue reports four times a year. Reducing the requirement to two times a year would limit the ability of shareholders to make crucial decisions about the company in meaningful time frames.

Ian Straehley Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ian Straehley Investing is ownership, we shouldn’t reduce reporting requirements for corporations supported by their investors.

Illona Jambik — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Illona Jambik Reporting needs to continue quarterly. This reporting, especially considering all the tools available to do so, cannot be that difficult. Having less frequent reporting leaves the doorways tko fraud and other nefarious adventures wide open. This has happened in the past, so we know that it could happen again. Let’s try and protect the consumer and continue quarterly reporting.

Individual — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Individual Dear SEC, Keep the quarterly reporting! Sharehoders and anyone in the financial industries deserve to stay informed on a timely quarterly basis. We don't need another Enron or Glob al Crossing! I personally lost $40k in the Global Crossing bankruptcy. Thank you. Julie Heironimus, retired Senior Financial Analyst

---

Individual — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Individual Agree with concers

---

Individual Software And Technology — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Individual I am writing to oppose any proposal reducing public company reporting from four times per year to two. As an individual investor, quarterly reports are essential to informed decision-making about the companies I own. Investing is ownership. Owners deserve regular, transparent communication. Reducing reporting frequency does not reduce uncertainty - it increases it. Less frequent disclosures mean larger information gaps, greater surprises, and more volatility when updates finally arrive. The short-termism argument is flawed. Market behavior stems from how participants react to information, not its cadence. Withholding information doesn't make investors more patient - it leaves them less informed. And in an era of AI-assisted reporting tools, the cost-reduction rationale is equally weak. I urge the Commission to preserve the current reporting standard. Weakening transparency harms the millions of individual investors who rely on consistent, timely disclosures to exercise their rights as owners.

Ingrid Milinazzo — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ingrid Milinazzo Allowing companies to reduce the number of reports they share with their stockholders from 4 to 2 per year will result in less informed shareholders. Please do not approve this change. As a shareholder and long-time stock investor, I rely on quarterly reports to make investment decisions.

Irene Wong — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Irene Wong Please DONOT reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Taking the reports away makes everyone less informed. Less transparency increases uncertainty. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. It will increase the risk to investors and is not warranted.

Irving M Nadler, PhD retired psychologist — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Irving M Nadler, PhD Semi annual reporting is a terrible idea. Keep reporting to quarterly!!

Isaac Jordan — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Isaac Jordan I believe companies reporting every quarter is good for investors, keeping businesses honest and beholden to their owners. Reporting only twice a year would leave investors in the dark about company performance, increasing the amount of speculation that occurs.

Ivana Claudio — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ivana Claudio I am submitting this comment in opposition to the proposed rule under File No. S7-2026-15, which would permit companies to elect semiannual rather than quarterly reporting. Quarterly disclosure has long been a foundation of investor protection in U.S. capital markets. It ensures that shareholders — the actual owners of public companies — receive timely, regular information about the enterprises they own. Reducing that cadence to twice per year is a meaningful step backward in transparency. The arguments in favor of this change are not persuasive. The claim that quarterly reports impose excessive costs is difficult to sustain in an environment of increasingly automated and AI-assisted disclosure processes. The argument that less frequent reporting would reduce short-termism misidentifies the cause: short-term behavior stems from how market participants respond to information, not from the availability of the information itself. Reducing disclosure frequency does not change incentives — it simply reduces accountability. What is certain is that less information makes owners worse off. When official disclosures are infrequent, material developments accumulate between filings, increasing the magnitude of surprises and the severity of market reactions when news finally arrives. This does not stabilize markets — it destabilizes them. The SEC's mission is to protect investors and maintain fair, efficient markets. This proposal is in tension with both goals. I respectfully urge the Commission to reject it and maintain the existing quarterly reporting standard.

J Sharp — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: J Sharp At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. So, please do NOT decrease the number of required public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Thank you.

J. Schmerbitz — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: J. Schmerbitz As an investor (owner) I need to be informed regularly on how the business is doing. Getting 2 filings a year is not sufficient to be kept informed in a timely maner. A lot can happen in 6 months. Hence, I disagree with the proposed changes and hope they will not be implemented. Thanks Jochen Schmerbitz

Jack Ferreira — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jack Ferreira To the Securities and Exchange Commission: Like countless Americans, I rely on quarterly earnings reports. Quarterly earnings reports were created to inform the public, protect investors, keep boards and executives accountable, and promote transparency. The most transparent administration in history should not be engaging in pointless deregulation to protect CEOs and billionaires. The vast majority of Americans own stock in one form or another. So why should the super-wealthy have the opportunity to cash out and run while the rest of us have to wait six months at a time? I do not support this rule change, and I strongly urge you not to move forward with it. Jack Ferreira Independent Investor

---

Jack Haase The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jack Haase To reduce the corporate financial information every 6 months instead of every 3 months is a very unwise change for the owners (stockowners of the business).

Jack Myers — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jack Myers Allowing companies to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a terrible idea. More transparency, not less, is needed, but 4 times per year is a minimum in my opinion. Making any material changes to this reporting requirement of public companies is a HUGE mistake! Please do not allow this change.

Jack Thoma — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jack Thoma Quarterly reporting is necessary. Egotistical CEOs can destroy a company in 6 months!!!! Examples:enron(ken lay) ,bank of america(ken baker), strohs(peter stroh),many others

---

Jackie Grass Senior Scrum Master — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jackie Grass In my role across industries at public and private companies, teams I work with talk daily and report every three weeks on whether we did what we said we were going to do. Companies need to be just as transparent with investors. People need to be able to make informed choices about how to use their money. That informed truth shouldn’t be limited to a select few with connections - it belongs to anyone willing to look for it. We need transparency - not more secrets. Companies have this information and they should share it.

Jaclyn Martinez — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Jaclyn Martinez Affiliation: Jun. 24, 2026 I am writing to strongly oppose SEC proposed rule S7-2026-15, which would allow public companies to report financial results every six months instead of quarterly.

I am an individual retail investor with holdings in stocks, ETFs, and retirement accounts. I rely on quarterly filings to make informed decisions about my money. This proposal would leave me — and millions of investors like me — flying blind for half a year at a time, while corporate executives, institutional players, and insiders continue to have full visibility into how their companies are actually performing.

That information asymmetry isn't a side effect of this rule. It's the outcome. Insiders will know. I won't. That is fundamentally unfair and directly contradicts the SEC's mandate to protect the investing public.

The fraud risk alone should be disqualifying. Quarterly reporting doesn't prevent bad actors, but it dramatically shortens the window in which fraud can grow undetected. Enron, WorldCom, the 2008 financial crisis — every major accounting scandal was enabled by gaps in disclosure. Giving companies six months between public filings doesn't reduce short-termism. It just gives bad actors more runway.

The SEC frames this as voluntary, but that framing is misleading. Once large companies start filing twice a year, smaller competitors face pressure to follow. What's optional today becomes the new baseline tomorrow. The SEC should not be in the business of helping that race to the bottom.

And for what? The compliance savings here are minimal — a modest reduction in legal and accounting fees that benefits executives, not shareholders. The cost of worse information falls entirely on ordinary investors whose 401(k)s and IRAs hold these stocks.

I urge the Commission to reject this proposal. Quarterly reporting has served investors and markets well for decades. Weakening it solves the wrong problem at the expense of the people the SEC exists to protect.

Jaclyn Martinez
Marketing Manager

Jacqueline Adams Independent — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jacqueline Adams Facebook

JACQUELINE DELANEAUX Jacqueline Delaneaux — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: JACQUELINE DELANEAUX I have investments and I want to insure that they are protected and profitable and keeping quarterly reports offers transparency and assurance for investors.

Jacqueline Gysler — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jacqueline Gysler The proposal on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two damages investors. We deserve regular, transparent communication from businesses we own. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Reducing reporting to reduce costs in the age of AI doesn’t sound reasonable at all. We are currently seeing all kinds of insider trading. Taking reports away doesn't make anyone but the insider traders safer. Less information hurts informed owners. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Stop pushing for more corruption!

Jake Pena — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jake Pena Do not change regulations to allow twice yearly reporting. Keep the current quarterly reporting standard.

James Albert Hausler life long investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Albert Hausler 3 months is the correct reporting period. 6 months is just too long for a company to go without reporting. If I am going to trust my investments I need to know at least a little about what is going on. Many failing companies are failing because they already have poor management, If you let them hide the mistakes even longer it will make our investments less safe, please leave it alone.

James Bassage — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Bassage I oppose reducing the number of mandated public-company reports to less than four reports per year. Investors must be able to review timely, regular and transparent financial reports to intelligently decide whether a company's financial results warrant continued or future capital investment. Access to these reports must not be reduced.

James Brown — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Brown Investing now is very precarious because the people that are supposed to be watching it don't even know what they're doing then with less reporting it's gonna be even more of a crapshoot you might as well go to Vegas.

James Carney — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Carney Leave reporting to quarterly reports. This provides more transparency into companies I own and am considering investing in.

James E Handy The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James E Handy I am for keeping quarterly reporting and not for moving to semiannual reporting.

JAMES E NOVAK Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: JAMES E NOVAK I believe that companies should be transparent in their finances. As an investor, transparency is critical to my investment decisions. Less transparency is going to hinder me in my decisions. Twice a year financial reporting would provide companies with more likely hood for corruption. I am strongly against this!

James E. Irre Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James E. Irre Please do not reduce reporting requirements for publicly held companies. Periodic reporting on the current schedule is necessary for stock-holders such as myself to make more informed decisions regarding whether to buy/hold/sell a company. The current schedule holds companies more accountable to share-holders. Thank you!

James Haynes NA — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Haynes Reduced reporting requirements would lead to unchecked fraud and abuse, and make it much more difficult to catch white collar crime. This is a bad idea of no benefit to the public.

James Kobel — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Kobel The reporting requirement for companies should not be reduced to every 6 months. It should stay as is, 3 months. I would not invest in any company that does not disclose information only 2 times a year.

James Noone The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Noone Public companies should continue to report their financials four times a year. Reducing the annual reporting to two will only obfuscate important financial facts from retail investors and will increase the volatility of an already volatile market. Investors need information to make logical investing choices, which in turn will allow companies to be valued appropriately in the market. Thank you,

---

James Reed Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Reed Cutting reports in half is not increasing transparency, it is reducing it. Simple math does not seem to be your strong suit.

James Welge Illinois CPA Society — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Welge While I favor less government regulation, In this specific instance, I feel that the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) reporting requirements for 10-Q Quarterly Reports (Income Statement, Balance Sheet, Cash Flows), should be left alone!!!!! As an Investor, I want timely financial reporting of the Income, Balance Sheet, and Cash Flow of the companies I invest in. I want to know that the companies I invest in remain "Solvent" in terms of Current Assets to Current Liabilities. Related to that I want to know that the companies I invest in are able to pay their currently due Invoices and Short Term Debt obligations. As an Investor, I want to know, on a timely basis, that the companies I invest in have adequate Cash Flow to cover replacement of equipment and after that, the Dividends I expect. As an Investor, I would like "Timely" reporting of the Income that the business generates and be able to get a timely indication of the Trend of that Incomes Growth. I CANNOT DO THESE THINGS IF I ONLY LEARN ON A VERY DELAYED BASIS WHAT A COMPANYS EARNINGS, BALANCE SHEET, AND CASHFLOWS ARE!!!!!!!!!!!!! I AND MANY MANY OTHER INVESTORS DESERVE TIMELY, REASONABLY ACCURATE FINANCIAL REPORTS FOR THE BUSINESSES I OWN A SHARE IN. FINANCIAL ANALYSTS, SOME FOR LARGE MULTIEMPLOYEE PENSION PLANS AND OTHER TRUSTS DESERVE AND NEED TIMELY FINANCIAL REPORTS OF THE COMPANIES THEY INVEST IN!!!!!!

James Wood — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: James Wood As an individual investor in securities and the inherent ownership position therein, I plead with you not to reduce reporting requirements for companies. More information, and more transparency is always better in allowing informed business and investment decisions. The twice yearly reporting you are proposing allows too much time between reports for things to go south, and my ability to make timely decisions regarding my investments. Thank you in advance for your consideration in this matter.

Jan Swartzendruber — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Jan Swartzendruber Affiliation: Jun. 24, 2026 I am a 72 year-old woman in Wichita Kansas that relies on Social Security, renting my basement, and my late husband’s IRA to survive. His former 401(k) has been invested through my church related firm, Everence. Sometimes I resent the paperwork I receive every quarter reporting on the health of every fund., but I know that financial institutions with a conscience must be accountable for every penny, otherwise they could manipulate the system for their own profit. Every investment firm with pride in their integrity should be willing to report quarterly to protect the tiny investors such as myself from the enormous sharks in the tank who are willing to devour the little people like me. There isn’t any room in my monthly budget for shenanigans: don’t make any extra room in their accounting schedule for manipulation.

Jan Swartzendruber

Jane Anne Clark — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jane Anne Clark I believe investor transparency through regular quarterly transparent communication from businesses is important. I oppose reducing reporting to two times a year.

Janet Brehm — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Janet Brehm Please keep current quarterly performance reporting. As an investor, it allows for transparency and the most up to date information. Anything less will give insider investors an advantage. Thank you, Janet

---

Janet Locurto — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Janet Locurto What are they trying to hide.

Janice Shipley Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Janice Shipley I disagree with the reduction in transparent reporting to twice a year. This would increase anxiety for the investor and decrease trust in the company. Keep the quarterly reports to maintain a good working relationship between investor and businesses.

Jason — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jason Public-company reports should remain required at 4 times per year. I disagree with the proposal to allow companies to only be required to report twice a year.

Jason Carmichael — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jason Carmichael Allowing companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake. As a long term shareholder, I own a piece of a business. I deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Please do not implement this change.

Jason K Klassen — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jason K Klassen I disagree with reducing the reporting requirements to twice per year. I am already growing skeptical with market manipulation and insider information not shared with public. As a shareholder, I require more information on my investments, not less. We must maintain the minimum quarterly reporting. If not, I will have less trust in the markets and will reduce my investments in the stock market.

Jason Rodrigues The Motley Fool Community. — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jason Rodrigues Investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Please keep status quo!

---

jason rosonke — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: jason rosonke i feel that reducing the number of reports filed a year will reduce the transparency of the companies I own. As an owner we should have the right to more reports not less. This will only benefit companies and not the owners that invest in them.

Jason Schmeckpeper — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jason Schmeckpeper Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Jason Snook The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jason Snook I'm writing to oppose the proposed shift from quarterly to semiannual reporting. As an individual investor, I depend on regular disclosures to keep track of the companies I own. Cutting the number of reports in half won't slow these businesses down. They'll keep operating every day, winning and losing customers, succeeding and failing at new strategies. The only thing that changes is how much their owners get to see. I also don't buy the argument that fewer reports will cure short-term thinking. That impatience comes from how people react to information, not from the information existing in the first place. Take the reports away and investors don't become more patient. They just have less to go on, and when news finally does arrive after six months, the surprises are bigger and the swings are worse. I'd urge the Commission to keep the quarterly requirement in place. Investors are owners, and owners deserve to know how their businesses are doing.

Jay Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jay There is no harm in being more transparent but there is a lot of negatives if it is not so. Please keep the earnings reports mechanism the way it is today.

Jean Edin Retired Benefits Officer — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jean Edin As the benefits officer I reported pension and health funding information. Quarterly funding information was important to kept the organization on track to be sure benefits were funded appropriately for current and future payments. Changing to semi-annual reporting could put organizations funding decisions in jeopardy and give CEOs time to keep investors in the dark to poor decisions and outcomes.

Jean Paul Boucher — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jean Paul Boucher I support quarterly reporting of financial information by corporations. Please do not eliminate this requirement.

Jeff Austin — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeff Austin Please continue to keep investors informed of the businesses we invest in by mandating that companies report earnings 4x per year and stick to the quarterly system.

Jeff FIshman — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeff FIshman Investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Taking the reports away makes everyone less informed. It is also increasingly suspicious that government insiders are better informed than the general public.

Jeff Newton — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeff Newton Hi, I am worried about the proposal on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We need transparency for all the areas where people have responsibility for others, be it employment, finance or care services. There is enough evidence available highlighting what happens when information is surpressed and it is not good. I think all people in positions of power and influence should be accountable and transparent in their operations and this proposal is going in the opposite direction.

Jeff Platt Founder JCapper Software 2003 — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeff Platt I am vehemently opposed to changing financial reporting requirements for publicly traded companies from three months to six. Adopting that change significantly reduces transparency and negatively impacts individual investors such as myself. Adopting this change makes it easier for companies to hide bad news from the public for longer. Why in the world would ANY investor be in favor of this?

Jeff Skiles — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeff Skiles Please do not reduce the required frequency for public company financial reporting. As owners, shareholders need regular updates. In private companies, owners receive at least monthly reports. While I'm not currently proposing an increase, technology should make it more practical as time goes on to report more often, not less. Knowledge is power and should be maintained or increased, not reduced. Thank you for your time and attention.

Jeff Walkley — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeff Walkley The proposed rule reduces transparency and increases uncertainty for investors like me. Please do not proceed with this new semi-annual reporting rule.

Jeffery Nagel — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeffery Nagel I consider myself to be an owner in any company in which I have stock. I want to know how/what my company is doing more than twice a year. Also, although it is illegal, this change would increase insider trading.

Jeffrey Kuns Retail Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeffrey Kuns I am against lessoning the reporting frequency of companies. We have far more "issues" with companies going astray of ethical and financial transparency. We as individual investers need more information not less.

Jeffrey Richardson The motley fool community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeffrey Richardson I feel that greater transparency for the investor community is very important. I think it best to leave the reports at a quarterly level instead of biannual. Please consider for the investors.

Jeffrey T Butler — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeffrey T Butler Please keep company reporting requirements at 4 per year. Lack of transparency for investors is a step in the wrong direction.

Jennifer Byrdsong Small business owner — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Byrdsong Re: Proposed Semiannual Reporting Rule I am an individual investor and member of The Motley Fool Community. I respectfully oppose any proposal that would reduce public company reporting requirements from quarterly to semiannual reporting. Public markets function best when investors have timely, consistent, and transparent access to information. Quarterly reporting provides shareholders with regular insight into company performance, financial condition, strategic execution, and emerging risks. Reducing the frequency of required reporting would leave investors with less information while the businesses themselves continue to operate and evolve every day. Supporters of semiannual reporting suggest that it could reduce compliance costs and alleviate short-term market pressures. However, technological advancements, including modern reporting systems and artificial intelligence tools, have significantly lowered the burden of preparing and disseminating information. Furthermore, short-termism is a behavioral issue that should not be addressed by limiting the flow of information to investors. Less frequent reporting would likely increase uncertainty, widen information gaps between management and shareholders, and contribute to greater market volatility when information is eventually released. Investors, particularly individual investors, benefit from predictable and transparent disclosure schedules that allow them to make informed decisions based on current information. As an owner of public companies through my investments, I believe transparency is fundamental to market integrity. Reducing required disclosures from four times per year to two times per year would diminish transparency and weaken the connection between companies and their shareholders. I encourage the Commission to preserve quarterly reporting requirements and continue supporting policies that promote timely, fair, and transparent disclosure for all investors. Thank you for your consideration

---

Jennifer Losch — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Losch I think it's important to keep quarterly reporting for full transparency. I'm not in favor of reducing that.

Jennifer Lutz — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Lutz Reducing public-company reporting requirements from four times a year to just two would be a significant step backward for investor transparency and accountability. Investors are not spectators; they are owners, and owners deserve regular, timely information about the businesses they own. The argument that semiannual reporting would reduce costs is increasingly unpersuasive in an era of AI-driven reporting tools and streamlined disclosure processes. Likewise, claims that fewer reports would curb short-term thinking confuse the problem. Short-termism stems from how markets interpret information, not from the existence of information itself. Eliminating reports does not encourage patience—it simply leaves investors less informed. Companies continue to operate every day, making strategic decisions, winning and losing customers, and navigating risks and opportunities. Providing owners with only two official updates per year creates larger information gaps, increases uncertainty, and heightens the likelihood of sharp market reactions when news finally emerges. Transparency builds trust; reducing transparency erodes it and ultimately harms the very investors markets are designed to serve.

Jennifer Williams — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jennifer Williams Do NOT change the reporting requirements. The world moves too fast, AI enables more rapid reporting not slower or less frequent reporting. These reporting changes would allow companies to hide their information and delay market or investment response in a negative way — with potential for dramatic and potentially damaging consequences for investors, retirement funds, etc.

Jens Dall — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jens Dall Please ensure the reporting includes profit, people and planet. We do not have a planet B and a sustainable society is important for all of us.

Jeremy Eldridge — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jeremy Eldridge This is a poor idea. Reducing reporting requirements would decrease transparency for the very people who own and invest in these companies. Investors make informed decisions based on timely, accurate information, and less frequent reporting would provide less visibility into a company's financial performance, risks, and operational trends. For public companies, reduced transparency can undermine investor confidence, potentially increasing uncertainty and volatility while negatively impacting valuations. For shareholders, receiving updates only every six months instead of quarterly provides less information to assess management performance and make sound investment decisions. Public markets function best when participants have access to consistent, reliable information. Reducing reporting frequency moves in the opposite direction and benefits neither companies nor investors.

Jerome M. Schwartzman Senior Advisor and former Head of M&A Tax Services, Stout Risius Ross — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jerome M. Schwartzman Please reject the proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. That is an error that our financial system cannot bear.

Jerry Friedman — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jerry Friedman Hi. More information leads to better outcomes for those that need the info. Bi-annual reporting is in the interests of the corporate world but not the regular everyday investor who without quarterly reports would be in the dark. Please keep the 4-times per year requirement. Thank you

---

Jerry Kahn — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jerry Kahn i believe more disclosure of earning is better than less disclosure. i believe going away from quarterly updates will cause more fraud to persist rather then less fraud. please vote to continue with quarterly earning releases.

Jerry Pelt — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jerry Pelt Information comes at us faster than ever before and likely will continue to do so. The stock market seems to always reflect reactions to global and domestic events based on people's emotions rather than facts. The number of required times a company needs to report is helpful in putting facts out there for analysis. Decisions based on facts is always better than those based on rumors or emotions

---

Jesse Malin Pastor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jesse Malin Reducing the frequency of required public financial reporting will reduce transparency. This could easily lead to greater instability in the valuation of these companies. The proposed change would not help protect investors. The prosed change would not help maintain fair and orderly markets.

Jill de la Sota — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jill de la Sota I am in favor of maintaining quarterly reporting. As a private investor I appreciate more transparency and accountability from corporations, not less.

---

jim smith stock owner — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: jim smith KEEP THE REPORTING AS IS, MAY WANT TO INCREASE THE NOTIFICATIONS TO THE OWNERS OF STOCK IN COMPANIES!

Joan Marie Walthour retired teacher Need to keep it quarterly so we can budget and live our lives. — Jun 24, 2026 Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joan Marie Walthour retired teacher Need to keep it quarterly so we can budget and live our lives. Needs to remain quarterly so retired individuals can budget and live. "comments attached"

Jocelyn Dustan — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jocelyn Dustan Please do not eliminate required quarterly reporting. Less transparency destabilizes our economy and harms investors.

Joe Cottom — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joe Cottom In the interest of transparency, please continue requiring quarterly reports.

Joe Dolan — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joe Dolan I stand with the Motley Fool.

Joel Cleveland — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joel Cleveland RE: Your Proposal To Allow Companies to Reduce the Number of Public-company Reports from 4 Times a Year to Just 2 -- Please keep it at four. Moving it to just 2 is a mistake. Less information rarely produces better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty, but instead, it increases it. It is obvious that when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Thank you.

Joel Weinberg — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joel Weinberg It would be a mistake to reduce the requirements for reporting from four times a year to two. While it would make things easier for corporations and save them some money, it would deprive investors of critical information which currently helps them determine their investing decisions.

John A Morris Retired, Pensioner — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John A Morris Transparency helps protect us from ordinary sloppiness and actual misdeeds. As a retiree, I have a vested interest in them “showing their work”. It was a good idea in grade school; it still is.

John Allen — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Allen As an investor, I think it's a mistake to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two as it will provide less insight into company operations & finances which will result in my being less informed in my investment decision making.

John F. Cikota — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John F. Cikota I am not in favor of reducing the current reporting requirements of companies.

John G Wilson BSc Eng, MSc. — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John G Wilson Twice yearly reporting as opposed to quarterly reporting is distinctly not in the interests of shareholders. As part owners of the business, and investors therein, we need to be WELL informed about the business.

John Garbutt Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Garbutt A 4 to 2 annual reports cuts a company's responsibilities to be transparent to its shareholders. This will breed activity unbecoming within a company to cover up mishaps and misgivings within the company. After all they are playing with investor money. Investors count on the quarterly reports. Excuses given to do it are bogus. SEC do not let the 4 to 2 annual report happen.

John Hands — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Hands Please keep quarterly reporting so that I as an investor can better track the companies that I invest in. The information is available to the company leadership. It can be a very simple process to simply share this information with shareholders, especially with the tools available now. Do not change the rule from quarterly to semiannually reporting. Why keep us in the dark.

John Hoffman — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Hoffman Hello - I am completely opposed to allowing publicly held companies report earnings only twice per year. If that were to become the standard, there would be significantly more chance for fear and anxiety among individual investors due to long periods of time between reports. I believe this would lead to significantly more volatility. It certainly leads to less accountability for the publicly held companies. Thank you for your time.

John Kalter — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Kalter Too much can happen in six months for adequate evaluation of risk/reward for a current or prospective investment. Reject this proposal and keep the quarterly reporting in place.

John Marston Professor, Boston University — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Marston I write to urge the committee to reconsider the proposed Semiannual Reporting rule. As a long-time, successful investor in many individual companies, I rely on company quarterly filings to improve my knowledge of company finances and operations. Without quarterly filings, I would receive some information as late as 8 months after the period reported (if in the first month of a semiannual period), rendering that information out of date for making informed decisions about future investment in that company. The knowledge that companies are required to regularly report standard information to the SEC, and that such knowledge is made public to all investors simultaneously, places individual investors in a similar position of knowledge to large institutional investors and trading bots. It allows me to be successful against wealthy and large organizations. Removing half of this information lessens my ability to compete with institutional investors. Please reconsider this rule, which hurts investors like me.

John Musgrave — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Musgrave A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that's a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right? I believe that the current 10-Q quarterly reporting policy is better for the investing community.

John Smith — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Smith Ref proposed semi annual reporting. The proposal does little to help industry if anything, it would therefore seem far more sensible to retain the frequency we have. A lot can happen in business in six months that would not be possible in three months. Please retain the three months cycle.

John W. Rocha Retired CPA — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John W. Rocha Quarterly reporting gives the investment community (individuals, businesses, pension plans and so many more) the relevant information they need to make prudent investment decisions. Stretching that reporting period from quarterly to semi-annually is a really long time in our high speed digital world moving full speed toward artificial intelligence. Lengthening the reporting period is moving backward in time when technology is moving forward at ever faster speeds. Not sure what is driving this move toward semi-annual reporting, but I am totally against it.

John Watts Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: John Watts Transparency Transparency Transparency I'm not in favor of longer term reporting. Terrible idea!

Johnathan Malbon The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Johnathan Malbon At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Less information rarely creates better-informed owners.

Jon Fager Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jon Fager I am opposed to publicly traded companies cutting mandatory reporting from quarterly to biannually. As an individual who trades stocks both for income and for funding my retirement, I rely upon up-to-date, accurate information from companies in order to make investment decisions. Less information is in no way helpful. We need the greatest amount of transparency possible to monitor company health, decisions, and practices. Decreasing mandatory reporting hinders stock owners' abilities to make the best decisions possible.

Jon Jacobs Jacobs Legal Services / Shareholder in mulitple equities/options — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jon Jacobs You cannot take away our right as shareholders to know each quarter (minimum) what a company is reporting. This is ABSOLUTELY FLAWED thinking - as shareholders are entitled to know if something is awry and a company is withholding/skewing their reporting. DO NOT ALLOW THIS TO HAPPEN. We have elected you to represent us: to PROTECT shareholders of predatory companies.

Jon Shehan — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jon Shehan At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Jose R. Villanueva — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Jose R. Villanueva I think that corporate reporting to SEC and investors should be done more often. I oppose semiannual reporting. I would support monthly reporting as more accurate of company status and more useful to investors.

Joseph Blanchard (From Motley Fool Community) subscriber to Motley Fool at one of the highest levels — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joseph Blanchard (From Motley Fool Community) A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that’s a mistake! Make companies subit reports monthly or weekly because of AI all of this is possible at no extra costs. My thoughts, Joseph Blanchard (Motley Fool subscriber)

Joseph Grigely — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joseph Grigely The decision to allow a six-month option is a poor one and I urge the SEC to reject this. Financial accountability requires regular and frequent quarterly reports as a way of maintaining fiscal transparency. Stockholders own the companies they invest in--they need to know what is going on, when it is going on, to make informed decisions.

Joseph Huang — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joseph Huang Companies should not have the option to reduce the reporting from 4 times a year to 2 times a year. The current cadence of reporting is required for minority shareholders to understand what the executives and business managers are doing, and to keep them accountable.

Joseph M. Sanocki Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joseph M. Sanocki Communication is Key in just about everything to include marriage, job, and life in general. Even deaf people have a way to communicate. With that being said investors need to stay informed with no less information. It's our God given right to communicate.

Joseph Wilkinson None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joseph Wilkinson I am completely against reducing the number of reporting requirements from 4 to 2.

---

joseph zammit none — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: joseph zammit i like the present system for a elderly investor like me i can plan ahead

---

Josh Skillings — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Josh Skillings Public companies should continue to report four times a year. It is a mistake to let public companies report only two times a year. I want to know what the companies I am invested in are doing. In the Information Age, information is critical to making good decisions.

Joshua Chamberlain Day Trader — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Joshua Chamberlain I strongly oppose the proposal to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Less information about company reports is a step in the wrong direction, making stock market trading even less transparant than it is now.

Juan Pablo Laserna — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Juan Pablo Laserna Under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater

---

Julia Elledge Motley Fool community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Julia Elledge There is no way that companies reporting LESS information to investors will produce a good outcome. It would leave everyday investors essentially half blind. Meanwhile, businesses will be even less accountable to their owners, and insider trading will become even more profitable. No good can come of that either. This proposed change seems specifically designed to hurt the average investor while benefiting corporations. I strongly urge you to keep companies accountable to shareholders with quarterly reports.

Julie Mathiesen — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Julie Mathiesen I don't believe the number of annual public company reports should be reduced. If anything, they may need to be increased. Please maintain the current requirement for quarterly reporting. It's important for retirees such as myself that rely in investments for a portion of their income. Thank you.

Justin Henkels — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Justin Henkels Investors should be kept up to date 4 times a year and understand investments businesses are making may take years not months to see results but as share holders we should maintain a right to this information and prevent review of any potential fraudulent reports. If they have nothing to hide or mis lead they should easily be able to provide these reports quarterly. Thanks

---

K. Wierman Clinical Dietitian — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: K. Wierman Quarterly reporting needs to remain intact for transparency and fairness!

KANDAS MYER Motley Fool Group — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: KANDAS MYER More reporting is desirable than less. Informed decision making is the key.

Karen Abrams Private Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Abrams While requiring companies to only report two a year instead of quarterly may reduce a burden on the company, it would also leave investors in the dark on the actual status of the company's business revenue and/or losses for an extended period of time. This will ultimately result in volatile changes in the market and may, in fact, cause investors to lose considerable investment monies which might have been limited if a quarterly report was produced. Please do NOT change the rule from quarterly to semi-annual reporting.

Karen Frazer — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Frazer Please continue with quarterly reporting. Doing so on a semi annual basis does not allow us to have enough information to make fully vetted decisions.

Karen Maclean The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karen Maclean I am against reducing reporting requirements for publicly held companies from 4 times a year to 2 times a year. Investors have a right to regular communications in order to better understand what the companies are doing. This allows them to make better decisions about maintaining a position in a company or withdrawing.

Kari Fulton — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Kari Fulton Affiliation: Jun. 24, 2026 Quarterly reporting is key for efficiency and transparency. In the age of rapid technology advancements Andy's continued digital and international considerations, we should have stronger oversight not weaker. Keep quarterly reporting please

---

Karl E. Anderson The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Karl E. Anderson Please do not consider reducing the number of company guidance reports from four per year, to only twice per year! Sincerely, Karl Anderson

---

Katherine Lyle City University of New York — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Katherine Lyle It seems to me unconscionable that this matter of responsibility should be dropped in an (admittedly) increasingly irresponsible world. The records are kept; for God's sake share them with all the owners of the company!

Kathleen Grinavic The Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathleen Grinavic A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to optionally elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that's a mistake! Just because the rest of the world jumped off that bridge doesn't imply that the USA should. At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. The Fair Disclosure Act requiring quarterly reporting should remain. AI and other automations make the reporting much less burdensome than in the days of old. Do NOT make the quarterly reporting optional!

Kathy Corrigan — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathy Corrigan Keep the signature requirement as it is. We can't afford another Enron!! K.

Kathy L Umphress Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kathy L Umphress I am opposed to semi-annual reporting. As an investor, I own a piece of these businesses. Therefore, I need current information to make informed decisions. Thank you for your consideration.

Katrin Windsor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Katrin Windsor As an investor in stocks I nred and request regular and frequent reports. Quarterly or more! Reducing report frequency to twice a year will make me reluctant to invest in US stocks.

Keegan Motley fool community — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Keegan At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right?

Keith Spragg Private Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Keith Spragg No reason a company might give for reducing the amount of information provided to their shareholders can possibly be in the shareholders' interest.

Ken Joldersma — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ken Joldersma As an individual investor it is imperative to have regular information about the companies that I invest in. Quarterly is the absolute minimum that should be allowed. Going to twice a year keeps us in the dark and that can have a devastating on the financial well being of myself and others like me. Do not let this reporting change to twice a year! Thank you

---

Ken Mathias The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ken Mathias More transparency is always better than less unless national security is at stake. That doesn't apply here. Do not reduce reporting requirements. Reduction allows for businesses to go further off the rails before investors know.

Kent Lang — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kent Lang We are living in a digital information age. No need to return to the 1950's. I like as much information as possible about the businesses I own. I can't believe this is even being considered. I work in retail and I'm mandated to report business activities on a daily basis. If anything I'd like to receive MONTHLY updates from these companies NOT quarterly updates!

Kerry Scrivens — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kerry Scrivens This is a serious mistake! Investing is ownership. When I own a piece of a business, I deserve regular, transparent communication from that business.

Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. I want the information available on a regular basis, and reducing the frequency of reporting clouds the progress or lack of it with regards to company performance. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Please don't allow the reporting reduction to occur!

Kevin A. Finance — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin A. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

---

kevin alix — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: kevin alix Less is more rarely supports transparency or better informed investors. We need access to more information to make informed investment decisions and provide feedback to our corporate management.

Kevin Dummer — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin Dummer Holding shares in a company means being part owner. I think getting quarterly updates fosters the necessary transparency to the business owners. I think semi-annual updates will degrade that transparency and will weaken my ability to make intelligent and informed investment decisions.

Kevin Gerard Cooper — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin Gerard Cooper Transparency is a must to ensure investors invest in stable companies.

Kevin Mason The Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin Mason I would like for the current recommendation to report twice yearly to be rejected. As an investor, receiving reports more often, like the current cycle of four times per year, is the most needed.

Kevin Wilson None — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kevin Wilson A reduction in reporting is bad for investors and does not reduce costs. As someone who works in financial reporting, not a dollar would be saved by reducing quarterly reports to bi annual reports.

Kim Londono — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kim Londono It’s in the best interest of the public to have access to updated reporting to keep the general public informed.

Kobus Raubenheimer — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kobus Raubenheimer Please do NOT allow companies to report only twice a year. The regular quarterly reporting makes perfect sense to continue. In todays fast moving business environment, twice yearly reporting is not sufficient in my opinion

---

Kris Cedeno — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kris Cedeno At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Kristopher Terrones — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kristopher Terrones I invest in many companies and the more transparency the better, two reports annually is simply not enough.

Kurt Vogel — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Kurt Vogel Please maintain all current transparencies for individual investors. Thank you.

Lance Hettinger Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lance Hettinger I firmly believe that required corporate financial reporting should be maintained on a quarterly basis. As a part owner of a business, I deserve to have transparency of company's actions on a timely basis. Semi-annually is simply too much time to go without tangible feedback on company performance. This would be an unwise decision to accept on the part of any business owner. This would be unfair to shareholders (part owners) of any publicly traded company.

Laura Canada Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Canada I think reducing the number of reporting periods for businesses is a huge step back for investors and the stock market as a whole. Investors need current, updated information to make wise investment decisions. In a fast-paced world, things move too quickly to push reporting back to semi-annual disclosures. Timely information is crucial. It's imperative that we keep reporting requirements quarterly in order to keep investors (the owners of the company) informed.

Laura Johnson — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Johnson Even being a small investor I know the importance of knowledge, and receiving quarterly reports is absolutely crucial. Semi-annual reports leave a debilitating information gap. The investing populace will NOT take kindly to your tampering with OUR money. Therefore, I strongly state my opposition to your proposal!

Laura Katrina retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Katrina We need greater transparency to protect the individual investors. I oppose changing the current rule for corporations to report four times a year, changing it so they only need to report two times a year.

Laura Vandenbosch — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Vandenbosch The proposal to allow financial reports to be submitted semi-annually, rather than quarterly, hurts individual investors' access to information needed to manage their accounts in their best interest. I currently live in a city that only bills us every 2 months for water and sewer services. Recently our bill went up 134%. But, we didn't find out for 2 months. If we were billed every month, we would have identified that there was a problem sooner and been able to fix it and save money. Same with financial reporting. It needs to be every quarter. It is all automated with programs, anyway. It is not like people are sitting at desks doing calculations every month, quarter or six months. Do not adopt this rule.

Laura Weibel Administrative — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Weibel We need more transparency, not less transparency Investors have a right to know or fraud will corrupt the system even further

---

Laura Woodworth CEO, Factotum Business Services, LLC — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laura Woodworth As an investor myself and as the owner of an accounting services company, I am against reducing mandatory public reports from 4 to 2 times per year. The anticipated reduction in costs to publicly-held companies is a small benefit compared to the great loss of information to investors and advisors. Less information never leads to better-informed decisions.

Laurie Curtis Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laurie Curtis All publicly traded companies should be accountable to those who hold stock in the company in a timely manner so that investors may check on their investments. Twice yearly is NOTa timely manner. Investors' money will be needlessly put at risk while they have no visibility to the health of the company. My investments in stock should be better protected than this new ruling would allow.

Laurie Dunlap Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Laurie Dunlap The current reporting requirements should remain in place. Any individual who owns stocks should be kept informed regarding earnings etc. on a quarterly basis. This is important for all investors.

Lawrence A. Murakami The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lawrence A. Murakami I am against reducing quarterly reporting requirements to semi-annual reporting. Investing is ownership. When I own a piece of a business, I deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens my connection with companies I own a part of. Less transparency increases uncertainty.

Lawrence Akutagawa Ordinary US citizen — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lawrence Akutagawa SEC: I disagree with the proposal to reduce required quarterly earnings reports by publicly held companies to semiannual reports. a) I can find no investor-related rationale—legal or financial—demonstrating any problem with the current system of quarterly reporting that would necessitate a change to semiannual reporting. b) A level playing field is needed to provide investors with fair and timely transparency into a public company's financial condition and operations. Standardized quarterly reporting accomplishes this. Allowing longer intervals between required reports leaves investors increasingly dependent on a company's discretion regarding what events are disclosed and when they are disclosed during a six-month period. c) The old adage about not fixing something that is not broken applies here. Quarterly reporting has served investors well for decades. If there is no demonstrated problem requiring correction, there is no compelling reason to reduce the frequency of required reporting. I therefore oppose this proposal and urge the SEC to retain the current quarterly reporting requirements.

Lawrence H. Woods Jr — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lawrence H. Woods Jr Must be 4 times a year not two!

Lawrence Leake Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lawrence Leake Reducing public-company reporting requirements from four times a year to just two would be a significant step backward for investor transparency and accountability. Investors are not spectators; they are owners, and owners deserve regular, timely information about the businesses they own. The argument that semiannual reporting would reduce costs is increasingly unpersuasive in an era of AI-driven reporting tools and streamlined disclosure processes. Likewise, claims that fewer reports would curb short-term thinking confuse the problem. Short-termism stems from how markets interpret information, not from the existence of information itself. Eliminating reports does not encourage patience—it simply leaves investors less informed. Companies continue to operate every day, making strategic decisions, winning and losing customers, and navigating risks and opportunities. Providing owners with only two official updates per year creates larger information gaps, increases uncertainty, and heightens the likelihood of sharp market reactions when news finally emerges. Transparency builds trust; reducing transparency erodes it and ultimately harms the very investors markets are designed to serve.

Leonard Kolada — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leonard Kolada Less is not more. Semiannual reporting only makes information more opaque. Quarterly reporting has been effective for decades now. The fiasco with the National Mall Reflecting Pool is one thing. Let's not make a change here that will result in an even bigger fiasco. Keep the rules as they are now. Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Leroy Sloan Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leroy Sloan Quarterly public company reporting should be maintained. Regular quarterly transparent reporting from public companies will ensure timely, adequate full disclosure of company status and health which is paramount for well informed investment decisions. Biannual reporting allows for too much time and change to elapse for investors to effectively decide where and when to direct their investments. Simply stated: Six months is an eternity in the investment world.

Leslie Greening — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Leslie Greening Please keep the quarterly reporting requirement. It is important for transparency and security and fairness for smaller investors.

Lewis Hardin — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lewis Hardin Please do not reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We need more transparency, not less.

Lewis&Sharron Fool community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lewis&Sharron Transparency is key. Semi yearly reporting to me from a company I am in partial ownership of is NOT ACCEPTABLE! Quarterly must remain the standard for reporting to shareholders!

Linda Burrows — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Burrows Quarterly reports inform business owners of company performance, keeping them regularly informed. Halfing this may lead to uncertainty and volatility.

Linda Lampron prosper trading academy — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Lampron please keep the reporting at least 4 times each year. it is detrimental to my long term interests to receive less information on my stocks and investments. As a retiree and as a service connected combat veteran it is crucial that I have full information on the companies in which I invest. DO NOT DECREASE REPORTING REQUIREMENTS!

Linda Owen Retired Investment Advisor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Linda Owen Keep the quarterly reporting requirements. This information is vital to investors and their advisors to properly manage their investment portfolio. Removing this requirement is detrimental to every investor yet benefits only company insiders. This creates the opportunity for companies to cover up bad performance information for six months and potentially cause significant losses for their investors and shareholders. Keep the quarterly reporting requirements! Linda B Owen Retired Investment Advisor

---

Lisa Campbell Me myself and I — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Campbell Individual investors deserve more information not less.!! I am a part of the Mötley fool and I am here to voice my concerns. Please do not cut the information I received on the companies I invest in. I rely on my quarterly reports! This didn’t help the UK and it’s not gonna help the USA. Just say no.

Lisa Ettorre — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Ettorre I believe it's imperative for companies to continue to provide investors with quarterly updates to ensure transparency and up-to-date information.

Lisa Rafferty Client Coordinator — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lisa Rafferty Do not allow Shenanigans to commence in the dark. These big companies canafford a reporting team who works QUARTERLY to provide transparency. Do not promote this dubious assistance for it is not necessary as nothing is broken! Thank you

---

Lloyd A Vermont Sr Motley Fool Communiy — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lloyd A Vermont Sr I do NOT agree with the suggestion to reduce Quarterly Company Reports (4) to Half Yearly Reports (2) As part owner of a business, the 4 convey MUCH MORE information, and on a more time-sensitive basis, than the 2

Lorenzo Ferlazzo, Acquaequity — Jun 24, 2026
MARKET PERSPECTIVES
A C Q U A E Q U I T Y

SEC REPORTING WAIVER ?
June 2026
SEC Reporting Waiver ?
A collaborative Acquaequity and NotebookLM assessment following a review of differentiated published expert opinion.
The original IAC primer at,
https://www.sec.gov/files/draft-recommendation-iaosubc ommittee-quarterly-semi-annual-reporting-052026.pdf
Public comments due
6 July, 2026
A C Q U A E Q U I T Y
S I G N A L · I N T E L L I G E N C E · R E F E R E N C E

Louise Coombes — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Louise Coombes As an active investor, one must keep a finger on the pulse of those companies in which one invests. Quarterly reports provide vital information to assess the performance of the company and to have less information if the legislation changes to only semi-annual reporting is detrimental to the investors providing the capital investment in those companies. I urge the SEC to reconsider this change in policy and continue to provide investors with the necessary details to make informed investment decisions. Best regards, Louise Coombes

---

LTMoon — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: LTMoon MORE REPORTS !!!!!! NOT LESS!!!!!! REPEAT -- MORE REPORTING!!!!!!

Lu — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lu Please keep quarterly reporting!

Lynn — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lynn Please do not move forward with the semi annual reporting proposal. Quarterly statements are the backbone of investor information. If the issue is cost driven then please propose online or email distribution of quarterly reports. I would contend that less information rarely creates better-informed owners.

Lynn mohlenhoff Banker, retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lynn mohlenhoff The system was put in place to prevent fraud. It was alot of work prior to being computerised. There is no good reason to remove the consumer protection now.

Lynne Carreiro N/A — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Lynne Carreiro As a retail investor with an independent entrepreneurial business and a family, I am very passionate and invested in having quarterly stock reports, not bi-annually. It better helps me to understand the businesses I am interested investing in and I feel very strongly that a six month window would not give me the opportunity to understand their financial commitment, business plan, and growth in a timely manner. Thank you Lynne Carreiro President

---

M & D Investments Managing Partner — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: M & D Investments Allowing the reporting to be reduced to twice a year is ridiculous. More chances for something being out of whack and investors being unaware of improprieties.

M Vierstra .MOTLEY FOOL — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: M Vierstra Do not change to semi annual. Keep it at 4xs a year.

Macy None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Macy I am object

Manuel Peralta — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Manuel Peralta I 100% agree with the Motley Fool stand on less transparency is less overall knowledge for the individual investor. On the contrary, I believe openness is better for everyone and especially those on Main Street. Thanks.

Mar Isen — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mar Isen My name is Mar Isen, I’m a financial analyst. Transparency is vital to fair business, decreased reporting makes it difficult to gage a business’s standing, can lead to an increase in insider trading.

Marc McFarland — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marc McFarland Don't!

Marc Morales — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marc Morales Reducing reporting doesn’t make people more patient, and reduce reaction to news but it does leave me less informed. I am an investor and I want to know how the companies I invest are doing on a regular and frequent basis. This reduction in reporting will not reduce costs. With the capabilities of AI, the costs of reporting are arguably less expensive today than ever before. Do not allow the frequency of reporting to be reduced.

Marcela Medina Motley Fool Community, Morgan Stanley, Charles Dchwab — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marcela Medina Please keep existing reporting regulations in place. Transparency is essential for investor participation and ownership of stocks. It would be irresponsible for the SEC to suggest, recommend or implement less reporting requirements.

Marco Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marco Keep 4/year reporting.

Marcus Eichhorn — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marcus Eichhorn Reporting should still be on a quarterly basis as business decisions and outcomes need to be acted upon in a timely fashion. Reducing the reports will only leave to Much to chance and less accountability to managers and CEOS

Margaret Breece NA — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Margaret Breece Margaret Breece Retired Decatur, AL It has been proven in America's history that 6-month reporting negatively affects the return on investments. As a retired person, my retirement savings CANNOT afford any additional reduction. Especially when it can be avoided by leaving quarterly reporting alone. Does the SEC never learn from our history? The system isn't broken. Please leave it alone. Thank you.

Maria Korre None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Maria Korre The lemons problem or asymmetric information is something that needs to be constantly equalised between companies and investors, as well as consumers and civilians who might not be as aware of how decisions impact them. How is reporting only twice a year contributing to combating and further equalising asymmetric information?

Mark A. Burnheimer Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark A. Burnheimer Please, please, please do NOT cut the number of reports required of companies to prepare and distribute. With the onset of AI and Crypto, investing is moving very fast. Individual investors never have access to the information that the institutions have and reducing or delaying access to any information (such as quarterly reports) only serves to cripple individual investors even further. The investment system is already staked against the individual investor... PLEASE do not punish the individual investor further. This information is critical and should not be further delayed. Thank you.

Mark Airs — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Airs This is ridiculous - open and transparent communication to shareholders should not be watered down. There is enough breaches of corporate governance already to warrant if anything an increase in reporting obligations!

---

mark christina — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: mark christina At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. we need those reports 4 times to know what is going on with company. they make enough money to do it especially with ai helping.

Mark Dreyer The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Dreyer I oppose File No. S7-2026-15. As an individual investor, I rely on timely quarterly disclosures to evaluate companies I own and make informed decisions. Allowing companies to replace quarterly reporting with semiannual reports would create longer periods of uncertainty, reduce transparency, and increase the risk of unpleasant market surprises. Cost savings should not come at the expense of investors' access to current, standardized financial information. Please retain quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. Affiliation: The Motley Fool Community

---

Mark Ewert — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Ewert Dear Securities and Exchange Commission,I am writing to strongly oppose the proposal to make mandatory quarterly reporting optional for public companies . The quarterly reporting system (Form 10-Q) provides a critical baseline of transparency that protects individual investors. Shifting to semiannual reporting will double the information gap between corporate insiders and everyday shareholders, increasing the risk of undisclosed financial distress or market abuse going undetected for months . While the SEC's goal is to reduce regulatory burdens, that burden should not be offset by blindfolding retail investors. Trust in U.S. public markets is built on the belief that everyone is working from the same basic set of facts. I urge the Commission to abandon this proposal and maintain the quarterly reporting cadence."

Mark Fetterplace — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Fetterplace I am definately opposed to anyreduction in company reporting frequency. As a part owner (share holder)I need to know whats happening at least quarterly

---

Mark Green — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Green A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that's a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Allowing public companies to report just two times a year instead of four is a bad idea. My comments above are just some of the reasons why. Please do not allow this bad idea to move forward. It will hurt all business investors. Sincerely, A deeply concerned investor

---

Mark Iwanowski — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Iwanowski This is a very bad idea as quarterly reporting is essential for investors.

Mark MacDonald — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark MacDonald Please keep company public reporting requirement at four times per year. Stockholders and investors need more company information, not less, and are owed regular and frequent, transparent communications from the company. Allowing public companies to report only twice per year goes against these principles, and only serves to increase risk and uncertainty. Do not change the reporting requirements for public companies!

Mark Obrinsky The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Obrinsky I strongly oppose this proposal. Investors are owners. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Taking the reports away just makes everyone less informed. Less information will not create better-informed owners. Under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. That is a mistake. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Mark Ottenad — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Ottenad Businesses, their shareholders and the public deserve regular, transparent communication from businesses. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Under this proposal, shareholder owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Please do Not advance the proposed rule S7-2026-15 that reduces corporate reporting to Semiannual Reporting, and maintain the current quarterly corporate reporting. Thank you.

Mark R. Brux — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark R. Brux We as investor-owners (directly as stockholders or indirectly as holders of MFs or ETFs) & our fund managers deserve quarterly reporting at a minimum by public companies! No opt-out to semi-annual only! Less (frequent) transparency doesn't eliminate market uncertainty-- it increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. The markets do not need that. Thank you.

Mark Spitz Retired Software Professional — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mark Spitz I believe that in order to be completely informed of a companies operation, an individual, stock holder, or financial professional, needs reports each quarter. Reducing this to twice a year can mean that a company can implement operational changes that are unknown for a period of time that may prevent interested parties (stock holders, and others) from being able to question, or act, in a timely manner.

Marsha L DePriest — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Marsha L DePriest When reducing reporting occurrences from four times a year to only two, it hurts open communication. We need more openness in this country, not less.

Martec Trainer The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Martec Trainer Oppose the change to make the reporting Semiannual

---

Martin Farnan Program Manager at Equal1 (A Quantum Computer Company) — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Martin Farnan Quarterly reporting is important for enabling investors to closely monitor the company's activities and decide promptly whether to trade shares. The reporting requirements, although in some cases they may be too much effort, keep the management team accountable to the company's public shareholders. Many companies are listed in multiple jurisdictions, and introducing this change will not reduce the effort required of these companies.

Martin Jost Individual — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Martin Jost As an individual investor and stock holder I strongly object to the proposed rule change that would require public companies to report only twice a year. As a stockholder, and thus part company owner, I want the businesses in which I have a stake to be transparent so that I can monitor how the business is performing. Twice yearly reporting reduces transparency and increase my risk of holding a stock investment. This harms me. I become less informed, less able to analyze situations in a timely manner, and less able to react to changing business conditions. As overseers of financial markets I ask you to uphold the public interest and reject the proposal to eliminate quarterly reporting requirements. Leave things as they are with regards to quarterly corporate financial reporting. Regards, -Martin Jost

---

Martin Koers Retired accountant — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Martin Koers In my 40+ years of service, I never had a problem with monthly or quarterly closings and reporting, in fact it alerted me/us to areas that required attention. We certainly want to avoid another ENRON!

MARTIN RAFANAN — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: MARTIN RAFANAN To Whom It May Concern: This message is to express concerns a proposal that is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that's a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When I own a piece of a business, I would deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Please consider rescinding this proposal and thereby maintaining the current process of four times a year. Respectfully, Martin Rafanan

---

Mary Conway Retirec — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Conway Leave the stocks reporting prices as it is. All of you wealthy and powerful people just want to keep grinding us into the ground. Stop it. Your power will not last forever. We will come back.

Mary ODonnell — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary ODonnell I'm against this proposal. This will degrade the banking and investment industry. On one hand we have interests who want to do away with social security and then you have the short sighted parties who want to reduce the frequency of financial/performance reporting of PUBLICLY held companies. Next thing you know they'll be proposing we euthanize the elderly based on a cost/benefit analysis. This sounds like the Trump dynasty devised this proposal. Metrics are the guiding light for investors. Four data points versus two is more likely to keep publicly held companies honest.

Mary Scheid The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Scheid I am a shareholder in several companies. By definition, as a shareholder that makes me a part owner in that company. I am strongly against the proposed regulation to do reporting two times year versus the current four times a year. I have a right to know what is going on "regularly"…and 2 times a year is not frequent enough. Too much happens in 6 months. Quarterly reporting is the right timing to keep shareholders informed. Hence my vote is against this proposed regulation.

Mary Souza — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mary Souza All business owners and CEO's should personally sign every quarterly financial statement.

Maryann ford Nobe — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Maryann ford Please don’t allow public companies to only report twice a year. Less is absolutely not more in this situation. Please don’t put retail investors at even more of a disadvantage than we already are by allowing this proposal to go through.

Maryanne Mclaughlin — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Maryanne Mclaughlin Affiliation: Jun. 24, 2026 Keep quarterly reporting. The current administration is blatantly corrupt and profits from the offices they hold. I've paid more in taxes throughout my life than billionaires. Income inequality is a disgrace in our country Supreme Court is controlled by felon 47 and citizens must fight back.
Maryanne Mclaughlin, Retired claim specialist

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Mas Southwood Gordon Marketing — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mas Southwood Please keep earnings reports to 4 times a year. We need the information to be current.

Mathias Pastore Individual Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mathias Pastore I think it is a mistake to reduce mandatory reporting requirements, for publicly traded companies, to twice per year from the currently required quarterly reports. As an individual investor, I rely on the quarterly reports to keep me informed on my investments and on my future investments. Less frequent reports means less transparency shown to investors by corporate boards.

Matt Horvath None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matt Horvath Quarterly reporting should be maintained. Fraud and financial shenanigans are far more likely to surface with quarterly reports and the often associated management earnings calls vs semiannual reporting. If the impetus of this proposed rule change is to reduce the burden of being a public company then SOX compliance requirements should be reduced, not reporting frequency.

Matt Ryan The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matt Ryan More reporting not less please

---

Matthew Deak Retired Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew Deak I am opposed to reducing the reporting requirement from 4 times per year to 2 times per year. More information on a more frequent basis should be available to investors. The proposal would be a move in the wrong direction. Any argument indicating the existing reporting requirement is a burden is disingenuous. As AI continues to improve, reporting will almost certainly become less burdensome. If anything, there should be consideration to increase the reporting requirements to monthly for businesses with gross sales in the top 25 percent of publicly traded companies (as calculated using the previous full calendar year's gross sales).

Matthew Herring — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew Herring Do not reduce company reporting from 4 times a year to 2. Thank you,

---

Matthew Mahtesian The Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew Mahtesian I am concerned that the upcoming proposal to limit company reporting from 4 times a year to 2 times a year will negatively impact making sound and informed decisions regarding investing. I am not a supporter of the upcoming proposal and I believe it will negatively affect transparency regarding my ability to make sound investment decisions.

Matthew ONeill — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew ONeill If anything there should be more transparency from our corporations to protect investors and keep them informed on their investments. Reducing reporting to twice a year is moving in the wrong direction.

Matthew Petitt — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Matthew Petitt I am writing to comment on the proposal to change to semiannual reporting by publicly traded companies. I have been a private retail investor for 8 years. I enjoy learning about companies, investing in their growth and partaking in the American dream to generate generational wealth for me and my family. As a retail investor, I am already at a disadvantage to Wall Street, large investing firms, quantitative trading systems, and professional analysts. I rely on quarterly earnings report to make my investment decisions. By cutting these reports in half, I will be an even larger disadvantage. Semiannual reporting will swing the pendulum even further to favor Wall Street over the individual investors like me. It is the SEC duty to keep the markets as fair and transparent as possible. Semiannual reporting will go against this duty. Please stop the proposal for semiannual reporting and continue with quarterly reports.

Mechelle — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mechelle What do they want to hide? These are not trustworthy people they need to be held and that would be very difficult if they have no one to answer to!! Our money our choice!

MEDIA ONE HOLDINGS, LLC Managing Member — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: MEDIA ONE HOLDINGS, LLC I agree that nformation on public companies should be FOUR times per year. At Least onece per quarter. This will efficiently inform the situation with the company.

Mehir Desai — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mehir Desai Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Melissa Lieberman — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Melissa Lieberman I strongly disagree with the proposed change from quarterly to semiannually reporting for companies that are publicly traded. Investors should always have greater transparency with respect to the financial standing of the businesses they are invested in or are considering investing in. In a free market, one thing the federal government should regulate, is fair access to pertinent changes and trends in the businesses data of publicly traded stocks. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners, and it will in turn make the markets more volatile. Decreasing public reporting will increase investor's concerns and erode the foundation which exists in one of the greatest stock exchanges in the world.

Melissa Stutz — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Melissa Stutz Reporting twice a year is a terrible action for publicly held institutions! Investors deserve to get full quarterly reports for investment purposes. Withholding quarterly reports would invite fraudulent reporting, or at least invite large omissions of information.

Melody Peterson Motley Fool contributor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Melody Peterson Corporations must be held accountable on a quarterly basis for financial and earnings reports! We ALL deserve and demand transparency and timeliness in this matter!

Menito Carino — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Menito Carino I respectfully believe in Motley Fools stand that reporting be done quarterly for better transparency. Thank much!

Meredith Hudson investor — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Meredith Hudson Subject: Opposition to Proposed Semi-Annual Reporting Rule (File No. S7-2026-15) > I am writing to object to the proposal to allow public companies to switch to semi-annual reporting (File No. S7-2026-15). Investing is fundamentally about ownership, and owners have a right to regular, transparent communication from the businesses they fund. > Reducing official updates to twice a year does not solve the issue of short-termism—which is driven by market behavior, not data frequency. In an age of AI and highly efficient disclosure technology, the cost-saving argument is also weak. > Companies operate, compete, and change every single day. Cutting communication in half will not create more patient investors; it will only create less-informed ones. Less transparency inevitably leads to greater uncertainty, larger surprises, and higher market volatility. I urge the SEC to reject this proposal and protect shareholder transparency.

Michael A Duran — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael A Duran A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that's a mistake!

Michael A Grayson — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael A Grayson Information equals transperancy equals understanding of the business. The production of quarterly reports keeps investors on top of the businesses that they are holding shares in. The modern tools for handling data and reporting it make quarterly reports less onerous than they were in years past. I want to be kept up to date with quarterly reports. Too much can happen with six months between reports.

Michael Blair — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Blair Hello, I am against changing the reporting period to Semi-Annual. I, along with many others, use the current reports to evaluate performance and to plan my activities, sell, buy, hold, based on those reports. A six month cycle would not be frequent enough for me to properly prepare and evaluate performance. Please keep the current schedule. Cheers.

Michael DAlessandro — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael DAlessandro Transparency in financial reporting is critical for investor owners. Semi annual reporting is not enough. Maintain quarterly reporting.

Michael David Wistrand — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael David Wistrand Please stop the SEC from keeping information regarding publicly traded companies from withholding information that all investors have the right to know

---

Michael Fernandes The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Fernandes Please continue to remain unchanged in terms of reporting frequency. We are small investors and need to be aware of quarterly changes that happen at companies we are investing in. Thank you.

Michael Foster — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Foster Doing away with quarterly reports will only lead to more corrupt trading by insiders. Keep the reports transparent!!!

Michael Hackett — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Hackett To Whom It May Concern: I believe that more transparency is always a good thing, at any level of business or government. Having a market with full information about its content can only lead to less shocks when targets are missed. Reporting less frequently means that the market has more time to change in unexpected ways, which will mean that there is more time for deviation from published guidance. It is said that bubbles need something to prick it, otherwise they just slowly deflate. Having less transparency means there is more chance of a black swan event taking the public and governments by surprise.

Michael Hedley — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Hedley When a company lists on the ASX they are fully aware of their obligations. If they are unprepared to comply with those, they shouldn't proceed with the listing. If it is a financial cost that is not affordable, then, again, they should reconsider their position. As stated in the article, selling the company to shareholders, they become part owners of that company, albeit "silent" owners. "Comments attached"

Michael Lapomardo — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Lapomardo Please do not pass this bill as it would deprive investors of information needed to make informed decisions. Long term investors need to be able to track what a company is doing on a consistent basis. With all the unrest and disagreement in government this could be construed as another way in which our elected officials are not doing what the people who elected them feel is important and rather you are following the lead of lobbyists and donors. Thank you for your consideration

---

Michael Mailloux — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Mailloux Quarterly corporate reporting is needed to ensure transparency in how businesses are performing. As an individual investor this information is critical to understanding what is happening with companies. I don't have the resources to generate other sources of information. Please continue to require quarterly corporate reporting.

Michael Pilcher The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Pilcher Less reporting is not helpful to investors.

Michael Resseguie The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Resseguie A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. This is a mistake. It's important to keep investors informed of a company's progress and activity, and reporting 4 times each year is the best way to do this. I do not support the proposal to allow corporations to report just twice per year.

MICHAEL S FOLEY — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: MICHAEL S FOLEY I would like to comment on the proposed Semiannual Reporting rule. Allowing companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two would be a huge mistake! For sure receiving less information rarely creates better-informed owners. And less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty, it increases it. This rule should not be approved or implemented for the sake of all investors and I hope that this is the decision that is eventually chosen.

Michael Schen none — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Schen This proposal is pure BULL SHIT! Quarterly reporting is essential for transparency, truth, and disclosure to American citizens and investors world wide. There is NO GOOD REASON to go to semiannual.

Michael Standing Wolf — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Standing Wolf Shareholders need quarterly information to determine if the company is being managed properly compared to competitors. It is our investments we intend to protect at all costs.

Michael Wakefield — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Michael Wakefield Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. I oppose the change to semiannual reporting.

Mickey A. Fink — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mickey A. Fink I'm against this proposal. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater

---

Midtown Investment, Inc. — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Midtown Investment, Inc. I DO NOT want LESS reporting from public companies.

Miguel Esteban Villar MBA, Telecommunication Engineer, High Degree in Philosophy — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Miguel Esteban Villar I think thar reducing from 4 quarterly reports to 2 semi annual reports is a big mistake. Investing decisions are based on information. The more informatin available the most accurate decisions can be made. If the idea underlying in such a proposal is that near term pressure will decrease, I believe that is a wrong perception. If only two public reports are available yearly, the effect will be that the reactions after a report is issued will be by far more violent fron the investor community, increasing market volatility. Probably the desired effect of reducing market volatility will turn as a matter of fact in the opposite direction.

Mihai-Aurelian Olaru — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mihai-Aurelian Olaru I do not agree with this initiative.

Mike Hollamon — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mike Hollamon reporting 4 times a year is important for me to see short term growth or loss in revenue

---

Mike Sexton Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mike Sexton Investors need quarterly reports! Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. 4 times per year. Not 2.

Miles Harbur Owner, Miles Harbur CS — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Miles Harbur At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. I have my own business and invest my own money and up-to-date information – daily, weekly, monthly, quarterly, etc. – is very important and valuable to me to make good decisions for myself and my family. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. I urge you to not to reduce quarterly reporting requirements. Thank you

---

Millie Cason Managing Partner, BioPharm Insights — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Millie Cason A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that's a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners.

Min Shen, Associate Professor of Accounting, Philip G. Buchanan Fellow, Costello College of Business, George Mason University; K. Ramesh, Herbert S. Autrey Professor of Accounting, Jones Graduate School of Business, Rice University; Edward Li, Professor of Accounting, Stan Ross Department of Accountancy, Baruch College, CUNY; Donal Byard, Irving Weinstein Professorship in Accountancy & Chair, Stan Ross Department of Accountancy, Baruch College, CUNY — Jun 24, 2026

June 24, 2026
Vanessa A. Countryman
Secretary, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission
100 F Street, N.E.
Washington, D.C. 20549-1090
Re: File No. S7-2026-15; Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; Semiannual Reporting
Dear Ms. Countryman:
We welcome the opportunity to comment on the Securities and Exchange Commission's proposed amendments that would allow Exchange Act reporting companies to elect semiannual reporting on a new Form 10-S in lieu of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q ("the proposal"). We write as academics with extensive experience conducting research that examines SEC periodic reports, earnings announcements, information intermediaries, and the dissemination and processing of public company disclosures. We appreciate the proposal's careful economic analysis of the potential costs and benefits of the proposed rule change. Drawing on our experience as active researchers in this field, we aim to clarify relevant findings from the academic literature and to highlight important operational considerations that may arise in implementing the proposed rule change.
Broadly speaking, we support the Commission's general approach of making semiannual reporting optional rather than mandatory. In our view, the evidence does not support a one-size-fits-all conclusion that quarterly Form 10-Q filings are equally valuable for all issuers and all investor bases. At the same time, the research also suggests that standardized SEC filings, auditor involvement, Form 8-K reporting, Regulation FD, and information intermediaries remain important components of the capital market information infrastructure. There is a delicate balance to preserve: allowing for firm-level flexibility, while maintaining across-firm comparability. The most appropriate policy response is therefore not to eliminate quarterly reporting, but, as proposed by the SEC, to permit firms to elect the reporting frequency that best fits their circumstances, subject to market discipline and continued safeguards that preserve timely, broad, and non-exclusionary dissemination of material information.
I. Summary of Our Views
We agree with many of the proposal's key insights that the Commission has drawn from its analysis of the relevant academic research. No theory specifies an optimal frequency of financial reporting that applies to all firms. Given that firms are heterogeneous across multiple dimensions, such as size, industry, age, complexity, and investor base, the optimal reporting frequency is likely to vary across firms. Firm management is also well positioned to evaluate the costs and benefits of reporting more or less frequently.

1 Our overall view is that the proposal is best understood as a move from a mandatory uniform quarterly reporting regime to a regulated choice regime, not as a retreat from public-company disclosure.
1 Academic research has examined the pros and cons of financial reporting frequency. For instance, the empirical study by Fu, Kraft, and Zhang (2012) finds that higher financial reporting frequency reduces information asymmetry and the cost of equity, including in settings involving mandatory increases in reporting frequency. They caution, however, that these benefits alone do not establish that firms should be required to report more frequently, because their analysis does not measure the potential costs of increased reporting frequency, such as preparation and proprietary costs. Gigler, Kanodia, Sapra, and Venugopalan (2014) provides a theoretical model in which more frequent reporting can improve capital-market discipline by reducing the likelihood that firms undertake negative-
There are several findings from our academic research that are directly relevant to the Commission's proposal that we would like to draw attention to:
• First, evidence from Li and Ramesh (2009) suggests that, for many firms, Form 10-Q is not the primary vehicle through which earnings news first reaches the market. Earnings announcements frequently precede periodic report filings, and the incremental market reaction to many 10-Q filings is limited once concurrent earnings announcements are taken into account. This evidence supports the Commission's decision to allow firms and investors to determine whether mandatory quarterly Form 10-Q reporting is necessary in a particular setting.
• Second, consistent with the evidence in Li and Ramesh (2009), research on sell-side analysts as capital-market information intermediaries has documented that analyst forecast revisions cluster around earnings announcements rather than around firms' 10-Q or 10-K filing dates (e.g., See Barron, Byard, and Kim 2002).
• Third, evidence from D'Souza, Ramesh, and Shen (2010b) indicates that voluntary quarterly earnings announcements often contain GAAP line-item information and that firms' choices of which line items to disclose are not random. Rather, the specific line items disclosed tend to reflect the firm's economic environment and investors' valuation demands. For example, EBITDA-related disclosures are more common for capital-intensive and highly leveraged firms, while balance-sheet disclosures are more common when asset information is especially relevant. At the same time, the study shows that these voluntary disclosures are shaped by managerial reporting incentives, with managers who appear to intervene more regularly in the earnings reporting process providing fewer supplemental GAAP line-item disclosures. This evidence supports the Commission's optional approach. Voluntary quarterly earnings releases can convey economically relevant information, but standardized SEC reporting, whether quarterly on Form 10-Q or semiannually on proposed Form 10-S, continues to provide an important baseline of comparability, completeness, and discipline.
• Fourth, Barron, Byard, and Yu (2017) provides additional evidence on why earnings

announcements can preempt some of the informational role of subsequent Form 10-Q filings. The study finds that balance-sheet and segment disclosures within earnings announcements help analysts form more informed expectations about near-term quarterly earnings. Together with D'Souza, Ramesh, and Shen (2010b), this evidence suggests that voluntary earnings announcements contain financial-statement details that help investors and information intermediaries assess firms' future performance before the related Form 10-Q is filed.
• Fifth, examining a historical SEC-sanctioned dissemination practice under which certain sophisticated market participants received earlier access to public earnings releases, Dong, Li, Ramesh, and Shen (2015) shows that unequal access to earnings-release information can affect price discovery, trading advantages, and information risk. This evidence is relevant because voluntary first- and third-quarter disclosures may become more important for firms that elect semiannual reporting. The appropriate policy response is not to assume that retail investors are helpless without mandatory quarterly Form 10-Q filings; retail investors benefit from price discovery, market liquidity, trading signals, and information intermediaries. Rather, the key concern is to ensure that material voluntary disclosures are disseminated broadly and fairly so that price discovery occurs without avoidable information-risk costs from selective access. The evidence therefore supports strong Regulation FD enforcement and broad, non-exclusionary dissemination of material voluntary disclosures. Mandatory quarterly filing is not, in itself, a complete safeguard against selective private disclosure if fair-disclosure obligations are not robustly enforced.
NPV projects but can also increase price pressure and induce managerial short-termism. Their analysis therefore reinforces that reporting frequency involves a cost-benefit tradeoff.
• Sixth, Bronson, Hogan, Johnson, and Ramesh (2011) provides related evidence on the relevance–reliability tradeoff in voluntary earnings releases. In the annual reporting setting, the study shows that when audit completion was delayed, many firms maintained their preliminary earnings release timing, and releases issued before audit completion were more likely to be revised later. This evidence is relevant to one specific issue: under the proposal, semiannual filers' Form 10-S financial statements would be reviewed, while voluntary first- or third-quarter earnings releases would not be accompanied by a corresponding reviewed Form 10-Q. We do not believe this warrants a requirement that all such voluntary quarterly releases be reviewed. A more proportionate approach would be to require clear disclosure of whether the financial information in any voluntary first- or third-quarter earnings release has been reviewed by an independent public accountant.
• Seventh, evidence from Li, Ramesh, and Shen (2011), D'Souza, Ramesh, and Shen (2010a), and Li (2013) bears directly on the need to preserve the disclosure infrastructure that would remain under optional semiannual reporting. Li, Ramesh, and Shen (2011) and D'Souza, Ramesh, and Shen (2010a) show that information intermediaries, including newswires and data aggregators, play an important role in identifying and disseminating information from periodic SEC filings. Li (2013) makes a related but distinct point: in the context of material contract filings, Form 8-K current reporting can serve as an important channel for timely disclosure of material, future-relevant developments between periodic reports. These studies do not imply that information intermediaries or Form 8-K current reports are substitutes for standardized interim financial statements. Rather, they show that standardized periodic reports, current reports, and information intermediaries are complementary parts of the disclosure system. Accordingly, if the Commission adopts optional semiannual reporting, it should preserve the quality and usability of the standardized filings that remain, including the proposed requirement that Form 10-S contain the same narrative and financial information as Form 10-Q for the covered period, retain Inline XBRL tagging, and maintain a robust Form 8-K system for material developments between periodic reports.

These findings should also be understood against a broader economic rationale for mandatory disclosure.

One traditional justification for mandatory public-company disclosure, including disclosure frequency, is that firm disclosures can generate positive information externalities for the broader capital markets. A firm's earnings announcement, management forecast, or periodic report may help investors update beliefs not only about the disclosing firm, but also about peer firms, industry conditions, and macroeconomic risks.2 Consistent with this view, Brown, Byard, Darrough, Suh, and Wang (2026) provide evidence that mandatory reporting regulations that increase reporting comparability can generate positive information externalities through information network effects. In their setting, the 2005 mandatory adoption of IFRS outside the United States increased the reporting network available to analysts following U.S. firms; however, the documented benefits were concentrated among U.S. firms with relatively few domestic industry peers, rather than extending uniformly to all U.S. firms. Because firm management may rationally consider only the costs and benefits borne by the firm, it may not fully capture the capital-market benefits that its disclosures confer on other firms, investors, and information intermediaries; as a result, private disclosure incentives may diverge from the socially desirable level of disclosure. At the same time, the existence of such externalities does not imply that a single reporting frequency is optimal for all firms, much less that such frequency should be mandated uniformly; the relevant policy question is whether the incremental information benefits of a particular reporting frequency justify its preparation, verification, proprietary, litigation, and real effects costs.3

2 Information transfer studies show that accounting information released (e.g., earnings announcements and management forecasts) by one firm can convey information relevant to the valuation of other firms in the same industry and beyond (e.g., see Foster 1981; Baginski 1987; Han, Wild, and Ramesh 1989; Freeman and Tse 1992; Ramnath 2002; Bonsall, Bozanic, and Fischer 2013; Brochet 2018).

Finally, the central investor-protection issue is not whether retail investors require mandatory Form 10-Q filings in every quarter, but whether material information voluntarily disclosed outside Form 10-Q is disseminated publicly, fairly, and on equal terms, consistent with Regulation FD. Taken together, the evidence supports an optional semiannual reporting framework, provided that the Commission preserves the integrity of Form 8-K, Regulation FD, auditor-reviewed Form 10-S financial statements, Inline XBRL tagging, and clear disclosure about the assurance status of any voluntary first- or third-quarter earnings releases.

II. Historical Background: Quarterly Reporting Evolved from Voluntary and Exchange-Based Practices[4]

As Leftwich, Watts, and Zimmerman (1981) document, interim reporting developed gradually through voluntary corporate practice, stock-exchange initiatives, investor demand, and later SEC rulemaking. Some firms voluntarily provided interim reports well before mandatory requirements existed, while other firms resisted efforts by exchanges and regulators to require more frequent reporting. The NYSE encouraged interim earnings reporting as early as the 1920s, but its ability to impose uniform requirements was limited by issuer resistance, concerns about competitive costs, and competition from other trading venues.

The SEC's own path was also incremental. Leftwich, Watts, and Zimmerman (1981) note that the SEC had authority to require quarterly reports when it was established in 1934, but early efforts to require interim reporting encountered substantial opposition. The SEC first imposed limited quarterly reporting requirements in 1945 in connection with wartime-contract disclosures. In 1946, the Commission proposed quarterly income reports, but withdrew that proposal after adverse comments and instead required quarterly sales or gross revenues on Form 8-K. In 1952, the SEC again proposed expanding quarterly reporting to cover the full income statement but again faced strong opposition; after reviewing comments, it dropped the proposal and abandoned the quarterly sales-reporting requirement.

The Commission later adopted semiannual reporting on Form 9-K in 1955, requiring a filing once per year after the first half of the fiscal year. After the 1964 amendments extended SEC reporting authority to many over-the-counter companies, and following the Wheat Report, the SEC rescinded semiannual Form 9-K in 1970 and introduced detailed quarterly income reporting on Form 10-Q.

This history is relevant to the present proposal in two respects. First, it shows that interim reporting frequency has long reflected a balance among investor demand, issuer costs, exchange competition, and regulatory judgment. Second, it shows that voluntary disclosure and mandatory reporting have historically coexisted. The fact that some firms voluntarily provided interim information before SEC mandates suggests that market demand can induce more frequent reporting where it is valuable. At the same time, the historical evolution also explains why standardized SEC reporting became important: voluntary and exchange-based practices were uneven. The Commission's proposed optional semiannual framework can be understood in this historical context, not as abandoning periodic disclosure, but as

3 The direct compliance costs to issuers, which the Commission estimates at $330,000 on average may not capture the principal burden of quarterly reporting. Rather, the most significant cost may be the diversion of senior management time and attention from strategic and operational priorities, a cost that is inherently difficult to quantify.

4 This section is based on Leftwich, Watts, and Zimmerman (1981). We acknowledge the discussions with Professor Steve Zeff regarding the historical evolution of quarterly reporting.

permitting reporting frequency to better reflect firm-specific costs, investor demand, and the continued availability of other disclosure mechanisms, including Form 8-K and voluntary quarterly earnings releases.

III. The Incremental Market Reaction to Many Form 10-Q Filings Appears Limited Once Earnings Announcements Are Considered

The most directly relevant evidence is Li and Ramesh (2009), which reexamines market reactions surrounding periodic SEC filings in the EDGAR era. The study analyzes more than 240,000 periodic SEC filings over 1996-2006 and focuses on an important empirical issue: many firms release earnings information through a press release before filing the related Form 10-Q or Form 10-K. Because earnings announcements are known to be important market events, tests of the information content of periodic filings can overstate the market reaction to SEC filings if they do not separately account for concurrent or prior earnings announcements.

The main implication for the Commission's proposal is straightforward but important. For quarterly reports, Li and Ramesh (2009) finds that when 10-Q filings follow earnings announcements, they are associated with consistently muted price reactions during the event window. The study reports that these filings account for roughly 80 percent of 10-Q filings in the sample and that the surrounding days are among the least price-reactive days examined in the study.5 The study also reports that inferences based on abnormal trading volume are generally similar to those based on price reactions.

This evidence does not imply that Form 10-Q lacks value. Rather, it suggests that the value of Form 10-Q often lies less in being the first public release of information about quarterly financial performance and more in providing a standardized, reviewed, legally structured, and searchable disclosure record. That distinction is central to the current proposal. If earnings and related financial-performance information are commonly disseminated through earnings releases before the formal filing of the quarterly report, then allowing issuers to elect semiannual reporting is unlikely, by itself, to eliminate the principal channel through which investors first receive such information for many firms. That conclusion is especially plausible for issuers that continue voluntarily to release quarterly earnings information because investors, analysts, lenders, or other market participants demand it.

At the same time, Li and Ramesh (2009) also provides a reason for caution. The muted market reaction to many 10-Q filings should not be interpreted as evidence that standardized SEC filings are unimportant.

The market reaction test captures one dimension of information content: immediate price and volume response. It does not fully capture the value of 10-Q filings for comparability, data aggregation, contractual monitoring, litigation discipline, audit committee oversight, or later-stage research and analysis. The Commission's optional approach appropriately recognizes this nuance. Firms for which investors value quarterly Form 10-Q filings can continue to file quarterly reports; firms for which the incremental benefit of quarterly Form 10-Q filings is lower can elect semiannual reporting.

5 This finding is broadly echoed in Li, Ramesh, Shen, and Wu (2025), which examines how managers use different corporate disclosure channels in bad news years versus good news years. The study finds that periodic SEC filings, including 10-Ks and 10-Qs, contribute only modestly to annual price discovery in bad news years compared with voluntary disclosure channels such as earnings releases and management guidance, while they have no incremental bearing on the price discovery process in good news years.

IV. Voluntary Earnings Releases and Standardized SEC Filings Play Complementary Roles

Voluntary earnings releases are an important part of the modern disclosure environment and should be considered in evaluating the Commission's proposal. Evidence from D'Souza, Ramesh, and Shen (2010b) indicates that quarterly earnings announcements often include GAAP line-item information and that firms' choices of which line items to disclose are not random. Rather, the specific line items disclosed tend to reflect the firm's economic environment and investors' valuation demands. For example, EBITDA-related disclosures are more common for capital-intensive and highly leveraged firms, while balance-sheet disclosures are more common when asset information is particularly relevant to valuation.
This evidence suggests that voluntary earnings releases can play a useful market-responsive role. Firms often appear to provide the types of line-item information that investors are likely to find most relevant given the firm's business model, financing structure, and operating environment. Accordingly, the possibility that many semiannual filers may continue to issue voluntary first- and third-quarter earnings releases is an important reason why optional semiannual reporting need not materially impair capital market functioning.
At the same time, D'Souza, Ramesh, and Shen (2010b) also shows that voluntary earnings-release disclosures are shaped by managerial reporting incentives. Managers who appear to intervene more regularly in the earnings reporting process provide fewer supplemental GAAP line-item disclosures. This finding cautions against treating voluntary earnings releases as complete substitutes for standardized SEC filings. Voluntary disclosures can be informative and responsive to investor demand, but they are also selective, vary across firms, and may be influenced by incentives to direct investor attention.
Barron, Byard, and Yu (2017) extends this evidence by examining which specific types of disclosures within earnings announcements account for the informational impact that often precedes a corresponding Form 10-Q. The study distinguishes between disclosures of balance-sheet data, segment information, and management earnings forecasts and finds that balance-sheet and segment disclosures included in earnings announcements are associated with an increase in the degree to which analysts' forecasts of near-term quarterly earnings reflect private information, consistent with analysts processing those disclosures into new private insights about upcoming quarterly performance. Management earnings forecasts, by contrast, improve the common component of analyst information rather than the private component. This distinction is directly relevant to the Commission's proposal: it suggests that what is disclosed in earnings announcements, not merely the timing of those announcements relative to Form 10-Q filings, shapes the incremental information content that market participants would otherwise seek from a quarterly SEC filing. When earnings announcements include balance-sheet and segment disclosures of the line items that D'Souza, Ramesh, and Shen (2010b) documents are tailored to firms' economic environments and investor demand, a substantial portion of the informational function of a Form 10-Q may already have been discharged at the time of the announcement.

The appropriate implication, in our view, is a balanced one. The Commission should recognize the substantial role that voluntary earnings releases already play in the information environment and should not assume that eliminating mandatory first- and third-quarter Form 10-Q filings will necessarily leave investors without meaningful quarterly information. But standardized periodic reports continue to provide a baseline of comparability, completeness, review, and discipline that voluntary earnings releases do not fully replicate. This supports the Commission's optional approach: firms whose investors demand quarterly standardized reporting can continue to provide it, while firms for which semiannual reporting is sufficient can reduce mandatory filing frequency without eliminating the ability to communicate quarterly information voluntarily.

V. Voluntary Quarterly Disclosure Requires Robust Fair-Disclosure Safeguards

Dong, Li, Ramesh, and Shen (2015) examines a historical SEC-sanctioned practice under which certain sophisticated market participants received earnings press releases 15 minutes before broader public dissemination. The study finds that this priority dissemination accounted for a nontrivial portion of price discovery before earnings announcements during regular trading hours and for actively traded extended-hours announcements. It also finds evidence that transient institutions benefited from priority dissemination, especially for good-news earnings announcements, and that bid-ask spreads were higher when priority dissemination created information risk.
This evidence is relevant to the Commission's proposal because, under optional semiannual reporting, firms that elect not to file Form 10-Q may choose to provide voluntary first- and third-quarter earnings releases or other interim updates. If those voluntary disclosures become a more important source of interim information, then the manner in which they are disseminated becomes especially important.
Sophisticated investors and information intermediaries play a valuable role in incorporating information into prices, and retail investors benefit from that price-discovery process. Market signals such as prices, bid-ask spreads, liquidity, and trading conditions can also convey information about the quality of a firm's disclosure environment. Retail investors should not be presumed unable to draw reasonable inferences from these signals, especially in today's low-cost digital trading environment.

At the same time, these market mechanisms work best when material information is disseminated broadly, promptly, and fairly. Regulation FD and Item 2.02 of Form 8-K already provide an important foundation for that objective. If voluntary first- and third-quarter disclosures become more important for semiannual filers, the Commission should make clear that selective private disclosure of material quarterly information remains impermissible and should continue to enforce Regulation FD where registrants provide favored access to analysts, institutional investors, or other covered market participants.
The SEC's own investor-education materials reflect a similar understanding of retail-investor protection.
Investor.gov emphasizes practical tools and investor safeguards, including financial tools and calculators, investor alerts and bulletins, common scams, and understanding investment fees. The site provides calculators for topics such as compound interest and savings goals, warnings about phishing and other frauds, and explanations of how fees and expenses reduce portfolio returns. This orientation is sensible:
investor protection does not require assuming that retail investors will personally read and analyze every periodic filing or pick individual stocks based on detailed accounting disclosures. Rather, it recognizes that retail investors benefit from fair market-wide price formation, transparent costs, fraud prevention, accessible tools, and effective intermediaries. That perspective is consistent with optional semiannual reporting, provided that material voluntary disclosures are disseminated broadly and fairly and that the Commission continues to enforce Regulation FD.
Accordingly, the relevant policy question is not whether all interim information must be disclosed quarterly through Form 10-Q, but whether material information voluntarily disclosed by registrants is disseminated broadly and non-exclusively. Mandatory quarterly filings are not, by themselves, a complete safeguard against selective private disclosure if Regulation FD is not effectively enforced. Market discipline can reinforce this objective, but it is not a substitute for effective SEC enforcement of fair-disclosure obligations.

VI. The Timeliness-Reliability Tradeoff in Earnings Releases Supports Clear Disclosure, Not Overregulation
Bronson, Hogan, Johnson, and Ramesh (2011) examines the effect of PCAOB Auditing Standards Nos. 2 and 3 on the reliability of preliminary annual earnings releases. The study focuses on the annual reporting context, and we adapt its core insights to the interim setting. The study finds that the implementation of these standards increased audit report lags, but that many firms maintained their historical preliminary earnings release dates even when the audit was not complete. As a result, more firms released preliminary earnings before the audit report date. The study finds that preliminary earnings announcement revisions became more likely when earnings were released before the audit report date and estimates that revisions to preliminary announcements in 2005 would have been 35 percent lower if the historical frequency of issuing earnings releases after the audit report date had not changed.

The relevance for the present proposal is not that quarterly earnings releases should always be reviewed or audited before being released. Rather, the evidence highlights the basic tradeoff between timeliness and reliability. Market participants value timely earnings information. Firms therefore often release earnings before all assurance-related processes are complete. This behavior may be efficient in many circumstances, but it also means investors should understand the assurance status of preliminary earnings information.
Accordingly, if a semiannual filer voluntarily provides first- or third-quarter earnings information without filing a Form 10-Q, the Commission should be cautious before imposing a mandatory independent review requirement for all such releases. A mandatory review requirement could substantially erode the cost savings and flexibility that motivate the proposal. A more modest and targeted approach would be to require prominent disclosure of whether the quarterly earnings release has been reviewed by an independent public accountant. This would allow investors to price the reliability of the information while preserving issuers' ability to determine whether the benefits of quarterly reviewed information justify the cost.

VII. Information Intermediaries Reduce Information Processing Costs but Also Depend on Standardized Public Disclosures

The Commission's proposal appropriately recognizes that the modern information environment differs substantially from the environment in which quarterly reporting was adopted in 1970. Public company information today does not travel only through a direct issuer-to-investor channel. It enters a broader information ecosystem that includes newswires, data aggregators, analysts, institutional investors, trading platforms, and other intermediaries. Two studies speak directly to how intermediaries process periodic SEC filings. A third, Li (2013), makes a related but distinct point about Form 8-K current reporting as a separate channel for timely disclosure of material events.
First, Li, Ramesh, and Shen (2011) examines Dow Jones Corporate Filing Alerts and show that newswires play a meaningful role in identifying and disseminating value-relevant information contained in periodic SEC reports. The study finds that newswires are more likely to issue alerts for firms and filings where market demand for information is likely to be higher, including firms without preliminary earnings announcements, firms with credit ratings, firms in major indices, firms with litigation exposure, loss firms, firms with nonstandard audit opinions, firms approaching delisting, and firms raising equity capital. Importantly, the study finds significant price and volume reactions to these alerts, including immediate intraday market activity, while detecting no similar immediate reaction to the underlying SEC filings that triggered the alerts.

Second, D'Souza, Ramesh, and Shen (2010a) examines the speed with which Standard & Poor's disseminates accounting information from periodic SEC filings through Compustat. The study finds that dissemination speed reflects both demand-side and supply-side forces. S&P disseminates accounting information faster for firms with higher quasi-indexer ownership, lower transaction costs, lower idiosyncratic risk, and major-index membership. The study also finds that EDGAR substantially reduced collection lags, although cross-sectional variation in dissemination speed persisted.
Together, Li, Ramesh, and Shen (2011) and D'Souza, Ramesh, and Shen (2010a) show that periodic SEC filings enter an information ecosystem in which newswires, data aggregators, analysts, institutional investors, and other intermediaries identify, standardize, process, and redistribute information. These studies do not imply that standardized SEC filings are unimportant. To the contrary, they show that periodic reports are critical inputs into the broader information ecosystem relied on by investors and other market participants.
Li (2013) makes a related but distinct point. Rather than focusing on intermediaries' processing of periodic filings, the study examines Form 8-K current reporting as an alternative channel for timely disclosure of material, future-relevant information. In the setting of material contracts, Li (2013) shows that accelerated Form 8-K filing allowed firms to communicate information about future operations without issuing forecasts and that accelerated material-contract filing was associated with lower information asymmetry. The study also documents that, before the 2004 Form 8-K amendments, firms had discretion to delay material-contract filings until later Form 10-K, Form 10-Q, or registration statement filings, and that filing dates clustered around periodic-report due dates.
This evidence is relevant to the Commission's proposal because optional semiannual reporting would increase the importance of current reporting for material developments that arise between periodic reports. Li (2013) does not suggest that Form 8-K is a substitute for standardized interim financial statements. Rather, it shows that current reporting can play an important complementary role by requiring timely disclosure of material events that should not wait until the next periodic report.
Accordingly, if the Commission adopts optional semiannual reporting, it should preserve both components of the disclosure infrastructure. First, it should maintain the quality and usability of standardized periodic reports by requiring Form 10-S to contain the same narrative and financial information as Form 10-Q for the covered period and by retaining Inline XBRL tagging. Second, it should preserve and enforce a robust Form 8-K system for material developments between periodic reports. The point is not that Form 8-K or information intermediaries are complete substitutes for standardized interim financial statements. Rather, standardized semiannual filings, current reporting, and information intermediaries can together support an effective disclosure environment under the Commission's optional approach.
VIII. Investor Demand for Quarterly Information Is Likely to Discipline
Reporting Choices

The studies on newswires and data aggregators also suggest why an optional approach is likely to be preferable to either mandatory quarterly reporting or mandatory semiannual reporting. The value of quarterly information varies across firms. Firms with substantial institutional ownership, analyst following, index membership, debt market monitoring, frequent capital market access, or complex operations may face strong market demand for quarterly information. For such firms, the costs of switching to semiannual reporting could include reduced analyst coverage, lessened market attention, lower liquidity, higher information asymmetry, or a higher cost of capital. These firms may therefore rationally continue quarterly reporting or maintain a hybrid regime by issuing voluntary quarterly earnings releases while filing Form 10-S semiannually.
Conversely, for some firms, especially those for which quarterly financial statements provide limited incremental information relative to event-driven disclosures and business milestones, mandatory quarterly reporting may impose costs that exceed its benefits. The Commission gives the example of pre-revenue biotechnology companies whose investors may focus more on clinical and regulatory milestones than on quarterly revenues or earnings.6 The broader principle is that reporting frequency should reflect the informational needs of the firm's investor base and the economics of the firm's business model.
The evidence therefore supports allowing all Exchange Act reporting companies to elect semiannual reporting rather than restricting eligibility only to smaller reporting companies or emerging growth companies. Restricting eligibility may be administratively simple, but it assumes that size alone determines the optimal disclosure frequency. The research suggests a more nuanced view: investor demand for timely standardized information varies with ownership structure, analyst following, index membership, arbitrage costs, information intermediaries, and disclosure practices. These characteristics do not map perfectly onto issuer size.
IX. Responses to Selected Questions Raised by the Commission
Based on the foregoing evidence, we offer the following recommendations.
1. In response to Questions 1 and 2, the Commission should adopt an optional, not mandatory, semiannual reporting framework. The evidence is consistent with substantial heterogeneity across firms in the incremental value of quarterly Form 10-Q filings. Optionality allows firms and investors to choose the reporting frequency that best fits their circumstances.
2. In response to Question 3, the option should be available broadly, rather than limited only to smaller reporting companies or emerging growth companies. Although smaller firms may benefit disproportionately from reduced compliance costs, larger firms may also have circumstances in which quarterly Form 10-Q filings provide limited incremental value. Market discipline should limit adoption by firms whose investors strongly value quarterly reporting.
3. In response to Question 14, and relatedly Question 15, Form 10-S should remain substantively comparable to Form 10-Q for the covered semiannual period. The studies discussed above underscore that standardized, processable SEC filings remain important inputs into the capital market information infrastructure. Inline XBRL tagging, auditor review, MD&A, controls disclosures, and certifications should remain part of the semiannual filing framework.
4. In response to Questions 18, 19, and 20, the Commission should not generally impose filing (as opposed to furnishing) or review requirements on voluntary first- or third-quarter earnings releases solely because an issuer elects semiannual reporting. The research discussed above suggests that voluntary earnings releases can provide economically meaningful and market-responsive information. Imposing additional filing or review requirements on those releases could discourage voluntary quarterly disclosure and reduce the availability of interim information that might otherwise mitigate concerns about less frequent Form 10-Q filings. A more proportionate approach is to preserve the existing framework, 6 Consistent with the Commission's example, note 26 of D'Souza, Ramesh, and Shen (2010b) states that "in its earnings press release dated February 3, 2004, Rigel Pharmaceuticals, Inc., a company meeting our definition of a cash-strapped development stage company, highlighted in the body of the press release the magnitude of tangible assets consisting of cash and available-for-sale securities…."Page 10 of 14 Regulation G, Item 10(e) of Regulation S-K, antifraud rules, and Regulation FD, while requiring prominent disclosure of whether the quarterly financial information has been reviewed by an independent public accountant.

5. In response to Question 46, and relatedly Question 22, the Commission should consider whether semiannual filers should provide more timely disclosure of changes in accounting principles, changes in accounting estimates, or corrections of accounting errors that occur during the first or third quarter and are not otherwise subject to current reporting under Item 4.02. Without recreating Form 10-Q reporting, the Commission should consider targeted current-disclosure requirements to prevent such accounting changes or corrections from remaining undisclosed until the next Form 10-S or Form 10-K.
6. In response to Question 22, the Commission should preserve and, where appropriate, clarify the role of Form 8-K and Regulation FD. Less frequent Form 10-Q reporting increases the importance of event-driven disclosure and broad, non-exclusionary dissemination. The Commission's proposal appropriately leaves the Form 8-K and Regulation FD framework largely intact.
7. In response to Question 30, the Commission should consider whether to require clearer period disaggregation in annual reports by semiannual filers. If a semiannual filer reports only the first six months in Form 10-S and annual results in Form 10-K, investors may need to infer second-half results.
We do not have direct evidence from the studies cited in this letter on whether such disaggregation should be mandatory, but requiring second-half financial information in Form 10-K may improve comparability and reduce investor processing costs without fully reintroducing quarterly reporting.7 8. In response to Questions 52 and 56 through 58, the Commission should consider monitoring the effects of adoption. Because adoption patterns and market responses are uncertain, the Commission could commit to reviewing adoption rates, voluntary quarterly disclosure practices, analyst coverage, liquidity, bid-ask spreads, and capital-raising outcomes after implementation. Such monitoring would help assess whether the optional framework is functioning as intended.

X. Conclusion

We welcome the opportunity to comment on the Commission's proposal to allow Exchange Act reporting companies to elect semiannual reporting on a new Form 10-S instead of quarterly reports on Form 10-Q.

We appreciate the Commission's careful and thorough analysis of the relevant academic research that speaks to the potential costs and benefits of the proposed rule change. That said, potential cost savings arising from the proposed rule change (e.g., redirecting managerial time and attention toward strategic and operational issues) are, by their nature, difficult to observe and quantify.

Broadly speaking, the research discussed in this letter supports a measured conclusion. Quarterly information can be valuable, but quarterly Form 10-Q filings are not always the first or most important channel through which market-relevant information reaches investors. Earnings releases, Form 8-K disclosures, Regulation FD, analyst activity, newswires, data aggregators, and other information intermediaries now play a central role in the disclosure ecosystem. At the same time, standardized SEC

7 There is an extensive literature on the time-series properties of quarterly earnings dating back at least to Watts (1975), Foster (1977), Griffin (1977), and Brown and Rozeff (1979). That literature is relevant because the policy question is not whether quarterly earnings contain predictive information, but whether the predictive ability of earnings would be materially reduced if mandatory disclosure occurred on a semiannual rather than quarterly basis.

To the extent the seasonal stochastic properties of quarterly earnings are highly informative to investors and other market participants, market forces would be expected to create incentives for firms to continue supplying such information voluntarily, particularly where the benefits of doing so exceed the costs. filings remain important for comparability, reliability, investor protection, and the functioning of information intermediaries.

For these reasons, we believe the Commission's optional semiannual reporting proposal is directionally appropriate. Properly implemented, the proposal would allow firms and investors greater flexibility to choose a reporting frequency that better fits firm-specific circumstances without materially impairing capital markets. Notably, while the costs and benefits of changes in reporting frequency are hard to observe, management and investors are generally best positioned to assess and weight up these firm-specific tradeoffs; hence, we welcome the flexibility at the heart of the Commission's proposal. The Commission should, however, preserve the standardized and reviewed nature of Form 10-S, maintain robust Form 8-K and Regulation FD requirements, and consider targeted transparency about the assurance status of voluntary first- and third-quarter earnings releases.

Respectfully,

Donal Byard Edward Li K. Ramesh Min Shen

Donal Byard, Irving Weinstein Professorship in Accountancy & Chair, Stan Ross Department of Accountancy, Baruch College, CUNY

Edward Li, Professor of Accounting, Stan Ross Department of Accountancy, Baruch College, CUNY
K. Ramesh, Herbert S. Autrey Professor of Accounting, Jones Graduate School of Business, Rice University
Min Shen, Associate Professor of Accounting, Philip G. Buchanan Fellow, Costello College of Business,
George Mason University
References
Baginski, S. (1987). Intraindustry information transfer associated with management forecasts of earnings.
Journal of Accounting Research, 25 (2): 196–216. https://www.jstor.org/stable/2491015
Barron, B., Byard, D., & Kim, O. (2002). Changes in analysts' information around earnings announcements. The Accounting Review, 77 (4): 821–46. https://doi.org/10.2308/accr.2002.77.4.821 Barron, O. E., Byard, D., & Yu, Y. (2017). Earnings announcement disclosures and changes in analysts' information. Contemporary Accounting Research, 34 (1): 343–373. https://doi.org/10.1111/1911-3846.12275 Bonsall, S. Bozanic, Z., & Fischer, P. (2013). What Do Management Earnings Forecasts Convey About the Macroeconomy? Journal of Accounting Research, 51 (2): 225–266. https://doi.org/10.1111/1475-679X.12007
Brochet, F., Kolev, K., & Lerman, A. (2018). Information transfer and conference calls. Review of Accounting Studies, 23 (3): 907–957. https://doi.org/10.1007/s11142-018-9444-4

Bronson, S. N., Hogan, C. E., Johnson, M. F., & Ramesh, K. (2011). The unintended consequences of PCAOB Auditing Standard Nos. 2 and 3 on the reliability of preliminary earnings releases. Journal of Accounting and Economics, 51 (1-2): 95–114. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jacceco.2010.06.002
Brown, A., Byard, D., Darrough, M., Suh, J., & Wang, Y. (2026). Do larger reporting networks yield benefits from information network effects? The Accounting Review, 101 (1): 57–
80. https://doi.org/10.2308/TAR-2021-0778
Brown, L. D., & Rozeff, M. S. (1979). Univariate time-series models of quarterly accounting earnings per share: A proposed model. Journal of Accounting Research, 17 (1): 179–189.
https://doi.org/10.2307/2490312
D'Souza, J., Ramesh, K., & Shen, M. (2010a). The interdependence between institutional ownership and information dissemination by data aggregators. The Accounting Review, 85 (1): 159–193.
https://doi.org/10.2308/accr.2010.85.1.159
D'Souza, J., Ramesh, K., & Shen, M. (2010b). Disclosure of GAAP line items in earnings announcements. Review of Accounting Studies, 15 (1): 179–219. https://doi.org/10.1007/s11142-009-
9100-0
Dong, B., Li, E. X., Ramesh, K., & Shen, M. (2015). Priority dissemination of public disclosures. The Accounting Review, 90 (6): 2235–2266. https://doi.org/10.2308/accr-51139
Foster, G. (1977). Quarterly accounting data: Time-series properties and predictive-ability results. The Accounting Review, 52 (1): 1–21. https://www.jstor.org/stable/246028
Foster, G. (1981). Intra-industry information transfers associated with earnings release. Journal of Accounting and Economics, 3 (3): 201–232. https://doi.org/10.1016/0165-4101(81)90003-3 Freeman, R., & Tse, S. (1992). An earnings prediction approach to examining intercompany information transfers. Journal of Accounting and Economics, 15 (2): 509–523. https://doi.org/10.1016/0165-

4101(92)90004-L
Fu, R., Kraft, A., & Zhang, H. (2012). Financial reporting frequency, information asymmetry, and the cost of equity. Journal of Accounting and Economics, 54 (2-3): 132–149. https://doi.org/10.1016/j.jacceco.2012.07.003
Gigler, F., Kanodia, C., Sapra, H., & Venugopalan, R. (2014). How frequent financial reporting can cause managerial short-termism: An analysis of the costs and benefits of increasing reporting frequency. Journal of Accounting Research, 52 (2): 357–387. https://doi.org/10.1111/1475-679X.12043
Griffin, P. A. (1977). The time-series behavior of quarterly earnings: preliminary evidence. Journal of Accounting Research, 15 (1): 71–83. https://doi.org/10.2307/2490556
Han, J., Wild, J., & Ramesh, K. (1989). Managers' earnings forecasts and intra-industry information transfer. Journal of Accounting and Economics, 11 (1): 3–33. https://doi.org/10.1016/0165-4101(89)90012-8 Leftwich, R. W., Watts, R. L., & Zimmerman, J. L. (1981). Voluntary corporate disclosure: The case of interim reporting. Journal of Accounting Research, 19 (Studies on Standardization of Accounting Practices: An Assessment of Alternative Institutional Arrangements): 50–77. https://doi.org/10.2307/2490984 Li, E. X. (2013). Revealing future prospects without forecasts: The case of accelerating material contract filings. The Accounting Review, 88 (5): 1769–1804. https://doi.org/10.2308/accr-50505

Li, E. X., & Ramesh, K. (2009). Market reaction surrounding the filing of periodic SEC reports. The Accounting Review, 84 (4): 1171–1208. https://doi.org/10.2308/accr.2009.84.4.1171
Li, E. X., Ramesh, K., & Shen, M. (2011). The role of newswires in screening and disseminating value-relevant information in periodic SEC reports. The Accounting Review, 86 (2): 669–701. https://doi.org/10.2308/accr.00000023 Li, E. X., Ramesh, K., Shen, M., & Wu, J. (2025). Running without moving? Corporate disclosure and annual price discovery in bad versus good times. The Accounting Review, 100 (4): 357-384. https://doi.org/10.2308/TAR-2023-0504 Ramnath, S. 2002. Investor and analyst reactions to earnings announcements of related firms: An empirical analysis. Journal of Accounting Research, 40 (5): 1351–1376. https://doi.org/10.1111/1475-679X.t01-1-00057
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. (2026). Semiannual Reporting. Release Nos. 33-11414; 34-105368; File No. S7-2026-15.
Watts, R. L. (1975). The time series behavior of quarterly earnings, Unpublished paper (University of Newcastle, Newcastle, N.S.W.) (cited in Watts (1978)).
Watts, R. L. (1978). Systematic 'abnormal' returns after quarterly earnings announcements. Journal of Financial Economics, 6 (2-3): 127–150. https://doi.org/10.1016/0304-405X(78)90027-2

Miriam Jones None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Miriam Jones Please help keep investors informed through quarterly financial disclosures of publicly owned enterprises and companies. Quarterly financial disclosures help all investors learn about what they are supporting and guide their decisions. Less information will not provide savings but might keep investors in the dark and robe us of the opportunity to direct our investments wisely. AI provides the great tool to make reporting much cheaper already.

Mo Lawre — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mo Lawre Taking the reports away just makes everyone less informed. And that will be a recipe for disaster. Investors and owners deserve to be informed and up-to-date on companies and stocks they own.

Mona — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mona We should continue with the current reporting for public companies. Transparency is essential for a democracy.

Mona Abouzied — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mona Abouzied With constant political, economical changes, and conflicts, not just in USA, but also around the world, companies profits,cost, future outlook change now more frequently than ever before. Reporting semi annualy compared to quarterly will put investors and shareholders at a great disadvantage, and will give insiders and financial institutions more advantage , they are already manipulating the market as is.. you want to give them more power, more profits and put all other investors at a disadvantage. Keep the quarterly reporting, more transparency and accountability is definitely needed

---

Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Motley Fool Please retain the quarterly reporting requirements for businesses.

Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Motley Fool This is a big mistake and it will cause a lot of ambiguity. It will only make the whole business process less transparent and provides opportunities for corruption.

Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Motley Fool Please preserve transparency. >

Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Motley Fool Community As the U.S. economy and dollar continue their decline, it is becoming more important than ever to make informed investment decisions. This means investors need MORE data--not less. If this passes, every individual investor will be at an even greater disadvantage to institutional ones (who have the data anyway) than we are now. Please vote "No" Thank you for your consideration of the average investor, Scott B

Motley Fool Community Member — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Motley Fool Community I protest the proposed change in a company's financial reporting from Quarterly to semiannually on the following grounds - as an Outside Passive Minority Investor I require frequent company news and up to date Translucency on companies activities . Otherwise I as a OMPI would be at a severe disadvantage akin to the 1929 Great Depression.!

Motley fool community None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Motley fool community I would probably not invest in companies as much in the early years because of the lack of information given to me which I think would restrict entrepreneurs from getting capital that would be needed to grow their operations. It would be a great detriment to American progress especially since we are now entering a new phase of development (AI) and we would not want to be left behind.

Mr John Boyle — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mr John Boyle Investors need regular, comprehensive information about the companies they're invested in.

Mr.. Witzel — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Mr. Witzel Dear Ms. Countryman, I am writing as a private investor based in Germany investing in U.S. publicly listed companies to provide comments on the proposed rule to transition from quarterly to semiannual reporting. From the perspective of an international investor, I respectfully oppose the proposed rule and strongly support maintaining the current quarterly reporting framework. 1. Critical Importance of Quarterly Reporting for International Investors As a non-U.S.-based investor, I face inherent structural limitations compared to domestic investors: - I do not have proximity to companies' operations - I cannot easily attend investor meetings or corporate events - I rely almost exclusively on formal, SEC-regulated disclosures Quarterly filings (Form 10-Q) therefore serve as my primary and most reliable source of timely, standardized information. Reducing reporting frequency to semiannual updates would significantly widen the information gap to up to six months, which is particularly challenging for investors located abroad. Unlike some domestic market participants, I cannot compensate for this gap with informal or local information channels. For international investors, quarterly reporting is not merely convenient—it is essential for maintaining informed participation in U.S. capital markets. 2. Equal Access to Information and Market Fairness The SEC has long upheld the principle of fair and equal access to material information. Quarterly reporting ensures that: - Retail and international investors receive information at the same time and in the same format as institutional market participants - Investment decisions can be based on consistent and comparable disclosures Eliminating quarterly reporting risks creating a system in which: - Well-connected or geographically closer investors have informational advantages - International and retail investors become increasingly dependent on secondary or less standardized sources From my perspective, this would undermine confidence in the fairness and accessibility of U.S. markets, which are currently regarded as global benchmarks. 3. Increased Uncertainty from Longer Reporting Intervals Living outside the United States means I cannot observe companies “on the ground”: - I do not see stores, products, or operations regularly - I cannot easily gauge market sentiment locally - I am more dependent on formal financial disclosures for performance insights Quarterly reporting helps mitigate this informational gap by providing frequent checkpoints. Moving to semiannual reporting would: - Increase uncertainty between updates - Make it more difficult to assess trends in performance - Require investors like myself to make decisions based on older and potentially outdated information This could lead to more conservative behavior (reduced investment) or higher reliance on speculation, neither of which benefits market efficiency. 4. Potential for Increased Volatility Rather Than Stability While one objective of the proposal may be to reduce short-termism, less frequent reporting may produce unintended consequences: -Price movements may become more volatile upon release of less frequent but more impactful updates - Markets may rely more on rumors, analyst estimates, and unofficial signals during longer reporting gaps - International investors may react more strongly due to accumulated uncertainty Quarterly reporting supports continuous price discovery, helping to distribute market reactions more evenly over time. 5. Corporate Accountability and Governance Considerations Quarterly reporting imposes a regular and predictable discipline on management teams to communicate performance and risks. This is particularly important for international investors, as it provides: - Ongoing transparency - Insight into management execution - Early visibility into emerging issues A semiannual framework could: - Delay recognition of potential problems - Reduce accountability between reporting periods - Increase the likelihood of material surprises This would directly impact investor confidence—especially for those investing across borders. 6. Importance for Maintaining Global Attractiveness of U.S. Markets One of the main reasons international investors allocate capital to U.S. equities is the high level of transparency and disclosure quality. Any perceived weakening of this framework may: - Reduce attractiveness relative to other markets - Increase the perceived risk for non-U.S. investors - Lead to a higher cost of capital for issuers over time Maintaining quarterly reporting reinforces the global leadership position of U.S. capital markets. 7. Alternative Approaches If the Commission seeks to address concerns such as reporting burdens or compliance costs, I would encourage targeted refinements instead of eliminating quarterly reporting, such as: - Streamlining Form 10-Q requirements - Reducing duplicative disclosures - Enhancing structured data usage - Providing accommodations for smaller issuers These approaches would preserve transparency while improving efficiency. Conclusion From the perspective of a Germany-based private investor, quarterly reporting is indispensable. Because I am geographically distant and cannot directly observe U.S. companies, I depend significantly more on: - Frequent - Standardized - Mandatory disclosures The proposed shift to semiannual reporting would disproportionately disadvantage international investors and risk undermining: - Transparency - Market fairness - Investor confidence For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to retain the current quarterly reporting framework. Respectfully submitted, Private Investor Germany

---

N. Steward - — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: N. Steward Gentlemen, please ensure we as investors maintain the utmost clarity regarding the products and businesses in which we invest. Reducing reports to us, the investor will reduce confidence, and increase potential for overreaction by investors in a market downturn. If anything we need more clarity and transparency in the businesses in which we invest. Please retain quarterly reporting.

Nakia Kearse — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nakia Kearse I oppose the proposal to reduce public company reporting requirements from four reporting periods to two. Transparency is one of the most important protections available to investors, and reducing reporting frequency would significantly limit investors' ability to evaluate a company's performance, risks, and management effectiveness in a timely manner. Investors are the owners of these companies and should have access to sufficient information to make informed decisions about whether to buy, hold, or sell their investments. Less frequent reporting reduces accountability and increases the likelihood that material issues, operational challenges, or governance concerns could go undetected for longer periods of time. Public companies already benefit from significant trust from investors, who rely on accurate and timely disclosures when allocating their capital. At a time when concerns about corporate misconduct, governance failures, and market integrity remain prevalent, reducing transparency is the wrong direction. Increased transparency promotes confidence in the markets; decreased transparency undermines it. While reducing reporting requirements may lessen administrative burdens for companies, those benefits should not outweigh the need for investor protection and accountability. Investors deserve regular insight into the companies they own, and reporting requirements should support, not diminish, informed decision-making. For these reasons, I do not support reducing reporting requirements from four reporting periods to two.

Nancy Cole Owner, SkyHost Networks LLC — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Cole Public-company reporting should maintain the quarterly frequency. Anything less, and investors would not have the information they need to make informed decisions. To cut this reporting to twice a year is a disservice to investors. Please maintain the transparency that is needed to understand a public-company's situation. Quarterly reporting gives a clearer picture of a public-company's situation throughout the year, and provides the ruler to compare performance from year to year, and at certain times of year. Cutting this down further dilutes the understanding of a company's placement in the cycle of business. Thank you for your consideration.

Nancy Wistrand — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nancy Wistrand The quarterly financial information companies are required to report is how ordinary investors, like me, stay informed about the businesses we own. We need those quarterly reports to keep up with the companies we invest in. Cutting reports to twice a year doubles the information gap between insiders and ordinary shareholders. That gap is where volatility, uncertainty, and mistrust grow. The passage of Reg FD over 25 years ago made a huge difference for the small investors who were finally able to get information at the same time as the big Wall Street firms. Removing its protection for individual investors is bad move in the opposite direction from helping us. I don't like your motivation for doing this. Haven't you seen the research from CFA Institute that studied this in the UK? The short-term "fix" didn't provide the desired effect. The companies most likely to opt out are the ones where oversight matters most. WallStreetBets says: "The companies we trade are not being held back from greatness by the obligation to file four reports a year. ... The entire S&P 500 files a 10-Q every quarter, and the S&P 500 is at an all-time high. If quarterly reporting is crushing American capitalism, American capitalism is hiding it well."

Nasima The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nasima We want transparency , less surprises

---

Nathan Mead — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nathan Mead Please keep 1/4ly reporting in place semi annual would have a chilling effect on investing in the businesses that are spearheading innovation and economic growth by making investors more wary because of less information available

---

Nathan Mueller — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nathan Mueller Less reporting would be a step backward. Public companies should not be reporting less than they currently are. As a shareholder, a quarterly update by public companies is a good interval for us to keep tabs on our investments. Thank you.

NATHAN R. SMITH NONE — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: NATHAN R. SMITH Please REJECT the proposal on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. As shareholders, we are owners, and the companies we own cannot operate daily, and not report up-to-date financial information to ensure that we can influence the direction of the company's operations. I would like you to support DAILY public company reporting, with company report information for previous day performance. Of course, the information disclosure would have to be internet-based, but as owners, even quarterly reporting is not frequent enough. If "Daily" is deemed a hardship, then Weekly, or Monthly should be given serious consideration. But not semi-annually - that is ridiculous. Thank you for your consideration, and please continue the good work.

NC PEERS Owner/CEO — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: NC PEERS I reject, in the strongest terms possible, any action that restricts, hampers, or infringes upon, the full disclosure of information regarding, or pertaining to, any company or entity, in which I hold an interest, financial or otherwise.

Neal Sheeley — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Neal Sheeley I believe that reducing the frequency of reporting financial information by companies to owners and the public hampers our right to make decisions in a timely and informed manner. If any change is needed, it might be to inrease reporting frequency to six times per year. Increased transparency is best in this area.

Neil Hansen A. , Senior Vice President and Chief Financial Officer, Exxon Mobil Corporation — Jun 24, 2026
Neil A. Hansen
Senior Vice President and Chief Financial Officer
June 24, 2026
Ms. Vanessa Countryman
Secretary
U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission

100 F Street, N.E.
Washington, D.C. 20549-1090
Re: File No. S7-2026-15
SEC Request for Comment on Semiannual Reporting
May 5, 2026
Dear Ms. Countryman:
As Senior Vice President and Chief Financial Officer of Exxon Mobil Corporation, I appreciate the opportunity to comment on the Commission's proposed rule regarding semiannual reporting on new Form 10-S for domestic registrants. ExxonMobil supports this proposal and the Commission's broader efforts to modernize the disclosure framework in a manner that enhances efficiency, reduces unnecessary complexity, and eases regulatory burdens, while preserving robust investor protections. We believe the Commission's disclosure regime should be principles-based, scalable, and flexible, recognizing that a one-size-fits-all approach does not reflect the diversity of issuer profiles, business models, or investor needs across the public markets.
We believe the Commission's proposal appropriately acknowledges that the public disclosure ecosystem has evolved significantly since the onset of periodic reporting. Investors today access and consume information through a wide range of channels beyond periodic reports, including earnings releases furnished on Form 8-K, investor presentations, webcasts, and issuer websites. Based on feedback from our investors and others in the financial community, we observe that substantially more emphasis is placed on these timelier communications and broader avenues of information than on Form 10-Q itself. In this respect, the proposal reflects modern market practices and investor behavior, rather than legacy reporting conventions.
We agree that disclosures should focus on material information that is most relevant and useful to investor decision-making. The value of interim reporting lies in the quality, clarity, and relevance of the information provided, rather than frequency alone. Semiannual reporting, when considered alongside existing voluntary disclosures, Form 8-K requirements, and the requirements of Regulation FD, preserves the flow of material information to the market while reducing the time and cost burden associated with the preparation and review of periodic reports that do not meaningfully enhance investor understanding.

ExxonMobil is supportive of the Commission's semiannual reporting proposal and appreciates its pragmatic approach in retaining the existing interim reporting framework. Maintaining the same underlying standards that govern current quarterly reporting will promote consistency, comparability, and operational efficiency for preparers and users. We believe it represents a thoughtful reassessment of long-standing reporting practices in the context of currently available information channels, market behavior, and investor expectations, without compromising long-standing and important investor protections.
Rather than responding to the Commission's request for comment on a question-by-question basis, we structured our feedback below around the overarching themes that we believe are central to the success of this proposal.
Continuing Availability of Timely and Material Information to Investors
As prefaced above, we do not believe a move to semiannual reporting would result in a reduction of material or timely information available to investors because material quarterly information is disclosed independently of the Form 10-Qs. Feedback from our investors and others in the financial community indicates that they increasingly rely on earnings releases, webcasts, investor presentations, Form 8-K filings, and company investor relations websites, rather than Form 10-Q itself, as their primary sources of issuer information. Companies also routinely communicate with the market through a wide range of other voluntary channels, including public-facing reports and disclosures addressing comprehensive business and strategic matters. This broader, more dynamic disclosure ecosystem currently provides investors with continuous access to material developments. The proposed framework appropriately recognizes that the purpose of periodic reporting—maintaining reasonably current, publicly-available information—is now achieved through multiple channels that are more user-friendly and often more effective. Importantly, this evolution in investor information consumption has not diminished market transparency, efficiency, or access to information for market participants, whether they are small or large investors. Existing regulations, particularly Regulation FD and Form 8-K filing requirements, provide a robust framework for the broad and timely dissemination of material information. Issuers are strongly incentivized to communicate material developments promptly to the public to maintain investor confidence and support efficient market valuation. We expect issuers will continue to evolve their disclosure practices to meet investor expectations and market demands, irrespective of periodic reporting frequency.

Accordingly, semiannual reporting would modernize the reporting framework without compromising investor protection or the quality of information available to the market, and better align disclosure requirements with how investors access, evaluate, and use information today. We agree the proposal is a thoughtful and measured approach that preserves a system designed to produce material, timely, and decision-useful disclosures to enable well-informed and sound investment decisions while reducing unnecessary compliance burdens and promoting efficiency for both companies and investors.

Optional, Not Mandatory, Semiannual Reporting to Provide Flexibility

We believe semiannual reporting should be optional rather than mandatory and should be available to all issuers. An optional framework appropriately recognizes that companies differ in size, maturity, industry, complexity, investor base, geographic footprint, and disclosure practices. Some issuers may determine that quarterly reporting on Form 10-Q remains preferable due to investor expectations, business cyclicality, capital markets considerations, or other operational factors. Others may determine that semiannual reporting on Form 10-S better balances their investor needs with reporting burdens. Allowing issuers to make this determination preserves flexibility and promotes market-based outcomes without imposing a one-size-fits-all framework. We feel that each company is in the best position to evaluate the efficiency benefits that ultimately accrue to shareholders from adopting a semiannual approach relative to the value of maintaining quarterly reporting.

As mandatory semiannual reporting does not allow companies to make this value assessment, it could produce unintended consequences, including forcing companies with diverse investor needs into a uniform approach that may be suboptimal. We therefore believe investor and issuer considerations, rather than regulatory mandate, should largely determine the cadence and format of interim reporting.

New Optional Form 8-K Item 8.02 (1Q/3Q Financial Statements) for Further Flexibility

We recommend that, in connection with a move toward optional semiannual reporting, the Commission adopt a new Item 8.02 for Form 8-K that would permit issuers to file (not furnish) first or third-quarter financial statements and related information on an optional, as-needed basis. This optional mechanism would further enhance flexibility while addressing potential concerns around timely financial transparency from both issuer and investor perspectives. It would also address many of the Commission's thoughtful questions about quarterly earnings releases and their treatment in a semiannual reporting regime, which we address in sections further below.

Unlike a full Form 10-Q, the proposed Item 8.02 should be carefully scoped to require only condensed consolidated financial statements and incremental, decision-useful updates that are material changes from the issuer's most recent Form 10-K or Form 10-S, rather than a comprehensive refresh of all quarterly disclosures required under GAAP. Eliminating or limiting repeat footnote disclosures and certain MD&A elements—such as routine liquidity discussions and segment disclosures—would meaningfully reduce preparer burden and disclosure volume, while preserving investor access to new, material information. Many of these recurring disclosures provide limited incremental insight on a quarterly cadence and are largely duplicative of annual reporting, yet they carry disproportionate cost and complexity. This approach is consistent with our view that as disclosure requirements have increased over the past several years, it has become more difficult for investors to focus on what is truly important. To avoid unintentionally triggering the full suite of ASC 270 interim reporting requirements or creating conflict with existing GAAP presentation and disclosure frameworks, the Commission could clarify that financial statements filed under this Item are permitted to be presented on a simplified, updated basis, accompanied by a principles-based requirement to disclose only material changes or developments. The Item could also expressly distinguish these submissions from "complete interim financial statements" for GAAP purposes, thereby allowing issuers to tailor disclosures without implying full compliance with Form 10-Q content requirements. Structuring the submission as a "filed", not furnished, Form 8-K item, consistent with the framework for Item 8.01 and other material event disclosures, would also allow incorporation by reference into Securities Act registration statements and the Exchange Act reporting record.

The proposed Item 8.02 would offer a pragmatic, market-responsive solution to potential concerns around semiannual reporting and is consistent with the Commission's long-standing principles-based approach to disclosure, permitting issuers to respond to changes in their business or markets without regulatory friction. This proposal may also encourage more issuers to opt-in to the semiannual reporting framework, particularly during the early stages of adoption, by not unduly constraining reporting flexibility. Companies frequently encounter events—such as mergers, restructurings, credit rating changes, or market disruptions—that warrant near-term financial updates. The proposed Item 8.02 would enable issuers to have the option to provide decision-useful information when it may be most relevant, rather than deferring disclosure until the next Form 10-S or Form 10-K. At the same time, it could potentially accommodate contractual obligations, including debt covenants and indentures tied to quarterly reporting or Section 13 and 15(d) requirements of the Exchange Act—without requiring widespread amendments or workarounds of financing agreements, providing compliance certainty without full Form 10-Q preparation.

Overall, we believe the proposal strikes a practical balance between flexibility and investor protection. By coupling optional semiannual reporting with a clear pathway to disclose material financial updates through filed Item 8.02 reports, the proposal mitigates concerns about reduced visibility into material financial developments, information asymmetry between sophisticated and retail investors, and potential increases in cost of capital under a semiannual reporting regime. Further, the proposal advances the Commission's efforts to modernize the periodic reporting architecture to recognize that a uniform quarterly reporting mandate does not suit the diversity of issuer profiles, industries, and investor bases, without compromising the furnished earnings release framework. Together, these measures would deliver meaningful cost savings, preserve investor protections, and modernize the disclosure system with a flexible, issuer-specific approach.

Sustained Comparability Across Periods and Peers

We do not believe semiannual reporting would materially impact investors' ability to compare same-company or peer performance over time. If we elect semiannual reporting, we expect to continue providing quarterly financial disclosures through earnings releases furnished on Form 8-K, investor presentations, postings to the Investors section of our website, or, if adopted, through new Item 8.02 of Form 8-K, as appropriate. This allows us to satisfy investor demand, provide financial and operational updates, and address significant developments and events affecting the business. Other issuers that choose semiannual reporting likely will follow a similar process to provide material information to the market. These disclosures, combined with annual and semiannual reports, should largely preserve comparability at both the company-specific and peer levels.

Treatment of Earnings Releases and Form 8-K Item 2.02

We support maintaining the current Item 2.02 framework that permits issuers to furnish earnings releases on Form 8-K and do not believe a transition to filed status is warranted. The Commission has long recognized an important and deliberate distinction between information that is furnished and information that is filed, and earnings announcements are a clear example of disclosures for which furnished treatment is appropriate. Through Item 2.02 of Form 8-K, the SEC expressly permits issuers to furnish earnings releases, reflecting the Commission's view that these communications serve a different purpose than formal periodic filings.

The Commission's furnished information framework promotes robust and candid disclosure. It appropriately recognizes that earnings releases are management communications intended to provide timely information to the market. By limiting liability exposure relative to filed documents, the framework encourages issuers to provide prompt disclosure, supplemental context, operational insights, and forward-looking information that investors value, but which might otherwise be constrained or omitted if earnings releases were required to be filed. This approach aligns with Regulation FD's objective of broad and timely dissemination of material information without discouraging informative communication.

Moreover, the furnished treatment reflects the practical reality that earnings releases often include a mix of GAAP financial information, non-GAAP measures, estimates, and forward-looking statements. Elevating these communications to filed status would increase legal exposure, lengthen preparation timelines, and expand internal and external review processes, potentially delaying disclosure and reducing the utility of the information to investors. These outcomes would undermine the intended efficiencies offered by semiannual reporting and are not aligned with the Commission's stated objectives.

In short, by permitting earnings announcements to be furnished rather than filed, the Commission has appropriately tailored the disclosure framework to the nature and purpose of these communications. Maintaining this distinction supports efficient, transparent markets while preserving investor protection and is consistent with the Commission's broader objectives of modernizing disclosure requirements and reducing unnecessary regulatory burden.

Incorporation by Reference Concerns

If the Commission were to require earnings releases to be filed on Form 8-K, we strongly recommend that such releases not be incorporated by reference into registration statements, Form 10-K, Form 10-Q, or the new Form 10-S semiannual report. While earnings releases are subject to disclosure controls and procedures, they are not currently subject to internal control over financial reporting (ICFR). Requiring incorporation by reference would effectively force issuers to bring earnings release processes into ICFR scope, increasing cost and complexity, which are contrary to the proposal's stated objectives.

In addition, earnings releases typically include non-GAAP measures, preliminary estimates, forward-looking information, and operational metrics that are commonly used for investor communication but may not be appropriate or permissible in filed documents subject to stricter disclosure standards. For example, non-GAAP financial measures included in an earnings release often rely on adjustment methodologies and presentation flexibility that align with Regulation G and Item 2.02 of Form 8-K, but would face more restrictive treatment if incorporated into filed reports. Similarly, qualitative commentary provided during earnings calls or highlighted on company websites is designed to provide context rather than to meet the formal requirements of Commission filings.

The current distinctions among public disclosures made through company websites, earnings calls, furnished Form 8-Ks, and filed documents reflect differing liability frameworks, levels of formality, and control requirements, and these distinctions are generally well understood by issuers, investors, and other market participants. For instance, furnished Form 8-Ks are not subject to the same level of liability under the Exchange Act as filed reports, and website disclosures and earnings call materials operate under yet another set of expectations regarding completeness and precision. Altering these longstanding distinctions—by effectively elevating earnings releases to filed status or incorporating them by reference into periodic reports—could blur these boundaries, introduce interpretive uncertainty, and create confusion regarding applicable disclosure standards, liability exposure, and required levels of internal control

Auditor Review of Financial Information in Earnings Releases

The Commission requested feedback on whether to require an auditor review of financial information in any first or third quarter earnings releases of an issuer that elects semiannual reporting. The Commission also asked if an issuer which elects semiannual reporting would retain its independent public accountant to perform a review of its financial statements at the end of each quarter.

In this context, we consider the financial statements to be the following five primary statements: consolidated statements of income, comprehensive income, balance sheet, cash flows, and changes in equity. We consider financial information in an earnings release to encompass information presented outside of the financial statements, even if derived from elements of the financial statements.

We support permitting issuers that elect semiannual reporting to determine, based on their facts and circumstances, whether to obtain an independent public accounting firm's review of first- or third-quarter financial statements included in earnings releases. Allowing issuer optionality in this area is consistent with the Commission's objective of reducing compliance burden while preserving investor protection through transparency.

Our independent public accounting firm does perform a review of our interim financial statements that are included in our Form 10-Q but does not audit or review our earnings releases and does not provide assurance on those communications. The firm's involvement is generally limited to reading the earnings release to consider whether it contains information that is materially inconsistent with the audited financial statements or information obtained during the audit. This limited involvement does not constitute a formal review or provide any level of assurance.

Earnings releases are management communications that summarize results and trends – they are not prepared or labeled as reviewed or audited financial statements. As discussed in the preceding sections, earnings releases typically communicate a broad spectrum of information, such as US-GAAP compliant financial information, non-GAAP measures, operational detail, projections and forecasts – including updates to such previously issued information – and other forward-looking statements. In addition to increasing a company's compliance cost, requiring an auditor review of financial information contained in these communications would significantly expand the scope of an auditor's responsibilities and likely necessitate a revision to the current assurance standards as promulgated by the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board. A review requirement would be misaligned with the current regulatory framework, under which financial information not filed with the Commission is not subject to auditor assurance.

As previously noted, while earnings releases are subject to disclosure controls and procedures, they are not typically within the scope of ICFR, and we do not believe ICFR should extend to the earnings release process. Expanding ICFR to encompass earnings releases would introduce unnecessary complexity by requiring additional controls, documentation, testing, and audit coordination around processes that are designed to be timely and responsive to market expectations. Such an expansion would reintroduce much of the burden that semiannual reporting is intended to alleviate, diminish the operational flexibility of the earnings release process, increase compliance costs, and create timing pressures that are not aligned with its purpose.
We support the long-standing requirement for an auditor's review of interim financial statements when an issuer files a Form 10-Q. Furthermore, if the Commission were to adopt our aforementioned proposal for the new optional Item 8.02 of Form 8-K, we believe a mandatory auditor review of the five primary financial statements is appropriate. In that circumstance, an auditor review remains an important component of the overall disclosure framework and provides investors with additional assurance regarding the reliability of interim financial statements prepared in accordance with Regulation S-X.
Access to Capital Markets and Financial Statement Staleness
Under the current framework, financial statement staleness is governed by Rule 3-12 of Regulation S-X, which deems financial statements "stale" once they exceed specified age thresholds, generally 130 days for accelerated filers and 135 days for other filers. This framework applies uniformly to registration statements, including those on Form S-3, and to subsequent offerings conducted under those registrations.

The Commission correctly identified that the existing framework, which is built around a quarterly reporting cadence on Form 10-Q filings to refresh incorporated financial information and prevent staleness, would render semiannual reporting impractical if left unrevised. We support the Commission's proposal to consolidate Rule 3-12 into proposed Rule 3-01 to synchronize the age of financial statement requirements with the cadence selected by the issuer.
However, while the proposed amendments resolve the threshold question of whether a registration statement can satisfy the regulatory age requirements, they do not address the separate constraint arising from PCAOB Auditing Standard AS 6101. PCAOB AS 6101 limits an auditor's ability to provide negative assurance in a comfort letter to underwriters beyond 135 days from the most recently audited or reviewed period. The restriction imposed by AS 6101 becomes particularly acute for issuers that rely on shelf registration to access the capital markets on demand. A shelf registration is designed to provide continuous, on-demand access to capital markets, but that access will likely be impaired absent an alignment of AS 6101 to the Commission's proposal of a semiannual reporting cadence. The Commission recognized that "an investor in a registrant that is a semiannual filer may not receive interim financial statements that are as current as would be required today." This gap, which may extend for several months between required semiannual filings, creates meaningful execution risk for shelf takedowns and could increase the cost of capital.
The Commission directly asks whether "reporting companies that elect to become semiannual filers [would] nonetheless decide to include quarterly or more recent financial information in Securities Act registration statements or prospectuses based on market practices or liability concerns." The Commission could address this concern through our proposal for a new Item 8.02 of Form 8-K to allow semiannual reporting issuers the option to file quarterly financial statements.

Further, the Commission should confirm that an issuer that voluntarily files interim financial information between required semiannual filings through an Item 8.02 of Form 8-K does not thereby alter its reporting obligations or create an expectation of continued voluntary disclosure at the same frequency. This safe harbor would preserve the voluntary nature of any supplemental disclosure while giving issuers flexibility to respond to dynamic market demands without legal risk and support capital markets formation.

Considerations Related to Indenture and Debt Agreements

Our existing indentures generally include two types of interim reporting provisions. First, certain indentures require the Company to furnish periodic reports in accordance with Sections 13 or 15(d) of the Exchange Act. These provisions are inherently dynamic and would continue to operate as intended under a revised SEC reporting framework, as they incorporate the Commission's reporting requirements as they evolve. As a result, these provisions would not be expected to require modification in connection with a transition to semiannual reporting.

Second, certain other indentures include more prescriptive covenants that require the delivery of interim financial statements within a specified number of days following the end of a fiscal period, often tied to a quarterly balance sheet date. These provisions would not automatically conform to a semiannual reporting model and, accordingly, would require an amendment to align with a revised reporting cadence. Updating these agreements would entail an administrative effort, including legal analysis, coordination with trustees, and, in some cases, execution of supplemental indentures or consents. While we acknowledge that these revisions would involve time and cost, we believe such efforts are manageable and do not outweigh the broader benefits of permitting semiannual reporting. Further, if the Commission adopts our proposed Item 8.02, this may provide issuers and creditors with an alternative mechanism to satisfy specific periodic reporting requirements contained in the indentures without sacrificing progress on the semiannual initiative. In our view, the flexibility and efficiency gains associated with a semiannual reporting option would justify the necessary updates to legacy agreements, particularly given that the affected provisions represent a discrete and addressable subset of existing indenture requirements.

Advancing Semiannual Reporting Concurrent with a Path to Broader Modernization

We support the Commission's continued advancement of its proposal to permit semiannual reporting, while preserving flexibility for issuers to elect a reporting cadence that aligns with their business models, investor needs, and cost-benefit considerations. At the same time, we encourage the Commission to undertake a broader, holistic review of existing Forms 10-K and 10-Q disclosure requirements to enhance relevance and reduce unnecessary complexity, and to extend these to the new Form 10-S if adopted. Modernization efforts should emphasize a principles-based, materiality-focused framework that reduces reliance on prescriptive line-item requirements, which often result in boilerplate disclosures rather than meaningful insight. This could include eliminating duplicative disclosures across sections—such as overlap between the Business description, Risk Factors, and MD&A—and refining MD&A to focus more clearly on material drivers of performance, known trends, and forward-looking considerations instead of repetitive, period-over-period narrative.

Additionally, the Commission could improve disclosure quality by removing or updating low-utility/outdated requirements that no longer provide meaningful value to investors, including detailed physical property listings, certain supplemental oil and gas schedules, and legacy tabular disclosures that are costly to maintain but rarely decision-useful. A thoughtful recalibration along these lines would sharpen the focus of periodic reporting on information that is material and decision-useful, while reducing compliance burden and improving readability. Taken together with a flexible approach to reporting frequency, these changes would better align the SEC's disclosure framework with the needs of modern capital markets and investors.

Given the scope and complexity of a full Form 10-K and 10-Q modernization effort, conditioning semiannual reporting on completion of broader reforms would delay meaningful near-term progress. The semiannual proposal is already well-developed, has benefited from market engagement, and is positioned for timely implementation. Accordingly, we support a sequenced approach: proceed with adoption of the semiannual reporting option now, while continuing the Commission's ongoing review of Regulation S-K and undertaking further modernization initiatives on a parallel, but independent, timeline.

Filing Deadline Consistent with Current Form 10-Q

We believe the filing deadline for a semiannual report should align with the current Form 10-Q deadlines—45 days after period-end for non-accelerated filers and 40 days after period-end for accelerated and large accelerated filers. Consistent deadlines promote comparability, reduce implementation complexity, and avoid pressuring issuers to modify processes in ways that could compromise quality or internal controls while increasing cost.

Expected Reduction in Compliance Costs and Regulatory Burdens

We believe providing issuers with the option to elect semiannual reporting offers a meaningful opportunity to reduce compliance costs and allow for more efficient resource deployment. While the precise magnitude of these efficiencies will vary by issuer, we expect tangible reductions in the time and effort required from employees, management, the Board of Directors, and our independent registered public accounting firm in preparing, reviewing, and filing interim reports. Although certain foundational activities—such as maintaining data integrity, executing disclosure controls, and sustaining effective ICFR—will appropriately continue throughout the year, the overall cadence for required SEC reporting would be significantly more efficient. As a result, we expect a net positive impact, with reduced reporting frequency driving clearer prioritization, lower incremental effort, and more efficient governance processes.

More broadly, semiannual reporting would further enable management to focus on core business execution, long-term strategy, and shareholder value creation. Combined with the continued use of quarterly earnings releases furnished on Form 8-K and disclosures under Regulation FD, this approach can preserve timely and useful flow of information to investors while reducing duplicative or low-value narrative. With appropriate implementation and continued availability of key financial information, we believe issuers can achieve meaningful efficiency gains without compromising transparency, investor confidence, or access to capital markets.

Limited Impact on Insider Trading / Blackout Periods

We do not anticipate that semiannual reporting will result in meaningful changes or impacts on our insider trading policy and guidelines, trading windows, or blackout periods as these practices are structured around quarterly earnings releases rather than the timing of Form 10-Q filings. As previously noted, if we elect semiannual reporting, we expect to continue providing quarterly financial disclosures through earnings releases furnished on Form 8-K. Consequently, we do not expect semiannual reporting to increase insider trading risk or necessitate enhancements to our policies.

Transition Considerations

If the proposal is adopted, we believe no formal transition period is necessary, provided issuers have a full calendar quarter to prepare. For example, if a final rule is published and effective by September 30, an issuer should be able to determine—by the time it files its Form 10-K for that year—whether it will elect semiannual reporting in the following fiscal year. We also believe that such a timeline provides sufficient notice to investors of the issuer's intention.

We appreciate the opportunity to offer recommendations. ExxonMobil would also welcome the opportunity to address any questions the Commission may have about these comments or to provide additional information or context.
Sincerely,
By:

Name: Neil A. Hansen
Title: Senior Vice President and Chief Financial Officer

Neil Jolly — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Neil Jolly I disagree strongly on changing the current required reporting period from quarterly to semi-annually. This leaves a lot of darkness about a companies past and future trajectories and having to wait so long to know what is happening. I would like to request the SEC to not make any change to the current quarterly reporting requirements.

Neval Ozturk — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Neval Ozturk Quarterly reporting provides more transparency and help small investors better insights.

NICHOLAS AMMAR The motley fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: NICHOLAS AMMAR It is hard to imagine any positive benefit to the average American for large corporations to report their activities, earnings, goals and future plans less often. The proposed semi annual reporting process should not be allowed. It is undemocratic, only helps large corporations, and goes against everything this administration stands for. Please consider dismissing this legislation and continuing with the quarterly reporting process. Thank you

---

Nicholas genereux — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nicholas genereux All companies should be required to keep the quarterly financial statements thry currently do. And not semi-annual reports that are being proposed.

Nicholas Theiss — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nicholas Theiss I am in support of semi-annual reporting. I like the visibility of quarterly reports as an investor but also have experience working in engineering and sales at a publicly traded company and see the negative consequences of quarterly reporting outweighing the convenience from the investor side. Semi-annual reporting will give companies more time to level their orders vs. sales especially in project based businesses. If we decrease the importance of the quarterly financial reports, the monthly targets will also be less critical which will help drive longer term strategy and I think overall faster business growth.

Nick Van Dyke US Citizen — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nick Van Dyke Strike down the policy to have publicly traded companies only report earnings twice a year instead of four times a year. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. As the US Government, who are you representing: the voter or the board?

Nicolas Maskens — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nicolas Maskens Hi there, I believe reducing the number of reporting periods for listed companies would be a terrible mistake, allowing the operational teams to diverge from their owners' guidance for longer durations, withsometimes unrecoverable consequences. thanks to keep those at 4 per year. Best regards Nicolas Maskens

---

Nicole Glover — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nicole Glover De-regulation is not helpful and leads to larger problems with corporate oversight.

Niel E. Armstrong — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Niel E. Armstrong Less frequent financial disclosure reporting will lead to far less transparency. With modern IT ERP/Accounting systems it is easier to perform the monthly and quarterly close and reporting functions than ever before. Aim for more reporting frequency and transparency for investors, not less.

Niels Olson — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Niels Olson Investing is ownership and any limitations on access to data or information on something you own is a decrease in transparency, which inherently decreases trust.

Nigel Start — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nigel Start I think that the move to 6-monthly reporting will be to the detriment of company investors. Private shareholders such as myself rely on regular financial updates to inform on progress in a resonable time-frame. In most cases, people such as myself are the collective owners

---

Noah A Hopson — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Noah A Hopson My name is Noah Hopson, and I am an Engineer from Michigan. Quarterly reporting is critical to keeping companies accountable to their shareholders and the public at large. I don't see any reasonable argument for extending the time between reporting.

Noah Tillinghast Financial Advisor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Noah Tillinghast The more technology advances the faster changes will occur. The whole point of quarterly disclosure is to clue in investors on that. Take 2020. Most companies that close their years on Jan 1 would have waited till July or August before they reported earnings, and then the next report would be in January or February 2021. In that time frame, how would fundamentals focused investors assess companies? It would become much harder, tilting more towards large companies and hedge funds with the resources to be able to track a company's performance - without the quarterly reports. When it comes to short term focused traders, often they do not even own the stock, and even if they do they often only look at a summary of the earnings. For example, I recently saw a clip of a famous trader on CNBC in 2021 talking about why he bought Upstart stock and you should to. He mentions strong earnings and revenue - but when the commentator asks him what Upstart does - he couldn't answer. In my opinion, the speculation in markets would only increase – as investors would have less actual data vs extrapolated data, and there would be a much longer time frame for companies to tell the story of why the stock should go up – without having to actually release hard data that might contradict that. Finally, smaller companies often have close to real time data, take giant Costco that releases sales monthly, and even a company like Oracle closes its books in under 10 days. A company that has a hard time making a 45 day deadline to release their reports, is a company that is using 45+ day old data to make major decision, and is a company which I have no interest in owning. In summary, the ones who will be hurt the most will be fundamentals focused investors. Speculators won't care. We have seen speculation many, many times before. They were everywhere in 1999, in 2007, and in 1929. What cleared them out every time was a large sustained market decline where the market punished them for focusing on momentum, or some factor other than earnings. When that happens some time in the next 10 years, we will see many of the speculators either leave markets for good, or increase their time horizon.

None None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: None Keep it the way it is. We have enough corruption with the president and his fsmily and millionaire friends. Cynthia mckenzie grandkids73@yahoo.com

---

Nuno Vaz — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Nuno Vaz Companies should maintain quarterly statements in order to keep shareholders informed. In today's age of AI, stock market changes happen at a much faster rate. There are companies that change their revenues by 1000% in a short period of time.

O. Guerra — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: O. Guerra We need quarterly, not semi-annual reporting! In a time of increased fraud and other bad faith dealings, we need more accountability, not less. I want to be sure that my investments are safe and the US economy is stable. Reducing reporting weakens both. As a retiree, living on a fixed income, I care very much about this issue.

Obed The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Obed I am submitting this because I certain that information is crucial for decisions making, specially when corporations love to receive their investors money but not to keep them informed of what is going on with their ownership.

Oliver Cass None-retiree — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Oliver Cass Please keep the quarterly reporting. This lets individual investors keep up to date on how their investments are going. This is an important aspect of free markets. Thanks

---

Oliver Smith Retiree — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Oliver Smith As a recent retiree, I plan to rely on invested savings to pay for my children's education, as well as our living expenses for the next 25 years, God willing. This proposed rule change threatens my family's future, by allowing corporations to delay disclosing issues that would impact their stock share prices. This rule change would allow fraud to fester for a longer period before it is discovered. Even though quarterly reporting would be optional, companies would normalize on semi-annual reporting. Please consider that quarterly reporting is a relatively small cost to companies, so the benefit of this rule change would be low. If quarterly reporting were made semi-annual, the risk of losses would increase, and be borne by each of us who has invested our savings into equities. Please do not remove this key guardrail that ensures timely transparency. Thank you for your consideration.

Olivier Six — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Olivier Six Hi, Hope you are doing well. Just wanted to point out than less information will not be to the advantage of little investor like me. Less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Yes it would reduce cost for compagnies, but maybe they should pay less their board members and high direction instead of trying to reduce information given to shareholders.

Omar — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Omar This just sounds dumb. It's not a cost cutting move. Its an "I don't want to keep you informed and would rather you not know what is really going on" type of thing. Reeks of a typical rich people trying to hide their "business" from the non rich/well off people BS. When it comes to this Admin, it seems even more typical They, along with the SEC seemingly, does NOT care about the typical person trying to get ahead. I thought they did. If this goes away, it would not be the worst thing in the world, but I wonder if its heading to something worse.

P Rodriguez — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: P Rodriguez Investors deserve the transparency of quarterly reports. Companies who have a problem with that are obviously trying to hide something; plain and simple……

Pamela brown The motley fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pamela brown Please do no change the frequency of reporting to semiannual.

Pamela Uptegraph Primerica — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pamela Uptegraph I think reducing communications such as the quarterly reports is wrong. Clients deserve more information not less. Do not change the reporting requirements to semi-annually KEEP IT AT QUARTERLY!

Pamela Zimmerman — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Pamela Zimmerman Affiliation: Jun. 24, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I was told long before I retired that a three prong approach was needed to support myself through the retirement years. First, Social Security was robbed by politicians and it was never repaid. Now it is questionable if it will last until 2032. We paid in and the government has let us down. Second, pensions provided by employers. Third, stocks and this is were the quarterly reports are so necessary to prevent fraud. Transparency is needed to keep the government and corporations in check. We need guard rails for our democracy and corporations. Our present economy is squeezing the middle class dry and I don't support idea of eliminating quarterly reoprting. In fact, this very idea stinks to the high heavens!
Respectfully,
Pamela Sanchez Zimmerman

Pat Brazan Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pat Brazan Please do not institute the option for businesses to report twice a year…. Keep business reporting at minimum 4 times a year

---

Patricia Chapman — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia Chapman Please do not reduce the quarterly reporting requirement to semi annual, as less information available to existing, prospective, or potential investors/owners would likely result in lower quality investment decisions. Perhaps consider instead a simplified reporting requirement in alternate reporting periods that would just require a company to update the prior periodic report with material changes needed to make the prior periodic report, accurate to date.

Patricia J Reis none — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia J Reis I am writing to express my strong opposition to Proposed Rule S7-2026-15, which would allow public companies to replace quarterly Form 10-Q filings with semi-annual Form 10-S filings. I firmly believe that this shift would severely harm market transparency, reduce investor protections, and disproportionately disadvantage retail investors. Quarterly reporting is a cornerstone of the modern U.S. financial system. Moving to a six-month reporting cycle introduces several significant risks: 1. Increased Information Asymmetry: Institutional investors and corporate insiders possess alternative channels for gathering real-time data. Retail investors, however, rely heavily on public SEC filings. Forcing public markets to wait six months for audited updates creates a vast information gap that wall street can exploit at the expense of everyday investors. 2. Delayed Material Disclosures: A six-month window is a lifetime in the modern economy. Serious financial deterioration, supply chain disruptions, or shifting corporate strategies could be obscured from public view for up to half a year, leading to massive, sudden stock volatility when reports are finally dropped. 3. Weakened Corporate Governance: Frequent reporting forces management teams to maintain tight internal financial controls and stay accountable to shareholders. Reducing this frequency invites complacency and increases the window of opportunity for corporate mismanagement or fraudulent accounting to go undetected. While I understand the Commission's desire to reduce compliance costs for corporations, those savings should not be achieved by shifting risk onto the public. The U.S. markets are trusted globally precisely because of our rigorous disclosure standards. I urge the SEC to preserve the integrity of our markets, keep corporate reporting quarterly, and withdraw Proposed Rule S7-2026-15.

Patricia McGrath CEO McGrath Express — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia McGrath Transparency behooves corporations to report more, not less frequently.

Patricia Moore reader of Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia Moore Do not change the rule of reporting 4 times per year. Let's keep Investment and other companies compliant. Per Motley Fool: "Back in 2000, the SEC opened a public comment period on a proposal called Regulation Fair Disclosure (Reg FD). Fools showed up in force. Our community submitted roughly 65% of all comment letters! The rule ultimately passed, and SEC Chair Arthur Levitt later visited Fool HQ to thank us. He directly credited the Fool Community as the critical force behind the outcome. Twenty-six years ago, Fools helped win greater transparency for individual investors. Now we have an opportunity to help preserve it." I agree!

Patricia Shanley The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patricia Shanley REJECT - The Proposal to Allow Companies to Opt to Change Reporting from 4x/yr to 2x/yr. Investors need accurate and TIMELY information to make decisions. Decreasing information from 4x/yr to 2x/yr will result in a change from investors following companies and their direction every 3 months, to being shocked as to the companies direction in the last 6 months and panicking as to what might happen in the next 6 months and having to make rash buy/sell decisions as investors know there will be NO INSIGHT for the next 6 months. As investors, we are OWNERS in the company with rights to information and voting. This seems like another step to give CEO's more power than the owners and to corrupt the public markets. (ie. Elon Musks stock voting share class that gives him oversized control of a PUBLICLY OWNED company, and the Nasdaq-100's decision to give SpaceX a 3x multiple float market weight, etc. I understand the SEC is under tremendous pressure from the oligarchs to change rules to favor them. AND, if ultimately they are able to corrupt the system such that it no longer works, then it won't work for them either. Protect investors right to timely information.

Patrick Albers Airline pilot and investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patrick Albers Ownership requires transparency. Reducing this would mean being less informed. But why? With all the technology we have today, these reports should be available with less cost and effort than in the old days. This reduction will provide more opportunity for “creative” bookkeeping

---

Patrick Francois — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patrick Francois The need to maintain at a minimum, quarterly statements, and not reduce to only 2 x's per year, is absolutely vital for any investor to making informed decisions on their money. I strenuously object to anything less than 4 times per year on my investment statements.

Patrick Mc Nelis — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patrick Mc Nelis I intensely disagree with any movement to reduce reporting requirements for publicly traded companies.

Patrick O’Brien Private Investor managing portfolio — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patrick O’Brien The value of any stock for Investor is intrinsically linked to the capability of the Leadership to pay dividends (bonus) and especially how much earnings will grow in next 5 years. Investors therefore need quarterly updates and even more often if other critical info is relevant and timely.

Patrick The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patrick I encourage a reconsideration of reducing the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think this would be a mistake!

Patrick Wyatt — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patrick Wyatt deserve regular, transparent communication from the business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Patty — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Patty We need quarterly public information. Reducing it to two times a year is a mistake.

---

paul bel — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: paul bel As a stockholder I have a right and need ti be informed about the company at least quarterly to make informed decisions, TWICE A YEAR IS A JOKE!

Paul Berger Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Berger This is very mich a “don’t fix what isn’t broken”. I feel quarterly reporting serves a key role in informing investors and holding management accountable. Less reporting does not serve the public interest.

Paul Bloch Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Bloch This new legislation will harm ordinary everyday investors and the current reporting standards should not be changed

---

Paul Cooper — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Cooper Disappointed to hear that reporting is likely to reduce, I truly believe this is a mistake. As an avid investor my decisions are made based on any and all relevant information shared by current and prospective companies. If the reports are reduced by 50% I fear my ability to make key financial decisions will be severely impacted. Please reconsider.

Paul Curtis Private investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Curtis I am opposed to changing to semiannual reporting. Quarterly reporting allows investors like me to have a clearer view of how companies are performing.

Paul Haake None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Haake Quarterly reports will keep stock owners more informed of the business/es they want to invest in. More info should be helpful for the stability of the stock market.

Paul Naujokas The Motley Fool community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Naujokas I do not like this plan. I understand that they do this in Europe and it is supposed to help reduce administrative work and reporting. However, I feel this is very bad for the retail investor like me. Without more frequent reports, I won’t necessarily hear all of the minor details to guide my decisions that mutual fund managers and professional traders know. These professional traders would definitely have an unfair advantage compared to the average retail investor like me. Please do not change the current reporting requirements.

Paul Neuhaus None - Individual Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Neuhaus I do not believe that reducing the reporting frequency will be good for investors. Publicly held companies should continue to report quarterly so that we can follow and compare their results and make better and more timely investing decisions. Trying to prevent management from focusing on "short-term" metrics instead of long-term performance for pay purposes is something that we as shareholders will need to continue to push for at our annual shareholder's meetings. Allowing less frequent reporting will only allow unscrupulous managers to have more time to manipulate and hide bad performance and investments, making it more difficult to flesh things out, more volatile share pricing swings, and resulting in the continued widening of the gap between the ultra wealthy and average investors like me. Ignorance is not bliss.

Paul none — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul I am not in support of allowing companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two.

Paul Riley retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Riley I support the transparency.

Paul Rivkin — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Rivkin While our government leaders claim they are providing increasing visibility into politics and governance, we see that the opposite is true as evidenced by the huge influx of dark money into our elections and lobbying, as well as the daily reporting of influence peddling and other corruption by our leaders and wealthy business people. We need to reverse this trend, not increase it. As owners of a company, stockholders have not just an interest but a right to have visibility into the decision and activities of their companies. Reducing the frequency of public-company reporting is a step towards diminishing owner's information and impairing their ability to make informed investment decisions.

Paul Thiffault — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paul Thiffault I agree with the Chief rule breaker. More info is better. Big business is just trying to cut some costs to line their pockets. These are the wrong cuts.

---

paul whiteman n/a — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: paul whiteman bad idea I want to know numbers soon as possible and not get an instant hair cut of my investments

---

Paula Lettau-Hull...working stiff Customer service associate — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Paula Lettau-Hull...working stiff Public company = public books, financials. Don't want the outside to know what you are up to, then go inside, forego the advantages of being a "public" company.

Pauline Amar Freedman — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pauline Amar Freedman It's a mistake to reduce annual reporting for public companies- we need transparency and regular accountability

---

Pedro da Silva Sampaio — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pedro da Silva Sampaio For increased transparency, I plead for four yearly reporting as it is today.

Peter Adam — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter Adam As an investor it is important companies keep me informed, especially with regard to their financials. Less is not better. Kindly continue no less than quarterly reporting. Thank you.

Peter Dell'Orto — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter Dell'Orto I strongly oppose the changes to the reporting rules. Quarterly reporting is the only way for me to get regular, accurate insights to the business that I invest in. Reducing the frequency of reports only rewards those with inside access and harms retail investors. Instead of making judgments based on the last quarter, I will have to make judgments based on increasingly outdated information from the previous report. This is harmful at worse and unhelpful at best.

Peter Gebauer The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter Gebauer to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake! Counterproductive. It reduces transparency and need to be REJECTED.

Peter Kispal — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter Kispal Dear SEC, I am writing as an individual investor and a member of The Motley Fool Community to express my strong opposition to the proposal that would allow public companies to reduce their financial reporting frequency from quarterly to semiannually. At its core, investing is not merely trading tickers; it is business ownership. When individual investors buy shares, we become part-owners of that enterprise. As owners, we require regular, transparent, and timely communication to properly assess the health, strategy, and execution of our investments. Reducing official reporting requirements directly weakens the vital connection between public companies and their shareholders. While proponents of this change argue that semiannual reporting reduces administrative costs, this argument carries little weight in an era driven by advanced digital workflows and AI-driven disclosure tools. Furthermore, the argument that quarterly reporting fosters "short-termism" is fundamentally flawed. Short-term thinking is a behavioral reaction to data, not a flaw of the data itself. Reducing the frequency of information will not miraculously make impatient traders patient; it will simply leave the entire market less informed. In practice, a company's operations do not pause. Products are launched, macroeconomic headwinds are navigated, and customer dynamics shift every single day. Cutting official updates by half does not eliminate market uncertainty—it amplifies it. By stretching the silence between reports to six months, the market is far more likely to experience massive information asymmetries, larger earnings surprises, and heightened stock volatility, which ultimately harms the individual investor. Twenty-six years ago, the SEC championed individual investors by passing Regulation Fair Disclosure (Reg FD), ensuring a level playing field for all market participants. This new proposal feels like a step backward from that legacy of transparency. More information creates better-informed owners and healthier markets. I urge the Commission to preserve the current quarterly reporting framework and maintain the transparent standards that make the U.S. capital markets the gold standard of the world. Thank you for your time and for considering the perspective of individual retail investors. Sincerely, Peter Kispal

---

Peter M Walilko — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter M Walilko NO. Just NO. Less reporting is less intelligence. And if there’s anything we need now, it’s intelligence.

Peter Radford — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter Radford I am opposed to a change from quarterly to semiannual reporting.

Peter S Boone Retired international economist — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter S Boone I am against the proposed amendment limit Financial reporting to only twice a year. The limited financial reporting would make investing more difficult and less transparent and efficient. This would give unfair advantages to insiders and cheaters.

Peter S. Rush — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter S. Rush It is one of the most important if not THE most important pieces of information,the individual investor has at his or her disposal . Please allow it to remain at the quarterly basis . THANK YOU

Peter V MacDonald — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Peter V MacDonald I am supportive of the move to biannual reporting. This allows companies to progress longer term strategies instead of managing to quarterly investor reports.

Phil M — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Phil M Affiliation: Jun. 24, 2026 Rule S7-2026-15 is unethical and would allow public companies to stop filing quarterly financial reports and instead report just twice a year. It would be hard to design a more perfectly shameless gift to corporate America if you tried – and the person who designed it tried very hard.

This rule was championed by SEC Chairman Paul Atkins who has no business proposing this. And he made it a priority and placed it on the commission's fast-track rulemaking agenda as part of his goal to "make IPOs great again." It is also a direct response to President Trump's personal recommendation in September 2025 that the SEC revise reporting rules so that public companies would not be required to report quarterly. That is right. This rule traces its origin to a Truth Social post. Let that set the scene. Who is paying him to fast track? Is bribery and corruption at play?

If adopted, this would represent the biggest rollback of investor disclosure requirements in more than 50 years. Fifty years of hard-won transparency – the kind that protects retirees, pension funds, and working people with 401(k)s – dismantled so that executives can operate in the dark for six-month stretches without accountability.

The compliance cost argument underpinning this proposal is obsolete. Period. The heavy lifting – auditing, internal controls, financial statement preparation – happens on a rolling basis regardless of reporting frequency. Reducing filings from four to two per year does not reduce that burden. This is not deregulation. It is a con. The "burden" being relieved here is the burden of crime being seen.

Chairman Atkins frames this as giving companies and investors "flexibility." Again who is paying him to put this forward. Follow the money. But the proposed amendments reflect the SEC's view that the current one-size-fits-all approach may not serve all companies and their investor bases best. That is a very polite way of saying that some companies would prefer their investors know less so they can steal more. Flexibility for corporations means opacity for everyone else.

What this rule actually does is hand corporate bad actors a longer runway – six months instead of three – to hide losses, obscure fraud, inflate valuations, and escape accountability before whistleblowers or analysts can catch up. Enron would have loved this rule. Dark money does.

Trump framed semiannual reporting as a way to reduce compliance burdens, writing on Truth Social: "This will save money, and allow managers to focus on properly running their companies." Running their companies. In the dark. Without telling you a thing for half a year. That is the vision here. Corruption.

Reject this proposal entirely and stand on the right side of investor protection – not on the side of the corruption and bribery, and not on the side of a Truth Social lie.

I'm sick and tired of the Trump con game.
Do what's right.

-- Phil

Philip Cassarino — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Philip Cassarino Please keep Quarterly Reporting. In this day of rapidly changing times Quarterly Reporting will keep me (everyone) up to date. Thank you.

Philip DeLuca Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Philip DeLuca Reducing publicly traded companies reporting requirements from quarterly to semiannual would be a mistake. It would create uncertainty and uncertainty diminishes the value of my ownership. Please leave reporting requirements as they are.

Phillip Nelson None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Phillip Nelson I am not in favor of allowing companies to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Less frequent information is not helpful to the company's investors. I am also concerned that it could lead to more volatility in the market.

Prashanth Aditya Susarla — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Prashanth Aditya Susarla I would like to respectfully disagree with the proposal to reduce the frequecy of annual reporting to twice a year. We live in uncertain times, with AI leading to massive upheavals and changes in strategic outlook and tactical execution on a daily basis. In such an enviroment, if anything, it is more important for investors to be kept in-the-know even more frequently! As employees, we are expected to provide regular, daily updates. Mature companies have several systems and processes in place to summarize these daily updates into coheret, meaningful monthly or quarterly updates for public investors. Therefore, I see no reason to relax public disclosure and reporting frequencies.

Prateek The motley fool community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Prateek More transparency!

Pushpak Shah — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Pushpak Shah At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

R blanchfeld Motley fool community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: R blanchfeld Reducing the number of reports is entirely damaging. America is so powerful, it should be acting to maintain or improve transparency and communication from publicly trading companies, not reverse and reduce it. As an investor, I am much less inclined to put money into a business which only reports twice a year.

R.J. Cunningham Private Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: R.J. Cunningham Less information is not in the interest of a private investor

---

Ralf Leeb — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ralf Leeb Small investors rely on regular reporting. Switching to a 6 month interval gives large players an edge on top of already unfair advantages. And allowing problems or successes to build up for twice as long won't stabilize the market, it'll do the opposite.

Ralph Pokorny — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ralph Pokorny I am in favor of maintaining the requirements for Public Companies to produce financials quarterly, as opposed to providing semi-annual reports. Unfortunately, many government agencies and NGOs don't appear to provide this regular reporting, and we have seen the results, especially in turbulent times. It is the responsibility of the company officers to be accountable to the shareholders, and demonstrate their ability to run their companies profitably and report the condition of the markets they serve, and keep their investors that have funded the company from inception to current, well informed of the financials and function of those companies.

Ralph V Melbourne Jr Investor Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ralph V Melbourne Jr I DO NOT support lessening the public reporting requirement to semiannual from quarterly. Transparent public vetted information is the cornerstone of an individual private investor. Shrinking the available public information adds to the suspicion that investment markets are manipulated by insider cabals.

---

randy nasuti retail investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: randy nasuti I want all the information that i can get on the companies i invest in. i appreciate quarterly reports

---

Rashmikant Vyas Motley fool community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rashmikant Vyas Reporting twice an year willmean less information for investors The regular qiarterly updates are vital to investors as that is thd m ain source of official info about the wellbeing of a company. Six monthly reporting will lead to greater volatility as well. The rules should not be changed

---

Raven — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Raven Dear SEC, Let’s all start off on the right foot. Hello from an insignificant asshole. You are a part of this “government” are you not? In turn then (assuming you have a few brain cells to rub together) you would know that the state of the “government” is shall we dare say corrupt and; disgraced to say the least? Perhaps you lot have never heard of the statement “if you give them an inch, they will take a mile”? Now let me explain that for you so we are all reading from the same book on the same page. What “if you give them an inch, they will take a mile” means is that if you give someone the smallest amount of room to do bad shit, they will do more bad shit KNOWING they can get away with it. In shorter words, if you let something happen once it will more than likely happen again but at a more disastrous scale. Well, as you can imagine that’s exactly what’s going to end up happening here. You give companies the option to report 2 times per year versus quarterly and soon they’ll start licking their lips and pushing for once a year or perhaps not at all. Which let’s be real, humans are greedy but do you know who’s even more greedy than your average man? Companies. I get it though, it’s paperwork and computer spreadsheets. Well guess what, that’s your problem. You are a part of the “government”. Do what the “government” does best and pull money out of thin air to fund however many terabytes or warehouses of storage you need. You asshats have money for a fucking war no one wants. You can find the money for some fucking storage or more employees to sit in front of screens and organize your data. I know it’s hard to pull your head out of your ass and listen to someone other than the Orange toddler. We ALL want life to be easier. We ALL want less paperwork. We ALL should be able to go outside and touch grass but unfortunately, this is the reality we as a society have built. STOP TRYING TO GIVE COMPANIES WAYS TO FUCK THE AVERAGE PERSON OVER! STOP TRYING TO GIVE INCHES TO PEOPLE WHO WILL DO NOTHING BUT TAKE AND TAKE NOT CARING WHO THEY FUCK OVER! If companies report 2 times a year rather than the 4+ times they do now that’s literally a loss of data. That’s data that can be erased. That’s data that can be altered. That’s literally a loss of knowledge especially for investors. So I say this as a young, angry, bitter American, piss off with your “semiannual reporting option”. Cause while it might be an “optional” thing, companies are gonna jump on that bandwagon faster than files to fresh feces. -An Angry American

---

Ray Robertson Retired Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ray Robertson Please don't change the reporting frequency.

Raymond Blum — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Raymond Blum I strongly oppose this proposed change. As an investor I expect more information rather than less, and convergence on real time awareness.

Raymond E. Brown — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Raymond E. Brown Please do not change the reporting period from quarterly to bi annual. This will only serve big corporations and companies, and will further the distrust that most Americans feel currently. Currently, it’s not broke so why change it?

Rayshad west — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rayshad west More reporting not less

---

Reagan O'Malley None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Reagan O'Malley To whom it may concern, I am just a regular investor, and I am the type of person who will be negatively impacted by this rule change. Changing to a semiannual reporting method will erode the already fragile (and nearly non-existent) public trust in the US government. The people are now awake to the fact that the wealthy class, which includes many politicians, are pulling all the strings to further line their pockets with money taken from the people who work the hardest to put food on the table and clothes on their children's backs. They know we have caught on and from those of us standing at the back of the wealth line, it is very apparent that the wealthy elites are making a last ditch effort to scoop up as much money as they can before it all comes crumbling down. They believe they can buy their way out of the consequences. And maybe they will, but they will never get back the trust from the people. Our trust is the foundation that kept them at the top, though. Keep companies honest, do not reduce their reporting requirements to satisfy people who seek to hide information from the working class people of this country. Do not let DT and his cronies pressure you into being another one of his puppets. Doing so will make you look like yet another person rolling over for a cruel, impotent swamp dweller. Never forget the people who's money and labor are what give the upper class the wealth and power to live their lives. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Rebecca A. Palmer — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rebecca A. Palmer As a small personal investor, I depend on quarterly reports to assess the strength or weakness of my investment. This is far too important to let slide to semi-annual reporting. Do you really think I should trust these people to protect my best interest as an investor? No way. The Bernie Madoff's of this world are out in full force and if anything we need additional oversight, not less. Thank you for your time. R.A. Palmer

---

Rebecca Arneson — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rebecca Arneson I believe that enacting this proposal to move to less frequent reporting would be a mistake as it would reduce information investors need to make quality decisions and reduce transparency.

Rebecca Gaskin — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rebecca Gaskin Facebook

Rebecca Johnson — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rebecca Johnson With the way our government is disregarding the constitution and the law, we need as much visibility as possible. Decreasing company reports keeps us in the dark. Most of us do not see the day by day, month by month activity and we depend on our advisors who are watching, but they need the numbers like we need our watchdogs. We small investors sometimes hear only tidbits or scandal when it makes the news. Keeping investors and citizens aware of important issues brings good information when others are trying to distract our attention while they are busy with their own agenda.

Regina Leserra — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Regina Leserra Investors have, quite literally, a vested interest in being informed regularly about a businesses performance. Attempting to lessen the frequency of reporting in an attempt to increase patience or decrease rash decisions is effectively un-American. That is an over-reach of control and manipulation of a free society that has every right to be “rash”. The argument that it saves expenses of generating the reports by doing them less frequently is hardly justified. Reporting your earnings is the cost of running a business. And, well run businesses with accounting departments can generate these reports in minutes so the savings can only be marginal at best.

Reina Ellis — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Reina Ellis I am a small individual investor. I research the companies. I choose for my portfolio and depend on quarterly filings to make informed decisions. Less information will create less transparency, less trust, and ultimately less informed decisions. Please keep quarterly filings for all of us individual investors who deserve transparent information. Respectfully, Reina Ellis

---

RENEE KALISH Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: RENEE KALISH It is critical to have this information on a frequent basis. Transparency is of the utmost importance -- the more the better.

Renzo Cecchetto Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Renzo Cecchetto Maintain obligation for companies to provide reports to shareholders quarterly. Information to Shareholders is important for informed ownership !

Rex Cox Federal Civil Service, retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rex Cox To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I oppose any proposal to reduce public company reporting from quarterly to semi-annual filings. Quarterly reports provide investors with timely information about a company's financial condition and performance. Moving to semi-annual reporting would reduce transparency and leave investors with less information for longer periods of time. Regular reporting helps maintain confidence in the markets and allows individual investors to make informed decisions. While reducing reporting requirements may lower costs for some companies, I believe investor protection and market transparency should remain the higher priority. Please retain the current quarterly reporting requirements. Thank you for considering my comments. Respectfully, Rex Cox

---

Rex Wilson Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rex Wilson Investors and the public need more information not less.

Rhianna Williams — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rhianna Williams I oppose S7-2026-15 I am pro transparency. A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. That's a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Keep quarterly reports for businesses.

Richard — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard As an investor in a business I believe I deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Less information will create less informed owners. I believe less transparency will increase uncertainty and with that uncertainty a potential of even more volatility in the market.

Richard Deason The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Deason Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Richard Durante Sr Retired Business Consultant — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Durante Sr I depend on my investments to provide my income in retirement, it is important for me and the financial consultants that i depend on to have as much information about the companies I an invested in to have this information in a timely matter. To allow companies to only report twice a year puts the investor at a disadvantage. The economy moves way to quickly for this to work to the investors advantage and I think will hurt the individual investor like myself. Leave quarterly reporting inlace.

Richard F Spinner Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard F Spinner This information is needed at the current quarterly interval in order to make relevant decisions. Lengthening the time period will slow corporations and companies reporting, and allow them to hide information from the investing public. Please contact me for a detailed explanation of why this proposed semi annual reporting is a not a good idea, and why retaining the current quarterly requirement is.

Richard Gwyn Individual investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Gwyn For the 50 years I have been investing, I have relied on the quarterly reports published by publicly held companies to determine my investment decisions. This quarterly regularity is absolutely essential for individual investors to make clear-eyed, fact-based decisions on how to allocate their limited funds to their best advantage. I consider any argument to the contrary, especially that quarterly reporting is an economic burden on the company to be absolute balderdash. If American companies wish to maintain their access to capital markets provided by the investment community, they must be willing to demonstrate on a regular basis the truth of their operations so that the investment community can maintain trust in them. To roll back the reporting requirement to being semi-annual will only provide a larger window to engage in corporate misbehavior and malfeasance. This will result in a loss of trust in the American capital and investment system.

Richard Healy — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Healy Reducing reports will save limited time and money for the corporations I own especially given AI and other automation. It will however, greatly reduce my insight into those companies plans strategies and results.

Richard Hogan — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Hogan More transparency is needed not less. Maintain Quarterly Reporting.

Richard L Patton none — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard L Patton Reporting 4 times per year does not seem like an imposition. Less reporting will only leave insiders with information that could be very valuable to individual stock holders.

Richard Negvesky — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Negvesky This proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to two just makes everyone less informed. Don't do it! It impedes our ability to invest wisely (well-informed), and if I understand it correctly, allows companies at least 6 months to hide mismanagement or other problems. How is this a good thing?

Richard Quest — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Quest Keep the quarterly reporting requirements.

Richard Spalholz — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Spalholz For investors like me, who actively self manage their stock portfolios, I favor the current quarterly system of financial reporting and SEC disclosure requirements, not less.

Richard Thackston — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Richard Thackston Reducing the number of public-company reports from four to two is a bad idea. The more often we are allowed updates, the better our understanding of what is going on with the companies involved. How often does Congress and the government get updates on the companies that they own? Comments attached

---

Robert B Womer — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert B Womer Less reporting or information is simply a bad idea. When the push is for AI to help with efficiencies this makes no sense. There should be more reporting and transparency of a company and less cost on that company to report their status. Shareholders and the SEC should have access to more information, not less, to be well informed for educated decision making .Would not think the SEC would be supportive of this proposal.

Robert Barlow Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Barlow Investors and the market need more not less transparency. Any rule that reduces transparency is a bad rule, and an incredible means of undermining trust in the market.

Robert Blank — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Blank I am staunchly opposed to reducing the frequency of public company financial reporting. As a retail investor, I am disadvantaged to those who possess industry knowledge and connections. Reports such as 10Q's are essential information for making investment decisions. Reducing reporting requirements will further disadvantage retail investors. This action would reinforce the already widespread view that financial markets are rigged to benefit a small, elite group. Thank you for your consideration.

Robert C. Johnson — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert C. Johnson Maintaining transparency, rather than reducing it, is in the best interest of shareholders. It allows for timely, informed decision making based in data rather than speculative market forces.

Robert Dana — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Dana As an investor, I object to the proposal to reduce the required frequency of annual reports from quarterly to semi-annually. Investors like me depend on quarterly reporting to make timely, informed decisions. Investors are owners. Reducing the frequency of reporting will deprive investor/owners of information, transparency, and, ultimately, accountability from those who manage the companies we own. Please do not reduce the required reporting frequency from quarterly to semi-annually.

Robert Hall — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Hall Please don't change reporting requirements from quarterly to twice a year. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Robert Lees — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Lees Qtr reporting is necessary

---

Robert Martin / Motley Fool Retired Engineer/Project Manager — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Martin / Motley Fool I oppose the proposal to reduce the frequency of required reports from public companies from four to two. I am an investor. I depend on regular, quarterly reporting from the companies I have invested in and from those I am considering for investment to determine their performance. Reducing reporting from quarterly to semi-annual will increase uncertainty in the market.

Robert McLellan — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert McLellan Please do not promote any proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Thanks

---

Robert Parks None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Parks Discard this proposal. Quarterly reporting should be maintained.

Robert Ream — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Ream Why change it? More info is better than less. This is not a big request to leave it alone.

Robert Sheldon — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert Sheldon Do not pass legislation that will reduce the frequency of businesses reporting information to its share holders. Such deregulation would not be good for your constituents.

---

robert stringer — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: robert stringer I would like to keep the quarterly reports. Changing that would promote corruption. And could cause a lot of financial hardship for retail investors. I do not support annual reports. And I do not support any changes. They were put in place for a reason.

Robert White — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robert White Americans are losing confidence in their institutions, which is a dangerous condition for our country's future. Providing less frequent reporting creates an aura of secrecy that exasperates the public's concern that our Institutions no longer work for the public interest..

Robin Baker Licensed marriage and family therapist — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robin Baker More transparency seems like a good thing in this age of rapid decision making. How can investors make good decisions with scanty information?

Robin Bonner — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Robin Bonner Please keep quarterly reporting. We need to the ability to stay fully and accurately informed in order to make timely decisions about our investments. Historically, less transparency has not improved returns.

Rodney Coldren — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rodney Coldren I am strongly opposed to decreasing the number of annual reports. This concept makes no sense!

Rodney Slack — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rodney Slack I do not support reducing public company reporting from 4 times per year to 2 times per year. As an individual investor the reporting is critical to my investment decisions. Reducing the frequency makes timely decisions more difficult.

Rodolfo Lopez — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rodolfo Lopez As an investor, I do not agree with the proposal to reduce the financial reporting requirements to a semiannual frequency. A lot of things can happen in those 6 months where we (outsiders) would be blind to the way management is running their companies and the financial performance associated with their decisions. I welcome ongoing transparency, and at a minimum, the continuation of quarterly reporting.

Roger Gold — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Roger Gold I am writing to oppose the proposal that would allow public companies to reduce required reporting from quarterly to semiannual reports. I have been investing in publicly traded companies for approximately 35 years, and I rely heavily on quarterly reports to make informed investment decisions. These reports provide essential information about a company's financial performance, strategy, and changing business conditions. As an investor, I believe regular reporting is one of the most important benefits of public ownership. Reducing the number of required reports would not reduce uncertainty; it would increase it. Companies continue to operate, succeed, and encounter challenges every day. Receiving official information only twice a year would leave investors less informed and more dependent on speculation, rumors, and incomplete information. Less transparency is also likely to increase market volatility. When information is delayed, surprises become larger and market reactions become more severe. Quarterly reporting allows investors to evaluate changes gradually and make decisions based on timely information. Public companies benefit from access to public capital, and regular communication with shareholders is an important responsibility that comes with that privilege. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to reject this proposal and maintain the current quarterly reporting requirements. Thank you for considering my comments.

Roland Dehousse European Economic and Social Committee — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Roland Dehousse We need at least as many reports as before. The move that is envisaged will offer much less protection to the individual stock analyst and investor.

Ron Butterman — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ron Butterman I strongly object against the proposed Semiannual Reporting rule. Like many people my financial future relies heavily on making the right investment choices. The quarterly reports are one of the best sources for information and probably the only truly reliable ones. Taking away half of that information should not even be considered. In today's data-driven world, timely information is critical and we should actually look at increasing the reporting. Every properly managed company has monthly reporting anyway. Every Private Equity firm requires monthly reporting. The argument that this proposal saves money is laughable: the cost of putting together the public report is negligible and every shareholder will gladly pay that price in order to get better and more timely information.

Ron Douglas — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ron Douglas I do not like this nor believe that it will benefit owners and I will be closing positions in companies that are changing and moving forward will not invest in any companies that report bi-annually. We need transparency, which in a good business can only benefit the business and investors. Thx

Ron Lieberman — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ron Lieberman I would like to continue receiving quarterly reports

---

Ron Segerstrom Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ron Segerstrom Quarterly reporting requirements must remain in place and not be reduced to a semi-annual requirement for a vibrant, transparent, investment system.

Ronald Garza No professional affiliation — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ronald Garza Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Ronald Itnyre — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ronald Itnyre I support keeping the quarterly reports. I own stock through various IRA and 403B accounts. I want the managers to have the most up to date information about the companies stock they are purchasing on my behalf.

Ronald Lemmo — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ronald Lemmo A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. This is a mistake! Businesses that I invest my hard-earned money in should be reporting frequently to earn my trust in my investment. Reporting just twice a year does not provide sufficient timely business environment notification. The quarterly reporting in place today provides a reasonable notice. Quarterly reporting provides investors with timely business environment status and provides the company with a vehicle for correcting erroneous reports.

Ronald S. Glick, MD — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ronald S. Glick, MD I agree with the Motley Fool community that less information does not create a better-informed investor and request that the proposal to decrease reporting frequency from quarterly to semi-annually not be implemented.

Rosemary Dibben Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Rosemary Dibben Please keep quarterly reporting to promote honesty and to incentivize transparency. The Enron fiasco has already demonstrated why the oversight of quarterly reporting is valuable for investors. Thank you, Rosemary Dibben, Investor Durham, CA 95938

Ruoxuan Zhu — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ruoxuan Zhu I believe it is the downsides of semiannual reporting such as increased volatility, insider trading risks, and fraud risks far outweighs any benefits.

Russell Benghiat President, Benghiat Marketing and Communications, Inc. — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Russell Benghiat Terrible idea to allow public companies to reduce the number of reports from from times a year to just two time. As a company owner for forty years, I can assure you that less information does not create better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases uncertainty. As a stockholder, I own a piece of several businesses. I deserve timely and accurate financial information. Thank you.

Russell McChesney — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Russell McChesney semiannual reporting is a bad idea.

Ruth J. RN Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ruth J. Investors come in all sorts of financial situations. We need transparency to avoid having our retirements wiped out by ineffective corporate leadership or outright thievery. Tax dollars have bailed out too many corporations while public funding of assistance to people in need is shrinking. Quarterly reports keep corporations on their toes and the public informed. Quarterly reporting is a necessity in this ever-changing world and should be budgeted in any sane and upstanding corporation.

Ruth Lister — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ruth Lister I think trying semiannual reporting is ok. It saves company time and money. It helps to combat the growing move to private markets which have much less transparency

---

Ryan McFarlane TheMotleyFool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ryan McFarlane We are investors and we are owners of what we invest in. We need more data, not less. It just allows for more corruption to seep its way in, reducing the amount of reports. It didn't work in Britain when they attempted this, and it wont work here.

S. Dowell — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: S. Dowell Please maintain current standards for quarterly reporting. Limiting corporate accountability is in no one's best interests. Ultimately less reporting means less transparency. Also our current system works. Why change it? Thank you in advance for your time and consideration.

Sajeev Jesudsas Senior Accredited Director, Singapore Institute of Directors — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sajeev Jesudsas I am not in support of SEC reducing the number of public companies reports from four times a year to two times a year. As a business professional I needed reports on a weekly basis to effectively manage my business. Now, as an investor and shareholder I need regular transparency into my holdings and need reports at least four times a year to effectively manage my equity investments. This I believe will also reduce volatility. I hope, in earnest, that SEC maintains the current requirements of reporting four times a year. Thank you.

Sally Taylor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sally Taylor I reject the need to reduce from four to two times monthly reporting. The very idea is an assault on ongoing efforts to to monitor and transparently assure honest reporting accurately reflects goings on!

Salty — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Salty Results should be quarterly to create full disclosure.

Samantha Mykins — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Samantha Mykins Affiliation: Jun. 24, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Writing these comments to keep SO many protections, once taken for granted, is beginning to feel like screaming into a void. Nevertheless, my conscience and civic duty demand that I persist. Quarterly reporting is needed to keep our markets healthy, now more than ever. Naked corruption has been running rough shod over US markets since January of 2025. Cutting reporting intervals from quarterly to biannually is a cynical tribute to the markets worst actors. We all know this proposed regulatory loosening is a gift to the crony capitalist ghouls who want to see a true free market buckle under a second, even shittier Guilded Age. Do you serve the American public? Or do you serve the 21st century Robber Barons?

If you have integrity, if you have a soul or any remaining shred of humanity you know that preserving quarterly reporting is the right choice.

Samantha Mykins — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Samantha Mykins Affiliation: Jun. 24, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Writing these comments to keep SO many protections, once taken for granted, is beginning to feel like screaming into a void. Nevertheless, my conscience and civic duty demand that I persist. Quarterly reporting is needed to keep our markets healthy, now more than ever. Naked corruption has been running rough shod over US markets since January of 2025. Cutting reporting intervals from quarterly to biannually is a cynical tribute to the markets worst actors. We all know this proposed regulatory loosening is a gift to the crony capitalist ghouls who want to see a true free market buckle under a second, even shittier Guilded Age. Do you serve the American public? Or do you serve the 21st century Robber Barons?

If you have integrity, if you have a soul or any remaining shred of humanity you know that preserving quarterly reporting is the right choice.

Sander Nielsen — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sander Nielsen Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. So please keep quarterly reports.

Sandra Di Palma Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sandra Di Palma Public companies are accountable to report more often than twice per year. They should maintain the quarterly reporting for transparency purposes.

Sandra Horwitz — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sandra Horwitz Please do not change the corporate reporting schedule. It is not fair to investors. Current information is needed to make wise investment decisions.

Santosh Katakol The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Santosh Katakol We need to keep the existing regulatory policy of quarterly reporting of public companies.

Scott Albin Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Scott Albin Public company reports should remain at four times a year, and not be changed to just two times. This enables greater transparency for investors.

Scott Downey Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Scott Downey Listen, just do not do this, you will destroy credibility in markets, people wont be as inclined to invest. Less information is a bad idea. I think you really know that. Investors look forward to the quarterly reports it sheds more light, semiannual is more darkness.

Scott H Edwards, individual — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Scott H Edwards, individual The idea of less accountability info in the midst of a society that is lied to or kept in the dark on so many important issues is not a wise decision for those who are trying to improve it. The transparency that the Trump administration has brought is a breath of fresh air and needs to extend to all aspects of the business of the Nation.

Scott Hines — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Scott Hines As a shareholder of stock in several dozen public companies, I am very much against the move towards semiannual reporting. On the surface it may sound like a good idea that would make companies take more of a long-term approach to their strategy and thought process since they only have to answer to shareholders every 6 months instead of every 3. But I am not convinced that this shift in thought process would actually happen with the proposed action. I mean, why would it? Do you really think that a CEO of a large company who is making decisions quarter to quarter is suddenly going to completely change their strategy because of that one change? Maybe one or two would, but on the whole I doubt this would be the reason why. What it will do in practice is provide LESS transparency for the shareholders, who are part-owners of the company. This will make it harder to make decisions on stocks to hold, buy, or sell. This will not change much at the company level but very much make it difficult for investors in these companies to buy and sell stock. Why this is even a proposal is beyond me. Do not vote to change the reporting frequency.

Scott Holzer The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Scott Holzer Please do not reduce the public reporting requirements from Quarterly to semi-annually. Having to wait six months for information on company performance is too long to wait

---

Sean Fallon — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sean Fallon I am in individual investor, retired, actively investing in the stock market. As an equity owner in many companies, it is vitally important that I stay informed of managements progress, issues they face and plans for the future. Reducing the amount of information available to investors to make informed buy and sell decisions is detrimental to US stock markets and to investors in companies listed on our exchanges. I am 100% opposed to the proposed regulations to reduce financial reporting requirements by 50%. In an age of AI efficiencies, the argument of cost saving is debatable at best. Transparency is key to building trust and maintaining our global position for equity markets. I ask you to not move forward with this proposed change.

Sean Garren — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Sean Garren Affiliation: Jun. 24, 2026 I don't trust you enough to give my name. Just know I've been watching it all unfold, and I'm not stupid.

Public companies already operate with massive information asymmetry, and a six-month reporting gap would turn that imbalance into a structural advantage for insiders. Executives, lawyers, institutional investors, and GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS would continue receiving monthly internal financials, while retail investors, employees, and pension holders are left blind for half a year. All you're doing is formalizing a two-tier market where those closest to power get the truth and everyone else gets whatever story management chooses to tell twice a year.

Quarterly reporting is already outdated in a world where supply chains, capital flows, and market conditions shift in real time. Companies close their books monthly because they need that data to run the business; pretending they can only disclose twice a year is fiction. Longer blackout periods create more room for manipulation, fraud, and catastrophic surprises — the exact failures the SEC was created to prevent. Monthly reporting doesn't add new work; it simply requires companies to share the information they already produce with the public whose money they rely on.

If a company wants secrecy, it can stay private. But the privilege of accessing public capital comes with the responsibility of public transparency. Monthly reporting strengthens market stability, reduces volatility, and protects workers and retirees whose savings depend on timely information. In a modern financial system, the real solution isn't less disclosure; it's monthly disclosure, because transparency is the price of being a public company.

Sean Thompson — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sean Thompson As an investor and retiree, I disagree with the effort to reduce the number of times a public company reports to shareholders. This is the age of information and less information is not helpful to those who own the company. Shareholders need to be able to make informed decisions about where their money is invested and need to do so more than twice each year.

Sergio — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sergio I respectfully oppose the SEC's proposed Semiannual Reporting Rule. Quarterly reporting plays a vital role in maintaining transparency, accountability, and investor confidence. Reducing the reporting frequency to twice per year would leave investors with less timely information about a company's financial condition, performance, and risks. Longer gaps between required disclosures could increase uncertainty and make it more difficult for investors—especially retail investors—to make informed decisions. While reducing compliance burdens is a worthwhile goal, it should not come at the expense of transparency. Regular reporting helps ensure that all market participants have access to consistent and comparable information, supporting fair and efficient markets. The current quarterly reporting framework has served investors and the capital markets well for decades. Rather than reducing disclosure frequency, the SEC should consider targeted reforms that streamline reporting requirements while preserving the timely flow of information that investors depend on. For these reasons, I urge the SEC to reject the proposed Semiannual Reporting Rule and maintain quarterly reporting requirements.

Seth Parsons Professor, George Mason University — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Seth Parsons Investors are owners. They need information.

Information is power. Reducing reporting reduces information and therefore repeals power from investors. This policy benefits corporations and hurts investors.

Shane Tierling Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shane Tierling It is important to maintain the current frequency of earnings and profits reporting to allow the general public to understand disconcerting trends in the performance of the companies to that we have invested in. This is particularly important to retirees, who are relying on investments to provide the income supporting our retirements.

Shannon Dunn The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shannon Dunn These changes are an increased risk to retail investors seeking information to make secure choices. A reduction in reporting would make retail investors consider a choice to purchase stocks less safe than more traditional investments.

Shantha Smith — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shantha Smith Business reporting 4 times a year is a must

---

Shari Darke — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shari Darke Reducing reporting to twice a year places investors at a higher risk. We deserve more transparency from the companies we are investing in. For many of us, these investments fund our children's university education and our retirement. Investors need and indeed deserve quarterly reports.

Shari Joy Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shari Joy To those who are supposed to represent me, WHY would I want to only receive information regarding the companies I invest in only twice a year!?! I'm sorry but that it ludicrous. That is akin to owning a business and managers only reporting to me twice a year on how my business is doing. If the reasoning for this is supposedly costs, other ways to cut back should be found. Eliminating half of the notifications to those who put their hard earned money into investments is ripping off those who help these companies and the stock market keep going. Plain and simple…ITS NOT RIGHT. Thank you for your time.

Sharon Hyman Motley Fool community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sharon Hyman Business is conducted on a daily basis. As an owner/investor, I believe quarterly updates on data are necessary to determine the ebb & flow of that business. Time is not static; business is not either. An on-going pulse check is managerial stewardship Do not tamper with a quarterly transparent reporting system. The business has & needs its data; the business also needs informed owners/investors.

Sharon Morrison — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sharon Morrison Please keep the existing quarterly reporting requirements. Businesses and their leadership need to maintain responsibility for their actions. Quarterly reporting keeps the public and shareholders informed and holds the leadership responsible for their actions. Quarterly reporting is not too onerous for businesses. Proper bookkeeping and records should make the Quarterly reports easy to file.

Shawn Melnar — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Shawn Melnar Please do not reduce the reporting requirements . Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. Additionally , cost is not a valid argument as a majority of the reporting is already automated . Sincerely ,

---

Sherman Alcorn Retired Financial Advisor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sherman Alcorn I agree with reporting every 6 months or maybe a compromise is every 4 months. As an investor and former financial advisor at Edward Jones, I always thought every 3 months is too soon and makes companies manage earnings for the short term. I want transparency, but maybe brief quarterly comments on a company website is appropriate, with larger normal financial disclosure every 6 months. I don't invest or buy/sell based on quarterly results. Investors should be more long term focused, in my opinion.

Sherri L Caudle — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sherri L Caudle How often a company reports to its investors should be a decision between the company and its investors, not the government. I would like to continue with quarterly reporting. I am opposed to semi-annual reporting.

Sherry Fitzpatrick — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sherry Fitzpatrick Things change too quickly these days, and as such, less is not more. Reducing reporting requirements means the potential for less frequent information, which will not keep us as informed as I think we should be.

Simon Issatt — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Simon Issatt Dear Sir and/or Madam, In regard to the proposal to change to a semiannual sequence for corporate fillings, I believe that this would reduce the amount of available communication about the performance of many companies which is extremely important to many investors. We rely on this information and the especially the earnings calls to get insights into company performance and to understand the way in which the likely future of the business is going to take. Whilst this would be available to a certain extent with a semi annual reporting timeframe, the additional time gaps might allow for potentially bigger surprises to appear which would have been spotted through a quarterly timeframe. In summary I am against a change to semiannual. Yours Sincerely Simon Issatt

---

sondra vanert The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: sondra vanert twice a year removes to many safeguards for individual investors, while allowing the companies to reap on deception

---

Srikanth Sridhara — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Srikanth Sridhara Please do not reduce transparency of public companies by reducing frequency of reporting from quarterly to twice a year. As an individual investor, these reports are my life blood and I depend on them drive informed decisions. In this day of AI, creating these reports are incredible quick and cheap. You cannot change compensation driven behavior of company executives or investors by reducing transparency. This change will instead cut off the legs from hundreds of millions of investors around the globe. Less information will drive worse decisions. So with this change, not only will you not solve the original problem, you will create a really bad new one

---

Stan Bausinger None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stan Bausinger Transparency is important to me as an investor. It’s my only communication and I don’t have the inside information like Congress. Keep reporting as it is.

Stephen F Groth — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen F Groth Quarterly reporting by public companies is essential and should be maintained. It will only hurt investors to make it semiannual.

Stephen Harris — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Harris Understanding how a company is being managed is critical as an investor. Decreasing the frequency of reporting only decreases transparency, potentially leaving investors "in the dark" for greater periods. The statement in your press release that reads "the rigidity of the SEC’s rules has prevented companies and their investors from determining for themselves the interim reporting frequency that best serves their business needs and investors" is ironic. The business 'needs' are to serve their shareholders, and it does not serve shareholders to be less informed. The Securities Exchange Act of 1934 was specifically enacted to ensure investors have access to material information regarding potential or existing investments. This proposed amendment does not serve investors' interests, only those of companies that might have something to hide.

Stephen Swanson None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stephen Swanson Mandatory quarterly financial reports should be continued. Businesses are currently structured to provide this reporting. Less reporting will not improve the quality of information given to investors.

Steve N/A — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve Please keep the reporting as quarterly for all companies and do not give an option for semi annually. I can’t imagine less transparency decreasing risk to investors.

Steve C Vetter CEO, Vetter Ventures, LLC — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve C Vetter Change is accelerating, so decreasing the rate of reporting is going the wrong way. Also, it hurts individual investors in many ways, furthering the divide between the ultra-wealthy and the rest of us. Because companies need to track financials anyway, reporting on them occasionally is a small burden, especially now with AI tools to help.

Steve Hafner Stockton University coastal research center — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve Hafner Accountability to the public and shareholders through quarterly reporting is fundamental to ensuring investors understand their risk and limits the ability for corporate and personal fraud. No changes!! This matters to everyone from retirees trying to protect their lifes savings to financial investment firms and brokers working with clients looking to invest in the market. It's critical to maintain the quarterly reporting to ensure market standards, prevent instability and investors uncertainty.

Steve McGee Motley fool community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve McGee I agree that we need greater transparency, and that quarterly results/information updates should stay.

Steve Millar Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve Millar I oppose a change to current reporting from 1/4 to 1/2 yearly. It reduces transparency and leaves me less informed on the companies I invest in.

Steve Slater The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steve Slater I’d like to quickly weigh in regarding the possible changes to publicly trading companies being allowed to cut their reporting in half. This would be a huge step in the wrong direction. Access to our capital markets should not be taken lightly, companies wishing to participate should be required to report quarterly to their shareholders and the markets in general. I’m 64 and have been investing since the mid-1980’s, I have more experience as a small investor than most that are just beginning their investment lives, making it harder for any of us to understand what’s taking place at a company we’d like to invest in, or continue to hold an ownership position will certainly be an overall negative to the market, slowing young investor involvement at a time the market can’t afford to lose an generation of potential investors. With all the gambling apps and ‘prediction market’ nonsense available please don’t give the next generation of investors a reason to feel the stock market is rigged against them and seek other investment avenues. Please avoid this poor idea for less reporting. Thank you, Steve Slater

---

Steven Feadler The Motely Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven Feadler Semiannual reporting is a very bad idea. We as individual investors need all the information from companies we have an ownership interest in and those we are considering investing in. What owner of a company would wait for 6 months to see how the company was faring? Please do not approve semiannual company reporting.

Steven Fischer Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven Fischer As an investor, I'm stunned that reducing financial business reports from 4 times a year to 2 would be considered by our government. Less info is rarely a positive. I have ownership in the companies I've invested in and feel I have a right to regular financial reports. Going to twice a year reporting will allow many bad businesses more opportunities to "hide" bad data/results, hurting investors. As investors, we have a right to the transparency offered by quarterly financial reports.

Steven k Employee — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven k I oppose this rule. By making the reporting requirements every six months, it greatly increases the stock volatility and provides marginal benefit to the organization. Also it expands the time frame where fraud and insider trading can occur with no remedy. This rule should be rejected.

Steven Oriol CLU ChFC Professor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven Oriol I would like to express my support for the current quarterly reporting system in place to benefit investors and increased accountability for corporations. Reducing the number of opportunities for the investing public to have access to decision making data is against the public interest. I would also support increased accountability for private equity and other closely held ownership arrangements that are able to operate with much less public scrutiny. Thank you for considering my comments. Professor Oriol

---

Steven Sawicki — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven Sawicki I am against this new rule as it will greatly reduce transparency. Corporations need to be reporting out their behavior and data on a more regular basis and not a less regular basis. This rule is corporation centric and detrimental to the average citizen.

Stretch Martin — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Stretch Martin I retired 10 years ago, only because I started investing when I was in my 20's. I learned to read financial statements and interpret how a business was doing financially. I'm no wizard but over the years this practice served me pretty well. Now that I'm living off of my investments I feel that I need the same if not even more information on my investments to continue my current standard of living. This new decision to reduce the occurrence of financial statements is going to reduce the information that I use to make decisions that will effect my future finances. It seems to me that if the SEC and the government want people to participate in the financial markets they would try to make the flow of information as transparent as possible. Reducing the reporting periods is going to hide both the well and badly run companies. Nobody has ever made money by having less information. Please reconsider the proposed changes and leave the reporting periods as quarterly. With the advancements in AI and accounting software, the reporting should be getting faster, easier and cheaper for business to complete. Please reconsider this change and vote against fewer reporting periods per year.

Sue Maass The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sue Maass Please keep the number of public-company reports at four times a year. Timely information is important.

Sue Warner — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sue Warner No keep the reports to 4 per year!

Sun Clay Art — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sun Clay Art More public disclosures are better to keep corporations accountable. Also, take away personhood from corporations. Protect people not companies.

Sunil Shah The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sunil Shah I think that’s a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed.

---

surach mealey — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: surach mealey I want companies to keep filling quarterly

---

Sven — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Sven Reducing reporting frequency creates less transparency.

Tahira Rashid Individual investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tahira Rashid Fewer reporting means less transparency and increases uncertainty meaning more surprises for investors. This is dangerous and unnecessary.

TB Greenwood — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: TB Greenwood This reporting helps everyone do their managing job better... both businesses and government

---

TeaKay M. — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: TeaKay M. I am not in a financial position that allows me to invest, but even I know this is horrible news. Please DO NOT pass Rule S7-2026-15. I already struggle to afford basic necessities and so do working Americans. My friends have multiple jobs and can barely afford to rent a room. This would devastate the American public. Companies already complain that no one is buying their stock or products. This would make things worse. The SEC is quite frankly a monster determined to consume and kill the very people companies rely on to exist. This would ruin charities, who would it be able to appropriately distribute funds or invest in solutions. Furthermore, micro-trading would be severely affected, which is critical to enabling first-time investors the same opportunities as people with generational wealth. Not to mention, money held for individuals by financial institutions would vanish. It already isn’t fair that people don’t actually own the money they make. Please DO NOT pass Rule S7-2026-15.

Ted Knudson — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ted Knudson I'm an active retail investor. To provide a bit of context, I'm invested in 82 companies, also some funds but most of my investing equity is in individual companies. While most of those companies are based in the USA and function under SEC oversight, some {specifically, eleven of the companies} are foreign with different reporting requirements. While I may not be a typical retail investor {what would typical be, anyway?} I'm both competent and proficient. For me, I follow company reporting cycles, when significant shifts occur in their business or stock price I read the details. On their investor relations sites, on www . sec . gov {EDGAR file lookups}, and on other news and financial sources. And, yes, in The Motley Fool Community. On some of those the international companies my reported data is less frequent, as the SEC is considering with this proposal. While those international companies I own are solid and well run, I find I'm less interested in investing additional capital with them. As the CFA Institute study of the change in the UK showed, longer reporting cycles did not improve business results, the response was actually poorer performance. So my simple response. Do not change the American reporting requirements. The change doesn't solve a problem and will make America less competitive. Regards, -Ted Knudson

---

Terrance Krueger — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Terrance Krueger I really think this is a bad idea. It's important to see reports more often than less often. You would be taking away an important tool. I'm hoping you'll keep the status quo.

Terri Lee — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Terri Lee I want to keep company reportings to 4 times a year for better transparency.

Terry A Morgan The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Terry A Morgan Do NOT let companies reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. This is a mistake. Please keep it at four times a year.

Terry Clarridge — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Terry Clarridge I would , in the interest of transparency, prefer to keep reporting to 4 times per year and I do not support a reduction to twice per year.

Terry Litt none / Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Terry Litt Need all the corporate stock data and goverence data I can get to make intelligent financial and investing decisions. Sounds like shareholders are looking for another way to cheat the public and the layman so they can make bad decisions and hide them from investor for their benefit. INSIDER TRADING !!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Terry Spellman — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Terry Spellman Terry Spellman, retired, stockholder in Retirement accounts. In 6 months a company can declare bankruptcy, stockholders lose stock and the same company reissues new stock using same symbol. Stockholders out of luck. They think they still have their stock, but it is gone.

The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community More info must flow--not less

---

The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community Imagine owning a business and only getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Please do NOT change the rules to allow companies to file only 2 reports annually instead of every quarter; the more transparency, the better informed investors are!

The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community Throughout our history, our company has stepped forward when important regulatory decisions affect individual investors. It's time to dust off our bully pulpit and do it again. A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that's a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right?

The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community Do not allow regulation to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to two!

The Motley Fool Community Individual investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community I do NOT support changing reporting requirements from 4x/year to 2. Please allow the current regulation to stand.

The Motley Fool Community None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community I'm very much opposed to the proposed changes and want to continue to see quarterly reports from all the companies that I invest in.

The Motley Fool Community Educator/Disability Advocate — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community I want everyone to have the opportunity to be financially successful. A part of the financial success process is investing into productive assets. It is imperative for all of us to have the intel possible on our potential investments. This means keeping the quarterly reporting in place for all public companies. As an investor (owner) I want to see the important details of company operations and performance every quarter and Not semi-annually. Quarterly, please. Thank you.

The Motley Fool Community Investor & registered US voter — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community Vote No to semi-annual reporting! Please do not change the current quarterly annual report requirements as quarterly is an absolute necessity for proper checks and balances within any entity to catch discrepancies, dishonesty or theft asap. Thank you

---

The Motley Fool Community NA — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community Reports should be submitted four times a year instead of the new policy advocating two reports sumitted a year

---

The Motley Fool Community Telecommunications Executive - Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community A vibrant marketplace starts with consistent, reliable communications where shareholders have ready access to technical and fundamental information for making informed decisions. This means full transparency on a regular basis that coincides with the cycles that define how businesses conduct their operations and how the markets respond in turn. Allowing companies to voluntarily waive this responsibility to its shareholders is an egregious attack on that access, and as a regulatory body, I am shocked that the SEC would even remotely consider such a piece of legislation. If anything it should be championing MORE transparency rather than less.

The Motley Fool Community The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community Don't let them only report 2x a year!! I am for businesses reporting 4x per year.

The Motley Fool Community. — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: The Motley Fool Community. A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We, The Motley Fool Community, think that’s a mistake!

Thelma M Noble Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thelma M Noble Thank you.

Theresa Griese — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Theresa Griese I would disagree with Semiannual Reporting. Less information to the investor.

Theresa Morini The motley fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Theresa Morini This proposal increases uncertainty and gives companies a better chance to hide discrepancies or deception with only 2 public reports. Publicly traded companies should have transparency to the public. Leave the reports quarterly.

Thomas C Annunziato — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas C Annunziato Dear Commissioners, I am writing to you because 1. I support quarterly corporate financial reports; 2. I strongly oppose replacing quarterly corporate financial reporting with semi-annual reporting; and 3. I want Commission to retain the current quarterly reporting standard. Quarterly reporting is not only necessary for transparency, informed investing, and accountability, it lets investors identify fraud and risks early. Changing to semi-annual reporting would decrease investors faith in the market. The administrative burden on companies pales in comparison to the benefits of frequent disclosure to investors and market stability. In light of this, I urge the Commission to retain the current quarterly reporting standard.
Sincerely,
Thomas C Annunziato

Thomas Duyck — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Duyck Investors need the company's information to make proper investment decisions. 2x per year is not enough.

Thomas Greisamer, MD Retired psychiatrist, stockbroker, AF pilot, rancher, dairyman, economist — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Greisamer, MD I am against less information to the small investor. We are already at such a tremendous disadvantage by the AI directors of the 0.01 cent trades that are making millions. We already are at a disadvantage from the politicians and others who have inside information. Please don't deny it! So at least give us a modicum of courtesy and stop trying to cut us off from additional information that would help us make rational investment decisions. Thank you!

Thomas K Freiman — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas K Freiman I believe recieving quarterly financial reports from publicly-traded companies is essential. Allowing companies to opt out of this requirement and report on a 6-month basis would limit price discovery and decrease the efficiency of the markets. It creates a non-uniform reporting structure (some reporting on a quarterly basis, some on a 6-month basis) making comparisons more difficult. After investing for decades in both U.S. and International markets, I find the quarterly reporting in U.S. markets preferable. This proposed change is moving in the wrong direction.

Thomas L Earnshaw CFO — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas L Earnshaw Investors (owners) in publicly traded companies use financial data released to the public to make informed decisions. Reducing the amount of data required to be released limits visibility to make informed decisions. Difficult to understand how less transparency would be in alignment with the core components of the SEC's mission: Protect Investors; Maintain Fair, Orderly and Efficient Markets; Facilitate Capital Formation.

Thomas lansing — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas lansing Quarterly must stay. Fuck the postage. Limit the time to steal, lie and cheat. It's the least we can do.

Thomas Malley — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Malley I support quarterly reporting. Semi-annual reporting is inadequate and is not in the investing public's interest. This is common sense.

Thomas Maran share holder — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Maran I do not see how this change could benefit shareholders. Looks like it only saves money for those reporting

---

Thomas Martin The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Martin Quarterly reporting is essential for investors like me to be able to make better decisions on stock purchases. The little money that I've been able to save is all I have for retirement and I rely on these reports for my own investment research and the advice of the Mötley fool Community. Less regulation will lead to greed. Dr. M

Thomas Monicken The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Monicken I am strongly opposed to PUBLICLY HELD COMPANIES, only having to report twice a year. I think it should stay as once per quarter, or possibly be increased.

Thomas Potter Retired investing in the market, real estate and among other things. . , — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Potter This is far from being transparent as an investor in a company that you have ownership in. With the AI world today these reports should be made easier instead of harder. I would like them to at least be quarterly or more these days not less.

Thomas Rush Makepeace — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Rush Makepeace Do not reduce the number of company reports from four a year.

Thomas Schmitt The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Schmitt More transparency is needed, Never less!

Thomas Smith — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas Smith Investing is, at its core, ownership. As an individual investor, I believe regular, transparent communication from the businesses I part-own is essential. Reducing the required reporting frequency from four times a year to just two weakens the vital connection between companies and their owners. Businesses operate continuously—launching products, winning customers, and executing strategies. Halving the number of official updates to just twice a year will not solve short-termism; it will simply leave everyday owners less informed. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty, it increases it, leading to larger surprises, sharper reactions, and heightened market volatility. I strongly urge the Commission to maintain the current quarterly reporting framework.

Thomas W Burnett none — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Thomas W Burnett I am not in favor of Corporate reductions of financial reporting from 4 to 2 time per year.

Tim Cook — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tim Cook Investors require more reports than the proposed twice per year. Quarterly reporting for my investments has proven to be very useful and needed to diligintly manage my investments.

Tim D Garber Small business owner — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-26-18 From: Tim D Garber As an investor I believe quarterly reports are important to keep companies honest and investors properly informed. Reducing the number of yearly reports allows failing companies to shield that fact from investors. Furthermore, it erodes trust investors have in those same companies. I believe this is bad for retirement investments, as long term growth will be impacted.

Tim Lovell — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tim Lovell I am writing as a member of The Motley Fool Community to express my strong opposition to the proposal that would allow public companies to reduce their reporting frequency from quarterly to semiannually. Investing is fundamentally about ownership, and as owners, individual investors deserve regular and transparent communication. Reducing official updates to just twice a year weakens the connection between companies and their shareholders, increases market uncertainty, and likely leads to greater volatility when information is finally released. In an era of advanced data tools and AI, the argument that quarterly reporting is too burdensome or costly is increasingly outdated. More information, not less, creates better-informed owners and more stable markets. I urge you to maintain the existing requirement for four reports per year to preserve the transparency that is vital to investor confidence.

Tim Ogle — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tim Ogle I don't see why we should allow less visibility into the performance of companies that we (many private investors) actually invest in. We should be seeking greater transparency, not less. The company accounts and reporting will be completed on a monthly basis anyway. Quarterly insights shouldn't be something to hide from, rather something that companies should be embracing.

Timothy Shaffer The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Timothy Shaffer At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Timothy Stastny — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Timothy Stastny The proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. As an owner in a piece of a business, I deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and those of us who are the owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Not likely! Businesses already collect the required information internally on a monthly basis for senior management and boards. The use of AI, which is on the increase in businesses, will only make that data collection quicker and cheaper. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. Additional, most companies have internal KPIs that are used to measure business performance monthly and quarterly. The result of these KPIs is senior staff are currently managing the business quarter to quarter. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Vote no on the proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Owners and investors deserve getting timely (i.e., quarterly) business reports.

Tobias Young Editor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tobias Young I strongly urge you to require quarterly rather than semi-annual reporting for publicly-traded companies. We deserve to know how the companies we are investing our hard-earned money in are doing, and twice-a-year just isn't enough information. It will lead to greater volatility in the stock market and more pressure and leverage for insider information abuses.

Tom Parker Systems Architect — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tom Parker My name is Tom Parker. I am a retail investor and I believe this rule change will be detrimental to people like me. In this age of fast information, quarterly reports are already infrequent enough. Cutting the requirement in half is an attack on everyone who relies on these reports to keep informed. It favors insiders. This rule must not be implemented.

Tom Simmons — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tom Simmons Please continue to require quarterly reporting for publicly traded companies. As stockholders and therefore company owners, quarterly reporting should be the minimum requirement for public reporting. Thank-you for your attention.

Tony Dangelo None: American Born Citzen — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tony Dangelo With today's advances in technology enable, Daily financial reporting (like the stock market and at no to little extra cost) It should be the requirement for all businesses, corporations, companies and public financially connected individuals, that is if they are truly honest and law abiding. It will even help keep companies on track to making profits.

Tracy Barber — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tracy Barber I am writing in opposition to the proposal now on the table that would allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public company reports from four times a year to just two. This is a mistake. Reducing reporting from four times a year to two decreases the information shareholders have about a company's performance. At the heart, investing is ownership, and as an investor, it is deeply troubling to think that I would have LESS information on the companies whose shares I own. The idea that this would reduce costs is patently absurd. We live in a digital age where information can be shared nearly instantly and without cost. In a time when there has been a clear, public outcry for more transparency across all sectors, it feels disingenuous that the SEC would even consider a proposal that would decrease transparency in any capacity. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. The quarterly reporting needs to remain unchanged.

Tracy Galloway None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tracy Galloway It is a dreadful idea to allow for less frequent disclosure. Please do not make that change.

Tracy Simons Public School Support Staff — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tracy Simons I'm a retail investor and I rely on quarterly reports to make decisions about my retirement savings. Investors like my family rely on quarterly information to make decisions. The longer gaps create an unfair advantage for corporate insiders leaving smaller investors in the dark, Optional reporting doesn't fix the problem because companies that opt in are often the ones whose investors most need frequent updates, and honestly, the savings to companies aren't worth the cost to you. It could actually wind up costing regular investors more. Big companies get many other breaks that reporting on how the business is doing shouldn't be one they get to decided when or IF they get to let their investors know what's going on.

Travis Prosser — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Travis Prosser Please retain the requirement to report four times per year, so I, as an owner of publicly-traded companies, can remain informed on my investment.

Tron Hardy — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Tron Hardy I want to know what’s going on with the businesses I invest in more often than biannually.

TYLER TIMOTHY Retired individual investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: TYLER TIMOTHY Quarterly reports are necessary as they keep information current.

V. Paul Bowers, Jr. Business Owner — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: V. Paul Bowers, Jr. In this day and age of fraud along financial and governmental mistrust. We are are at a pivotal point that transparency must increase rather than decrease. How many more business might commit fraud if financial reporting was reduced. Keep the reporting levels at the it's current level if you must, but reducing reporting to investors and the American public of how a company conducts their business is a step in the wrong direction. More reporting...Not Less.

Vaibhav Tandon CPA — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vaibhav Tandon I prefer having 4 earnings announcements every year

---

Val Ruffo Small Business Owner — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Val Ruffo I have been a lifelong individual investor. I learned early on the importance of reading quarterly reports. This was true for companies I was invested in, but more importantly for companies I was considering. Transparency is essential and quarterly reports ensures this. It would be a mistake not to continue to require them.

Victor Schoenek Retired - Engineering & R&D director — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Victor Schoenek I whole heatedly disagree with the proposal now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. That is a mistake, and should not be implemented. We need more transparency, not less transparency. At the rate that change takes place today (technology, politically, environmentally, etc.), reducing the public reports to just two a year is not helpful.

VIRGIL CORDERO MOTLEY FOOL COMMUNITY — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: VIRGIL CORDERO I strongly oppose reducing the current reporting requirements for public companies. As an investor I should expect my government to allow me the maximum opportunity to know and understand the companies I am invested in.

Visa Hyvärinen acc. manager — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Visa Hyvärinen Hi! It's not a good idea to cut down reporting from four times per year to only two times per year. That would mean less knowledge, more not good investing decisions, losing money for investors, losing money for economy and states / countries and for sure big accounting frauds and other scandals later on.

Viv Bridge Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Viv Bridge Knowledge is power - to make informed decisions based on regular reporting from listed companies. I support 4 reporting periods a year for all listed companies in order to keep investors/shareholders well informed throughout the year.

Vlad Vass — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Vlad Vass Definitely against allowing publicity traded companies to submit financial reports only semiannually. This would leave the public less informed about company's performance and lead greater volutility.

W.R. Stewart The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: W.R. Stewart I disagree with reducing reporting from quarterly to semi-annually.

Walt Motley Fool Community. — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Walt Hello fellow investors, Throughout our history, our company has stepped forward when important regulatory decisions affect individual investors. It’s time to dust off our bully pulpit and do it again. A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that’s a mistake! Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed.

Walter & Joan Stark none — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Walter & Joan Stark With AI, better information is available and critical. Quarterly reports are very important. As an investor, I expect and demand more timely financials, at least quarterly.

Walter Aton — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Walter Aton We need more transparency from companies we invest in, not less. This proposal does not deserve passage.

Walter Hilles Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Walter Hilles We need the four times a year reporting to be able to make right decisions . Two times a year is not enough

---

Walter Mark Bosteder None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Walter Mark Bosteder Any lessening of information is a mistake. Quarterly works and should not be changed. The tools at the disposal of these corporations and companies makes the task of quarterly reporting a simple process which takes no time.

Wayne Gerlach Retired — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wayne Gerlach I urge you to keep the reporting at 4 time per year.

Wee Tze Chua — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wee Tze Chua Quarterly reporting increases transparency which is pivotal in creating and maintaining trust in companies for all investors. Understand that there is a cost associated with reporting however AI tools has it made significantly easier to the point where cost shouldnt play a factor in the decision. Please do not reduce the annual reports from 4 to 2.

Wendell Willard Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wendell Willard Please leave the quarterly reporting regulation in place. It’s important information that investors should know.

Westin Huntbach — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Westin Huntbach I oppose this proposal. I think extending the interval for mandatory reporting to the SEC will open the door the unethical and illegal actions by insiders as the public remains in the dark for longer periods of time. I think this proposal would further extend the gap between average Americans and the privileged elite when it comes to participating in the stock market.

Wild Guejito The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Wild Guejito Do NOT reduce the reporting requirements. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. There has been in my lifetime several companies, GE one of them, with hinky accounting to SEC where I have lost money having to sell the stock and taking a loss. I had that stock for many years. At that time I was working and did not have time to keep researching accounting filing. GE broke apart to several different companies diluting the stock. I am now retired and have time to keep track of the stock. If this can be done to a huge company so quickly within a year with 4 quarterly filing imaging how much of a change can happen with semi-yearly filings. I will lose faith in the stock market. In the history of the stock market has it not been aways quarterly filings! I am a dwindling retired middle class and need my retirement savings in my stocks for my nursing home age expenses.

Will Anderson — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Will Anderson I oppose the proposal to reduce the number of public company reports from four per year to two. If passed, you will be hiding and evading the behaviors and financial standing of public companies for six months at a time. This harms not only investors/stockholders, but also the general public, who need to understand the health or lack thereof of the national economy and local interests about whether employees will be hired or laid off. The public needs to understand this to plan personal family decisions. The SEC's attempt to make this change runs counter to the public interest and gives more power to companies and less to people. Kill this proposal today.

William A Barber MD FACS Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William A Barber MD FACS I do not think semi annual reporting is adequate information regarding the health of a company in this fast changing environment

---

William Byrus None — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Byrus I am opposed to changing the reporting requirements. Quarterly transparency of the business is important to all investors.

William Downs — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Downs Keep reports quarterly.

William Griffith — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Griffith Trying to send comments on continuation of sec quarterly reports

WILLIAM HALL — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: WILLIAM HALL As an individual stockholder, I believe it would be a grave mistake to allow companies to only report semi-annually versus quarterly. As a shareholder, I own part of a company. We should strive for maximum transparency so that all shareholders can make informed decisions.

William Headrick — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Headrick I would like to see companies continue to provide quarterly reports to improve transparency. I believe semiannual reporting would not provide the level of information about my investments I need to make informed decisions.

WILLIAM L NORTON JR Concerned Stock holder — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: WILLIAM L NORTON JR We need to keep quarterly reports, especially in this age of rampant corporate and government corruption

---

William Moody the Motley Fool — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Moody Less reporting is a terrible idea. It will create more volatility and less accountability due to the lost transparency of activities inside a company. Two financial reports a year is NOT ENOUGH.

William S Grider — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William S Grider Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. I'd just know far less about how it was doing. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet I would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses I own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

William S. The Motley Fool Community — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William S. Investors need more, and more verifiable, information not less! Reducing reporting only allows management more time to cover tracks of illicit or inappropriate actions. Better to maintain quarterly reporting requirements and add semiannual SEC audits/ inspections!

William Vespa — Jun 24, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Vespa As investors, we are owners in the company and deserve to be informed about "our" company's status on a regular basis. There is a reason the quarter was initially chosen as an acceptable frequency of communication to the investors. Reducing to semi annual reporting would reduce transparency under the guise of reducing costs. Aren't the investors indirectly paying those costs through the stock valuation? It is a cost of doing business and accepting money from outside investors. When you hear investors complain about getting too much information or getting reports too frequently and the cost of those reports being too much, then maybe I would understand considering reducing the number of reports. Until then, leave the reporting frequency at quarterly reports.

William Wellerritter — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: William Wellerritter Against the change. We seem to be at a time when deception and corruption are either more evident or increasing and to reduce accountability would not be appropriate or make sense. If anything, additional reporting and verification or audits should be increased!

Yuri Federigi TPM, Meta Platforms — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Yuri Federigi I'm against this change because I don't believe that the claimed cost reduction is relevant to the dynamics of the business in any way shape or form, and I think that if a company wants to call itself "a public company" investors must be informed on how it's doing more often not less often. Semestral reports will not make anyone more patient, they will just make everyone less informed!

Zachary kimball Retail Investor — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Zachary kimball Quarterly filings and reporting should stay. Information transparency is necessary for timely price discovery

---

Zachary Tedder — Jun 24, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Zachary Tedder Preserve the 10-Q

Amala Redd — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Amala Redd Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 He reporting a Trump fearing idiots

Get Outlook for iOS

AMALA REDD LICENSED REAL ESTATE SALESPERSON DOUGLAS ELLIMAN REAL ESTATE EVERY DEAL IS A BIG DEAL. www.reddwork.net www.reddwork.net DIRECT: 212.712.6058 OFFICE: 212.350.8500 MOBILE: 917.573.0876 Amala.Redd@elliman.com 575 Madison Avenue, New York, NY 10022 MY LISTINGS DISCOVER THE VALUE OF YOUR HOME FACEBOOK / X /

YOUTUBE / INSTAGRAM / LINKEDIN / TIKTOK CLICK HERE NYS HOUSING DISCRIMINATION DISCLOSURE NOTICE & FORM CLICK HERE NYS TENANTS' RIGHTS TO REASONABLE ACCOMMODATIONS FOR PERSONS WITH DISABILITIES At Douglas Elliman, we won't ask you for your social security number, bank account or other highly confidential information over email. Wire Fraud is Real. Before wiring ANY money, call the intended recipient at a number you know is valid to confirm the instructions. Additionally, please note that the sender does not have the authority to bind a third party to a real estate contract via written or verbal communication.

This email is for the use of the intended recipient(s) only. If you have received this email in error, please notify the sender immediately and then delete it. If you are not the intended recipient, you must not keep, use, disclose, copy or distribute this email without the author's prior permission. We will never send or ask for sensitive or non-public information via e-mail, including bank account, social security information or wire information. We have taken precautions to minimize the risk of transmitting software viruses, but we advise you to carry out your own virus checks on any attachment to this message. We cannot accept liability for any loss or damage caused by software viruses. The information contained in this communication may be confidential and may be subject to the attorney-client privilege.If you are the intended recipient and you do not wish to receive similar electronic messages from us in the future then please respond to the sender to this effect. Please note that any views or opinions presented in this e-mail are solely those of the author and do not necessarily represent those of the Company.

Douglas Elliman may engage a third party vendor to answer telephone, email, text, and internet inquiries. This vendor acts as an agent for Douglas Elliman, and keeps all information confidential.

B. Berry — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: B. Berry Keep transparency for investors. Share holders need to know what companies financial picture looks like throughout the year. Decreasing reporting to biannual is a disservice.

Barbara Feltner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Feltner Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No. ABSOLUTELY NOT. BARBARA FELTNER

Capt Gary L Holman ALPA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Capt Gary L Holman This is dumbest idea, allowing corporations to run rampant all over our society is ridiculous. Stock owners should have more oversight. The public oversight is already massively reduced due to “institutional investors”

Charles M Wishart — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles M Wishart There is no good reason to return to 1955 period of false info and lies. There is also no harm to anyone to keep the quarterly report signs by the CEO. Please keep the law so we can keep the country moving ahead.

Christian Renaud — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christian Renaud The proposal to allow companies to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two would be a mistake. Investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, frequent, transparent communication from that business.

Corey Hanley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Corey Hanley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I see quarterly reporting as a critical balance between visibility and operational efficiency. It provides investors with a consistent, structured view of risk trends, leadership effectiveness, and progress in the business without overwhelming the business with constant reporting overhead. When done well, it drives accountability, supports informed decision-making, and ensures alignment between company leadership and investors. That said, it's important that quarterly reports focus on meaningful, actionable metrics rather than just volume, so they remain relevant and impactful.
Corey Hanley
Information Security Engineer
Why this matters to me:
In my role, I rely on accurate and timely reporting to track vulnerabilities, monitor threat trends, and communicate risk to stakeholders. Why should we expect any less out of the companies we invest our hard earned dollars in?
 This email message is for the sole use of the intended recipient(s) and may contain information that is confidential, privileged or exempt from disclosure under applicable law. Unless otherwise expressed in this message by the sender or except as may be allowed by separate written agreement between EPRI and recipient or recipient's employer, any review, use, distribution or disclosure by others of this message is prohibited and this message is not intended to be an electronic signature, instrument or anything that may form a legally binding agreement with EPRI. If you are not the intended recipient, please contact the sender by reply email and permanently delete all copies of this message. Please be advised that the message and its contents may be disclosed, accessed and reviewed by the sender's email system administrator and/or provider. ***

CRPC® Jeff Martinez — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comments on Proposed Rule on Semiannual Reporting From: CRPC® Jeff Martinez Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I submitted for "Comments on Proposed Rule on Semiannual Reporting"

Did you get my comment? I don't see it posted yet?

Jeff Martinez, CRPC®

Financial Advisor

Chartered Retirement Planning CounselorSM

CA Insurance Lic. #0H58766

TX Insurance Lic. #2825691

Office-213-250-1404

Office-213-537-8971
Cell-213-250-1400

Medicare Planning-213-855-3613
TreveriCapital.com

jeff@trevericapital.com

Appointment HERE

Protect your most important asset. Identity Protection.

Copyright © 2026 All rights reserved. This email is copyright protected. No part may be reproduced, altered, or copied in any form without written consent. Information contained herein is for informational purposes only and should not be construed as an offer, solicitation, or recommendation to buy or sell securities, or personalized investment, tax or legal advice. The information has been obtained from sources believed to be reliable; however no guarantee is made or implied with respect to its accuracy, timeliness, or completeness. Authors may own the stocks they discuss. The information and content are subject to change without notice. Treveri Capital LLC is a California registered investment advisor. CRPC®, Chartered Retirement Planning CounselorSM are trademarks or registered service marks of the College for Financial Planning in the United States and/or other countries.

Insurance Lic: California (CA) 0H58766, Licenses

Daniel Cayea — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Daniel Cayea Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 D. Patrick Cayea; IT Director. Between Mother Teresa and Adolf Hitler there are all kinds of people. The rules and additional scrutiny keep people who might have a hard time coloring inside the lines when it comes to the finances, from coloring outside them. Besides this is the United States of America not the Klingon Empire; we should aspiring to maximizing transparency & accountability, not providing opportunities for the lesser angels amongst us to run amok.

Jeri Glynn — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Jeri Glynn Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No thank you. Quarterly reporting is important. Companies need to retain the resources to allow them to maintain quarterly reporting. You'd think they would want to review their reports to catch any misappropriation of funds! I worked for a University where a quarterly report revealed that a member of the staff was embezzling funds. The funds were long gone and I'm sure we would have lost significantly more had we waited an extra two months to report. Daily transactions are recorded, monthly reconciliation is standard for each department and quarterly reporting isn't a huge lift but gives a snapshot of the whole organization that is vital.
Jeri Glynn, Director of Ticketing Services(Ret.)

Sent from my iPhone

Juanita Hickman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Juanita Hickman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly, actually increase to monthly. Old enough to remember the 1 st time around. Stop pacifying the crooks who destroy and deplete the coffers and walk away, leaving everyone delay to rebuild and restore with less and less

Juanita Hickman

Disclaimer
Disclaimer: The email and files transmitted with it are confidential and are intended solely for the use of the individual or entity to whom they are addressed. If you are not the original recipient or the person responsible for the delivering the email to the intended recipient, be advised that you have received this email in error, and that any use, dissemination, forwarding, printing or copying of this email is strictly prohibited. If you received this email in error, please delete it from your system without copying it, and notify the sender by reply email so that our address record can be corrected. Thank you. Surgery Partners, Inc.

Judy Burke — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Judy Burke Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We must continue to receive quarterly reporting. We need more visibility, not less!
Judy Burke, retired - and watching my money! Albany, Ohio

Leslie L Baker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Leslie L Baker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Make sure that companies have to report every quarter. It's what they should do and should keep doing.
Leslie Gray Baker
Beckley WV

Get Outlook for iOS

Lisa W. Carr — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Lisa W. Carr Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm horrified that the SEC would even consider suspending quarterly reports! How dare you consider put our investments and savings at risk like that? Some of us are nearing retirement and the potential losses that companies could hand us, with no warning, would be catastrophic. Don't do it!

Lisa Carr

This message is for the designated recipient only and may contain privileged, proprietary, or otherwise confidential information. If you have received it in error, please notify the sender immediately and delete the original. Any other use of the e-mail by you is prohibited. Where allowed by local law, electronic communications with Accenture and its affiliates, including e-mail and instant messaging (including content), may be scanned by our systems for the purposes of information security, AI-powered support capabilities, and assessment of internal compliance with Accenture policy. Your privacy is important to us. Accenture uses your personal data only in compliance with data protection laws. For further information on how Accenture processes your personal data, please see our privacy statement at https://www.accenture.com/us-en/privacy-policy.
_____

www.accenture.com

LISW Holly Hutyera — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: LISW Holly Hutyera Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Since my father's death, I have been monitoring the resources he left for my mother's life without him. They worked hard to build what she now has. They chose specific investments carefully. Being able to see quarterly changes in these holdings is essential in knowing that she will continue to have this financial security in the final years of her life. Please keep the updates quarterly.

Respectfully,

Holly Hutyera
4157 Hastings-Newville Rd.
Lucas, OH 44843
(315) 552-4309
hutyera@me.com

Marion O Weaver — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Marion O Weaver Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep the reporting quarterly so I can keep track of my stock. My teaching pension doesn't supply enough money. I don't want to lose stock monies due to CEO shenanigans. Marion Weaver, retired high school teacher.

Get Outlook for iOS

MS, LMT Denise M Logsdon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: MS, LMT Denise M Logsdon Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 6 months dark is too long. Well-run aboveboard companies find transparency appropriate every 3 months. Bad actors can do much damage to a publicly traded company in 6 months. Please let me have the information to protect my investments

Sent from my iPhone

Nikki Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Nikki Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I work for a business school. Understanding the check pints at quarters of the year makes much more sense for shareholders, the company, and its employees! It gives a company time to course correct if they need to, and strategize more mindfully.

Get Outlook for iOS

Norma Maya — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Norma Maya Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do not leave the American people in the dark! It's unconstitutional!

Get Outlook for iOS
Norma Maya [CONFIDENTIALITY AND PRIVACY NOTICE] Information transmitted by this email is proprietary to Medtronic and is intended for use only by the individual or entity to which it is addressed, and may contain information that is private, privileged, confidential or exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If you are not the intended recipient or it appears that this mail has been forwarded to you without proper authority, you are notified that any use or dissemination of this information in any manner is strictly prohibited. In such cases, please delete this mail from your records. To view this notice in other languages you can either select the following link or manually copy and paste the link into the address bar of a web browser: http://emaildisclaimer.medtronic.com

---

PhD,MD Frederick J Kogan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: PhD,MD Frederick J Kogan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is absolutely insane to allow a company not to report earnings or losses for 6 months. This will only foster abuse of the system and leave investors holding all the debt if a the board of the company decides to either take profits and run or sell leaving shareholders holding the bag. Do you want 1929 all over again.
Keep reports QUARTERLY!!!!

Sent from my phone. Sorry about all the typos.

Rachel Naugle — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Rachel Naugle Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Rachel Naugle and I work as a Sr. Content Strategy Specialist in Maryland. In the interest of continued investor confidence, the SEC must keep quarterly reporting. More frequent reporting holds firms accountable and fosters transparency with investors. Less frequent reporting concentrates information in a few hands, leaving investors at a marked disadvantage, and creates a sense that companies are holding back relevant information, engendering distrust where the opposite is necessary for strong investor confidence and healthy financial systems. Instituting twice yearly reporting, especially as a pull-back from more frequent reporting, leaves room for conspiracy thinking. There will be many to question the “why” of this action and ascribe nefarious intent. The default weighting should always be toward more transparency, not less. The most important tool for confident and sound financial decision-making: current data that is not stale.

Rachel L. Naugle
Sr. Content Strategy Specialist
Steampunk

Robert D Sixto — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Robert D Sixto Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly updates. It’s a disgusting, corrupt decision to do it every 6 months, especially with income inequality as high as it is. Rich insiders will know how to trade and average Americans will get hurt. The people will only tolerate so much. Eventually, there will be consequences for the rich. Please don't add to the economic chaos.

Regards,
Robert Sixto
Get Outlook for iOS

Scott (BWCONV-United States) Derouin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Scott (BWCONV-United States) Derouin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the requirements for quarterly reporting for public companies. SEC - DO YOUR JOB!

Get Outlook for iOS

Steven Koobatian Motley Fool Member — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Steven Koobatian I want company/business reporting with updates at least four times per year.

Yvette (CAI - Atlanta) Liu — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Yvette (CAI - Atlanta) Liu Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need the quarterly report show up the same way as they are right now please.

Yvette Liu
Cox Automotive

12458sse — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: 12458sse Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Name: Alex Tan Job title: Retail Investor

Comment:

I strongly support keeping quarterly reporting.

As a retail investor, I depend on regular, timely financial disclosures to make informed decisions. Quarterly reports help level the playing field between ordinary investors and large institutions with more resources, better access, and more sophisticated research teams.

Moving away from quarterly reporting would reduce transparency, widen information gaps, and make it harder for individual investors to understand how companies are performing throughout the year. Public companies benefit from access to public capital, and in return they should provide investors with frequent, standardized updates.

Quarterly reporting is not perfect, but the answer is better disclosure, not less disclosure. The SEC should keep quarterly reporting in place to protect market transparency, investor confidence, and fair access to information.

---

131 Holding ApS Software Engineer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: 131 Holding ApS I don't trade stocks based off earnings, I trade stocks based off OHLVC data and usually prior to and after earnings, I will not trade a company because it can be volatile on either direction. I believe this proposal is a mistake and cannot think of a single time when less information has been more useful to anyone. If this is a way to cut expenses for companies, I have to say that it has come at a very bad time. The whole world wonders when the AI bubble will burst and and conveniently reducing earnings reports to semiannual, will only make that prediction harder, give more power to inside traders and blow up more accounts when earnings eventually come out. I believe it is a mistake, but that's my opinion. I don't trade based off earnings

---

17547holmes — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: 17547holmes Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The SEC already tries to keep regular citizens out of the loop. This quarterly report is how we keep track of important financial information that directly affects our future. Please don't compromise our financial future.

---

24 Jamessch — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: 24 Jamessch Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Carlos J Hamilton, manufacturing associate. It matters because there are a lot of beginning investors like me who needs to see quarterly results to make informed decisions about our money.

Get Outlook for iOS

4Dreality — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: 4Dreality Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 If you truly believe in capitalism, you support informed participants (buyers & sellers). If you don’t believe in capitalism, you support secrecy, limiting information and this anti-capitalistic elimination of quarterly reporting. Stand up for open and informed markets and kill this anti-capitalist idea.

5Barker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: N/A From: 5Barker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 1/4 reported is needed and needs to stay the same
Michele Smith Barker

72859396 — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: 72859396 Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 quit letting these corrupt people ruin our country.

A . Stoveken — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A . Stoveken Quarterly reporting is integral to investor understanding of company performance. We need more information and transparency from publicly traded entities, not less!!! KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING REQUIREMENTS!

A Hintz Retired Accountant — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A Hintz I am retired and rely on my investments. Why on earth would you consider lowering the accountability of CEO's and not have them sign off quarterly? This makes no sense and I implore you to keep the sign offs quarterly and keep the CEOs accountable!

A Lopuszanski — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: A Lopuszanski Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it quartely

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

A P — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: A P Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Shame on the SEC for even suggesting that CEO's be off the hook from taking accountability for their companies financial stability. Many of the very large companies have so much financial power that they are tied to many assets & economies & communities - that to start the "we trust you" game again- just can't be done. Behind big faceless companies are millions of people's lives. CEO's have to take responsibility for their companies financial stability.

A ROBERTS — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: A ROBERTS Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting helps keep things honest. As a small business owner in Kentucky I have to abide by the simple principle of quarterly reporting. If big business can manipulate the market then what chance do small business owners have?

E.A. Roberts

A Thomas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: A Thomas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As an investor, I feel that quarterly reporting is essential in keeping companies honest and transparent in their reporting! Six month is a long time to keep investors in the dark and quarterly reporting allows investors to feel more confident and not fearful that another Enron will happen and destroy their investments! Quarterly reporting gives more confidence and accountability! Please keep quarterly reporting as it is and give investors the confidence they need, knowing there will be no “ major surprises “ with our money! Thank you, Anne Thomas, retired business owner, Dakota Systems

Sent from my iPhone

A* L — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: A* L Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Responsibility and accountability for people in power, who consider profit over and above anything else, NEED to be in place.

Anne Lilleberg, Caring citizen. CA

Get Outlook for Android

A,J, Nuccitelli V.P. Investment Officer , Wells Fargo — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A,J, Nuccitelli I would like very strongly that companies disclose results on a Quartey basis, twice a year is not sufficient information.

A. BARROW N/A — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A. BARROW This illicit (criminal) ADMINISTRATION seeks to remove ALL transparency from every action it proposes or takes. Removal of that transparency in the realm of the stock market, investments, corporations, and ownership moves and changes will create HAVOC in the markets and with investors leaving investors unaware of potentially critical and even illegal moves made by this ADMINISTRATION or corporate boards seeking to avoid regulations and crucial corporate moves that would affect investing. WE, the People and investors, will be left with NO ONE to protect US if this proposal passes!

A. C. Jones — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: A. C. Jones Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why do this now? I, for one, will cut back on unnecessary investments. Everywhere we go, we are getting less value for our money. Now here goes the stock market. Same risk but with less transparency? You know it’s wrong.

A. Hughes — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: A. Hughes Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No. We saw what less reporting did to us at the turn of this century. Watch out!

Bubble Bubble, toil and TROUBLE.

Preserve accountability - Protect those who are harmed by the rich!!

A. To Z. Financial Consulting & Wealth Management — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A. To Z. Financial Consulting & Wealth Management We need more disclosures rather than fewer. Transparency is very necessary!

A.E. Goldin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: A.E. Goldin Please retain the quarterly reporting by corporations. We need to retain this degree of transparency to allow individual investors, such as myself and millions more in our country who depend on our investments to live and to help educate our children and grandchildren, to understand what the corporations are doing and their financial health. Reducing reporting increases the risk of investment. There is always a degree of risk, but this would compound it. Quarterly reporting reduces the likelihood of an organization, should it be so inclined, to hide or simply avoid reporting negative results.

Aaleah Godfriaux None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aaleah Godfriaux Transparency is key when it comes to proper reporting, and lessening the instances in which companies are required to report directly affects this vital aspect to maintain investor confidence. Investing is volatile enough without the additional anxiety of too many surprises due to reduced reporting and the way it can lessen informed decisions by investors. With that being said, I OPPOSE reduced reporting on the part of public companies.

Aaron — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Aaron Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need more transparency, not less

Aaron Long

Aaron Austin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aaron Austin As a investor and company owner, I would rather have more information from the companies I invest in, not less. I understand companies need freedoms to take their business in the direction they think they need to go, but as an investor and owner in those companies, I need to have information to see if that is the direction I want my money to go. At only twice a year, this would make the markets even more speculative than they inherently are and a worse investment platform for investors to build wealth strategically. I am in strong opposition of semiannual reporting. Any cost associated with creating required quarterly reports is simply the cost of doing business for a company being public and gaining the advantage of more visibility to potential investors and the large amount of investment capital that brings.

Aaron Butler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aaron Butler i don't want to see public filings go down to twice a year. That would be too long to find out if a company was doing poorly.

Aaron Higgins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Aaron Higgins Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Light is the ultimate sterilizer. Leave it alone. They don't need to hide what's going on at a company from stock holders and potential stock holders. 12 times a year would be better. This will only make insider trading easier. Just politicians and insiders will benefit. Ask Nancy pelosi then do the opposite.

Aaron Keller Individual investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aaron Keller Public company reports are essential to investors to make informed decisions about the companies we support. Fewer reports will decrease transparency, and increase uncertainty and volatility. A public business has a duty to provide timely information to those that support them through buying their stock. And 6 months is NOT timely,

---

Aaron m — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Aaron m Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Make it monthly now. No reason it can't be and will reveal patterns so stockholders can dismiss the CEO.

Aaron Mainz — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Aaron Mainz Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
We need more transparency not less. I would argue a monthly reporting would make more sense. If there's nothing to hide there should be 0 reasons to report more frequently.

Aaron Paul — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aaron Paul This is a mistake that decreases transparency and harms investors. Anyone who votes yes for this will lose my vote.

Aaron Reithel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aaron Reithel I disagree with the proposal to eliminate the requirement of quarterly reporting as this will lead to a lack or accountability and reduce the ability of reviewing Financials on a quarter by quarter basis. This proposal would be a disservice to both shareholders and the general public.

Aaron Slack — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Aaron Slack Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To Whom It Concerns at the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC),

My name is Aaron Slack, a micro business owner and semi-active stock investor born and raised in New York.

I'm writing in regard to proposal S7-2026-15 to lower the financial reporting frequency requirement for publicly traded companies.

As an investor, business owner, and citizen, this proposal deeply concerns what little sense of trust and security I have left in the U.S. stock exchange.

Decreasing financial reporting requirements opens the door to more concealment, corruption, stock manipulation, and insider trading, all while robbing the public and investors of transparency and essential data for investment management.

I see no value in this proposal, besides allowing America's rampant insider trading problem more cover to abuse the stock exchange for personal gain at the cost of public and private investors without meaningful oversight or enforcement.

Now more than ever, publicly traded businesses need more accountability, more transparency, and, if anything, more detailed and frequent reporting requirements to keep investors, watchdogs, and the public informed about how these funds are being spent, and whether the businesses receiving them are a secure and law-abiding vehicle for investment.

When so many Americans have retirement plans, personal savings, and other nest eggs tied directly to the stock market, we all deserve visibility into the businesses enjoying the benefits of such wide scale funding.

I'm sure international investors share similar concerns, placing our national economy at risk of damaged reputation and decreased foreign investment, hampering an already dysfunctional economic system.

If the SEC has any interest in protecting the public interest from this open invitation for fraud, it will reject this proposal and maintain quarterly reporting requirements for all publicly traded entities.

The world is watching.

Aaron Trobaugh — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Aaron Trobaugh Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Melisa Mallwitz, Assistant Store Manager. Quarterly reporting is important to me because I can keep better track of the companies I'm invested in and can make better investing choices. Transparency is important.

Sent from my iPhone

Abby M — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Abby M Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission,

I am writing to formally express my strong opposition to any proposals that would eliminate or reduce the frequency of quarterly financial reporting (Form 10-Q) for public companies.
As an investor, I rely heavily on the consistent, timely, and verified financial data provided in quarterly reports to make informed investment decisions. Moving from a quarterly schedule to a semi-annual or annual schedule would severely harm market transparency and investor protection in several key ways:

Information Asymmetry: Less frequent reporting creates a data void. This gap gives corporate insiders and institutional investors unfair advantages over retail investors.

Increased Market Volatility: Waiting six months for financial updates will lead to massive, unpredictable stock price swings when data is finally released.

Delayed Accountability: Quarterly reports force corporate management to remain disciplined. Semi-annual reporting would allow poor operational tracks or financial deterioration to go unnoticed for too long.

Reduced Market Confidence: Transparency is the backbone of the U.S. capital markets. Lowering reporting standards will erode public trust and discourage retail participation.

While I understand the argument that quarterly reporting can encourage short-term corporate thinking, eliminating the reports is the wrong solution. The solution is not to give investors less information, but to encourage better long-term strategic execution by management.

Reliable, frequent public disclosure is vital for maintaining a fair and efficient market. I urge the Commission to maintain the current quarterly reporting framework to protect regular investors and ensure market integrity.

Sincerely,

Abby Makings

Abe Bushansky None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Abe Bushansky Bad idea to reduce quarterly reports from 4 times per year to two. As a fundamental investor this lack or reduced information will make me less informed on the companies that I have ownership. Thank you for your consideration. Respectfully Abe Bushansky

---

Abe Lincoln — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Abe Lincoln Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The quarterly report needs to stay so there’s oversight on how the company is handling business to ensure no internal funny business! Thank you.

Sincerely
Kent Osborne

Abigail McEnroe — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Abigail McEnroe Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep doing quarterly reporting. Open books make for for all to see.

Sent from my iPad

Abraham Hedaya — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Abraham Hedaya please keep the quarterly reports

---

Absalom Valenzuela Jr NALC National Association of Letter Carriers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Absalom Valenzuela Jr I vehemently oppose requiring only two "reports" annually. I remain in favor of keeping them quarterly. Less communication leads to less informed investors. Especially during these turbulent times.

Absolutely Not ok. Quarters — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Absolutely Not ok. Quarters Quarters

---

Ace Yurth — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ace Yurth Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please don't remove this protection requirement. I remember Enron, the S&L fraud and the bank failures of 2008-9. And who gets the bill? The taxpayers! Who came up with this lousy idea? Let me guess? The CEOs so that can shirk personal responsibility for their actions

Ace Yurth
1436 Dandelion Way
Petaluma, CA 9495

Just breathe....

Acqua Richards — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Acqua Richards Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This sets up a disastrous outcome for people making decisions about how to best invest for retirement. PLUS, it just gives insider with NO INTEGRITY a New Way to cheat!!!! Laziness - never wins out. 3 years from retirement as a SME for a major telecommunications company AND I SAY NO TO THIS CHANGE!!!!

Thanks
Lead With Kindness AND Integrity

Activist Crone — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Activist Crone Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Jean Taylor, a registered Independent voter in E Washington.
Quarterly reporting must not be enacted; it provides yet another loophole for corporations to skirt accountability & public scrutiny.
You work for We, the People, not unregulated corporations. Time you start working like it.

Adam — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Adam Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To whom this email concerns:

Transparency is critical to allow for equal opportunity for all investors. Without it, the already rich profit even further, leading to greater wealth inequality and a weaker overall economy. This is why regular reporting on a quarterly basis is needed for a fair and functional stock market. Please retain the status quo on this issue.

Adam Bosworth
Engineer

Adam Chapel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Adam Chapel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep reporting at quarterly intervals to keep corporations honest.
Adam Chapel
Self employed contractor.

Adam Cohen retired investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adam Cohen this is a terrible idea. The “savings” gained from the “efficiency“ of less frequent financial reporting is insignificant compared to the importance and value of communications and reporting to shareholders. As an investor and owner of many publicly traded companies, Quarterly is the minimum level of reporting that I want from my portfolio companies More transparency, not less

---

Adam Freilich — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Adam Freilich Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please do not chamge

the quarterly earning report to semiannaul earming report. I would like to have the most recent information (quarterly) to help guide my investing choices.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Adam Jack Arthur — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Adam Jack Arthur Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 all investor, I need timely reporting on how companies are doing. Please keep quarterly reporting.

Adam Arthur

Adam Martin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Adam Martin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
You cant be seriously thinking this is a good idea... unless your thought is manipulation of market's and insider trading is a good thing. Dont be mentally handicapped. Use your brain, this isnt a good thing.

Adam O — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adam O I do not agree with allowing companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to two. I personally use the quarterly reports to make retirement investment decisions. Reducing the number of reports to only twice a year would make it increasingly difficult to make informed decisions and stay informed regarding the health and well being of companies that I have or plan to invest in. As a stock holder in a company, I believe more frequently supplied information is appropriate. Moving in a direction where less frequently supplied information would not be agreeable to me.

Adam Olzick The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adam Olzick This ruling for reporting only twice a year would be a mistake. Companies need to be help more accountable, not less, especially as the accumulate so much more power and wealth. I strongly oppose this decision and it would give significantly reduce the amount of control to the investors and shareholders. Please do not go through with this ruling.

Adam Patchett — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Adam Patchett Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
It is hard for me to imagine that the fundamental instrument for transparency in our market could cease to become a requirement. Especially being allowed by the SEC as the most important governor of the market. Please, for all investors, especially the growing group of small retail investors, DO NOT pass this proposal.

Signed,
A severely concerned active investor

Adam rod — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Quarterly reporting comments From: Adam rod Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hello, my name is Adam Rodriguez. I am a 28yr old computer technician for Del Valle ISD, a low income school district in the outskirts of Austin, TX. I want reporting to remain quarterly. The reason I bought stocks in the market was because the company I worked for years ago would not give me a raise despite my improvement and efficiency. It wasn't until I became a shareholder in the company that I was able to access financial reports from the company as a whole, not just my division, to argue for a raise. It's important to every day young Americans to keep quarterly reporting to prevent corporations from taking advantage of young Americans.
My ability to access those reports in a quarterly fashion is what kept the roof over my head, when I was finally given a raise that helped me meet my financial needs.
Don't let quarterly reporting switch to 6mo. Please.

Adam R.

Adam Russin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adam Russin Less information is not helpful in making investment decisions. This is a risk to the greatest, most dynamic capitalistic market in the world. Please don't do this!

Adam Segal — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Adam Segal Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I don’t think this is good for the Average American person. What’s wrong with being transparent? At the end of the day a small minority will benefit, the rest of us will suffer. I firmly believe that it’s a terrible idea and should not be signed into law.

Sent from my iPhone

Adam willmouth — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Adam willmouth Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I belive corporations playing the long game should not be penalized for not performing short term. If you can solve that short term thinking and mindset I would support blocking 6 month blackouts. Otherwise just extend to bi annual. I'm fine with that. We know who is defrauding sand yet nothing is fine about it. Look at the banks.

Addie Moore — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Addie Moore Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reports. We need more than transparency, not less!!! Addie Moore, retired no Senior citizen

Sent from AT&T Yahoo Mail on Android

Adele Perriello — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adele Perriello Please keep the stock reports quarterly instead of changing it to twice a year. We need to be informed about the company more, not less.

Adele Vandenburgh — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Adele Vandenburgh Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We NEED quarterly reporting to protect us (We the People) from corrupt corporations, lawyers, politicians!! Do your job!

Aditya pawar Senior engineer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aditya pawar In this market already heavily favoring the big players. This would only continue to hurt the individual investor and take away any remaining trust that is left. For people with no insider connections, and who are still taking part in this ownership system of a company. This is not fair at all.

Adnan Cinisi IEEE Member — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adnan Cinisi Reliable, current information is essential in this AI era. This is especially true regarding company information for investors who own shares in that company. We deserve transparency, given that we are investing in that company and enabling them to raise funds for future endeavours.

Adria Calascione — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Adria Calascione Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Adria Calascione RN

IMAGINE BEING A HARD-WORKING SINGLE MOM TO 2 CHILDREN, AND THE SEC IS TRYING TO HIDE INFORMATION THAT COULD POTENTIALLY HELP YOU WITH INVESTMENTS. SO THE ONLY PEOPLE WHO SHOULD BE MAKING MONEY ARE THE INSIDE TRADERS AND PEOPLE WE CALL POLITICIANS WHO SIT IN SEATS OF POWER? YOU SHOULD BE DISGUSTED BY WHAT THIS ADMINISTRATION IS DOING WITH THEIR OWN TRADES. STOP TRYING TO * THE MIDDLE CLASS. STOP TRYING TO SCREW PEOPLE OVER WHO ARE TRYING TO GET AHEAD IN THE LITTLEST BIT THAT THEY CAN - DISGRACEFUL.

Adria Lucas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: QUARTERLY From: Adria Lucas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Adria, Registered Nurse, we deserve transparency and no unfair advantage for insiders. Quarterly reporting allows quicker reaction to market changes, better planning and increased productivity. The everyday American works hard to save for the future say no to changes that make it harder to retire comfortably.

Sent from AOL on Android

Adrian Ballou — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Adrian Ballou Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need quarterly reporting! Companies need to be transparent with the public about what's happening. This is a bare-minimum reporting measure.

Adrian Evans — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adrian Evans 2 annual business reports is not a good idea, more information available to all,the more informed an individual is,therefore more able to safeguard their investment, less knowledge is a riskier strategy for said investors like myself and others, 4 reports please per year

---

Adrian Pell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adrian Pell I object to this proposed change to semiannual reporting. As an individual shareholder, the most significant and definitive information I can get about a company comes from their shareholder reports. A lot can happen in a quarter, as we've seen in recent years, but this gives me an opportunity to review progress and decide if I want to continue holding shares in a company or sell them. Moving this reporting to only twice per year makes it much more likely that significant changes will happen in a company without the knowledge of individual shareholders. The comment has been made that this change would reduce the cost to companies of producing these reports. While this may be true in theory, in practice a significant amount of the report content probably comes from documents which are already available internally. In addition, the increasing use of more automation (AI tools and otherwise) has probably already reduced the cost of producing quarterly reports and will likely continue to do so. In summary, I object to the proposed change to semiannual reporting.

Adrian Zorrilla None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Adrian Zorrilla I do not agree with canceling quaterly earnings. This will only aid insider traders and reduce transparency in the markets

---

Adrienne New — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Adrienne New Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Adrienne New, Insurance Agent, our clients are trying to keep current on bills and build their savings. Please keep reporting as it is, quarterly. There's already too much uncertainty.

Adrienne Ryan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Adrienne Ryan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep this as quarterly reporting! I keep track of how companies are doing, this way I can see and tell who is being honest, vs. who is hiding facts. To go to 6 months, they will have the opportunity to create fraudulent activity and hide it! After all the fraudulent activity we have been through with the Trump administration, we need to see honesty!

Adrienne Ryan
Grocery Clerk

Sent from my iPad

Aeron Ridgeway — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Aeron Ridgeway Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep reporting as is so publicly traded companies remain responsible to the public.

Agneta Hellberg — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Agneta Hellberg Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly

Sent from my iPhone

Aileen L'Etoile — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Aileen L'Etoile Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 If it's an opportunity to self enrich, while, * everybody else, then we got a problem!!! That mindset, that selfish, dishonest, psychotic, sociopathic behavior needs to be called out!!! Your enabling them to "go dark", wreaks of corruption!!! ENOUGH!!!!!

Aileen L'Etoile — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Aileen L'Etoile Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 If it's an opportunity to self enrich while, * everybody else, then we got a problem!!! That mindset, that selfish, dishonest, psychotic, sociopathic behavior needs to be called out and enable them to "go dark", wreaks of corruption!!! ENOUGH!!!!!

Aina — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Aina Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is important because I am still of working age. However, getting closer to retirement. Also, it would help the younger generation as well as the overall economy. This change is only going to benefit the wealthy and not the majority working-class. Which is the MAJORITY.

Cordially Aina

Aishwarrya Deore — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Aishwarrya Deore Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Reporting needs to kept quarterly for accountability and prevention of earnings management and window dressing practices. Research has consistently shown that quarterly reporting and mandatory disclosures improve earnings quality and investor outcomes
Aishwarrya Deore, Assistant Professor, Georgetown University, DC

---

aj scott — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: aj scott Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm a teacher that invests in the market. This is would be a disservice to retail investors..don't the non retail investors have enough privilege?

Get Outlook for Android

---

ajelkins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: ajelkins Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 People want to keep the quarterly reporting because it’s necessary to keep big corporations in check and the average investor from losing their money. Stop supporting big corporations!

Sent from Proton Mail for iOS.

Akbar Andazeskishahr The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Akbar Andazeskishahr At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners.

Al B — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Al B Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop all the DC bull ****!!!!!

Al Frisby — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Al Frisby Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 More information is needed...not less.

Al Fritzler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Al Fritzler Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 If it ain't broke, don't "fix" it!!

Al Gerry Mathwig — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Al Gerry Mathwig Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do not change reporting we have enough changes to cover people

Sent from my iPad

Al investor Private — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Al investor I believe that fewer reports means a less informed investor

---

Al Lech — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Al Lech Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
We need better security than less

Al Phillips — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Al Phillips Leave the reporting schedule as it is.

Al Rollings — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Al Rollings Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting has been the standard for so long, I don't trust that I would have to wait an additional 3 months to know what my report says.

Al's Email — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Al's Email Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Before being retired from public pharmaceutical companies, I realize the amount of work this entails. As a retiree from these companies and owning them in my retirement portfolio, I realize how important having this company information on a very regular basis is. Keep the company reporting as it is. A lot of "bad" can happen in 6 months.

Al Parrotta

Alaa Halawi — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alaa Halawi As an investor and part owner. It is my right to check performance more than two times per day. This also give more advantage on well-connected institutional investors through their data and network access to gain an upper hand in buying and selling decisions, which is totally unfair.

Alaina Kurz — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alaina Kurz Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why does the wealthy continue to do everything they can to keep the middle class down and we are the ones supporting this country!!!!! Keep it qtrly. Be fair to those funding this country.

Get Outlook for Android

Alaine Karoleff — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alaine Karoleff Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly filings don't prevent fraud, but they dramatically shorten the window in which it can fester before someone outside the company can see it. Keep public companies reporting their financial results every three months like they have been for over half a century. We gave enough fraud and deceit in our country and changes these rules will only add to that.

-Al Karoleff

Alan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan The semi-annual reporting is ludicrous. All is fine if a company is doing well but if it's not, and you don't find out as an investor until six months later, the repercussions are enormous. Even quarterly reporting is borderline. To ensure a company is not only reporting correctly more frequently, but also the insight into the company's performance with corrections possible sooner than later. For the regular investors, half-yearly reporting will be disastrous. But then again, our current administration could care less about the common citizen.

Alan Baltazar — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Alan Baltazar Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The criminals are trying to to avoid accountability.

Alan Bass Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Bass This is a terrible idea. We want MORE transparency from public companies, not less. This will only harm individual investors.

---

alan bowers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: alan bowers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Alan Bowers. Retired RN. Quarterly reporting is extremely important in order to hold people accountable plus not give them time to steal or cover something up. Keep it, plain and simple.

ALAN BREWER — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: ALAN BREWER Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Only mushrooms grow well in the dark and after Enron can not even believe this is a topic of discussion! So Defiantly Not!

Sent from my iPhone

Alan Calandro — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Calandro I would rather see once per month than twice per year.

Alan H F Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan H F Smith As a senior Investor who has some spare resources I have recently restarted investing in Stocks and Shares and find the reading reports help my in keeping my portfolio active. If there is less such information details available then I would lose interest and give up doing this.

Alan Jones Forensic Engineering RPE — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Jones VERY BAD IDEA WILL CAUSE EXTREME VOLATILITY

Alan Kjelland — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Kjelland I am firmly opposed to reducing the reporting requirements. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. That is just not right!!!

Alan Lawrence — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Lawrence I am against changing to reports only twice a year. There is more and more corruption in government and businesses will follow. the more information the better.

Alan Lemon Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Lemon I am NOT in favor of fewer reports from publicly traded companies. This increasing uncertainty and volatility for investors. As an owner I feel I have the right to the quarterly information and that it is worth the expense.

Alan McGregor The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan McGregor Against semi annual reporting. Should remain quarterly

---

Alan R. Helm CPA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan R. Helm Good afternoon, As an investor in public companies, the SEC's proposal to let public companies report only twice a year is a bad idea because it would weaken the basic premise of a public market: that investors deserve timely, reliable information. Stretching reporting intervals from three months to six months makes it easier for problems to stay hidden, gives insiders more room to control the narrative, and leaves outside investors trading with a far less accurate picture of a company's health. Any modest reduction in compliance burden is outweighed by the loss of transparency, accountability, and fair price discovery. If the goal is a healthier market, the SEC should be pushing for better, faster disclosure—not less of it.

Alan Roach — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alan Roach Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The only reason for this is another loophole for corporate America to get wealthier why the average American picks up the tab. No transparency here.

Alan Smith President, ASA Advisors — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Smith This proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. While some argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter, short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information does not create better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched.

Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Alan Stephens — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Stephens This is not a good idea and will weaken oversight. In this day and age, AI can do the heavy lifting, so it's less of a burden on companies.

Alan Tillman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alan Tillman Please do not pass this regulation. It will result in less information for the individual investors and make much more difficult our investing decisions. More information would be helpful. Less information is a disaster for the small investor.

ALAN WALLAT — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: ALAN WALLAT Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Has been to many class action law suits as there is do to pump and dump corporate reporting misinformation. This will make that even worse. (email is awallat300@ yahoo.com) Alan Wallat

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Alana Brinsmead — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alana Brinsmead I disagree with the proposal to allow companies to provide less reports per annum. Transparency is required for investors to understand stock value. Companies should be required to keep the market and shared owners informed about their movements and plans and finances.

---

albert greuter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: albert greuter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stopping quarterly reporting would be a horrible decision. Clearly you have decided to forget the massive corruption at Enron that led to implementing the quarterly reporting.

Do the right thing and keep the quarterly reporting in place.

Albert Riley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Albert Riley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it quartly

Sent from my iPhone

Albert Trischler Jr — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Albert Trischler Jr Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Will the American Public have periods of "Dark", by not reporting ever to the irs or other ngo agencies. if a company is receiving any money or tax breaks then id suggest a daily report on line, also 20 plus years in a new prison in Alaska for any "insider" trading by employees, politicians or their family/close associates.

by: Albert Francis Trischler (c)
Yes i am an American State National
A man on the land in Michigan.
"Notice to agent is notice principle, notice to principle is notice to agent."Sent from my Verizon, Samsung Galaxy smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

---

alburyr — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: alburyr Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 KEEP IT QUARTERLY! I prefer my quarterly updates. Regards, R Albury

Sent from my Galaxy

Alec Lee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alec Lee Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dear Sir/Ma'am,

As someone who spent much of his career working with financial data and now depends on investment income for my livelihood, I'm very uncomfortable with the idea of semiannual reporting. Given factors like AI's impact on business, six months is too long to go between financial reports. Please reconsider the needs of individual investors, who depend on timely information in making decisions.

Thank you,

Alec Lee

Alec R — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alec R Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am writing to strongly urge the SEC to maintain the current quarterly reporting framework. While transitioning to a semi-annual or less frequent reporting model is occasionally proposed as a way to reduce administrative burdens, doing so would significantly compromise market transparency and investor confidence.

Quarterly reports provide the consistent, predictable cadence of financial data required to accurately assess corporate health and manage risk. Shifting to a six-month reporting cycle would create massive information gaps, increase market volatility around earnings releases, and disproportionately disadvantage regular investors who rely on timely public disclosures. Consistent, frequent transparency is not a burden; it is the bedrock of a healthy, reliable market.

Why this matters to me:

As a financial professional working in accounting and corporate governance, I see firsthand how vital accurate, timely, and regular reporting is to maintaining financial integrity. The discipline of a quarterly close ensures robust internal controls and provides stakeholders with the steady stream of reliable data they need to make informed decisions. Reducing this frequency would only obscure performance and weaken accountability.

Name: Alec Rummler
Job Title: Assistant Controller

Alec Turner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alec Turner Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The quarterly report was to keep CEO s honest. I see no reason to trust them now!

Sent from my iPhone

Aleksandar Barakov — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aleksandar Barakov I really appreciate the public-company to continue publish reports on quarterly base. With the current state of technologies and available tools I believe the publishing reports 4 times per fiscal year will cost minimum efforts and resources for a public company.

Aleksandra Dydyńska Mulesoft developer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aleksandra Dydyńska Reports should be released every quarter for better transparency

---

Alena Allred — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alena Allred Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 SEC you are going the wrong way! If not Quarterly then monthly! More transparency not less.

Get Outlook for iOS

Alesia Regan-Hughes — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alesia Regan-Hughes Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Accountability is important. Keep this quarterly requirement in place to keep the public safe from predatory practices. Cutting the reporting in half ONLY benefits corporations. We have seen how a lack of accountability impacts the lives of people who are invested. Let’s learn from the past.

Alesia Regan-Hughes
Namaste Healing Arts

Alessandro Vecchiarelli — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alessandro Vecchiarelli Allowing companies to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Maybe fewer reports would reduce costs. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. Less information will likely lead to worse decisions. Under this proposal, investors would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they invest in.

Alex — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alex We need to be doing everything possible to increase corporate accountability and counter legalized corruption by corporations

---

Alex Cox — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alex Cox I oppose the proposal to allow companies to reduce reporting from quarterly to semi-annual filings. Investing is ownership, and owners deserve regular, transparent communication about the businesses they own. Cutting reporting in half weakens that connection — especially for retail investors like me, who don't have the institutional access to management and analysts that larger investors do. The cost-savings argument is weaker than it once was, given modern disclosure tools. And less frequent reporting won't reduce short-termism — it will just leave investors less informed, leading to bigger surprises and more volatility when information finally does arrive. I urge the Commission to keep quarterly reporting in place. The potential benefits don't outweigh the cost to investor transparency, particularly for individual investors.

Alex D. Rodriguez — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alex D. Rodriguez Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly financial reporting should be maintained. Public markets run on trust, and trust requires timely, consistent, comparable information.

Moving away from quarterly reporting would not reduce short-term thinking; it would simply reduce visibility. Investors, employees, lenders, analysts, and the public should not have to wait six months to find out whether a company's story still matches its numbers.

If quarterly reporting feels burdensome, the answer is better reporting, not less reporting. Sunlight may be inconvenient, but it is still the cheapest form of market discipline.

The SEC should preserve quarterly financial reporting as a basic pillar of transparency, accountability, and investor protection.

Alex Foltz Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alex Foltz It is in the best interest of investors, as owners of public companies, to have the ability to regularly review company performance and outlook. Reducing the reporting frequency in any way is detrimental to the shareholders. I do not support reducing the reporting frequency from quarterly to bi-annually.

Alex Grossman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alex Grossman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly reporting.
Thank you

Alex Grossman
M: 402-312-5942

Alex Guerrero — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alex Guerrero I support Quarterly reporting because it protects individual investors. The proposed semiannual reporting doubles the information gap between insiders and ordinary shareholders. That gap is where volatility, uncertainty, and mistrust grow. Please note: Research from the CFA Institute, which studied this exact maneuver in the U.K. market, shows that reporting frequency has no measurable effect on corporate investment behavior. The SEC is accepting a real cost – less transparency for individual investors – for a benefit that the evidence says simply won't materialize. Also, the smaller companies less-covered businesses operate with less scrutiny. Reducing their reporting requirements makes them harder to monitor, not easier to own. This is the wrong direction. Reg FD moved toward a more level playing field. This proposal moves away from it. Thank you for reading. Best regards, Alex

---

Alex gundry None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alex gundry Reducing the reporting requirements from 4 times a year to just two is a bad program. Investors need information about the performance of the companies they invested in. The present requirement for quarterly reports gives investors a good picture of company performance I am opposed to the reduction from quarterly reports to only 2 reports per year Sincerely, Alex Gundry.

Alex Jeanty — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alex Jeanty Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Alex, Owner/Operator. This matters to me because the amount of financial fraud carried on by the current administration is disgusting. Keeping reports quarterly, while still not a 100% deterant to shady dealings, ensures a clear, concise, and detailed means of tracking and analyzing how companies move in their respective sectors. Without the quarterly process, the fraud has a much higher propensity to spill over.

Alex Kistler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alex Kistler As a stockholder I oppose adoption of semi-annual reporting. I stand with the Motley Fool communuity on this and feel that less reporting withholds important information from stockholders.

Alex Kitaigorodsky — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alex Kitaigorodsky I believe quarterly reporting provides important transparency and accountability for shareholders. Timely financial disclosure helps investors make informed decisions while encouraging consistent communication between management and shareholders.

Alex M Dittenhoffer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alex M Dittenhoffer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is not a benefit for the private investor! The likelihood of fraud is very high. Private investors will loose. Do not do this!!

Sent from my iPhone

Alex Martelli — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alex Martelli Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reports are crucial to allow small investors like me to regularly track the progress of our holdings. It's a terrible idea to make the quarterly schedule optional -- keep the quarterly schedule mandatory!

Alessandro Martelli

Alex Wales — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alex Wales I am very much in favour of retaining the 4 reporting periods. As the owner of a business I want to be informed regularly on performance. Businesses have month to month accounting, so 3 or 6 months reporting periods will not change the way financial information is collected. Moving to a 6 month reporting period will increase the speculative value of a company relying more on guesses than real data.

Alexander Fanshawe private investore — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexander Fanshawe as advised by the motleyFool, quarterly updates is my prefered reporting option as it reduces volatility.

Alexander Glenn — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexander Glenn Less information does not create more informed investors. Reporting 4 times a year is the cost of being a publicly traded company. A lot can happen in 6 months and investors should not be blind during that time.

Alexander H Stafford investor, landlord, realtor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexander H Stafford I feel that reducing the frequency of reporting by companies that we as investors own only weakens the public trust in those companies. I also believe that in a time when truth itself is in question, more information is better than less. Please do not reduce reporting requirements for public companies. Thanks, Alex Stafford

---

Alexander Robinson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexander Robinson investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Less information does not creates better-informed owners. Hello fellow investors, What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Alexander Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alexander Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is too important to stop. No reason to hide if you are an honest company.
This just reeks of dishonesty. Please do not consider this change

Helen N. Smith
770-653-8254
Zanhelen@att.net

Alexander T Alvarez, CPA Motley Fool Reader, CA Society of CPA's, CPA, Trustee and GP at an Investment Club — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexander T Alvarez, CPA I think that less information is a bad idea. I have worked as a CPA for the last 45 years. An astute business owner has monthly financial statements. The financial statements should tell the owner the best information on a timely basis of how all of their efforts are working (or not). In this day & technological age information is cheaper to obtain and a very powerful tool.

Alexander W Schneider Jr The Motley Fool community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexander W Schneider Jr I believe that quarterly reporting of corporate results and management's perspective on the business has served us well. A significant segment of the investing community limits itself to equities subject to such requirements and avoids Third World countries with lax requirements. There is no reason to join a race to the bottom.

Alexander Weaver — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexander Weaver Quarterly reporting is not a bureaucratic burden. It is one of the few mechanisms that allows ordinary investors to keep pace with management and large institutions. Moving from quarterly to semiannual 10-Q filings would double the period during which insiders know more about a company's performance than the public. That is not a recipe for better markets. It is a recipe for more speculation, wider information asymmetries, and lower investor confidence. The justification for this proposal is that fewer reporting requirements will reduce short-term thinking and encourage long-term investment. Yet the evidence does not support that claim. The CFA Institute studied a similar reduction in reporting frequency in the United Kingdom and found no measurable impact on corporate investment behavior. If the expected benefit never materializes, then all this proposal accomplishes is reducing transparency. The companies most likely to opt out of quarterly reporting are not the large, heavily scrutinized firms that dominate financial headlines. They are smaller companies with limited analyst coverage and less public attention. Those are exactly the companies where regular disclosure is most valuable. Investors need more visibility into those businesses, not less. For decades, securities regulation has generally moved toward reducing information advantages and creating a more level playing field. Regulation FD was based on the principle that investors should receive material information broadly and fairly. Reducing the frequency of public reporting moves in the opposite direction by increasing the amount of time that critical information remains concentrated among insiders. Most importantly, the SEC has not demonstrated a compelling problem that this proposal solves. American public companies already file quarterly reports, and the evidence does not suggest that this requirement is suppressing growth, investment, or competitiveness. The burden of proof should be on those seeking less transparency, and that burden has not been met.

Alexandra Okomo — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Alexandra Okomo Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
There is already little transparency in the stock market and incredible inequalities where insiders and friends of insiders have an upper hand into company's financials and projectory. If you remove quarterly reporting, all you are doing is making the stock market more of a Wild West than it already is. Not that you care...

Alexandra Paoletti — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexandra Paoletti It would be unresponsible to reduce the number of times a company puts out relevant financial and business information each year from four to two. Being an investor is putting your hard earned money toward a business on the belief or trust that they will be good stewards of that investment. Four times a year the information shared with investors gives us the knowledge on how to proceed with our investment. Reduction of this knowledge sharing brings with it a sense of hiding things, keeping information behind closed doors. It looses confidence of the investors making them less likely to invest at all.

Alexandre David — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexandre David Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Alexandria King — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alexandria King Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the SEC: Quarterly financial reporting for corporate earnings is necessary data for the everyday investor as well as institutional investors. Transparency and timelessness is critical for quarterly financial reports.

My small retirement IRA (less than $50,000) is necessary for my survival and I need to know that the decisions I make are based on valid and timely financial data, for myself and the mutual fund managers.

Please DO NOT do away with full quarterly financial reports from publicly traded companies!
Thank you.

Alexandria King
Retired contract specialist
Albuquerque, New Mexico
June 22, 2026

Sent from my iPhone

Alexi Kessler Retail investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alexi Kessler Reducing the reporting frequency of companies would be a massive mistake that would harm investors across the board, both at the institutional and retail level. Investor reports are the only concrete details that we can count on when investing in companies, letting them delay those reports to only twice a year would leave massive information gaps that would make it dangerous to invest. Investors need surety and concrete information to make bets, if they don't have that it will only allow corporations to further deceive us with marketing and create bubbles untethered to fundamentals. Nothing about the current market indicates that companies need MORE leeway to act with impunity, they're raking in record profits. Especially when everyone's retirement portfolios are wrapped up in the public market, it's wildly irresponsible to relax the minimal regulations they face.

ALFONSE MANNATO — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: ALFONSE MANNATO Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I am opposed to the proposal to reduce reporting from quarterly to semi annual.
I am 73 and rely on my investments for living expenses. There is little benefit to reporters BUT a potential large cost to investors like me if one of the companies that we own uses the time to hide important info from investors.
The current system is not broken and needs no adjustment.
Don't make this harmful change.
Al Mannato

Alfred — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alfred Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why is there any need to make it more difficult to spread wealth unless the mission now is to gatekeep any path to prosperity. Please keep quarterly reporting that at least presents the possibility of wealth for the working classes.

Sent from my iPhone

Alfred Mclendon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alfred Mclendon Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I do not approve

---

Alfred Papillon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Alfred Papillon Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do it.

Alfred Schwartz — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alfred Schwartz Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Similar to trading, investing requires a certain degree of knowledge of what you are investing in. With rapid fluctuatuons, six months away from information is too long.

Algy Blaauw Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Algy Blaauw Having been an accountant for a billion dollar company - it would be unwise as consistency, clarity and transparency is measured best by more reporting not less…

Ali Crane — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ali Crane Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is necessary. I headed up a special credits department in a federal bank years ago. Companies can so easily cook the books. Never should they have an extended time to cover up and the President, CEO and CFO need to all sign and date that the information is accurate.

Sent from my iPhone

Ali Maka — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ali Maka Investors should know more about the businesses they invest in, not less. Corporations need more accountability, not less. Maintain quarterly reports!!

Alia Whipple — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alia Whipple Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Its imperative the SEC continues to mandate quarterly reporting to protect PEOPLE and their money. Corporations already protect themselves, we need to stay informed. Jean Whipple

---

Alice Edington — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alice Edington RE: the proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two, I am directly opposed. Information is power. It empowers the company and it empowers its investors. Companies do as little as they can to satisfy regulatory requirements. Reducing the number of public-company reports will allow them to do less. Less is rarely better when it comes to oversight. What would be gained by this change? Less expense for the company? The advances in AI have just made this process tremendously easier and less expensive. Any potential "benefit" is not outweighed by the certain "negative."

Alice Emry — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alice Emry Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I believe this opens up concerns that companies can be in serious financial problems for longer before the public is aware of it. We may end up with a .Com type crisis.

Emry
Get Outlook for iOS

Alice Grimes — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alice Grimes Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We are tired of fighting and fearing things we can't control. Hiding critical information from the people who pay their dues and respect old fashioned hard work is a slap in the face to the American dream. Stop changing things thatbdobt bring value and greater good. Focus on important things, like healthy and safety. Alice Grimes, Product Stewardship Manager, Georgia.

Alice

Alice Knepp — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alice Knepp Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 All reasons to report less often reduces transparency to members. Keep things as they are now.

Alice Lew — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alice Lew Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is the best way for the SEC and shareholders to see how a company is managing all resources from the front line to the highest overhead.
Weekly and monthly reporting and reviewing is how the ceo and everyone in between to the front line(direct labor) can be the most productive and efficient.

Be wise. Be smart. Be truthful.

Alice Hinnant Lew

Alice Lively — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Alice Lively Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
This change limits information. And when you limit information, you risk missing vital facts that can alert investors re problems within companies, corporations and mutual funds,etc whose health is vital in contributing to your portfolio. Retirement folks who are on a fixed income designed to support them until they die are most vulnerable. I have bloodwork done four times a year to monitor a blood disorder. Only way to make sure small change doesn't become big one.

---

alice m Mendeke — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: alice m Mendeke Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Accountability!!

Alice Soler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Alice Soler Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
The only way to make it easier to police companies is to maintain quarterly reporting.

Alice Tuckerbear — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alice Tuckerbear Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep individuals in companies accountable. Do not allow leaders to get away with saying they were “unaware” when they are fully responsible for every single thing that happens under their watch - that is true leadership, not the shirking sorry excuse for one we have in the highest office right now.

Sent from my iPhone

Alicia Everett — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alicia Everett Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I should have the right to see my investments reports at ANY TIME. How dare you make it law that I cannot. In today’s age of instant information for everything, there is only one reason for this lack of transparency and that is corruption.

Alicia Everett
Principal Broker
Keyology
518-813-3540
alicia@keyologyrealty.com
Www.keyologyrealty.com
Serving the Capital District, Columbia, Greene, and Northern Dutchess counties.

Alicia Lewis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Alicia Lewis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I oppose any proposal to eliminate quarterly reporting.
As an everyday investor, I rely on timely financial information to make decisions about my savings and retirement investments. Waiting six months between reports would reduce transparency, increase uncertainty, and allow problems or potential fraud to go undetected for longer.
Public markets work best when all investors have access to regular, reliable information. The SEC should protect investors by maintaining quarterly reporting requirements, not reducing them.

Alicia Tschirhart — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alicia Tschirhart Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dr . Tschirhart It is a matter of fiscal responsibility a nd transparency for companies and their investors

---

Alicia Walker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alicia Walker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Reporting needs to be kept quarterly _ we don’t need another Enron or other similar scandal and business failure

Alicia Walker
Sent from my iPhone

---

alicia yoursoulstory.com — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: alicia yoursoulstory.com Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Six-monthly reporting is so misaligned with good information to make better decisions, not only for investments but possible breakthroughs in medicines. There is more than just money on the line here. Please choose the right and smart thing.

- Alicia Howes, business owner, humanitarian

---

aliciacavitt — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: aliciacavitt Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need transparency and accountability. Quarterly. Alicia Cavitt Library Information Specialist

Sent from AT&T Yahoo Mail on Android

---

alison haueter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: alison haueter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need more accountability and oversight not less. little shareholders and bit just big shareholders/insiders/cronies deserve to have access to good, timely information. Two times a year is not enough…

Alison Pryle — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Alison Pryle Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Investors are entitled to the full picture. While I am timid about investing..I know people who are successful with it. It is an option that can help people grow their wealth. Please allow ordinary Americans their rights. It will mean even more if President Trump manages to cut our Social Security.benefits.
The USA should provide equal opportunity to its citizens.
Alison Pryle

Alison Thompson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alison Thompson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop with the corruption!! Do your JOB

Seriously protect the consumer!!! What is wrong with you people?? Have some morals

Alison Thompson Photography
Owner/Photographer since 2005
www.acephotographyne.com
617-653-0560

Alison tourguide — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alison tourguide Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Liability and responsibility to represent truthful accounting is valid for individuals AND corporations via the individuals in charge of them. SEC should require quarterly reporting, and consequences for executives who misrepresent their company finances. I REMEMBER ENRON and hundreds, maybe thousands of corporate liars before them. As per our unofficial national motto: TRUTH and JUSTICE are the American Way.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Alissandra Kelsch — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Alissandra Kelsch Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting helps to keep consumers, stockholders, and investors informed. Reducing reporting will make it impossible to make informed decisions about investing, and make it easier for companies to hide, and put large industries at risk, because trouble could hide longer before large economic collapses. It's irresponsible to even consider something that could impact the country's economy like this, not to mention the impact on consumers' personal finances and more.
~Alissandra Kelsch
Retired, former Exec Assistant to CEO Defense Industry

---

alix — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: alix Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am an artist and independent business owner. I am requesting that you do not get rid of quarterly reporting. Transparency is equity.

-AJ

---

alkellygleason — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: alkellygleason Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The present system works well. Don't "Fix" it by deregulating. There's too much collusion, too many corrupt people willing to take advantage of looser reporting requirements. Al Gleason retired American voter.

Sent from my Galaxy

Allan Carden — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Allan Carden In the interest of Investor information and transparency, please keep the quarterly reporting requirements.

Allan Light — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Allan Light Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting keeps stock holders informed in a timely manner to support decision making. Half year reporting would keep them oblivious to challenges that jeopardize the reason to stay invested.

Get Outlook for iOS

Allan T. Templin Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Allan T. Templin I am totally against reducing reporting schedules, as this will definitely lead to diminished transparency within an organization that I may be financially involved in.

Allan Thomson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Allan Thomson Reducing the reporting requirements to half-yearly weakens the link between companies and shareholders- this can only lead to increased uncertainty, greater volatility and a reduction in trust.

Allen Grymes — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Allen Grymes Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 For 33 years as a teacher and principal, I was required to submit quarterly evaluations on students and teachers noting strengths and weaknesses that could be easily understood by parents and supervisors. I think CEO's are quite capable of submitting similar reports. The parents deserved these reports, as do citizens and consumers.

Allen Johnson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Allen Johnson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting quarterly!

Pretty much all public businesses rely on quarterly accounting.

"Everything should be made as simple as possible, but not simpler." - Albert Einstein

---

Allen Lahrman — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Allen Lahrman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need quarterly financial reports to make informed decisions.

Allen Shelton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Allen Shelton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a retired CPA, quarterly reporting should be maintained. With communications technology changing and improving every day, why would we go back to old reporting ways and methods. In the days of transparency, we should consider not just quarterly but perhaps monthly for larger businesses.

If you are running a business with debt most banks and other creditors require monthly or even daily financial reporting.
Why would we want to return to old reporting ways???

W. Allen Shelton II, West Virginia CPA #1325 retired

Sent from my iPhone

Allen Sisson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Allen Sisson I am against reducing the public-company reports from the current standard quarterly reports to semiannually. I own stock in several public companies. I find the quarterly reports very informative about how my companies are doing. Switching to only twice a year reporting will leave me in the dark for 6 months at a time as to how the businesses are preforming. This could easily lead to much more volatility in share prices when suddenly 6 months of good or bad news is announced. I do not think this reduction in reporting will lead to reduced costs for these public companies, since with the rapidly advocating AI tools becoming available to all compiling the information needed for reporting should become easier and less expensive. I also do not think this will lead to better long term company planning. Companies either take a long view or they don't. Reporting twice a year rather than four times will not change a CEO's management practices. It just allows them to hide bad performance longer if it is occurring. The current quarterly reporting system has worked well for decades. We should definitely stay with what we know works.

Allen Spangberg — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Allen Spangberg Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Timely Information is essential for me to make investment choices. I am very skeptical of the honesty of the current administration and corporations. Small investors, like me, have little power to hold corporations accountable, and frequent reporting is of great importance.

Thank You for the opportunity to comment
Allen

Allen Withington — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Allen Withington Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Allen Withington, retired Engineer. I’m strongly opposed to eliminating quarterly legally binding public financial reports.

Sent from my iPhone

Allise Burris — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Allise Burris Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: Quarterly reporting is important! With degrees in accounting and law, and litigation experience cleaning up the Savings and Loans, and other companies that traded stock on the open market, in addition to having sat on a number of non-profit boards, allowing financial reporters to go longer than a quarter without reporting makes it more than 4x harder to unwind fraudulent and self-dealing transactions. The only people it helps are those who want to defraud outside investors. Even with honest management, quarterly reporting needs to be required to keep all levels of management and the board aware of the current situation.
I urge you not to implement this rule change lest we returned to the mid-80s or 2008.

Allison — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Allison Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Right now, when money means more than ever before, people are struggling there’s no reason to change it.

Allison Bass

Allison Buettner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Allison Buettner Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is not the way to help the average American. Changing from quarterly to semiannually reporting does not help the public, who are the ones that are supposed to be pouring their hard-earned money into these stocks, but benefits the corporations who only want to turn a profit. And if these businesses fail during the 6 months, then the hard-working Americans that invested in these companies get hurt. Leave it as is. You're trying to "fix" something that isn't broken.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Allison Greene Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Allison Greene As investors, we deserve regular and transparent information. Reducing public company reports down from four to two times a year, just makes everyone less informed. This is not good for investors and ultimately, not good for companies! Thank you.

---

alma costin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: alma costin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Alma Costin, I worked in finance for over 40 yrs. Retired as a VP with a small community bank. I believe quarterly reporting is best for all. Just keeps everyone involved informed.

Alon Rozen Professor of Finance and Innovation, École des Ponts Business School — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alon Rozen To whom it may concern, while I understand the objective of reducing short-termism in US listed companies, moving to semiannual reporting will not impact that perspective and operational reality while it will impact transparency. Already the level of insider trading has reached all time highs in US markets, the longer the delays between reporting periods the higher the potential to gain an advantage through insider trading as the potential difference between forecasts and actual performance will be greater. It will boost the purchase of straddles as it will increase the volatility at the time of each of the two earning reports, and so instead of increasing the stability of markets it will contribute to higher volatility. In sum, the objective is lofty but the foreseeable consequences do not solve the problem and create additional problems that will reduce the quality of American stock markets.

Althea Ruffin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Althea Ruffin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There is enough information watered down, obstructed and redacted that the public needs to know, but don't because power always follows the money. They need to continue public reporting of this financial data. STOP protecting big business and screwing the public.

Sent from my iPhone

Alton Winkelman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alton Winkelman I agree with this proposal. More time between reports could result in more credible information.

Alvin Goldman CPA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alvin Goldman In response to the proposed Semi-Annual Reporting Rule, I believe it would be a mistake to pass it, Owners of a company need more current information than semi-annual would provide. It's as simple as that. Thank you for the opportunity to give you my opinion. Alvin H. Goldman , CPA

Alvin leung Doctor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alvin leung At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Alvin N Knopf The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alvin N Knopf As a shareholder, and therefore an owner, of publicly traded companies quarterly reports are essential to analyzing company operations and determining whether to remain involved as a shareholder. Changing to semi annual reporting creates a gap of 6 months and with rapidly changing economic conditions it makes deciding on an investment much more difficult.

Alyssa Hernandez — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Alyssa Hernandez My name is Alyssa Hernandez Newcomb and I work in insurance. We are not making a good decision here and the people deserve better. We are already struggling to get by and any oversight that could result in rising prices for consumers should absolutely be avoided.

Alyssa Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Alyssa Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hi, my name is Alyssa Smith. I am a Vendor Management Supervisor at an invesment management firm. I help maintain some of the records for our quarterly reporting. Being part of a firm that regularly grows by acquisition, I've seen some less than stellar financial best practices that needed to be brought up to date with a more rigid compliance code. Quarterly reporting helps ensure that baseline stays more transparent and that rules and guidelines stay more strictly adhered to. Yes, running those reports can be a pain, but they can also help find things that have been missed or trends that weren't noticed and need to be corrected. A lot can happen in 6 months, and it becomes a lot easier to hide and offset things in that time period, making the review of a 6 month filing that much more difficult for the SEC to catch problems. Please vote to keep filings quarterly, for the best interest of everyone.

Regards,

Alyssa Smith

Am Fredericks — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Am Fredericks Do not allow publicly held companies to decrease quarterly reporting to twice yearly. Businesses already internally track reporting monthly, or in some cases, by 13 reporting periods so management has frequent access to ongoing developments within operations. Investors, who have entrusted their capital to these management teams, are already denied access to these reports. Quarterly reporting is cumbersome and expensive. I understand, but if a business is willing to take public money, they have a responsibility to report to investors as to how the business is faring. If public money is not desired, buy the outstanding shares and go private, and determine how to report privately to the investors. The public requires quarterly reporting to maintain trust. Do NOT betray the public trust: no to semi-annual reporting!

Amanda Bonar — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Amanda Bonar Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It's the least they can do

Sent from my iPhone

Amanda Carrion — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Amanda Carrion Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is completely another way to steal money away from the American People and give all the power to the Oligarchy. This is evil and morally wrong.

Amanda L Carrion

Amanda Facer Olsen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Amanda Facer Olsen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No way! This is not good for us ! It is only easier and cheaper for you! Maybe it is time to take money out of the stock market and banks and keep it at home or credit unions. Could you get more corrupt? Everything this administration is doing is worse for the people and better for you making money !

Amanda Olsen
Certified Health Coach

Amanda Frederick — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Amanda Frederick Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm Amanda. I'm a clinical specialist and a mom. This is absolutely wrong and will only benefit the ultra rich. Publicly traded companies have an obligation to be transparent. This would allow insiders that are privy to the information enrich themselves while the rest of the small investors get screwed. We need to stop passing laws that benefit corporations and start passing laws to benefit the hard working people of this country.

Amanda Frederick

Amanda Kimmer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Amanda Kimmer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: keep reports quarterly!
Twice year isn't enough oversite.

Amanda LoBiondo — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Amanda LoBiondo Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To Whom it May Concern:

Please maintain mandatory SEC reporting. Transparency is essential to maintain investor confidence in U.S. securities markets, and to deter fraud and corruption. Publicly-traded companies should be performing quarterly reporting anyway. As a former managing director, in financial services, who reported to a board of directors, I strongly assert that quarterly reporting does not place an undue burden on organizations. In fact, it's essential in understanding one's own business. Please do not change this requirement to twice-yearly. Thank you.

Sincerely,
Amanda LoBiondo

Amanda Marshall — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Amanda Marshall Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
As we all have found out, the majority of our 3 letter agencies have been , & still are corrupt. We also know that 6 month reporting just opens the door for more dishonest, behind the scenes, charades to take place. If everything stays on the up& up , and everyone is treated fairly , then you won't have a problem keeping the quarterly reports that we are familiar with. I see no benefit to the members for you wanting to switch to 6 month reporting when you know quartly can find and correct any error faster and the ppl can keep up with their accounts much easier on a quarterly reporting system..

Amanda Rose — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amanda Rose We need more transparency to make informed investing decisions.

Amanda Saxton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Amanda Saxton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 For God's sake, it is not right to change the rules in the middle of the game.. We must have reports quarterly.
I am a Republican. Corporations and such entities cannot go dark for six months. Keep reports quarterly.
A C Saxton

Sent from my iPhone

Amanda Waggoner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Amanda Waggoner Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The efforts of this administration to deceive and steal from the american public are sadly very transparent. It would be more honest if they just admitted that they're going to hide and lie and steal.
Please show americans that you have some sense of love for this country and its people and hold these people accountable.

Mandy Waggoner, MS

Amanda Woomer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Amanda Woomer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

I write in support of preserving mandatory quarterly financial reporting for public companies and urge the Commission to resist any effort to move toward semi-annual or less frequent disclosure. Quarterly reports give ordinary investors the timely, reliable information they need to make informed decisions. Markets function on transparency, and a 90-day reporting cycle has long been the reasonable standard that balances the burden on companies with the public's legitimate need to know. Reducing that frequency would widen the information gap between institutional investors — who have access to management, analysts, and proprietary data — and individual shareholders who rely on public filings.
The argument that quarterly reporting encourages "short-termism" is not a reason to reduce disclosure; it is a reason to improve corporate governance. Concealing a company's condition for longer periods does not create long-term thinking — it creates opacity, and opacity invites abuse.
I urge the Commission to maintain current quarterly reporting standards and continue its historic mission of protecting investors through robust, regular disclosure.
Respectfully submitted,
Amanda Woomer

Amani — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Amani Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly earnings for transparency into the market.

Sent from my iPhone

Amani — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Amani Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly earnings,

Sent from my iPhone

Amani Tadros — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amani Tadros We need companies to report quarterly for more transparency on their businesses. I am against reporting only 2X a year.

Amber Banuelos — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Amber Banuelos Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Amber, I own a small business and I’m sick of large corporations making it even harder to get ahead while simultaneously ripping us all off. Stop supporting oligarchs, protect average Americans. If billionaires and their corporations didn’t exist, more Americans could prosper by having businesses of their own that cover the needs of their communities. Why is our government making it even harder for American businesses to succeed? Stop allowing fraud and stop hiding information from us all.

Sent from my iPhone

---

ambrose siers — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: ambrose siers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is a perfect example of what happens when you try to erase history. You don't learn from past mistakes. Quarterly reporting seems a safer and more equitably productive with no down-side.
Thank you.

Ambrose
Ambrose Siers
700 E. Stonegate Dr. Apt. 203
Oak Creek, WI 53154
Ambrosesiers871@gmail.com
(414) 690-7040

Ambuja Rajan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ambuja Rajan It's better if current rules prevails

---

Amelia Jennings — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Amelia Jennings Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Monthly or quarterly…transparency

Sent from my iPhone

Ami Belcher — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Ami Belcher Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: not acceptable! What is the point of this?

Amina Ford — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Amina Ford Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I do not want my investments to fund detention centers, IA or any other invasions of privacy.

Aminullah Qazi — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Aminullah Qazi Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please do NOT change the quarterly reporting period to semiannual reporting period.

Aminullah Qazi — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Aminullah Qazi Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting period quarterly

---

AMIR RA'EL — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: AMIR RA'EL Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop scamming the American people out of there liquidity for oligarchs

---

Amit Jain The motley foot community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amit Jain Changing the rule to only have semi-annual reporting causes investor to know what is happening with the companies we invest with. Please do not pass this new regulation.

Ammar Arnautovic — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ammar Arnautovic I think decreasing transparency is wrong in the modern era where we should all strive for openness and timely feedback.

Amol Dhakappa The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amol Dhakappa The proposal to allow companies to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake. More is better for reporting. It would be unfair to just hear from the company you own only twice a year.

Amol Soman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amol Soman The Motley Fool Community

---

Amruta — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amruta Keep it Quarterly. Do not want 6 months of blinding and no insight of what’s happening with my hard earned money

---

Amy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Amy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep reporting our investments quarterly! It’s the SEC’s job to make sure corporations work for us not for itself. Corporate transparency needs to stay transparent!

Amy Anderson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Amy Anderson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There is absolutely no good reason to change this. It is no burden to any company. I know this because I was responsible for this task for years. With today's technology, the reports prepare themselves with minimal work for any office staff. The only reason to change this is to provide less transparency. There is nothing about this that helps anyone.

Amy J Anderson

Amy Belice — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Amy Belice Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Amy Belice, owner. Quarterly reports allow for transparency. I'm in favor of quarterly reports.

Amy Belice
Sent from my iPhone

Amy Collins Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amy Collins I respectfully request that no changes be made to the requirements for companies to submit their 10K reports on a quarterly basis. As an individual investor, it is only through these reports that we can see that the companies are meeting their obligations to the investors by making appropriate business decisions, spending company funds in ways that benefit the company, the employees, the investors, etc. and for the common good. In a way, the reports, signed by the CEO, make the company's officers accountable and creates transparency as to the governance of the company. Thus, as a small and elderly investor, these reports are the only avenues of insight into the company's operations. Please do not cut down our source of timely information.

Amy Fall — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Amy Fall Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep the reports quarterly! Every investor has the right know on a quarterly basis.

Amy Fiorilla — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Amy Fiorilla Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
We need transparency in public companies. Do not allow less information than we've had for decades, companies need to report quarterly so that investors can have some assurance of what they're buying. Shutting down public information on publicly traded securities would feel like insiders and government officials would have an advantage the rest of us would be paying the bill. It feels corrupt.

Amy Fisher — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Amy Fisher Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please keep quarterly reports. We know that, given the chance, too many CEOs commit fraud. Let's learn from history and try NOT to repeat it.

Amy Hisey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Amy Hisey Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Wall Street gets away with enough. Keep the corporate reporting quarterly.

Amy Kendall — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Amy Kendall Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Don’t let the 1 percent cheat the 99 percent. Continue required quarterly reports!
Amy Kendall, pediatric occupational therapist

Sent from my iPhone
--Confidentiality Notice: The information contained in this e-mail may contain privileged and confidential information protected by federal and state privacy laws. It is intended only for the use of the person named above. If you are not the intended recipient, you are hereby notified that any review, dissemination, distribution, or duplication of this communication is strictly prohibited. If you are not the intended recipient, please immediately contact the sender by reply email and destroy all copies of the original message.

Amy Kezy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amy Kezy I am opposed to this change from quarterly to semi annual reporting. Transparency is necessary to mitigate uncertainty and assess performance more regularly for shareholders. Enormous change can occur in a six month time frame severely affecting the investment and share price.

Amy McManus — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Amy McManus Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it the same . We need a level playing field for the little ones guys.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Amy McManus — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Amy McManus Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the SEC the way it is. Don't stack the deck against the little guys

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Amy Nixon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Amy Nixon Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need financial posting to how a company is doing and that it is transparent to all. We do not hide how a company is doing financially and we need to be made aware of its short and long term progress, stability, and goals.

Sent from my iPhone

Amy Rice Medicine Professional Corp. Medicine — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amy Rice Medicine Professional Corp. Please don’t do this. We need the transparency. Amy Rice, former New Yorker living in Ontario, Canada, and an investor. Thank you Comments attached.

Amy Royal-Meisel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Amy Royal-Meisel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need the quarterly reporting. I do not want to change to semi-annually. We want transparency and accountability!

Sent from my iPad

Amy Rybicki — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Amy Rybicki Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
This is not okay. Why do we need less oversight when it comes to financial concerns. There is so much crap going on that this administration needs to focus on and instead you are focused on how to get as much money as you can from We the People. Focus on the things that matter to us providing healthcare, food insecurity and social programs that support the citizens. Instead you are worried about who has the most resources and gluttony. Proverbs 23:9, James 2:15'17, 1 John 3:17 and Galatians 5:19-21.
Are those versuses in YOUR bible? You need to focus on supporting We the People which are those who are not trillionaires, billionaires or millionaires.

Amy Smith none — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Amy Smith Please leave the reporting as is !

Amy Sue Smith — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Amy Sue Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is another horrible thing for the American people. Companies need to be more open about their business. Amy Smith

Sent from my iPhone

Amy W — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Quarterly reporting! From: Amy W Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Amy and I am a pet groomer. I believe every business, no matter how large, should be held accountable for legal and ethical behavior. Checks and balances for corporation as well. Quarterly reports with multiple witnesses leave less room for illicit choices from higher ups. Please keep reporting quarterly!

Amy Wright — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Amy Wright Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly earnings reports that are properly prepared are a necessary requirement for publicly traded companies. Investors need to have regular, reliable data when assessing investments. Chamging this requirement to bi-annual will only hurt investors, especially small investors. Keep it Quarterly!

Sent from my iPhone

An Pham — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: An Pham A proposal on the table is to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that's a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Ana Johnson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Ana Johnson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No, I do not agree to this!

Sent from AT&T Yahoo Mail on Android

Ana Jurgis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ana Jurgis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Simple : hard no.

Sent from my iPhone

Ana Louie — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: RE: File No. S7-2026-15 — Proposed Semiannual Reporting Rule From: Ana Louie

Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Ana Louie and I am also an 56 year old individual investor managing my own retirement portfolio which includes a rollover IRA and fixed annuity that represent the entirety of my family's retirement security. I was laid off from my job of 15 years in early 2025 and to date have not been able to secure another role. I do not have a pension. I do not have an employer backstop. What I have is access to public financial data, and quarterly reports are a cornerstone of that access.

I am writing to urge the Commission to retain mandatory quarterly reporting and reject the proposed shift to optional semiannual filing under File No. S7-2026-15.

This proposal benefits issuers. It does not benefit investors.

The framing of "flexibility" sounds reasonable until you follow the money. When the SEC last solicited comment on this in 2018, investor representatives broadly supported keeping quarterly reporting. It was preparers not investors who wanted semiannual reporting. Eight years later, the same asymmetry holds.

Information gaps create risk that retail investors absorb disproportionately.

I will soon be 57 years old and in the retirement accumulation phase. I cannot afford a 6-month blind spot in financial data for companies I hold. Institutional investors have access to alternative data, earnings networks, and sector intelligence that individual investors don't. Reduced periodic reporting could result in less analyst coverage concentrating market intelligence among sophisticated players while retail investors operate on stale data. That's not flexibility. That's a structural disadvantage baked into regulation.

The Commission cites excessive focus on quarterly earnings as justification for this rule. But short-termism is a management culture problem, not a disclosure frequency problem and the historical record shows that reduced financial scrutiny doesn't reform corporate behavior, it obscures it. The solution to bad incentives is not permission to go dark for six months.

I strongly urge the Commission to maintain quarterly reporting as the mandatory standard. The costs to investor transparency are too high a price to pay for issuer convenience.

Respectfully submitted,
Ana Louie
56 year old unemployed woman for a year and half to date
Cranford, NJ

Analisa McMullen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Analisa McMullen Reporting needs to happen quarterly to keep investors informed. If you would like to save costs, go paper free.

Anastasia Hillis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Anastasia Hillis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please keep reporting as it is now.

Anay Shah CEO, Peninsula Prep Tutoring — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anay Shah Reducing disclosures to only twice a year limits visibility to investors. They are, in reality, owners.

Anders Brew — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anders Brew Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 What are we doing? Every change this administration is pushing is truly bananas! It's like idiocracy on steroids! Isn't anyone there afraid of their complicity in this corruption? Don't you know that this will come back to put you and others in jail for enabling corruption like this? What are you gaining? That is corruption! This is your warning! It's illegal! Don't do it! Why would we be doing this? Pure corruption!

Andi Hamilton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Andi Hamilton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Andi Hamilton, Special Agent, Oklahoma. KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING. Americans deserve protection from predators who cheat the system and try to conceal monetary crimes.
The information contained in this e-mail message, and any files transmitted with it, is confidential and may be legally privileged. It is intended only for the use of the individuals or entities named above. If the reader of this message is not the intended recipient, or the employee or agent responsible to deliver it to the intended recipient, you are hereby notified that any dissemination, distribution or forwarding of this e-mail message is strictly prohibited. If you have received this e-mail message in error, please notify the sender and delete the material from any computer. Thank you for your cooperation. This email is being sent to an external email server outside of OSBI

Andre Bouve — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andre Bouve Less transparency doesn't help anybody. Not big investors nor small investors.

Andre Peloquin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Andre Peloquin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reports!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Andre Peloquin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Andre Peloquin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reports !!!

Sent from my iPhone

Andre Wooten — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Andre Wooten Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Makng Fraud and malfeasance harder to find is Not progress or right for the American public and individual stock investor. Do No Change This Rule!

Atty. Andre' Wooten

Virus-free.www.avast.com

---

andrea burke — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: andrea burke Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 In a time of all time self dealing and corruption, keep the disclosures quarterly. Frankly it could be monthly just to keep them more honest, if that would be possible.

Don't make it easier for them to do the wrong thing.

Andrea Gallagher — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Andrea Gallagher Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please keep quarterly reporting as the norm for the fair and open way of protecting investors, and our economy in general.
Thank you.
Andrea Gallagher

Andrea Geier — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Andrea Geier Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We the people are done with this fraud and abuse by corporations. Using the federal government to hide your wrongdoings. You will be exposed and pay the price. It is UnAmerican

---

Andrea Hamilton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Andrea Hamilton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Andi Hamilton, Special Agent, Oklahoma.
KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING. Americans deserve protection from predators who cheat the system and try to conceal monetary crimes.

Andrea Harrell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Andrea Harrell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There were reasons for placing this safeguard in place. The Qtrly Reports are needed Now more than ever. For accuracy, accountability, reliability, transparency, and evidence if need be. We don't need multiple Enron'.

Andrea Harrell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Andrea Harrell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There were reasons for placing this safeguard in place. The Qtrly Reports are needed Now more than ever. For accuracy, accountability, reliability, transparency, integrity, and evidence if need be. We don't need multiple Enron'.

Andrea Plamondon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrea Plamondon We need more transparency not less. When people are not held accountable via transparency bad things happen. Don't repeat the mistake that has already been repeated ad infinitum.

Andrea Robinson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Andrea Robinson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 In a day where the money's flowing up to the 1% and people are starving and trying to find a way to survive, when people are sent to war for no reason and when transparency is terrible and money is buying half the politicians if not all, it's a ridiculous time to loosen the rules so they oligarchs can make more money and hide what they're doing to the rest of us. We rely on the SEC to regulate and provide transparency as to what's allowed. Most people will never have a chance to earn so much money that they have to do quarterly reporting. And the people that have that kind of money have accountants to do the reporting. It is not a hardship! There is no way this is not just leading to more corruption.
Please reconsider and retain the standard that we have now. Why make it worse for the vast majority of people?

Andrea Robinson
24796 Avenue 18
Madera CA 93638

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Andrea Simpkins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Andrea Simpkins Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
please do not stop quarterly reporting! Please do not stop quarterly reporting!

thank you,
andrea simpkins

Andrea Singer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Andrea Singer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is just another way for the rich to stay rich and the blue collar worker to barely stay afloat and be screwed out of their hard earned retirement money. This is not right. Companies dont need relief they can use AI to easily report quarterly. I do NOT support this!

Andrea Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Andrea Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Making the quarterly reports matters, to end that hurts businesses that rely on the quarterly reports; it helps to be transparent.

Andrea Thomas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Andrea Thomas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency is essential for just economies. We know these guys' mission is to squeeze everything they can from us.

Andrea Utz — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Andrea Utz Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Do not back up. We don't need another Enron.

Andreas Richter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Andreas Richter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Of course we need to keep this quarterly. Full visibility would be even better. AI trades in milliseconds which makes 1/2 year eons of changes. Unless you can guarantee no insider trading this should be obvious.
Thanks
Andy

Principal Engineer

Andreea Boboc — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andreea Boboc I think it's a bad idea and that it will subject small investors to even more rumors and misinformation in the absence of clear company data.

Andrew Baker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Andrew Baker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep Quarterly Reporting. You represent us, not them.

---

andrew casciato — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: andrew casciato Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Over the last few generations we have seen that theft and graft are at all levels in our society. Reducing checks and balances is not the way to correct problems. Keeping your thumb on situations that could go out of hand quickly is something we need to maintain. Vote no.

Andrew Cohen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Andrew Cohen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why change it?
Andrew Cohen

Andrew Crews — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Crews Reducing the number of public reports by a company will reduce knowledge and make investing more risky for individual investors. Please don't allow this to happen.

Andrew Crow The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Crow Communication is one of the most important things in life. It's something we can all work to improve. Reducing the opportunities for the business leaders to communicate with the "owners" of the company is going to lead to greater uncertainty, thus greater volitility when it doesn't meet the assumptions.

Andrew Fillingim — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Fillingim Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please do not shift reporting to semi-annual. I can't imagine how this would be helpful for companies as a whole, as many investors would withdrawal. Radio silence for us as a family would render us and many other unable to invest...devoid of wisdom that quarterly reports offer.

Semiannual reports would be an alarmingly unwise and destructive move. I'm not sure how this is even a proposal.

Andrew Fillingim Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Fillingim We invest for the sake and future of our family. Per that risk, we pay close attention to quarterly reports to determine where we need to stay invested and what needs to be reevaluated. Allowing companies to keep investors like our family in the dark is so dangerous. Six months of silence when a company is going under could mean financial destruction for us. In light of that reality, if company transparency is removed by moving to semiannual reporting, we would protect by not investing. Many others would as well. Please preserve quarterly reports for all companies, both for the sake of their company and for investors/ families like our own that enjoy investing in great companies. Quarterly reports provide motivation and incentive for each company to continue to improve and celebrate with their investors. Less reporting will result in less value, innovation, and progress.

Andrew Fitch — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Andrew Fitch Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Insider trading is a crime against free markets and giving corporate insiders this much time between the minimal disclosures of business progress and or private stock transactions will only magnify the advantage those insiders and their cronies have over retail investors. The data is available daily in these companies and the hardship of presenting it every 90 days is a fiction. Investors have come to expect constant gains and growth at every reporting period and that too is a fantasy that is contrary to the way businesses grow and adjust to new technologies and circumstances. Longer term we need to see the facts and figure out whether the company is transitioning or mismanaging over time

---

Andrew Gray — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Gray Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: please keep reporting as is

---

Andrew Harrop — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Harrop Do not allow reduction in amount of company reporting from 4 to 2.

---

andrew hoffmann none — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: andrew hoffmann Why does the SEC think that individuals don't have the ability to digest information and make decisions in turn. In such a fast moving markets act like S7-2026-15 will limit our ability to make decisions and let insiders and hedge funds have the upper hand on the retail investor. VOTE NO , thank you

---

Andrew Hunt — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Hunt Hello, As a small time investor I think it is important to have up to date information. If i thought this change would help corporations make better long term decisions I would be for it BUT I do not think that is the case at all. This would only allow corporate boards to hide information over longer periods. I think providing information 4 times a year is important to all investors. Thank you.

Andrew Hutton Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Hutton I think semi annual reporting reduces access to key management information. Ultimately I am an owner in my public stocks and getting crucial information once every 6 months doesnt feel quite right. I am a long term investor but regular accountability for management teams is crucial for the public markets. One of the reasons I enjoy us stocks is the access to this information.

Andrew Lowe The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Lowe Costs of quarterly reporting is negligible compared to the business returns. There have countless times in recent history that show Boards and Executives behaviour and intent is not above board. Quartly reporting is part of the system of checks and balances.

Andrew Menefee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Menefee Quarterly reports offer critical insight into the health of a given company and provide consistent transparency on the fundamental details that tell an investor whether or not a position is worth the investment. Quarterly reporting is critical to what little clarity we retail investors expect from public markets. Doing away with it invites dishonest business practices and obfuscates potential risks or burgeoning inefficiencies in a given security. Maintain mandatory quarterly reporting.

Andrew Pawlak — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Pawlak Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:Please keep the reports as they are. I like to know what is going on as much as possible.
Thankyou

Andrew Qualls Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Qualls Inefficient and insufficient to limit disclosure to investors. This looks like a rule to avoid accountability to shareholders and the reasoning related to cost savings from reduced reporting is completely wrong.

Andrew Rafalski — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Rafalski Semiannual reporting is a bad idea. I have been investing most of my adult life and I know the more transparency into a business the better. When I invest I'm a partial owner of the company and the only objective information available to me is the quarterly reporting. So I am totally opposed to Semiannual reporting.

Andrew Rockwell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Andrew Rockwell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Andrew Rockwell, Union Electrician, Making investments is gonna be even riskier than before? Nah, I'm tired of this crap! I'm pulling my money, gonna tell my family and friends what's happening and they should pull their money too. Makes me wonder...if enough people yank their money, would companies go under for lack of investors? When people see the companies fail, will there be a "run on the banks"? Just how bad would it be this time?

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Andrew Schort — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Schort Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need MORE accountability from corporations, not less!

Andrew Snape Motley fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Snape I think this is a bad idea, results and situations need ro be reported AT. LEAST quarterly

---

Andrew Southgate — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Southgate Two reports a year is absolutely crazy retail investors are already behind the 8 ball. Every invester deserves to know what is going on minimum of four reports a year. For example SMCI had cooked books twice now with out transparency four times a year investors will be wiped out.

Andrew Spence-Wolrich Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Spence-Wolrich At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right? We should keep quarterly reporting.

Andrew Stuckey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andrew Stuckey Investing is possible only with accurate and timely information. Without that information, it is merely gambling. I oppose the proposal to limit company reporting to only twice a year for this reason.

---

andrew uhlak — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: andrew uhlak Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 PAY THE TAXES MONTHLY,QUARTERLY TAXES STILL ALLOW THEM TO STEAL BILLIONS YEARLY

Andrew Wallach — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Andrew Wallach Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am a retired money manager who is still an active investor. I strongly support the continuation of quarterly reporting in order to provide reasonable transparency to investors. Best, Andrew Wallach

Sent from my iPhone

Andy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andy Please do not reduce the amount of reports required by companies. Less information is less-informed investors. Please keep reporting at its current level. Thank you.

Andy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andy I do not like this idea!

Andy Blair — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andy Blair Dear SEC, I do not support the proposal for companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from 4/year to 2/year. My retirement funds are invested with a variety of companies. I do not trust these companies to act in my interest. They will act in their perceived interest. If we allow them to reduce their reporting obligations to me as the investor, there will be a greater lag in accountability on the decisions these companies make. Reporting allows us as investors to remain informed and engaged in the companies that we are part owners of. This proposal allows companies to hide from the people that own them. That does not sound wise. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Andy Blasband The Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andy Blasband Please maintain the quarterly reporting requirements for publicly traded companies. I base my decisions on whether to invest in a company based on REAL data provided by the company, not projections or other fantasized information. Reducing the reporting requirements from four to two per year would negatively impact my ability to make informative and educated decisions on what companies to invest in. More information, is always better for the individual, small-time investors. Reporting only two times per year would put immense pressure on investment decisions as investors would have to essentially guess how the business was doing in the interim six month periods of no information. I don't see how reducing reporting to two times per year benefits the investment community as it's not a burden for companies to report quarterly now, in fact it's better for them to keep their owners/investors informed espeically if the company is doing well. Please keep the current reporting period at four times per year. Thank you

---

Andy Coren — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Andy Coren Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting helps curb fraud & abuse.

Sent from my iPad

Andy Frueh — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Andy Frueh Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 MORE information is needed MORE often to MORE people. We don't need less regulation. We need more to ensure the greedy criminals don't touch aunt edna's retirement.

Andy G — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andy G Retail Investors need more opportunities to hear from companies, not less! We do not have access to many forums that professional analysts are invited to. There are very few (esp. no cost) opportunities to directly hear from key executives of public companies. Quarterly reporting should continue and allow us ordinary investors to get an update on our investments. AI and automation will dramatically cut down the time and effort required to provide quarterly updates. Companies owe this basic duty to their shareholders… let's not give them an easy out here.

Andy Irvine — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Andy Irvine Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop helping wealthy crooks hide their crooked ways

---

Andy Kozyr — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Andy Kozyr Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
This is suboptimal

Andy Rosemeyer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andy Rosemeyer I need more transparent communication from companies I own not less.

Andy Simpson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Andy Simpson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please leave it the way it was redesigned for accountability for all top CEO's. Don't give them the free out of jail card they're desperately seeking. It will hurt all of us!

Andy Sohn — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andy Sohn I urge the SEC to maintain the current requirement that public companies issue financial updates quarterly, instead of allowing them to report semi-annually. As a long-time individual investor, I rely on quarterly reports for insights into how the businesses I've invested in are performing. Eliminating that requirement would significantly reduce the critical information and transparency that millions of individual investors need to make informed decisions that greatly impact our financial futures.

Andy Wright — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Andy Wright As an individual investor in public equities I rely on routine quarterly updates from companies I own via stock. It is my strong belief that transparency, including routine quarterly information (10Q filings) is essential. I don't think moving to semi-annual filings is in the interest of the many individual investors like me, and strongly request maintenance of quarterly reporting requirements for public companies.

Aneesh Gowri — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Aneesh Gowri Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: Please make companies report on a quarterly basis. Thanks!

Anemaria — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anemaria In a social system in which people need to build their own retirement savings, and/or pensions administered by third party institutions, quarterly standardized disclosure remains a structural pillar of accountability. Do not eliminate the quarterly reporting.

Angel Harp — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Angel Harp Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Angel Harp. I’m retired from 30 years as a state public servant. I want to keep seeing quarterly reports. It’s important to me because this Administration has shown us that they support criminality and cater to corporations. I want that accountability.

Sent from my iPhone

Angel Johnson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Angel Johnson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Do not go forward with these blackouts . The consumer needs to know and have full information available at all times .

Angel Poynter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Angel Poynter Please do not pass this rule allowing publicly held businesses to reduce from 4 to 2 reports per year. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Angel Rivera — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Angel Rivera Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I want my quarterly reporting as is for my protection! Stay status Quo

Sent from my iPhone

Angela — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Theifs don't u dare change this From: Angela Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 You better keep quarterly reports you guys are crooks I know the minutes you try to pull this you guys are robbing America

---

Angela Best — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Angela Best Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please do not end quarterly reports. We need access to information and more transparency not less!

Angela Costantini — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Angela Costantini Business owners deserve transparency. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the information pipeline. Having ill-informed owners increases uncertainty and volatility within the business. CONTINUOUS DEREGULATION HARMS THE PUBLIC BY MAKING COMPANIES AND CORPORATIONS UNGOVERNABLE AND ULTIMATELY UNSTOPPABLE.

Angela Delia Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Angela Delia Absolutely need to have quarterly reports. Reducing this to biannually would be incredibly shady. With AI analytics,we would expect more information not less. It’s evident that the mag seven would prefer biannual reports because they will not seem to do so well over these next few years due to costs of setting up AI etc but that’s business. Don’t keep information away from us just for their optics.

Angela Dorneden — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Angela Dorneden Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is necessary.

Bi-annual reporting is a terrible idea. Do you want the US to devolve even further into Russia?! You need to enforce the laws we have in place, then you can look at changing their frequency. I was Series 6 and 63 certified.

Sent from my iPhone

ANGELA FAMIGLIO — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: ANGELA FAMIGLIO Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please Do The Right Thing and KEEP IT as it is. We need more accountability/ checks abs balances. Not less
AMF , 75 yr old Retired Industrial Engineer

Sent from my iPhone

Angela Federici — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Angela Federici Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting works to help with accountability. The only reason to reduce this is to reduce accountability, which is not in the public's best interest. It is your job to work for the public's best interests, in case you have forgotten. Please act accordingly. Thank you!
Angela Federici, high school civics teacher so this matters to me for obvious reasons. I am a concerned citizen educating future concerned citizens.

Sent from my iPhone

Angela Geiselman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Angela Geiselman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 PLEASE VOTE NO on this!!

All organizations need quarterly reporting to disclose where the money is going, because it's our money, not theirs - we have our retirement assets invested in these companies. This proposed change makes the rich richer (our current President has made it crystal clear that he doesn't care about our citizens financial condition! Meanwhile, he, his family, friends and supporters have been bilking our country and through unethical behavior all at the expense of our hardworking taxpayers who can't afford gas, food, healthcare or housing!! VOTE NO!!

Angela Kinsey (Motley Fool) — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Angela Kinsey (Motley Fool) Please keep companies reporting their earnings and health of business quarterly as has been the norm. It would cause business owners much fear if we invested in a company and had to wait 6 months to see how it was doing. We need more transparency not less especially with AI and all the leaks and lies in our information systems.

Angela Loftin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Angela Loftin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
DONT CHANGE THE SYSTEM OF REPORTING ON PAPER.

Angela Ryan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Angela Ryan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is no hardship for the companies! It keeps things transparent! Makes investing more likely!

Angela Sander — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Angela Sander Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I've been in the finance industry since the dot com boom, through the great recession and beyond. The only way we knew what was coming was full disclosure on a quarterly basis. We NEED to keep quarterly reporting, lest we erode public trust and investing as we know it ceases to exist for the every day investor. Please keep quarterly reporting.

Angela Sander

Sent from my iPhone

Angela Shockley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Angela Shockley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do not allow any one to hide the status of their actions. Keep transpancy in place. I watch my retirement on the regular and expect up to date data.

Angelia Gnagy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Angelia Gnagy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is gate keeping in the highest degree. People are getting tired of the system continually being rigged against us.

Please keep reporting quarterly

Angelia Gnagy
Powell Ohio

Angelica Green — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Angelica Green Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Not at all. Intergral reporting is the only way to rebuild trust. People have been misinformed and let down by corporate businesses too many times.

---

angelika gritzka — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: angelika gritzka Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Investors of all stripes should be informed about the company's financial position and how they will handle any financial transaction or financial difficulties. It's our investments and we should have the same right to know what when and how the companies we invest in are doing. No 6 months and others get to know right away, that’s double standards and that is wrong with this business model. Keep reporting to your investors every 3 MONTHS, that is fair and reasonable.

Sent from my iPhone

---

angelika gritzka — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: angelika gritzka Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Investors of all stripes should be informed about the company’s financial position and how they will handle any financial transaction or financial difficulties. It’s our investments and we should have the same right to know what when and how the companies we invest in are doing. No 6 months and others get to know right away, that’s double standards and that is wrong with this business model. Keep reporting to your investors every 3 MONTHS, that is fair and reasonable.

Sincerely hope,
G. Angelika RoquinaGritzka
Sent from my iPhone

Angelina Anderscunt — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Angelina Anders * Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Do better.

Angelle Gullett — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Angelle Gullett As a small retail investor, transparency and frequency of information is critical to keeping me investing in the companies listed on various stock indices. This rule change is unnecessary and ill-advised. Quarterly reporting should remain the regulated norm.

Angelo Dieguez — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Angelo Dieguez Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The removal of the time-tested protection, that is currently in place. Would legitimately cause a great many retail investors to abandon investing in the market. Out of fear of what could then occur to a company, in between semi-annual reporting. Too much can already happen between quarters.

Angelo Garcia — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Angelo Garcia Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why should CEO's be able to cut their accountably? They make 10 times more than the average worker, they should also have 10 times the scrutiny. What you are trying to do is being paid for by those same individuals. Who do you work for? The average American worker deserves better than what you are currently doing. If you don't hold them accountable, then we, the average American will make sure to hold YOU accountable. Show us that you can represent us, and we will keep you in your position. Show us otherwise and you will be held accountable, your time is short, and our anger is rising. Thank you, your average American Worker.

Sent from my iPhone

Angels Retreat — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Angels Retreat Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No more breaks for greedy corporations, help we the people for a change!

Keep them accountable!

Rachel Doll

Angie — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Angie Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep reporting.... Why would you allow companies to half a$$ report when they are dealing with other people's lives and money. That's not right. You wouldn't want someone doing that with your money and lives stop doing it with ours. This is why people don't trust government or companies..... You all don't want it being done to you but you are all to willing to do it to us like we have no voice. This is how you push people to rise up and Really Fight Back. WE ARE TIRED OF BEING F' ed OVER. JUST KEEP PUSHING US

Angie Kowalkowski — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Angie Kowalkowski Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
STOP. JUST STOP.
NO MORE *ING OVER THE AMERICAN PEOPLE FOR THE GREEDY RICH PEDOFIAL GENOCIDAL NAZICE TRAITORS.
WE'RE RISING.

Angus Waterstone — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Angus Waterstone Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Michael Field, Electrician, Cosby, Tennessee.
this would be detrimental for so many reasons. One most corporate suppliers to my industry would have the ability to change the cost of thier products to fit their own gendas, while having the certain extra time to change thier reporting with out your knowledge. subtle at first. but over time would hurt consumers, supply stores and chains, the actual cost for the technicians and the customer of the technician. unfortunately it rolls down hill and the every day person needing those services will take the brunt of the cost needing those services.
It will also give those companies more tax advantages, allowing them to pay more in taxes. I fell it every day being a 1099 subcontractor. There have been situations where I personally could not accept work because of the cost. It's not just one company, it is multiple companies that combined are creating the issue. this will cause an escalation in fraud, consumer protection laws, and infrastructure. Please do not let this happen. The ramifications of this will be felt for years without any short term recovery.

Sent from my Galaxy

Anilla LaMalia — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anilla LaMalia Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Seriously…??? WTH? STAY TRANSPARENT…keep the quarterly reports as they are now. PLEASE do not add to the problems we are facing today in the US.

Animal Supply Shop — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Animal Supply Shop Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Heather Cagle and I am a CNA. We need more transparency, not less. This will lead to bad investments and corporate chicanery.

Aniruddha — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aniruddha I believe this ruling is not good for the general public. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. So, kindly do not move ahead with this ruling as it only serves to hurt the general public.

Anirudh Singh — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anirudh Singh Just this change doesn't seem to be in the interest of shareholders and i want to oppose it.

Anita Andres — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anita Andres Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting should be a minimum frequency to keep a level of awareness public.
Anita Larson Andres
Retired Lead Software Engineer/Designer

Anita Barnas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anita Barnas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is a staple of generally accepted accounting practices. Haven't we learned our lesson from earlier actions. Please continue SEV quarterly reporting requirements. My name is Anita Barnas, Walnut Creek, CA.

Sent from my iPhone

Anita D-G — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anita D-G Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a widow living on retirement savings in stocks, I am writing to urge the SEC to keep quarterly reporting. I remember Enron, and quarterly reporting is meant to prevent another Enron, to prevent fraud and corruption. I am dismayed at the erosion of oversights in this administration. This is another attempt to take power away from the people and invest it in corporations and insiders with cozy relationships to those corporations.
Anita Dugat-Greene

Anita DiDonato — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anita DiDonato Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is important and must be maintained to ensure that Public companies are reporting their financial results honestly.

A.M.Donato- share holder

Get Outlook for Android

Anita Erikson Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anita Erikson I would like for you to ensure that companies continue to provide quarterly reports that are thorough and transparent. As the holder of a wide range of companies, I want more information, not less. Thank you.

Anita Fanshaw — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anita Fanshaw Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Be held accountable to all. No loopholes.

Anita Jensen — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anita Jensen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Anita Jensen Business Manager/Bookkeeper
Regular reporting is a invaluable snapshot into the health of an organization. Without monthly or quarterly reporting managers, investors, owners and governmental agencies are driving blind in their decision making. The SEC needs to keep public companies PUBLIC by requiring quarterly reporting.

Anita Latulippe — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anita Latulippe Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is my money they are using and I am not happy with the idea of only knowing about it every six months. I have the right to know what if I need to change things

Sent from my iPhone

Anita M — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anita M Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Writing as an investor it is essential that we have reliable quarterly information that allows us to know how companies are doing. Do not do away with quarterly reporting.

Sent from iPad

Anita Malpica — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anita Malpica Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It's very sneaky to go dark for 6 months!?! People need to be informed. Keep the quarterly reporting! Thank you. Anita Malpica school assistant

Sent from my iPhone

ANITA REILLY — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: ANITA REILLY Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 You must keep the quarterly reports to keep those CEOs in line! It would be disastrous if you'd only do it twice a year!

Sent from my iPhone

Anita Smith None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anita Smith In re: reducing corporate financial reporting to twice a year. I disagree with this concept. I have been an individual investor since 1972. I make decisions based on reading articles from several investment sources; from which, I learn about the financial status of companies. I find it incredibly inappropriate to report only twice a year. Also, as a former owner of a small business, it is inconceivable that we, as the owners, could have made informed decisions on only 2 reports a year. In fact, we requested reports monthly. Please do not go forward with this proposal. Regards,

---

Anita Woolley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anita Woolley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We lived through and remember the Enron scandal. Honest CEO's have no problem with the quarterlies. NOW is always the time for accountability and transparency.
Anita Woolley, Retired Educator

Anita Woolley
Voter Service Chair
LWV Cy-Fair
281-415-7649
anitawoolleyaw@gmail.com

Ankit Nagam — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ankit Nagam Implementing semiannual reporting will severely disadvantage retail investors by reducing financial transparency. Quarterly updates are absolutely critical for making timely, well-informed investment decisions. I strongly urge regulatory bodies to reject semiannual reporting and maintain the current quarterly standard.

---

ann barry — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: ann barry Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is the only way for small investors to keep tabs on their investments. Together we small investors are enough to wield some weight to curb waste. I am retired, in my late sixties, and watch my investments closely. Unfortunately, recently (and not so recently) the investment business has been fraught with fraudulent business practices that are important to know when making investing decisions. It may make things easier for business, but MUCH more difficult for small investors like us. Please keep the schedule for reporting as is.
Ann Barry. Hillsborough, CA

Sent from my iPhone

Ann Bermingham — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Ann Bermingham Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am a retired woman living on my investments. I want to have quarterly reporting so I have a bit of a chance to know what is happening. Six months is too long. Do NOT change this.

Ann Bogan Physician — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ann Bogan Do not make this change to every 6 months. Keep the reporting quarterly. Transparency to the public is of utmost importance.

Ann Cherry — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Ann Cherry Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I want the quarterly reports for my investments. It allows me flexibility and accountability.

Ann Clinkscales — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Ann Clinkscales Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please do not allow bad actors even more time before the truth comes out!?

Ann Colwell-Tucker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Ann Colwell-Tucker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Absolutely NO to the proposal to end quarterly reporting on our investments.
In this era of open grifting from so many once trusted government officials, this looks like an underhanded, dishonest proposal. Your job is to protect American Investors. This proposal is not protection.

Ann DeCelle — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Ann DeCelle Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
The laws, statues and regulations that govern this issue must be kept in place for the process of fairness, honesty and truth.

Ann Eilers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ann Eilers I oppose this proposal. Corporations owe their investors timely quarterly information in order to make informed investment decisions. The quarterly reporting requirement should be maintained especially for large publicly traded corporations whose complex financials require more routine reporting and reviews. Maintaining quarterly reporting also limits fraud due to additional public scrutiny and requirements for corporate executives to complete additional due diligence to avoid criminal penalties as they certify their quarterly reports and vouch their awareness of the absence of fraud. This same review and due diligence also has the potential to remedy any fraud identified prior to it increasing to a size where it impacts investors or markets.

Ann Faro — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Ann Faro Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
We want and need quarterly reporting. This helps us follow and assure our savings and investments are handled safely and appropriately.

Thank you

Ann H — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ann H Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Not good for me. Though I don't check my investments daily, I do check them every month. Why would anyone think this is good for investors? Please don't change. Us little investors need all the help we can get.

Ann Hunter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Ann Hunter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency into corporate investments & returns benefits ALL investors - the better all members of a society are, the stronger & more resilient to economic recessions & depressions the society remains - including & especially those most heavily invested. Opacity to results & returns only shelters questionably nefarious corporations & investors.

Sent from my iPhone

Ann Kelly — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ann Kelly Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am a fairly intelligent nurse who is held accountable for everything I do. I expect the SEC to be just as accountable to me !!!

Sent from my iPhone

Ann Kohlsaat — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Stop The SEC Steal S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ann Kohlsaat Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There is enough corruption going around, and this was supposed to be the "transparency" Administration.

Quarterly reporting is the financial standard, stays with our accounting traditions and quells WASTE, FRAUD & ABUSE. For once, do the RIGHT thing for the American people, not Wall Street & CEOs.

Sincerely,
WE THE PEOPLE
via the PFKAR
PartyFormerlyKnownAsRepublican❤🇺🇸💙

Thanks,

Ann in Kansas

Ann McStay — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Ann McStay Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting keeps companies and their executives on their toes. Executives receive often-outsized compensation, and their ethical behavior is paramount so the companies' employees, shareholders and other affected parties need to see transparency regarding those executives' investment holdings and transactions, along with other financial involvements, in order to prevent self-dealing, insider trading, theft of corporate assets or other valuable physical and intellectual property.

Ann Murray — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ann Murray Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Once again the rich are trying to hide their accountability for making the financial markets less safe. Our retirement money and other investments depend on having sound banking and investment practices.
Ann Murray
Farmer
2084 Long Meadow Rd.
Waynesboro, VA 22980

Ann V. Murray

Ann Onymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ann Onymous The current system with quarterly reports works fine; why break it. It does not put a burden on the company. I am against this proposed rule. This leads to less transparency and more uncertainty.

Ann S. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Ann S. Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am a small business owner in Buffalo, NY. for whom returns on investments are a large part of my income. Without quarterly reports to rely on, I would be hard pressed to make informed choices as to which stocks should be added to or culled from my portfolio. Allowing companies to report biennially is a bad idea that I do NOT support! This lunacy which favors corporate executives and insiders is NOT in the public’s best interests and should be abandoned at once!

Ann Schneider — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ann Schneider Reducing reporting requirements to twice a year would decrease the flow of information available to investors and the public. Quarterly reporting helps maintain confidence in the markets and encourages greater corporate transparency as well as preventing possible undermining of investor confidence in the stock market. I believe the current system should be preserved and twice a year reporting would lack the necessary information the companies need and the investors in the companies need and deserve. Thank you.

Ann Steinemann — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ann Steinemann I am a long-time investor. I am strongly against only getting semi-annual supports from the companies to which I am a shareholder. It's not enough transparency and I believe will only increase market volatility.

Ann Tiedeman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Ann Tiedeman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: This proposed rule would blindfold retail investors and give insiders who have access to information an unfair advantage. Keep the quarterly rule in place.

Ann Van Damme — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Ann Van Damme Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As an informed investor, I want to see the reports quarterly. Otherwise, my question is what are they hiding?

Ann W — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Ann W Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I want to see quarter updates! They are importatna and vital pieces of information for investors to make the best decisions for themselves. 6 months is much to long how can anyone make decisions without knowing.

Ann Warner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ann Warner Please keep reporting at 4x/year instead of twice annually. As an owner, it is important to have as much information as possible. Thank you for your consideration.

Ann Whitehead — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ann Whitehead NOT IN FAVOR of the change to semi-annual reporting. In order to make informed decisions concerning my retirement account, I need as much information and transparency as possible, not less. Semi-annual reporting will only cause harm to the American people.

Ann Wood — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ann Wood It is important for investors and the economy to be able to see how companies are performing on a quarterly basis. Please do not change the rule. If we can't see quarterly performance we won't be investing anymore.

Ann's — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Ann's Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Ann c CPA
This is so important to keep accountability. I worked in public accounting and it keeps people honest and from cooking the books for short term gains that are really just balance sheet bingo.

Sent from my iPhone

Anna — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anna Greater transparency for individual investors seems like the better option, so let's preserve it.

Anna Bettencourt — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anna Bettencourt Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is ridiculous the only thing it's going to accomplish is regular people will stop investing. But that's the goal right.

Anna Boeder Account Executive, Solution Design Group — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anna Boeder I would like public companies to continue to be required to provide financial reporting on a quarterly basis. It is essential to shareholders to have transparency as well as the company to have accountability to its investors. The proposal to reduce that to semi-annually will reduce transparency to shareholders.

Anna Dearmond — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anna Dearmond Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I shouldn't have to add my name nor my job title. I'm an American citizen and I firmly believe they should be reporting monthly. Any idea of cutting it in half is absurd.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anna Fierro The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anna Fierro I do not approve of quarterly business reporting to be reduced to bi-annual. I want to be more informed, not less informed.

Anna Hall — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anna Hall I manage my IRA investments and want to keep quarterly reports. I need all the information I can get. If companies want to take a longer term approach to growing their business they should just say so in their investor call.

Anna Kokourina — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anna Kokourina Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Financial reporting must be kept quarterly in order to safeguard consumer investment and retirement savings.

Sent from my iPhone

Anna Marie White — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anna Marie White A proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake! Investors need to keep abreast of business growth and decline. Twice per year reporting to share holders is not adequate.

Anna Salazar — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anna Salazar Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I like getting my quarterly statement every 3 months so that I can make changes if I want to and know what is going on with my finances.

Sent from my iPhone

Annalisa Hall — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Annalisa Hall Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Oh hell no. This is ridiculous.

Annalisa

Anne Bailey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anne Bailey Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Fair to the average investor

Sent from my iPhone

Anne Bossy Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne Bossy Please do not reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two.

Anne Brady — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anne Brady Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep CEOs and companies feet to the fire. We need transparency and honesty in business practices. Stop trying to help businesses cheat and break the kaw.We don't need another ENRON!

Anne Chaisson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anne Chaisson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly CEO signatures. We must have accountability.

Anne Chaisson, non-profit arts executive. Non-profits have to so should for profit companies.

Anne Chaisson
Founder and Producer
DIRTY RICE FILMS
Former Executive Director
Hamptons Film Festival
@anni_chas

Anne Chambers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anne Chambers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is essential in this age! I want to know at least quarterly! A. Chambers, retired.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anne Coburn — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anne Coburn Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Terrible idea for no good reason!! Strongly oppose this! This just opens up rampant fraud possible, limits timely and valuable data & little savings benefit to companies. DON’T SO IT!!!
Anne Coburn,
Tucson AZ

Anne Dvorak — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anne Dvorak Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I can't afford this gamble and will withdraw my investment. I imagine a lot of us will. Then it becomes your gamble.

Anne Fisler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anne Fisler Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep Quarterly reporting!

Anne Fleming — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne Fleming I have been an investor for my entire life and my family before me. I am incredibly disappointed at the idea that companies will only need to report to their shareholders twice a year. That will undermine the confidence of investors and make it less safe for small investors to be protected. It ultimately could put everyone at more risk. DO NOT DO THIS.

Anne G — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne G What singular benefit could this provide to the individual investor? Because that is, who is the most vulnerable in this scenario. Businesses aren't vulnerable. Businesses are making record profits. It's not hurting them to do what they've always done which is provide quarterly information. Only institutional investors would benefit and guess what? Us little guys. We get screwed in the end again.

---

anne girard — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: anne girard Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop this!

ANNE GRIMES — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: ANNE GRIMES Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Nothing Less than Quarterly !!
Anne Grimes of Colorado - in order to understand and control our finances - we Need the accurate Information !!! It is Not a burden to report every 3 months…..

Sent from my iPhone

Anne Herold-Short — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anne Herold-Short Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is outrageous. There is no ethical reason that such an advantage should be given to some and not others. -- Ann Herold-Short

---

Anne J Edwards — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anne J Edwards Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am a healthcare worker and an investor. I have a 403b and I think we should leave it at quarterly to keep it fair for all people we are saving for our future. It's a struggle we have to make sacrifices so we can afford to retire and please don't make this more difficult or more stressful leave it quarterly
Anne Edwards

Get Outlook for Android

Anne Kirby — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anne Kirby Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I oppose the SEC proposal to give corporations additional months to file their reports. Everyday American investors will lose money in the stock market if corporations are allowed additional months to file their reports under the SEC’s proposed change. Only the big corporations and their insiders will benefit from this proposal to take the stock market back 50 years. The SEC exists to protect investors not to harm them through corporate friendly policies.

Anne Kirby, Attorney at Law

Anne Lynk — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anne Lynk Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Gotta watch the hands n the till. QUARTERLY!

Sent from my iPhone

Anne M Caney — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne M Caney Please support the small investor in supporting the current practice of requiring companies to report their financials and relevant data (4) times annually. I'm not a millionaire. I rely on my investments to supplement my quality of life in retirement. As a shareholder, I'm an owner in the company and feel that I'm entitled to all the information available to make wise investment decisions. There is far too much evidence these days of questionable business practices and to have less government oversight undermines my confidence in the system at large. Both as a consumer and investor, I rely on my government's support. Thank you

---

Anne Marie Kempf — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anne Marie Kempf Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm Anne Marie Kempf, a semi-retired attorney who is living on the income from my investment portfolio. With inflation reigniting, it is getting harder and harder to make ends meet. I cannot afford to be without the critical information supplied by quarterly corporate reporting. It is NOT in the public's best interest to allow public companies to only report semi-annually. Keep the reporting requirement Quarterly!

Anne Marie Kempf
Attorney at Law
4603 Camellia Place
Nashville, Tennessee 37216
(502) 819-6491 mobile

Anne Marigza — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anne Marigza Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Anne M., government employee. Quarterly reporting provides a clearer picture of the economy for those guiding our retirement and pension funds. Half the reports means half the information that likely arrives too late to act on.

Anne McAvoy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne McAvoy I am a retired small investor. It is critical to me that I have at least quarterly reports about the companies in which I am invested. Businesses can't operate without very timely information and as an owner, albeit of a tiny piece of the business, I need and want that as well. There may be a small extra cost to generate these reports, but with all the current technologies available for data collection and analysis these costs are smaller than ever. Openness and accountability are crucial to maintain faith in our financial markets and I strongly urge you to reject this proposal.

Anne McIntyre — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anne McIntyre Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Setting up for fraud.

Sent from my iPhone

Anne Moltchanoff — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anne Moltchanoff Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We want financial transparency and often. This is taking us backwards. As an investor is very important for me to get the quarterly results.

Anne moltchanoff, Private investor

Anne Mullenniex — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anne Mullenniex Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Anne Mullenniex
California
CEOs cannot be allowed to defraud the American people. It took a long time to hold them to account, please don't stop now.

Blessings,

Anne Mullenniex

Art removes all boundaries; it speaks to the heart and the soul, bypassing the noisy mind.

Anne Pardun — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anne Pardun Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To whom it may concern,
I'm writing to express concern about the proposed change to the SEC reporting timeline. I think 6 month reporting is too long and creates a disadvantage for me as an investor. I think the current 3 month (quarterly) reporting schedule serves the average investor much better.
I am a retired psychologist. 70 years old and born in 1955 when the 3 month reporting was established. Please keep it that way. Make an old lady feel heard!

Sincerely,
Anne S Pardun

Sent from my iPhone

Anne Pentecost Motley fool community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne Pentecost As an investor I find it critical that I keep informed of new innovations, proposed products a myriad of things. It's important that I make good choices based on company reports & benchmarks . I anxiously await quarterly reports to see how I'm doing ! Please don't reduce reports . We need them !!

Anne S Celander — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne S Celander Two financial reports a year is not enough.. .especially with the volatility that we are experience in every part of our lives at this point in time.

Anne Sachs — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Keep Qtrly Reports From: Anne Sachs Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Accurate & timely, quarterly reports are a minimum expectation for investors as well as employees!

Anne Tunney, Motley Fools — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anne Tunney, Motley Fools The rampant corruption and collusion being carried out in this criminal felon dump regime does not protect consumers. You are making grave errors of your thinking this rampant corruption will stand. Shame on you for selling your soul to a demented felon corrupt criminal and malignant narcissist Felon Dump. What you are doing will have repercussions.

Annelise Stighall — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Annelise Stighall Do not reduce the number of quarterly reports. Keep the transparency!

Annette Engel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Annette Engel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is BULL *. How about you go after Trump for all his market manipulation. ARE YOU ALL MAGAt idiots?

Annette Graunke — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Annette Graunke Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is important that this information is available quarterly so investors know the current and projected status of companies and know where to put their money.

Annette Hess — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Annette Hess Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Isn't there already enough insider trading??? Quarterly should be thr minimum! Just stop this grift already

---

Annette Hess — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Annette Hess Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Are you nuts? Stop the grifting!

Annette Siffin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Annette Siffin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly reporting. Please stand up for everyday Americans who work hard for their savings, instead of allowing us to be fleeced by corrupt, unsavory interests that are only motivated by greed.

Annie Cameron — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Annie Cameron Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is essential for investors to keep an eye on the health of the companies they are investing in. Reducing the frequency of reporting will put investors at risk and signal to the rest of the world that we don't take risk seriously.

Annie Croner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Annie Croner We need transparency!

Annie Dean — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Annie Dean Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hello,

I'm a retail investor and I rely on quarterly reports to make decisions about my investments and retirement savings. I am concerned about the proposed change to move from quarterly reporting to reporting every six months.

I worry that this proposed rule would reduce transparency, making it harder to spot operational downturns as easily. I am concerned this change would delay important information, with announcements carrying twice as much data, leading to massive and unpredictable stock swings. I also see more opportunities for market manipulation with this new rule--longer insider trading windows and delayed fraud detection. Please help keep the market safe by stopping this proposed change.

Thank you,

Annie Dean

4502 Sentinel Pass, Fitchburg WI 53711

(608) 333-6691

Sent from my iPhone

Annie Freeman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Annie Freeman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do Not make this change! What are you trying to hide from stock holders??? With all of the crap that is going on in our country right now., why give people something else to worry about!!! 😡😡😡😡

Sent from my iPhone

Annie Golson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Annie Golson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
The "I've got mine" theroy is unfair to the average person. I will work hard to bring you down if this bill passes. Stop with the greed. Thank you.

Annie Love — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Annie Love Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is the least that we can do to curtail inappropriate activity. Let's keep this program intact. There is no upside to requiring less accountability.

Annie Love
1633 Bancroft Ave
San Leandro, CA 94577

Annie Selden — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Annie Selden Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I would like to see my quarterly earnings.

Dr. Annie Selden
Las Cruces, NM 88012

Sent from my iPhone

Annie Umbricht — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Annie Umbricht At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business.

Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. The businesses we invest in owe the investors transparency and accountability. Reports should continue to be every 3 months or quarterly. Annie Umbricht

---

Anon Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anon Reporting should not be reduced from four to two times a year. Ignorance is not bliss. Knowledge gives investors the power to make informed decisions.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I am against the proposal to permit public companies to report only twice per year versus the quarterly reporting currently mandated. This would be a huge disservice to both the institutional and retail investing communities. More information, not less, is needed.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous In my experience less reporting has never been good. It gives those involved an opportunity to consider reporting with bias.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 More accountability not less!!

Cynthia Xerogianes
Owner
Fhixes LLC
7732301125

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I want transparency, keep 4 annual reports, and against only 2.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous 100% AGAINST reducing the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Less information does not create better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Quarterly reports are necessary for stockholders to make key decisions about the businesses in which they own a stake. Semi-annual reports miss key figures that could hide issues from the public. 4 times a year is a must.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Please keep the reporting at 4x a year. Reporting fewer times per year means owners will be less informed.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous horrible idea. We need more transparency, not less

---

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Transparency is the ethos for true corporate CHI - credibility, honesty, and integrity. Stripping away this responsibility/requirement from public companies is like stripping away a person's true identity. In other words, it will be taking the first step to destroying the foundation of corporate trust, c-suite relationships, and business construct that helps establish an investing community. Opaqueness will, undeniably, promote misconduct, establish impotence, and create dysfunction. The importance of transparency can not be underscored enough because it is paramount in building, managing, and sustaining the foundation for a retail investment community.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous As an individual investor with over 50 years of experience, it is clear to me that investment information provided anything less than quarterly would make it extremely difficult for individuals to invest in companies intelligently. Quarterly reports are (and have been) the standard over many years. Please do not make any changes to the current system. Thank you.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I am against reducing public-company reports from four times a year to just two because, less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous It makes no sense that the CFTC is allowing 24/7 perpetual futures and options to be traded, while the SEC is limiting investor access to their company information to once every six months!! Six months is an eternity in this age of AI. The argument that it reduces cost is spurious. Eventually all transactions and materially relevant information need to be audited, compiled and reported anyways, The delay just allows for less transparency in pricing and leaves more room for mischief. With AI and automation, costs of reporting will anyways reduce significantly. As an operating executive, board member and a minority shareholder of a company, I like my company to close the books on a monthly basis. It forces greater accounting discipline and lower costs in the long run. The idea that quarterly reporting makes companies short term oriented or stock prices more volatile has also been debunked thoroughly. Company executives and investors whose behaviors lead to short termism and volatility that will not change because of lack of a delay in reporting requirement. They will just be less accountable to long term investors. This is a bad rule that adds no value to anyone while destroying the credibility of American financial markets.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous As investor, we would like more transparency and increasing the frequency of updates is highly desirable and warranted.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I strongly oppose the proposed rules for semiannual reporting. Less information creates worse-informed owners. Less transparency increases uncertainty. When information finally arrives, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous The argument that it is a burden on corporations to produce this information is shaky, at best. With the advent of AI, the generation of an accurate (and not invented) reports of relevant details about a company is no longer the burden that it used to be. The push to reduce the required reporting appears to be an effort to obfuscate corporate status and activity. The likely result will be reduction of investor confidence and enrichment of corrupt insiders. This trend has the markings of an increasing level of corruption in our country.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I would like to voice my concerns and dissent for semiannual public company reporting, in favor of retained quarterly reporting. Semiannual reporting decreases the amount of information investors receive on their investments by 50%. This would not provide enough information to support individual (non professional) decision-making, leading to more conservative and potentially less effective actions. Semi-annual public reporting obscures timely information to the public and favors insiders. Any decrease in transparency of economic data would not bolster the US economy, but rather decrease investor confidence and encourage consideration of non US investments. Thank you.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Please protect the American public’s right to information! Protect average citizens from powerful corporate tricks.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I (and most long-term investors) review my investments on a quarterly basis. Companies calculate their profits on (at a minimum) a quarterly basis. It is only fair to require companies to report their earnings on a quarterly basis, as they are calculated and disseminated to internal stakeholders. This rule reduces transparency and does very little to reduce costs.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Under this proposal, owners (shareholders) would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their shareholders. Less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. It would be a mistake to change reporting requirements.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Clearly less is not best in this situation. More information makes for more informed intelligent decisions no matter what the issue is whether it be financial, health related, or personal. Why would something like this be introduced in the first place? Who initiated the proposal? Who supported raising this issue. Perhaps knowing this information (initiator) might sway one to invest with different companies in the future.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous To the SEC: I respectfully oppose the proposal to allow companies to replace quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting. Quarterly disclosures are a critical link between companies and their owners. Reducing that cadence would leave investors with less information, greater uncertainty, and potentially more volatile market reactions when updates finally arrive. Arguments about cost savings or reduced short-term pressure do not outweigh the value of consistent transparency. Technology has made reporting more efficient, and short-termism is a behavioral issue, not a disclosure issue. Less information does not create better-informed markets. It creates the opposite. I urge the Commission to preserve quarterly reporting requirements. Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this proposal and for considering this comment!

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous In regards to reports, lack of transparency is synonymous with a) laziness and b) deception. I'm not sure why individuals and companies dealing with others' money are allowed such freedoms. Would these same companies and individuals allow ME to spend their money as I please with no accountability? Forgive me for my lack of eloquence, but these instances require a direct approach.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Honestly, I've think that the direction should be towards more reporting than less. Especially given that the total sum of dollars invested for the average investor is higher than the amount that is kept in traditional banking, where reporting is monthly. By removing reports, you remove from investors the ability to make informed and timely decisions about their investments. I don't think the argument about reduced costs holds water, both because that's bunk (costs going down not up) and because the investors are the source of funds not a cost center. Change your infrastructure costs like which data center you use or which publishing house or the quality of paper. Not preparing quarterly reports at all should not even be on the table.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Owners of a business deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements will weaken the connection between companies and their owners, likely leading to greater volatility because of owners being less informed. The costs of quarterly reporting should become less of an issue in the age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools. I believe it is a mistake to reduce the reporting requirements, and ask that you help preserve the right to transparency for investors. Thank you.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous When is less information better than having more info? I am investing for my future retirement; not to get rich. I want to know how my money is invested; what companies, how are those companies are performing; etc. I want the latest info so I can decide if I need to make any changes to my investments. Reporting on a semiannual basis would not give me that option.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Timely Corporate transparency is necessary in order for investors to make strategic stock choices.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous This comment is to demonstrate my opposition to changing the SEC reporting regulation from quarterly to semi-annually.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous This is a bad proposal. More transparency and visibility is one of the strengths of American investing - this directly hurts stocks ability to follow their companies and will provoke more knee jerk reactions to data gaps. Do not pass this rule!

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Moving to semi-annual report reduces transparency to shareholders and will potentially increase volatility in share prices as less frequent information may cause larger swings. Please continue to enforce quarterly reporting.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I DO NOT support. The absence of information creates speculation. We need to understand what the companies we have an interest in are doing with our investment. Quarterly reporting is key to an informed investors.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous As shareholders of public companies, we need to be as informed as possible. These are public companies, and there is no reason to go from quarterly reports to semiannual reports if we are to keep shareholders' interest a priority. Not only do we need transparency, but there is a lot of community and business around reading and interpreting quarterly reports.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I am opposed to the proposed change. I think that quarterly reporting plays an important role in providing information to the individual investor. Reducing the frequency of reporting is a detriment to the individual investor's ability to access corporate performance.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous While I completely understand the rationale behind the desire to move the SEC's regulatory requirements towards semiannual reporting, I firmly believe that doing so runs counter to the best interests of participants in public markets, and potentially strips it of its equalizing nature. I am aware that the current standard of quarterly reporting practices has a few particular downsides, specifically higher costs to firms which may disproportionately affect smaller issuers and the need to report quarterly potentially altering internal performance goal-setting and have in some cases disincentivized some firms from going public or remaining so. All of these are undoubtedly detrimental to investors. However, I feel that these issues are overwritten by the fact that public equity market participation is, by definition, firm ownership. Ownership of public equities is a quintessential aspect of our country's wealth mobility. The ability of any individual to participate in that ownership, and the gains and benefits it delivers, are what makes public markets valuable. But, an essential aspect of that ownership is visibility and transparency. Equity ownership is one of few, if the only, types of assets in which ownership can be acquired but direct guidance and oversight into the operations and direction of that asset is not easy to achieve. This creates risk, particularly for retail investors, who participate in ownership less as a means of providing direction but more as a show of faith and trust. But, the only way that these investors can remain protected from having that faith broken is continuing to understand and analyze their assets through the wealth of information that is currently publicly available, and should remain readily available. It could certainly be argued that continuing to report quarterly creates an undue burden on firms, perhaps deterring firms from joining public markets in the first place. I would argue that any firms reluctant to report their performance to their owners frequently are perhaps not ones well-suited to taking on public ownership, and by extension public trust, at this time. Firms should want to create value and positive emotions for its owners, and one of the ways it does so currently is by being forthcoming about what that trust is creating for owners. Firms are also incentivized by nature to save costs wherever possible, so if given the option many, if not all, will undoubtedly opt to report less frequently. And, there is no doubt that institutions will retain their increased access to information, so creating less information in the market only furthers the gap between institutional and retail participants, making retail participation that much more difficult. Participation in public equity markets should not be contingent on already having wealth or disproportionate access to information. As a final statement, in an age where all market participants are increasingly turning away from stable options and towards markets that seem to more resemble gambling, like betting markets, we should cling to the facets that make our institutions feel reliable and safe to participate in, not change to reflect that trend towards those gambling markets. Equity is ownership, not gambling, and should remain such.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We must continue Quarterly Reporting so that small investors can have the information they need to buy/sell in a timely manner.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I remember Enron. You should too. I oppose the proposed changes.

Thanks,
Kyle Turner

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Malcom Ross, a Project Engineer in mining.
Eliminating quarterly reports opens the door to egregious financial abuse, and will assuredly create schemes similar to the fraud perpetrated by Enron decades ago. Rolling these rules back is an egregious mistake, and jeopardizes public trust in the open market. Frankly, this effort seems to be structured to benefit the tech companies who've taken to black book accounting to cover up their obscene AI infrastructure expenses. It is extremely disappointing to see attempts to obfuscate data that should be public.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do not change the quarterly reporting requirements, especially in our current political and economic conditions.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Ash Thayer LLC Owner
I want the same transparency that private companies and banks know about investment health. It is unfair to everyone who is not working in the financial industry, regardless of if they are wealthy or poor. This opens the door to more fraud, more personal loss for working class people who actually create the wealth for large companies with their labor.

This creates more of a divide between the wealthy and poor and the United States, and this is destroying the fabric of our democracy.

This is not acceptable on any level.

Ash Thayer ashthayerstudio.com

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reports so I have a better understanding of what's going on in the company that I own stock in. It shouldn't only be for the insiders who will bail as soon as something goes wrong and left us without inside information holding the bag.

Junius

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Jamie Shepherd, lead pawnbroker

My company provides annual compliance training. One of the modules is on insider trading. Lowering companies' standard of reporting will increase the risk of insider trading, dissuade investors who want to see the recent trajectory of a company's finances and decisions, as well as providing more time for dishonest companies to fudge their books in a way that will prevent accountability for a longer duration. Changing company reporting from quarterly to bi-annually is cutting a corner and providing a bigger window for fraud and corporate crime to occur.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Jamie Shepherd

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Greetings. I'm Katherine Zod, Retired Naval Officer, Mystic, CT.

I've been investing in the stock market for 40 years. When I invest in a company, that company becomes my financial partner. It is my company and money as much as it is that of the people running the company.

Transparency is vital my well-being. Reduced transparency would be like letting your spouse have control of all the money, and only have to tell you how you are doing financially twice a year. Is that a good way for a responsible adult to live life?

Knowledge is power. Please don't reduce the power I need to live my financial life responsibly.

Respectfully,
Kate Zod

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly accounting keeps big business honest and we need to reign in these large corporations since they are not "people" with a desire to have a democratic ethical, moral society. I want a just and fair society and government needs to protect the common good! It is extremely important that we keep our wise laws since we have a felon as president and corruption perpetrated by everyone he has appointed. This creates so much suffering and chaos as they steal our hard earned taxes for their personal pedophial party coverup & bribes to Putin oligarchs who are also embedded in this criminal scheme. Stand strong as we are many more who want a future for our children free from slavery & servitude to these maniacal men.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm writing to you as a constituent and a regular investor to ask that you protect the current SEC quarterly reporting rules.

I know there are pushes to change this to every six months, but that would really hurt everyday investors like me.

Quarterly updates keep the stock market steady and prevent sudden drops.

Wall Street already has an edge; retail investors need timely data to compete.

Regular check-ins keep corporate management honest and accountable.

Checking in four times a year makes it much easier to manage my savings.

Cutting down on transparency only helps big corporations, not regular people trying to save for the future.

Please protect the quarterly reporting cycle.

Thanks for your time and for looking out for everyday investors.

Barbara Biskup. Retired.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Reducing reports to twice a year From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Sent from my iPhone I'm a Mötley fool member and I just wanna take you to know that I think this is wrong and really affects transparency in an all companies. Thanks.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The Only reason the SEC would want this is because they have something to hide! We do not want to give them opportunities to cheat and steal from us or their companies! This is an invitation for fraud! We have already seen what happens when no one looks closely at details on the books. Remember Minnesota, Virginia, Maine and other states where fraud is being exposed. I was the secretary for a nuclear engineering educational program on a well-known campus for 23 years. I know about fraud. Someone borrowed my card for a legitimate purchase and then continued to use it for illegitimate purposes! He ran up thousands and thousands of dollars without my knowledge. Records need to be accessible and reviewed on a regular basis, not twice a year! I live in the Midwest and am now retired. I do not want to see any kind of fraud anywhere! If anything , records should be reviewed every 3-4 months. More is definitely better in this case. Sincerely, Latricia Vaughn

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep our financials transparent

Bob

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep reporting QUARTERLY!! Monthly would be even better! Sheila Heffron Retiree

---

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the requirement for quarterly reporting. Companies should maintain transparency with the public.
Kat Johnson

Sr. IT Analyst

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hello,
I am a CPA in Texas. I am a consultant who prepares SEC filings for microcap companies who are too small to afford a financial reporting staff. These small non accelerated filers already get plenty of extra time to file, especially at year end. One of my clients filed their third quarter on November 15, and then their annual 10-K on March 28. That was 4.5 months. In that time, the majority shareholders voted to sell the assets, which had been about $40 million on the balance sheet of the Company to themselves for $1.5 million. They then sold the public shell to a person whose plan it was to flip it as to someone to use to take their company public. The new owners quickly issued new shares and diluted the prior public shareholders. The 8-K to announce this was the only communication the shareholders had, only after the deal was essentially done, and this was all within the current rules. The last thing the public needs is for these companies to have more time. If anything, they need to report more often.

Thank you, Donna Guy, CPA

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting was instituted to stop fraud and abuse. Are we inviting it back?

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Frud

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Diane Packer is requesting quarterly reporting! I depend on updated information as a retiree to supplement my income. Thank you!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This requirement was instituted because there is a need. They have shown they cannot be trusted without regulations. Every time they start stripping regulations to remove ‘red tape’ and make things ‘easier’ for businesses the consumer is the one getting screwed with higher prices, shady deals and taxpayer funded bailouts. Keep these common sense regulations!

Sent from my iPad

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Bad idea! Didn't work before.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 SEC NEEDS to be ACCURATE AND ACCOUNTABLE!! Quarterly reporting would be Minimal!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Maintain quarterly reporting. This is not fair to individual investors. Stocks are people's retirement accounts. Insiders would have an advantage over other investors. Vote no. Janice Boone, 200 Elf Shore Cove, Hayesville, NC 28904 Retired investor

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Quarterly statements From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep statements quarterly.This is especially important as I approach retirement age.6 months is too long to go without this information.
Sincerely,
Danielle Welch Blair,M.D.

Sent from AOL on Android

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Absolutely not. Lower returns lower valuations less transparency and will lower our investments. Less chance fir fraud period

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please don’t remove the quarter reporting requirement. To do so removes what little accountability people have for honesty from corporate governance. Lesley Suzanne-Douglas, retired.

Sent from my iPad

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The American public desserve transparency. With everything computerized there is NO excuse. Other than deception.

Sent using myEarthLink

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The regulations have been put in place for specific reasons. Since the 80s, every time something gets deregulated or the regulations are loosened, terrible things happen. You shouldn’t give companies more time to commit fraud.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I strongly believe the companies need to report quarterly numbers. Too much can happen in six months and this does not protect investors.
I urge you to vote against this proposed new schedule.
V. Lahourcade
Houston, Texas 77056

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am old enough to remember Enron - the poster child for corporate dishonesty - as well as the failure of WorldCom and Arthur Andersen. I was working at Ernst & Young at the time and saw at first hand the ramifications of these collapses.

Quarterly reporting is essential to protect the interests of investors, making it more of a challenge to perpetrate fraud on such a grand scale. And it's not only the investors whose interests should be protected: there are also the employees, their families, and company suppliers all of whom are affected when a company folds. Quarterly reporting, requiring regular signing with the threat of jail time for false certification, is key to keeping business honest and accountable.

The modern world is increasingly risky, with new challenges arising every day. Why add to those risks by changing this provision? Retain quarterly signing.

Robin Millward
Business Development Consultant
Oqunquit, Maine

Sent with Spark

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I think you need to keep an eye on Wall Street all the time! They are corrupt. Please do not go dark for 6 months! Think of what could happen!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep Quarterly open!!! We the people are speaking up on this!

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep reports on a quarterly basis. DO NOT CHANGE!

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop protecting big business. You work for the people

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Brenda Roberts, Georgia Keep Quarterly reporting so that gains or losses can be monitored and addressed in a timely manner. Quarterly reporting would also be more transparent.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why are you even considering this. Haven’t they already robbed us blind. Are they paying you to do this or what?

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am a teacher. I have to report everything I do. My students have to take yearly standardized tests to prove that I am a worthy teacher. Every company should prove its worthiness ALL YEAR LONG!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it the way it is!

Sent from my iPad

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the required signatures.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This will cause severe financial issues for the average consumer and investor. This is certainly not in the best interest to the average consumer, and a license for more white collar crime
Brenda Coleman 103 Ravenswood Rd Hampstead N.C. 28443

Sent from my iPad

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 CEOs have enough opportunities to “arrange” deals in their favor. Any effort to keep them honest must be maintained, possibly strengthened, not watered down!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keeping it quarterly allows for more transparency. No one should be able to hide their books.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Quarterly reporting From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Since companies ordinarily compile quarterly reports, there is absolutely NO REASON why the shareholders shouldn't have access to these reports as well! Transparency has become a BIG ISSUE!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Yes

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Be honest please

---

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Accountable CEO's still need checks! Keep the quarterly reporting... otherwise make it monthly!!

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cutting to 6 month disclosure is a disaster waiting to happen. Removing CEO accountability is just taking care of the bullionaires. Show that you are working for the American people and not the corporations. Keep the accountability when it ahoukd be.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I want the quarterly report to stay in place. Lawmakers preach transparency and then hide way too much with having fewer checks and balances.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep this quarterly, we must have insight to investments, situations change every day. We may need to make a change, it's nice to know what the heck is going on. It's our money not theirs that is being invested.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly earnings reports! I feel full disclosure and transparency is important —too much can happen in a 6 month period.

Karen Bailey
West Linn Oregon

Sent from my iPad

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Never return to biannual!!! Stay on Quarterly or Monthly Reporting!!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 What the hell is wrong with you people. Are you as demented and stupid as trump. There is none of this taking a break. If working full time is too much then resign and take trump golfing as your new job.

Retired Medical/ Legal Bureau Chief in the Brooklyn DA's Office

---

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reports

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Investors need more transparency, not less. More accountability, not less. There's no good reason to end quarterly reporting, so don't do it.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Business leaders should be more accountable to investors, not less. In this day and age, technology allows for real time analysis of assets. Quarterly reports are not a burden. Do not change the law to make it easier for investors to be defrauded. Kathleen Forte. Retired teacher.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There is enough grift and corruption in our country - please do not give corporations the ability to hide their records from the public. We need MORE scrutiny and oversight not less. Please keep quarterly reporting the requirement.
Thank you.
Michael Republicano,
Retired

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dr Dee NMD in Tucson AZ. We all need to be ethical and live and work with integrity. Sadly these laws are in place because money and power corrupts humans. This process keeps folks honest…

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting should remain mandatory. Without it, companies could hide their poor performance and cost investors billions. Without quarterly reporting, there will be no transparency and will impede regular investors' ability to make informed investments. Do not eliminate quarterly reporting.

Sent from Proton Mail for Android.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 What in the world are you people thinking, or better said, is anyone awake, cutting the requirement in half is akin to doubling the speed limit, except the results are less visible!
Just say NO

Sent from my iPad

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is not transparency! We are finally getting transparency at the WhiteHouse and now y'all want to duck and hide! What's up your sleeves? Kim Gibson. Retired.Numbers do matter! Data is only as good as the person entering in the data, so let's make sure those employees are true to the numbers, not true to the bottom line and whether someone is getting a bonus or not!

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reports are a must. We need transparency now more than ever before. Human nature just requires it. Please keep it honest. No more Enrons!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Lauren Cercone, retired Director of Market Research. In retirement, your ability to recoup losses in your investments drops - you simply don't have as much time. Quarterly reporting is vital to ensure prompt corrective actions and avoid financial setbacks.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is puts the small investors on the outside looking in. They will be left holding the bag and miss every boat that has a rising tide.

Sent from my iPad

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why are you trying to change the rules? We need to keep businesses accountable by keeping with the quarterly reporting. We should not extend it to 6 months. We need to keep them accountable every 3 months.

Thank you.

Paula Smith

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep Quarterly Reporting. !!!! Don't mess with something that has been working for years.

Scott C. Ennis
Atlanta, GA

Sent from AOL on Android

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We NEED and MUST retain quarterly reporting!

Patricia Lipp-Strayer

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 After the Enron scandal and other corporate scandals, the Sarbanes–Oxley Act of 2002 created rules requiring CEOs and CFOs of public companies to personally certify quarterly and annual reports. A false certification can carry serious criminal penalties.

The SEC has proposed allowing some public companies to move from quarterly reports to semiannual reports — meaning fewer required interim filings (from three quarterly 10-Q reports plus an annual report to a possible twice-a-year proposal. This is mainly about reducing the frequency of required reporting, not simply removing CEO responsibility for the reports that still must be filed.

Transparency in public companies is what protects shareholders and the public. After Enron, we learned the importance of making CEOs and CFOs personally accountable for the accuracy of financial reporting. Reducing required reporting from quarterly to semiannual means fewer opportunities for investors and the public to see problems developing. I believe accountability and transparency should be strengthened, not weakened. Again, after Enron fiasco the lesson was clear: more sunlight and accountability matters. Cutting required financial reporting in half risks reducing transparency for shareholders and the public. CEOs who sign financial statements should be held responsible and accountable for the information they put their names on.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need quarterly reports

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Kathy Ingalls Hefni, RN Clinical Nurse Mgr
As an executive in healthcare I am held responsible for overseeing clinical staff. That duty includes reviewing & signing off on documents that have been reviewed for other staff members. If I am being held accountable for myself & others, I shouldn't hesitate by signing documents (which I do) on a monthly, quarterly and annual basis. If you know you have done your best there should be no hesitation in putting your signature to a document validating accuracy, truth & facts. Keep quarterly accountability. Just another way for wealthy people to get by!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Patricia Perito, Investor and Trustee.

I will feel less comfortable and interested in investing if this change to six months is made. These companies wouldn't exist if it weren't for investors. They should be made to keep their financials transparent.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Re: File No. S7-2026-15, Semiannual Reporting

I strongly oppose allowing public companies to replace quarterly reporting with semiannual reporting.

At minimum, CEOs and CFOs should remain required to personally certify company financial disclosures every quarter. Frankly, I would favor more frequent certification and disclosure requirements, not fewer. Public-company executives are entrusted with investors' money, employees' livelihoods, retirement accounts, and the public's confidence in the markets. That responsibility should come with regular, meaningful accountability.

Quarterly reports force leadership to put their names behind the company's financial condition, internal controls, material risks, and disclosures throughout the year. Reducing that to one semiannual report plus one annual report gives executives fewer points of personal certification and creates longer periods in which serious problems, misleading disclosures, deteriorating finances, or internal-control failures can remain hidden from investors.

A CEO should not be able to go most of a year without personally signing off on the accuracy of what shareholders are being told. If a company's leadership wants access to public capital, it should accept the obligation of regular transparency. The SEC should be strengthening CEO and CFO accountability, including meaningful civil and criminal consequences for knowingly false or misleading certifications, rather than reducing the number of times executives must personally stand behind their company's disclosures.

Please retain quarterly reporting and quarterly CEO/CFO certifications. If anything, the Commission should explore whether more frequent reporting and certification would better protect investors, employees, retirees, and the integrity of the public markets.

Sincerely,
Arthur Cossairt, LPN
Kalamazoo, Michigan

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 MaryLou Mills
The harm from less than honest reporting from large entities affects too many people and organizations (as was proven with Enron). Having to put their signature on the reports will minimize misrepresentations that might otherwise occur due to pressures to impress various groups or people (i.e. shareholders, board of trustees,) along with management incentives. These reports can also impact the stock market.

Asking the CEOs to sign the reports and enforcing the designated consequences for lying is a simple, easy step to help protect the public.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 A 6-month period of a successful gain in revenues and market share and everyone wins. 6 months of declining value and loss of revenue and market share, and the only winners, are those on the inside. Protect all who risk their money, not just those who have a daily view of the risk they have taken. Outsiders who take the risk, actually have a bigger risk involved because they are touching and feeling the trends that build daily, they only have sporadic reporting of trends, which can have a spin on them when it's an hour sit-down once or twice a year. Even 4 times a year a CEO can project a positive look at feel. That's why used car salesmen are successful.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This policy is inviting disaster. In fact, it has existed before and disaster is exactly what it caused. In today’s world, accountability is of the utmost importance. We the people depend on you to protect us.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Don’t allow corruption more time!

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We should be making fraud more difficult not easie. Allowing the concealment of records for months allows more time for fraud. We need quarterly reporting as a protection to potential investors.

Ona
Hook
Registered Nurse

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 why would anybody think this is a good idea that is a conservative, this will kill the stock market off nobody will be investing in anything

---

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It's been apart of the apparatus that keeps launderers and tax dodgers honest. It ain't broke so please stop putting in fixes.

Sent from Proton Mail for Android.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the company financial reporting to investors on a quarterly basis. I am an accountant, and I see delaying the financial reporting for companies as a bad idea.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Jackie and I'm 77 years old. I have lived long enough to have seen a great number of changes made by our government. This proposed change is not only bad for the citizens, it will put a stain on every elected official that votes in favor of it. The US population has almost had its fill of all the cuts to social programs, current immigration deportations, wars, etc, and the abuse of our tax dollars on worthless, vanity projects. If this bill is passed whoever voted for it might as well pack their bags and go back home.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It could destroy trust in the market and that could destroy the value of the currency essentially turn billionaires into to mere millionaires - keep four reports per year or six or twelve we need transparency - twice or once is too long for market forces to hide their books

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As an investor I need to watch where my money goes and what it is doing so I can make good decisions and act accordingly. These are just good business practices. Too much fraud at the top. Honesty is the best policy so we all win.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I think it should be left as is. These days changes are so quick it's to our advantage to be as up to date as possible.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly accounting keeps big business honest and we need to reign in these large corporations since they are not "people" with a desire to have a democratic ethical, moral society. I want a just and fair society and government needs to protect the common good! It is extremely important that we keep our wise laws since we have a felon as president and corruption perpetrated by everyone he has appointed. This creates so much suffering and chaos as they steal our hard earned taxes for their personal pedophial party coverup & bribes to Putin oligarchs who are also embedded in this criminal scheme. Stand strong as we are many more who want a future for our children free from slavery & servitude to these maniacal men. I am Karen Schaefer, citizen from 1255 MojaveSt., Idaho Falls, Idaho.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Must remain quarterly

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The SEC has an obligation to report quarterly to citizens. Stop hiding vital information from us.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 In order for the general public to be able to make informed trading decisions, the reporting should remain on a quarterly basis.
Theresa J Monahan
Certified Public Accountant

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Quarterly needs to remain From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Must remain quarterly

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Quarterly reporting needs to remain From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Must remain quarterly

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Think they are great! Provide stock owners with some degree of control over the companies they invest in. Don’t get roid of them.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quartly

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting quarterly to protect all Americans from crooks!

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting quarterly to protect all Americans from crooks!

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Not one company can be relied upon to provide honest reporting without enforcing quarterly updates. The idea of halving the reporting is just ludicrous on its face. Cut it out!

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting quarterly to protect all Americans from crooks!

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do those in power not realize how bad this is for the average consumer?? If you pass this travesty of an action, only the wealthy will benefit, leaving the rest of us holding the bag. As a full time caregiver for my adult child (not paid mind you), and a widow on a highly limited income, I cannot afford to absorb the higher prices and hidden fees this foolishness will bring about. If businesses can hide their books, I can't help but think it will encourage tax fraud. Michele Shapiro

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Kim Horvath
Education Manager

Quarterly reporting is ESSENTIAL to keeping the business practices of publicly traded companies transparent. It informs the public and allows us to make researched decisions regarding our investments. Changing it to bi-yearly serves no purpose other than to allow a few informed elites to move their money around at the expense of the common investor. This is a disastrous idea that does not serve the American public and threatens the stability and growth of their savings and retirement.

Sincerely,
K Horvath

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The manipulation of wealth and growth to monopolize power over the people is CONSTITUTIONALLY WRONGFULLY against our values and rights. don't be manipulated use your own soul to do what's right

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Chris R. - retired - I am on a fixed income and feel the government - and Wall Street - should be more transparent - not less. We are seeing fraud in many federal programs, taking away safeguards regarding investments is not going to make that better. Please consider the everyday American as you make your decision. Citizens (tax -payers) are struggling at this time, trying to make ends meet, please don't make it more difficult to stay afloat by making reporting less frequent jeopardizing investments.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I completely disagree with this obvious attempt by corporations to hide earnings and further obfuscate their negative and positive effects on the economy. In this digital age corporations should be doing this more often not less. This fact is proof that they are looking to hide rather than be transparent about their corporate activities.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'd like to keep companies communicating effectively so we shareholders can make our decisions properly.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is important to continue with Quarterly reporting to the SEC! DO NOT CHANGE THIS!
Sally Garber, retired, important to maintain accountability!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is kirk Johnson and I'ma software engineer. All of our retirements are tied to the stock markets and we need to have transparency in order for us to make educated trades and have stable portfolios. This jeopardizes the retirements of all Americans. We should add more transparency not less

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please don't make me withdrawal my investments from the US stock market by facilitating a new class of corporate conmen by reducing accountability reporting!!!

Stay with Quarterly Reporting!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 James Moore grounds keeper it matters because I want to eventually invest

---

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep them honest to keep the quarterly reporting

---

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 If people don't know what is going on they won't invest in those companies and they will lose money because they want to save money in the short term

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This a bad idea to let companies go six months and getting rid of quarterly reporting. We the investors will be kept in the dark about possible financial problems and risks that could arise if they are required to not to disclose their financial information. As a retired person who relies heavily upon my investment portfolio to manage my life, I have to say that this would be a disaster for my financial future. Please keep quarterly reporting a requirement for all companies that are currently operating under this rule.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This seems to be a complete insider trading work-around. Investors could lose everything in those six months and the books could be "cooked" for the average investor. Do not allow this six month reporting lag.
As a young widow who was a stay home mother, I rely on my investments to make up for the income taken from me.
Deirdre P.

Indianapolis, IN

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Having watched greedy and unscrupulous executives easily lie to the American public, it is imperative to force them to be truthful. This rule should not be abolished.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hard to keep these people honest as it is. Keep quarterly!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 That's a horrible idea! It certainly isn't the American way of doing things. This will set us as a country back at least 150 years. Don't do it. The only people it helps or serves are private companies who have inside knowledge.

Sent from Proton Mail for Android.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly reporting. Some of us can’t afford to lose money, especially when it could have been avoided by continuing timely reporting.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As an American healthcare worker depending on retirement backed by the stock market and exchange, I’m demanding oversight do we don’t crash like in 2008 when weak oversite by the SEC led to a collapse of our markets. That housing crash almost wiped out 1/2 my investments. We need these SEC regulations and reporting for better accountability. Stoping accountability only leads to fraud and waste

---

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need more openness not more closed doors

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it! It makes companies more accountable!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To Whom It May Concern,
I am writing to express my strong support for maintaining the current quarterly SEC reporting framework rather than shifting to a semi-annual model.

Having worked for multiple public companies, I feel strongly that frequent financial reporting is vital for investor protection and market efficiency for several key reasons:

1. Timeliness and Transparency: Quarterly updates provide the steady flow of reliable data necessary to evaluate a company's health in real time, reducing the information lag that hurts retail investors.

2. Risk Mitigation: A six-month reporting gap is far too long in today’s fast-moving markets. Quarterly filings allow investors to spot deteriorating fundamentals and manage risk before major losses compound.

3. Market Stability: Continuous disclosure ensures the market smoothly prices in new data, preventing the massive, volatile price gaps that often occur when six months of accumulated news is released all at once.

4. Corporate Accountability: The 90-day reporting cycle maintains strict discipline for management, preventing underperforming companies from hiding weak operational metrics for half a year.

Reducing reporting frequency would compromise transparency and increase blind spots for investors. I strongly urge the Commission to uphold the quarterly reporting standard.

Sincerely,
Heidi Campbell
Retired VP of Pricing

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We don't need another Enron.
These companies should have to report every month.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 do not pass this we need more transparency not less

---

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I need to know what is happening with investments on a quarterly basis! Waiting 6 months is not feasible for me

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Andrew Cordas Sales Mgr/Trainer.
Trying to make the rich richer and keep the rest of us out?!? Kiss my ass-

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep reports/statements to the government and stakeholders at least quarterly so appropriate oversight of management is accomplished, and stakeholders have adequate information to make timely adjustments to protect their investments.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Quarterly reporting reqirement. From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting requirement. As an investor we are not getting timely information as it is. Audie Hoke President C_Rose Properties,

---

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Yes for corruption. Bankrupt investers that aren't connected. Why miss a chance to make America even worse.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This proposal is unnecessary and provides less transparency to investors.

Companies have been reporting quarterly for decades. Maintaining the requirement for them to continue to do so is not a burden.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Elaine Lebherz, United States Citizen, Retired. Please keep the SEC reporting quarterly to ensure timely accountability! In our current economic environment I believe it is not in the public's best interest to allow the SEC six months in between reporting. As I stated I am retired as is my husband so this is definitely a concern for the two of us. Please continue the Quarterly Reporting. Thank You!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I agree it should not be extended. If anything with computers and technology they should report more often not less.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Steve Grundy, Disney Special Events.
We need to keep quarterly reporting to better understand the companies I'm invested in.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am new to retail investing but I understand the metrics used in quarterly reports and use that information to determine my investment strategy. Without this information available to me, I simply wouldn't invest at all. I would be too blind for comfort and find the risk unacceptable.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Daniel Falcon, Retired. Why hide? How is that helping the American people, middle class and lower, anyway????

Danny Falcon

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 C.L.Hoover, Retired, Private Invedtor. What a horrible, stupid shortsighted idea. You want to get everyone to lose faith in the stock market and never investagain, go ahead and do this.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The American people need transparency from the SEC. Quarterly reporting works. Do not change that.
Nancie Jones
retired State Employee

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I want quarterly reports especially with so much insider trading among politicians. I experience excessive fees for trades and management of my accounts.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is bad for investors. If quarterly reporting stops the whole financial world will be affected.and investors pay the price-losing income!

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We investors large and small need quarterly reports at least !

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Investors need to know what companies are doing. Quarterly reporting is the minimum. Monthly reporting would be better and would reduce insider trading.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please continue quarterly reporting to enable investors to evaluate management performance.

Get Outlook for iOS

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 4x a year

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why wouldn't you continue quarterly unless you want to hide something? Stop this insanity.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Anybody that votes for this is bought and paid for by * crooked investors. Why will some investors have information but not the general public ? Is America totally controlled by criminals with money? It appears that it is!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Sharon Pinette Sonographer
This feels dishonest and shady. It is unequal for the people of this country.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Elizabeth Gale Manager of multiple LLC'Ss. There would be little information provided to investors on a timely basis and might cause them to invest in other countries, currencies or modalities....instead of the USA. Please require quarterly filings.

Sent from AOL on Android

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Leave the quarterly reporting alone. By having the reports quarterly, there were a lot less problems. There is an old saying, if it ain't broke, don't fix it.

Sent from my iPad

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The SEC needs to remember the needs and the will of the people, not just the fat cats and trumpites.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I oppose what some are referring to as the "Retail Robbery Rule": My reason comes from an old "saying": If a camel gets his nose under the flap of your tent it won't belong before the behemoth of desert has pushed you out. Then, not only will you be in the dark; you will clueless! They scream for more space or time, etc, Now that's a real oxymoron! I'm sure that it's been difficult in especially in days passed to meet the quarterly deadline [4 times a year] to biannually [6 months twice a year]. What makes this ridiculous is the fact that we're in the computer age with technology to do tasks that don't need to be touched by human hands to do complex technology. If the amount of work to do something that make takes an hour to do by hands; it can be done in a matter of minutes by a computer! The extra time they're asking is SLACK TIME Instead, they should get better technology for their employees. Don't take from us & tell us it's good without through in the public's eye.

Sincerely B. D. McCain

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Without quarterly reporting, workers and their families lost their retirement pensions.

Continue to Hold Msnagement accountable!

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is essential to the continued integrity and success of US capital markets. With modern technology, it is easier than ever for publicly held corporations to comply with quarterly reporting requirements. There is no valid reason to support changing this.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is unconscionable. Shareholders are not just investors; we're owners. We deserve to be informed. It was bad enough that the SEC has steadily chipped away at shareholders' ability to submit resolutions, now it's trying to keep us in the dark on corporate earnings and other matters.

Jacqueline Sadashige, Ph.D.
Manager of Corporate Responsibility

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 These CEO's will repeat their corrupt practices if you, theSEC do not keep the frequency of reporting at at least four times a year. We the people demand it!! Respectfully, Piccola Pina jalapina24@yahoo

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To: SEC
From: Lawrence Kjorvestad
Retired small business owner.
I am a small investor in stocks and the quarterly reports are very important to me. I don't believe that going to a semi-annual financial reporting is a good idea. I don't know of any good reason to make this change. With the amazing amount of fraud being discovered in the US, now is not the time to make such a change in corporate reporting. Thank you

---

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It took years and a lot of money to get these millionaires convicted and now you just want to slap them on the hands. Leave well enough alone.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Meep it quarterly

---

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly earnings should be reported or a lot of people might invest in something else like gold or silver.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need accountability for all corporations and their leaders! There should be much more we need to know about how they do business! Much more!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Necessary - critical to check and balance government.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reports

Moussa Fofana

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Not a good process. Remain with current status. Corporations have proven to be unreliable regardless of contracts or verbal promises.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 this is another recipe for fraud... small investors will leave stocks a flood the bond market... how much is trump making on this BSW...

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Maurice Dayan
Finance Director
Bluestar Alliance LLC

More information leads to better investment decisions, and more frequent reporting keeps management on their toes.

Thank you,

Maurice Dayan

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Enron was an utter embarrassment to our society. If the SEC capitulates to the rich, what kind of protections do any of us have?

Lisa Joeckel

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Wanda Thompson Retired: Keep it Quarterly reporting, it's fair for the American people to be informed if needed!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S-7, 2026 15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why is even OUR Securities and Exchange Commission bowing to the Trump whims? We, as investors, deserve to know where we stand, just as we always have; Trump economy or not. Please do better. Your children and grandchildren are depending on it.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need and even more -THEY- need quarterly accountability!
Please do not pass!

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly financials as they are. We investors insist on it for accountability.

Leo Schick

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 ABSOLUTELY KEEP IT!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Kody Adcock, I'm a nurse, and I want large corporations to be held accountable to their shareholders, including myself, my family, and anyone who invests in index funds, which is just about everybody.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Laura Wright, RBT Quarterly reporting is essential to corporate accountability. Please do not change the requirement.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Monthly reports should always be published.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No bloody way. In ANY other Presidential Administration this terrible idea never would have gained any traction whatsoever. Only in the second Trump Administration could a measure be proposed designed solely to game individual investors and benefit insiders and hedge funds. For the better part of a century quarterly reporting has served its purpose. To change it now would be aiding and abetting a future white collar crime wave.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quartet reporting. It works well as it is. There is no good reason to change it.
Jerry Shaw, retired Firefighter

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Absolutely wrong to go that route. It's just being made easier for people to hide their wrong doing.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No no no transparency is needed to stop fraud. There is already way too much fraud in this country.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To whom it may concern,

I am a service worker in Nashville, Tennessee. Amid all of the other turmoil we have been experiencing in our great country, I see this as just another egregious and obvious attempt to further defraud and steal from the American public. Disgusting. I absolutely do not support the SEC's proposal to move away from quarterly reporting. The public does not support this. Please, do the right thing.

Sincerely,
Rachel Acevedo

Sent from my Galaxy

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly !!!

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep QUARTERLY reporting

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reports.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Accountability is important. Signatures on reports keep CEOs more honest. Quarters reports must stay in place.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting should be mandatory. As a long time public servant, who will greatly rely on investments to survive upcoming retirement, it is ridiculous to read that the SEC wishes to reduce the general public's knowledge regarding potential and existing investment by reducing the frequency of pertinent disclosure. It's pathetic that this idea is even on the table. Nancy Manning

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting keeps all investors informed and upholds accountability. We must keep quarterly reporting.

Thank you!

Michelle Smallwood

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Both consumers and investors have a right to regular quarterly reporting and companies that profit off consumers have an obligation to be transparent. Stop the greed of the corporations. You should be working for all of us.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need protection for our retirement funds. We need all the information we can get. 3 months is barely enough to make good decisions. 6 months is total blindness.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My question is simply why? This is the shadiest administration that has ever been in the White House. I'll pull everything out!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is ridiculous that corporations think they can hide financial information when it impacts so many; employees, stockholders, and the public as costs rise. Keep the quarterly law for financial reporting. Claudia Cleary—philanthropy support staff

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 MORE reporting is needed. NOT LESS!!!

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Victor Quijano, investor, about to retire let's keep the per quarter requirements for this important legislation.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cutting reporting to twice a year leaves regular investors flying blind while insiders keep all the advantages. Transparency every quarter isn't a burden — it's the bare minimum. Don't hand Wall Street a six-month blackout."

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 If everything was on the up and up why do we need this? People who operate in the dark are doing illegal practices! We can see the corruption now and nothing happens if they go dark we are in trouble! At least try to represent hard working Americans that is your job!!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This isn't a new idea. It didn't work then, it won't work now

---

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 SEC reporting quarterly is crucial. Do not change reporting to every 6 months. That’s ridiculous and shady!

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need more transparency, not less! After years of working in tech for companies ranging in size from 16 person startup, to a 1.5 Millie. Employee monolith, I’ve seen companies grow through every stage. The only ones WH will benefit from this change are the top .1%.
Stella Jacoby
Retired (tech)

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting. It’s not overly burdensome, it protects investors and shareholders.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I’m so sick and utterly exhausted seeing the disproportionate wealth in the U.S. - please stop removing checks and balances. It makes me just want to give up on everything. Yes, everything.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a Government agency, the SEC’s purpose is to protect the public from unscrupulous business practices which cause financial harm to investors and the general public. Without these protective measures, the SEC no longer serve its purpose, which is a violation to its very existence.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please stop the corruption

---

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is a partisan issue. Wealthy republicans want to abolish the SEC altogether. They have been pushing these issues since Bill Clinton signed to abolish the Glass-Steagal Act. They have consistently pushed to reduce the size SEC department. Since trump was sworn in for his second term (January 20, 2025) both he and his family plus many other investors have significantly defrauded Wall Street and this needs to stop. The SEC as a department needs to be significantly increased.

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cath Stohr , Retired — The Quarterly reports must continue as normal for transparency and accountability.

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I would like to see the reports come out monthly. If not, keep them quarterly. Thank you.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly reporting!

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Linda Peters, Retired. Reporting should remain quarterly. I cannot afford to have losses to my portfolio after all these years of saving to allow me a comfortable retirement.

Sent using myEarthLink

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I request that the SEC maintain quarterly reporting so investors can have timely information about the companies the are invested in or planning to invest in. Reducing this reporting to two times a year will keep investors in the dark and cause losses of their hard earned monies.

Thank you,

Jimmy Fluri
Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Public companies have an obligation to report quarterly for transparency so that investors can make informed decisions. I am a retiree with investments and lack of information could ruin my financial decisions. Please don't widen the window for companies to have a bigger opportunity to commit fraud.
Angela Goggins, retiree

Sent from my iPhone

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Rule S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Public companies have an obligation to report quarterly for transparency so that investors can make informed decisions. I am a retiree with investments and lack of information could ruin my financial decisions. Please don't widen the window for companies to have a bigger opportunity to commit fraud.
Angela Goggins, retiree

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 These rules were put in place to PREVENT the financial disaster that occurred. Rolling then back will just allow for a repeat of history and hard working Americans will lose their life savings because of it if you move forward with rollbacks.
Regards,
Frederic Machard

Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anonymous Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 What are you trying to hide? Who are you trying to protect? This move would certainly not benefit anyone but the ones getting rich off the backs of the rest of us! Helene Morrison, retired, just a gal trying to protect what little I have and make sure my grandkids have THEIR opportunities, too.

Anonymous Motley fool community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous We need transparency

---

Anonymous None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that's a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right?

Anonymous Retired — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Publicly traded companies should report at least four times a year, not two! Less reporting means less transparency, and less transparency leads to greater uncertainty. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. I do not support any attempts to reduce reporting requirements for publicly traded companies.

Anonymous Retired — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Reporting should be 4x per year

---

Anonymous Anonymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Businesses I work with are held accountable through their monthly reporting. It underpins momentum for growth. Businesses I invest in should also be held under the same scrutiny. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it.

Anonymous Economically educated citizen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I strongly oppose the proposed rule that would allow regulated companies to switch to semi-annual reporting rather than quarterly reporting. I am in favor of more, not less, transparency in our economic system in order to give investors and citizens more information about the decisions they make. Thank you.

Anonymous I manage my own investment portfolio. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I am against the proposed semiannual reporting rule S7-2026-15. I am a retiree who self-manages my investment portfolio. Changing quarterly reports to semiannual reports reduces the transparency I need to successfully manage my investments. Semiannual reporting will allow corporations to conceal the consequences of their good and poor management decisions for a longer time. This unnecessarily exposes me to missing out on timely buy/sell decisions, costing me money that supports my retirement. Whoever recommended this change is not a friend of the individual investor

---

Anonymous individual — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous individual I want to stay with quarterly reporting not semiannual.

Anonymous Individual Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I have invested in the equity markets since 1979 and make decisions on what to invest in using information available to me from a variety of sources, including the quarterly reports from individual companies. If the quarterly reports are no longer available four times a year, this will handicap my decision-making. Let's keep it a level playing field with as much timely information available as possible to support informed decision-making.

Anonymous Individual Investor, member of Motley Fool Reader Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Keep the reporting requirements at 4 times per year. Changing reporting to 2 times per year reduces transparency. It makes it harder to see trends, which is negative.

Anonymous Member — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Semiannual is what allows less transparency, only making it harder for consumers to detect fraud and Ponzi scheme metrics from these reports that should be audited, but we need to maintain a quarterly report to KNOW WHAT WE OWN. This bills seems to lobbied which is antithesis to the constitution, and should be investigated for the need/ causation of this bill

---

Anonymous Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Financial reports twice a year is a lack of information. I am opposed to it

---

Anonymous Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Less information does not benefit stock owners. Decision making requires transparency. Information is getting cheaper to prepare as the digital arms race progresses. So for companies the burden isn’t as heavy as it used to be.

Anonymous Ms. Working Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Ms. Reducing the reports we are owed per year is not a good solution if the goal is to help empower and protect the little guy, ie the average investor. If the company wants our money to support their stock, then the company must accept that it comes with the responsibility of keeping investors properly informed throughout the year. Rollouts of AI across companies are making it easier than ever to generate reports, summarize findings, highlight discrepancies, etc. If there is any change to be made to "ease" the burden on the company, perhaps consider notifying all owners by email and making the quarterly reports available online for us to look up. Reporting on any respectable company's actuals is already taking place on a weekly, monthly cadence. Sharing that information 4 times a year should not be a burden.

Anonymous The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I am an investor and quarterly reports help me make better decisions about my investments and retirement savings. If the reports are less frequent, there is potential for fraud, less transparency and I don't have valuable information to make decisions on my investment for 6 months, which is not ideal. A lot can go wrong in 6 months and quarterly reporting helps to bring changes in a company to light. Timely information matters. Even if companies say the reporting requirements increase costs, AI should help with this issue or they can figure out a way to manage it. Transparency is a main pillar in a free and fair stock market and the quarterly filings should remain. Thank you.

Anonymous The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I am completely against the proposal to reduce corporate reporting requirements to twice per year. As an individual investor, more information is required rather than less. This proposal is yet another example of the on-going corruption enabled by this administration to give more power to political and corporate insiders, and will undoubtedly be a bad policy for American individual investors.

Anonymous The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous I strongly support the current quarterly reporting process. Most companies listed/controlled by the SEC rules operate in a Dynamic environment requiring great transparency by internal leadership to the equity/owners. This transparency allows the owners to drive good corporate internal behavior not only to the employees and shareowners but also the American economy. Quarterly reporting allows the company a greater chance to identify and then react to changing external market dynamics and or internal ethical issues. I retired after spending 35 years at General Electric. During these 35 years I witnessed some leaders distort the financial numbers for personal gain which later negatively affected shareholders in the long run. Again, I support the current quarterly reporting process.

Anonymous The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous Every policy to apply oversight seems to be under attack by this administration. This period in the history of the US could be called "The Great Erosion". The narrative is of course something other than just a favor to whatever industry is being served. As an avid investor i rely on current, accurate and frequent updates on information to make my investing decisions. Cutting that information frequency by half is not a service to "the market" - it's a detriment. And a simply political gift to industry.

Anonymous The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anonymous As a shareholder to any business I hold position in; I need quarterly reports. With the advent of AI this makes for an even easier job for the company to share. This sharing is meaningful to the relationship between company and shareholder. If the reporting reduces, trust is lost, value is lost and the house of cards fall. Transparency and daylight make a difference to the way our economy performs and is standard business practice for a reason.

Anoymous — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anoymous As individual investors have limted number of resources and access to wall street information, it is important not to further limit by these type of rules. The company's will not be taxed or burdened with four qurterly rports. Request SEC to eliminate this proposal.

Anson Kirkpatrick — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anson Kirkpatrick Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Anson K. Technician. After seeing the news this should be the standard for companies. We're all affected by the way companies operate in our city, we pay taxes and so should they

Sent from my iPhone

Anthony Cockerill — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anthony Cockerill Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Tony, retired! Keep the current quarterly reporting, quarterly reporting keeps the smaller personal investors better informed of market and overall economic health...

Sent from my Galaxy

Anthony Daniele — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anthony Daniele Sometimes, less is more. This is not one of those sometimes. Investors need accurate and recent information in order to invest intelligently. Especially now, when there are questions about insider information/trading. Big money always seems to have an inside track. Even if not true, it is often believed so. Maintaining quarterly reporting will help to stem such speculations. Reports come out a little while after the quarter as it is. Allowing more time to pass will make some information irrelevant. PLEASE, make no change.

Anthony Delmonico — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anthony Delmonico Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting needs to stay. Too much fraud can happen otherwise.

Sent via the Samsung Galaxy S25, an AT&T 5G smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

Anthony Grasso — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anthony Grasso Public company reports should remain at 4 times per year.

Anthony Howard — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Anthony Howard Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hello,

I support maintaining quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. In fact, given the technology available today, I do not see a compelling reason to reduce reporting frequency, and there is a reasonable argument that more frequent reporting could be possible. Investors have greater access to information than ever before and deserve timely transparency regarding the companies in which they invest.

Moving away from quarterly reporting would be a step backward. Less frequent reporting would reduce transparency, make it harder for investors to evaluate risks and performance, and increase the information advantage held by insiders and large institutional investors. Public markets function best when information is broadly available and disclosed regularly.

While concerns about short-term decision-making are often cited, limiting the flow of information to investors is not the solution. Accountability and transparency are fundamental to healthy capital markets. I encourage the SEC to preserve quarterly reporting requirements rather than weaken them.

Best,

Anthony Howard

Anthony J Pavarini — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anthony J Pavarini I am a retail investor but follow all the quarterly reports from the companies I own stock in as well as perspective investments. I feel losing fifty percent of the valuable information about how and what these companies are doing greatly reduces the investor's clarity on the value of the investment. I, for one, am greatly opposed to this proposal. With AI and other automation tools available, there is no true savings on cutting back on reposting to your investors. Regards, Anthony J Pavarini

---

Anthony Keser — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anthony Keser As an individual, non-professional investor, I value quarterly reports as they provide an update on the business I'm investing in at regular intervals. Please keep the quarterly cadence, otherwise we are giving even more edge away to inside traders, politicians and Wall Street hedge funds.

Anthony M Vassallo Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anthony M Vassallo A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. That is wrong. Transparency is a paramount objective. The proposal should be rejected.

Anthony Sevinsky — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Don't steal more you got enough already From: Anthony Sevinsky Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 You better keep quarterly reports you guys are crooks I know the minutes you try to pull this you guys are robbing America

---

ANTHONY TERHAAR — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: ANTHONY TERHAAR Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING
SO CORPORATIONS CANNOT SCREW THE WORKING PEOPLE

Anthony Tiliacos — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anthony Tiliacos Less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Please keep company reporting at four times per year.

Anthony Tompkins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Anthony Tompkins Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Reducing the accountability of CEOs will increase the likelihood of fraud and impropriety. This regime doesn't care about blatant criminality and this action demonstrates that position clearly.

Kind regards,
Anthony Tompkins

Anthony Vigilante — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anthony Vigilante A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that's a mistake. We need more tranparency not less. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Anthonys Flooring Design's, Inc. none — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anthonys Flooring Design's, Inc. I feel quarterly reports are a requirement if we are expected to invest in business interests. To restrict it to twice a year would be a major mistake. Many things can happen in a quarterly span. To expect investors to rely on a 6-month report is absurd. I know I will not stand for it. I'll find a different way to invest, where I can retrieve quarterly reports from the company I am investing with.

Antoinette Quesada — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Antoinette Quesada Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Accountability is on the line! This law stems from abuse of power and affected many hard working Americans. We deserve better and to keep good laws in place!

Antoni Nabzdyk Owner of the Monopolistic Investor Substack — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Antoni Nabzdyk I find this proposal very bad for the transparency of a business - as an investor in US companies, I like the idea of quarterly reports - it shows me the growth over time and not what is in the UK for example: they have semiannual reports, but that gives investors less room for comparing the performance. Please don't do this.

Antonino Saury The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Antonino Saury Quarterly reports give a very good context of what is happening to a company, if you extend those reports, when they update the stake holders a lot of caos can occur if wrong decisions are informed 6 months later. With AI, quarterly reports are presumably easier to do and easier to audit. Companies are used to do it, why change it?

Antonio De Pau — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Antonio De Pau Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hand off our quartly report!!!!!!!
We like this way we
Like to see the performance and to know all what happen!!!!!!!!!!!

Sent from AT&T Yahoo Mail on Android

Antonio De Pau — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Antonio De Pau Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We like our quartly report for our future and our investment we need to know and controll every aspect of the statement quartly!!!!!!

Sent from AT&T Yahoo Mail on Android

Antonio Iglesias — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Antonio Iglesias The US economy has been the envy of the world decades. Investors from all over the world invest in US companies in large part because of the faith they have in our regulations around reporting and transparency. Changing to bi-annual reporting will harm that faith in our system. Do not fix something that is not broken. I urge you to kill the proposal that changes the frequency of quarterly reports. As a self-directed citizen-investor, I rely on these quarterly reports to guide my investments. Do not blunt this tool.

António S — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: António S Regular and transparent communication from the businesses in which I hold even the smallest stake is crucial for staying consistently informed, enabling me to make decisions as needed or intended. In the more and more volatile world we live in, this is unavoidable for any individual investor or saver; the more information is available, the more likely is to make better decisions. Four reports per year is a good standard for staying informed and making timely decisions.

Antony McKenzie -Cianciaruso Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Antony McKenzie -Cianciaruso We need to be more informed not less.😀😁😊

Antony Padro — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Antony Padro Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is a Horse * move. Another reason to stay out of the market

---

Anubandh — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Anubandh Semi-annual reporting will reduce transparency. Our mania to reduce cost to the company shouldn't lead to blunders.

---

aojo36 — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: aojo36 Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly report requirements to help protect investors knowledge of what a corporation is doing with our investments. Thank you. Arlene Oisten, retired financial analyst for the State of Michigan. My investments are for living expenses in retirement and hopefully something to help my son, grandsons and great grand children.

Sent from my Galaxy

Apollo Business Consultants Ltd. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Apollo Business Consultants Ltd. n/a

---

Aprell Davie — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Aprell Davie Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We the public deserve to see these numbers on a quarterly basis. Fraud goes undetected the longer the numbers are kept secret. We have trusted the SEC to protect us…please continue with the trust we have placed in your organization.

Aprell Davie

April — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: April Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 More frequent information on a quarterly basis is better for me the individual investor. And keeps companies more transparent. History shows that there is a bigger benefit for more people for quarterly information versus semi annual.

Sent from my iPad

April Diana — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: April Diana Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do not allow a six month period between reporting. Must stay three.

April Niver, Ph.D.
Quality leadership in the public square requires both a strategy for the win and a soul for the work. I am here to help. Call me.
484-548-0042
Easton 6 Representative, Northampton County Democratic Committee
Northampton County Representative, PA Democratic Committee
Comms Chair, PA Dems Progressive Caucus
Founder & CEO, Niver Consulting & Creative Life, LLC.

April Hull The Motley Fools Group — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: April Hull Investing is ownership of a piece of a business, and we deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. It makes it impossible to make informed investing decisions.

Aquila Martin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Aquila Martin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please for us regular folks keep this quarterly.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

---

aram kadish motley fools — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: aram kadish I disagree with the proposal to minimize the number of reports per year by publicly traded companies to 2 versus the current 4. I personally like to keep abreast of what the companies are doing throughout the year and having only 2 reports provides me less insight into the workings of each company.

Aravind Babu Parvathala — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aravind Babu Parvathala I am opposed to this reduction on frequency of reporting from public companies. With ever growing intellectual property companies are becoming more and more secretive about how they conduct their business, quarterly reports are the public's only recourse to regulatory mandated peek into company's financials and conduct (directly or indirectly). Reducing it further would only loosen the hold on compliance, reduce share holder visibility and frankly as an investor I want more mandatory transparency than less.

Ardis Geiseman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Ardis Geiseman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 SEC: Keep Quarterly Reporting.
The quarterly reporting is working well. Why change reporting to twice yearly when clearly quarterly is working so well.
Ardis Geiseman a concerned citizen. I'm retired and live in IL.

Sent from my iPhone

Ardyce Coffey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Ardyce Coffey Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I support quarterly reports!!! It's been shown in the past that 2 reports/yr encourages CORRUPTION!!! It's disgraceful and disgusting that people cannot be trusted to present the TRUTH!!

Ariana B — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ariana B Investment is ownership and owners should know the status of their company. Cost savings as an excuse is absurd when companies are laying off real employees to use AI for reports like these and "saving" money along the way.

Arkadeep Mitra — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Arkadeep Mitra I am strongly against allowing companies to elect to report twice a year instead of four times.

Arlene Andersen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Arlene Andersen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Quarterly reports are necessary for investors to make informed decisions using current conditions of the companies in which they invest. I need to know what my money is in companies that are not hiding important information from me.

Arlene Bandas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Arlene Bandas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a widow with limited income I track my finances carefully especially in this economy. America is not meant to be land of the billionaires and the heck with everyone else.

Arlene Leung Motley Fool community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Arlene Leung I oppose allowing public companies to only report earnings twice a year as this will decrease the transparency into the management and performance of said companies.

Arlene Vazquez-Merzeau — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Arlene Vazquez-Merzeau Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reports

Sent from my iPhone

Arlette Miller — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Arlette Miller Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Giving corporations more time to cheat is NOT a smart option.

Sent from my iPhone

Arlle Warren — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Arlle Warren Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly! My name is Arlle Warren, Retired. Keep it Quarterly Keeps company's honest.

Sent via the Samsung Galaxy S25+, an AT&T 5G smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

Arlle Warren — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Arlle Warren Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly! My name is Arlle Warren Retired. Keep it Quarterly Keep company's honest

Sent via the Samsung Galaxy S25+, an AT&T 5G smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

Armand Lepage US individual investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Armand Lepage Is this more of the Trump administration's "transparency" on display? Less information for the owners of the nation's businesses? What happened to the old SEC, the one that was in the investor's corner?

Armanda Famiglietti — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Armanda Famiglietti Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm Armanda

Famiglietti, a US citizen, retired and a voter. I'm writing to plead for the SEC to continue to require corporations to submit quarterly reports. Half year reports would be a mistake because 6 months is too long a time without accountability. SEC do the right thing for Americans.

Armando Dada — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Armando Dada I believe this would only misinform the investor, there is really not a lot to save especially now that AI tools help do these reports, and we as owners have the right to get these reports 4 times a year as it has always been the case

---

Armichael Torrey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Armichael Torrey Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There's so much grift, lying and cheating going on right now, we should make them do it monthly. But quarterly is better than 6 months. Don't change that rule!

Arnold G Ricard Motely Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Arnold G Ricard I greatly oppose reducing the number of require Investor reports from 4 to 2! This only weakens our informed relationship with the company/ institution we financially support. Pleas keep the status quo. Thanks.

Arnoldo Fernandez Montalto — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Arnoldo Fernandez Montalto I want to receive updates from the companies I own 4 times per year (every quarter). While I understand that releasing quarterly updates may feel too or drive shirt term, I think the update is needed.

---

arouth2 — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: arouth2 Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I oppose the changes. They would reduce transparency; interfere with investor's decisions regarding handling investments znd overall serves no useful purpose for the investor. There is no valid reason for this chsnge

Sent from my Galaxy

Art Araya — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Art Araya Here is a revised, concise comment tailored to your perspective as an individual investor who wants more data: --- As an individual investor, I strongly support increased corporate transparency and access to data. However, I oppose the specific proposed semiannual reporting rule (File No. S7-2026-15). Instead of simply reducing the frequency to a semiannual format, the Commission should focus on enhancing the quality, standardization, and real-time availability of existing disclosures without creating fragmented reporting cycles that do not serve retail investors effectively. ---

---

Art Seden — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Art Seden Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To whom it may concern,
I am a senior citizen and have been on disability since 1998. Although I don't have a large amount of money invested in the stock market I am a retail investor, Sarbanes-Oxley is not a suggestion, and reporting should be kept quarterly to keep companies honest. I remember the Enron fiasco and wonder what has changed since then to warrant going from requiring quarterly signatures to semi annual signatures. If you don't keep companies in line with the threat of jail time they will test the boundaries to see how much they can get away with. The SEC is supposed to protect the public not the CEOs, CFOs and companies.

If they can't review their books four times a year and sign a paper saying that there are no false statements then their salaries should be cut in half since they are not fulfilling their duties to the public. You have to wonder WHY exactly does the SEC want to change a rule that is working for one that is clearly flawed from the outset.

Maybe Congress should subpoena the SEC chair and ask them why they wish to change a strong enforcement rule for a much weaker rule. This does not pass the smell test and I would advise the SEC to reconsider changing this rule before they find themselves on the wrong side of public opinion.

Respectfully…Art Seden

Artemis Ameretsu — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Artemis Ameretsu Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 For folks who invest, it ain't right to keep us in the dark. If a company needs more than a couple months to get their act together they shouldn't be public.

Arthur Beauverd, III — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Arthur Beauverd, III I am against reporting twice a year due to not know what is going on with the companies I have a vested interest in. I need to know their financial stability as soon as I can to protect my investment. There are tools available to assist with timely reporting and more are being developed now. It is a cost companies pass on and part of doing business with the public. If they do not want to report they should go private.

Arthur Cole — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Arthur Cole Investors need 4 Reports a year, Not 2. Transparency is very important and Investors need Quarterly Reports. In a volatile Market, More Information is better than less. The SEC should make No Changes.

Arthur Gans Retail Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Arthur Gans Informed decisions will clearly be more difficult if this proposal is implemented, and will undermine transparency between companies and their stock holders. The proposed report periods will create a longer window of speculation in the media—not what we need. Also, Insiders are likely to learn of significant stock moving changes further in advance of the retail investor than they do now. Please take this under consideration. Thank you, A . Gans

---

Arthur Gardner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Arthur Gardner Our world communication moves ever faster. Data flows instantly. The proposal to only report twice a year is illogical given how efficient communication can be if used correctly. I disagree with the proposed change as it gives poor performers longer to hide the truth.

Arthur Hagar The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Arthur Hagar S7-2026-15 appears to be a solution looking for a problem. Unfortunately, the solution will likely disadvantage individual investors as opposed to company insiders, large Wall Street firms, and other institutional investors. I suspect that is actually the driving force behind this proposal - to assist those groups in 'screwing' individual investors. Quarterly reports help to protect individual investors so that we get access to important data regarding corporate financial performance in a timely manner. While the proposal does allow companies to choose quarterly reports, the ones that are most likely to opt for semi-annual reporting are precisely the ones that need to report quarterly due to the fact that they are less likely to be covered by Wall Street analysts. The argument has been made that moving away from quarterly reporting will result in less 'chasing' of short-term results by CEO. However, research from the CFA Institute, which studied this exact change in the U.K. market, shows that reporting frequency has no measurable effect on corporate investment behavior. The SEC is accepting a real cost – less transparency for individual investors – for a benefit that the evidence says simply won't materialize. CEO who are motivated for whatever reason to chase short-term goals will do so anyway, since it is usually caused by a desire to enrich themselves. When I purchase stock in my brokerage account, I am a legitimate part-owner of that company. Quarterly reports are how the company shares the full picture with me: where the money is coming from and where it's going; what's working and what's not. I get the financial statements, the management discussion of what happened and why, the trends in revenue and earnings, Q&A with analysts – four times a year. That cadence is more than bureaucratic box-checking. It's the mechanism by which I and other ordinary investors stay informed about the businesses we own. And it allows us to make informed, timely decisions on whether to buy or sell shares of a company's stock. In a time of more and more unscrupulous and self-serving behavior by many business executives, this proposal is a move in the wrong direction.

ARTHUR J STEVENS — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: ARTHUR J STEVENS Please keep quarterly reporting. This is vital to corporate transparency of corporations that choose to be public.

Arthur Lampert — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Arthur Lampert it is working and must be continued to assure timely stock holder information --especially during these turbulent government destruction

---

Arthur Parker Jr. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Arthur Parker Jr. Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency is the proper way to keep capitalism safe. Don't let socialism win.

Arthur Reine — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Arthur Reine Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Return all trading as it once was in the 1980's, no one out ranks we the people, you will obey; The Declaration of Independence, Preamble, The Comstitution From The Inited States

Sent from my iPhone

Arthur Tunik — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Arthur Tunik Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly is the bare minimum. This information should be submitted automatically and daily for immediate public access.

Arthur W Hall — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Arthur W Hall Not in favor of reducing the frequency of public companies reporting. I am a retired nurse who manages my own investments.

Arthur Warren IV Attorney — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Arthur Warren IV I am opposed to reducing the number of times a year publicaly traded stock companies report to financial disclosures. As a former corporate councel, I learned the vital importance of preparing finanicals for pulbic stockholder quarterly disclosures. Now, as a retiree relying on dividend income, public company quarterly financial disclusres are esssential to help iminmize my risk and insure steady dividend income.

Arthur Whiteway — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Arthur Whiteway Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 4 filings a year is not enough! Arthur Whiteway, retired in Florida.

Arturo Aguilera — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Arturo Aguilera Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Corporations need to remain as transparent as possible. Lessening of restrictions only serves to manipulate the market and steal from investors without inside information.

A. Aguilera

Arvella Edwards — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Arvella Edwards Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Accountability and transparency are expected. Reporting every three months is a gateway to anarchy and corruption. Stop this from happening now

Sent from my iPhone

Asa Romberger — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Asa Romberger Reducing from four reports a year to two is in the wrong direction. As an investor, I want to see what the company is doing. Quarterly is minimal

---

Ashleigh Desvigne-Lee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Ashleigh Desvigne-Lee Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Ashleigh Desvigne,Social Worker-As a person just starting in investing . Unless , the entire system is built on criminal activity, why would you even allow companies that are already being found to hide shady practices ! Why would you even THINK 🤔 6months of “ going dark” woukd be a good idea! These companies are USING our MONIES& you would allow a period where the ability to apply shady practices during a period “ allowed” by government to do what they want with my / our hard earned monies is SMART ? Let alone that practice would be ETHICAL? Really, do you want to CRASH this already troubled system? If you allow this you are KNOWINGLY choosing to open the door to even more back door practices , shady dealings & the exchange of monies with out supervision! Why would ANY OF YOU think this was smart unless, as I said the entire system is being ran by criminals! So, let’s see- the truth is in the vote! I SAY NO! Total transparency for EVER! You all can see where ALL OUR MONIES GO … Why should we be the ONLY ONES? The top 1% have already RIGGED the system in their favor, why shouldn’t the rest of us want a few extra Pennie’s to help our families do a bit better? Unles, you never want any of us to ACTUALLY have even a sliver of the “ PIE” you all talk about that AMERICA offers to ALL! With this BS. & the way the system has been headed lately… I am no longer sure! I guess we will see! Wil you all choose just you & yours or the US (Americans) so you all pretend to say you are here for! Proof is in the pudding !

Sent from my iPhone

Ashley Ballew — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ashley Ballew Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a small investor I don't have the resources big firms do. Do not make quarterly reporting optional unless the company has fewer than 20 employees.
Ashley

Ashley Davis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Ashley Davis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
To whom this may concern But the United States has illegally filed a illegal binding contract that I had no knowledge of knowing and they have me as a missing Minor/child alert on me so they can stalk harass and take over my life I was stolen as child and predetors change my gender and date of birth so they attack my finances they root every phone I get im sick and tired of this so they watchin my device but the United States has involvement of Killing my sister Belinda williams and now they targeting me being doing it before I was born and still today help me please

---

Ashley Eddy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ashley Eddy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly is the absolute minimum that should be required. I'm an entrepreneur, a business owner, and someone who has also worked for corporate jobs.

Ashley Nikki Eddy

Ashley Mulis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ashley Mulis Investing relies on timely, transparent reporting. Shielding investors from quarterly reports allows too much time to pass between budget reports and other timely events that affect the reporting on successes and challenges/disruptions of corporate entities. There is already for too much corruption within the stock market and market makers and not enough protections for consumers. This policy shift just amplifies the imbalance. Please do not move forward with this policy. It's bad for investors.

Ashley Poynter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Ashley Poynter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I am writing to oppose the proposed amendments permitting optional semiannual reporting (File No. S7-2026-15).
I am an ordinary investor. My retirement savings sit in a brokerage account and index funds that hold hundreds of public companies. I am not a professional analyst, and I will never sit in a management meeting or get a call returned by investor relations.
The quarterly report is one of the few windows I have into what is actually happening inside the companies I own. Cutting that window from four times a year to two does not simplify my life. It blinds me for six months at a stretch.
The proposal frames this as flexibility. From where I sit, the flexibility runs in one direction. The people who benefit from less frequent disclosure are the people who already have information I do not: insiders, large holders, and the analysts they talk to. When the public filing schedule thins out, the information gap between those people and me gets wider, not narrower. A fairer market is one where the gap is small. This proposal grows it.

Six months is a long time for a problem to stay hidden. Most financial fraud and most quiet deterioration do not announce themselves in a single dramatic event that triggers an 8-K. They show up as drift in the numbers, quarter over quarter, until someone outside the company notices the pattern. Take away two of those four checkpoints a year and you give a struggling or dishonest management twice as long to paper over what is happening before anyone outside has the data to ask. I do not want to find out about a collapse in a single semiannual report when an earlier quarterly filing would have warned me to look closer.
Less frequent reporting will not calm markets. It will do the opposite for the companies that choose it. When real information arrives only twice a year, the days around each release carry the weight that used to be spread across four. Surprises get bigger because they have had longer to build. I expect more violent swings around those two reports, not steadier prices, and I am the one holding the stock when that swing happens.
Comparison from abroad does not reassure me. Other markets that moved to semiannual reporting did so with different investor bases and different protections, and the trade was made by regulators, not by individual savers who would carry the cost. I would rather keep a standard that has served retail investors well than gamble it on the argument that it is burdensome to companies. The burden of a 10-Q falls on companies with the staff and money to handle it. The burden of being kept in the dark falls on me.
I understand the goal of encouraging companies to go and stay public. That is a worthy aim. But it should not be paid for with my visibility into the companies I already own. If the price of more IPOs is less transparency for everyday investors, the SEC is asking the wrong people to pay.
I urge the Commission to retain mandatory quarterly reporting and to reject the optional semiannual regime. Please keep the lights on for the investors who have the least power to see in the dark.

Respectfully,
Ashley Poynter
Chicago, Illinois

Ashley Sofge — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ashley Sofge Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is more fraud on a federal level. This is not an administration that will be known for transparency. Between this and television shows being cancelled for hurting the president's feelings, I'm convinced we are living in the twilight zone.
My name is Ashley Gainey. I'm a dispatcher. This matters to me because I'm able to make small investments and I'd like to have the same chance as rich people to make a future. Please show you work for the people and not the 1%.

Sent from my iPhone

Ashlie Long at Reflections Salon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Ashlie Long at Reflections Salon Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We must keep quarterly reporting! its important to united states citizens to have fair accurate reporting

Utah

Ashlie S — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Ashlie S Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Since gambling is illegal, I'm asking you to keep quarterly reporting.

6 month reporting would turn investing basically into an act of gambling - how can millions of people make informed investment decisions without up to date information? They can't. You will do harm to millions of people if reporting changes to only every six months.

I believe the point of life is to support everyone's well-being as much as possible, not to harm as many people as possible. You have the opportunity to have a positive impact on people. I urge you to do so by maintaining quarterly reporting.

Ashlie Schares, Founder & Executive Adviser

Aslam Ghouse — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aslam Ghouse Less transparency only helps those closest to the information - insiders, large financial institutions. It further concentrates power, profits and increases the dependence on these oligopolies. A market that is truly free will promote more transparency and more frequent sharing of information, not less. The cost of reporting can come down significantly with the us of AI - reducing the reporting frequency removes an incentive to go down this path. Cost considerations are simply a straw man.

Athima Chansanchai — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Athima Chansanchai Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I'm a retail investor and I rely on quarterly reports to make decisions about my investments and retirement savings. What you're proposing is reckless and highly suspect. If these companieshave nothing to hide, they should have no problems with quarterly reports. Transparency is essential in a democracy amd a free market economy and I hope that that's what we still are. More accurate reporting, not less, is what we need now more than ever, to make informed decisions.

Attila Vizauer Flight Instructor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Attila Vizauer I reject the idea of reduced reporting frequency. Reduced reporting frequency leads to more speculation, gives more time to companies to hide and mask uncomfortable facts. Companies must find other ways to reduce their costs. I strongly reject the idea of saving on owner/shareholder information! I find it outrageous that this idea has even come up as a way of making themselves more "economical".

Aubrey C Warner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aubrey C Warner I oppose the reduction in quarterly reports. As an individual investor, I rely on that information for investing in stocks.

Aubrey Oslund — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Aubrey Oslund Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hello,

Thank you for considering comments on this issue. I do hope it's more than a symbolic gesture, and that you feel the weight of the opinions of the people.

The very last thing this country needs right now is to allow corporations to have more control and less accountability. Aside from the possible large-scale economic consequences (which plenty of people are certainly commenting on), the optics at this moment indicate that it's another way for the royal court (sorry, Freudian slip) to enrich themselves on the backs of everyone else. We need to have unity, which requires trust, to be rebuilt, and this move would only widen the current chasm. There is no need to loosen corporate oversight when the quarterly process has been around for so long, aside from a not-so-hidden desire to lie, cheat, and steal. The SEC is here to prevent exactly that, so negating this move is the absolute bare minimum you could do.

- Aubrey Oslund, Redmond, OR

Audrey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Audrey Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly!

Audrey Atlas none — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Audrey Atlas Less is not more. We want the same info we have been getting 4 times a year.

Audrey Crossman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Audrey Crossman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The SEC has no business keeping information from investors. Small investors need to know if their money is growing or losing. We have had Quarterly reporting for the last 50 years. It is not time to change and go backwards and have this information withheld and only available every six months.. This is outrageous!
American taxpayers have already been pushed to the limit with Trump’s outrageous spending on ridiculous things like $16 million on a reflecting pool and then botching the whole thing up for his ballroom that he wants. Beyond ridiculous.

Audrey Peck
Alpine, CA

Audrey Franklin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Audrey Franklin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

Why would you want less reporting than more? It reeks of changing rules to give succor to the wealthy and blind side little investors is an evil

---

Aurea Rivera — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Aurea Rivera Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Since it is our money we as the owners must have total control not a leek a boo approach. We are not children, we are adults and must be treated as such. You have no right to take our earnings!

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Aurmaudra Bradley CPA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Aurmaudra Bradley In reading the proposal I do not see how it serves the public interest. While it does give companies more flexibility that is not nor should it ever be the SEC's primary goal. Decreased reporting means decreased visibility which can serve only to harm the investors.

Austin Carter n/a — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Austin Carter I am not interested in less reporting requirements for Public companies. If anything, I would prefer additional reporting, but understand that may not be feasible. The currently quarterly reporting is a good cadence that shareholders are used to and appreciate. Nothing has shown that quarterly reporting causes an undue burden on companies, and reducing the reporting requirements will only hurt individual investors.

Austin Higgs — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Austin Higgs I do not agree and strongly recommend not allowing companies to only report twice a year. As an investor I should have access to as much information about the company as possible to ensure that I am investing strategically and knowledgeable. I think this will cause a tidal wave for the market as a whole and make people reconsider due to not having access to as much information. Thank you for your consideration.

Austin McKown The Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Austin McKown Public ownership improves accountability. We cannot responsibly own stock and support business if we are not informed. Publicly held companies should strive for more transparency.

AV — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: AV File No. S7-2026-15 – Opposition to Proposed Semiannual Reporting Option To the Securities and Exchange Commission, I am submitting this comment in opposition to the proposed rule under File Number S7-2026-15, which would allow public companies to elect semiannual reporting in lieu of quarterly reporting. As an individual investor, I rely on quarterly disclosures to track the performance and trajectory of the companies I own. Ownership carries an expectation of regular, transparent communication from management. Halving the reporting cadence weakens that connection and reduces the information available to shareholders making capital allocation decisions. The cost-reduction rationale for this proposal is weak. Modern reporting tools, including AI-driven disclosure and analytics systems, have substantially lowered the marginal cost of preparing recurring financial reports. Whatever savings this rule might generate are not large enough to justify the loss of transparency. Reducing reporting frequency does not reduce uncertainty about a company's performance — it just delays when investors learn about it. Companies continue to operate, win and lose customers, and execute or fail at their strategies every day, regardless of filing schedules. When information is withheld longer, it tends to arrive in larger, more disruptive shocks, which can increase volatility rather than reduce it. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal and preserve the current quarterly reporting requirement. Respectfully submitted, Angela Venus

---

Aviva Sernaker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Aviva Sernaker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Acccouability comes from regular quarterly reporting. Please do not remove this reporting from the public. We don't need another crash like 1929!

Aviva E Sernaker

Avril Vergara — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Avril Vergara Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Eliminating quarterly reporting for publicly traded companies opens up dangerous opportunities for companies to cover illicit transactions and poor performance.
This cannot be allowed. As a professional in the industry, I am astonished that this would be allowed. Do not let Presidential influence steer your judgement and allow for poor conduct and governance.

---

avrillee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: avrillee Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I have worked in IT for over 30 years and have mostly supported accounting systems. The elimination of quarterly reporting will absolutely be a negative impact on the quality of the data being presented.

This is due to the difficulty of closing the books per quarter which would be doubled if we only close the books once every 6 months. You may not look at the quarterlies, but they absolutely have an operational function which cannot be ignored.

Sincerely,

April D. Lee

Sent from my Galaxy

Ayala Talpai — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Ayala Talpai Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No. They would only want this for the purpose of deception, lying and thievery. Keep the quarterly reporting

---

Ayala Talpai — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ayala Talpai Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Best solution to avoid graft and corruption is keep a close eye on these people. If they are pushing for it, it means they figure they can cheat that way

---

B & B Services Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: B & B Services Timely information reports are essential to make proper decisions. Quarterly reports are responsible and necessary!

B A Bousquet Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: B A Bousquet The reporting, for all involved, needs to remain quarterly. Don't fix what isn't broken!

B Basher — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: B Basher Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep Quarterly Reporting. Cloaking transactions from investors and the public violates everything required to stabilize free market trade.

B Beeman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: B Beeman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Semi-annual reporting keeps teacher’s 403b accounts more in the dark, while corporations are doing what? Saving a minuscule amount of money while millions of teachers get less information to make informed decisions? We owe it to our tireless educators to keep it at quarterly, so they can focus on the kids.

Brad Beeman
Iowa

This is a private communication

B ROB — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: B ROB Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I have been investing for 40 years, which means companies have been using my dollars for 40 years. Bi-yearly reporting takes away yet another aspect of accountability to the people that makes these companies successful. Insider trading will explode. This is just another money grab in an attempt to leave the hard working majority at a loss. KEEP IT QUARTERLY. Brooke Hubbard, retired and concerned citizen.

Get Outlook for Android

B Stewart — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: B Stewart opposed to any reduction in reporting

---

B W — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: B W Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 If the s ECC does this, it should go ahead and abolish itself. This is one of the few things that both professional and amateur investors alike rely on. Transparency as king and if they don't like it , they don't need to do business on our stock exchange. Frankly, the SEC should be going the other direction.And these violence should be required , not quarterly , but monthly

---

B Walker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: B Walker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting. It is important to keep citizens informed. My name is Beth Walker. I am retired.

Sent from my iPhone

B Wilson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: B Wilson It is a mistake to reduce visibility of companies financial performance. Investors are owners and need to have visibility of their investments.

B. Gehring — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: B. Gehring The current quarterly reporting best serves the interest of retail investors. There are many issues with a stock price that has been cut by 50% or more within the past year. This includes well-known companies like Campbell (CPB), Booz Hamilton (BAH), Wendy's (WEN), Chipotle (CMG). There are MANY more. Any quick screen would uncover them. Retail investors deserve forward looking statements now more than ever. It would be a terrible disservice to the American investing public to reduce the information to which we have access.

B. Johnson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: B. Johnson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 So why should I invest? There is no transparency, I'm not into giving my money for investments but then I don't know what's going on. This doesn't make sense and a financial pitfall for the investor. Shame on you for thinking of entertaining such practice.

B.E. Donner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: B.E. Donner Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a former banker and having worked M&A, I can state unequivocally that it’s crucial that businesses submit their financials quarterly. This gives auditors an opportunity to confirm filings are transparent and that any negative patterns are identified and rectified.

Changing quarterly reporting to semi-yearly assures that nefarious activity has longer to incubate.

Does no one recall the Enron collapse due to internal fraud? And WorldCom after that? Companies operated under lax supervision with complicit board of directors.

Transparency is the only leverage consumers have to ensure companies are operating legitimately.

Do not loosen reporting requirements and allow companies once again to operate in the shadows.

Babajide Awe — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Babajide Awe Please, let's retain quarterly reporting. With the advent of AI this should not be a burden to those responsible for providing us with these reports. Investors or companies' shareholders can also quickly use AI to interprete and summarise the reports. Our aim should be for more transparency, not less.

Babak Rashtian Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Babak Rashtian It is imperative that we do not lower the current quarterly reporting down to every 6 months. As investors, we rely on accurate information. Without this, we are left with volatile market speculation and wild swings based on rumors, social media, and inuendos. In this age of information and technology, transparency and reporting should be improving, not getting worse.

Bahram Kiaie — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bahram Kiaie I oppose Semiannual Reporting. As a private investor, reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners/investors.

Bambi Flowers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bambi Flowers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reviewing and reporting! To much misuse, embezzlement and fraud happening without checks and accountability on regular basis!!!

Barb Allen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barb Allen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I rely on quarterly reporting to make financial decisions. Please do not change this.
Barb Allen
Retired

Sent from my iPhone

Barb Bilderback — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barb Bilderback Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Barbara Bilderback, an American investor and senior citizen whose income is tied to the stock market. Transparency and accountability are not just words but are watchdogs on my financial future since my retirement has been bound to the stock market. K E EP IT QUARTERLY!

Barb Coate — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barb Coate Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting!

Barb Coate

Sent from my iPhone

Barb Goode — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Barb Goode Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Leave our money alone!

Barb Hansen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Barb Hansen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please keep quarterly reporting as a requirement. Investors should be aware how their investments are being managed. It should be a basic right - the right to being informed!
Thank you for your time.

Barb Leddy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barb Leddy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The SEC is handing CEOs a get out of jail free card. This isn't right. We need more accountability of CEOs.

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There is NO need to change this. Change for changes sake and likely some grift.

Barbara Personal — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara I feel quarterly is the appropriate standard, anymore can be accessed with the persons financial company digitally on as needed basis.

Barbara Ahern — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Ahern Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Nothing should be hidden from my portfolio investment. This is criminal. Citizens deserve continuous knowledge on their portfolio of any holding. Regards Barbara Ahern

---

Barbara Angel Louise Sullivan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Angel Louise Sullivan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 With taxes already destroying the foundation of which America was built on, you cannot allow the Opulents of our country grow and keeps suffocating our families.
Barbara Sullivan
Homemaker, Small Business Owner and MOTHER.

Barbara Barry — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Barry Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly!
Barbara Barry

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Block — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Block Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Barbara Block, retired rabbi. Please do the right thing and leave the law unchanged.

Barbara Boltjes — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Boltjes Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Barbara J Boltjes Retired investor- a three month window is the best possible choice- to be able to make decisions that work for our family. Do not change.

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Bryniarski — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Bryniarski Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm tired of the government and big corporations not being transparent in their financial dealings…don't make it worse….keep quarterly financial reporting. Barbara Bryniarski, retired tax accountant

Barbara

Barbara Conaway — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Conaway Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
The SEC was created in 1934 by a strongly controlled Democrat Congress. All the rules are made by a supposed non partisan commission. Joseph P Kennedy was the first chairman of the commission. It is separate from other government administrative agencies. Joseph P Kennedy was the first chairman. The quarterly makes it easier for insider trading, which we have been seeing from government officials. The 6 month review would give less opportunity for that to happen. Accountability is imperative. While I understand the desire to reduce regulatory burden, I believe investors deserve regular, transparent reporting. Trust is built through accountability, and less frequent reporting raises legitimate concerns about transparency and oversight.
With technology today, we should be able to know what the companies in our portfolios are doing on a daily basis.

Barbara Cooper — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Cooper Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Coy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Coy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Accountability is a necessity!

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Elser — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Elser Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is a rich insiders law that is terrible for all citizens so it should not be suggested or even considered. This will lead to private desls among the rich who already are manipulating the common persons' putse strings. Kill this plan.

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Evans — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Evans Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Barbara Evans, retired nurse. I worked 40 + years for my money, long hours away from my family,working holidays, weekends and nights, on my feet many hours taking care of the old, sick and dying. I don't want big business getting richer while us regular folks bear the burden of taxes .

Barbara Finger — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Finger Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly reports. We need them.

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Franklin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Franklin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why are you trying to end a system that protects Americans? Is this because you are trying to protect Oligarchs? You know it’s reckless - can lead to another Financial Meltdown and YOUR names will be culpable. Do NOT reduce reporting to two times a year and let the Oligarchs take their profits and hurt the rest of us small investors.

Barbara Gross

Sent from my iPad

BARBARA GAINES — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: BARBARA GAINES Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting quarterly. People led accountability for their investments and savings. We need transparency.

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Gibbons — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Gibbons Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is not a burden for companies to release quarterly data. If the aren't tracking the data anyway, they are failing monitor their business and should be replaced.

Barbara Gibbons

BARBARA GORMAN MOTLEY FOOL MEMBER — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: BARBARA GORMAN I have been an active investor for 35 years. Public companies need to continue to make quarterly reports. There are pros and cons for quarterly reports as well and biannual reports. It's critical that public companies continue to make quarterly reports to their investors, their shareholders, their owners. I am sure private companies are doing quarterly reports to their boards etc. A tighter ship is better than not. While semiannual reports may be helpful to some businesses, I believe the lack of accountability will not lend itself to companies being stronger and stable. My stocks are my investments that will become my paycheck for 35 years when I can no longer actively work for my weekly pay--these companies have my investment, and I share in their ownership. I expect a quarterly report from them.

Barbara Grajski — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Grajski Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Reporting quarterly results has been required for over 50 years, and there is a good reason for that. A 60-day rule disadvantages all investors but the most sophisticated; even at that, it is too long a time for investors at every level to get the information they need to get sufficient information and will harm the markets.

Barbara Green — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Keep Quarterly Reports From: Barbara Green Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Barbara Green RN. Keep business reports Quarterly. The rich and powerful already have massive benefits over the common people. Don’t allow them more chances to take advantage of people like me.

Sent from my iPhone

---

barbara hallberg — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: barbara hallberg Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 NO!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Henrioulle Lived through Enron's mess — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Henrioulle The proposal to shift from quarterly to biannual is not consistent with prudent procedures that gives individual investors and the public at large enough information to make reasonable judgements about the financial viability of companies outside the purview of insiders who are able to track what is really happening. Enron proved that we must at the very least have the quarterly if not more so NO on less information. Keep the quarterly intact. Do the right thing.

Barbara Horton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Horton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly repotting is the least these companies can do! Why promote secrecy? What do they have to hide from us!

Barbara Horton, LCSW

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Hughes — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Hughes Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: no more deception, please. We need reporting. Period. Thank you.

Barbara Jenkins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Jenkins Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep this on a quarterly basis! It helps the individual investor! The corporations are already trying to take over as much as they can! Barbara Jenkins, retired!

Barbara Kahane — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Kahane Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep the SEC reporting quarterly. It's very important to maintain transparency and accountability.

B Kahane
Retired Teacher

Sent from my iPad

Barbara Kampstra — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Kampstra Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The last thing they need is LESS accountability. If you back this, you are equally guilty as the are!!! 😡👿💩

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Mansfield Gonzales — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Mansfield Gonzales Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Barbara Mansfield Gonzales, retired employee of 23 years with Texas Employee Retirement System; quarterly reporting is important for retirement programs because the investments need to be protected through access to current, accurate information.

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara McKenna The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara McKenna At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business.

Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. In an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, reporting is more streamlined. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Public-company reportings should remain at four times a year.

Barbara Miller — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Miller Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Barbara Miller. Must keep quarterly reporting. No more Enrons! Help keep CEOs honest!

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Moore — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Moore Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Yes, I want it kept quarterly. Think what we would pay if they go dark.

Barbara Northimgton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Northimgton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need accountability continue quarterly reports.

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Paccione — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Paccione Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly

---

Barbara Parker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Parker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a 60 yr old widow, living on S.S. disability of $1200.00 a month, I can barely afford my monthly bills. I'm sick of hearing about all the loop holes, tax cuts, and illegal insider trading. The rich get richer, and the rest of America struggles as the cost of EVERYTHING rapidly increases. Enough is Enough already. Stop all of the corruption!

Barbara Peterson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Peterson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reports are better er accountability.

Barbara Peterson

Barbara Pison — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Pison Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Absolutely, quarterly reports must be maintained. Semi-annual is too long to be in the dark about stocks' performance.

Barbara Pison

Barbara Powell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Powell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Every 6 month if they are going to steal they would steal every 3 months

Barbara Powell
Real Estate Broker, W Realty Coastal 843-655-2926 I bpowellsells@gmail.com

"Experience Matters"

Barbara Quero — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Quero Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
No company should have the right to go months without transparency. As Americans we depend on transparency from companies to build trust. it forces corporations to be accountable and fair. This protects our communities and democracy. in a time of such uncertainty- transparency is all we have left

---

Barbara Ra.mirez — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Ra.mirez Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Stay with quarterly reports.

Barbara Razza — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Razza Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

We do not want quarterly reporting to change

Barbara Rubin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Rubin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 WHY

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Russo — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Russo Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Schaumburg — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Schaumburg Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please don't disrupt a system that works, transparency is essential for fairness. Maintain quarterly reporting.

Barbara M Schaumburg

Barbara Schilling — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Schilling Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Barbara Schilling. As a retired business owner I recognize how quarterly reporting is crucial to actually knowing the status of a company and without quarterly reporting OUTSIDE, the internal transparency will suffer. As a retired investor who relies heavily on financial advisors to assist in decisions about my future investments I want them to have the most up to date information at their disposal to better recognize trends, surprises or pending disappointment. WE WONT GO BACK to the Enron days or the banking failures of 2007-10 as long as quarterly reporting is demanded.

Barbara Schilling
763-753-4633
"Minnesota" comes from the Dakota phrase Mni Sota Makoce (Land Where the Waters Reflect the Clouds), and I acknowledge that I live and work on indigenous land.

Barbara Schwartz — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Schwartz Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Investors have the right to be informed regularly of decisions being made in the companies they invest in. Allowing less reporting is fraught with risk. We need more transparency,not less. I am a retiree and the money I invest needs to be used responsibly so I don't lose my savings.

Barbara Schwartz, Springfield, NJ

Sent from my iPad

Barbara Selby — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Selby Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is not the 50's. The market moves quickly. Investors want those reports to chart a path. Really it's not hard to, everything is digital now. Sounds like SEC is being lazy and not carrying out their duty! You aren't making any friends by trying to pull the wool over our eyes. If you don't want to be responsible at least give us courtesy of resigning!

Sent from my iPhone

BARBARA STOCK — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: BARBARA STOCK Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a retired senior investor, this fraud scheme in plain site could destroy my golden years. Hands off rigging the stock market. The SEC should protect small investors, not rig the system against them.

Barbara Taborek — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Taborek Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Barbata Taborek, retired educator. At a time when innovation and world events influence performance of our investments more than ever, why would you make the landscape less transparent? This will shake the confidence of the markets. I will be more likely to disinvest, as will other retirees.

Barbara Temples — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Temples Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Sounds like a Very BAD idea- Especially with all the FRAUD that is going on - seems better to keep quarterly for more transparency.

Sent from my iPad

Barbara Thelen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Thelen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
As a 78 year old retiree dependent on my retirement savings and my brokerage portfolio for my income, I am very concerned that a less frequent reporting requirement would allow for lost opportunities to identify anomalies that may be indicating fraud or embezzlement. Please do not move to semi annual as opposed to quarter reporting. More frequent oversight would make it harder for misuses to continue that could result in greater loss of income and more difficulty unraveling illegal practices.

Barbara Torretti — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Torretti Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please, do not change the reporting rules. Continue to require quarterly reporting.

Sent from my iPad

Barbara Vinton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Vinton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is more corrupt practices being allowed or proposed by the corrupt CEOs trying to line the pockets of legislators and board of directors. While the majority will be suffering losses the wealthy will further the wealth gap How the SEC can even consider this is another attempt of the corrupt government administration to find favor with the 1%. Please show Americans the SEC is independent from the reach of this corrupt administration

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara W Armstrong Founder, Barbara Armstrong & Associates LLC — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barbara W Armstrong As a business owner and private investor, I rely on frequent business reporting to make decisions. Reducing required reporting from quarterly to biannual reports reduces small business owner and investor ability to make informed decisions. Please withdraw the proposed changes and keep quarterly reports.

Barbara Wells — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barbara Wells Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Look I don't know about the rest of America but I know that you all and the Republican Party and the oligarchs are all thieves. You don't make your money on legitimate gains you make your money by depriving the American people of their rightful gains. I really wish that we could stop participating in this capitalist system and see how long I'll last without us. Stop being so God * greedy.

Every time y'all get off the regulation leash y'all crash the economy then you turn to the government and say oh won't you bail us out. You shouldn't have been bailed out in '08 you should have been able been made to suck those losses up. It's time to stop socializing your losses and privatizing your gains.

Every time it's time for America to sacrifice you are always look to the working class and the poor to take it on the chin and never ever do you all allow yourself to be deprived of one Thin dime you're horrible and I can't wait till Karma comes to get you. And just one more thing to remind you of you cannot eat money or gold or AI.

--
Sent with mail.com Mail app

Barbara Whitford — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barbara Whitford Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reports. Things change so quickly now. We need to stay informed

Sent from my iPhone

Barbara Woodriff — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Barbara Woodriff Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: what are you thinking?! Of course there should be at least quarterly reporting! As a retired person living on a fixed income, my stock portfolio is crucial to my well-being. Allowing more opaqueness in the stock market is a really shady idea! You're supposed to be protecting the public, not protecting shady dealings!

Barrin Hendricks Engineer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barrin Hendricks Keep Reports quarterly. Keep the public informed. Don't widen the gap of institutional information vs individual information even further.

---

barry — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: barry Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We the people need protection from Corporate Oligards. We have these rules in place because without, it creates caois and destruction. Please don't allow bad history to repeat itself.

Barry R. Shevlin, CFS
Shevlin Investments, Inc
502 Lakeside Drive
Southampton, PA 18966

Dedicated To Consistency & Preservation of Retirement Plans Since 1984

* Securities offered through Registered Representatives of Cambridge Investment Research, a Broker Dealer, Member FINRA/SIPC
* Registered PA, NJ, DE, FL, SC, MD
* Advisory Services through Cambridge Investment Research Advisors, Inc, a Registered Investment Advisor

* Shevlin Investments and Cambridge companies are not affiliated.

* Trading instructions sent via e-mail may not be honored. Please contact my office at (215) 364-8228 or Cambridge Investment Research at (641)472-5100 for all buy/sell orders. Please be advised that communications regarding trades in your account are for informational purposes only. You should continue to rely on confirmations and statements received from the custodian(s) of your assets.

* The text of this communication is confidential, and use by any person who is not the intended recipient is prohibited. Any person who receives this communication in error is requested to immediately destroy the text of this communication without copying or further dissemination. Your cooperation is appreciated.

Barry Breit The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barry Breit I am against the Semi- annual reporting. less information reduces transparency. keep the quarterly reporting system! Respectfully submitted.

Barry Cheney — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barry Cheney I am opposed to the proposal to change the requirement for public company financial reports from quarterly to semi-annually. Information is the lifeblood of making sure that investors have the ability to make wise decisions. Please maintain the current requirement of quarterly reporting.

Barry Collins Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barry Collins I am against the proposed change that a publicly traded company's reporting requirement will be reduced to bi-annaully. I support the current requiement of quarterly reports/filings.

Barry Douglas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Barry Douglas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am a retired GS-15 and also a retired Navy Captain. My working life embodies the acronym “RAA, “ or in full words; Responsibility, Authority, and Accountability. Senior executives in any organization should follow those same principles and values. Especially those receiving large salaries and/or stock payouts. While I recognize the call for looser regulations allows for agility, I believe strongly it also opens the doors for sloppy management and accounting. No highly paid senior executive should encourage this action and show his/her organization and shareholders they maintain that requisite value of personal responsibility and accountability and are willing to act in a fiduciary role every quarter. I strongly encourage the SEC NOT reduce the current requirements as it will have detrimental effects.

Sent from my iPhone
Respectfully,
Barry Douglas

Barry Hutchinson Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barry Hutchinson To whom it may concern, I am against the proposed twice yearly, rather than quarterly reporting required by public companies. While I'm sure the large audit and tax businesses like E&Y are strongly against this, and would have much more valuable information than I would, I believe more information is better than less. If the argument is cost cutting, there may be some merit, however, much of that is already automated, and more and more of it will be in the future, and corporate America gets billions in tax relief already. As an owner of equities in public companies, I see short-termism coming from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. If you own a business and you only get two updates from that business per year, you would be on your heels by the time you found an issue. Let's keep it the way it is. Corporate America will only absorb that gain and beg for another and another. Thank you for your time and consideration in this important issue. Best Regards, Barry Hutchinson

---

Barry Lowery Retired Registered Representative — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barry Lowery It would be a terrible mistake to reduce shareholder reporting to twice per year. Less transparency is not good business. Investors deserve to know with regularity how a company is being managed, current outlook for opportunities and challenges, etc. Please do not shift to a semi annual reporting system.

BARRY M SMITH — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: BARRY M SMITH Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need consistency and quarterly is an appropriate schedule. The public needs to no how their retirement funds are doing frequently.
barrymsmith1@msn.com

Sent from my iPhone

Barry Martin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barry Martin As a stock holder and part owner of many publicly traded companies, I rely on public financial quarterly statements from these organizations to steer my investment decisions. Anything less is too infrequent for real time informed decision making. In fact, monthly “top line” reports would be helpful in addition to full quarterlies. Moving to semi-annual is anti investment and non transparent. Owners deserve frequent access to the books.

Barry Menna School of Life — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barry Menna Reducing SEC reporting from quarterly to semi annual would further reduce my confidence to invest in United States equities markets. There’s already too much stealing and insider trading. If you want to regulate something start with insider trading for elected officials.

Barry N.. Huber — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barry N. Huber I hold stock in over twenty different companies. Although they are not large holdings they are never the less ownership in those companies. As an owner I would appreciate the most information available to me and not being surprised by something a company did five months previously. I am not in favor of semi-annual reporting.

Barry Oselett — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barry Oselett Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Companies must be monitored for any unusual activity regarding their handling of our investments, stock, that we have with them. As a retired person reliant on stocks for income, quarterly reports are important to me.

Sent from my iPhone

Barry Wagman CPA (retired) — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barry Wagman Reducing the reporting requirement to semi-annual corrupts my ability as an owner to assess my investments. As an owner, I have a right to hold my investments accountable, not just twice a year. Irresponsible rule-making!!

Barry Weinshenker Indivual Investor Chicago MBA Econonomics Minor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barry Weinshenker As a Trustee of a family Trust, I need more timely information not less. Insider trading is being allowed to get out of control primarily due lack of public knowledge about significant changes between reports. Note: the increased movement of stocks just before the public is let in on what's going on with the business. This situation will be exasperated with a decrease in public reporting, giving companies and insiders a greater than current edge to varnish the results and bury the bodies. I know because I had 30+ years experience using the shovel.

Barry Wise — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Barry Wise Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly results in the public view so we understand what’s happening. If a company wants to focus on the long term health of their business, then they should express this transparently and create the trust that’s needed to give them time to work on it.

Bart — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bart Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting has been working good. However, I feel there should be monthly reporting for corporations with values exceeding a set dollar point yet to be determined.
If CEOs and SEC bulk at this idea, I would be willing to revert back to quarterly reporting.
Nowhere at any time no for any reason, should any corporation be allowed to report less often than quarterly, otherwise CEOs, CFOs, and the board should be held in prison until such financial statements are signed.
Sincerely,
Bart Peterson

Bart Deatrick Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bart Deatrick As an individual investor and a member of The Motley Fool Community, I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposal allowing public companies to reduce their financial reporting from quarterly to semiannually. At its core, investing represents true business ownership. As owners, individual investors require regular, transparent, and timely communication to properly assess risk and allocate capital. Reducing the frequency of official updates does not encourage long-term thinking; it simply creates information vacuums. In today's digital age, advanced technology and AI have streamlined data collection and disclosure, making the cost-saving argument for fewer reports weak at best. Instead of reducing volatility, cutting reporting frequency will only increase market uncertainty. When information is delayed by six months, the resulting corporate updates will inevitably bring larger surprises, sharper market reactions, and greater volatility. Less transparency never creates better-informed owners. I urge the SEC to preserve the current quarterly reporting framework to maintain a fair, orderly, and transparent marketplace for everyday investors. Thank you for your time and consideration of this matter.

Bart Johansen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bart Johansen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need regular, frequent, open, upfront, available, information reported at least quarterly to keep companies honest. I have lost thousands of dollars due to fraud and embezzlement in my own investments over the years. Steward Healthcare most recently. The mismanagement of funds disrupted the abilities of well trained medical personnel to provide good care. The hospitals were not able to maintain equipment because Steward wouldn't pay their bills. Resulting in death and poor outcomes in some patients in some parts of the country. Thieves can only hide for so long before their deeds are uncovered. Let's not give them greater opportunity to do more harm.
Karen Johansen

Bart Piotrowski — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bart Piotrowski I Invested in a lot of companies over the years as an individual investor and depend on quarterly reports. I think it would be a mistake to reduce the number of reports. Please reconsider and let it stay the way it is.

Barton A Hubbard Tax Law Professor, The Ohio State University (Moritz); Former Assistant Attorney General State of Ohio — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barton A Hubbard Quarterly SEC financial statements (10Qs) are vital to shareholders and debt issuers, potential investors, and civil and criminal law enforcement. Almost all businesses with any substantial debt will be required to submit financial statements at least quarterly. Thus, for most businesses, compliance with quarterly filed 10Qs does not create any significant additional compliance burdens -- the same or more detailed information must be provided to the lenders in any event. With the advances in artificial intelligence LLMs (Large Language Models) the compliance burden has been minimized reducing the cost of compliance dramatically. In sum, whatever merit switching to semi-annual SEC financial statements may have previously had in reducing compliance burdens, it has much less merit now and will have even less in the future.

Barton Brown — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Barton Brown Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Another trump scam…

Barton Wallace — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Barton Wallace I am not in favor of any proposed legislation that changes the number of company reports down to semi-annual from quarterly. That may be a good move for businesses, but not for everyday investors. Time to look out for the average American instead of big business.

Bataille Laurent The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bataille Laurent Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater

---

Bayou Wheel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bayou Wheel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No don’t do that I lost my ass with worldcom

Sent from my iPhone

Bea Brown — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Bea Brown Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Do not make this change.

Beau — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beau Allowing companies to report semi annually will greatly diminish the rights of shareholders. On the surface it appears as though this will allow corporations to save money by creating less collateral for reporting cycles which they claim will create higher share prices for inventors. The implication however is that this just allows a corporation to have a longer runway to generate capital when they may actually be sliding financially. This not only creates a false picture for the analysts and investors, but has the potential to destabilize the entire market if a few companies use this interval in nefarious ways. It wouldn't take much for shareholders and potential investors to second guess any news, pricing, etc. This is a tremendously bad idea. We need more transparency, not less.

BecA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: BecA Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 From UNITED STATES CITIZEN:
People with LITTLE or NO ACCOUNTABILITY find no reason to be honest...RIGHT ...We are being forced into NO PRIVACY in out personal lives.
You think you should hide in shadows even when over other People's business is at stake. This is NEVER OKAY...!

BecA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: BecA Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 From UNITED STATES CITIZEN;

People with LITTLE or NO ACCOUNTABILITY find no reason to be honest...RIGHT ...We are being forced into NO PRIVACY in our personal lives. You think you should hide in shadows when over other People's business is at stake.
This is NEVER OKAY...!
Where is your INTEGRITY...?!

Becky Boyd — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Becky Boyd Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 In this era of lying, cheating, fraud, and stealing, we need to keep the quarterly reporting. Once we get back on the straight and narrow, I may change my mind but for now, we NEED quarterly reporting. Thank you.

Sent from my iPhone

Becky Boyer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Becky Boyer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Reports must continue to be quarterly. Six months is just way too long between them. That doesn't work. Transparency matters!

Becky Day Retail Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Becky Day Hi, I am very concerned that allowing businesses to go 180 days without any financial reporting will further erode the average person's ability to participate in the flush of money already going to the top. As we've seen from Trump, insider trading is alive and well. Retail investors are already at a huge disadvantage to participate in the growth of wealth created by the stock market. Please do not stack the deck even further against the average American that has the ability to participate in the market. Thank you, Becky Day

---

becky goff — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: becky goff Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Rebecca Goff. My husband and I are retired after decades of working hard, diligently saving and carefully investing to fund our retirement. At this stage, we are necessarily more conservative with our investments, but our window for making investment decisions is smaller. Quarterly reports are very important for planning and making these decisions to assure that our savings will last. Thus, I ask you to keep the quarterly reporting requirements currently in place. Thank you.

Sent from my iPad
I

Becky Hardy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Becky Hardy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I request there be no change in the quarterly reporting. This works well.
Thank you.

Becky Koehler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Becky Koehler Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 At minimum, it should be kept at quarterly, but I would like to see it done monthly or every two months. Keep the reporting period short. Make them more honest and give less of an opportunity to mislead.

Sent from my iPhone

Becky Moore — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Becky Moore Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Becky Moore Video Project Engineer

Please stop doing things that affect the American people negatively. Don’t take away our ability to earn returns.

Becky Moore
Project Engineer
13238 Hindry Ave
Hawthorne, Ca 90250
(614) 302-6873

Becky Porter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Becky Porter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please keep the reports quarterly at least. As a retired person I depend on knowing my investments are safe. Please give me that peace of mind.

Becky Schulte — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Becky Schulte Transparency is key to investing in businesses. Without this as an investor I dont know how a company is doing financially which will impact the growth of my retirement investments. It will vausr more volatility in the market as their will be surprised in the market from longer reporting periods. It makes sure businesses are honest in what they report. This will affect the entire financial market. The only one helped by this are businesses who are not making good decisions so thry have longer to share their mistakes or tine to cover them. Since there is no gain for anyone and only potential problems it doesnt make sense to change reporting rules.

Becky Walker The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Becky Walker This is a very bad idea.

---

becky zaloudek — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: becky zaloudek Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Becky Zaloudek, retired, reporting quarterly is so inportant to retirees and people my age (75). We don't have time to wait for 6 months. We could be dead by then.

Bekki Riggan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bekki Riggan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 These investor safeguards should remain in place as they are. I've seen no good justification for them to change. I spent my whole career in government service, it's our job to protect people from these sorts of regulations that hurt others only to serve a few.

Bekki Riggan
Deputy CEO
Placer County CA

Sent from my iPhone

Belinda Bjorklund — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Belinda Bjorklund Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Filings need to remain quarterly. This proposal jeopardizes the individual investor. Keep the protections that the consumers deserve. Belinda Bjorklund Concerned investor

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Ben Cavanaugh — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ben Cavanaugh Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The only reason you go to 6 month reporting is for more corruption.

It's obvious and in plain sight cmon seriously?
Not gonna be the wisest decision.

Do the right thing for the American people you represent.

Ben Donikian — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ben Donikian Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 More secrecy in government reporting and subsequent lies.

Sent from my iPhone

Ben Folk — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ben Folk As an individual retail investor, I rely on quarterly reporting to manage investments and stay current on company financials. Limiting reporting will hurt retail investors and prevent them from receiving the most up to date, regulated and trusted financial reporting straight from companies. Please maintain quarterly earnings and financial reporting!

Ben Kaniut N/A — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ben Kaniut I believe this is a bad idea. I think quarterly reports are reasonable and serve a purpose to the stock owners who carry risk of owning the company. Reducing communication and transparency to the stock owners increases their risk. I think bi-annual reporting would also create more volatility and larger swings in stock prices and reactions since expectations would be larger.

Ben Nascimento — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ben Nascimento Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As an American who survived the '08 Financial Crash I noticed that the fraud that came out following the investigations were clear; a consistent pattern of abuse and finances.

Keep it Quarterly. They can't hide the fraud that common Americans will have to pay for.

It's disappointing to see that the Gov't is going to allow this behavior when our finances aren't strong.

Ben Schmitt — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Ben Schmitt Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Wall Street already screws the lil man over enough, make them report weekly, but do not lose the quarterly reporting!

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Ben Shult — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment- Keep the existing rule! From: Ben Shult Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Ben Shult and I am a realtor, investor, property owner in Wisconsin. Removing financial accountability from the system is a liability for the investing public. Transparency is necessary for the entire system to operate. If I cant know what these companies are doing except once or twice a year, instead of quarterly, then it will force me to make uninformed decisions; companies can manipulate information and thus markets and ME. Leave it quarterly!

Ben Stegall — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Ben Stegall Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hold them accountable quarterly. Use AI to check their numbers. It's that simple.

Sent from my Verizon, Samsung Galaxy smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

Ben Trachsel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Ben Trachsel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency is crucial for a free market. Other countries investors, for example, the Chinese will pull ALL their currency out of the US if we become opaque, unreliable and unfair.

Ben Trachsel CISSP
319.330.0871

Benjamin Grunde — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Benjamin Grunde Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep quarterly earnings reporting. There is a recklessness afoot amongst some top corporations, investors, and financial regulators in our country. I'm sure that you see it, and feel the tension. You hear what seasoned economists make of it, and the real disaster that we are pushing to the brink of. Don't be reckless. Millions of lives are at stake. The public is watching you and counting on you to represent our welfare, to have enough spine tp be a good steward to a structured system. A strong and steady one, not a flimsy one. Keep businesses accountable.

Benjamin Maclean — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Benjamin Maclean I am writing as an individual investor, a participant in group investment platforms such as CommSec, and someone with a background in data analytics. I strongly oppose the proposed reduction in public company reporting from quarterly to semiannual. Transparency is foundational to trust between companies and their owners. Quarterly reporting provides a consistent, structured window into how a business is actually performing; halving that frequency does not reduce uncertainty, it simply delays and concentrates it. When information finally arrives after six months, surprises will be larger and market reactions sharper. That is not a better outcome for anyone. Trust erodes when reporting cycles lengthen. Fewer mandated disclosure points create more opportunity for organisations to manage, delay, or obscure unfavourable information. The argument that reduced reporting eases short-term pressure ignores a basic truth: short-termism is driven by how people respond to information, not by the information itself. Removing data does not make investors more patient; it makes them less informed. From an analytics perspective, quarterly data points are essential for identifying trends, validating narratives, and detecting anomalies. Two data points per year is statistically insufficient to distinguish genuine performance from selective presentation. I urge the SEC to preserve quarterly reporting requirements in the interest of informed, fair, and transparent markets.

Bennett Richards — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bennett Richards Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please do not stop quarterly reporting… It would mean financial disaster for a huge swath of our Nation. Richard Schiff

---

Benoit Sanscartier — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Benoit Sanscartier I disagree with the notion of having less frequent reporting. As an investor I want information that is as frequent as possible on company shares that I owned. In my view less frequent information would increase speculation, rumors and a greater disconnect between board members knowledge (who represent shareholders) and shareholders understanding of the companies performances. Also in my view it may create liquidity issues between reporting dates as investors could be less incline to invest in stocks where the information is outdated mostly in situations where there are regulatory, political or economic turmoil. How can investors get the companies leadership views when it is only very 6 months? As such I ask that the SEC withdraws their proposal for less frequency reporting. Thanks

---

Bernadette Daftary — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bernadette Daftary Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We should keep it so that people will be informed of what is truly going on with their investments.
Bernadette Daftary
Retired

Bernadette Halloran — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bernadette Halloran Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting requirements. I am sick of large financial corporations having no oversight. That is the job of the SEC. My investments tanked in 2008. My income has remained stagnant since then and inflation is breaking my living standard. My life today is greatly effected by these circumstances (none of which is in my control). If I have to be responsible for meeting my obligations with fewer resources, (the genesis of which is the irresponsible behavior of corporations) then the least the * corporations can do is actually be accountable enough to fulfill quarterly reporting requirements. This country is a tinderbox. People are sick and tired of corporations getting pass after pass when it comes to being transparent and responsible to the American people. If the staff at the SEC can't do their job then upon their head be the ire of the American people. If they can't carry out their simple responsibility to review and enforce the quarterly reporting requirements then they should be in front of a firing squad. This is not 2008 and the American People are not going to be understanding like the last time they will eat the leaders of rich corporations and their colluding minions at the SEC. This is not a time to be thoughtless SEC. Be afraid, be very afraid.

Bernard Lefson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bernard Lefson Transparency is vital to avoid much of the scam activities. In order to feel that the public may make use appropriately of information it must have a true trust factor. Trust is vital to allow public investors to feel the system is not rigged in favor of insiders.

Bernard Purcell Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bernard Purcell I am opposed to the measure to reduce reporting requirements of public companies to twice a year. It does not support long-term thinking, and obscures what is transpiring in public companies. In the age of AI, and massive ERP systems, the cost of reporting are most likely falling, not increasing, so I doubt any true value would be liberated. Please keep the reporting requirements quarterly. the system isn't broken; let's not fix it.

Bernard Raubenheimer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bernard Raubenheimer Against this proposal as the limitation on financial information would be not only to the detriment of the company and shareholders (lower oversight = higher risk = lower attractiveness of the asset class).

Bert Haboucha Capital Advisors — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bert Haboucha Semi-annual reporting is a mistake. It won’t save very much, if any, money. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Bert Motley Fool Group — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bert 4 times a years already gives enough time for corporate insiders' shenanigans. Why give them twice as much time. Forget it.

Bertie — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bertie Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Bertie B. Simmons
Retired, Houston Texas:
We have not forgotten the devastation to hard working people and for the damage those greedy crooks caused.

Bet Clear none — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bet Clear Against - and part of the Motley Fool Community

---

Beth — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Beth Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am a retired scientist from Pfizer. I worked hard all my life. I was good with money and investments. I think it would be irresponsible to change the requirements to 2 x a year. A lot can change in a quarter and as an investor I would want to be aware of these changes

Sent from my iPhone

Beth Anderson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Beth Anderson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 For people living on a fixed income this would be devastating. We urge you to keep your reporting quarterly. It makes a big difference to our savings. Beth and David Anderson are both retired and depend on this income.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Beth Beyer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Beth Beyer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am in favor of keeping the quarterly reporting. Quarterly reports ensure ordinary investors, like me, and institutions receive consistent, timely information. Regular financial scrutiny deters fraud and helps investors accurately price risk, which in turn lowers the cost of equity capital. A shift to semiannual or less frequent reporting creates longer periods where insiders possess material nonpublic information, increasing the risk of insider trading. Consistent quarterly reporting has been the norm of U.S. public markets for over half a century, contributing to transparency, investor trust, and the success of our capital markets.

Please leave the current quarterly reporting alone.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Beyer

Beth Bragg — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: No to S7-2026-15 From: Beth Bragg Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency is vital. Keep the quarterly reports. The billionaires and trillionaire don't need any additional favors from this government.

Beth Bragg
Anchorage

Sent from my iPhone

Beth Browning — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Beth Browning Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As an investor, I expect to see company performance on a quarterly basis. If not, I'm not continuing to invest. I'll invest in another country. Reporting twice a year is unacceptable. Quarterly reporting!! Nothing less.

Beth Burnett — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Beth Burnett Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I have already commented on eliminating quarterly reporting - WHY would that be a good thing?

Holding people accountable for their actions is necessary. This means ALL people; not just the ones who can not afford lawyers willing to tie everything up in knots. Personal responsibility is foundamental to our way of life. Remember - THE BUCK STOPS HERE.

Beth Cummings — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Beth Cummings Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: Enough is ENOUGH!!

Beth Epstein — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Beth Epstein Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency is not keeping people in the dark. As a tech in Atlantic County, NJ getting close to retirement I what to know where I stand financially at all times. Working until I dies isn't part of my plan. Banks give lousy interest rates on savings accounts so, we are in a sense forced to invest in our earnings in other areas for retirement. As I said earlier, those other areas should be transparent at all times. 55+ communities in my area were supposed to be arrordable living and were approved by the zoning board on that basis. But, all of us got a letter from management that stated due to the governor's new law they can raise prices every year, and rates are now detrimental to many of the seniors who live in these communities. People in their 60s' and 70's shouldn't be forced back into the work place because, of financial uncertainty. They can't afford their bills any longer because, their investments haven't gone as far as she thought they would and because of unfair housing increases to those on fixed incomes. We all need to know where we stand financially moment to moment but, have settled for quarterly. Anything less than quarterly is just would hurt senior citizens further and make live for the elder community even more unstable.

Beth Epstein,
Concerned Seniors Citizen

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Beth Finchler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beth Finchler As a stockholder, I am an owner of the company. Getting a report only twice a year is simply unacceptable. As individuals, we get bank statements, credit card statements, health statements, etc. once a month. Right now, the companies only report to the owners 4 times per year. If you are changing anything, it should be to increase the frequency, not decrease it. Having all the owners examining the statements helps keep the company on the right road. It's easier to correct course when something is caught early, not when it can have twice the time to deviate.

BETH FOGO — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: BETH FOGO Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 KEEP IT QUARTERLY!!

Sent from my iPhone

Beth Goldsmith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Beth Goldsmith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Protect the small shareholders. Quarterly reporting is not an unreasonable task for those running the company and the staff they have working for them. It helps prevent malfeasance from going on for too long between reports.
Elizabeth Goldsmith

Beth Graddy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Beth Graddy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We are watching now. If you let corporations hide their financials, we will stop looking for the truth and satisfy ourselves with finding everyone who helped the liars.

In the interest of promptness, this was sent from my iPhone. Please excuse typographical errors.

---

beth harper — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: beth harper Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hello,

As a retired senior citizen, I rely almost solely on the investments I've made for my income. The vast majority of these investments are equities, therefore, a reduction in reporting requirements would negatively impact my portfolios and my ability to continue to live as planned. Historical data demonstrates earnings and valuations significantly decline with twice yearly reporting. I oppose the change and appreciate your consideration.

Charlotte Harper

Beth Howison — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Beth Howison Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As the old saying goes if you give them an inch they'll take a mile!!
Leave it at four times a year. It's a proper check and balance system and needs to be left alone!

Beth Kamhi — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Beth Kamhi Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 You need to report quarterly!

Sent from my iPhone

Beth Katz — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beth Katz It feels like someone (corporations) is trying to put one over on us. Cutting report requirements down to twice a year from four times a year means less transparency in how a company is doing financially. It means my investment decisions may be hit or miss with less information to decide if I either want to invest in a company or leave it. It's hard enough to decide whether or not to "push" the buy or sell button, why make it even more difficult? The reduced reporting requirement doesn't benefit the investor, it only benefits the corporate heads from people finding out if they are doing a lousy job operating the company. Please - Do Not Reduce the reporting requirement to twice a year!

Beth Light — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Beth Light Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the SEC:
It is your responsibility to protect the people of this country and keep big corporations from being able to do insider trading. Being able for us to review stocks profits allows us to keep an eye on what going on on the stock market.
As I said, it is the SEC's responsibility to protect the Market and the Americans you serve!
Thank you,
Beth Light

Beth Malakoff The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beth Malakoff This is a bad idea. Companies should have to report at least 4 times per year. Fewer reports means less information shared, less transparency in business and greater opportunity for behavior that is not in the best interest of the business or the stock holders. WE have regulation and oversight for good reasons. "Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed."

Beth Minato — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beth Minato Transparency is the American way. We trust and love our country for that very reason. Please require companies to report the customary four times per year. Please protect our lives and our investments. We matter too. It is the right thing to do. Thank you for looking out for us.

Beth Murphy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Beth Murphy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Beth Murphy Retired
Quarterly reporting is key to individual investors like myself to keep informed. The only ones who benefit from less frequent reporting are the institutional investors. Keep the quarterly reporting so retirees and individual investors don’t get blindsided.

Best regards,
Beth Murphy
Sent from my iPhone

Beth OConnor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Beth OConnor Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
We need more, not less, transparency in regards to the stock market and investing. My financial future relies on those quarterly reports
Who would even suggest such a thing? Unless of course you wanted to blindfold your average investor and open up the opportunity for fraud for a select few. I say stop this turning back of the clock. Leave the quarterly reports alone.

Beth Pennington — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Beth Pennington Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keeping quarterly. Politicians have it easy enough to pull their insider trading, don’t give them more abilities.

Beth
Sent from my iPhone

Beth Saguto — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Beth Saguto Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Beth Saguto, and I am an elementary teacher, coach, and academic instructor. I am writing to implore that the SEC keep reporting requirements a quarterly mandate. I work hard as an educator to support my daughter and save for both college and retirement. It is incredibly unfair for the rules to be bent, YET AGAIN, for the wealthiest and most privileged among us to benefit while honest, hardworking Americans run just to stand still. I condemn this proposed change in the strongest possible terms and urge you to leave the requirement at quarterly for the wellbeing of families like mine all over the country.

Sent from my iPhone

Beth Sangree — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Beth Sangree Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need to keep having Quarterly Reporting. Without it investors will lose confidence and people will stop investing. This will result in lower returns for everyone. Keep Quarterly Reporting!

Sent from my iPhone

Beth Vetrano — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Beth Vetrano Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I rely on quarterly statements as do most others and see no benefit in removing them.

Elizabeth Vetrano

Sent from my iPhone

Beth Whisnant — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Beth Whisnant Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Our country is falling apart and the big money just ignores all the damage to our country 's future. I feel more visibility is needed.
Accountability is needed at every level of business.

Sincerely,
Beth A Whisnant
Retired

Beth Wood Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beth Wood Please do NOT reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two.

Beth Wright — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Beth Wright Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hello,

My payment for your products is contingent upon quarterly reporting from your business. Thank you.

Elizabeth (Beth) Wright
Oklahoma, USA

Be gentle with yourself. 🕊️

Bethan Keall The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bethan Keall Please keep reporting on company results on a quarterly basis, this is vital for investors.

Bethann Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bethann Smith Comments attached

---

Bethann Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Bethann Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
It is imperative that we have constant and current information about our investments.

Bethany Julson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bethany Julson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I don't make a ton of money, but I expect to get the current minimum information. I would like more, but don't want to receive less than quarterly information on companies. There is no reasonable reason to not have them provide it. Demand more information, not less!

Bethany Julson
Concerned American

Betsy Blew-Ochoa — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Betsy Blew-Ochoa Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As an investor, I believe that quarterly reporting should remain quarterly, NO EXCEPTIONS!

Sent from my iPhone

Betsy Keith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Betsy Keith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Those who are chipping away at this regulation deserve monthly scrutiny.

Get Outlook for Android

Betsy Pearsall — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Betsy Pearsall Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep the quarterly statements!

Betsy Reeder — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Betsy Reeder Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Don’t keep screwing the “little” people.
Keep the quarterly reporting. There is already enough shady deals going on without this.
We don’t need another Enron!

Sent from my iPhone

Betsy Reinard — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Betsy Reinard Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Anytime accountability, side rails or regulations are removed it’s for a sinister reason which is going to benefit some party but hurt another . unless they are presenting bilateral benefits the answer is no

Sent from my iPhone

Bette Holland — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Bette Holland Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please do not stop quarterly reporting!!!
bette holland

Betty Ann Hamilton The Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Betty Ann Hamilton As a patriot who subscribes to our constitutional right to self determination I hold dear the fundamental truth that accountability can only be achieved through transparency. Transparency allows reasoned discourse and decision making which should never be diluted at any time nor by any means. Quarterly reports on businesses which are publicly traded comprise the backbone of investment strategy not only for the average citizen but investment institutions at home and abroad. By reducing reporting it stands to reason an increase of insider trading and a more turbulent and unstable national and international economy would ensue. There is no credible case to support a decrease in transparency, period. The American people have made clear less is not more. Information and transparency fuel reasoned decision making. Quarterly reporting should remain intact.

Betty Blais — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Betty Blais Please keep quarterly reporting. The more information I have the better I can make investing decisions.

Betty Bruckner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Betty Bruckner Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 With the advent of a I, they ought to be able to do it monthly.. there's no reason for this to change, except to do it more, not less

---

Betty Endara — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Betty Endara Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Betty Endara
Federal Retiree
Keep the reports quarterly. Quarterly filings prevent frauds. For retirees the cost it’s too big.

Enviado desde mi iPhone

Betty Jo Blalock — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Betty Jo Blalock Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly reporting to keep Big businesses more accountable and prevent us from losing $.

Betty ROZZELL — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Betty ROZZELL Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Needs to stay quarterly. Betty Rozzell, Retired. My money is tied to stocks and depend on this supplement my income.

Sent from my iPhone

Betty Sanders — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Betty Sanders Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need to keep companies accountable for their actions .We the people who work ans build the economy on our backs shouldn't have to pay any more then that.

Betty Teall — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Betty Teall In this era of total government corruption, to allow companies to only report every six months is just opening the door for even more corruption. It's bad enough that congress and the powers that be can already work the stock market to their benefit. This would just open it up to even more opportunities to more corruption. And the ones paying are like me. The average American, trying to survive from month to month. Without all the perks the wealthiest have. Please don't give them more

---

Betty Van Dyne — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Betty Van Dyne Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting has to be kept every 6 months is to wide a window

Betty

BettyAnn Brody Bucksbaum Retired physician — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: BettyAnn Brody Bucksbaum I personally feel that I need to moniter my investments on a regular basis. I believe that ir is a big disadvantage to me as an investor for company reporting decrease its frequency from quarterly to semi-annually.

Bev Douglas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bev Douglas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Its another of Trump s tricks! When will America get rid of him?

Bev Hardwick — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bev Hardwick Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We are lied to by our govt. By the banks the major companies. The rich get richer while we the people struggle.

Bev McCreary — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Bev McCreary Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the

Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep quarterly reports signed by the CEO of the company/entity. Investors need timely reports, transparency, and accountability for those responsible for performance and decisions. The SEC must make decisions for the good of the investors not decisions to benefit corporations!

Bev McKay — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bev McKay Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it as is!

Sent from my iPhone

---

bev mushinsky — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: bev mushinsky Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why would you do this?

Bevely Schlegelmilch — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bevely Schlegelmilch Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly!! Who knows how it will effect a retired couples income it might just put them on the streets as homeless. Then we've all got a whole nother problem to deal with

Sent from my iPhone

Beverlee Baughman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Beverlee Baughman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 If you want our investments keep it honest with quarterly reporting. Im retired and need my I investmants to supplement my income.
Beverlee Baughman
Dayton Ohio

Beverly Axen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Beverly Axen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Beverly Axen. I am semiretired. I am a widow and still need to work to make ends meet. Please keep the reporting quarterly. I can't afford to lose what I have tucked away because a company isn't being transparent for six months.

Sent from my iPhone

Beverly Debel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Beverly Debel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

How many more times does fraud on a monumental scale need to take place before your organization will keep trying to stop taking its on-going responsibility to protect the American investor's interest above the massive greed of the corporate monster megalopolis that has taken over this country?

Beverly Driskell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beverly Driskell Investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Transparency matters to investors. Just as businesses need to pay taxes quarterly, they also owe the investors information as often.

Beverly Dukes — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Beverly Dukes Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
We have enough fraud without it being in our stock exchange to hinder an honest exchange!

Beverly Fisher — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Beverly Fisher Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 You need more accountability instead of less because people's whole lives are at stake because this money represents their retirement typically. Do not lower the standards for reporting, that just invites criminal behavior back and by the time the money is gone the damage is done and cannot be undone.

Thank you,
Beverly Fisher

Sent from Gmail Mobile

Beverly Jones — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beverly Jones Greetings. I am an attorney with an undergraduate degree in Economics. Since I began my career in the late 1980s, the American corporate climate has shifted from being visionary and product-focused, service-focused, quality-focused, community-focused, and customer-focused, to becoming myopic and singularly-focused on one thing: creating shareholder value. In the late 1990s, I worked in real estate site acquisition for Winstar, a company with an incredible product with amazing technology for the time, that helped commercial property landlords and tenants slash their telecommunications operating costs at a time when the baby Bells still monopolized telephone services. This win-win solution (that was far less taxing on infrastructure, among other truly exciting positives) effectively disappeared when it was revealed that revenue was being overstated to Wall Street, in order to illegally inflate share prices.

The scandal became famous, and I recall that a book was even written about it. I also recall observing that the Winstar debacle was a really a bellwether for the Enron scandal. There were a lot of similarities. While the Winstar shareholder losses were small compared to Enron, I — along with a lot of other people — lost a great deal of money on paper in stock options when shares in Winstar quickly dropped from over $80 a share to pennies, and far more people lost their savings and retirement funds. I've always believed that the end of Winstar was a loss of great potential for our economy, and it was shameful that a new and well-received technology with such promise was essentially smashed into bits in its infancy by corporate executives motivated by greed. Looking back, there were signs that things weren't quite right, but at the time, corporate wrongdoing wasn't in the headlines and creating shareholder value wasn't the mantra it has become today. More recently, I have watched the shift in corporate America escalate, from inside the buildings where the companies operate. For 16 years, until 2023, in my work, I regularly visited the headquarters and executive offices of Fortune 1000 companies across the US, where I consulted with them on my employer's data and technology solutions. Over that time, I've watched bustling corporate offices become seas of empty desks - even pre-Covid - in the name of cutting costs to enhance shareholder value. I experienced having more and more difficulty finding and consult with end users, as one after another, my end users and main contacts were downsized, until at times, there was no one left to be my internal contact and I'd have to reeducate the company about the resources they were purchasing from my employer. The more reductions in force that I saw, the more I saw morale drop in the people I dealt with on a regular basis. I've seen corporate employee perks evaporate, company team building events fall by the wayside, and employees' pride in their company fade away. I've seen the spirit of corporate annual sales meetings shift from celebrating employee success stories with inspiring tales and motivational speakers, to being cancelled altogether because they were considered to be wasteful instead of meaning team-building traditions. I've seen the resulting reduction in internal collaboration within far-flung teams of people who didn't personally know their colleagues anymore, when satellite offices were closed. I've seen company town halls where executives standing on stages in empty auditoriums have told employees attending virtually to leave the company if they want raises because, at the end of the day, they're all replaceable for less money. I've seen entire teams of customer success managers responsible for complex product integrations lectured by executives that they're a drain on net revenue with no proven ROI. It is as if corporate leaders have become blind to the reality of the investments that are required to build and maintain successful businesses, and more importantly, to acquire and retain customers. At times, the short-sighted and, at times, nonsensical cost-cutting attempts have reminded me of the last days of Winstar, when employees were doled out a single strip of staples only upon presenting their empty staplers to an office manager. It is one thing to "create value" for shareholders by increasing revenue; it is quite another to "create value" by unsustainable and ill-conceived cost cutting measures Of course, customers are the ones paying the price for all the foolish cost cutting and propping up of what is effectively artificially inflated shareholder value, and they will eventually pass the pain right back to the companies by refusing to purchase their products at the end of their contract periods. It takes a big ship time to change course, but eventually they do turn around. The proposal to allow corporations to skip quarterly reporting will only create larger opportunities for companies to create and maintain otherwise unsustainable illusions of increasing revenues by forcing cost cutting beyond reason and other measures. Trusted companies that have served customers for generations will begin to crumble from their shaky foundations and topple like the houses of cards that irresponsible management has allowed them to become. The SEC must not shrink from its duty to protect American investors, if we are to continue to thrive as a nation. A reduction in corporate quarterly reporting requirements is not a relief for companies that will enhance their profitability and value to the economy; it is a misguided attempt to prop up a system that has lost its way and a burden shift onto the very investors that the SEC was created to protect. I urge the board to refuse to weaken the foundation of our economy by reducing the reporting requirements for publicly-traded corporations. Stand firm and demand to be shown the receipts; Americans deserve no less from their government, and our nation's prosperity and security depend on the stability of the foundations of our economy now more than ever. It is not the time to loosen the reins on corporate greed; if any change is to be made, it must be to tighten them and require more accountability, not less. I respectfully thank you for your consideration of these comments and my earnest plea that you maintain a strong regulatory and compliance focus and protect our economy from those who would place their own greed above the strength of our nation.

Beverly King De Loach — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Beverly King De Loach Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is another step in taking away accountability and dismantling the oversight that is the JOB of government.
Beverly King De Loach,
Small Business Owner

Beverly Nicolas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Beverly Nicolas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Exchange Commission: Firstly, whats the reason for ceasing quaterly reporting explicitly ? And secondly, there should be publications posted strategically to make citizens aware of this topic and studies on how or not it contributes to citizens lives. And thirdly, I stand with millions of others who DO NOT want Quaterly Reporting Practices stopped /removed from open public digestion.

Beverly Reid Retired Government Employee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Beverly Reid Knowledge is power plain and simple. Weakening the reporting requirements of companies takes that power away from all investors. We are part owners of these companies and as such are entitled to more information about what we own not less! As a matter of fact, in the age of data driven decision making, companies should strive to follow the model of the Progressive Corporation whose company has reported monthly for many years. Data allows management to quickly identify trends and take action to capitalize on positive trends and make corrections for negative trends. This same data allows investors to hold corporate boards and management accountable. I strongly urge you to maintain the current reporting requirements.

Beverly Snyder — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Beverly Snyder Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Beverly Snyder Investor
Nullifying the rules on quarterly reporting punishes the small investor with a lot to lose more than big investors with room to spare. Quit doing away with consumer protections.

Beverly Snyder

Bhagya Boggaram — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Bhagya Boggaram Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

this policy / action is a big mistake as everyday investor will suffer the consequences

---

Bharat Patel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bharat Patel As an investor, semi-annual report may be more detrimental. Please keep current version.

Bhavdeep K Gupta Motley Fool community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bhavdeep K Gupta I would oppose the new proposed rule of giving earnings every six months. I would like to stay more transparent, and in this age of AI, the data can be available even more often

---

BHNelson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: BHNelson ANYTHING that reduces transparency between financial institutions and investors is a recipe for abuse and a tacit approval of obfuscation. But you already knew that. Investors need to know--do not remove that visibility.

BHS — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: BHS Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting! More transparency will encourage investors and enable more growth.

Ruth Huggler
New York

---

biannual reporting =less transparency=greater delayed decision making that negatively impacts investors Psychologist — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: biannual reporting =less transparency=greater delayed decision making that negatively impacts investors Semiannual reporting=less transparency=poorer delayed decision making for investors. I refuse to invest in companies that only issue dividends etc. biannually.

Bijan Mojadad — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bijan Mojadad This is a terrible proposal. If anything, companies should report their earnings more often. This is just an effort to reduce transparency, and needs to be stopped

---

Bill Blankemeier — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bill Blankemeier Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 What are they afraid of?

Bill Chase — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bill Chase Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I have lived through 2 crashes, all on the heels of relaxed sec requirements. As a tax paying citizen I want you to keep quarterly reporting

---

Bill Chatterjee Tech startup entrepreneur and operations expert — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Chatterjee I strongly disagree with allowing public companies to reduce the reporting requirement from four times year to just twice a year. As an owner, knowing how my business if doing is both critical for me and an avenue for the managers to tell me what has happened, what is going on now, and what are their future plans. How the investing community uses this information is the investing communities' perogative. As an owner, I look at efficient operations and long-term guidance. Providing information less often will only lead to great gyrations when the information is provided at longer intervals. Timely transperant information reporting leads to smoother operations, and in turn, better long-term returns.

Bill Ching — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bill Ching Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Leave it the way it is now. Bad for small investor.

Sent from my iPad

Bill Davis, Energy Capital Advisors, LLC — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Davis, Energy Capital Advisors, LLC The proposal to lessen the reporting requirement to semi-annual will be detrimental to investors. Less timely information will result in increased volatility and overall risk in the market. The incremental cost to the companies for quarterly reporting is immaterial in terms of time resources and money.

Bill Dix — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Dix What is the upside to the investor in this proposal? There is little to none. More transparency is useful, not less. Given the pace of change in today's markets, frequent disclosures are appropriate. Reporting should remain unchanged.

---

bill elliott — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: bill elliott Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 you ought to keep your books up to date weekly then monthly then quarterly don't you know how to book keep , if you r lacking in that I;m avaliable I'll bet there r many more who could help out with that if needed, everyone else has to be accountable why not you, totally wrong . thank you Mrs. William W. Elliott wife of a Marine '69, bookkeeper, cook,house cleaning, lanscaping, caretaker, small business owner, the books always have to balance, daily thats the rule , thats why we the people r very pissed off you don't follow the rules everyone else has to follow ....Linda Elliott 1255 Northey St , Waterloo Iowa 50703-1637 stop by i'll show you how to keep books

---

Bill Fechner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Fechner I was the third generation CEO of a family owned company that is now in its fourth generation and over 100 years old. I could only direct the company for 47 years by having up-to-date transparent information. The proposed Semiannual Reporting rule is the opposite of that. I fear that capitalism in the United States is now better described as greedism and this bill limiting information is a mistake and another step destroying what America has always been. Decision making using limited information is insanity. Please do not move this bill forward. Thank you!

Bill Froehlich The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Froehlich this is the opposite of how public companies should work!

Bill Hornung Coml Banking (BofA), Prof. Finance (Benedictine Coll), small business consult (SCORE) — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Hornung Reducing financial reporting for public companies from quarterly to semi-annually would be a big mistake. Stock ownership equals business ownership. As an owner, I must know what and how my business is performing. In today's world any cost savings for the business would be negligible. This kind of thoughtless pandering to big dollar political donors needs to stop now.

Bill Kelsey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bill Kelsey Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am retired. Most of my retirement funds are in stocks and bonds. Quarterly reporting helps me keep up with what is happening with my investments and helps me make better choices. Changing this reporting would only make it harder
William Kelsey

Bill McGuire — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill McGuire Investors need quarterly reporting to be able to invest wisely and it is not too much to ask of businesses that rely on investors. Please retain quarterly reporting. This essential to a healthy economy. Thank you.

Bill Morrison Former Senior Consultant, MBA International Business — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Morrison I was the Manager at MCI WorldCom who called out Jack Grubman at Salomon Brothers. Your organization subsequently contacted me for further information. Please keep this regulation put in place by those fiascos. Best Regards, Bill Morrison

---

Bill Nicholas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bill Nicholas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly. If they don't like that, how about we make it weekly? For those who do break the law give them another charge they'll have to serve time for. It's absolutely pathetic the white collar crime that occurs to the elderly lifesaving and in most cases the individual gets off with just a slap on the hand. Screw that, in biblical times they'd loose a hand. Bill Nichol; retired Paducah, Kentucky My father's bank account was violated by a bank employee. The amount of money he embezzled was in the tens of thousands of dollars. The individual was charged but was only given a slap on the hand and probation. I'm not sure if repayment was part of his sentence.

Bill Podolski — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bill Podolski Less information is not okay. It’s never been easy for these companies to prepare and report the information required. Reducing information availability only hurt individual investors.

Bill Travis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bill Travis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Corporate America has been ethically bankrupt forever.
DO NOT give them another way to hide malfeasance.

KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTS.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Bill Trummer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bill Trummer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it like it is now at 3 months.

Sent from my iPhone

Bill Waggoner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bill Waggoner Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 William Waggoner, retired. Texas I was around when enron ruined many people. I worked for 60 years to recieve an honest retirement and social security. The politicians have given away my S.S. benefits for people that never earned a dollar. Now you want to give away any hope of my future by allowing these companies to embezzel or squander away my earned retirement by allowing laws to be reduced to benefit certain individuals. Please mandate that the laws stay in place to protect our rights and future. Thank you for allowing a voice from the people.

Sent from my Galaxy

Bill Walker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bill Walker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly disclosure? In this age of AI, sending information, in this information age, is easier than ever...digitally sent info, emailed, let there me transparency.
Bill Walker, retired

---

bill1 — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: bill1 Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep what works!

Billie Ann Brown — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Billie Ann Brown Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep reporting transparent

Sent from my iPhone

Billie Brown private citizen and investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Billie Brown Please do not make companies less transparent. These reports are important and shouldn't be reduced.

Billie or Cheri Vines — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Billie or Cheri Vines Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need to support accountability, not hamstring it.

Sent from AT&T Yahoo Mail on Android

Billie Tanner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Billie Tanner Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It needs to remain quarterly. We need to have transparency and keep people honest.

Billine123 — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Billine123 Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am a retired senior citizen. I firmly believe that dropping quarterly reporting would be a huge mistake and potentially cost seniors huge devastating losses in their portfolios rendering them helpless in being able to support themselves. This has been tried before and did not work. Why would you want to go back in time and take such a risk with peoples finances. Keeping quarterly reporting will provide provide more transparency and accountability in not only senior's portfolios but for those in younger generations that are building for their own financial futures. This is a bad idea. Please choose the right way and maintain quarterly reporting. Billine Flynn, Retired

---

Billy Bob — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Billy Bob Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Robert Bourgoin, retired machinist
Retail is overdue for some transparency not less.

Billy Duff — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Billy Duff Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Billy. Investor/trader. Timeseries analytics.

Companies are optimized internally for quarterly reporting. It's not a huge burden. We already see evidence of insider trading on the rise - this will make it worse and hurt the retail investor. Honestly many things that the current administration is doing seems hostile to retail investors. Looks to me that the SEC wants to turn everyday Americans into liquidity for someone wealthier and better connected.

---

bk james — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: bk james Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Katherine James, Ret.Ind. Voter Keep the quarterly reporting with CEO & CFO signatures included! If this reporting is reduced, it is a further sign that the only thing growing in DC is the Swamp and I will urge fellow Independents to vote blue.

Black Crest Holdings, LLC — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Black Crest Holdings, LLC I oppose the proposal to allow public companies to reduce mandatory reporting from quarterly to semiannual disclosures. As a shareholder, I view investing as ownership. When investors purchase shares in a company, they become part owners of that business. Owners deserve regular, transparent communication about the performance, risks, opportunities, and direction of the companies they own. Cutting reporting frequency in half weakens that relationship and reduces accountability. Supporters of the proposal argue that fewer reports would lower compliance costs and reduce pressure on management to focus on short-term results. While there may be some cost savings, those benefits appear increasingly limited in a world where technology, automation, and AI tools have significantly reduced the burden of preparing and distributing information. More importantly, short-term thinking is a behavioral issue, not a reporting issue. Investors who focus excessively on quarterly results will continue to do so regardless of whether reports are issued every three months or every six months. What is clear is that reducing the flow of information leaves shareholders less informed. A company continues operating every day whether it reports quarterly or semiannually. Customers are gained and lost. Products succeed and fail. Competitive threats emerge. Capital is allocated. Risks develop. Under this proposal, however, owners would receive fewer official updates about those developments. Less transparency does not reduce uncertainty; it increases it. When information is withheld for longer periods, the likelihood of unexpected developments grows. Rather than creating stability, less frequent reporting may lead to larger surprises, sharper market reactions, and greater volatility when new information is finally released. Public markets function best when owners have access to timely, consistent, and reliable information. Quarterly reporting has long been a cornerstone of that transparency. Reducing reporting requirements would provide shareholders with less visibility into the businesses they own while offering uncertain benefits in return. For these reasons, I believe the proposal should be rejected.

Blaine Sanders Motley Fool member — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Blaine Sanders I oppose the change to semi-annual reporting. The incremental cost is far outweighed by the value to investors and the benefit of confidence in the markets.

Blair Watton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Blair Watton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Blair Watton
Retired
Stay out of the way… the SEC needs to sit down and stop strangling the American people. Whenever our freedoms shrink, so does our net worth…

Sent from my iPhone

Blake Beharry Individual investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Blake Beharry Please keep the quarterly reporting intact, as it is. Thank YOU, Blake Beharry

---

Blake French Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Blake French stop

Blake Kent Associate Professor of Sociology, Westmont College — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Blake Kent I am writing to respectfully ask that the proposal for semi-annual reporting be rejected. Investors are owners and have the right for regular and consistent reporting. All of the best performing markets require quarterly reports, and the US should continue its global leadership by maintaining this example.

Blake Kile — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Blake Kile I am against the lack of transparency. I want the companies I am investing in to report quarterly.

BLASTMST Maddocks — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: BLASTMST Maddocks Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Just another means of making the rich richer and the average investor just more of a means to support the company"s bad decisions monetarily and pay to support the company's bad researching agenda while allowing the failed researchers to "cash out" before the bad decision's bill comes due.

Bliss Angerman Ponder — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bliss Angerman Ponder Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep required reporting QUARTERLY.

Bliss Ponder

---

blobbityblah — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: blobbityblah Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why do you want to keep the public from knowing what's happening. Seems shady. I want you to keep the reports coming on a quarterly basis.

---

blondieblues9 — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: blondieblues9 Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Kristy Crawford-Estrada customer service rep. Stop trying to hide stuff. Be open and honest.
God knows what your doing any way. You can't hide from him.

Blue Chip Consulting, Inc. The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Blue Chip Consulting, Inc. Bad idea to reduce reporting from 4x/yr to 2x. More opaque than current, DON'T DO IT!

Bm Props — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bm Props Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dear SEC, KEEP Qtrly Reporting AND KEEP ACCOUNTABILITY IN PLACE!!!! The American people need standards kept in place! Thank you, Jane Bellomy

Jane Bellomy

Bm Props — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bm Props Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dear SEC,

KEEP Qtrly Reporting AND KEEP ACCOUNTABILITY IN PLACE!!!! The American people need these standards!

Thank you, Jane Bellomy

Jane Bellomy

---

bmconstance — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: bmconstance Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Reporting must be kept to quarterly. If the ship version off course, it is much easier to correct after only 3 months rather than after half a year.

Bianca Mars, CAP

---

bmfry — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: bmfry Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Barbara Fry, retired bank director of compliance and risk. As a retiree, it's very important that I know what's going on within the companies I've invested in. I can not afford to lose my retirement income. Please continue with quarterly reporting.

Sent from my Galaxy

Bo Blakey Long time individual investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bo Blakey More info is better. Stay with quarterly reporting requirements. Offer exemptions to that rule for “smaller” (by capital size) for some companies

---

Bo Einig — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bo Einig I am an individual investor and have been for over 30 years. Information is key to making informed decisions about how and where to invest. When it comes to acquiring this information the more a company discloses in their quarterly reports the easier my decision making becomes. Please continue to require companies to report on a quarterly basis. Don't make it harder for individual investors, we are already at a disadvantage.

Bob Beardsley member of the Mötley fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bob Beardsley please keep the requirement for public companies to report on a quarterly basis. I may be one of the few individual investors that listen to these reports, but I gain a great deal from the tone and tenor of the CEO or CFO. I feel reporting less often would put me at an incredible disadvantage.

Bob Boulding — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comments regarding reporting requirements From: Bob Boulding Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026
Dear SEC:

As a small business owner, I believe that quarterly reporting has kept my savings and investments growing in value. Please do not change the reporting requirements that may cause lower valuations.

Sincerely,
Robert Boulding, music instructor
Los Angeles CA.

Sent from my iPhone

Bob Caldwell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bob Caldwell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly for transparency please.

Robert Caldwell
Panama City, Florida

Bob Chamberlin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bob Chamberlin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Honest people have no fear of accountability. Do not dilute the safeguards currently in place. Make sure Enron type schemes will no longer rob decent people.

Bob Drabicki — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bob Drabicki Please keep the publicly disclose reports to 4x yearly. Thank you.

Bob Ferrier — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bob Ferrier Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is not fair to people who invest their savings into retirement accounts. Seems like another corrupt way they have devised to steal wealth from everyday working people.

Sent from my iPad

Bob Fesmire — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bob Fesmire Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Don't set the game up to hurt investors like me. Yes, it costs companies money to produce quarterly reports. But then, we the retail stock owners what the reports. Period.

Bob Frank — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bob Frank Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 How much is this corrupt government going to let oligarchs steal and grift from the American citizens?

---

bob Glosson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: bob Glosson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting will help with keeping an eye on things. It isn’t perfect, monthly reporting would be much better, but it’s what we have currently, and that will suffice. Six months is a long time to go astray and figure out how to hide their sins.

Bob Goodwin Private — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bob Goodwin Keep quarterly disclosure.

Bob Jamani None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bob Jamani It should get more efficient to produce updates with AI! There are regulatory and finance people galore in all listed companies

---

Bob Mayber — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bob Mayber Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My family & I lost a sizeable amount when Enron failed. I support controls that help to prevent the recurrance of another Enron. If you're entrusted and compensated for protecting the assets & profits of a large publicly traded company, you can't plead ignorance to your company's financial stability. You have a responsibility to your shareholders to act in their best interests. This is business: Big business. No shortcuts allowed. Proper controls must be put in place & remain in force.

Bob Mayber

Bob Munson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bob Munson As the owner of stock in several companies, I depend on frequent updates done at least quarterly to keep abreast of how my investments are doing. Extending the report time to twice a year is in effect, giving me half as much information as I am getting currently. Even the IRS requires quarterly filings of my estimated income tax for the year. Why should I expect less from the entities in which I've invested my remaining funds after filing quarterly taxes?

Bob Payne — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bob Payne Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 yKeep Financial Reporting Quarterly! It it's hard enough keeping them honest as it is, if you change it to six months there will be abuse, and people will lose money!
Robert Payne
Retired

Sent from my iPhone

Bob Schell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bob Schell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 R.K. Schell Jr./Self-employed

Quarterly Reporting is Essential!

It's common sense that a person needs accurate and up to date financial data in order to invest wisely and react swiftly when change is needed.
A lag of six months for such important data makes it virtually meaningless.

Bob Schell
brookwoodleather.com

717-713-0667
Brookwood Leather Fans on Facebook

Bob Shepard Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bob Shepard As an investor, I need transparency to make correct investment decisions for my portfolio. This information is absolutely critical for my decision making

---

Bob Sommers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bob Sommers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is the Epstein class using its extraordinary power and money to grab even more power. We are moving away from democracy and toward a ruling Billionaire class. This reporting is important information the public needs. Stop this move towards creating a ruling class while the rest of us becoming slaves to the Epstein class. NO!! maintain quarterly reporting.

Bob Vogel N/A — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bob Vogel Reducing the reporting requirements to twice a year means investors will have less information about how their company is doing. This will not help investors. But it allows companies to go 'off the rails' for longer before owners of the stock are told about it. This is not progress, this is a mistake. Investors deserve to know what is going on with their investments.

---

bob waldron — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: bob waldron Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I want quartly statements, not bi-annually!!!

---

bob waldron — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: bob waldron Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I need a quartly statements, so that I & my advisor can make intelligent decisions.

Bob Yandt — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bob Yandt As a long time investor I use the quarterly reporting information to evaluate and make investment decisions on the companies I invest in. It is important that I have that quarterly reporting information. I am against the proposed new rule allowing ONLY SEMI-ANNUAL REPORTING. Thank you.

Bobbe Dietz — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bobbe Dietz Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Absolutely keep quarterly reporting!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Bobbi and the Strays — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bobbi and the Strays Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please do Not change the current method of reporting. Consumers have a right to be well informed.
Myra K, retired

Sent from my iPad

Bobbie Herakovich — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bobbie Herakovich Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Retired City Manager Bobbie Herakovich
Please keep quarterly reporting. These savings are our lifeline and we can't afford anything less than aggressive reporting.

Sent from my iPhone

Bobbie Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Bobbie Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am not in favor of changing our system to a semi annual one. Quarterly reporting is best.
I am a nurse and with quarterly reports versus biannual it is easier to spot changes, or trends. Quarterly enhances our ability to spot troubles or report risks.
Bobbie G Smith
Sent from my iPhone

Bobbie Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Bobbie Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am not in favor of changing our system to a semi annual one. Quarterly reporting is best.
I am a nurse and with quarterly reports versus biannual it is easier to spot changes, or trends. Quarterly enhances our ability to spot troubles or report risks.

Sent from my iPhone

Bobbie Stephan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bobbie Stephan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Leave the reporting as is! It was put in place for good reason!

Bobby Green — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bobby Green Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Bob Green
Retired

Why open up the possibility for additional abuse and fraud?

Bobby Rose — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bobby Rose At a time when insider trading and market manipulation is rife and in the public eye, this change would only give more power to those who abuse their power to take more from the everyday investor. Reducing transparency will serve only to make everyone less informed, and increase volatility of stock movements. This is a time when we need more regulation, not less, to allow laws to catch up with the times, to seal loopholes in ancient regulation that was made to control illegal behaviour.

Bobette Bisbee Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bobette Bisbee As an investor, I urge you to continue to require Quarterly reports for investors. Things move so fast these days that we need as much current information as possible. Quarterly is the longest we should wait. Monthly could even be better, so Quarterly is a good compromise. Some of us don't have all of the connections to hear about happenings that affect our investments. Since we have money in the market for our retirement, we need the information ASAP! Otherwise, the well connected will be the only ones to get current information.

Bogan Sleep Consultants, LLC Owner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bogan Sleep Consultants, LLC At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own.

Bonilynn Forconi — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Bonilynn Forconi Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep the quarterly reporting!

Bonita Shipman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bonita Shipman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Fair reporting
Transparency for investors
Protection for longterm stability

Bonni Funk — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bonni Funk Please do not make the quarterly company reports semi-annual. Stakeholders deserve transparency!

Bonnie Avery — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bonnie Avery Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Bonnie Avery. As an investor I want to know accurate information that is timely. I also want to know that those running businesses I invest in are held accountable.

Sent from my iPhone

Bonnie Brewer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bonnie Brewer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly

Bonnie Brewer Woody
c) 919-274-6328

Bonnie Brown — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bonnie Brown Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Maintaining the quarterly reporting is vital to the economy of our country.

Clear Lake Self Storage

Bonnie Brown 260-668-5075

40 Powhattan Ct.

Fremont,IN 46737

Bonnie Cardenas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bonnie Cardenas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We do not need to keep turning back the clock on essential regulations that prevent fraudulent behavior that damages our country and our citizens. CEO's must be held accountable to following the law, they do not do it voluntarily. Keep the required document signatures at quarterly as a minimum. After the Enron catastrophe many people lost tremendous amounts of money and were not fully reimbursed for their loses due to unethical and unlawful behavior of the leaders of the company and the CEO's responsible essentially go off with little or no real penalty, many enriching themselves while the ship was sinking. Please continue to have procedures in place that reduce the chance for unethical and predatory behavior by corporations that harm our people and our nation. It matters because the majority of people are living on very little and yet bear the responsibility of avaricious CEO's. Therefore, what little is done to monitor and prevent unethical manipulation of business books, as the current regime weakens agencies that are to act as guardrails and watch dogs, matters now more than ever. Let us not weaken the SEC. The government is here for the people and by the people, not for the corporations and by the corporations. To keep democracy alive we must have regulations to ensure that parasites do not continue to pillage and weaken our economy.
Bonnie Cardenas, retired, Oceanside Ca.

Bonnie Evans — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bonnie Evans Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep corporations reporting to quarterly. It is imperative to protect investors. My retirement is invested in stocks and I depend on truthful quarterly reports. Kathleen B Evans, retired and involved citizen.

Bonnie Fuller — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bonnie Fuller Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is irresponsible and dangerous. I am retired but I want up to date information to keep track of what a business, I am invested in, is doing.

Sent from my iPhone

Bonnie Godinez — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Bonnie Godinez Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Bad idea .... stock holders NEED to know what is going on in publically traded companies. Especially now with the markets being chaos and erratic due to the daily volatility of our leadership .. .. the markets are very unstable. We need and want quarterly reports .... anything less is irresponsible for the stockholder risk assessment.

BONNIE GRAY — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: BONNIE GRAY Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We don't need to reduce accountability!

Bonnie Griffin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bonnie Griffin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Robert & Bonita Griffin Ithaca, NY KEEP IT QUARTERLY!

Bonnie Markman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Bonnie Markman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
keep quartely reporting

Bonnie Turner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Bonnie Turner Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: We as consumers deserve to have regular updates and communication regarding our investments!

Boris Buzan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Boris Buzan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do not change the quarterly reporting requirements. It would be bad for the country, business, and for those of us who are dependent on the equity markets for our retirement accounts.

Boris Buzan

Sent from my iPhone 15
What you say on the internet stays on the internet

Bracy H. Elton, Ph.D. HPC/AI Performance Specialist, Penguin Computing — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bracy H. Elton, Ph.D. Please do not reduce the frequency of required reporting! We want to increase transparency not reduce it! Reducing transparency decreases information investors to make sound investment decisions. Reducing transparency so increases risk of illegal or fraudulent or unsound activity within companies. Thank you. Sincerely, Bracy H. Elton, Ph.D.

Brad — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brad Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am a project manager in New York and I need to urgently affirm with you that if you guys value yourselves and your name as an institution at all, you will not allow this ridiculous new proposal to go through because of the great risk it poses to the market.

Sent from Proton Mail for iOS.

BRAD BEEBE — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Quarterly reporting From: BRAD BEEBE Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The Motley Fool encourages quarterly reporting.

Quarterly reporting keeps everything transparent and above board.

Do not repeat an Enron. Don't do that to investors

Thank you.

Brad Beebe

Sent from my Verizon, Samsung Galaxy smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

Brad Bush — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brad Bush Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly. We're depending on You to keep Our economy strong.

Brad Bush
Retired from the Drilling Industry.

Brad Gehr Motley Fool Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brad Gehr Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Brad Gottschalk — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brad Gottschalk Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is a cash grab for insiders, who are never properly punished. Start prosecuting congress, the white house, and all boards of companies.

BRAD JOHNSON — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: BRAD JOHNSON Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly, Brad Johnson retired

Sent from my iPhone

Brad Kelly — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Brad Kelly Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We're Joan and Brad Kelly. Registered Nurse and Homemaker in Oceanside, California. We need more oversight and more accountability, not less. Keep the reporting quarterly.

Brad Kilby — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brad Kilby Reporting twice a year is a terrible idea. Quarterly reports keep companies accountable to their owners, investors, and employees. Please take this comment as my objection to the proposed changes.

---

brad knopf — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: brad knopf Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It would be shockingly irresponsible to slash accountability by reducing the frequency of reporting.

Brad Knopf

Brad Lee Cross Madiba Richmond — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brad Lee Cross Madiba Richmond Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We The People have had enough of Corporate corruption!

Do not allow any blackout of Information, that allows for truth in trade and investments!

Brad Mendelson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brad Mendelson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm a small, individual investor and I rely on quarterly reports to make decisions about my retirement savings. Without this information, I'll be at a disadvantage.

Brad Mitchell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brad Mitchell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am opposed to semi-annual reporting by publicly traded companies. Keep the requirements for quarterly reporting as they are now. I am retired and depend on my investments to survive. There is no good reason to allow companies to keep their activities and reports from their owners.
Thank you,
Brad Mitchell

Brad Peterson — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brad Peterson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Wrong in every way!!

Brad

Brad Rathje Private Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brad Rathje I oppose reducing quarterly reports to semiannual. I do support increasing report requirements to monthly.

Brad Sweet The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brad Sweet Dear Secretary, I am writing as an individual investor and a member of The Motley Fool Community to express my strong opposition to the proposal allowing companies to reduce their public reporting from a quarterly schedule to a semiannual one. At its core, investing represents true business ownership. When individual investors commit capital to a company, they deserve regular, transparent, and timely communication regarding its operations. Reducing the frequency of required disclosures weakens the vital connection between public companies and their retail owners. While proponents argue that reducing reporting requirements might lower corporate costs or mitigate short-term market pressures, these arguments fail to consider the modern financial landscape: Technology Mitigates Reporting Costs: In an era driven by advanced data analytics, AI, and increasingly efficient digital disclosure tools, the administrative burden of compiling quarterly data is lower than ever before. Information Frequency Does Not Cause Short-Termism: Short-term focus is a behavioral reaction to data, not a flaw of the data itself. Limiting official updates will not inherently create more patient investors; it will simply create less-informed ones. Reduced Transparency Breeds Volatility: Businesses operate, launch products, win or lose customers, and shift strategies daily. Stretching the reporting window to six months does not stop these events from happening—it merely delays the public's knowledge of them. When information is withheld for longer periods, the eventual disclosures are bound to contain larger surprises, leading to sharper market reactions and heightened, unnecessary volatility. Less transparency rarely results in better-informed owners. Decreasing the frequency of official updates increases uncertainty and disproportionately disadvantages individual retail investors who lack the access to alternative information channels that institutional investors enjoy. Twenty-six years ago, the SEC championed retail investors by passing Regulation Fair Disclosure (Reg FD), ensuring a level playing field for all market participants. This new proposal represents a step backward from that legacy of transparency. I urge the Commission to maintain the current quarterly reporting framework to protect individual investors and preserve the integrity and efficiency of our capital markets. Thank you for your time and consideration of my comments. Sincerely, Brad

---

Brad Walhood Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brad Walhood Please keep reporting requirements current @ 4x per year. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it.

Bradley Bartilson — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Bradley Bartilson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Quarterly reporting is necessary to maintain some level of fairness in retail vs institutional investing.

Bradley Charlton Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bradley Charlton Reports should be 4 times a year. Too much can happen in six months.

Bradley Mcgraw — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Bradley Mcgraw Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please don't end quarterly reports., very unfair!!!!

Bradley Motter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bradley Motter We need more information not less.

Bradley Reichuber — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bradley Reichuber Quarterly reporting is necessary - do not reduce the amount of reporting does not benefit the owners of a business, which is what shareholders are depending on to track performance, progress, and ultimately their investment in a business. Under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Fewer reports annually means less data driven communication and transparency. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty; it increases it! And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. In an age of AI efficiency these quarterly reports are easier to produce with more robust data, analysis and precision than ever before. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Do not allow this proposal to be consummated.

Bradly Shollenberger — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bradly Shollenberger Investors have a right to transparency from publicly traded companies. Financials can change dramatically in 6 months. Please keep the 3 month reporting schedule. It benefits all investors.

Bradly Shollenberger — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bradly Shollenberger Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Publicly traded companies should be just that…public. We deserve transparency to make our investing decision. Full stop.

Sent from my iPad

---

bradmc — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: bradmc Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Every six months is not transparency!!!

Sent from my iPhone
Brad McNutt

Braedon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Braedon I need to know how my investments are doing, not 2 times a year. Retiring, making smart decisions, and being able to set myself up for success, all of that comes with transparency. The Motley Fool has extreme transparency, and has done me well, don’t make the mistake to close off communication with the owners of companies.

Brandi Fisher — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brandi Fisher Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 B. Fisher, human being.
This undermines the trust in the SEC. Do not turn a blind eye and allow corruption to proliferate.

Brandon Hales — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brandon Hales Investors need more information and transparency, not less. Please don't diminish the amount of information available to individual investors.

Brandy Fossett — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Brandy Fossett Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Absolutely. NOT. This is only going to allow for crooked businessmen and politicians to hide more of their wealth and wipe everyone out even more. The only people who think this is a good idea are those behind the scenes who know how to hide money and manipulate the system.

Brandy Hopkins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brandy Hopkins Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Brandy, and I'm a Postal Clerk with a TSP that is heavily vested in stocks. Keep companies honest, we have enough rich bastards trying to work us into our graves, they can at least be accountable for their own failures. I'm accountable in my job for my work. They can too.

Braxton H DeGarmo, MD The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Braxton H DeGarmo, MD At a time when we're seeking more transparency in our government, we need the same in the corporations of which we're part owners through our shares. Moving to requiring only twice-a-year reports from these companies is moving in the wrong direction. Please keep the quarterly report requirement. Thank you.

---

breanne blanks — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: breanne blanks Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Absolutely not! Keep things the way they are! Quarterly is the way it should be!

Sent from my iPhone

Breck Lebegue Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Breck Lebegue Trust based on transparency is the glue that binds us together. 'Trust but verify' is essential for business operations. We must keep quarterly reports to verify.

---

bred3235 — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: bred3235 Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Helen Barker. I have money 💰 invested in the stock market. I feel limiting a report on the status of my portfolio to every six months is wrong. The market changes every second as it is. I need to get quarterly reports to keep on top of my investments. DO NOT CHANGE THIS LAW.

---

bred3235 — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: New sec rule From: bred3235 Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Helen Barker. I have money 💰 invested in the stock market. I feel limiting a report on the status of my portfolio to every six months is wrong. The market changes every second as it is. I need to get quarterly reports to keep on top of my investments. DO NOT CHANGE THIS LAW.

Brenda Adams — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brenda Adams Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm for keeping quarterly reporting. These reports are needed to do stock purchasing. Thank you, Brenda Adams, stock holder

Sent from my iPhone

Brenda Allen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Allen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep SEC reporting quarterly!
Longer reporting periods are a disservice to the public.

Brenda Baumgart — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brenda Baumgart Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Needs to stay quarterly. I realize it's extra work for the company. However most investors like myself want to know what the long term goal is and how well the company is attaining that goal. Six months it a long time, a lot can happen in 6 months and an extreme amount of good or bad can happen in a year. Companies can fluff it up in 6 and be gone in 12. Give investors a heads up, make companies work harder to achieve and stay on the up and up.

Brenda Baumgart
Umatilla, Or 97882
Sent from Brenda's iPhone

Brenda Bronson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brenda Bronson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I want to keep quarterly reporting.

I depend on my IRA mutual fund's earnings to live on in my retirement. I need to see how my mutual funds are doing quarterly and I often use the report to rebalance them.

Brenda Bronson
iPhone 303.941.7634

Brenda Bullinger — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Bullinger I agree with everything you said. We don't need to be in the dark about our money. if it does pass, would there be a way that people would know which ones give quarterly reports? Then we could go take our money out of theirs and put it in the ones that do quarterly early.

Brenda Daffern — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Daffern Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting. It's time to clean up and keep out the dishonesty that continues to be a cause for concern.

Brenda Davidson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brenda Davidson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Looks like this could be another way for fraud to be committed. These companies knew the rules before they started, if not maybe they shouldn't be in business. It is totally unfair to investors.

Sent from my iPad

Brenda Dencer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Dencer Our government must be transparent. Financial organizations must be transparent. This new law allowing corporations to reduce public-company reports from 4 reports a year to 2 is dangerous. We investors deserve fullll reporting and honest reporting of a company's finances. This also affects those proposing this rule. Why are they acquiescing to less information? Transparency is what we need. Not less.

Brenda Fittante Weekes — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brenda Fittante Weekes Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency is important. Hiding the numbers for 6 months will lead to fraud. Please keep the reporting quarterly.

Brenda Fittante Weekes
382 South 50 West
Jerome, ID 83338
303-748-6107

Brenda Ganter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brenda Ganter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Brenda Ganter, engineer. We need more reviews and not less. The financial markets are changing too fast and we need to step back and keep the quarterly reporting.

Sent from Brenda's
iPhone

Brenda Ghaelian — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Ghaelian Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please leave quarterly reporting as it is. I fear there may be more corruption and our retirement funds will suffer.
thank you,
Brenda Ghaelian

Brenda Howard — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Howard Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting keeps people more honest than twice a year reporting. Don’t change a system that isn’t broke!!!Think about it who wants the reporting changed the source of the problem. This is working don’t change something g that isn’t broke to a broken system.

Sent from my iPhone

Brenda Howell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brenda Howell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please protect the "little guy" taxpayers from the people who would take our money, given in good faith as an investment in our future, and attempt to hide bad faith actions. Quarterly reporting give a better ability to catch fraudulent actions much quicker and prevent the average joe from losing a major portion of his or her retirement funds.

Brenda Hudgeons — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Hudgeons As an investor, I do not support reducing public-company reporting to 2 times per year. I am investing hard earned money to make a better life for my family and like having transparency in the companies I select to invest in. Thank you, Brenda Hudgeons

---

Brenda J Rusch Accounting Services, LLC CPA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brenda J Rusch Accounting Services, LLC Please keep the quarterly reporting requirements! It is very important for investors to have more frequent filings of publicly traded companies. It is already difficult to get accurate information on these companies. We do not need another Enron. Thank you, Brenda J Rusch, CPA

Brenda Jentzen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brenda Jentzen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Brenda Jentzen, retired Environmental Scientist
I have most of life savings invested and need quarterly reporting to manage these vital resources. Don't be lazy. Don't be corrupt. Show you work QUARTERLY!

B Jentzen

Brenda Karen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Karen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I know it hurts y'all to stay honest but you need to try harder. Keep it like it is!!

Brenda Kitchens — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Kitchens Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Speaking as: an extremely concerned American citizen; a well educated GA resident; and a retired scientist of 39 years... I insist that Quarterly reporting is to remain as is. It's just a part of doing an honest, above-board business. It needs to stay that way because this Administration, and indeed, all big businesses and corporations of any ilk have proven again and again, that they will disregard the desires of average Americans, ignore any reasonable accomodations of good customer service, fair practices, OR environmental responsibilities. THERE'S ABSOLUTELY NO WAY THAT WE WILL TRUST THEM, EVER AGAIN.

Do not allow them another way to screw us by changing the Quarterly reporting requirement.
Don't do it.

Very Sincerely,
Brenda E. Kitchens

Brenda Miniclier — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Miniclier Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please do not go to semi ANNUAL accounting. We need more reviews not less! ALSO, bring back the FDIC.

Brenda Reliford — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brenda Reliford Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Brenda Reliford I am a retiree. Keep this reporting quarterly. We deserve transparency.

Brenda Rogers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brenda Rogers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting in important to the millions of us who are saving or who have saved for retirement. We are entitled to timely information about companies we are invested in. With Social Security now at risk, this is more important than ever. Quarterly reporting is not a hardship for the companies. We must have quarterly reporting to keep tabs on our retirement income.
Brenda Rogers
Retired Software Quality Engineer

Brenda Rydstrom — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brenda Rydstrom Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop this steal. It didn’t work before it’s not going to work now. Tired of being ripped off by the government.

Sent from my iPhone

Brenda Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Brenda Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: You need to maintain transparency for all not just the Wealthy

---

Brenda Stein — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brenda Stein Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly!

Sent from my iPhone

Brenda Truex — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brenda Truex Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop the steal. We deserve knowing where funds are quarterly. What are you trying to hide with this move?

Brenda Truex

Brenda Wilsford — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brenda Wilsford Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting prevent more fraud

---

brendan cahill — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: brendan cahill Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Brendan Cahill
Self Employed

This is yet another example of how you’re enriching the billionaires and making business stronger than the people that make it strong. You show corrupted self interests with everything you do!

BRENDAN O'SHAUGHNESSY — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: BRENDAN O'SHAUGHNESSY Hello fellow investors, Throughout our history, our company has stepped forward when important regulatory decisions affect individual investors. It’s time to dust off our bully pulpit and do it again. A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that’s a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right? Back in 2000, the SEC opened a public comment period on a proposal called Regulation Fair Disclosure (Reg FD). Fools showed up in force. Our community submitted roughly 65% of all comment letters! The rule ultimately passed, and SEC Chair Arthur Levitt later visited Fool HQ to thank us. He directly credited the Fool Community as the critical force behind the outcome. Twenty-six years ago, Fools helped win greater transparency for individual investors. Now we have an opportunity to help preserve it. Comment now on the proposed Semiannual Reporting rule at

SEC . gov. In the “Affiliation Name” box, mention The Motley Fool Community. This signals to the SEC that your comment is part of a coordinated, informed community of individual investors. And please keep your comment respectful. These are public, official filings, and a thoughtful voice is the most persuasive one. Thank you, and Fool on! David Gardner Co-Founder & Chief Rule Breaker The Motley Fool

---

brendon woirhaye none — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: brendon woirhaye I oppose the move to semiannual reporting. Part of the responsibility of a public company is to inform its owners (shareholders) on a regular basis about the health of the business. Quarterly reports do this.

Brenna Iredale — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brenna Iredale Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hey, SEC: Keep It Quarterly!

Brent Brickett — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brent Brickett Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We don’t need anymore cheats, stay quarterly!

Sent from my iPhone

Brent Cooley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brent Cooley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Accurate information to investors, government agencies & to public is important to cure fraud, abuse & waste. Companies cannot be trusted to give accurate information to investors especially when hiding insider trading.

Sent from my iPad

Brent Fidler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: SEC Proposal S7-2026-15 From: Brent Fidler Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am writing to strongly oppose SEC Proposal S7-2026-15, which would allow public companies to go dark for six months at a time by shifting to semi-annual reporting. As an experienced retail investor actively managing my own portfolio and retirement savings, I rely heavily on the transparency and timeliness of quarterly financial disclosures to make informed investment decisions.

Unlike institutional investors who possess vast resources such as alternative data, expert networks, and direct management access, individual investors depend on the quarterly report as a crucial leveling mechanism in the U.S. equity markets. Extending the reporting gap to six months would force retail investors to fly blind to critical issues like ballooning debt or failing product launches, creating an unfair environment where corporate insiders have ample time to act on non-public information at the expense of ordinary shareholders.

I urge the Commission to fulfill its statutory mandate to protect the investing public by discarding this proposal and maintaining the mandatory quarterly reporting standard.

Sincerely,

Brent Fidler

Brent Mitchell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brent Mitchell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please please keep quarterly reporting!

Sent from my iPhone

---

bret winkler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: bret winkler Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is essential. With maintained records and competent record keeping, the quarterly reporting remains feasible with no measurable impact.

We must not invite incompetency in book keeping by allowing incapable staff to delay reporting because of their poor skills. At best the delayed reporting accommodates those with poor skills, and at worst, it allows for nefarious actions, insider trading ahead of public knowledge, and sloppy records.

Keep the reporting requirements unchanged. Require quarterly reporting to maintain transparency.

Brett A Kealiher N/A — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brett A Kealiher The pending ruling that may allow companies to provide investor reports twice a year from the current quarterly reports. These are essential for individuals to be able to track their investments value. Few reports means more losses for individuals. If anything, increase the reporting to monthly in the age of AI and other market reporting tools.

Brett Busold — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Brett Busold Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

I hope you reject the plan to reduce the timely transparency that quarterly reporting allows. I am a retail investor and I am confident that the retail stock pickers would be the most hurt by the elimination of quarterly reports. I am especially concerned since we are in an AI dominated market that is more dependent on the timely reporting of guidance to either cool a stock that has mixed forward guidance or support a stock story that deserves elevated valuations. I am afraid that more time between reporting will only make the post reporting swings more drastic and increase volatility around earnings reporting. It is common knowledge that a more timely feedback loop in any system results in less volatility. Overall, I think less transparency is the wrong way to go and will hurt the smallest investors the most. Please help the all investors by keeping the current transparency levels. I also believe that the unintended consequence of this action will be a reduction in staff in finance departments across all industries which will be layered on top of AI related reduction in forces that is already occurring. This too will be felt across the working class
Regards,
Brett

Brett McGlasson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brett McGlasson I am a U.S. Citizen and investor encouraging you to not to pass the proposed Semiannual Reporting rule. As an investor I, along with millions of other Americans, own a small part of the businesses driving the U.S. economy, and these investments for many of us form significant part of our retirement savings. We co-owners deserve as much information as these corporations can give us to better make decisions about which businesses best fit our investment profile and risk tolerance. Producing regular reports is a trivial matter now with assistance from AI, and most companies benefit nearly as much as the public from the frequent opportunities to communicate their message to current and potential investors. Thank you for listening to comments from the public on this proposal.

Brett Robblee Individual Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brett Robblee As an investor of my hard-earned money in public companies, I am opposed to the semi-annual reporting rule proposition. I advocate retaining the current quarterly report rule.

Brett W. Lloyd — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brett W. Lloyd I have been an investor for more than 45 years, and also bought and sold, turned around, grew and developed companies. Timely and accurate information is one of the most valuable elements of good decision-making. And if as a society, we want to encourage better public and investor decision-making and capital allocation, government needs to enact policy that supports that. The proposal to allow public companies to provide reporting to owners only twice per year vs. four times per year is a very significant policy mistake in my view and should not be permitted to become law.

Brian — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Continue the quarterly reporting requirements as they are

---

Brian Baumann Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Baumann Quarterly reporting is absolutely essential in evaluating the performance of public companies! In many cases, the infrastructure is already in place to create the reports and the qualitative information is readily available to company managers

---

Brian Bielski — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Bielski You should actually make it MONTHLY instead of quarterly. CEOs are under too much pressure to drive up short term stock prices as their compensation is heavily based on short term performance. Thus, they will unfairly hide information from shareholders to further their personal gains. Hold them accountable. They have the data pretty much up to the week going every six months won't change internal accounting or data collection. Hold them accountable. They get paid well enough to sign off monthly

---

Brian Chirhart None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Chirhart I am an owner in every company that I invest in. I want to know how my companies are doing more than twice a year. The concept that this will save money is water drops in an ocean. The savings isn't there, but the loss of investing guidance is tangible, critical and massive.

Brian Dalton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brian Dalton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Brian Dalton retired, It is offensive to me and I'm sure many others that the SEC would even think of such a thing!

Brian Eastman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Brian Eastman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I support the continuation of quarterly reporting. Everyone who invests deserves this level of transparency. The people, including myself, deserve this protection. Sincerely, Brian Eastman, investor and future retiree.

Sent from my Galaxy

Brian Edwards — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Edwards Going to semi annual reporting for publicly traded companies is a mistake. As an owner in these companies through my investing I should be able to have transparency throughout the year and changing it to 2 times a year vs the current 4 times lessens my visibility.

Brian Gennings Senior Electrical Engineer, PE. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Gennings I believe reducing the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two would be a big mistake. Communication is key in our world today and with AI at the forefront of our businesses this process should be getting easier and less expensive. As shareholders we need to know what is going on within our companies to make informed decisions. There is an accountability element involved with the reporting obligations that keeps investors and companies on the right path.

Brian Glass None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Glass I am writing to voice my opposition to the proposal to allow companies to reduce their public-company reports from quarterly to biannual. As a share holder of many corporations through my investment in mutual funds, I believe that reduced reporting will lead to less transparency and creat more volatility in the market and ultimately, affect everyday investors like me negatively. Please do not lessen the frequency requirements for these reports.

Brian Green — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Green Ruling to reduce the reporting frequency from quarterly to biannually is a terrible mistake. We already have a market that is unstable at best, and faith in the markets is dropping fast. Were this reduction in reporting events to pass, I and many I know like me would pull our money out of any companies that did not maintain their quarterly reporting. Please vote against this reporting reduction, for the safety of the American economy and to strengthen the faith of the American public in our economic system.

Brian Greenwald The Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Greenwald Please retain the reporting requirement of 4 times each year by quarter for businesses that are owned by the stockholders. This gives us more information and transparency in a timely manner.

Brian Grogan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Grogan I recommend that the proposed rule making for only semi-annual reports from companies to shareholders be REJECTED! The current rule requiring quarterly reports from companies should be retained so shareholders who have part ownership of companies stock receive timely information for their due diligence in deciding whether to buy, sell or hold shares of said companies. Transparency is key and semi-annual reports fail to provide transparent and timely information to said stock owners. Thank you for your consideration of my comment.

Brian Hall — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brian Hall Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is easier to get real-time information now. We should have more regular reporting (monthly?) not less.

Brian Hall
Retired

Brian Hannigan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brian Hannigan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need more transparency from companies, not less.

-Brian Hannigan (voter)

Brian Hopkins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Hopkins I do not support semiannual reporting. As a small investor, I cannot compete with large, institutional investors, much less with AI. Institutions and wealthy individuals are at an advantage due to superior knowledge and instantaneous information. Current rules allow people like myself to stay better informed and monitor our nest eggs. I can't imagine that the companies lobbying for this change are strapped economically, and that quarterly reporting would create an undue burden for them. Their executives and employees seem to be well paid. I urge Congress and our regulators to support the ability of us small investors to receive quarterly reporting. Thanks for your consideration.

Brian J. O'Leary Associate Professor of Industrial Organizational Psychology — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian J. O'Leary I ask that you not reduce the number of public-company reports from 4 to 2 annually. Less information means less transparency. The information is now much easier to compile with AI, so there is no efficiency benefit to the company and only serves to provide less information to their stockholders. It is a bad idea that will ultimately lead to less accountability.

Brian Jones — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Jones I Belive quarterly reporting is important, please do not change it.

Brian Kane — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Kane I don't believe reducing the number of annual reporting events is a good idea for investors.

Brian Knittel The Motley Fool Community and experienced active stock investor for 33 years — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Knittel Regular quarterly company disclosures are important for informing the individual investors and investment firms. The quarterly focus on the short term is a result of how people react to the information, not that the information is made available. AI tools are helping to reduce the burden for companies producing quality quarterly reports. Reducing that to semi annually will only keep investors from having reliable information in a timely fashion. Thanks, Brian

---

Brian Kolasinski The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Kolasinski reporting for companies should not be reduced to twice a year

---

Brian Kraus — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Kraus A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that’s a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Brian Ladd — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Ladd I am concerned about any watering down of reporting requirements which MUST lead to reduced accountability and transparency. And, surely the 'mechanics' in terms of computerisation and digital capability have improved disproportionately in recent years - we are no longer talking about physically sending IN THE PAPER POST swathes of documents. Reducing from quarterly reporting is a backward step and should be reconsidered. thank you

---

Brian Lincoln — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Lincoln The Motely Fool Community informed me of the proposed change to twice a year reporting, and I agree with them that it should remain at four times a year.

Brian Luscher — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Brian Luscher Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am a retired lawyer and CPA. Quarterly corporate reports are one of the reasons that US financial markets are more trusted than markets with less reporting. Getting reliable financial information is essential to investors and their advisors. It is an important component of having better information on a timely basis and it keeps publicly traded companies more diligent in keeping us all informed. Less reporting means more opaque and untimely information. The US should not reduce the gold standard that keeps investors worldwide investing in American businesses and inspires confidence in the diligence of corporate officers fulfilling their fiduciary duties. In an uncertain world this matters greatly.

Brian Luscher
South Carolina

Brian MacKenzie — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian MacKenzie Please cancel the proposal to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Stockholders are owners of the company and deserve full disclosure of the numbers on a timely basis. I fear this proposal comes from businesses trying to hide illegal acts in a more efficient manner. This legitimate concern outweighs the small amount of money that they may save.

Brian McCleery — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian McCleery Do not allow the current reporting schedule to change. If it must change then all shareholders must have access to the same information at the same time. Anything else is pure corruption and the market and companies will be detrimentally affected.

Brian Meissner Motley Fools — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Meissner Less information on how you are going to invest in anything is a bad idea.

Brian Miller — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brian Miller Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is not time for another ENRON. For Pete’s sake, quarterly reports are the minimum. Don’t cut accountability! Keep quarterly reports!

Thank you,

Brian Miller

512.656.6841

Brian Monks — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Monks I oppose any reduction from quarterly reporting. Public company ownership carries an expectation of regular and transparent communication. Moving to less frequent reporting weakens that accountability and reduces visibility for shareholders. Less frequent disclosure does not improve decision making; it increases information gaps and delays insight into performance and risk. The primary beneficiaries of reduced reporting are issuers, not investors, while shareholders bear the cost of diminished transparency.

Brian Moore — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Moore I strongly oppose the proposed shift to semiannual reporting. As an investor, consistent and transparent communication is fundamental to making informed decisions and maintaining trust in public markets. Reducing reporting frequency does not eliminate short-term focus—it simply reduces visibility into company performance and increases the risk of larger information gaps and market volatility when updates do occur. In today's environment, where disclosure tools are more efficient than ever, the argument for reducing reporting on cost grounds is unconvincing. Clear, regular reporting is a cornerstone of investor protection and market integrity. Maintaining quarterly reporting helps ensure accountability, transparency, and better-informed market participants.

Brian Ottman Motley Fool Investing Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Ottman Dear Commissioners, As both an investor and someone working in a cyclical industry where conditions can change rapidly, I rely heavily on quarterly disclosures to make informed capital allocation decisions. I am writing to express my opposition to the proposed rule that would allow public companies to replace quarterly reporting (Form 10-Q) with semiannual reporting (Form 10-S). As an owner of public companies through my investments, I strongly believe that more frequent, standardized disclosure is critical to transparency, accountability, and market efficiency. Reducing mandatory reporting frequency from quarterly to semiannual represents a meaningful step backward in each of these areas. 1. Reduction in Timely, Decision-Useful Information Quarterly reporting provides investors with a consistent and reliable cadence of information regarding company performance, financial health, and emerging risks. Moving to semiannual reporting would double the time between required disclosures, leaving investors with extended periods of uncertainty. The SEC's own Investor Advisory Committee has warned that reducing reporting frequency could deprive markets of timely, material information and impair informed decision-making. 2. Potential Disadvantage to Retail Investors While large institutional investors often have access to additional channels of information, retail investors depend on periodic filings to stay informed. A shift to semiannual reporting risks creating an uneven playing field by increasing reliance on non-standard, less structured disclosures, such as press releases or selective communications. Public reporting requirements exist to ensure fair and equal access to material information. Weakening those requirements could unintentionally erode investor confidence in the fairness and transparency of U.S. markets. 3. Weakened Corporate Accountability and Market Discipline Quarterly reporting serves an important governance function by requiring companies to regularly assess, certify, and disclose their performance. This cadence: Encourages ongoing accountability Promotes early identification of risks Discourages the deferral of negative developments Reducing this frequency could allow underlying issues to persist longer without scrutiny, increasing the risk of sudden negative corrections rather than gradual price discovery. 4. Risks of Inconsistent and Reduced Disclosure Although the proposal would allow companies to voluntarily continue providing quarterly updates, it is reasonable to expect that some issuers would reduce the frequency and/or depth of their disclosures in order to lower compliance costs. This would likely result in: Less standardized reporting across issuers Reduced comparability between companies Greater reliance on management discretion in determining what to disclose Such outcomes would undermine one of the key strengths of the current reporting framework: consistency and comparability. 5. Questionable Trade-off Between Cost Savings and Investor Protection While I recognize the potential for reduced compliance costs and a greater focus on long-term strategy, these benefits should not come at the expense of investor protection and market transparency. The current quarterly reporting system has long been a cornerstone of U.S. capital market strength. Any cost savings achieved by reducing reporting frequency must be carefully weighed against the potential erosion of trust and informational integrity in the markets. Conclusion For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to retain the existing quarterly reporting requirement rather than adopt an optional semiannual framework. If the goal is to reduce short-termism or compliance burden, I encourage the Commission to consider targeted alternatives—such as simplifying disclosure requirements—without reducing the frequency of investor reporting. Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this important proposal. Respectfully, Brian Ottman

---

Brian O'Loughlin (individual) The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian O'Loughlin (individual) Keep the reporting quarterly - investors are in need of regular updates.

Brian Petersen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brian Petersen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please reconsider this. It is detrimental for the sake of the investors.

Brian Rachmat — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Rachmat I believe it will make America market look less transparency than before, right now what I always proud to invest in US market is almost every investor have same opportunity to get the same information. Best regards, Brian R

Brian Richmond Small business owner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Richmond As a small business owner we need to keep track of things monthly I believe reporting every 6 months is a big mistake as investors need to updated at least quarterly

---

Brian Rollins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brian Rollins Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There is no reasonable rationale to reduce financial reporting to only twice a year. How does the average investor make any decisions on companies performance? It feels like this only benefits the corporations and not their shareholders. Please do not change the reporting requirements.

Thank you.
Brian Rollins

Brian Rudd Financial Advisor for 50 years retired — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Rudd Transparency is better accomplished with reporting! Quarterly reporting should be a minimum standard!

Brian Schilling — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brian Schilling Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Brian Schilling retired. This matters to me so I can keep a closer eye on my investments.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Brian Simpson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brian Simpson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 If you don't have any thing to hide why not just let it be opened up with transparency for all the see when asked to see

---

Brian Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Smith Please do not allow for the reduction in reports from our public companies. The shock value at quarterly reporting is enough. This proposal would increase volatility and we should seek to keep the markets more calm not less.

BRIAN SOBOLEWSKI — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: BRIAN SOBOLEWSKI Please keep reporting at 4x per year.

Brian Tatomir Partner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Tatomir Never in all of history has less proven out to be more! Think about building a bridge and having only one half of the plan updates. End result is the two half’s will not meet in the middle. True story!!!

Brian Torpey Global Head Logistics, IQVIA Laboratories — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Torpey I feel it is critical to financial transparency to retain quarterly reporting requirements. I rely on SEC records to evaluate risk in my company's supply chains for Courier service providers and suppliers of medical devices. My internal and external customers expect me to do this due diligence research to assure there will be no disruptions on patients in clinical trials.

BRIAN WOOD — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: BRIAN WOOD Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No roll back!

Brian Zeltzer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brian Zeltzer A reduction in transparency will endanger our economy as well as individual investors. In 2026, things change more quickly rather than less. Giving corporations more freedom to keep investors and regulatory eyes away from the ledgers is simply collusion. Due to the efficiencies of the modern computing environment, reporting costs should be reduced such that increased reporting frequency could come at very little cost. Reduced reporting need not be on the table. This would a betrayal on the part of the U.S. Government. Your primary constituency should be the individuals that make up our nation and economy. Please don't endanger our economy and our livelihoods.

Briana Naseer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Briana Naseer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Consumers need to be regularly informed of what’s happening to their money! Keep quarterly reports for public companies. We cannot wait half a year for updates.

Bridget Blackwood — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bridget Blackwood Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Companies need to be transparent about the way they are conducting business. They can't be trusted to conduct business in a way that doesn't crash entire sectors of the economy by reckless behaviors like those that have led to the crash of 2008.

Bridget Blackwood

Bridget Labat — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bridget Labat Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is not fair! If you proceed with this I will remove all my money and put it elsewhere!!!!

Sent from my iPhone

---

bridget turow — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: bridget turow Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I spent the majority of my career at investment firms. This change in transpa rency is unfair to investors. Bridget Turow, Registered Associate

---

Bridgett Emerson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-18 From: Bridgett Emerson Dear Secretary Countryman, I am strongly opposed to the proposal allowing public companies to transition from quarterly to semi-annual reporting. This change will severely degrade the integrity of U.S. capital markets. I need timely information to make timely financial decisions. Most people need this timely information to plan for their financial survival into their golden years, where it is evident there are insufficient safety nets in place. This proposed change would create: - A data vacuum favoring corporate insiders and institutional investors who buy alternative data, leaving retail investors completely disadvantaged. - Increased market volutility with potential for massive, destabilizing price shocks when earnings are finally released. - Increased investor risk and higher risk premiums, driving up the cost of capital for companies and erasing any compliance savings. The quarterly disclosure framework is vital to maintaining market liquidity, trust, and efficiency and I urge the Commission to withdraw this proposal.

Bridgette — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bridgette Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Bridgette A Tojek Owner operator
Fillmore NY
Absolutely opposed to twice a year

Brigit Klement — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brigit Klement Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is necessary
For transparency!

Brigit Klement Nurse Practitioner

Sent from my iPhone

Brinda Pumphrey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Brinda Pumphrey Semiannual reporting is a bad idea. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Please keep reporting on a quarterly basis.

Britni Kistner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Britni Kistner Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do not allow quarterly reporting move to twice per year. This would be a huge disservice to investors. Companies need to be reporting quarterly. History has already proven this to be true.

Brittany Brown — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Brittany Brown Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Maintain quarterly reporting to protect the public's financial interests when making investments. Brittany Brown, HR Business Partner, Bloomfield NJ

Brittany Brown, PHR, SHRM-CP
HR Professional

Sent from my iPhone

Brittany Opoku-Asamoah — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Brittany Opoku-Asamoah Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Corruption in business cannot stand. What happened to transparency? Continued black outs in communication will lead to businesses being run like a den of thieves. Make best practice great again

---

Brittany Petit — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Brittany Petit Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Stop playing with our lives. The retirements of everyday Americans are tied up in stock investments and not nearly enough has been done to protect our money. I read the news and see all the fraud taking place with no repercussions; creative stock manipulations, insider trading happening in broad daylight, corporations engaging in government corruption, shell companies layered to conceal risky investments and debt. Letting companies go dark is just going to further fuel corruption, dishonesty, and insider trading and the house of cards will topple. Transparency is a must and quarterly reporting is the bare minimum requirement.

Brittany Schendel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Brittany Schendel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Brittany Schendel and I invest in a cosmetic industry. In order to stay up-to-date with the latest fashion I have to stay current and up-to-date with the fashion world. Not receiving quarterly updates could hurt my investments that I have already made and future investments that I might want to make. Keeping me in the dark for six months, will not only leave me left behind, but it will also lead to me being broke. It is essential that I am well informed at all times to help keep me current in recent events that will affect my stocks. Do not switch to this new proposal, please! It will be devastating to me, and it will take money out of my pocket and make me not want to invest any further!

Sent from my iPhone

Brittney Lee — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Brittney Lee Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: fraud hids in the dark. It hids behind closed doors. It hids behind loop holes. When the public has no access to the earnings reports. We don't know what corporations are spending our money on. We wont know if they are using the blackout to hid money away, or line their pockets with more money in big bones. We wont know if it is true, that a corporation lost money if there is no visibility for the public. How can we have any faith in the government and corporations, when all they think about, care about, are the stack holders and not the consumers. I know corporations already make decisions that benefit them and the share holders by making more money for them. Record breaking profits are only good for the stack holders. Not the employees. Not the consumer.
I have no faith in the government and corporations. I do not trust that anyone is putting any thought or consideration into my well being or financial security. I have no faith corporations wont use this opportunity to screw the country over.

Broadbent Heritage Partners, L.L.C. Investment Manager — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Broadbent Heritage Partners, L.L.C. Maintaining Sarbanes-Oxley requirements for quarterly reporting by public companies is essential for investors.

Brock Temple — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Brock Temple Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 CEOs are greedy selfish self centered crooked and only look out for them and their stock holders best interest, NOT the customers. They should be held accountable for all the wrong doing they do and try to hide every day!

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Brodie Beers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Brodie Beers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Your new decision to try and get rid of quarterly reports is irresponsible and dangerous the fact of the matter is it's one of the main pieces of information I use when investing it helps me decide when I should stop investing in a company when I should move my investments and if I should invest in the company all getting rid of this does is make companies that are losing money I recorder look better the only reason this is happening is because people who are losing money every quarter want to look better to their investors and having your investors be reminded that you're losing money so often looks badly on them but that's not a fault of the system they shouldn't be losing money every quarter it's important for investors to know this information and hiding it only makes the economy worse because bad companies are able to continue losing money for longer while investors are in the dark changing this will make me lose a lot of faith in the administration and very much decide the way that I vote this November choose wisely I don't want to vote blue but if this is what you guys are going to do to the market you give me no choice it's genuinely such a dangerous and irresponsible idea that would make me vote for the people that want to split our country with immigrants and literally replace me because at the end of the day the market functioning properly is critical to America and something that we cannot afford to lose please don't make this dangerous and unprecedented decision for no reason there is no positive benefit to this

---

bromleyjo — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: bromleyjo Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This matters to investors and the American people. Jodene Bromley Business Finance teacher. Keep the playing field level. .this will lead to increased insider trading.

Sent from my Galaxy

---

bromleyjo — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: bromleyjo Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This matters to investors and the American people. Jodene Bromley Business Finance teacher. Keep the playing field level. .this will lead to increased insider trading if you do not require quarterly review.

Sent from my Galaxy

Bronwyn Levy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bronwyn Levy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Bronwyn Van Duzer, Retired from Verizon F&A and Deloitte client facing reporting support.
People believe a number is a number. They are wrong when it comes to financial reporting. I have seen and heard too many iterations of quarterly report drafts to ever look at one without dissecting it and questioning the numbers. My concern is that we need TIGHTER controls because some corporate leaders are in bed with the ‘independent’ auditors. If you don’t believe this, subpoena the audit partners and corporate leaders digital footprints. The SEC needs MORE manpower and oversight than it currently has. And these people need to be independent of auditing firms and corporations.
WE, THE PUBLIC, CANNOT AFFORD TO LESSEN CONTROL OF FINANCIAL REPORTING.
There are too many pension funds dependent on the transparency of corporate financial reporting.
And, remember, especially with this administration, when you reduce oversight, it will not go up again. In fact, it is a slippery slope to ending oversight. WE CANNOT ALLOW THIS TO HAPPEN.

Sent from my iPhone

---

bruce archibald — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: bruce archibald Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Bruce Archibald retired. I prefer to have quarterly reports to see if investments are need changed

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Bruce Austin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bruce Austin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly reporting! It is working now, doing what it is designed to do. Why break it if not for creating better opportunities for grifting by those who will grift?

Kind regards, Bruce Austin
Los Angeles, CA

Bruce Brown Certified Professional Accountant — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Brown Business conditions change rapidly, reducing the reporting periods and lengthening the time between reporting periods is not conducive to informed investment decisions.

BRUCE CARMAN — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: BRUCE CARMAN As an investor in publicly traded companies, i.e. stocks, I strongly disagree with this proposal to reduce reporting to a semi annual schedule. This reduces the amount of information and the timely reporting of that information to investors, who are part owners of these companies. In order to make informed decisions investors need more, not less information on the current status of their holdings. Going to a semi annual schedule will also unnecessarily increase volatility. As someone nearing retirement I find this proposal extremely counterproductive to the average investor.

Bruce Chitester (Bear) — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bruce Chitester (Bear) Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I expect that you will not allow this. This will be another no vote for republicans from me should you all allow this.

"GH Hardy" It is not worth an intelligent man's time to be in the majority. By definition, there are already enough people to do that.

Bruce Cole — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Cole A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that’s a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Bruce Damkoehler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Damkoehler Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I see no reason why the quarterly reporting as it currently exists should be cut in half. Leave it alone. Bruce Damkoehler, Grand Rapids. Michigan.

Bruce Davis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Davis It's a total abdication of reasonable accountability to reduce the reporting requirements from quarterly to semi-annually. My view is offered from the perspective of a retired professional that served in the financial industry for 50 years. At one point during that term, serving within senior management for a small public company. That's why I believe quarterly reporting is necessary for shareholders and investors to make a well-informed investment decision. Too much can occur within 90 days, and exponentially more can occur over 6 months that’s financially material to an investment decision. It's ridiculous to think otherwise in today's world. It's also dangerous to ease up on quarterly reporting as it adds additional and unnecessary risk to the investment decision due to delayed information. This added risk will likely encourage greater speculation over informed investing (Can you say 1929?). At the same time, 6-month reporting allows insiders too much room for self-dealing without accountability. In my opinion, the proposed change will also materially undermine confidence in the public markets. The obvious result from this shift will be greater investing in bonds vs stocks. Especially by the retail investor. The long-term effect will be a bigger challenge building a retirement nest egg by retail investors. QUARTERLY FINANCIALS CAN EASILY BE RELEASED BECAUSE SENIOR MANAGEMENT RECEIVES THIS SAME INFORMATION MONTHLY (AND OFTEN TIMES WEEKLY)! The cost argument to drop quarterly financials is a specious perspective. If a company cannot afford to produce quarterly information for the public from information that's readily available, then they should not be a public traded company.

Bruce Eckhardt — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bruce Eckhardt Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No change!

Sent from Bruce's iPad mini 4

Bruce Eilerts — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bruce Eilerts Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hell no. Do not approve this. We do not need more strategies to help the rich get richer. Start helping the American middle class instead. Greed is a sickness...

BRUCE H. CLARKE B.H. CLARKE ENGINEERING, LLC — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: BRUCE H. CLARKE Social Security and other social programs are threatened by funding, political and demographic issues. More and more, individuals are becoming increasingly dependent on their own savings to secure their retirements and health care. Please don't reduce the available information that individuals or their advisors rely on to make well informed investment decisions.

Bruce Jang Salesforce — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Jang I’m not a fan of reducing public company reporting from four times a year to two. As an investor, I view owning stock as owning part of a business, and owners deserve regular updates on how that business is performing. The argument that fewer reports will reduce short-term thinking doesn’t really convince me. Companies will still operate every day, make decisions, launch products, and face challenges. Reporting less often doesn’t change that reality. It just means investors have less visibility into what’s happening. To me, less transparency creates more uncertainty, not less. And when information is finally released, the surprises and market reactions are likely to be much bigger. More information generally leads to better-informed owners, and that’s why I think quarterly reporting should remain in place.

---

bruce Jensen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: bruce Jensen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This will make a bad situation worse, keep quarterly reports!!

Bruce Kinney — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Kinney I am opposed to the proposal to allow semiannual reporting, and I encourage the SEC to not pass it. As a lifelong investor, I depend on quarterly information from the companies I own stock in to help me make good investment decisions. Less transparency increases uncertainty, making it more difficult to make good decisions. Semiannual reporting will not discourage a short term focus of corporate managers, as some claim. Nor would it significantly reduce costs compared to quarterly reporting, which can better be reduced through the use of modern automation and AI technology. Please keep the quarterly reporting requirements.

Bruce McKay Member of The Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce McKay I think less information is a bad thing for investors (owners). Reducing reporting by half will, in my opinion, lead to greater volatility and market swings because it is more likely that investors (owners) will be surprised than if they were getting quarterly reports. I do not think that any potential cost savings will be worth this trade off. Please reconsider this action. As an owner (share holder) in many publicly-held companies, I am opposed to reducing the number of required public disclosures by any of the companies I own. Thank you for considering my view on this topic.

Bruce Murphy Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Murphy Reducing the amount of times a company must report to its investors reduces the information available for smart decision making. While companies may believe it reduces their cost, today reports can be sent electronically and with the AI tools available, companies can reduce their work even further. It may also lead to negative feedback and reaction once investors do receive the information, especially if the investor finds the company made decisions that impacted their ownership through bad decisions during a reporting period. I am against reducing the number of reporting periods for these reasons.

Bruce Nehlsen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Nehlsen I oppose the suggestion to reduce company reporting from quarterly frequency. We should always promote more transparency for the investing public, and lower frequency will reduce that.

Bruce Platt none — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Platt We need full transparency via quarterly reports, which is needed to keep investing fair to the private investor. Which in the end will be better for the markets. The proposed actions will cause distrust in the markets which will put downward pressure.

Bruce Salazar — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bruce Salazar Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a small business owner, we rely heavily on transparency when investing to secure any retirement. Please do not expand necessary reporting to 6 months. - Bruce S. Small Family Business owner Greenwood, IN

Bruce Seton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bruce Seton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The only reason you wait 6 months is to hope the narrative changes for bad news. Do you want to wait 6 months to get a report card from your kids college? Nope you want an update to insure your investments are on track. Why on earth would any investor support this? Do not move forward.

Bruce Seton a retired executive (public company) and a retail investor

---

Bruce Sheffer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bruce Sheffer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Bruce Sheffer. Investor. Public companies should produce data on demand. It is the only way to prove valuation and prevent fraud.

Bruce Sizemore — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bruce Sizemore Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is just part of the coup that is transforming US democracy into an authoritarian state. What other practical reason is there? To give relief? Relief is not needed; transparency is! This is so obvious; don't be a part of this scam.

Bruce Stern stockholder — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bruce Stern I am 100% against changing from quarterly to semi annually reporting. I am an owner and am entitled to know!

Bruce Vogel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bruce Vogel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is a no brainer and every company knows it. The more timely detailed information a company has, the better for the company. The same for the investor, because in today's "AI" world, any information shared with the companies "BOARD" should be shared with the investors. It really should be shared on a monthly basis — a lot has changed in the last 50 years. THE SEC needs to catch up to the times not move backwards.

Respectfully submitted.

Bryan Abels Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bryan Abels It is necessary for me to get quarterly information to make good investment decisions.

Bryan Cannon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bryan Cannon Changing reporting frequency to semi-annual has the potential to be extremely detrimental to retail investors as well as providing cover for the seeking of exit liquidity by insiders. This could further shake confidence in our market. Reporting is best kept quarterly.

Bryan Cannon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Bryan Cannon Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Reducing reporting frequency will not only harm retail investors but continue to erode public faith in the market. This can easily be seen as exclusively beneficial to insiders seeking exit liquidity during a massively volatile time.

Bryan Darr — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bryan Darr I think reducing to twice a year is a mistake. Financial transparency of public companies is one of the foundations of our economy. Please keep it at quarterly.

Bryan Edwards — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bryan Edwards Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 there is no reason in this day and age to go any fewer than quarterly. with the technology we have these days, there is no inherent burden on the companies to finalize and submit quarterly numbers to the general public. Moving to twice a year will only foster a greater risk for fraud and abuse. i have been in corporate accounting for the better part of 30 years and there is definately a need to keep the accountability of public corporations at a quarterly basis.

regards,
bryan edwards

Bryan McGurk CIO, McGurk Capital Partners — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bryan McGurk I've been a professional investor for 10 years and the flow of quarterly earning information is invaluable. Cutting the frequency to semiannual reporting would invite a higher level of fraud, accounting gimmicks and bad actors in a financial system that has increasingly been letting them roam freely without punishment. We cannot let the markets turn purely into a mechanism for fraud and speculation and we are already approaching a dangerous point playing with these forces. We need fairness, transparency, and data for this to work and I can't imagine a world with less data being a good thing as a professional investor. The US markets will eventually lose their premium for being in a high quality governance and legal jurisdiction. We don't need to speed this process up which is exactly what this motion to move to semi-annual reporting does. Other investors worldwide will look to other locations where their capital is treated better. It has happened before and it can happen to the US as well. Sincerely, Bryan McGurk

---

Bryan Plasters — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bryan Plasters The proposal would allow public companies to report financial results twice per year instead of quarterly, which critics argue would: -Reduce transparency for shareholders by cutting official updates in half. -Leave investors less informed about company performance, strategy, risks, and operational changes. -Increase uncertainty between reporting periods because less information would be available. -Lead to larger surprises when results are finally disclosed, potentially causing sharper stock-price reactions. -Increase market volatility as more information accumulates between reports. -Weaken accountability of management to shareholders by reducing the frequency of public disclosures. -Not actually solve short-termism, since investor behavior—not the existence of quarterly reports—is seen as the root cause of short-term focus. -Potentially benefit companies at the expense of investors, trading transparency for modest administrative cost savings. The central argument is that less frequent reporting means less transparency, less informed ownership, and potentially more market uncertainty and volatility.

Bryan Thompson None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bryan Thompson I strongly encourage the commission to not change the reporting intervals or details required in each reporting period. This data has greatly enhanced my ability to understand the companies I invest in or plan to invest in. Thank you for your consideration.

Bryan Winningham — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bryan Winningham Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting, going to bi-annual reports reduces insight into companies operation for myself and small investors.
Bryan Winningham, Engineer

Bryan

Bryce Bederka Surgeon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bryce Bederka I believe that decreasing corporate reporting from quarterly to twice a year is a bad choice which will lead to less information for investors and shareholders. Rarely is having less information available when looking at a company and investment a good thing. Please maintain the current standard of quarterly reporting so that us investors whom do not have an inside advantage can still maintain some understanding of the underlying financial situation of the companies in which we are investing.

Bryce Fenenbock — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bryce Fenenbock Quarterly reports provide fundamental visibility into the metrics of companies that are the backbone of millions of American's livelihoods. Losing this would be catastrophic for the integrity of the market, and open the door for insider manipulation.

Bryn Beorse — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bryn Beorse Retired people increasingly depend on their savings and investments for income. A fair market system for securities that empowers smaller investors alongside larger ones depends on public access to reliable information. Where markets are volatile as they are now, it's no time to reduce access.

Bubbling Wells — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Bubbling Wells Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the three month window. Do not change to six months.

Warm Regards,

Bubbling Wells Oasis
760-206-6933

Buck — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Buck Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly report. CEOs make an exorbitant amount of money they should at least be responsible for what's going on in the company and earn that money. Stop the steal …the last year and a half has been some of the most outrageous thefts and ignorance of the law. The backlash from this will be brutal, and that pendulum will swing really hard the other way..
Make people responsible for their actions, including yourself.

Sent from Buck's iPhone

Buck Buchanan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Buck Buchanan Do not reduce the Reg FD reporting to 2 per year...this will be horribly wrong for the investors of our country and allow companies to hide issues that would be disclosed under normal 4x reporting.

Bud Dailey The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Bud Dailey Please keep number of public-company reports to four times per year.

Bud LiteMama — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Bud LiteMama Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 In this digital age, there's no reason not to have up to date information daily. Corporations can most certainly upload changes as they occur. I don't think quarterly is even acceptable when it can be current to the day. Investors require current information to make knowledgeable decisions.

Butch Hopkins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Butch Hopkins Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Financial accountability is your job, SEC. Investors will be hurt. Nobody will be helped.

Butch Hopkins
Texas
Retired Hospital Executive

Butch Hopkins

Sent from my mobile device. Please pardon the brevity and any grammatical errors.

---

butch jones — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: butch jones Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As an investor, I will be at least 6 months behind the curve if a company I have stock in is starting to fail or there is fraud or other questionable financial practices surfacing. By the time my broker or myself find out that a company is in trouble the executives could have taken their money and bailed. Do not change the current requirement.

Sent from my iPhone

---

bwgrady — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: bwgrady Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We have enough corruption in our country now...this rule does not need changing!!! Leave as is!

Sent from my Galaxy

---

bwgrady — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: bwgrady Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We have enough corruption in our country now...this rule does not need changing!!! Leave as is! Thanks. B. W. Grady Waynesville NC. Retired

Sent from my Galaxy

---

bwiggy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: bwiggy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Barry W. Small business owner for 33 years. So no accountability for 6 months at a time? You're complicit in the destruction of American commerce and business practices as we know it. Please don't change the rule

Sent from my Galaxy

Byeong min — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Byeong min Report in every 3 month....this is important..clear. We are invest..... Do not report 6 month... Report in every 3 month...

Byron McDanlel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Byron McDanlel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I have been an investor since 1973, and my confidence in most shares with reduced reporting would not allow that to continue. It makes no sense in this age of instant data.

Byron Nordby Retired — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Byron Nordby I learned about this from Motley Fool. I feel as an investor I want to keep as well informed as possible regarding the stocks in my IRA and adjust my investments accordingly. I want to receive reports and have them available to me at least 4 times a year or more not just once or twice a year. I'm sure many other retired individuals would feel the same way. Thank you for the opportunity to express my opinion and I hope that it will be considered in any decisions made.

---

c — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Live the statements quarterly. Thanks From: c Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Sent from the all new AOL app for iOS

---

c 1960 — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: c 1960 Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reports, corporations have a responsibility to its shareholders

Sent from my iPhone

C D'Esposito — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: C D'Esposito Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 One word - ENRON

C Frank n/a — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C Frank Comments attached The disclosure of corporate financial information is critical to the integrity and strength of our economic system. The process of disclosure is probably an expense and time consuming to corporations, but if AI turns out to be the possible time saver it's suggested to be, all will be well. I notice that currently, Corporate America is doing very well earnings-wise, so what's the beef ? If disclosure was changed to 3 times a year, that would be better. That, or keep it at 4 times a year, but certainly NOT 2 times a year.

C Harris-Gendron — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: C Harris-Gendron Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 SEC is bad for our country and citizens. Full transparency and accountability is required!!

C J Beegle-Krause — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: C J Beegle-Krause Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 With our current President in TWH, I am concerned that his choices will negatively affect my portfolio.
I find 2 months much better for gaging what to.

Sincerely,
Cynthia Beegle-Krause

Sent from CJ’s iPhone

C Jay — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: C Jay Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The only people who will benefit from twice yearly reporting are those with something to hide. It allows time for more fraud and insider trading. We need to keep quarterly reporting.

C Jay Tarwater — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: C Jay Tarwater Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am firmly against any erosion of consumer protection, especially one that enriches the companies but works to enpoverish the consumer. We are not here to improve your wealth. These companies need to understand that.

My Best,

C Jay Tarwater
Human Rights Consultant
Paralegal Specialist
678-570-5906

C Lee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: C Lee Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Quarterly Reporting must continue. You owe a duty to the American ppl. Not corporations.

C MacGregor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: C MacGregor Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need to maintain, at a minimum, quarterly reporting. However, I think we all know that as all things speed headlong into the future, monthly reporting is what will truly protect investors. AI makes this entirely reasonable. Reporting at six months is the wrong direction if policy is intended to discourage corruption.

C Reingold — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C Reingold This is a bad move. Having up to date information as much as daily is wonderful. Keeps us informed constantly. Taking this away will require me to close my account. Without having updates as we now do, I would be unable to make good investment decisions.

C ROXAS — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: C ROXAS Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Maintain quarterly reporting! It comes down to when the cat's away...! Regular accountability keeps things more "honest".
Thank you,
C. Roxas
Florida

C S — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: C S Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No corporation or person rep from the corporation should be allowed to go dark, period.

Sent from my iPhone
Connie Whitson-Forbes

C Williams — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: C Williams Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep It quarterly, I'm an Uber driver

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

C&K — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: C&K Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Craig Keenan here. In an age of blatant greed, please keep the reporting requirements quarterly. No benefit to investors by going semiannual. More disclosure is better than less.

Thank you

C. A. Martin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: C. A. Martin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The SEC needs to remember the needs and the will of the people, not just the fat cats and trumpites.

C. B. Lindeman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: C. B. Lindeman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Chris Lindeman, Madison WI
Retired
Things aren't doing better - they're doing worse. Especially for 'regular' folks. We need MORE transparency, not less. Do the correct thing, not what benefits big business.

C. C, Fee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C. C, Fee As an investor-owner of a number of stocks, I would greatly prefer more information about the businesses I own shares of, rather than less. As it is today, four reports a year can hardly be a burden on any well-run company. Indeed, given the proliferation of AI in the business community, certainly the cost to provide these reports must be lessening. Please do NOT lower reporting requirements!

C. Dianne Manning — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: C. Dianne Manning Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I’m retired. Investing is a financial lifeline. Please consider fairness for all citizens!

Sent from my iPhone

C.E. Sherrod — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: C.E. Sherrod This is a bad move for individual investors – it creates opacity and undermines trust. he companies we trade are not being held back from greatness by the obligation to file four reports a year. ... The entire S&P 500 files a 10-Q every quarter, and the S&P 500 is at an all-time high. Research from the CFA Institute, which studied this exact maneuver in the U.K. market, shows that reporting frequency has no measurable effect on corporate investment behavior. The SEC is accepting a real cost – less transparency for individual investors – for a benefit that the evidence says simply won't materialize.

C.L. Dport — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: C.L. Dport Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is necessary. Companies will take advantage of outside stakeholders if they are not required to report. Big business is already taken advantage of us. We should be making businesses more transparent.

Caden Payne — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Caden Payne Please do not convert to semi-annual earnings reports. Quarterly reports are extremely useful and necessary for understanding company progress.

Caidyn Boyd — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Caidyn Boyd Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I work for a small business in Washington state. We already struggle to keep up with our own bookkeeping and navigating tax code, tariffs, and constantly changing prices that by necessity get passed on to our customers. It’s an immense amount of work and it makes sense why it’s necessary to ensure that guidelines are followed. So if that is the case for us, why should publicly traded companies not have to follow rules that have been a clear expectation for years? For us, the amount we do is the bare minimum because it is all we can do. If we were a larger company it would be infinitely easier as we could hire out people with expertise in each of these things to ensure costs stayed low and customers remained happy and relatively unaffected. As it stands, multiple jobs are done by each individual, and the bare minimum is all we can keep up with and it costs us so much in lost revenue - revenue that would otherwise also be taxable by the state. My retirement plans and investment is entirely reliant on these systems and expectations being conformed to, and any difficulties surrounding this decision are marginal to the success of these companies or their execs, but it hurts everyone else. Allowing this to go through will undermine the entire market and set us up for another major collapse.

CB

Get Outlook for iOS

Caissie Fox — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Caissie Fox Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it quarLu!

Sent from my iPhone

Caleb Blanton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Caleb Blanton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 What is hidden in the dark will come out to the Light Jesus Christ Saves Holy Bible KJV John 3

Caleb Cassada — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Caleb Cassada Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Caleb and I'm a healthcare worker who is greatly concerned about the potential abuse of power that this represents. We the people deserve transparency and to know that large companies aren't hiding the ugly truth from us. We deserve to know that our financial investments in these companies are safe.

Caleb Kirilov — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Caleb Kirilov Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Caleb Kirilov, I’m a videographer, and the best way we can keep a functioning democracy where companies are not playing dirty tricks behind the government’s back or polluting the soil we grow our food on is to keep their activities as transparent as necessary.

Calen V. Iron — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Calen V. Iron Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is not right. I oppose this loss of transparency. I, and I imagine millions of other investors, will begin withdrawing from the investment market to preserve our gains. Yes, this is a sh*t idea.

John Schultz

Invested for over 40 years.

Calhoun Hendrix — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Calhoun Hendrix Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting requirement in place. This rule has served the general public well. There is no good reason to halve the reporting requirement. C. W. Hendrix, Jr. Retired Davidson, NC

Thanks
C. W. Hendrix

704-562-1042

Cali Mullins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cali Mullins Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I rely on those reports for my kids' college funds, my retirement, and my current income. We don't need more sneaking around and less oversite!

Sent from my iPhone

Calvin Barrett — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Calvin Barrett Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is a bad idea it invites fraud.

Calvin Hampton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Calvin Hampton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Other way to keep the money for the wealthy. Why does anyone want to keep the middle class and lower class from getting their fair share of the wealth

Sent from my iPhone

Calvin Kalbach — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Calvin Kalbach Reducing the reporting requirements from 4 times per year to 2 times per year can not possibly be helpful to either institutional investors or individual investors. The current reporting requirements have been in place for a long time and have proven helpful and sufficient to investors without overburdening companies with excessive compliance requirements.

Calvin King — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Calvin King I am opposed to any change in the current quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. I am an investor and therefore part owner of several public companies and this proposal would weaken my information and trust in those specific companies and the entire American economy. My family's wellbeing and security rests on being more informed- not less. Thank you.

Cam The Motley Fool Affiliation — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cam As a shareholder of a number of US companies, I like to be kept informed, on a quarterly basis at the least, of company developments and how the company is doing sales-wise, cash flow-wise and profit-wise and balance-sheet wise. I hate to be kept informed the dark when my family's financial well-being depends on it. Thank you.

Cami Lind — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cami Lind Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is necessary to protect all investors and contribute to accurate analysis of the economy.

Get Outlook for iOS

Camilla Curren Medical doctor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Camilla Curren As an investor, I am opposed to reducing the frequency of SEC reporting by CEOs. I feel that increased transparency is needed, and that increased reporting frequency as equivalent to this. We are in a time when increased confidence in our markets and leaders as needed, and increased reporting frequency will facilitate this. Otherwise, the economy may suffer in my opinion thank you.

Camille Elston — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Camille Elston Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: hello my name is Camille Jeanene Elston. I reside in Houston Texas. I have had my identity stolen for more than 20 yrs unknowingly. It's been stolen since I 13 yrs old. When I was 19 yrs old I invested some money into JP Morgan, working at JCPenney in Houston Texas, Willowbrook malll. I have resided here all my life! I have taken out student loans to study as a medical assistant. Fell into default for not paying. Texas never told me anything. Some one pretended to be me and is going to federal prison for a long time.
Ive gone Over 15 years + not receiving income tax because of those loans. I received my first income tax after hurricane Harvey and through covid 19. And in all this time no one let me know anything about having billions of dollars. I was abused physically and sexually as a child and an adult
I can't have children and never married. I just found out a couple of weeks ago that. My investments prospered so well. But to this day I'm walking no transportation disabled can't feed myself and maybe $3 in my pocket? I need all records of my money for the last 25 yrs
Please! Or I will have to see you in court!

Sincerely
Camille Jeanene Elston.

Camille McGee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Camille McGee Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is bull ****.

Sent from my iPhone

Cammie Brown — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cammie Brown Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Signatures on quarterly reports are absolutely necessary. Otherwise they'll blame a lower level Director or analyst as they did during the Enron Crisis. They can't be trusted to be ethical. If you're putting out quarterly reports, signing off on them shouldn't be a problem.

Cammie Brown
Retired Finance Manager
Gilroy, Ca

Sent from my iPhone

---

candace manley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: candace manley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 leave well enough alo ne

Candace O'Brien — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Candace O'Brien Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Absolutely this proposal is another Grift for insiders. Stop this now!

Sent from my iPhone

Candis Long — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Candis Long Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
What is going on?

Candy McCoy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Candy McCoy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I oppose the rule change to reduce reporting period.

Candy Nelson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Candy Nelson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The Enron scandal lost investors $74,000,000,000! Sarbanes Oxley was put in place to stop such fraud. Please don't let the fraudsters loose again. And if they don't have the checks of quarterly reporting, it will happen again.

---

candy redman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: candy redman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No, do not allow this to happen!!!!

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Captain Alex — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Captain Alex Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I can't imagine why the quarterly reporting rule is being considered for elimination. There is nothing that benefits the individual investor in this proposal, only Hedge Funds and Investment firms that have the resources to employ analysts will benefit. The individual gets screwed once again!

Cara — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cara Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reports keep a better picture of what's happening as a whole. It's a good way to prevent fraud even if it's more work. I am the Treasurer of a small business that is also a corporation. As such I can tell you how many things can happen financially in a short time.
Cara Whitley

Sent from my iPhone

Cara DeNuccio — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cara DeNuccio As an investor, I read and make decisions based on reports from companies I invest in. This is not my job, though, so I need to really be able to trust what I read and not have to cross-check decisions in numerous places. I rely on quarterly reports to guide my investments. Semiannual is not frequent enough.

Caralyn Bingham — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Caralyn Bingham Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Caralyn Bingham Teacher

Quarterly filings with the SEC promote transparency, accountability, and investor confidence by providing timely updates on a company's financial performance and risks. Regular reporting helps investors make informed decisions, improves market efficiency, and reduces the likelihood of significant undisclosed issues accumulating between annual reports.

CarbonCopy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: CarbonCopy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop helping the Criminal Elite and Start Helping the Victims! Provide higher penalties not lower for corruption in our corporations!

Caren Betz — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Caren Betz Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Caren Betz, retired

Director of Rehabilitation Services.
Honest, transparent, and frequent reporting is a cornerstone of ethical business practices. We must not allow a reduction in frequency or content.

Sent from my iPhone

Carey E Brown None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carey E Brown Do not change the reporting period. Publicsworn status should always be more often than less often. The "Sunshine Laws" should always take residence. Do Not increase corporations silence from recorded, official reporting periods.

Carey Hultgren — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carey Hultgren Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This would be devastating and deceptive. I do not agree with this proposal!

Sent from my iPhone

Carey Peterson Commercial Credit Manager — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carey Peterson Reducing the number of required disclosures will increase risk far more than potential reward. Surprises will be more frequent and extreme thereby making insider trading more attractive. Every company still has to do most of the accounting work internally. There is very little savings by eliminating the public disclosure aspect. Conversely there is a list of negative costs.

Carita Simons Motley Fool member over 20+ years — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carita Simons As an experienced, long term investor I'm asking that you maintain the current quarterly reporting requirements. Investors need more information and transparency, not less.

Carl — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Carl Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Carl Zandanel. I'm a mover by trade, I live in Bellevue, though I'm actually homeless. I'm a father of two. I believe that your proposed Rule S7-2026-15: three certified 10-Qs become one Form 10-S should be revoked. Four certified filings a year become two for CEOs? I don't think the best interest of the people is in your mind if you go through with this. I implore you to keep the certified signatures to a quarterly basis. Thank you for your time.

Signed,
Carl "Z" Zandanel

CARL A. HOLMGREN II Investment advisor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: CARL A. HOLMGREN II It is extremely important that we have full transparency in corporate reporting. The rules for ceo accountability need to be robust and clear

---

Carl Blackwell Blackwell, Inc — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carl Blackwell Actually I do not agree with Motley Fool and I think the move to reduce the number of public company reports to 2x a year allows management to think and act in the best interest of their shareholders with a longer term horizon instead of short term decisions that 4x a year creates. Please move forward with the change. Thank you.

Carl Chatto CPA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carl Chatto I strongly oppose the change to allow semi-annual reporting. Our world-class capital markets are built on transparency and timeliness. Under the proposed guidelines, the timeliness would be delayed by months, regular reporting would be cut in half, and the resultant loss of transparency would be significant to investors and likely result in less liquidity in financial markets. Any hoped-for reduction in “short-termism” isn’t going to be helped by six-month reporting vs. three-month reporting; it will be countered by full disclosures in the management’s discussion and analysis. As a CPA who has worked with public companies, I understand the additional cost to registrants of quarterly reporting requirements but those costs are part of the responsibilities companies take on when they offer securities to the public at large. And that investing public deserves timely and frequent financial reporting and analysis. Retail investors would be placed at a disadvantage compared to institutional investors. Institutional investors already have access to other information that retail investors do not, and this would widen that gap and further damage the perception of fair capital markets. Lastly, this lack of timeliness provides a better opportunity for public companies to delay reporting, and potentially try to cover up, negative financial results. This proposal should be scrapped and the current requirements kept in place.

Carl Coutu — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carl Coutu Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Absolutely do not pass this legislation. It is grossly unfair to American consumers and removes that much more protection against corporate abuse!

Carl Leroux Motley Fool Member — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carl Leroux I am against reducing corporate reporting from 4 to 2 times annually. This reduces visibility and transparency. Keep reporting to quarterly timing. Thank you.

Carl Schleich Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carl Schleich I strongly object to loosening regulations which would permit companies to report data on earnings LESS THAN ONCE every 3 months. It is absolutely necessary for investors to remain informed on the financial details of the companies in which they plan to invest as frequently as possible. Allowing this to happen less frequently than once per quarter puts investors at a BIG DISADVANTAGE compared to the status quo. Please do not loosen the requirements requiring quarterly reporting of financial earnings and associated details.

Carl Scruggs — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carl Scruggs Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting should stay as it stands. Removing this requirement will cause less investors to trust the market. Transparency must be maintained .

Carl W. Winters — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carl W. Winters This chestnut has been roasting for some time now. The idea is just as bad this time as it was in earlier versions. The reasons for this action are primarily excuses. Less information rarely creates better-informed owners (as we investors truly are).

Carl-Dottie Fredericks — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Carl-Dottie Fredericks Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Karl Fredericks from Marlboro, New York and this matters to me because it helps keep them accountable to what they sign their name to

Sent from my iPhone

Carla Finnerman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carla Finnerman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I value the availability of financial information on a regular basis for stability, transparency and fairness.
Please do not limit access of information to the public. We depend it.
Thank you,
Carla Finnerman

Carla M Ortiz — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carla M Ortiz Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hell No

---

Carla Norris — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carla Norris Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No block out and no hiding. Free trade is just that - all information is shared timely and for all.

Sent from my iPhone

Carla Sheffield — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carla Sheffield Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 6 months of stealing, bribing, lying, cheating and no accountability... yeah that sounds like the current administration policy... don't do it. We have suffered enough at the hands of this pedophile. They are looting the white house while down playing their crimes. We deserve better.

Carla J. Sheffield
Better Opportunities Inc.
Live4BO@gamail.com
http://www.Live4BO.org
857 222 6272

Carla Villalta — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carla Villalta Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm retired and partially depend on the stock market. I want quarterly disclosure so I can make the best monetary decisions. I want as much transparency as possible so quarterly reporting is necessary to prevent opportunity of fraud.

Carlette — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carlette Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The SEC needs to continue reporting quarterly for business insight for the protection of the consumer and investors.

Retired business owner, investor and concerned consumer.
J Carlette Larson

Carlo Franco — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carlo Franco Dear SEC staff, please reconsider! 4 quarter reports a year is critical for any type of investor to access crucial intel about a company' evolving & ongoing progress. It's very unwise, please rethink this law, it's just plain dangerous! Respectfully, Carlo F. from Belgium. Member of The Motley Fool Community.

---

carlos bang master — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: carlos bang master Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No delays! Keep.it honest!

Carlos Caceres — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carlos Caceres Vehemently against proposal. Less transparency equates to less ability for informed decisions. A blow for the regular investor without insider information.

Carlos Kohan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carlos Kohan I think this proposed rule is a major mistake. A stockholder is a partial owner of a corporation. As such, we have the right to maximum transparency of information between the company and us. Please keep quarterly company reports available, as it has been for decades. We need these quarterly reports to make better, informed decisions on our investments.

Carlos Marbot — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carlos Marbot I am writing as an individual investor to oppose the proposed rule change that would allow companies to reduce their public reporting from quarterly to semiannual. At its core, investing is an act of ownership. When individuals own shares of a company, they are entitled to timely, transparent information about the business they own. Quarterly reporting has long served as a foundational pillar of that transparency, and I believe weakening it would harm retail investors disproportionately. Proponents of this change often cite cost reduction and relief from short-term earnings pressure. I am skeptical of both arguments. In an era of increasingly efficient disclosure technology, the marginal cost of quarterly reporting is unlikely to be a meaningful burden for most public companies. As for short-termism, the problem lies in how market participants react to information, not in the frequency of the information itself. Reducing reporting does not cultivate patience. It cultivates ignorance and will increase market volatility as investors will act quickly and vigorously to surprise earnings. What concerns me most is the asymmetry this change would create. Institutional investors, analysts, and insiders have access to informal channels of information that individual investors do not. Quarterly filings help level that playing field. Moving to semiannual reporting widens the information gap between sophisticated market participants and everyday owners. Less frequent reporting does not reduce uncertainty. It defers it. When updates finally arrive after six months rather than three, the surprises will tend to be larger, the market reactions sharper, and volatility greater. That is not a better outcome for investors or for market stability. I urge the Commission to preserve the quarterly reporting requirement and to prioritize the informational rights of the individual investors this regulatory framework was built to protect. Respectfully, Carlos Marbot

---

Carlos Rodriguez — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carlos Rodriguez Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: my portfolio, all of my retirement savings are at stake if you end quarterly reporting. This would allow fraud to fester and take root. Stock prices would become volatile. Transparency would make everyone accountable and responsible and promote fairness. I'm angry the SEC would blindside's investors. You work for the people of the United States of America. Do your job as outlined in the law that created you.

Carlos Toro — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carlos Toro I understand that this proposal is to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that's a mistake! Investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Taking the reports away makes everyone less informed, and less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. That is really bad, not good. In addition, if the proposal is adopted, it would create a situation where those companies who continue submitting 4 times a year would probably be considered "more serious" or "more transparent" than those that submit 2 times a year, creating a system with two classifications of companies. Who do you think suffers most in this scenario?

Carly Nichols — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carly Nichols Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop letting corporations rob the citizens

---

Carmen Lugo Well done! — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carmen Lugo Well done!

Caro Cook — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Caro Cook Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I completely disagree with this approach. Reporting should be kept at a minimum at today's levels

Sent from my iPhone

Carol Bohmbach — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Carol Bohmbach Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The American working class deserves accountability from CEOs. Please continue quarterly reporting.

Carol F Bohmbach
Sedro-Woolley WA

Carol Bolling — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carol Bolling Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No to six month reporting!

Carol Cagle — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carol Cagle Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Don't try to change things that are working. The public has a right to know on a regular basis what is going on.
Carol Cagle

Carol Conway — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Carol Conway Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep Quarterly reporting. I'm tired of "rich get richer" by lax government oversight under DJT's corrupt regime. C. T. Conway

---

Carol DeRycke — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carol DeRycke Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To Whom I May Concern;

Quarterly reporting, at a minimum, is essential in keeping transparency at the forefront of transactions. This should not be considered a burden on the part of companies who trade on Wall Street. If anything, reporting should be done more frequently.

Thank you for your attention to this matter;
Carol DeRycke

---

carol forsman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: carol forsman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Carol Forsman, this law should Not change because big companies and Wall Street all ready hide enough, without them going dark for 6 months to slither like a snake. Between washington and the bull * that goes on with politicians the American people already put up with to much! So don’t give the big wigs any extra opportunities to rob the middle class citizens!

Sent from my iPhone

Carol Gibson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Carol Gibson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep them accountable every quarter! Or even better, every month. You should be increased in accountability, not reducing it! I live in Phoenix Arizona. I am Carol Gibson, a retired teacher, and I want these millionaires and billionaires held accountable so that they pay their fair share instead of leaning on the backs of the middle class --which you seem to be trying to destroy. Listen to the people, the majority, The ones who elected you. Serve their best interest, not your own personal best interests because of your wealthy donors. There are far more of us than there are of them. Their votes don't count more than hours. Do your job!

Carol Gibson

"Sail away from the safe harbor. Catch the trade winds in your sails. Explore. Dream. Discover."
- Mark Twain

"We must lift the sail
And catch the winds of destiny
Wherever they drive the boat."
-from "George Gray" by Edgar Lee Masters

-

Carol Hazard — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carol Hazard Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Those responsible for financial investments must be COMPLETELY transparent. Current regulations, even though burdensome, exist to maintain this transparency. Carol Hazard, Community Activist

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Carol Hemmingsen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carol Hemmingsen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why in the world would you let this happen. Too much corruption is going on already. It's time to put more controls in, not less.

Sent from my iPhone

Carol Hoerman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carol Hoerman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 What are you thinking? Reporting absolutely needs to remain quarterly. Why is this administration so determined to help the rich get richer?

Sent from AT&T Yahoo Mail on Android

Carol Howard — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carol Howard Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Carol Howard
Retired
Companies with investors should be transparent to EVERYONE!

Sent from my iPhone

Carol Kinsey CEO SeedTree — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carol Kinsey I agree with the Motley Fool that more information for the public is in the interests of financial security for the public as well as the investor. I urge retaining the present quarterly reporting system.

Carol L McGhee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carol L McGhee Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Just say, Hell NO! Retired!

Carol Larranaga — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carol Larranaga Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is more grift out of this administration. Allowing companies to not report their profits will harm the US economy in the long run with major corporations and rich billionaires being able to do questionable trading without oversight. This is wrong and should not be passed.

Sent from my iPhone

Carol Leighton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carol Leighton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is an oppurtunity for theft pure and simple

---

Carol Lichti — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carol Lichti Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I admit I don't always read those quarterly statements but investors in retirement like me need more disclosure and transparency not less. With Congress failing to act to shore up Social Security, senior citizens need to look out for our other sources of income. Please don't open us up to more fraud and risk our hard earned money that we have invested for our retirement and health care needs!
Please reject this proposal and continue to require quarterly reports. If anything you should be trying to improve the information given to investors making it easier to understand and follow. Not limiting it.
Thank you for considering my comments,

Carol Maki Holden — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carol Maki Holden Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I am writing to request that you keep quarterly reporting as mandatory. In this particular time of our nation's history, citizen trust in our government and CEO's is severely waning. Maintaining quarterly reporting would go a long way in promoting transparency and accountability so that small investors feel more confident in their investments.
Thank you for your time.

Carol McCarthy The motley fool investment community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carol McCarthy The reporting should remain at 4x per year.

Carol McLoughlin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carol McLoughlin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Carol McLoughlin and I am a public school teacher and retail investor in the stock market. I am rapidly approaching retirement age, and it's important that I be able to invest using accurate and timely information. Quarterly reporting provides timely information to investors like me, and makes corporate leaders accountable for the accuracy of the information they provide.

There is little to no additional expenditure on the part of corporations, as corporate boards will still need quarterly information to be gathered so they can best manage their companies. Insiders will still know what's going on. But the retail investor, we'll be flying blind for the additional 3 months you want to give to corporate boards. Making public reporting less frequent will make it easier for bad actors to commit fraud, and harder for retail investors like me to make good decisions how about their investments. For people like me, it's not simply numbers on a spreadsheet, it is our life savings on the line.

Other countries/regions that have followed this path have found that it creates the very problems that I'm referring to here. It's a bad idea for everyone except corporate insiders and those that want to hide the bad decisions they're making in their quest for profit. Please don't put my retirement savings in jeopardy in order to make it easier for corporations to pull the wool over the eyes of the public. I ask you to continue to require corporate accountability and transparency in the form of quarterly reporting.

Thank you for considering my remarks.

Carol A. McLoughlin

Carol McMahon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carol McMahon Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We must continue to demand accountability from our corporations and their leaders!

Please don't reduce the accountability. I lost $5,000, I couldn't afford to lose, when LA Gear "cooked their books "!!

Carol McMahon
New Hampshire
Sent from my iPhone

Carol Meisner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carol Meisner Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please do not end Quarterly Reporting. With the use of AI and other advance technology, identity theft and fraud are on the rise, The SEC needs to monitor the stock market in order to protect investors accounts.
Thank you

Carol Meunier — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carol Meunier Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep QUARTERLY REPORTS. CAROL, RETIRED & OWN STOCKS. QUARTERLY Reports are more information during the year which helps with decision-making concerning stock trades. Don't fix something that isn't broken!!!

Carol Mitchell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Carol Mitchell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reports keep corporations honest. If we need to change the timing of reporting, it would be best to increase the frequency to monthly, rather than reduce it to semiannually.
Please keep corporations accountable to investors by maintaining at least quarterly reporting. Ordinary Americans need this transparency to save for retirement.
Thank you.

Carol E Mitchell

Carol Navin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carol Navin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
As an investor I need and should be able to receive quarterly reports! Don't hoodwink we investors, no matter our investments. Keep us INFORMED!!!!!!!

Carol Nepton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carol Nepton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting Quarterly! Ridiculous plan to cut existing schedule.

---

carol oris — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: carol oris Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Absolutely not.
This will effect my investments.
Another change to benefit CEOs?
Rrmember Enron?
The working class depends on the SEC to protect us.
Do your job!

C.L.O.
Michigan

Every day is a gift. Don't take life for granted.

Carol Oyerly — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carol Oyerly Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 If the companies are allowed to file every 6 months it’s easy for them to hide financial missteps. It cover up trades in advance of them going public etc. this should not be allowed. Financial transparency is important and should not fall into the dark where it can destroy confidence in the stock market. The market already has problems.

Carol Papworth — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Carol Papworth Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 That company went 'PUBLIC' and it's major players made a lot of money. I'm sure they worked hard & deserved it. Now, a lot of other people have invested money as well and they deserve as much transparency as possible. Cutting back reports only benefits the few and is less fair for the many. KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTS!! We don't need more hidden in this country.
Carol Papworth
Mukilteo, WA 98275

Carol Patterson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carol Patterson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop this ridiculous proposal! CEO’s need to be more accountable! NOT less!!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Carol Sabin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carol Sabin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please, the average small investor is already at a disadvantage, don’t make it harder on us. Especially with social security in danger. It’s foolish and shortsighted. I for one as a soon to be senior, who’s already concerned about the ability to collect my social security I’ve been paying for over 45 years has already considered moving my investments to cash equivalents. So long Wall Street, good luck to you if you can’t handle the scrutiny of on your investors.

Sent from my iPad

Carol Snare — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carol Snare Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is important for invrestors to receive timely information from the companies they invest in. Every 6 months is not often enough. In today's world economy, there are so many changes that a minimum of 3 months is required to keep pace. Carol Snare, Self Employeed.

Carol Sulack — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carol Sulack Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is essential, so that all investors have an equal opportunity to make changes in their portfolios when needed.

Carol Sulack
csulack@gmail.com

Carol Tarcza — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carol Tarcza Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly reporting. I rely on quarterly reporting to make decisions regarding my investments. The cost savings to companies isn't worth the cost to me.

Carol Tarcza
Formatting Specialist

Carol Trainor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Carol Trainor Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep reporting. Keeps them honest

Sent from my iPhone

Carol Vanderbeek — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carol Vanderbeek Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting quarterly. History has shown us we need that to keep these companies honest and accountable.

Sent from my iPhone

Carol Warfle Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carol Warfle This information is necessary to make decisions in a timely manner.

Carol Wells — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carol Wells Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do not change, from a quarterly, to a six months reporting.

Carol Williams — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carol Williams Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Most Americans feel the wealthy people in this country aren't held accountable for many different things. I think they want strict rules as a measure of accountability and a show of integrity. No matter your station in life not everyone will be honest and above reproach. Increase reporting as a manner of accountability, and show of integrity is necessary.

CAROL WIRTH — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: CAROL WIRTH Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep things above board. Keep them honest. 6 months is too long to be able to hide things

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Carol Wolfenbarger — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carol Wolfenbarger Decreasing the number of required reporting cycles annually is not in the best interest of investors and would allow for companies to conceal significant occurrences to those investors, who are in fact owners. Reducing communication to owners, should a company, from a regulatory perspective, not be required to do so, weakens the connection to those investing, and essentially, owning a portion of a company. Being less informed as an investor would be a significant driver in my selection of investing. I do not support the reduction of required reporting from 4 times annually to 2 times annually as I believe this is prohibitive to protecting investors. Thank you.

Carolann Castellano — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carolann Castellano Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep the quarterly reports. Accountability and transparency are very important.
Thank you.

CarolAnn McElroy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: CarolAnn McElroy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why y'all keep letting these people Play with our hard earned Money. Who's calling the Score

---

Carolanne Stalteri — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Carolanne Stalteri Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There’s enough corruption out there already. Give them a foot they take a mile. I say no to less visibility.

Carolanne

Carole Ayala — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carole Ayala Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 More reporting is necessary, not less

---

Carole Chacon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carole Chacon Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Carole Chacon, retired healthcare worker (cdchacon@yahoo.com)

The financial system has historically favored the wealthy who are grabbing more control for itself under this federal administration that supports it and benefits from it individually. Yet without funding from the working class by our labor at low wages, purchasing power at ever increasing inflated pricing and subsidizing by worker–not corporate–taxes, you dare rob us of timely information regarding our hard-earned life savings. I hereby adamantly reject your continued assaults on the hard-working backbone of this country and demand withdrawing this proposal to reduce quarterly investment reporting to biannual reporting.

Sent from my iPhone

Carole Gehrig — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carole Gehrig Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting must be kept. Don’t let business be hidden from citizens. This keeps us informed! Say NO to expanding reporting time!

Sent from my iPhone

Carole Hiatt — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carole Hiatt Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it transparent. I want my report quarterly. It is my money, and I want to know!

Sent from my iPhone

Carole Kauffman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carole Kauffman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep this form of checks and balances in place

---

Carole Maloney — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carole Maloney Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the

Securities and Exchange Commission:
I am urging you to keep the quarterly report requirements in place! It is paramount that we know what is going on with our personal investments and finances, quarterly checks are vital knowledge. Please keep the well being of your voting constituents in mind!
thank you,
Carole Maloney
Cincinnati,Ohio

Carole Parr — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Carole Parr Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This rule was instituted for a reason, and it seems to be working. Why would you change what is working? Keep the quarterly reporting, it helps keep people honest. Carole Parr, retired medical billing account manager.

Thank you,

Carole Parr
Jerome, ID

Carolina Herrera — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carolina Herrera Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Carolina Herrera Human Resource Manager- during the times we are in now, we need to keep the quarterly reporting. This helps regular people who invest in these companies, that they show transparency.

Corporations will always look out for themselves. People need to know the truth.

Thank you!

Carolina Herrera — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carolina Herrera Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Carolina Herrera Human Resource Manager- during the times we are in now, we need to keep the quarterly reporting, this helps regular people who invest and rely on stocks for their portfolio for retirement complete transparency.

Thank you!

Caroline B. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026- Quarterly reporting must continue From: Caroline B. Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the SEC - Quarterly reporting needs to continue. Stop making it easier for companies to commit fraud and other crimes - that's the opposite of what the SEC is supposed to be doing.
The

core purpose of the SEC is to prevent corporate fraud, ensure market transparency, and protect everyday investors from deceptive practices. The U.S. Congress created the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) in 1934 to restore public trust in the financial markets following the devastating stock market crash of 1929. Stopping quarterly reporting would undermine that.

Caroline Bielskis

Caroline Blair — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Caroline Blair Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Imbolding the cheating class!!! Trashing the trust of the middle class . All power players that agree with this SEC move should be in prison.

Caroline Sherouse — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Caroline Sherouse Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I have committed 50percent of my income for 3 years……. I need to know each quarter what is happening to my money. You owe me that much!

Caroline Sherouse
Sent from my iPhone

Caroline Spilker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Caroline Spilker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Maintain quarterly reporting. Only organizations with things to hide want limited reporting requirements.

Caroline Thelen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Caroline Thelen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There's no harm in keeping it quarterly but much risk when you allow less .

Carolyn Bankston — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carolyn Bankston Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Carolyn Bankston: Investor.
I am an investor in the stock market. The companies I invest in have the fiduciary responsibility to always be transparent. I want these companies to be transparent on a quarterly basis, as they always have. Thank you.

Sent from my iPhone

Carolyn Bindenagel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carolyn Bindenagel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reports

Sent from my iPhone

Carolyn Bindenagel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carolyn Bindenagel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
We need transparency. Do quarterly!!!

Carolyn Danley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carolyn Danley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This doesn’t seem fair to individuals who invest in the stocks.

Sent from my iPhone

Carolyn FAUQUHER — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carolyn FAUQUHER Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My title does not matter! I've been retired for 11 years. What does the SEC want to hide and by whose bidding? Interesting...

Carolyn Francis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carolyn Francis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: this note is to reinforce the standard of quarterly reporting for all businesses and agencies. This is a minimal requirement and important for the safety of investors and consumers.

Carolyn Holston — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carolyn Holston Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Anything less leads us into suspected fraud. Quite a number of public officials are facing such charges. Please don't join them. Carolyn Holston, lifelong Spartanburg resident

---

Carolyn Holston — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carolyn Holston Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Many Public Institutions face suspicion now because of Republicans. Don't join them. Carolyn Holston, lifetime resident of Spartanburg

---

Carolyn Holston — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carolyn Holston Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is the 3rd time I have attempted to post. The loss of quarterly reporting lends itself to suspicion of its activities. Carolyn Holston, retired from District 7.

Carolyn Mulkerrin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carolyn Mulkerrin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dear SEC, we need to keep corporate reporting of results quarterly. This will keep them accountable to their shareholders. Corporations are already geared to do this with staffing and with AI will help improve the process. I am an investor and this matters to me. Sincerely, Carolyn Mulkerrin, Retired, former IT Financial consultant

Get Outlook for iOS

---

carolyn palmer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: carolyn palmer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I do not want a 6 month blackout for investmrnts.

---

carolyn panning — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: carolyn panning Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep the quarterly reporting rule in place. Much of my retirement is riding on how these companies perform. It is valuable information to understand the fluctuations of the stock price. I always listen to the quarterly calls.

Sent from my iPhone

Carolyn Patterson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carolyn Patterson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Carolyn Parterson Researcher at Merck for 21 years, and Boehringer Ingelheim for 9 more years:
DO not approve this change from 3 to 6 month reporting cycles. PLEASE! It goes against every effort at clarity, transparency and honesty that currently help keep us from bad actors hiding behind temporal financial shields in public companies.

Carolyn Patterson
Sent from my iPhone
443 857 8499

Carolyn Rames — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Carolyn Rames Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As an Ohio voter and teacher, Carol A Rames, requests that the reporting remain quarterly. I'm applauded at the financial greed of corporations.

Carolyn Redmon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carolyn Redmon "Transparency is the name of the game." We as investors have a right to transparency in operation of the companies that we invest in. Some 20 years ago we successfully lobbied for this transparency, and now the 5 member (2 vacant seats) 3 members want to disregard the transparency that quarterly reports provide individual investors such as myself. Many individual investors are ever increasing on and in the stock market over the past 20 years ago and are meaningful increasing their retirement portfolios because of information provided in quarterly reports. If this information was diminished to two reports annually - there will be lots of good credible information that will be left out and greater chances of corporate fraud to take place. The three-member board needs to recognize the need for transparency especially due to AI ever emerging in our stock market and its choices. Leave the transparency and the quarterly reports in tact so as to provide much needed information to investors and future investors.

Carolyn Renge — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carolyn Renge Please continue the quarterly reports from Publicly owned companies. Cutting them to 2 a year doesn't help me decide whether to keep the stocks I own or sell them. I want justification for my actions and the companies I purchase should maintain an open and transparent report of their actions to us. If I see an issue, I want to be able to make an informed judgement right then and not wait after my $$ has already disappeared.

Carolyn Rome — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carolyn Rome Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it as it is

Codify it under this administration so that it does have to be approved every few years

Sent from my iPhone

Carolyn Warden — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carolyn Warden Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
quarterly financials are already a compromise over requiring the GAAP standard: monthly are you willing use your own assets at risk to open this door to white collar fraud? That's your choice

you are PAID PROFESSIONALS to keep the US atick markets processes and reputation as the safest in the WORLD
THE SEC's role is to assure investors: human and corporate: have factual information to make their own decisions GAAP. Generally Accepted Accounting Information. Stale financial information fails every test of accurate!
you studied history and Econ. This proposal sets up the perfect circumstances for frequent depressions such as our country experienced in the 1800's right up to October 29, 1929

the US only became a world power after the depression was healed by many tools, all requiring frequent, accurate financials only a small company can make a course correction in the Panama Canal or the St Lawrence Seaway BIG as all publically traded corporations are, need to ride out their mistakes the slowly turn around in deeper water That takes TIME
Time = Money
Timely = TRUST
You want your name tied to destroying trust and destabilizing the USA forever You will eventually die History and your descendants will never forget

---

Carolyn Wlasiuk — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carolyn Wlasiuk Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please continue quarterly reporting. Protect our retirement funds.

Carolyn Wolski — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Carolyn Wolski More information is always better. Changing public-company reporting from four times per year to two times per year will likely result in less transparency, more volatility and a less robust market. Please don't make the change that is being contemplated.

Carolynne Williams-Murphy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Carolynne Williams-Murphy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Carolynne and I'm newly retired, but still have some time before my investments will be required. As a retail investor, I rely heavily on quarterly reports to make decisions about my retirement funds. Changing from quarterly reports will create an unfair advantage for corporate insiders and impact my investments negatively. Any savings to companies aren't worth the cost to me and other investors on my level. Continue quarterly reporting.

Sent from my iPhone

Carrie Andolina — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carrie Andolina Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need frequent and transparent reporting, quarterly at a minimum frequency. Too much can be hidden if reporting is allowed at longer intervals.
Carrie A Andolina, LTC, USAR Retired

Sent from my iPhone

Carrie Breckenridge — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Carrie Breckenridge Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Carrie Breckenridge

Capability Lead, Solution Consultanting
Mckinney, Tx

Keeping Quarterly reporting allows businesses to course correct faster, keeps the investors and share holders informed, keeps businesses honest. Additionally, older Americans have planned their entire life savings around the current rules. Changing this could potentially wipe out 1/2-1/3 of retirement savingins rendering actual retirement near impossible.

Thank you,
Carrie

Carrie I Bly — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carrie I Bly Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am so very tired of those with $$ making all the decisions in their favor.
We don't need you to dole out more restrictive control… Why is the Government allowing this.??? Quarterly reports allow for transparency and it should be a financial requirement that can't be changed. EVER

Sent from my iPhone

Carrie Kordys — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Carrie Kordys Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I oppose the change to 6 month reporting from quarterly reporting. Please keep quarterly reporting as the requirement. 6 month reporting is just a plain stupid idea that will only further enable bad actors and severely limits if not removes the SEC's and the public's ability to hold any bad actors accountable.

Carsandra Jones — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Carsandra Jones Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 THE ONLY THING TO HELP ME IS TO TAKE MY FUNDS OUT. MAKE OUR MOVE SEC AND I'LL MAKE MINE.

Cary Latham — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cary Latham Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep AT LEAST quarterly signing. Realistically, CEO's should have to sign documents EVERY MONTH!

Get Outlook for Android

Caryl Antalis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Caryl Antalis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a long time stock investor, I count on accurate up-to-date information on a company to guide my investing decisions. Quarterly reports give investors the best insights and keep companies more honest. I oppose this change.
Caryl Antalis, retired

Caryn Cangro — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Caryn Cangro Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly. Keep it open. Keep it honest. Keep it transparent. Prevent fraud. Prevent insider trading.
~ Caryn C.
County office worker.

Caryn C

---

caryn fox — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: caryn fox Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep corporations' feet to the fire. We need to know how they are doing on a quarterly basis. This matters to me as a stockholder and as a citizen. What benefit is there to the shareholders in allowing no reporting for 6 months?
Please focus on retaining transparency of these mega corporations for the sake of the country.
Thank you,
Caryn Fox

Caryn Unsicker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Caryn Unsicker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The CEO'S should continue to sign quarterly!

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

---

cash422003 — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: cash422003 Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I worked for IRS. .quarterly makes more since...it keeps the seasonals and permanent folks working and keeps the employer honest

Sent from my Galaxy

Casonya Mitchell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Casonya Mitchell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Sherrell Mitchell
Retired
South America
I recommend quarterly submissions because "WE THE PEOPLE" have to submit info on a regular bases when needed especially the poor that these people are trying to rob from by taking our needed medical insurance, some are on social security and elderly and even they have to submit quarterly reports and let's not talk about EBT they ask for all of your information to sometime receive $6 worth of food assistance as an elderly single person so yeah why should they with all of this wealth that they have gained keep accumulating and hiding behind their wealth while demanding more from those that are the working poor or middle class or even retired this system is not right and they are trying to set everything up to benefit only them even more while others go without even children and the elderly so yeah they need to do more than report quarterly they need to pay more taxes and stop trying to oppress those with less. PERIOD!
BE MORE RESPONSIBLE WITH WHAT YOU'VE GAINED!
THEY WANT MORE MONEY WELL THE MONEY SAYS "IN GOD WE TRUST"
BE AN EXAMPLE FOR SOMEONE ELSE!
DO WHAT HE SAID DO..."TAKE CARE OF THE WISOWS, FEED THE HUNGRY, HELP THE POOR AND STOP BEING SELF- CENTERED AND FULL OF GREED LOOKING OUT FOR ONLY YOURSELVES AND THAT MY FRIEND IS THE GOSPEL...
THE DOLLAR HAS "IN GOD WE TRUST" SO THE NEXT QUESTION WOULD BE " CAN HE TRUST YOU?"

WEALTH HAS A PURPOSE AND IT DOES NOT SERVE ITSELF IF IT DID IT WOULD SOON SIT AND DECAY..

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT...

Cassandra Atkinson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cassandra Atkinson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Do not change reporting timeline from quarterly reporting. American people have the right to an open and accountable trading system.

Cassandra Love — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cassandra Love Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Jon Terry Love and Cassandra Love, Retired. We have worked hard for our retirement. We the people require and expect honesty in business dealings. Shame on you.

Cassia Brill — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cassia Brill Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is necessary. The US already has one of the highest wealth disparities in the world. If nothing else, we need more scrutiny.

Cassian P. O'Rourke Retired USG IC EMPLYEE FOR over 50 years — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cassian P. O'Rourke This is stupid. If anything, the quarterly reporting should be tightened to ensure that the reporting organizations include all of their political contributions etc.

Cassie — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cassie This is a terrible idea. At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Cassie Nozil — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cassie Nozil Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I find it disappointing that the SEC is blatantly trying to give fraud, dishonesty, and theft time to grow and fester in darkness for six months at a time. This commission was created to protect investors, yet it seems to be turning its back on its own mission. I'm invested in the stock market and I deserve to know what I'm investing in. Disgusting. Cassie Nozil, Director of Design Technology

---

Cat Carrel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cat Carrel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Companies must maintain quarterly reporting for transparency for investors, both private and institutional. My name is Catherine Carrel, and I am a retired person who would like to see my investments remain intact.

Catey Arnold Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catey Arnold At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it.

Catherine A Kenworthy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine A Kenworthy As an investor, I should be able to get information quarterly.

Catherine Allen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Allen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 C. Allen/RI/ I do not want to lose my hard earned savings at 81!!

You only regret the things you do not do.

Catherine Bell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Bell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Letting public companies go dark would be good for insiders who have access — and bad for everyday investors.
What's at stake: My portfolio, savings, and retirement future How a six-month blackout allows fraud to fester and causes volatile stock prices Why transparency matters in a fair stock market EC blindfolding everyday investors

---

Catherine Bryant — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Catherine Bryant Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I know there’s a lot of political pressure on you to make it easier on the big guys. The millions of us who are also investors rely on the information in the quarterly reports. Don’t succumb to the pressure

Sent from my iPhone

Catherine Burks — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Burks Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
We need, as a consumer, more information, not less. When it comes to the SEC, why do you want us to know and understand less what's going on? It isn't for our benefit. Leave things alone!

Catherine Cambron shareholder — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Cambron More transparency is called for in corporate reporting, not less! There are better ways for government to save money if that's actually the goal.

Catherine Cape — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Catherine Cape Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm concerned about reducing the frequency of required reporting. Please do NOT reduce the current frequency of required financial reporting.

Current requirements are important to protecting all investors and stakeholders - especially the small shareholders.

Thank you.
Catherine Cape
San Marcos, TX

Sent from my iPhone

Catherine Cargill — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Cargill Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Catherine Cargill retired in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, where I depend on my stock market earnings to live. Don't do this.

Catherine Cargill

Catherine Carver — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Catherine Carver Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Let people stay aware of the financial status of companies.

Catherine Carver
703-655-5069 (C)

Catherine Chubb — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Chubb Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING !

Catherine Chubb
sent from my iPhone

Catherine Davenport — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Catherine Davenport Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Enough already! Companies currently enjoy far more leeway than us “commoners”. They deserve far more scrutiny than time to manipulate their books!

Sent from my iPhone

Catherine Domingos — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Domingos Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please keep the little people in mind when making decisions. Not everyone is a billionaire!

Catherine Edman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Catherine Edman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop being so greedy

Sent from my iPhone

Catherine Fleischman the motley fool community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Fleischman The proposed semiannual reporting rule is a bad idea for investors. A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that’s a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right?

Catherine Hamlin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Hamlin This is in regards to the proposed changes to financial reporting requirements for public companies. While I am in favor of reducing costs for small businesses, I don't agree with this change for all companies. I am nearing retirement and need to monitor my investments carefully. Full transparency is needed to keep everyone honest and investors informed. Please do not change the rules to benefit corporations over investors.

Catherine Hoecke — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Hoecke Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
We need to maintain quarterly transparency. The public who invests in companies are owed this.

Do not change this.

From concerned investor

Catherine LeFleur — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Catherine LeFleur Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am Catherine LeFleur, a former business owner now retired. I have family members who lost everything to the unbridled fraud of CEOs. I am still active in my community and do not want to see greed take over again. We've all seen the devastation of untethered greed when CEOs didn't have to report to the SEC. Now is not the time to loosen the only thing holding them back from returning to their theft and fraud. Do not reduce quarterly reporting.

Catherine Michaelson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Catherine Michaelson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly. Easier to know what is going on. More timely. Catherine Michaelson retired

Sent from my iPhone

Catherine Renée Investor, part of Mötley fool community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Renée Please do not discontinue quarterly reporting for companies on the stock, markets, etc. I am firmly opposed to this as it decreases transparency and can contribute to the problems of misrepresentation of assets, etc. This is not helpful to all the individuals who are investing in these companies.

Catherine Rosenfeld — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Rosenfeld Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Do not change to reporting every 6 months for corporations. Retail investors are entitled to timely reports. A lot can happen in a 6 month period and the quarterly reports provide more transparency and accountability for investors. Most of us will be relying on our own investments and savings in retirement. I'm concerned that without quarterly earnings reports, the risk of undetected fraud will be higher. Keep the current safeguards in place.

---

catherine toth — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: catherine toth Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is obviously part of the plan to obscure critical insider knowledge from the public so that the insiders can steal more from us. The markets need individual investors despite the fact that the current corrupt government does not think we matter. Kill this rule or you won't have a market.

Catherine Toth

Sent from my iPhone

Catherine Van slyke — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Catherine Van slyke Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep our investments safe and regulated. Don't play games here

---

cathie byrd — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: cathie byrd Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 C. L. Byrd retired
We learned a lesson years ago. That lesson is still useful. Corporations still need to be kept in line. Keep requiring quarterly reports. It's the way to help ensure compliance with the law.

Cathie Mayr — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Cathie Mayr Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting must stand as it is. Do NOT even consider relinquishing this hard earned investor safety check!

Cathleen Coburn — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cathleen Coburn Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Too many CEO's have shown time and time again they will and are abusing the public trust and do not warrant less public oversight; in fact, we, the public, require more, not less, oversight, because CEO's are already insiders and have all the advantage. I do not support this bill whatsoever.

Get Outlook for Android

Cathleen McCoy — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cathleen McCoy The proposal to reduce corporate reporting to twice a year instead of quarterly is a big step backward. As an investor, I own a piece of the company. I want more transparency, not less. I do not support this proposal in any way.

Cathryn Chudy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cathryn Chudy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am appalled to think this change will cut accountability - I am a retired therapist on Social Security and object strongly to making it easier for corporations to hide their dealings from the SEC snd therefore we the people. Please retain quarterly reporting.

Cathy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cathy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Seriously??!!! I have to report goal monitoring data monthly on over 100 goals, by… myself!!! You have a whole corporation to help you out. Quarterly is the least you can do. If you have nothing to hide then it shouldn't be a problem.

Sent from my iPhone

Cathy Benson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cathy Benson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No more Enrons. Keep it Quarterly. Our national debt should be enough of a reason to keep check on CEOs since so many got the huge tax break
Cathy Benson
Entrepreneur

Sent from my iPhone

Cathy Brothers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cathy Brothers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange commission: Quarterly reporting isn't just paperwork—it's one of the key protections that helps level the playing field between everyday investors and powerful insiders.
As a small investor, I strongly oppose any proposal that would reduce or eliminate quarterly reporting requirements. Regular financial disclosures are one of the few tools individual investors have to evaluate company performance and hold management accountable. Reducing transparency would create more opportunities for fraud, manipulation, and bad actors to hide problems for longer periods of time, while institutional investors often have access to information and resources that ordinary investors do not. Public markets function best when all investors have timely access to accurate information. Weakening reporting requirements would erode trust, increase risk, and unfairly disadvantage the millions of Americans who rely on transparent markets to protect their savings and retirement investments. This is a dangerous path. Thank you, Cathy Brothers

---

Cathy Cech — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7 - 2026 -15 comment From: Cathy Cech Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 In the long run this will only end up causing more market volatility and chaos, which only serves the most wealthy. Yet again the American people are going to suffer more so the rich can get richer. Don't change something that's working for the vast majority.

---

cathy classen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: cathy classen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This would become another "take the money & run" scheme ! Do the right thing & leave this as it is !

Cathy Gage — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cathy Gage Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Sometimes we humans need rules and regulations to keep us on the straight and narrow. There is no good reason to change this. Regulations aren’t always perfect, but hopefully they’re made with the input of intelligent people who can think about all of the ramifications.

Sent from my iPhone

Cathy Hickis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cathy Hickis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We have enough corruption, do not allow further corruption. Checks and balances are always needed or we will lose everything.

Sent from Gmail Mobile

Cathy Infantado — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cathy Infantado Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 You are supposed to protect us from them committing fraud. Do your job. You do not work for them you work for us.

Kindest Regards,

Catherine T. Infantado

Cathy Irwin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Cathy Irwin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 IT'S GOTTA STAY QUARTERLY!

Cathy Platt Irwin
cepirwin@verizon.net
(302) 562-3477

Cathy Nuxoll-brown — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Cathy Nuxoll-brown Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Subject: Concerns Regarding Potential Changes to Investments Dear Sir/Madam, I would like to express my apprehension regarding the proposed modifications to my investments. While I do not possess substantial wealth, I have made small yet secure investments that I rely on for my retirement. The suggested alterations seem to indicate a scenario where I would incur higher costs and receive lower returns. I am puzzled as to why we are considering moving in this direction. Thank you for your attention to this matter. Sincerely, Cathy Brown Retired Educator Boise, Idaho

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Cathy Olson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cathy Olson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting by CEOs is essential to protect American investors. Please do not allow this program to be minimized. It would be irresponsible for the SEC to take the action. Cathy Olson retired in Maryland

Sent from my iPhone

Cathy Peceny — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cathy Peceny Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly reporting. It is one of the ways we can keep an eye on our investment. Also, it is your job to protect the investor. In other words, DO YOUR JOB!

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

---

cathy S — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: cathy S Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The only reason to change the quarterly reporting is to cheat and scam the American people.
Having these reports has worked for decades - keep it in place as it is. Do not cater to extremists !!!!

Cathy Shifflett — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cathy Shifflett Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 That is some crooked BS.
KEEP IT QUATERLY!!

Cathy Stegman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cathy Stegman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm a retiree-the investments I've made in the stock market are my livelihood. I expect you to protect my investments and transparency counts. Cathy Stegman

Sent from my iPhone

Cathy Winkler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cathy Winkler Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cathy Winkler
Retired
I rely on our quarterlies to carefully monitor how our investments are doing. I do not want to see this information being pushed out so far!

Sent from my iPad

Cathy Wray — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cathy Wray Please continue reporting each quarter.

---

cathy yonaitis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: cathy yonaitis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cathy Yonaitis Self employed small business owner
Greensboro NC 27455

I do not agree with the current proposal to cut accountability with CEOs. I'm curious as to why you would think this is a good idea except to protect the ultra wealthy. I think accountability is expected across the board in all industries, from whether or not a janitor does a complete/good job to middle management, and all the way up to the top. No one should be immune to being accountable. Please keep the current checks in place. Thank you.

Sent from my iPhone

CB Pats Fan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: CB Pats Fan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 KEEP it quarterly!!!!

---

ccpotvin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: ccpotvin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reports!

Sent from my Galaxy

---

cdavid cottrill — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: cdavid cottrill I stand in opposition to the rule change that would drop the quarterly investor reports. As a person approaching retirement and a Motley Fool investor, I want to know what is happening with copaniesMORE often, not less. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Right? So let's keep the rule and not be a fool. Deal?

Cecelia Mcbride — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Keep corporations accountable From: Cecelia Mcbride Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need to hold corporations accountable and honest!

Cecelia J McBride
110 Liberty Ct
Michigan City, IN 46360

Sent from AOL on Android

Cecelia Noll — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cecelia Noll Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
This would be a very negative irresponsible decision. Accountability should be in every business owner, board of directors without oversight but that is a responsibility we know will not be followed. it is shameful it has become an issue that the SEC must address but a necessary intervention nonetheless.

Cecilia Freeman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cecilia Freeman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I have always believed that transpency is the most important element of a fair stock market. Many individuals, myself included, have the money saved throughout my working career (50 years) invested in the markets. Many inidividuals like myself live off of a combination so social security and retirement savings. We cannot afford to have another Enron situation where we could lose the lion's share of our retirement portfolio.

I beg you to fight to continue quarterly reportings to lessen and not not increase the volatility of the stock prices.

Cecilia Freeman

CEDRIC MURRAY — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: CEDRIC MURRAY WHY WOULD YOU LIMIT TRANSPARENCY AND REPORTING INTERVALS IN A WORLD THAT CHANGES BY THE HOUR? YOU COULD ARGUE REASONABLY THAT THEY SHOULD REPORT MORE OFTEN NOW THAN WHEN THE CURRENT REPORTING RULES BEGAN. WILL YOUR OWN INVESTMENTS BENEFIT FROM ALLOWING CORPORATIONS TO "FOG THE GLASS" OF PERFORMANCE VISIBILITY IN TODAY'S WORLD?

Ceil Shorr — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Ceil Shorr Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting as is. Accountability is important to prevent fraud. We have too much to lose with lax rules. There is too much greed in our country.
Cecilia Shorr, Horseshoe Bend AR

Sent from my iPhone

Celeste Collins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Celeste Collins Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To leaders at the SEC:

We NEED quarterly reporting! More and more consumers are bearing the weight of planning their income in retirement. In the age of information being available almost immediately it seems ridiculous that something so vital (comp a financial performance) would become LESS available. Do NOT change the reporting requirements. We are counting on SEC to protect our right to information we need!

Thank you,
Celeste Collins
Retiree in NC

Sent from my iPhone

Celeste d Flippen J.D. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Celeste d Flippen I am firmly opposed to reducing the number of reports per year that public companies are required to file with the SEC. Retailers investors like myself rely on quarterly reports to give us relatively current information about company performance. Moreover, holding execs accountable by having them attest to the accuracy of the reports gives me comfort that a company is carefully overseeing my investment when I buy their stock.

Celeste Morin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Celeste Morin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm Celeste Morin, a retired psychotherapist living in Sun City Arizona. This is probably the WORST time in US history to change this. We have the least trustworthy administration in history. Vote NO to reducing quarterly submissions! I'm watching as well as many, many friends and family.

Celeste

Celia Miltz Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Celia Miltz Please DO NOT allow companies being traded on any stock exchange to change their reporting dates from 4x a year to 2x a year. This will keep investors in the dark for too long about the companies they have invested in. It places an unfair burden on the investor to remain educated and informed about the companies' practices, expenses, and profits. Thank you.

Centralfan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Centralfan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep information on our investments coming quarterly. This is imperative for every day citizens to know where they stand financially. It is the least we deserve for our money. I am recently retired and now you want to start taking away benefits that I paid into all of my life. I started working at age 12! I have more than earned that money. Now you want to make it so we don’t even know how our other investments are doing. Quit kowtowing to the 1% and pay attention to the 99% you should be serving! Jean Vander Wert, retired

Sent from Proton Mail for iOS.

Century 3 Engineering — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Century 3 Engineering Keep reporting as is at 4 times per year... ...no one is saving enough money to mention....

Cetin ARDAL — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cetin ARDAL Reducing the number of reporting will only reduce information and increase uncertainty between two reports.

Chad Carmody — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chad Carmody Quarterly reporting should be maintained to provide better transparency and less volatility in markets. Thank you!

Chad Dougherty — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chad Dougherty A reduction in reporting periods will greatly increase market volatility and reduce business transparency to shareholders. The marginal cost savings from reduced reporting periods is far outweighed by the negatives of reduced transparency. The earnings report are there to protect consumers; please do not reduce that protection.

Chad Summerlin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chad Summerlin Releasing financials only twice a year is a mistake. Retail investors need more transparency, not less.

Chad Wiens — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Chad Wiens Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 C. Wiens, RN - Allowing companies to report less frequently opens the door for "shady" and dishonest practices. More frequent reporting keeps companies more honest and transparent to the public and their investors!

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Chaim Melen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chaim Melen Quarterly reports are very much needed

---

Chamundi Sabanathan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chamundi Sabanathan Passage of this proposal would be like doctors telling their patients with diabetes or heart disease that they should only check their blood sugar or blood pressure half as frequently as before. Or telling women to get mammograms half as frequently. Businesses, like medical issues, can change quickly, so they must continue to provide information that is as current as possible!

Chamundi Sabanathan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chamundi Sabanathan Please do not allow this proposal to pass. Investors need timely information in order to make wise decisions. Allowing businesses to report only twice yearly would result in many decisions and actions being taken in greater secrecy--long before investors are made aware of what is happening to their investments. In many cases, these are the investments they are depending on to fund their retirement. In combination with the ongoing concerns about Social Security, this proposal would be disastrous for Americans.

Chanel Goushe Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chanel Goushe I am distraught at the thought of not being able to receive regular reports on the company in which I have invested my precious funds. You cannot manage what you do not measure - taking away the regular reports makes us less informed.

Chanson Jones — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chanson Jones I think reporting 4 times a year should be kept in place. Receiving quarterly reports is valuable information.

Charleh 2993 — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Charleh 2993 Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Nowhere in this country let alone any other developed country of the civilized world should any company be allowed to disclose operating financials in any such way that could potentially misinform or uninform the public of their true financial performance. The consideration alone of such an idea is vile, grotesque, and absolutely contradictory of the solefunctions of the SEC.

Charlene — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Charlene Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We must keep quarterly reporting for the safety of the investors.

Sent from my iPad

Charlene Williams — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Charlene Williams Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
No to stopping quarterly reports. We want the quarterly reports to continue.

Charles Argon NA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Argon Hello, I'm writing to express my opposition to the proposal to reduce the frequency of public report reports from publicly traded companies. Access to timely and complete public information is a cornerstone of the healthy functioning of public equity markets. As a private investor, I rely on them heavily to research stocks, and as a citizen, I believe it is important that we maintain the fairness of our capital markets by ensuring equitable access to a wide array of sources of information about companies.

Charles Ault None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Ault Reporting should remain quarterly.

Charles Baggs — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Charles Baggs Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Changing from quarterly reporting to semi annual reporting only opens up more ability for corruption. The SEC should be looking at making reporting more frequently, not less frequently perhaps moving towards monthly reporting. There should be no less accountability for CEOs of corporations than there is for elementary education, teachers.

Charles Baggs, retired educator, and living on a fixed income

Sent from my iPhone

Charles Barnes — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Charles Barnes Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 KEEP IT QUARTERLY! Corporations, CEOs and unchecked greed are a huge problem in the US!
Public transparency is one of the few things that help balance the scale in this increasing corrupt and one sided environment that hands corporate giants free reign to take advantage of investors as well as middle class Americans.
I'm a retired Firefighter that must depend on investments for both my pension and my personal financial future. Without a legislative requirements to keep reporting frequent, regulated and accountable in today's landscape the likelihood of fraud and corruption becomes a certainty as the deck is stacked in favor of the wealthy at the expense of legitimate investors who will be kept in the dark.
Don't let the SEC role back required quarterly reporting or the accountability that is necessary to encourage truthful disclosures. We are facing unprecedented times of wealth redistribution we need as many tools as possible to keep any hope of stemming the flow of middle citizen's money to corporate elites.

Charles Black — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Charles Black Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep Quarterly Reports!

Charles A. Black

Charles Black — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Black I oppose any reduction of corporate reporting requirements by the SEC as that can cause more uncertainty in the company and the stock markets. It might also delay the discovery of corporate misconduct or inconsistencies. Transparency is key to investor confidence!

Charles Blewett, Individual — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Blewett, Individual As an investor, I do NOT want to see the companies I invest in report less than every quarter. Please do not allow this proposal to reduce the reporting periods to pass. Thank you Charley Blewett

---

Charles Carter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Carter I am against reducing the number of times publicly owned companies report their business numbers. It is important as an investor to have access to financial and business news to properly adjust to the quickly changing environment any business can experience. Thank you. Charles Carter

---

charles cayley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: charles cayley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 KEEP IT QUARTLY!!!!?

Charles Cruce Retired — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Cruce I would not like the proposal to reduce the number of times a company has to report to its shareholders as the information in the reports helps me with my investment decisions

---

Charles Dickey The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Dickey The rule allowing companies to report 2 times a year rather than 4 is a bad idea and I urge you to reject it. In these times we need more information not less. Personally I would like them to report every month, but I am OK with once a quarter, no less.

Charles Dubois — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Dubois As a private investor, I depend on timely and current information to guide my activities. Also, companies are also the property of the stockholders, who need to know the activities of their boards

---

Charles Fedel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Charles Fedel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The purpose of the SEC is to prevent fraud and corporate skullduggery. This proposed change does the opposite. I am opposed to the change. The more accountability for corporate officers and directors, the stronger and more efficient our whole economy will be. The rule of law is what made the American economy great.

Charles Fedel, attorney.

Charles Fergy Firth — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Fergy Firth these proposed changes reduce transparency and create a hostile investing culture. Do NOT do this.

Charles Fingerman Retired — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Fingerman Informed decisions come with consistent reporting. Quarterly reporting will keep people abreast of unforseen changed in a company.

Charles Frank — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Frank Keep the quarterly reports. As an investor, we deserve to know more about what we are investing in.

Charles Franklin Kivlin Retired — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Franklin Kivlin This comment is regarding possible rules changes to allow companies to reduce the number of times per year they report results. Quarterly reports are important to the owners of publicly traded companies. As a shareholder I consider myself and other shareholders to be the owners of the companies we hold shares for. It should be up to the owners, not the boards of directors or the SEC to determine if a company should report more or less often. Please do not move in a direction that provides less information to those of us that have our dollars invested in publicly traded companies. The companies could not run if their work forces provided less information and it doesn't make sense to invest in companies that do not want to disclose quarterly results to the people that own it.

Charles G. Goodrich Retired and Invest for income — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles G. Goodrich I prefer more, not less information. Please don’t limit my ability to access reporting info.

Charles H Darby — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles H Darby I understand a rule has been proposed to allow less frequent reports to investors (twice yearly as proposed vs 4 times per year currently) on public companies financial operations. I think this is a bad idea in that less frequent reporting reduces transparency for shareholder owners to understand management's performance, making it less likely that misconduct would be identified in a timely manner and fundamentally impairing the SEC's mission to protect investors (including small investors). Maintaining quarterly reporting requirements would make clear that financial malfeasance would be identified sooner. Examples of public company malfeasance include Enron, Lehman Brothers, WorldCom, and others. Can you imagine any of these escaping public scrutiny for an additional 3 months, and the damage that would have ensued? I urge you to reject this and any other proposal to reduce transparency and so ensure that the capital markets of the United States of America remain the most trusted the world has ever known. Thank you.

Charles H Nusbaum CPA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles H Nusbaum Just as management has to have concurrent financial information to know how the business is doing to make good decisions, as a stockholder, I need fresh information to know whether to invest, continue, add, or divest a company's stock. SEC's proposal is for six-months and year-end reporting only. Information that is six months old is horribly stale for good decision making. For some companies, infrequent reporting may not matter if the business has a very stable revenue and expense pattern. However, many companies' earnings are constantly evolving and varying. Without recent financial information, stock ownership decision making information will result in considerable guesswork. Guesswork will create unnecessary stock market volatility. Perhaps the FASB and the SEC can slim down the required three-month and nine-month disclosures required, as their requirements may make the reporting process more time-consuming and costly. Therefore, the SEC should continue to require quarterly reporting.

Charles Hawkins N/A — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Hawkins Public companies have an inherent responsibility to provide timely, accurate, and decisive data to investors and appropriate government agencies. The frequency of this data is critical to the validity of three pillars of viability. The first is 'meaningful and accurate' historical performance data, period to period for both internal and external review. The second is 'validation' of management ability to maintain and grow the enterprise to the levels of expectation from investors, public domain and government oversight. The third is 'strategic planning' for the growth of the enterprise. In today's automated data collection spiral, decision and planning have moved from years to months, to weeks, days and hours. Strategic market shifts, geo-political impact, supply chain unreliability, and gloal financial market stability create a requirement of both immediate management action and strategic plan updates on a monthly, if not shorter, timeframe. As investors and stake holders, should a decision be adopted to allow only two fully defined reporting cycles of public to be mandated; reaction and recovery steps are too late. Semi-yearly reporting would provide greater reporting detail to address the plus/minus decisions and performance results. At the public reporting level, the data is too old, out of date, and there is little opportunity for results oriented intervention in cases of concern. A decison in favor of allowing only two reporting cycles would limit or erase investor protections and limit corrective actions by appropriate review processes. The leverage of investors becomes limited and places the performance judgements solely in the hands of enterprise management.

Charles Holman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Charles Holman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Make it monthly for accountability and transparency.

Charles Howard — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Charles Howard Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As an individual investor, I am concerned about dropping the quarterly earnings reporting requirement for the following reasons:

• Quarterly reporting to shareholders is good discipline. It keeps the executive leadership more fully engaged and stockholders more fully informed.
• Quarterly reporting increases the probability of finding errors in financial data. Such errors can be more quickly corrected before they become bigger problems.
• Frankly, I do not see how this change would lower the time or the costs required to prepare the reports. The reporting resources required would be the same to produce the same level of detail in the content of earnings reports whether they are prepared on a quarterly or semiannual basis.
• I have a thirty-plus year career working for a couple of large, multinational corporations. I am quite confident that making quarterly reporting optional will ensure they never get done on a quarterly basis. Any corporate employee knows if it's not required to be done, it won't be done.

The American equity markets are the backbone of our economy precisely because of the frequency and transparent reporting of detailed corporate earnings. This rule change from quarterly to semiannual reporting will erode that strength. Tread lightly, my retirement savings, and those of millions like me, depend on the strength of the American equity market.

Charles Howard, Engineer

Charles Hulse — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Hulse Transparency improves with frequency of communication

---

Charles James — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Charles James Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The proposal to eliminate quarterly reporting would cause serious financial problems for investors and allow corporations to abuse their power with lack of sufficient transparency.

Charles James
484 634 2921
Bethlehem, Pa 18018

Charles Johnson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Charles Johnson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 History taught us this lesson- the need for quarterly reporting. Prudent thinking that. It’s best for our economy. Charles L Johnson. Retired; Now a church executive.

Chuck Johnson
713-898-7006

POBox 131433
Houston TX, 77219

Charles Jones Retired Mental Health — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Jones Want information 4times a year

---

Charles Lancellotti — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Lancellotti With today's sophisticated financial software, quarterly reporting is not the burden it once was. I know this because I am an Accounting Manager, and have worked in accounting for 30+ years. Today's software packages allow for very easy quarterly reporting and the only thing that needs to be added is the commentary from management. Shareholders deserve quarterly commentary. Six months is too long, and things can get off the rails in six months, leaving investors with surprises and financial losses.

Charles Lengyel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Lengyel I believe decreasing the reporting frequency would in no way be beneficial to the investor and would severely limit their ability to make timely, informed decisions. I also don’t believe a decrease in reporting would be a major cost savings to the corporations.

Charles Lewis Software Manager — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Lewis Reducing the frequency of reporting would be a terrible loss of transparency. Companies should continue to report every quarter

---

Charles Lithlepage Partner, Urban 33 — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Lithlepage Quarterly reporting is essential to publicly traded stock information transparency. Keep current rules.

CHARLES MARK CHAPOTON THE MOTLEY FOOL COMMUNITY — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: CHARLES MARK CHAPOTON DO NOT CONSIDER REDUCING PUBLIC COMPANY REPORT REQUIREMENTS TO TWO PER YEAR. DO CONTINUE TO MANDATE QUARTERLY REPORTING BY ALL PUBLICLY TRADED COMPANIES. LESS INFORMATION DOES NOT DO ANYBODY DOING ANYTHING IN GOOD FAITH ANY GOOD. MAINTAIN QUARTERLY REPORTING. DO NOT CHANGE QUARTERLY REPORTING. CHANGING QUARTERLY REPORTING TO ANYTHING LESS FREQUENT IS MISGUIDED AND STUPID. THANK YOU FOR YOUR ATTENTION TO THIS MATTER.

Charles Merrifield — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Merrifield Owning stocks is owning the company. Owners should have sufficient information about the company to make meaningful decisions. Semiannual reporting would be a reduction in information. I request you to vote NO on the semiannual reporting proposal.

Charles Morris Knights of Pythias, Grand Lodge of MO and KS — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Morris I strongly OPPOSE the SEC proposal for semiannual reporting. This will make investing intelligently much more difficult for investors. Transparency is absolutely necessary when researching and investing and this proposed rule is anti-investor and un-American. The USA is tilting toward Oligarchy and this is another step toward it.

Charles Norman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Charles Norman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 KEEP IT QUATERLY

Charles Olson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Charles Olson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting!!! Mr. Charles P. Olson. *Retired Mn. P.O.S.T. Lic#:8578-Sergeant Criminal Investigator

---

Charles Partin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Partin Less reporting blinds the retail investor of the knowledge they need to make an informed decision on which stocks to buy or sell. It allows businesses to obfuscate the details that play a major role in investor's decisions. It's already a significant challenge to separate the wheat from the chaff to get a good understanding of a business' health and viability.

Charles Pietsch NA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Pietsch As an individual investor, I do not support allow publicly traded companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from 4 times a year to just 2. When you own a piece of a business via stocks/bonds, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners and opens up for more potential fraud cases associated with less reporting requirements. Thanks for the opportunity to comment on this critical piece of legislation. Charles Pietsch

---

Charles R. Collins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles R. Collins When I first heard of this several months ago I laughed out loud at the 'transparency' of it all and the most transparent administration in recent memory. Who controls the past controls the future.

Charles Rathbun — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Charles Rathbun Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep reporting as it is. Quit trying to help insiders.

Charles Redmon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Redmon I am against this proposed change. Stock holders need to keep up with financial data on companies whose stock the own.

Charles Short Business Owner and Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Short I am opposed to the proposal to allow publicly traded companies to report semi-annually rather than the current quarterly basis (4 times in a Year). In today's world, business activity can change dramatically in a matter of a few months. Investors need financial information to be as current as possible yet limit the burden on publicly traded companies to report that information. All publicly traded companies have built into their financial reports systems the quarterly reporting requirements. So why change a system that works? Also, I see no value to decreasing the reporting requirements and suspect a change to semi-annual reporting will create greater pressure on and risk for insiders to reveal financial information to professional investors.

Charles Straughan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Charles Straughan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop this insanity!

Charles Teague — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Teague This proposal is ridiculous. I've already lived through too many financial crises, all of which had lack of public information as a major contributing factor. This proposal lays the groundwork for yet another. As a seventy-year-old citizen of New York City, who has been an active investor for thirty years, I am certain that the current reporting requirements are a BARE MINIMUM to inform shareholders and the financial community about the status of the companies they invest in.

Charles Vertrees — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Vertrees Reducing quarterly financial reporting to twice a year is a dangerous and disingenuous proposal. Quarterly reporting is foundational to operational knowledge. Reducing that knowledge places investors at a disadvantage. This proposal should be rejected.

Charles W Brooks Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles W Brooks I oppose semi-annual reporting. Reporting should continue quarterly to ensure investors are properly informed.

Charles West Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles West We always need more information, not less.

Charles Weston Individual Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Weston The SEC proposed amendments to permit less reporting by public companies is 100% contrary to my views on the matter. As a part owner of many public companies, quarterly reports are often the only opportunity I have to gain valuable insights into how my investments are performing. I view the SEC allowing for a reduction in this information as effectively making things easier for institutional investors while simultaneously handcuffing individual investors. They already have significant advantages to access far more information while all I have is the 10-Q. The SEC Chairman mentions the rigidity of the SEC rules in the release and yet here we are with a market consistently hitting all-time highs and a nearly 20 year bull market. Requiring four financial reports a year hardly seems rigid in my eyes. The SEC did the right thing 26 years ago and passed Regulation Fair Disclosure to help even the playing field for individual investors. Please don't take a step backwards with this proposal, keep the 10-Q for the little guys.

Charles Wood — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Wood I wonder how long it took for someone to come up with another bad idea. If you cannot see how a company is performing then do not invest in it. How would that affect the stock and bond markets. Is this a late April fools joke?

Charles Zemp None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charles Zemp I am a stock owner and do not believe it is in my best interest for the companies issuing my stocks to report less than quarterly. I am a Motley Fool follower and look forward to their insights that can come from the information found in quarterly reports. Would any of you like less timely information on your investments?

Charlie & David Lahaie — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Charlie & David Lahaie Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 At a time when things are so out of whack, quarterly reporting needs to stay in place. Too much corruption everywhere. We dont need another recession, and we all know that is where we would be headed. Accountability is key.

Charlie Christ — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Charlie Christ Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep the reporting quarterly. This is the information age. I don't want to lose my retirement savings due to an intentional drag on reporting.
Charlie Christ

Retired

Charlie Cooper — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Charlie Cooper Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep Quarterly reporting .

Sent from my iPhone

Charlie Davis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Charlie Davis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep in t quarterly

---

Charlie Kistler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charlie Kistler As an owner (by owning stock), less information is detrimental to good business decisions and practices. I am against

---

Charlie P — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Charlie P Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Are you kidding me the fraud in most companies would tell you that this black out period would promote it not to mention insider trading sec are you people thinking correctly 😜 quarterly reporting is essential for transparency and a suitable cause of action for any retail investor I vote no to any black outs it promotes fraud and dishonesty not transparency.

Charlie Tadduni — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Charlie Tadduni Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Folks, the American people are tired of our government cuddling up to Wall Street. We need to protect the average person, who wants to invest, but doesn't have insider information like members of congress and the senate.
Guys, the jig is up. Stop the nonsense, we are paying very close attention here.
Charles Tadduni
Private Investor

Sent from my iPhone

Charlotte Broeg — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charlotte Broeg I do not like the idea of reducing the quarterly reports down to twice a year. As someone who actively follows stocks and investments I want to know how a business is operating throughout the year to help me make sound financial decisions.

Charlotte Marks — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Charlotte Marks Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it QUARTERLY.

Sent from my iPhone

Charlotte O‘Connell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Charlotte O‘Connell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Removing ability to understand what is going on inside of business will be detrimental to the fairness of open markets. I'm unclear as to why this rule would even be proposed, as this is not an undue hardship for a company who has put in the effort to go public. We are losing transparency by the day on many fronts lately, and this is a vital area where we need to maintain it. There are essentially no public benefits to removing this requirement, and therefore I have to question what motives the SEC has for proposing such a rule.
The increased stock market volatility that would result from reduced transparency here could easily mean for me that my future is reduced to ash -- all my own investments as well as my parents' could dry up quickly if we allow fraud more space to thrive in this way. As a voter and American citizen in my late 30s who has spent over 20 years in the workforce already contributing to Social Security, it doesn't seem clear how much will be left for my own retirement, making investments even more important.
Please understand what a massive mistake it would be to cease requiring quarterly reporting from businesses where we invest our money. If a business finds it to be a hardship to complete this on a quarterly basis, they are probably not stable enough to warrant investment from the public. The SEC should be protecting consumers, not putting them further in harm's way.

Charlotte Richard — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Charlotte Richard Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do not allow this

Sent from my iPhone

Charlotte Rogers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Charlotte Rogers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency is required to help keep these criminals in line! I’m SICK of the rich getting richer at the expense and misery of those they harm!! I know many people that share my opinion! Enough of these villains—we are awake!!

CJR

---

charmander and pika — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: charmander and pika Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Make reporting a weekly thing not a quarterly hideout

---

Charo Lopez-Downs — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Charo Lopez-Downs Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
A six month black out can lead to corruption and less information for consumers causing panic and disinformation! Please do not support this bill

---

Charter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Charter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why would we want to make it easier for fraud to occur. We should learn from past experiences not repeat them. Quarterly is what needs to be held.

Sent from my iPhone

Charter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Charter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Looks like the SEC needs a cleaning of its decision makers. Why would anyone honest want to change the reporting to less than quarterly, unless of course they are trying to hide fraudulent activity. Keep the quarterly reports as a clear and accountable source of investment information. Honesty is the best policy.
Joann and Rodney Parlier, retired military

Sent from my iPhone

Charvine Adl Chartered Professional Accountant — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Charvine Adl As a professional accountant who has worked for public companies, as well as a private investor, I strongly disagree with the push to reduce public company reporting from four times a year to only twice a year. This will (1) seriously impact public companies' accountability towards their shareholders and (2) undermine a key factor in capitalist economic theory, which is the availability of information to investors. These two factors will reduce the level of trust in listed companies and the stock market as a whole, and could adversely impact the economy. It is a mistake to reduce reporting, or consider the current reporting an undue burden, in an age when this reporting can in large part be assisted by artificial intelligence. The goal of a healthy economic system ought to be to increase the amount of available information, not to provide public companies a shield to hide information. I am concerned that public companies will use the wide gap in time between reports as an opportunity to hide, or time, their activities for reduced scrutiny and that it will increase incentives for insider trading.

Chase Ag — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Chase Ag Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This all just seems like more deregulation to separate the Haves from the have Have-nots. How does limiting publc information help the public? It doesnt!!!

Chase Hallquist — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Chase Hallquist Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly signatures from CEO's and executives are paramount to the longevity and enforcement capabilities of the SEC. As seen by the incompetence of tech executives as follows, allowing room for reduced accountability is an egregious error of this commission. Such failure by this commission will result in strict asymmetrical enforcement across varying state legislatures.

Complete Notes

1. Historical Context

Dartmouth — 1956

Establishes the naming and institutional origin of "Artificial Intelligence." The cognitive claim was embedded in the category from the beginning.

C. Lloyd Morgan's Canon — 1894

Provides the scientific standard:

Do not attribute a higher mental process when the observed behavior can be explained by a lower mechanism.

Clever Hans — 1907

Provides the observable demonstration:

A convincing response caused humans to assign intelligence and understanding where neither had been established. The appearance was real. The human interpretation of the process was wrong.

Together:

Morgan supplies the rule.
Hans demonstrates the failure.

Dartmouth institutionalizes the same failure through language.

2. Individual Human Experience

Selective Attention

Humans notice the compelling outputs and discount the failures, contradictions, and dependence on human material.

Heuristics

Fluent language functions as a shortcut signal for intelligence because, historically, meaningful language came from minds.

Confirmation Bias

Once people believe the system is intelligent, they interpret its outputs in ways that reinforce that belief.

This layer explains where the intelligence appears to exist:

It is assigned by the human observing the response.

3. Institutional Failures

Motivated Reasoning

Financial, professional, reputational, and institutional interests shape how evidence is interpreted.

Epistemic Trespassing

Technical authority in computation is extended into cognition, psychology, intelligence, reasoning, language, and human behavior without equivalent expertise.

Dunning–Kruger Effect

Deep competence inside the computational system is mistaken for competence in understanding what the system's behavior means.

This layer explains how the individual interpretive failure becomes protected, financed, scaled, and presented as institutional reality.

4. Proof That the Claim "AI" Is Entirely Fraud

Statistical Significance — P-value

Tests whether the claimed interpretation is supported beyond observed or selected outcomes.

Relativity — R-value

Tests the relationship between what is being measured, what is being claimed, and the reality to which the claim supposedly refers.

Controlled Pressure Test

Tests the claim under fixed definitions and sustained conditions across three linked areas:

Machine behavior: what the system actually does when its language is held against its mechanism.

Corporate liability: what the companies claimed, sold, represented, and were positioned to know.

Gaslighting: how contradiction is redirected back onto the human through qualification, semantic movement, containment language, and denial of the plainly demonstrated conflict.

The Controlled Pressure Test does not depend on malicious intent.

The actors claimed expertise, controlled the systems, chose the representations, accepted the capital, and occupied positions requiring them to know whether the claims matched the mechanism.

5. Duality of Reality

Two realities exist simultaneously:

Computational reality:
A mathematical system produces conditioned outputs from human-created material under programmed architecture and constraints.

Human and institutional reality:
Those outputs are interpreted, represented, financed, regulated, and sold as evidence of intelligence, reasoning, understanding, judgment, or agency.

The fraud exists in the separation between those realities and the economic representation that treats them as identical.

6. Shakespearean Tragedy

The final tragedy is not that a hidden mastermind knowingly designed every part of the deception.

It is that the people who caused the harm may have been genuinely captured by the same illusion they created and reinforced.

The public will assign intelligence, planning, motive, and malicious intent to the actors because of the scale of the harm—repeating the same human mistake that produced the AI illusion in the first place.

The actors may not have fully understood what they were doing.

But they were positioned to know better.

Their incompetence explains the failure. It does not remove the consequence.

Chasity Cerny — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Chasity Cerny Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is not good for investors. Why should hardworking people invest this way, if we can NO longer trust the SEC with our hard earned money, to help with its growth!

Chauncey Solinger — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Chauncey Solinger Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
If you change the rule. Maybe you can actually enforce the rules on these companies. But don't act like you don't already turn a blind eye.

Chelsey Bybee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Chelsey Bybee Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Deregulation and reduction in necessary requirements to organizations that have strong and direct impacts on the American people should remain strict to protect them not protect the organizations greed.

Sent from my iPhone

Cher Armstrong — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cher Armstrong Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This would be awful for the ev eryday investor and make insider trading much easier. Y'all should be serving everyday Americans, not the wealthy elite

CHERI HEDTKE — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: CHERI HEDTKE Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Very Bad idea and definitely allows for fraud and certainly not a benefit for the consumer !!
Absolutely not !!
Cheryl Hedtke
Retired RN -- Independent conservative voter but this is not a benefit for independent investors and definitely not a way to manage money except for insider traders / fraudsters !!

Sent from my iPhone

Cheri Magee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cheri Magee Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I prefer quarterly reporting. I like being more aware of how my investments are doing. Cheri Magee cmag1079@gmail.com

Cheri Robert — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cheri Robert Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please don't change quarterly reporting requirements. Doing so would increase the potential for fraud, permit insider trading to become the norm, something that is already going against normal investors like myself.
It's bad enough our President is a thief and guilty of insider trading now the SEC is thinking of making it even easier for those with influence and access to rig the markets to their benefit.
Please reverse course on this ridiculous and damaging course to the average American.
Sincerely,
Cheri Robert

Cheri Yori — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cheri Yori Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There's a lot going on and change is rapid. Quarterly reports help stockholders and business reporters and forecasters. A lot can happen in six months.

Cherie Greek — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cherie Greek Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Our world has evolved significantly since 1955, there is no logical reason to resort to an archaic system. Investors have the right to make informed decisions and this would limitthe abilityto do that effectively. Americans work hard for their money are already struggling with finances. The SEC should not be making changes that will negatively impact our country, especially those of us who have saved and invested responsibly. Retain the quarterly reporting!
Cherie Greek
IT Engineer

Cherie Williams — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cherie Williams Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Absolutely keep the CEO quarterly reporting! There is little enough accountability as it is! No one (except CEOs!) wants LESS!!
Thank you!

Sent from my iPhone

Cheryl Ann Borne — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cheryl Ann Borne Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep transparency alive with quarterly reporting!!! We vote against a 6-mos blackout!
Cheryl Ann Borne
Director of Marketing (retired)

Sent from my iPhone

Cheryl Blake — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cheryl Blake Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 KEEP IT QUARTERLY! Maintain public records transparency!

Get Outlook for iOS

Cheryl Blakely — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Blakely Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Just because the pos is dishonest doesn't mean the rest of the world should be
Keep the quarterly report
Enough is enough! This will come back to haunt the SEC in the future!

Cheryl Blakely

Cheryl Camp — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Camp Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I need a statement quarterly to see what my stocks are doing quite changing the rules

---

Cheryl Carpenter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cheryl Carpenter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Is FRAUD and hiding it your platform? Seems like it. Shame on you if you can be bought and not work for the people you are suppose to represent. Cheryl Carpenter, retired RN I worked hard for you for 46 years why can't you work for what's best for me now. You know CEO will cheat if they can especially with no consequences.

Sent from my iPhone

Cheryl Carroll — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cheryl Carroll Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 In a democratic republic we have a right to corporate transparency

Sent from my iPhone

Cheryl Cutright — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cheryl Cutright Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 What happened to the "most transparent" regime in history-Pam Bundy

---

Cheryl Davis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cheryl Davis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need quarterly reporting!!! Do not change this!!

Cheryl Elser Canfield Ohio

Sent from my iPhone

Cheryl Derwacter — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cheryl Derwacter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 KEEP IT QUARTERLY!! Transparency is important!! Even to those of who don't or can't invest because of being financially unable to do so. Please do not allow the SEC to be taken over by an administration that doesn't know the definition of "transparency"!

Cheryl Eckelbarger — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Eckelbarger Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reporing and penalties for non compliant or fraudulent statements
It's essential to keep accountability in place.

Cheryl Elovirta — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cheryl Elovirta Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting should be the minimum. The consumer needs protection more so now than ever.

Sent from my iPhone

Cheryl Gmail — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cheryl Gmail Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting quarterly. Thank you. Cheryl A Rivera. Retired

Sent from my iPhone

Cheryl Graham — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Graham Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Do the right thing!

Cheryl Helm — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Helm Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cheryl, wa. It is far past time to hold these people accountable that are robbing Americans every day and if you allow them to continue like this, you're gonna bankrupt this whole country these guys need to be held accountable. leave it alone and do it the way they've always been doing it. Help keep those people honest not sure they can pull it off on their own. Thanks for listening.

Cheryl J Phillips — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cheryl J Phillips Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am getting ready to retire. Having quarterly reports is vital to my livelihood. It is unacceptable to change it to twice a years. How are we supposed to know what is going on. This idea helps NO ONE. Remember ENRON!! We dont need more opportunity for fraud. These are wealthy companies. They can do the quarterly paperwork!!!

Keep it Quarterly!!!

Thank you
Cheryl Phillips
Novi, Michigan

Cheryl Keys — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cheryl Keys Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Six months is too long to go to find out a company is not doing well. If one believes in accountability, as I believe one should, then we need to keep financial information being reported on a quarterly basis.

Cheryl Keys

Cheryl Khalaf — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cheryl Khalaf Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No, no, no! Just a way for some companies to hide things while making profits and harming the American people. Shame on anyone voting for this.

Cheryl LaRosa — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cheryl LaRosa Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting quarterly. Transparency is vital to Democracy.
Cheryl LaRosa
Sent from my iPhone

Cheryl Lennon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Lennon Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
You will further damage trust in investing by these actions. Start to work for the American people! Not just the continuance of lining your pockets with the current president!

Cheryl Long — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cheryl Long Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Losing quarterly reports would have a very detrimental effect on the individual investor like me who can't afford individual research of these corporations. Cheryl Long, Retired Accountant

---

Cheryl Long The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Long This new rule gives insiders even more advantages than the individual investor. We need current available information to make informed decisions!

Cheryl Masotto — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Masotto Less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Cheryl Moniz — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cheryl Moniz Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 More frequent reporting lends itself to better accountability.

Cheryl Moniz
682.847.6126
Get Outlook for iOS

Cheryl Parker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Parker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I oppose allowing semi-annual reporting.
I am old enough to remember the Enron fraud, and the massive losses to United Airlines employee pensions due to UAL's underfunded defined benefit plans.
As a former senator and administrative law attorney, I understand these, and other, instances of corporate malfeasance are among the reasons we have quarterly reporting and SEC oversight.
Quarterly reporting is necessary for investors to track the real value of holdings, maintain corporate transparency & expose fraud/negligent management, and so safeguard citizens' retirement accounts.
Corporations must still track this data to properly manage the company, so the marginal savings related mostly to publication. The small, potential savings to corporations is dwarfed by the enormous potential risk to individual and benefit fund investors for whom losses could be catastrophic.
Presently, market manipulation and insider trading appear to exist at concerning levels. This is no time to lessen transparency or weaken oversight.
Cheryl Pflug

---

cheryl SANDER — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: cheryl SANDER Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is ludicrous if you let this happen.

Sent from my iPad

Cheryl Schellhaas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cheryl Schellhaas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a retired teacher, my retirement is invested and stable. This new rule would not give our investors information crucial to keeping the Teacher Retirement System continuing on its stable path. This affects not just teachers already retired, but teachers who are paying into the system with aspirations of the retirement the have played into still having stable funding when they do retire. Cheryl Schellhaas, Retired Teacher

Sent from my iPhone

---

cheryl stockman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: cheryl stockman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cheryl stockman, retired, highly reliant on stocks for income. This is my money, they are playing with. In today's fast moving world, 6 months = 2 years. Investors need transparency, and up to date information. Basically, I don't trust them to behave in my best interest.

Cheryl
Sent from my iPhone

Cheryl Stuart — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cheryl Stuart Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We expect a continuance of complete transparency on Quarterly reporting, in order to be able to properly advise clients and conduct investment analysis. You should not be blindsiding investment professionals as well as the public with your new proposal to halve reporting disclosures. It creates an unfair advantage to insiders while everyone else lags behind.
We object strongly to your proposal.

Cheryl L. Stuart
President and Director of Wealth Management
Stuart Associates, Inc.
State of New York

Cheryl Terry — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Terry Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please keep the requirement for quarterly reporting.
thank you
cheryl terry

---

cheryl timm — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: cheryl timm Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly is best. In the financial world accountability is always necessary. These quarterly checks build confidence and help curb the ability of unscrupulous people to destroy lives. Removal is asking for another, bigger Enron.

Cheryl Walker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cheryl Walker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly….a VERY BAD confidence eroding idea
Cheryl Walker
Sent from my iPhone

Cheryl Wright ft Cheryl Wright — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cheryl Wright ft It is extremely important that publicly held companies continue to file quarterly reports. Investors need to be reassured of the soundness of their investments. Another Enron debacle is not needed.

Cheryl Zook — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cheryl Zook Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do your job. Keep the investors protected.

Sent from my iPhone

---

cheryle fuller — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: cheryle fuller Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No! We need quarterly reporting! Don’t let the crooks who take advantage in secrecy let this happen.

Sent from my iPhone

---

cherylleblanc — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: cherylleblanc Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cheryl LeBlanc

Keep the quarterly reports. As an investor this helps me to stay educated with investments.

Sent from my Galaxy

---

chet bell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: chet bell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm a retiree, I worked all my life and saved and invested, I've been blindsided by the dishonesty of the financial markets more than once in my 76 years. Nearly every economic crisis has a sinister cause. And every time one of these greedy schemes plays out and the culprits are rewarded before solutions and prevention are sought, there eventually is legislated a common sense evasion of a repetition of the swindle. And every time that new standard is bemoaned by the money people and eventually removed as too burdensome a regulation blocking their ability to fleece the general public. There's a belief that things like the S&L crisis, the market purchases on margin, the Enron and Worldcom flimflams, and the convoluted mortgage schemes are a necessary part of business as usual, and that the "markets" will reward and punish as needed without regulation. This conceptualized, free market is what has allowed ownership to manipulate and screw labor and consumers over and over. It isn't really free, but a market and an economy based on wealth attracting wealth by the most insidious manipulations of advantages built into financial culture. The current proposal to change a quarterly reporting of business by publicly traded companies to only twice a year will increase the damage and dishonesty of insider trading. And make no mistake that this proposal is being made for any other reason than making that insider knowledge more valuable. In America we measure crime in a most bizarre fashion. It is not the value of the damage done or how many victims suffer, but rather the poverty of the perpetrator that we abhor. The corner liquor store robbery will always draw a more serious punishment than the penstroke that deprives a million citizens of something they earned. And the politicians and regulators can usually find a share of what they refuse to stop. Citizen's United has made that a mainstay of corrupt recycling of loot. And Trump's unchallenged abuse of pardons for a share of the take goes on unchallenged setting new standards. It seems the only people left who really believed in the honest pursuit of the American Dream are being rounded up and deported. I believe it was George Carlin who said we called the pursuit of life here by that appellation was because you had to be asleep to believe it. Chet Bell

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

CHEW TZE YI - — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: CHEW TZE YI Investing is ownership. When I own a piece of a business, I deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Chintak S Dalwadi CPA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chintak S Dalwadi Companies should continue to report quarterly.

Chip Sheehan Owner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chip Sheehan I am opposed to reducing the reporting from quarterly results to twice a year!

Chris — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Quarterly report From: Chris Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly!

Sent from AOL on Android

Chris Anctil motley fool community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Anctil Reducing public company reporting frequency is unacceptable! Share holders are owners and deserve timely and transparent communication and reporting on the status of the companies that they invest in.

Chris Arnell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Arnell I think semi annual reporting would be a step in the wrong direction.

Chris Bailey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Chris Bailey Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Diminishing reporting requirements

Chris Bearden — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Bearden I am a US citizen who is heavily invested in many American companies. I am not in favor of their making less financial reports. Transparency is very important to me and we need as much data as possible. Thankyou for allowing me to comment.

Chris Berta — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Berta Hello, when I first heard of this proposal, I investigated both sides of the argument and continually come back to the point that less data never helps you make better decisions. More data allows you to evaluate and understand the risks you are taking. As a partial owner of a company, you need more frequent information to understand a companies capabilities. Removing that makes these decisions more risky. I firmly believe we need to maintain a quarterly information release by companies on their performance and expectations.

Chris Birr — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Chris Birr Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 From Chris Birr, school psychologist, Powell Ohio.

I am a retail investor saving for retirement through an IRA, working with a financial advisor. My advisor and I rely on quarterly earnings reports to track how my investments are performing and to decide whether to adjust my portfolio. Moving to semi-annual reporting would cut that information in half and make it harder for us to make informed decisions about my retirement savings. I urge the Commission not to adopt this proposal.

---

chris cade — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: chris cade Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 What have to be done helping this greed. QUESTION EVERYTHING THEY DO!!

Chris Casterline none — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Casterline Keep it Quarterly Reports : Transparency matters for all investors and a six month period is too long in today's hyper velocity environment !

Chris Clar — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Chris Clar Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Sure let's give more power to insider trading. Sounds like a great idea. Idiots.

Chris Corcoran The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Corcoran Although business quarters are quick to click by, it is essential to maintain business information for shareholders on a quarterly basis. With AI tools, this becomes much more simplified and efficient. Please do not change to a semi- annual reporting schedule.

Chris Covey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Covey As an individual investor, I oppose the proposal to permit semiannual reporting in place of quarterly reporting. Shareholders are owners of the businesses they invest in and deserve regular, transparent communication about company performance, risks, and strategy. Reducing reporting frequency would provide less information, not better information, and would increase uncertainty between reporting periods. Arguments that fewer reports would reduce short-term thinking are unconvincing. Short-termism is driven by market behaviour, not by the existence of information itself. Limiting disclosure does not encourage long-term investing; it simply leaves investors less informed. Regular reporting promotes transparency, accountability, and market confidence. For these reasons, I believe quarterly reporting should remain the standard for public companies.

Chris Cranford — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Chris Cranford Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do not cut mandated reporting - be accountable to the people. You must patrol yourselves or fraud will resume. Humans will “fall” if not held accountable. More reporting, not less!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Chris Doktor The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Doktor Less transparency does not remove uncertainty; it simply leaves more room for it to grow. When information finally emerges, the surprises are often greater, the reactions more pronounced, and the resulting volatility more difficult to manage. It is short-sighted to reduce the number of periodic filings and should not change.

Chris Domin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Domin Transparency is important to stockholders. Congress should not allow reduced reporting requirements.

---

chris fintzel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: chris fintzel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a citizen who does not have much disposable income to risk in the stock market, I need the transparency that comes with quarterly reporting. I request that the proposal made in May this year that would allow for companies to report their financial data semi annually be withdrawn. Historically proven from 1955-1970, as well as by looking at the market results from countries who currently use this system compared with those who report quarterly, this action could once again be detrimental to the upward movement of the stock exchange, allowing negative data to fester and then be thrown on unsuspecting investors who may, at that point, not wish to wait and see if improvements are being made at the company to turn around the negative data and instead withdraw their investment in that company. This could lead to a rocky ride for investors as well as less capital at hand for the company to use to try to turn itself around and become more profitable. Not all investors are educated in the workings of the stock market, and may not understand the minutiae that affects the trends in the business cycle. This could encourage withdrawal of cash that could be helpful for companies to improve their positions. Quarterly reporting allows for more transparency for investors as well as puts more impetus on management to "stay on their toes". Although there are other reasons to maintain the quarterly reporting and disallow the semi-annual reporting, I feel that this reason is the most important. Thank you for your consideration. - Chris Fintzel, House Cleaner, Worcester, Massachusetts

Get Outlook for Android

CHRIS FONG — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: CHRIS FONG Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cutting the qaurterly reporting is ridiculous. I work in Finance I have to do the extra work for the qaurterly reporting I still want the extra reports. Don't let another Enron situation happen.

Chris Fraser — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Chris Fraser Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting Quarterly. The. Only reason I can think changing it is to provide cover for those seeking exploit the average everyday investor.

"It's not what you take when you leave this world behind you, it's what you leave behind you when you go."

---

chris gallippeau — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: chris gallippeau Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No. No no no. I don't want another ENRON ever again in America. The only way to keep them honest is quarterly signing. Remember what happened at Boeing when we let them regulate themselves?
Wings fell off. No!!

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Chris Gioia — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Chris Gioia Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As an active investor with my life savings on the line, it’s imperative that we are provided current information with which to make informed investment decisions. KEEP IT QUARTERLY!

Christopher Gioia
C: 646.539.1458

Chris Goddard None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Goddard This proposal is a retrograde step that negatively impacts Investor access to information and evidence from the UK suggests that it does little to change corporate business plans from short term to longer term. I am further concerned that it reduces oversight on Companies. Thank you

---

Chris Goes — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Chris Goes Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keeo SEC reporting quarterly, whats so wrong about right after 70 years

---

chris hale — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: chris hale Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This country has lost faith in enough of its leaders already. Please don't add to the list.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Chris Horton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Horton "Motley Fool Newsletter comment: A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that’s a mistake! I ask that it be kept at four times per year, so that the reporting timeframes are more timely and can keep "owners" aware.

Chris Kannenberg Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Kannenberg In the interest of maintaining transparency with public companies, please keep the SEC requirement of 4 annual quarterly reports.

Chris Keener — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Keener I totally disagree with allowing companies to move from quarterly reporting to semiannual. As someone that does his own investing and personally manages his retirement accounts, I need more reporting on how my investments, and the related companies, are doing, not less. Please do not allow this to pass.

Chris Kramer The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Kramer Please do not approve the proposal. I believe that more transparency is better for the company, the shareholders and the markets in general. Quarterly reporting has been the standard for some time, and I see no persuasive arguments to reduce the reporting frequency. If a public company cannot afford to report to its shareholders, perhaps it should not be public.

---

chris lane — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: chris lane Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 You need to keep financial reporting quarterly. There is no good reason to keep information from regular investors other than fool them into a losing investment. Don’t enable that.

Thank you, Christopher S. Lane.

Chris Leaver Chartered Electrical and Elecronics Engineer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Leaver The proposal now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a mistake! It makes company accounts far less transparent to private investors who may be dependent upon their investments for their personal pension and living expenses in later life. As an increasing amount of private equity is now held directly be individual investors albeit inside other wrappers, any suggestion of a company hiding figures or obscuring them could trigger seriously bad publicity as well as potentially ruin many who didn't have or couldn't find up to date investing information.

Chris Leone — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Leone A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that’s a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Chris Lovell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Chris Lovell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterlys

---

Chris Mann — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Mann I am opposed to the proposed reduction in company reporting. This would be retrograde step for investors who have the right to be provided with current information, and not have to wait up to six (6) months for important news. Less transparency will cause uncertainty in investor's minds and that can only lead to increased volatility in the market. If the argument is based on cost-reductions, then I would argue that in a world where AI is gaining increased traction, acceptance and usage, that such an argument is increasingly becoming redundant.

Chris Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Please do not reduce reporting requirements of publicly owned companies.

Chris Papadakis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Papadakis The past has shown us that less transparency breeds distrust. Actions that create distrust in the markets should be avoided.

Chris Pattberg — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Pattberg I am writing as an individual investor to express my opposition to the Commission's proposal to allow public companies to opt out of quarterly reporting in favor of a semiannual cadence. While the Commission frames this proposal as an effort to combat short-termism and reduce corporate overhead, the practical reality is that it shifts significant burden onto the shoulders of retail investors. Mainstreet investors do not have personal contacts inside public companies, nor do we possess a direct line of communication to management. Unlike institutional firms, we rely entirely on the democratization of data enforced by the SEC’s public disclosure framework to evaluate a company's efficiency, capital allocation, and strategic trajectory. Moving from a 90-day reporting cycle to a six-month window will impair the market's ability to price assets efficiently for several key reasons: Severe Information Asymmetry: This time gap provides an unfair leverage to corporate insiders and institutional investors. Individual investors will be left in the dark regarding quarter-over-quarter trend reversals, worsening supply chain efficiencies, or shifts in consumer demand until it is too late. Increased Market Volatility: Stretching the disclosure period dramatically increases the potential for massive corporate "surprises." Six months is a lifetime in the modern economic landscape, especially with the proliferation of AI and its' speed of adoption. The U.S. capital markets are widely recognized their transparency and robust investor protections. Sacrificing the visibility of retail investors to save corporations compliance costs is a step backward. If a company wishes to avoid the scrutiny of frequent public reporting, it should remain private.

Chris Peske — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Peske At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Chris Presley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Chris Presley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do not change the reporting, I do not support

Chris Presley
Assistant Maintenance Manager
Jack Daniels Distillery

280 Lynchburg Hwy
Lynchburg, TN 37352
O 931-759-6171
C 931-205-8503

F 931-759-6173

Chris Robinette — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Chris Robinette Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 NO. Keep the quartl reports to continue!!!

Chris Robinson The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Robinson Hi SEC, Individual, retail investors may not be the biggest money out there but we are real money. We are real owners of real businesses. The semiannual reporting proposal sounds backwards to me. Why are we talking about limiting the flow of information about publicly traded businesses when we should be talking about greater transparency? I own, along with my sisters who operate a fourth generation businesses. They send monthly financial statements. These much bigger, publicly listed companies can manage quarterly reports. Just my 2 cents. Thank you for your consideration. From, Chris in Idaho.

Chris Ross — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Ross The reporting requirements should remain the same. It has never been easier to compile this information.

---

chris Schiavoni — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: chris Schiavoni Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reports

Sent from my iPhone

Chris Thompson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Thompson I disagree with reducing the number of reporting times to 2 per year. As a business owner and owner of share in other companies I firmly believe I regular reporting, not only for compliance reasons but in order to better understand the businesses through seasonality and performance quarter to quarter. Reducing this to twice per year only reduces transparency giving some companies the opportunity to hide poor performance from is shareholders for longer and decreasing the ability to provide guidance.

Chris Tomkin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Chris Tomkin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly! Next question.

Chris Treble Motley Fool Member — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Treble I am not in favour of half year reporting. It should remain as is. These days people need to keep on top of issues and half yearly is not acceptable in my opinion.

Chris Valente — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Chris Valente Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 SEC,

I'm just a tiny business owner - but the direction we're going with less large corporation oversight is generally hurting the vast majority of Americans. As the entire economy tanked for those large and small due to the lack of oversight over trading, it's not just in the interest of small corporations for this regulation to remain - there will undoubtedly be a day of reckoning for the full economy when this lack of oversight is taken advantage of. Keep this regulation not just for me, but for preventing a disaster that the SEC and FDIC will have to clean up later with less resources.

Best,
Chris

Sent from my iPhone

Chris van Rossem — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris van Rossem Public companies are owned by investment firms and individual stock holders, neither one should be denied timely information regarding the direction or performance of their investment; every quarter even seems too long! I understand the short term cost of quarterly reporting and it's erosion of sensible long term investment; perhaps a compromise can be reached on the amount of information companies need to provide.

Chris Walczak-Troop — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Chris Walczak-Troop Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency is very important, especially nowadays. The current admin. in DC acts like the word does not exist. Lets NOT make our companies follow in that way, maintain a semblance of trust, keep the reporting the same. Do NOT reduce it and leave everyone else in the dark. Money matters, ask the billionaires.

Chris Wendle — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Chris Wendle Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There is no reason for this change! The public still needs this information Not just the big wigs!

Sent from Chris's iPhone

Chris Williams — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chris Williams A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just

two. We think that’s a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. In an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, arguing that fewer reports would reduce costs is absurd. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Chris Wofford — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Chris Wofford Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Continue the quarterly reporting that helps us monitor our investments with a source other than our financial planner! Christina Wofford

Sent from my iPad

Chrisanne Wollett — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Chrisanne Wollett Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No way, Jose. We need to have more monitoring so corporate shenanigans get spotted sooner than later.

Chrisanne Louise Wollett
A proud American that doesn't like what she sees. We don't need no corporacracy, monarchy, or oligarchy, Crimachcracyor idiocracy.

Christa Byler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christa Byler Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Christa Byler owner of my business and healthcare provider. I am in this world to make it a better place. Let’s hold big companies accountable of their profits and losses on the quarterly, as I do too as a small business. Pay up their share of taxes and allow stock holders truthful investments or not. We deserve the raw facts on the quarterly and nothing less.

Byler Bodywork LLC www.massagebylerbodywork.com
3754 Pleasant Ave #420
Minneapolis, MN 55409

Christa Carman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Christa Carman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The only people who’d want this are fraudsters. Do not bow to them, please.

Sent from my iPhone

Christa R Chagra — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Christa R Chagra Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is absurd! Reporting in a timely manner is imperative for transparency.

Sent from my iPhone

CHRISTALINA AND DON — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: CHRISTALINA AND DON Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep improved transparency! The CEOs and CFOs should be generating the info within companies, let them continue to be disclosed.

Sincerely,
Christalina ๑

Christforever — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christforever Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need to keep more transparency to the public and accountability amongst the corporate world. They pocess alot of influence directly or indirectly within the public realm of ordinary citizens that could affect them adversely should things begin to fall apart or worse become corrupt and hide pertinent facts. We see that monetary power and actions can persuade others to coverup or bury info that could affect society or the company at large. Let's keep it quartly. Desiree Israel. Senior citizen, homemaker, one who sees the necessity for transparency and accountability to the public they influence.

Sent from Proton Mail for Android.

Christi Powers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Christi Powers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 CA Powers, Colorado; retired.

We are already dealing with less transparency in most every form of federal government. There are elected officials who tip the market to benefit their portfolios. We have a so-called president who openly grifts while ruining the economy with a deflection war and shrines honoring himself.

Christian Carls — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christian Carls Comments on S7-2026-15 4 annual reports are better than less and build more trust between owner and company. Less reports are a reason to consider divesting.

Christian Fallen CEO of LearnLab — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christian Fallen I believe that this ruling would be detrimental to the markets. Transparency is key to keeping markets stable. Reducing reporting to twice per year would cause severe reactionary effects and introduce unnecessary volatility into the markets.

Christian Green — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christian Green I am in favor of keeping quarterly reports from corporations. I hear there is discussion on reducing that to semi annually. I think it's better to quarterly to keep transparency, which reduces volatility.

Christian Sangree none — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christian Sangree I wholeheartedly disagree with the idea of reducing the quarterly reporting to just 2x per year. Taking the reports away makes everyone less informed, and remove some corporate transparency towards us, the owners. Please do not reduce the quarterly reporting. If anything, please add more transparency to trades taking place on behalf of our congressmen and elected officials. Or stop those trades altogether. That would be to the benefit of the citizens of this great country.

Christiana Dattolo — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Christiana Dattolo Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need to know!!!

Christie Ozymy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Christie Ozymy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting quarterly. Christie ozymy, executive assistant. If I have to reveal and report every quarter for my investments, I want financial institutions to have to do the same. Even if I didn't have to report to my employer about my financial investments every quarter, I still want the SEC to reveal, report and record quarterly.

Have a great day!

Christie Rogers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christie Rogers I feel that staying with quarterly reporting would be in the best interest of the stockholders. They need to be informed more than twice a year about the companies in which they (we) are invested

---

Christina Adams-White — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christina Adams-White Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 For people that puts a lot of money into the stock market needs to have two to three months to see what's going on with the companies that they're dealing with not 6 months cuz in 6 months of company can go out of business and steal your money. It needs to be made the way it is

---

Christina Demel Citizen of Sweden — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christina Demel Please let me get the information I need for a good qualified decision on my investments It is hard as it is make it not worse With kind regards Christina Demel From Sweden

---

Christina F — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Christina F Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Christina Flanagan, retired non profit director. Quarterly reporting keeps companies honest and Held responsible to investors And the general public. The risks to the economy are too greatIf quarterly reporting Becomes optional

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Christina Kade — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Christina Kade Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is from Christina Kade 512 864 4612 and 50100 Iron Horse Trail in Georgetown, Texas 78626. I remember the recession that followed Enron. SEC needs to bring more accountability for corporations, not less. I'm tired of holding the bag whilst the thieves just jump to another company and start again. Every four months is necessary to make sure every thing is being watched not protected. Public accountability should be the prime directive.

512 864 4612

Sent via the Samsung Galaxy A13 5G,an AT&T 5G smartphone Get Outlook for Android

---

Christina Liberatos — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christina Liberatos Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 You know it and we know it……there is already a plethora of corruption, abuse, and fraud going on !! Do NOT allow the dark, do NOT allow the change !!

Sent from my iPad

Christina Stewart — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christina Stewart Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Sorry we are not going backwards! Quarterly accountability should and must continue!

Sent from my iPhone

Christina Wilson Former CPA, former member NCACPA (retired) — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christina Wilson As a lifelong accountant and finance professional and a current investor, I believe strongly that stockholders need financial information from the companies they own on a Quarterly Basis. Not only does it provide owners information on a meaningful basis but it also keeps corporate management accountable and fresh in the regulations around reporting. As David Gardener of Motley Fool says, less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. I agree. And if costs are a concern, electronic communications through brokerages vs paper mailings can be implemented. Personally, I'd prefer electronic communications. I maintain that companies have a responsibility to provide owners financial reports no less frequently than Quarterly.

Christina Wolfe-Thomas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christina Wolfe-Thomas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am old enough to remember Enron, and the reason we now have quarterly reports. Hands off the quarterlys.

Sent from my T-Mobile 5G Device
Get Outlook for Android

Christine Abbey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Abbey This is a terrible idea and should be illegal.

Christine Ashbaugh — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christine Ashbaugh Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Enough of this shady proposal. The only ones who stand to benefit are the companies, not the investors.

Sent from my iPhone

Christine Ashbaugh — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Christine Ashbaugh Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the

Securities and Exchange Commission:
We need transparency. Don't change it!

Christine Bird — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Christine Bird Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Christine Bird
Ocala, Florida
Attorney

I will be relying heavily on my investments during retirement. Historically, quarterly reporting have resulted in a greater return on investments for the typical citizens.
During the 80's and 90's there seemed be be a shift away from pensions to IRA based retirement plans both in the public and private sectors. Many people late boomers/GenX and Millennials will suffer a loss of necessary income. Social Security is not a realistic retirement stipend and pensions are either not offered or are really small. For example, the Federal Government's pension plan offers 1 percent of the average of your 3 highest salaries times the number of years your worked. So if you are a legal assistant and make 78,000 a year and work for 15 years, your pension is only 11,900 a year. Not much for 15 years. The pension bumps up to 1.1 percent after 20 years. So if you worked 30 you'd only earn approximately 25,740 from your pension.

To offset there is a mandatory thrift program where you contribute towards an IRA. Given the costs of retirement, health care, medication, most of us will have to do really well with our investments to have any comfort and peace of mind when we stop working.

Sent from my iPhone

Christine Blunt — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Christine Blunt Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting the way it is. Stop the crooks. Rich people need to follow the law..

Christine Davis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Christine Davis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 NO! NO! NO!
It matters to me, my city, my state, my AMERICA, and the world at large.
Stop the billionaires and their cronies from destroying our economy here in America along with the world economy and markets.
Chris

Sent from my iPhone

Christine Ferrara Dellamonaca The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Ferrara Dellamonaca When you own shares of a company, you become part of that company. Therefore, more disclosure and transparency are better, not less. I urge you to keep the current disclosure regulations and not reduce them.

Christine Fien — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christine Fien Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly to protect the working class. Enron was real. I have friends who lost so much with that scandal.
Respectfully
Christine Fien

Sent from my iPhone

Christine Foglietta — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Christine Foglietta Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Don't do this

X O Chris Sent from my iPhone

Christine Hicks — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Christine Hicks Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Honesty and transparency should be a priority. It is very apparent of the law on the land is not being respected or feared, if you were breaking the rules. I am very concerned about the financial stability of the United States of America, and that SEC should be protecting the financial security of America and how better to do it than to have quarterly verifications of what's going on financially. Please do your part of keeping America safe financially.

Respectfully submit it,
Christine M. Hicks.
Sent from my iPhone

Christine Janowiak-Miller — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Janowiak-Miller I would like the number of public reports for companies to remain at four times per year. The public has the right to know how companies they own stock in and how all companies are publicly traded are doing on a quarterly basis.

Christine Keup — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Christine Keup Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We enjoy reading our quarterly reports and it's our right to see them on schedule . Thank you .

Christine Kuhn Personal interest — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Kuhn Reporting is vital to analysis of investing, business forecasts and future endeavors.

---

christine leubecker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: christine leubecker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Christine Leubecker, Special Educator. Please do not allow companies to report every 6 months. We need to hold them accountable to divulge their results quarterly. We need transparency to decide how to invest our money.

Sent from my iPhone

Christine Marie Osasu The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Marie Osasu Less information hurts. Reducing the reports is a mistake.

Christine McDaniel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christine McDaniel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is clear to me that corporate America needs accountability. The temptations to tweak, juggle and fix later (that never comes) is too great. And Enron is the perfect example.

Retired Managing Director- Corporate Compliance

Christine McKinney — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Christine McKinney Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Christine McKinney, retired, KY. It matters because it's just another way to make it easier for unethical people to circumvent the law and evade accountability. And it's unamerican. It is a get out of jail free card & anyone who does the crime should do the time! In every walk of life.

Christine P. VanHoy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Christine P. VanHoy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It's just another way for corporations to hide what they're doing and manipulate the data.
C. VANHOY

Christine Palmer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Palmer If you want to encourage retail investors to participate in the market, you cannot expect to conduct business behind a curtain of secrecy. I personally am not comfortable leaving any of my investments in companies that do not engage in transparency. Quarterly reports ARE the transparency in our current system, so I am strongly against removing or minimizing the requirement.

Christine Raines — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Christine Raines Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Removing the quarterly report requirement is unnecessary and ridiculous. Bookkeeping software already exists to handle the “heavy lifting” portion of the reports, and companies are already complying with current regulations with no hardship. The ONLY reason to stop quarterly reporting is so criminals have time to cover their tracks.

Sincerely, Christine Raines
owner of stock and former data analyst

Christine Schmidt — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christine Schmidt Please do not allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. As an investor, I strongly believe that I deserve more regular, transparent communication from businesses. Thank you.

Christine Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christine Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The status of quarterly reporting should remain in place. To do otherwise robs investors of much information regarding their investments and rewards oligarchs. Quarterly reporting allows investors to make better informed decisions regarding their own investments.
Christine Smith
Investor

Sent from my iPhone

Christine Trunda — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Christine Trunda Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Transparent accountability is absolutely necessary to prevent fraud in business. Don't make it easier for companies to bankrupt the American people investing for retirement!

Christine Winchell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Christine Winchell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
We need to know!!!

Christoph Hesterbrink — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christoph Hesterbrink Quarterly Reporting is essential for maintaining transparency and trust

---

Christoph Weber Individual Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christoph Weber The current quarterly reporting requirements are just fine and do not need adjustment, especially not loosening. As an investor I need to know what is going on inside the company I co-own with the other investors and I should receive regular truthful reports at least four times per year.

Christopher — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 They take enough from their hard working employees. I guarantee if you find a company that didnt give their employees a christmas bonus, you'll find the same company gave that CEO a bigger one than he had last year.

Christopher Brockmann — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Brockmann I believe less information for investors is disastrous and do not support changing reporting to twice annually. I want my quarterly reports in the businesses I invest in.

Christopher Cassel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Cassel I see no benefit for stockholders in reducing the management's financial reporting period from every quarter to semi-annually.

Christopher Clark — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Clark Reduced financial reporting is reduced transparency. It benefits those who'd like to hide information and/or reduce their costs at the expense of those investing in the company. It is wrong.

Christopher Coates — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Coates Less information is not a positive. If I own stock in a company, I should be as informed as possible.

Christopher Cover Motley fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Cover Twice a year reporting isn’t enough.

Christopher DeLisle — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Christopher DeLisle Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Protect the little guy and keep quarterly reporting.

Christopher DeLisle
Hollis Center, ME

Christopher Dennis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Christopher Dennis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Christopher, Sales Manager, transparency and accountability are paramount for a healthy economy which is why quarterly reporting must remain. I repeat. Do NOT get rid of quarterly reporting. The people want it and our country needs it.

Sent from my iPhone

Christopher Gago — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Gago Imagine getting updates of your clild's school progress twice a year. Imagine learning the they are failing and you just find out in the middle of the school year. timely updates are vitally important to understand any endeavor. As with a child's progress, information regarding one's financial health is vitally important. Please keep public-company reports on a quarterly basis. Thank you.

Christopher Grant — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christopher Grant Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This needs to be kept. This regression is part of the same thing that literally caused the crash of the 20s. Get your head out of the sand and get it together, keep quarterly reports!

Christopher Harris Personal Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Harris Less frequent information will result in a less informed community of investors. Please do not take any action that will result in less than quarterly reporting from publicly traded companies. I consider less frequent reporting to be detrimental to my financial security as a private investor.

Christopher Hickey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Hickey We need MORE information on the businesses we own. NOT LESS!

Christopher Hopwood Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Hopwood Reducing public reporting effectively reduces what is only just considered an appropriate level of transparency. Allowing companies to slip six months before reporting potentially places investors at risk, and removes constraints that have proven to be time- based guard rails against impropriety.

Christopher J Henschen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Christopher J Henschen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Chris Henschen, HR Business Partner, Dallas, TX. History clearly shows that if we don’t regulate then people are greedy and will do whatever it takes for a profit.

Thanks,
Chris Henschen
(361) 489-9958

CHRISTOPHER J SCHOELL — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: CHRISTOPHER J SCHOELL I would like the SEC to NOT adopt the proposal that would reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. As an individual investor, I deserve regular, transparent communication from the businesses that I choose to invest in. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Please do NOT adopt this proposal. Thank you.

Christopher Joyce — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Joyce Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Christopher Joyce- Business owner in Lansdale, PA.
PLEASE keep quarterly reporting.
As an investor it is vital to have companies report quarterly to maintain as much transparency as possible.

Thank you,

Christopher Joyce
cj2stronglink@gmail.com
(917) 544-7582

Christopher Mager — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Christopher Mager Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it the way it is. There's enough corruption.

Get Outlook for iOS

---

christopher mcaliece na — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: christopher mcaliece i strongly oppose the proposed move to semi-annual reporting. we need MORE, not less info on companies.

Christopher Michael Gore N/A — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Michael Gore I am an individual investor, small business owner, and long-term shareholder in public companies. I oppose any proposal that would allow public companies to reduce their regular financial reporting from quarterly to semiannual reporting. As an owner of businesses, I understand the importance of timely information. Better decisions come from better information. Public company shareholders are owners of those businesses and should have access to regular updates regarding financial performance, risks, capital allocation decisions, and management execution. Reducing reporting frequency would decrease transparency and make it more difficult for investors to evaluate the companies they own. Less frequent reporting would likely increase uncertainty, widen the information gap between management and shareholders, and contribute to larger market reactions when information is eventually released. The argument that semiannual reporting encourages long-term thinking is not persuasive. Long-term investors can choose to focus on long-term results regardless of how often information is provided. Access to information does not create short-term thinking. It creates informed ownership. As a business owner, I would not want to receive operating reports only twice per year. Public company investors should not be expected to accept a lower standard of transparency. The U.S. capital markets are among the strongest in the world because of transparency, accountability, and investor confidence. Maintaining quarterly reporting requirements helps preserve those strengths. Thank you for considering my comments. Christopher Michael Gore

---

Christopher Michaud The Motlet Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Michaud There is nothing more important than full transparency in financial transactions for those people who manage your money.

Christopher Morse — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christopher Morse Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Absolutely not! Do not change current quarterly reporting as it would certainly open the door to financial misfeasance.

Sent from my Verizon, Samsung Galaxy smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

Christopher Nugent None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Nugent Less of most things is good except when it comes to information. More is much better.

Christopher Reynolds None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Reynolds As per their instructions

---

Christopher Richardson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Richardson As a retail investor, I would very much prefer to keep quarterly reporting. Thank you,

---

Christopher Ross — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Ross Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Don't change anything! We've tried it before with bad results.

Christopher Seely — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Seely Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Although the current quarterly reports can be a burden, and can lead companies to forgo long term growth strategies in favor of short term results, CEO's and CFO's need to held accountable for the financial results they present. Real jail time. Not just monetary fines (because we all know how poorly chief executives are paid). Don't change the system! It is not broken.

Christopher W. Seely

Sent from my iPhone

Christopher Sorge — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Sorge Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Reckless abandonment of sound economic and regulatory principles will topple our economy. If this happens those responsible will be held accountable by the veteran and military communities in the United States of America. If our nation falls because of your inactions or actions I envision many people will be rather upset to state it mildly. I am a former registered investment adviser and I will make it my life's mission to correct your agencies mistakes. Thank you for your time and God Bless.

Christopher Southwick — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christopher Southwick Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026
Transparency is the only protection we have to reduce insider trading. Keep quarterly reports.

Sent from my iPhone

Christopher Steele — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christopher Steele Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No f'ing way

---

Christopher Stunz NA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Stunz All public companies should report financials daily instead of quarterly and definitely not semi-annually.

Christopher Titus — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Titus Individual investors need MORE information to make rational decisions. Don't put us in the dark! Don't reduce the reporting requirements for public corporations.

Christopher Williams — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christopher Williams Please keep filings on a quarterly basis. As investors, we need to see both short-term and long-term trends in order to decide where to put our money. Allowing changing of filings to only twice a year will reduce the amount of information we get, and our ability to choose our investments properly.

Christy Fagan The Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christy Fagan Reporting financials twice per year is inadequate. Too much can happen in a 6-month period for investors to know the best way to proceed. We need quarterly reports.

Christy Kierl — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Christy Kierl Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 SEC - Keep quarterly reports!
Christine M Kierl- Mann

Sent from my iPhone

Christy Pretzinger — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christy Pretzinger I'm writing as an individual investor to oppose the proposal to reduce public-company reporting from quarterly to semiannual. Investing is ownership, and owners deserve regular, transparent communication from the businesses they hold. Cutting the number of required reports in half doesn't change how often those businesses act—products still launch, customers are still won and lost, strategies still succeed or fail every single day. It only changes how often owners hear about it. Less frequent reporting doesn't make companies easier to understand; it just leaves the people who own them knowing less. I'm not persuaded by the cost argument. Modern disclosure tools have made reporting more efficient, not less, and the expense of preparing a report is modest against the value of keeping shareholders informed. The short-termism argument is weaker still. Quarter-to-quarter thinking comes from how people react to information, not from the existence of the information itself. Removing reports doesn't cultivate patience—it just removes a check on what management tells investors and when. There's also a real cost to longer gaps between disclosures. Less frequent information doesn't reduce uncertainty; it concentrates it. When updates arrive only twice a year, each one carries more unaddressed change, which tends to produce bigger surprises and sharper market reactions rather than calmer ones. Transparency is the foundation of trust between companies and their owners. I urge the Commission to preserve quarterly reporting and keep individual investors informed. Thank you for your consideration.

Christy Strub — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Christy Strub I would like to advocate for keeping the quarterly reports mandatory.

Christy Young — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Christy Young Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly keeps transparency for those of us trying to invest for retirement. 6 months allows to much to be hidden too long. Feels dishonest.

Christy Young
Sourcing Specialist
615.396.7025

Chrysalis, LLC Founder — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chrysalis, LLC I believe that corporate report should remain the same four times annually.

Chuck — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Chuck Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep everyone honest by keeping the quarterly mandate in place . We have enough fraud and corruption in our country let's not make it easier by slacking up on reporting .

CHUCK DUNSMORE Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: CHUCK DUNSMORE less information is equal to misinformation. I do not believe only twice a year reporting will help any investor feel confidence in this system

---

chuck Essay E. Charles E — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: chuck Essay only reporting twice a year doesn't let share holder's know what kind of ups and downs the business is going through!Also they have to do quarterly reporting anyways.

Chuck Hays — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Chuck Hays Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Don’t allow this fraud. We don’t need to stuff more cash into billionaires pockets!

Sent from my iPhone

Chuck Lees Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chuck Lees Please do not reduce the reporting frequency requirements.

---

chuck morford — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: chuck morford Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Gentlemen: I've been a stock owner for over 55 years. A quarterly report is the minimum I would like to see so as to evaluate my investments in a timely manner. Thank you.

Chuck Sheppard Motley Fool investing none — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Chuck Sheppard Motley Fool investing The longer the delay in reporting the increase in volatility as us investors learn about moves that are older. Transparency benefits us small investors, whereas opacity benefits the large investors and those with connections. Thanks

---

CHUY CHAIN — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: CHUY CHAIN Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposed amendments (File No. S7-2026-15) that would allow public companies to substitute traditional quarterly reports with semiannual reporting. While this rule is framed as a way to reduce compliance costs for corporations, it fundamentally undermines the rights and protections of everyday investors.

I urge the SEC to maintain the quarterly reporting requirement as the mandatory standard for all U.S. public companies to ensure a fair, transparent, and accessible market for everyone.

Sincerely,
J. Cadena
Insurance Special Investigator

Sent from my iPhone

Ciaran Quinn — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Ciaran Quinn As I long time investor, entrepreneur and company director in very happy with quarterly reporting. PLEASE KEEP IT THAT WAY.

Cid Doctor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cid Doctor Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Don't even try it. That's a hard no. Unchecked corporate money is always a no. Make them have income taxed and track every cent through the government to implementation. Trust neither. - Charles Y, 1099 Gig Worker

---

Cidney Ratliff — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cidney Ratliff Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is necessary to see quarterly reports for proper evaluation and accountability. Short term problems can be addressed and correctly so business can respond when needed.
Cidney Ratliff. Retired Banker

Get Outlook for Android

Cidney Ratliff — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cidney Ratliff Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is neccary to see quarterly reports for proper evaluation and accountability. Short term problems can be addressed and correctly so business can respond when needed.
Cidney Ratliff. Retired Banker

Get Outlook for Android

Cileigh Addison — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cileigh Addison Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I agree! Keep it the same!

Cindy Barajas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cindy Barajas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Companies should not be allowed to hide their losses from the public for 6 months. We, the public do not have the assets available for companies to put our retirements in jeopardy and then hide it from us.

Cindy Blanchard — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cindy Blanchard Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 (1) I rely on quarterly information to make decisions, (2) longer gaps create an unfair advantage for corporate insiders, (3) "optional" doesn't fix the problem because companies that opt in are often the ones whose investors most need frequent updates, (4) the savings to companies aren't worth the cost to me.

Sent from my iPhone

Cindy Burns — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cindy Burns Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep a quarterly right now at this point in time, they're getting away with theft and fraud as it is.Don't make it easier for them that's the last thing we need right now.
Cindy Burns U.S. Citizen

Cindy Cameron — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cindy Cameron Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There needs to be ac ountability in today's word of greed and dishonesty. Please keep it the same.

Cindy Cieza — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cindy Cieza Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop trying destroy our beautiful country! I say this to all greedy entities. At this point even mechanical. No one is above . We all have the right to know , its ours . We trust in your name and brand, dont be an evil doer

---

Cindy Claire — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cindy Claire Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I believe that all people should have access to this info. It's unfair to not disclose these opportunities!

Cynthia Casas, retired financial aid assistant.

Cindy Frownfelder — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cindy Frownfelder Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep SEC reporting quarterly! I believed we've it's important for those making decisions about inflation, job numbers and interest rates to be fully informed of the trajectory of our economy to make good decisions. I'm a retired citizen living on Social Security and small pension.

Sent from my iPhone

Cindy Frownfelder Retired Auto Worker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cindy Frownfelder I demand that the SEC continue quarterly reporting. It's important for transparency to name individual investors.

Cindy Johnson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cindy Johnson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is not the right thing to do, business leave it quarterly. Just do what's right for the taxpayers for once. We are FED UP with the BS

Sent from my iPhone

Cindy Kolbe — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cindy Kolbe Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep CEOs honest,

keep quarterly reporting!!

Cynthia Kolbe
Medora, ND

Get Outlook for Android

Cindy L. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cindy L. Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Cindy Lindsey, I'm a retired secretary and I live in Indiana. This quarterly reporting is necessary to keep people honest. No one is above the law. No one.

Cindy Lindsey

Cindy LaRue — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cindy LaRue Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cindy LaRue, Retired This would make it more viable for those that deal in deceit. Of course, that is how "this" administration likes to work.

Cindy Logan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cindy Logan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 CJ Logan, Admin Assistantant at a large publically traded company. Reports need to remain quarterly because of shareholders and accountability. No accountability and things start to get shady FAST! Been there done that, don't want to go through it again.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Cindy Macias — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cindy Macias Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Company reporting needs to remain quarterly. Frequent reporting is necessary to ensure some kind of transparency and accountability.

Cindy Macias
Sent from my iPad

Cindy Macias — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cindy Macias Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Company reporting needs to remain quarterly. Frequent reporting is necessary to ensure some kind of transparency and accountability.

Cindy Macias
Sent from my iPad

---

cindy Maple — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: cindy Maple Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Explain why this is good for all of us who have worked hard and invested over the years so that we can actually support ourselves with funds from our investments. If reporting only every six months, it wreaks of insider trading.

--

By the way, Texas law requires all real estate licensees to give the following information about brokerage services to prospective buyers, tenants, sellers and landlords. Please click on the link below:

https://www.dropbox.com/s/txrcq1w4yihpj4k/Information_About_Brokerage_Services_BuyerTenant__11215_ts27746.pdf?dl=0

Consumer Protection Notice

Cindy Maple, REALTOR®, GRI
Century 21 Sunset, Realtors 830-456-1631
www.abellahomeonline.com

Cindy Moore — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cindy Moore Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 At a time when businesses especially large corporations have lost the public trust they need to become as transparent as possible. The only reason to avoid reporting is because there is something to hide. I'm a retired Florida teacher and after years of working in title 1 schools I've determined that poor performance is linked to poverty. Robbing public schools to enrich Charter and Private schools doesn't provide a better education for those in need.

Cindy Myers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cindy Myers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Making cheating legal is what this sounds like.

Sent from my iPhone

Cindy O'Brien Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cindy O'Brien I think it is a mistake and a huge dis service to investors if the rules of the SEC change to reporting to 2 times per year instead the current quarterly reporting. I have a business and you need to know what is happening quarterly to continue to steer the ship. Don't do this for the companies and put investors at an even greater risk of companies gambling or stealing their retirement. Don't do it!

Cindy Persons — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cindy Persons Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reports are in place for protection from fraud and misrepresentation. Keep quartlerly reporting mandatory!

Cindy Pursley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cindy Pursley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I was a tax accounting manager for a public corporation. Quarterly reporting gives shareholders and investors important information to make good decisions. What does the SEC want to hide? Fraud? Leave reporting alone unless you are strengthening it.

Cynthia Pursley
Retired CPA
Newnan, Georgia

Cindy Schmidt — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cindy Schmidt Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Cindy Schmidt and I'm just an ordinary RN, a regular citizen who hopes to retire someday.
This issue matters to me! I do not want to change from quarterly reporting to biannual. I rely on more frequent reporting to make decisions about investing in my retirement. I think it's unfair that those in the industry will be aware of any problems or risks with their business for six months and I don't know it. I could be sinking my retirement money into a failed company. They will gladly take my money. Then six months later I find out they knew all along?
Finally, I don't care about savings to companies. It's not worth the risk and potential cost to me. These big companies already get benefits and protections from the government. ENOUGH. It's time to look out for us, "We The People".

Cindy Stillings — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cindy Stillings Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I wish to voice my concern about changing the requirement ending quarterly reporting. I am on a fixed income. Issues regarding fraud, or delays in reporting may directly affect my retirement income. Please do not make this change.

Cindy Timberlake — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cindy Timberlake Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It needs to stay in place! Corporate accountability must be kept in check. The gross corruption already taking place is beyond acceptable.

Cindy Timberlake Givans
Timberlake Textiles LLC
831-662-8834
www.timberlaketextiles.com

Typos a given!

Cindy Weigelt — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cindy Weigelt Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cynthia Weigelt Insurance Agent

Absolutely AGAINST moving reporting to only every 6 months!

Cynthia Weigelt

Sent from Samsung Galaxy smartphone.
Get Outlook for Android

Cindy Whiting — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cindy Whiting Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I completely support quarterly reporting, it keeps everyone informed, it helps prevent some fraud and it equals the playing field. The money saved goes to the wrong people and I am very tired of the rich having a foothold over the rest of us.

Sent from my iPhone

Cindy Wyman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cindy Wyman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Maintaining quarterly reporting is essential. Anything less than that would be considered irresponsible!

Cindy Zak — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cindy Zak Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cynthia Zak
Office Manager
I wish to keep quarterly reports on my account. Thank you.

Cindy

Cissy Aberg — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cissy Aberg Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is very bad for us individual investors but I'm sure that's the point of it. Please don't support this blatant attempt to further promote and support insider trading.

Cissy Aberg
214-733-4434
talk or text

Cj Beegle-Krause — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cj Beegle-Krause Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I want Quarterly Information on my investments! Things can go awry if the portfolio isn't regularly checked on how it's doing.

CJ L — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: CJ L Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Claudia J. Leidy
Chief of Staff
Ocean Development
Keep It Quarterly!!!

Ck. Cynthia Shinaberger — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Ck. Cynthia Shinaberger Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep us informed on the commings and goings of all transactions for transparency sake. Why let the greedy do it in the dark bring it to light.

Claire Daines — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Claire Daines If I'm investing in a company, I want to know regularly how that company is doing. Reports twice a year is not good enough, and is hardly going to inspire confidence, especially in new investors.

Claire Johnson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Claire Johnson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 KEEP IT QUARTERLY!!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Claire Klein — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Claire Klein Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Investors will be at a terrible disadvantage if they lack proper information. It will force investors out of the market or make them vulnerable to serious losses. Please keep honesty and transparency in the stock market so that we all have an equal opportunity to invest
thank you

Claire Lombardi — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Claire Lombardi Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 KEEP IT QUARTERLY... quarterly, quarterly, quarterly ...amen

---

Claire McWilliams — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Claire McWilliams Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency in the financial sector is essential. Accountability is not just for some. It's for all people and entities. Do not change quarterly reporting.

E. Claire McWilliams, EdD
Reply to: drmcwills@gmail.com

Claire Morris — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Claire Morris Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it! Claire Eacker. Retired.

Sent from my iPhone

Claire OConnor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Claire OConnor Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The quarterly reports should remain. Semi annual makes it harder to spot patterns in fraud detection and in investing decisions for the retail investors.
Claire OConnor, psychologist, NY

Sent from my iPhone

Claire Thompson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Claire Thompson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is a way for customer to have more information about investments and an accountability and data for companies. In this day and age, trust is sadly lacking in our institutions. Quart reporting just gives more opportunity to prove companies are being honest and worthy of trust.

Claire Thompson
Retired educator and administrator
Irmo, SC

---

claire wolper — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: claire wolper Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dear SEC,
I am writing to you as an ordinary, everyday investor who is trying to save for retirement and build a future for my family. I strongly oppose the proposal to change corporate reporting from four times a year to just twice a year.
When you only force companies to report their numbers every six months, a massive "black box" is created. Six months is a lifetime in the business world. If a company is struggling, a lot of damage can happen in half a year before regular people like me ever find out.
Big Wall Street hedge funds can afford expensive data, private research, and high-tech tools to figure out how a company is doing in real time. Everyday investors like me don't have those resources. We rely entirely on regular, official SEC filings to see the truth and make informed decisions with our hard-earned money.

Taking away quarterly reports doesn't level the playing field, it tilts it completely in favor of big institutional insiders. Please protect the regular investor and keep reporting mandatory four times a year.

Sincerely,
Claire Wolper

CLANCY CAIN — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: CLANCY CAIN Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Save quarterly reporting!! Why in the world would we agree to roll back the changes that were enacted to prevent another ENRON disaster??

Sent from my iPad

Clara Chambers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Re: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Clara Chambers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please redact my last name, email, and phone number from public comment.

Clarissa Chambers

On Tue, Jun 23, 2026 at 07:24 Clara Chambers <chambers.clar@gmail.com> wrote:

The beauty of Wall Street is that it isn't just for insiders and big investors, it's for everyday people. I'm Clarissa, I'm a math teacher, and I teach my students the power of investing. Allowing companies to only report their gains and losses semiannually strips everyday investors like me of information and therefore power. Please keep reports quarterly.

Clara Chambers
chambers.clar@gmail.com
(952)607-5393

Clara Chambers — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Clara Chambers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The beauty of Wall Street is that it isn't just for insiders and big investors, it's for everyday people. I'm Clarissa, I'm a math teacher, and I teach my students the power of investing. Allowing companies to only report their gains and losses semiannually strips everyday investors like me of information and therefore power. Please keep reports quarterly.

Clara Chambers
chambers.clar@gmail.com
(952)607-5393

Clara Lin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Clara Lin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Information from quarterly reporting allow investors to learn and understand the companies they invest. Without this information retail investors and the public at large will not be able to make rational investment decisions and the public will lose trust in the financial markets. More quality reporting, not less frequent reporting is what is needed.

Sent from my iPhone

Clare Goyette — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Clare Goyette Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Demand quarterly reporting, the SEC must keep the players who want to abolish quarterly reporting honest.

Sent from my iPad

Clarence Poisson Retirted — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clarence Poisson Maintain the current quarterly financial reporting cycle.

Clarke Skelton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Clarke Skelton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reports are essential to help investors evaluate whether to invest and which companies in which they want to invest. Quarterly report insure the long term stability of Wall Street.

Sent from my iPhone

Claude A. Nevels — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Claude A. Nevels Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly.

Stop trying to Fix things that are Not Broken!

Claude LaVallee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Claude LaVallee Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Regular investors—retirees, middle-class families, etc—need transparency in order to make decisions for their future. We need quarterly reports, if not monthly!

Sent from my iPhone

Claudette Lindquist — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Claudette Lindquist Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I have been doing quarterly reports most of my 40+ years career, not fun but necessary for accountability and proactive business decisions.

Claudette Lindquist
Ellensburg WA

Claudia Stravato — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Claudia Stravato Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Quarterly reports are essential to an orderly economy. We don't need more chaos in our lives than we already have. Maintain quarterly reports.

Claudia Thomas Fiest — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Claudia Thomas Fiest Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep them quarterly
We need to keep records too

Claudia Yates — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Claudia Yates Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it so I know how my investments are doing.
Only the “insiders” will know what is happening beforehand and the rest of us will be in the dark and find out too late.

Sent from my iPhone

Claus Blem NA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Claus Blem Not ok to do this, seems like you're trying to take advantage of the investing community.

Claus Peter Kerntke Investment Advisor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Claus Peter Kerntke This bill reduces transparency, I wish to have more transparency not less.

Clay Baker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clay Baker I feel this change would greatly harm non professional investors because it would make access to current information much more difficult to obtain.

Clayton Fermino — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clayton Fermino To the Securities and Exchange Commission, I am writing as an individual investor to express my opposition to the proposed rule that would allow public companies to reduce their reporting from four times a year to twice a year. At its core, investing is ownership. When I own a piece of a business, I rely on regular and transparent communication from that business to make informed decisions. Cutting the number of reports in half weakens the connection between companies and the people who own them, and it does so at the expense of the individual investors this Commission is charged with protecting. I am not persuaded by the arguments offered in favor of the change. The claim that fewer reports would meaningfully reduce costs is questionable, particularly now that AI and modern disclosure tools have made preparing and filing reports far more efficient than they once were. The claim that less frequent reporting would ease short-term pressure also misses the point. Short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Removing reports does not make anyone more patient. It only makes everyone less informed. What is not in dispute is that less information rarely produces better-informed owners. Companies operate every day. Products launch, customers come and go, and strategies succeed or fail continuously. Under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency does not eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be larger, the reactions sharper, and the resulting volatility greater. I respectfully urge the Commission to preserve quarterly reporting and to keep individual investors fully and regularly informed. Thank you for considering my comment. Sincerely, Clayton Fermino

---

Clayton Johnston Financial Advisor, Stifel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clayton Johnston This whole industry is built on information, by moving to semi-annual reporting we are widening the gap in which we receive information which in turn results in periods of uncertainty in investing without actual knowing information on the company that could be 4-5 months old. By doing this we are hurting the pubic, non-institutional traders by limiting their access to information in a world where information drives decisions.

Clayton Thornber Retired small business owner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clayton Thornber Quarterly reports, at least. With computerized records, monthly shouldn't be a burden. I surely couldn't have successfully managed my business without my monthly snapshots.

Clem Segura The motley fool community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clem Segura Quarterly reporting is an important tool for monitoring performance and informing investment decisions. We should keep it at the current periodicity.

Clemetee Whaley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Clemetee Whaley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep our investments Safe and transparent. KEEP QUARTERLY REPORTING!

Cletus — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cletus Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To undermine the american people like this would be a tragedy and a catastrophic betrayal of our Society. Greed is the mortal sin that corrupts all and destroys without conscience. Allowing criminals extra time and deeper secrecy will lead to societal colapse. It is tres Herr. Death to traitors.

Sent from my iPhone

Cliff Boettcher CD1 — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cliff Boettcher I disagree with changing companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. This is not fair to investors that are, in reality, part owners.

Cliff Lindell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cliff Lindell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it as is. There is no financial gain for the companies, CEO's or investors. All this does is try to keep them honest.

Cliff Lindell

Cliff Raymond — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cliff Raymond Reporting should be required MORE often, not less. With all the computer power now available that shouldn't be a problem. How about 6 times per year for a while, then make it monthly?

Cliffe Lawton — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cliffe Lawton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reports to assist the small investors to make up to date decisions about their investments. If the time frame is expanded the investor may not be able to make timely decisions. Thank you for your time, Cliffe Lawton, retired Nurse

---

Clifford Gaston — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Clifford Gaston Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep Quarterly Reporting

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Clive Levin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clive Levin I don't think it's a good idea to limit the amount of public reports as this will make it harder for investors to thoroughly research the companies they plan on investing in

---

Clyde D Wagner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Clyde D Wagner I oppose reducing the reporting rules of companies to their owners / shareholders.

Clyde Freels — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Clyde Freels Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly so we know what is happening in stocks

---

clydeviernes8778 — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: clydeviernes8778 Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 in this time and place in human history and technological advancement, the corporate financial record must be available online 24/7, else just stay private.

Sent from my Galaxy

CMFMD@Icloud. Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: CMFMD@Icloud. 2 times a year hurts the customer not the Vendor.

Cody Brunck — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cody Brunck I'm against reducing the amount of reporting required. Transparency is importance and reporting should not be reduced.

Cody Evans — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cody Evans Reducing the number of public company reports increases the opportunity for corrupt practices like insider trading to take place when political and financial corruption are top of mind for most Americans. At a time when public distrust and skepticism are high, why is there any consideration for less transparency about company performance to its shareholders? Who stands to benefit from an less informed pool of investors? Any cost-saving argument regarding the reduction in number of public-company reports is a short-sighted excuse that fails to recognize the consequences of increased volatility around infrequent reports.

Cody freeman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cody freeman This rule would reduce the transparency and take away what little edge the individual investor might still have in today's already disadvantageous market.

Cody Stacey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cody Stacey We want more information as investors, not less. Please do not reduce the amount of reports required by companies. We deserve information and transparency.

Colby Mills — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Colby Mills Please do away with proposal #S7-2026-15. As a stock investor and a small-business owner, I am strongly opposed to reducing corporate accountability. In general, the notion that corporations can be trusted to "self-govern" is flawed and inaccurate. In this specific case, it would also deprive investors like me (AKA most of your administration's voters) of the information upon which we make financial decisions. Investments are my family's lifeline to grow our current money and save for future stages of life (retirement, my daughter's college tuition). Like millions of other investors, I rely on quarterly reports to make decisions about buying, selling, or holding stocks in my portfolio (and the same for stock-based mutual funds). If my government were to intentionally cut that information in half, that would seem not just ill-conceived but actually callous. It would seem as though my government was more responsive to corporations than to its constituents. (I can't imagine there was a grassroots outcry from citizens for this proposal.) That callousness and lack of consideration would factor into my voting decisions in 2028.

Coldweathernorth — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Coldweathernorth Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Paula Nelson Retired we need transparency, CEO s need to be accountable. Not unreasonable to require that accountability.

Cole Farms Farmer and investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cole Farms To whom it may concern, Any attempt to lessen reporting to stockholders should be strongly discouraged. Every company that is publicly traded should always be required to give it's shareholders a quarterly report. Many of the companies traded are multinational companies and impossible to track by the small investor and with as much volatility as we have in today's market I wouldn't feel safe investing in a Company with only semiannual reports. Thank you for you attention to this matter. Daniel Cole Cole Farms

---

Coleen Kelly — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Coleen Kelly Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I believe it should be monthly reporting but certainly not six month reporting! People need to be aware of where their money is being spent/invested. I don't want a surprise in six months, for better or worse. Accountability is a high priority.

Colette McCracken — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Colette McCracken I do not support the proposal to allow companies to reduce public reporting from four times a year to just two. We are living in an era where investors and the community rightly expect greater transparency, accountability, and timely access to information—not less. As shareholders and owners of these businesses, we rely on regular reporting to understand a company's performance, risks, and strategic direction. More frequent reporting enables investors to identify emerging issues early and make informed decisions. Reducing reporting requirements increases the risk that material problems may go unnoticed until a company is already in significant difficulty. Boards have a responsibility to communicate openly and proactively with shareholders. Investors should not be left learning about serious financial concerns only when the ship is already sinking. Maintaining quarterly reporting requirements supports good governance, strengthens market confidence, and upholds the principles of transparency and accountability that modern investors expect.

Colleen Banghart — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Colleen Banghart Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 You must keep the quarterly reporting! Again, all this does is give the rich the advantage. Just like always!! It's always on the backs of the poor

---

colleen bruns — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: colleen bruns Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Its imperative to hold quarterly reporting. Transparency is essential.

Sent from my Verizon, Samsung Galaxy smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

Colleen Grant Audit — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Colleen Grant Communication is key for investors to make important decisions on a consistent basis. We have had too many issues with our stock market. As a result, we should be looking for ways to increase regulations so that the public is safe. Instead, this proposal is keeping the everyday investor in the dark.

Colleen Lewis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Colleen Lewis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Leave it to quartile, there's already enough insider.trading going on with the elite .

Colleen McMahon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Colleen McMahon Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Shareholders are to be respected in a capitalistic, free economy. It is bad enough that stock prices are driven by large institutions and insiders. Taking away 50% visibility from retail investors, many of whom like myself are retirees living on social security, would be one more way to push corporations and wealthy individuals higher and push the average citizen lower economically. Or is that the point?

Sent from Gmail Mobile

Colleen Meegan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Colleen Meegan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
It's way past time we impeach & remove trump.

Colleen Murphy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Colleen Murphy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly reports. It helps with financial decision management.

Colleen P. Garrett Individual Investor — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Colleen P. Garrett Dear Commision Members, Today, I learned that the SEC wants to reduce reporting requirements for publicly traded corporations from 4xs and year 2xs a year. I want to argue that financial and regulatory reports can and should be updated far more frequently rather than less frequently. Technology and AI systems, are able to make instant reports at this point. Investors should be able to look at a company in near real time at this point with minimal assistance. More information is always better than less. Thank you, Colleen

---

Colleen Reilly — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Keep it quarterly From: Colleen Reilly Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hello,

I'm writing today to let you know that as American I do not support the upcoming grift by the SEC to only require companies to report profits bi- annually. These people have my money, they are playing with my money, but they will not be if they are not transparent about what they are doing with my money. I'm sure that a lot of other people aren't going to buy into this nonsense either. We've seen what a run on the market can do, do you really want to own that?

Colleen Reilly

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Colleen Roop — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Colleen Roop Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dear SEC,

Quarterly reporting needs to stay. I was working for Arthur Andersen &Co. S.C. when the Eron scandle hit. Arthur Andersen folded and everyone lost their jobs. Even though Arthur Andersen was eventually proven to not have broken the law, the damage was done. CEO's need to be held accountable and in a timeframe that is responsive so the average American can make informed decisions with the companies they have invested in via buying stock. Why should millionaires, billionaires, and trillionaires be rhe only people to make money via investments.

Thanks,
Colleen Roop
10926 W. Boswell Blvd.
Sun City, AZ 85373

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Colleen Sandbach — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Colleen Sandbach Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 How about just NO. Again trying to rip us off !!

COLLEEN TRAVIS — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: COLLEEN TRAVIS Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a retired school teacher who taught both critical thinking skills and history, the idea of rolling back the need for accountability in finances is ludicrous. Rolling back that accountability window provides too much time for nefarious dealings to percolate before something can be done about it. We are living in an age of greed, grift, and fraud. Keep it at 3 months

Sent from my iPad

Colonel Conner Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Colonel Conner Less transparency is never a good idea. Quarterly reports focus more on or represents a better finger on the pulse of what is happening and what is trending. The past may give us a track record but it cannot give us the here and now with a pointer on the future. An informed investor is a better investor.

Colter Cumin Banker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Colter Cumin I think quarterly reports are very important for individuals investors like myself to have more information on companies that invest in.

Comcast — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Comcast Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As an investor of my life savings in order to maintain independence and provide for my needs as I grow old, I deserve to have updated information so I may make informed decisions. The quarterly report protects me, my children , the government by ensuring timely reports which provide investors information and limit fraud opportunities. Our needs are greater than those of corporate entities and executives. Amanda Limpert, 67, retired

---

Conan Lazauski — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Conan Lazauski Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dear SEC,
I am retired and depend on my portfolio for half of my income. Quarterly report are one of the few ways I can track what the companies are performing. If the shift to twice a year is approved, rebalancing my portfolio becomes difficult and mismanage by the companies can be easily hidden. Therefor I urge you to disapprove switching to twice a year reports.
Colin lazauski
Retired engineer
Clazauski@outlook.com
505.234.4080

Concerned Invester — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Concerned Invester I oppose the change to less frequent reporting by companies.

Concerned Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Concerned Investor I believe cutting down communication from 4 times yearly to twice yearly is a mistake. As investors, it is imperative that we be informed. With the advancements of AI, reporting should be more efficient than in years past. Having quarterly reports allows for more informed choices, less surprises. I would argue that investors need more frequent communication NOT less. Thank you for your time!

Concerned Retail Investor Concerned Retail Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Concerned Retail Investor Concerned Retail Investor Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Subject: Opposition to Proposed Rule on Semiannual Reporting (File Number S7-2026-15)
To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
As a retail investor who is relatively new to the markets, I am writing to strongly oppose the proposal to allow public companies to switch from quarterly to semiannual reporting. My goal is to build a secure financial future, but to do that safely, I need an even playing field—not one tilted further in favor of institutional billionaires.
Reducing corporate transparency to just twice a year directly hurts everyday investors for several key reasons:
Widens the Information Gap: Large institutional investors have deep research teams and direct access to company management. Retail investors rely entirely on timely, public disclosures. Leaving a six-month blind spot ensures that main street investors are trading with a massive information disadvantage. Increases the Risk of Insider Trading: A six-month window between financial reports gives corporate insiders a massive window of time to act on material, non-public data before the public is ever made aware. This invites the very blatant corruption and market manipulation that the SEC is supposed to protect against. Undermines Market Confidence: Transparency is the only thing that prevents fraud. Allowing companies to hide their financial realities for half a year at a time makes the markets more volatile and less trustworthy. The SEC's primary mission should be protecting individual investors from being taken advantage of by powerful insiders, not rolling back critical disclosure requirements. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal and maintain the quarterly reporting standards that keep our markets fair.
Thank you for your time and consideration.

Conni DeBlieck — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Conni DeBlieck Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hello

No companies should be allowed to go “dark” and not transparent. This is why we are in this mess in the first place. Please put an end to this these types of issues

Sent from my iPhone

Connie Biggs — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Connie Biggs Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting!! It needs to be mandatory for all CEO'S, Elected officials, and any person involved with making decisions with any company or corporation!!

This is important to keep them honest as their decisions affect the public!!

Connie Biggs — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Connie Biggs Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting!! I needs to be mandatory for all CEO'S, Elected officials, and any person involved with making decisions with any company or corporations!!

Connie Bloom — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Connie Bloom Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Wall Street is already corrupt enough. Removing transparency will make it worse.
It should be people before profits!

Connie Crawley Jones — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Connie Crawley Jones Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I want quarterly reporting to remain. I am a retiree and believe that more frequent reporting will reduce fraud and provide me with better information with which to monitor my accounts.
Connie Crawley

Connie DeJong — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Connie DeJong Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep Quarterly reports, unless company can be stable from previous 3years.

Connie DeJong

Connie Ellis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Connie Ellis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is vital to investors to keep quarterly reporting. For many, our very livelihood in retirement will be out on the line if the reporting timeline changes.

Connie Helms Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Connie Helms As an investigator, a biannual reporting schedule would severly hamper my abitlity to evaluate companies I am interested in and critically hamper my ability to invest wisely.

Connie Jarrett None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Connie Jarrett Since you have traditionally reported on a Quarterly basis, it looks suspicious to the casual observer and possibly future investors.

Connie Murray — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Connie Murray Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 6 months is too long of a period not to be hearing on how well or poorly a company is doing. Im retired and how my funds are doing is pretty important to me. Keep the reporting to quarterly.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Connie O — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Connie O To the decision makers at the SEC, As an investor, the possibility that the companies I invest in could go 6 months without reporting how the business is performing is unthinkable to me. It puts retail investors at particular risk as we don't have access to what's happening behind the scenes. It could allow those with inside information to hollow out a company long before we have actionable information. The very notion of this change is part of a spreading corruption and rot of American institutions. While it may enable your cronies to make some huge short term profits, it too threatens to contribute to the destruction of the US, its reputation and financial standing in the world. It seems that bad actors are setting up the American people for catastrophic failure. Do not make this change. Do not leave investors dangling in the blind for 6 month stretches. And while you are at it, grow some balls and stop letting Elon Musk pump up his companies stock prices with massively speculative dream-like un achievable promises that can't be fulfilled. Many people don't have the scientific or financial sense to see through his nonsense. Thank you for your attention to this matter. The American people are watching. We will do everything we can to be sure criminal activity is prosecuted to the greatest extent possible when the time comes.

---

connie rhinehart — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: connie rhinehart Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Six months is too long. Investors need more transparency not less. Stock represents ownership and want to know exactly how the company is performing. An example of what can happen is General Motors who declared bankruptcy and made their bonds worthless.

Sent from my iPad

Connie Wingard — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Connie Wingard Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It makes it seem as though corporate America is trying to hide things from their investors from main street. I'm sure they will be reporting to the insiders on Wall Street whenever they ask. We'll be getting screwed again.

Connie Wright — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Connie Wright Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Our world moves so fast that we need information expeditiously to make good decisions based on current info. Connie Wright, retired, former Adm Supv at electric cooperative 32+ years

---

Conor Carroll — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Conor Carroll I oppose the proposal to reduce required public reporting from quarterly to semiannual. Transparency is essential to fair and efficient markets. Investors who own shares in a company deserve regular, timely information about the business they own. Reducing reporting requirements would make it harder for investors to make informed decisions and would weaken accountability to shareholders. Public companies benefit from access to public capital, and regular disclosure is a reasonable obligation in return. Less frequent reporting would weaken the connection between companies and their owners and reduce the transparency that underpins investor confidence in U.S. markets.

Conor Wilson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Conor Wilson At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day, you would just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. This is short-sighted and in no one’s best interest.

Conrad Broersma — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Conrad Broersma Reporting needs to remain at quarterly for transparency. If I own shares I own a part of that company and I want to know what’s happening and where the vision for future is.

Constance Carfrey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Constance Carfrey Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep them honest! That way we don’t want another Enron!

Sent from my iPhone

Constance Gilhooly — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Constance Gilhooly Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There is a big enough problem with corruption in our country. You will be increasing the problem. Maintain the quarterly accountability, reports and signatures.

Sent from my iPhone
Connie Gilhooly

Constance Lorig — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Constance Lorig Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 keep quarterly reporting - why not? To make life easier for CEOs? Businesses know what they need to do when they start a business.

Connie Lorig
De Pere, WI

Constance Mason — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Constance Mason Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Checks and balances are necessary and non negotiable for a legitimate system.

Constance Sullivan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Constance Sullivan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I believe we have enough fraud in our country. We don't need to be given those that do these despicable people another road to cheat the little guy. Myself being one.

Cookie N — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on File S7-2026-15: Opposition to Proposed Rule Making Quarterly Reporting Optional From: Cookie N Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the SEC's proposal to make quarterly financial reporting optional and introduce a semiannual Form 10-S framework.

Mandatory quarterly disclosures (Form 10-Q) are vital to the integrity, transparency, and fairness of US capital markets. Moving to a semiannual reporting system would severely harm retail investors and market efficiency for several key reasons:

• Exacerbates Information Asymmetry: Institutional investors possess advanced data analytics and direct corporate access. Retail investors rely heavily on public quarterly reports to level the playing field.

• Increases Market Volatility: Reducing data frequency to every six months will result in massive information gaps. Earnings surprises will become larger, causing sudden, disruptive swings in stock prices.

• Hides Financial Distress: Six months is a long period in the modern economy. A company's financial health can deteriorate significantly in that window, leaving investors exposed to hidden risks for too long.

• Distorts Market Comparability: If reporting becomes voluntary, a fragmented system will emerge. High-performing companies may report quarterly, while struggling firm delay data, destroying standard cross-market analysis.

I strongly urge the Commission to maintain the current mandatory quarterly reporting framework to protect investors and preserve confidence in our financial markets.

Sincerely,

Janice Nichols
Concerned Citizen

Cookie Roberts — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cookie Roberts Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cookie Roberts, Perry Michigan, here. 81 years old, and lost all my stocks and retirement money in 2008. You all remember that, right? Keep the reporting quarterly, so others don't lose retirement monies and have to work until they die. Thank you for your attention to this problem.

Cooper Pynos — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cooper Pynos Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Cooper P from Pennsylvania. We the people are getting tired of your funneling of wealth to the top. Leave it quarterly for the little guys, not like you can eat your money anyways.

Cora Keweshan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cora Keweshan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it QUARTERLY!

Cora Keweshan

Corey Hanley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Corey Hanley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Companies need to report to shareholders quarterly for more transparency. Moving toward a semi-annual reporting structure would just allow potential fraud to go that much longer before being found. Do not allow the current fraud heavy administration to sway reporting even more into the hands of corporations. Quarterly reporting helps to protect investors and citizens against corrupt corporate practices and protects the economy from the potential of another Enron. Do your jobs and protect investors.

Corey White Investor, The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Corey White The Motley Fool Community advised of this proposed change. It is a mistake to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. As investors and as such owners of these public companies, less transparency creates uncertainty. Timeliness of information is critical when making investment decisions. I strongly urge you to maintain the four reporting period per year requirement.

Cormac Eubanks — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cormac Eubanks Dear Commissioners: I am writing to formally oppose the proposal currently under consideration that would allow public companies to elect to reduce their quarterly reporting obligations from four times a year to just two. While there have been discussions regarding regulatory efficiency, this specific measure strikes at the heart of market integrity and investor protection. I respectfully request that you reject this amendment or reconsider it before implementation. At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. This erosion of accountability does not just benefit corporate management; it directly harms retail investors who rely on consistent data to evaluate risk, performance, and future viability without being forced into relying solely on speculative rumors or third-party analysis of incomplete information. The Commission’s proposal cites two primary rationales for reducing reporting frequency: potential cost savings for registrants and reduced pressure on market participants. I must push back against both assertions as they stand in the current economic climate. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe, though this argument feels antiquated given our technological reality. In an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. The cost burden of filing financial data has not meaningfully increased; conversely, the value provided by consistent information flows remains constant or grows. Trading on a half-year reporting schedule creates dangerous asymmetry in timing between management’s knowledge and the investor's ability to act upon it. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. This assumes that transparency itself is the problem rather than short-termism driven by speculation based on incomplete data streams. Short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient; it just makes everyone less informed. Reducing disclosure frequency would ultimately increase volatility and lower market liquidity. Without quarterly updates, investors cannot accurately price assets during interim periods when a company’s financial health may deteriorate or opportunities arise that require capital allocation adjustments. This rule change risks favoring corporate management comfort over investor clarity. For these reasons, I urge the Commission to uphold current standards of transparency. We can maintain cost efficiency without sacrificing regular communication between companies and shareholders. Please ensure that investors retain the ability to monitor their ownership effectively throughout the fiscal year. Thank you for your time and consideration on this critical matter regarding capital market infrastructure.

Cornel DeLorean The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cornel DeLorean Please do not pass this! Less information never creates better informed owners of stock in companies like me. With the advent of AI agents and increasingly capable and efficient tools, the work and overhead of submitting the reports getting easier and easier. Companies should focus on improving disclosures and providing more information, not less.

Cornelius Costello — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cornelius Costello A proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. We think that's a mistake! At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Corry Haxton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Corry Haxton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The corruption in this Administration is already oppressive and openly obstructive. This is just another effort at more corruption- let's make it not happen!

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Cory Ringdahl none — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cory Ringdahl I'm firmly in favor of bi-annual reporting over quarterly reporting. A greater focus on long-term strategy can only be a benefit for public corporations, and potentially lower regulatory compliance costs is of benefit to both regulators and industry.

Cory Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cory Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 don't rob the American people of their hard earned money.

Cosette Moore — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cosette Moore I believe there should still be quarter reports to keep transparency. This reduces surprising news from becoming volatile in the market.

Cote Loef — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cote Loef Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Makes you wonder what kind of shenanigans will occur within those months without any reporting.

Sent from my iPad

Courtney Copeland — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Courtney Copeland Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Courtney Copeland, counselor, there should be no reason to hide anything. We deserve to know what's going on with business as we interact with.

Courtney Richardson Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Courtney Richardson Reporting should occur quarterly. Existing transparency needs to be maintained in order for investors to make good decisions about ownership.

Courtney Simmons The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Courtney Simmons CEOs of huge corporations would never be satisfied with semi annual reports from their executives. In the same way, as an investor, I will not be satisfied with semiannual reporting. Reporting needs to remain quarterly as it is now. Thank you.

Cousin Tish Cavalier — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cousin Tish Cavalier Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting works. Don't try to fix what isn't broken. Publicly held companies owe timely and truthful updates to shareholders.

Sent from my Verizon, Samsung Galaxy smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

CP — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: CP Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cameron LeCocq. One day, all this current corruption will see the light of day, and ALL those who had a hand in it will be exposed. And there will be consequences.

Craig and Kathie Decker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Craig and Kathie Decker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Don't fix what isn't broken.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Craig Benjamin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Craig Benjamin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 If it take 6months to find out u loss all your money on stock, why u just take it now and and call it bail out for the company. That is what u working it up to.

Craig Essex — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Essex I do not agree with reducing reporting requirements from four times per year to two. Less information is not what investors need.

Craig Feinberg — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Craig Feinberg Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Must keep transparency by having reporting quarterly.

Craig Feinberg

Craig Gaume — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Gaume As an individual investor, I rely on the transparency provided by quarterly reporting. I appreciate the SEC's effort to reduce bureaucracy and costs. However, public companies have an obligation to communicate regularly with their owners regarding their financial and operational performance and asking said company to do so 4 times a year is not overly burdensome.

Craig Geraci — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Geraci Investors rely on quarterly reporting. Cutting the reporting requirement in half may save the company a few bucks but how does this affect the investor and the overall market. Not positively I believe.

Craig Harbison — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Harbison Dear gentleperson at the SEC, Businesses that use investors money need to report quarterly in fairness to their investors. I stand with Motley Fools opinion on this Thank you, Craig Harbison

---

Craig Hauser — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Craig Hauser Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a private investor, quarterly reporting is vital to ensure that the information I am receiving on my investments is accurate, timely and truthful. Removing accountability for the CEO’s and CFO’s of public companies invites shenanigans to occur and places every investment I own at risk.

Craig Hauser
Citizen and Investor

Craig Hillegas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Craig Hillegas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting quarterly! 6 months allows for more time to hide the details...

Craig Hillegas
651-492-6701

Craig Krenz Stockholder/Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Krenz Reducing the reporting requirements for companies to less than quarterly would have an adverse impact on investors. Public companies need to be public and allow investors/owners to have up to date information. This IS NOT a proper or effective way to reduce costs! I am absolutely against reducing reporting requirements for public companies.

Craig Law — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Law As an investor, i believe this weakens reporting. It is not in the best interest of investors. Quarterly reporting is essential.

Craig Lommel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Craig Lommel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I understand you are contemplating removing quarterly reporting of the 10q reports. I believe this will put individual traders at a disadvantage with insider and institutional traders. The proposal may seem like it will save money for corporations but the disadvantages to everyday individual traders would be potentially devastating.

While company insiders trading is not legal, it surely is happening already, and institutional traders can also take advantage of the delay in important information which puts individual traders at a significant disadvantage.

please do not limit required reporting so that the information playing field remains somewhat level!

craig Lommel

Craig Muhl private investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Muhl Transparency and quarterly financial reports go hand-in-hand. Please do not allow companies to bypass the 4 quarterly reports that I am accustomed to.

Craig Powell The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Powell There is no logical reason to reduce reporting to twice a year. As an investor/owner, I deserve to be kept informed about my investments more than twice a year.

Craig Regala — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Craig Regala Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need more accountability, not less.

Craig Rekowski The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Rekowski Reducing the amount of times a publicly traded company needs to file reports only hurts investors or owners of the company. Less information in frequency over the year does not lead to better decision making or holding companies accountable for results. As part owner of companies, I would not want to know how my management is doing only 2 times per year versus quarterly. In the age of AI and automation, the reduction of reporting does not reduce costs, it only reduces information frequency.

Craig Robbins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Robbins Please do not allow companies to reduce their number of public company reports from 4 to 2. Investors need transparency and frequency to make informed decisions. In the new age of AI, the reporting process will be much simpler and streamlined for businesses.

Craig S Accountant — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig S At a time when more and more individuals are investing in the stock market. More knowledge should be available to aid with discussion makings. Hedge funds will still get the information they want because they have financial power to demand quarterly unpublished reports. This ruling just hurt the little man. Every company produces internal monthly and quarterly reports anyways so the only cost this is going to reduce is auditing and filing prep.

Craig saffioti — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Craig saffioti Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This will stop people from investing since they won’t be able to track the earnings of their stocks quarterly. The only reason it’s being done is because AI companies have no profits to show.

Craig Saffioti Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Saffioti It will lead to the same fraudulent behavior that was behind the Enron fiasco. Less information means a less informed investor. I will liquidate everything if it’s done.

Craig Seghers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Craig Seghers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need quarterly reporting to keep the status of companies current for informed decisions to be made by investors. Without reliable current data, we cannot make accurate decisons.

Craig Slosberg Newmark & Company / BGC — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Craig Slosberg We need coorporate transparency. Public company reports should remain quarterly. Twice a year is not often enough and invites poor management and potential for fraud. Thank you. Craig

---

Craig Weathers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Craig Weathers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 NO, they have to serve their TIME the SAME AS THERE UNDERLINGS!!!! WHYARE YOU LETTING THEM SCATE WITH A SLAP ON THEIR HAND???

Createops Motley Fool Communit — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Createops In our opinion more information is 1000 times better than less information. Especially in these times where political agenda's are steered towards personal gains and manipulating the share markets, rather than people's benefits. If Corporations need to be held accountable for conducting business in an ethical manner, reporting standards need to be further tightened and reporting time frames should be almost monthly. With today's AI tools reporting processes can be streamlined with out any further administrative expenses, if done correctly.

CRISTAL BROWN — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: CRISTAL BROWN Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency is KEY! Keep investment reporting QUARTERLY!!

Sent from my iPhone

Cristal Taylor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cristal Taylor Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why does our government insist on keeping us poor? Why would something this important be changed back to a time when it was proven as a failure- hence the change to quarterly? As an American, I am vehemently OPPOSED to the possibility of quarterly reporting changing to only twice a year! I am a veteran, along with my Air Force retired husband, living on our retirement which is our stock portfolio. If you change the reporting requirement you will be taking away our retirement fund. How dare you do this after how hard we have worked to get where we are now.

Dean and Cristal Taylor
Corpus Christi, Texas

Cristi Wetzel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cristi Wetzel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Respectfully, I request that the quarterly financial reports from CEOs remain. Do not change what works. A six month blackout could hide much Thank you, Gary Wetzel 698 Walnut Creek Rd Scottsville Kentucky. csw111964@gmail.com
My job title? Retiree.

Croley Graham The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Croley Graham I have been following the proposal that would allow public companies to reduce their financial disclosures from four times per year to only two times per year. This would be a huge disservice to those who invest in those companies, those who have invested in those companies, and those who are considering investing in those companies. On a personal level, it would be a huge disservice to me as one of those investors. If anything, the public needs more transparency and more reporting. Keeping financial information cloaked should not be either the goal or the result of this type of regulatory change. Having lived much of my life in the accounting profession, I understand what it takes to compile and distribute that sort of information. However, the cost of doing that - whether to the company or to a government agency - is de minimis when compared to the impact that reducing those disclosures would have. I urge you to reconsider this proposal and, without hesitation, reject it.

Crystal Clark — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Crystal Clark Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

You need to report quarterly, signed a stockholder.

Crystal Hess — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment -Tighten regulation, not loosen it! From: Crystal Hess Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To Whom it May Concern,

Considering these securities are hypothecated again and again, it is unconscionable to keep the very backbone, the investor, in the dark. This new proposal of an extended reporting schedule it is unacceptable and alarming to say the least. As our global currency shifts to crypto, it's not just prudent, but ever so vital to keep our securities under even more scrutiny, not less. Having had been a victim of both securities fraud and crypto scheme, the technology is forcing us into more regulation to protect all investors. Stop allowing these big corporations to swallow We the people. Mindfully, do your job and tighten the rains on regulations and reporting, not loosen them! Thank you in advance for your time and consideration.

in Him,

Minister,
Crystal Hess-Binnebose
1-312-285-5151

1-302-415-1719
#HowCanIServeYou

Crystal Jenkins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Crystal Jenkins Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
We, the United States public, have invested our retirements, our very security, in a system that once felt much more like a fair equalizer, a way for all of us to share in the nation's collective wealth. The proposal to remove quarterly reporting is a disservice. Average Americans, like me, already feel like the system is rigged by gigantic conglomerates against small businesses and working people. To de-regulate a protection we have to expose fraud from these super corporations feels like a dismantling of trust. We need more accountability, not less, when it comes to transparency for publicly traded companies. These corporations traded sole sovereignty to gain public investment and they should play by rules that are fair to the public and in the public good. That means accountability and regulation.
Thank you for your consideration,
Crystal Jenkins
Concerned citizen and retirement stock investor

Crystal Martin-Pattee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Crystal Martin-Pattee Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Crystal Pattee-retired. I worked hard all my life with the idea that I could be safe and able to live out my retirement being financially secure. Allowing companies to have less accountability in their actions with longer periods to hide their financial actions puts me and millions of others financial future and wellbeing in danger. Too much accountability has already been lost with this administration.

Get Outlook for iOS

Curt Biesecker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Curt Biesecker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Less transparency is never the answer. The public says no to this proposition. Full stop.

Sent from my iPhone

Curt Conrad — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Curt Conrad The proposed rule change requiring public companies to report financial results only twice per year seems like a move in the wrong direction. Investors rely on accurate, timely, and transparent financial reporting in order to make decisions, and this rule change would benefit none of those things. Without good information investors are more likely to keep their money out of financial markets, which would benefit nobody involved. Thank you.

Curt Emanuel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Curt Emanuel I am opposed to the proposal requiring publicly traded corporations to file public reports twice a year instead of four times as is presently done. This will result in less information available to investors as well as the non-investing public. Related to investing, it would swing the advantages even further in favor of institutional investors and away from retail investors. Investment firms and companies already have individuals paid to engage in research relative to publicly traded companies. If reports are filed every six rather than every three months, those individuals will have even more information relative to retail investors who do not hire staff in this way. While reducing the number of reports required would certainly reduce some costs for companies, the negatives to investors and the non-investing public would far outweigh the benefits. Six months is a very long time in today's world. Providing less information with potentially far greater "surprise numbers" would not be good for investors. Thank you.

Curt Relick — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Curt Relick Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 tho I no longer maintain active Securities licenses, I remain quite active in managing my own assets, including those stock-related - it's inconceivable that anything less than signed, quarterly reporting would be considered, as 4-times annually strikes a good balance - while monthly would likely be burdensome, reporting only twice annually is simply too little, surely too long a time period for useful regulatory oversight & investor analysis

Curtis A. Relick

Curt Schroeder — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Curt Schroeder Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Curtis Schroeder, Software Engineer, Waltham, MA, 02453

I remember the Enron implosion and this rule is just as important today as when it was created in response to that scandal. Honest business leaders shouldn't have a problem with it and a healthy, sustainable economy needs honest financial reporting. Keep the rule intact.

--

Sent from my Android device with K-9 Mail. Please excuse my brevity.

Curtis Brudos None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Curtis Brudos We owners need more information from our companies, not less. Keep reports 4 times per year!

Curtis Coffer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Curtis Coffer I oppose the proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two

---

Curtis D Clark — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Curtis D Clark I believe reducing the required public company report filings may hurt individual investors like me. In my 30+ years of owning stocks, I have experienced several occurrences of accounting irregularities and/or fraud for companies that I owned. I worry that reducing the requirement to report will increase the opportunities for companies to hide decisions that its shareowners deserve to know. This reduces transparency which I consider to be a negative impact to me.

Curtis Daniels The Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Curtis Daniels Please keep required quarterly reporting. Semi-annual reporting is inadequate for private investors. We need these reports to effectively evaluate potential and ongoing investment. Going to semi-annual reporting will do nothing but hurt the private investor. With automated accounting and ai tools that all corporations have at their disposal, quarterly reports shouldn't be too difficult for most companies. Keep the quarterly reporting that maintains transparency of corporate practices and compliance to their shareholders.

Curtis Fort — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Curtis Fort Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Public companies need to keep the public informed. The companies do not own themselves and have to communicate the business profit/losses to be held accountable. Should be monthly instead of quarterly...

Curtis Fort
Prism Inspections LLC

Proudly Servicing Marion, Sumter and Lake Counties
www.prism-home.com
(352) 304-1065

Curtis Hill — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Curtis Hill Please keep public company reporting quarterly. Investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Cyndi Lambrinos — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cyndi Lambrinos Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 And run almost bankrupt. The country with their fraudulent reports that Price Waterhouse signed off on because all they did was check it from year to year and that was good. No keep it at quarterly for CEOs to sign off on. Especially special notes requiring any high dollar items anything over 10% of what they're reporting. Keep large companies on check for these items.

Sent from my iPhone

Cyndi Mobley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cyndi Mobley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency is vital for a stable economy; keep quarterly reporting

Cynthia L. Butler Mobley
Certified Supply Chain Professional

Sent from my iPhone

CYNTHIA ALGER — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Keep it Quarterly From: CYNTHIA ALGER Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am a retired, widowed office worker who depends on the savings my husband and I worked very hard to have. I don't want any changes that are going to make things easier for Wall Street and big corporations to hide their profits and/or losses from us. SEC: Keep it Quarterly!

Respectfully,
Cynthia Alger

Sent from Yahoo Mail for iPhone

Cynthia Anne Mc Lean — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Anne Mc Lean I strongly believe it is a mistake to allow companies to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two! Investors are owners. When you own a piece of a business, you expect and deserve regular, clear communication from your business. Allowing companies to reduce reporting requirements weakens the communication between the ongoing activity of a company and its owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But this management attitude comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient or long-sighted. It just makes everyone less informed. In no circumstance does less information create better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions harsher, and the volatility greater.

Cynthia Bitz — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Bitz Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please don't change quarterly reporting. It only benefits the corporations and not their clients. I am about to retire and this scares me.

CYNTHIA BROADBENT — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: CYNTHIA BROADBENT Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting must be retained to protect small time investors like me. While others like me are a tiny speck in the investment ocean, together we are a large group whose investments would be at risk without up to date information. I am a retired realtor and former paralegal. My retirement funds would be at risk without reliable CURRENT financial disclosures. Thank you, Cindy Broadbent

Sent from my iPhone

Cynthia Carle — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Carle Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The idea of losing quarterly reporting, particularly at a time when we need more, not less, accountability, is irresponsible in the extreme.

Cynthia Carle writer

Cynthia Cycon Voter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Cycon As a successful investor and a Republican voter, I believe semi annual reporting is a bad idea. Investors need to take a long view, but absolving companies from reporting and allowing them to conceal disappointing results is NOT the transparency to which investors have a right.

Cynthia DeNardis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia DeNardis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reporting periods to 4 a year. And ENFORCE the penalties.

Cynthia Dobrenich — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cynthia Dobrenich Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is completely unacceptable. Once again this administration is trying to cover up illegal financial transactions for the wealthy and big corporations. KEEP THE QUARTERLY REPORTS TO KEEP PEOPLE HONEST. What is the big deal if there's nothing to hide? The truth always comes out in the end. Stop messing around with our protections. STOP TRYING TO PROTECT THE RICH. TAX THE RICH.

Cynthia Dobrenich — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cynthia Dobrenich Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is completely unacceptable. Once again this administration is trying to cover up illegal financial transactions for the wealthy and big corporations. KEEP THE QUARTERLY REPORTS TO KEEP PEOPLE HONEST. What is the big deal if there's nothing to hide? The truth always comes out in the end. Stop messing around with our protections.

Cynthia Geiger — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Geiger Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
The rules were created to keep everyone honest and informed. We need this transparency at all levels!
Please keep quarterly reporting so we can keep our faith in the SEC.
Thank you

Cynthia Glidewell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cynthia Glidewell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Accountability matters.

Best regards,

Cyndi Glidewell

Cynthia Grzybowski — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cynthia Grzybowski Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep the SEC reporting quarterly. Too much can happen in 6 months & I like to stay on top of my investments

---

Cynthia Hardy-Gayle — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Hardy-Gayle Please do not cut in half the reporting that companies need to submit!

Cynthia HIll-Meriwether — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia HIll-Meriwether Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am now retired, but how is this a good deal for the U.S. citizens?

Quarterly reporting keeps public companies honest. Since Enron in 2002, every CEO must personally certify their numbers every quarter, with federal prison on the line for signing a lie. Now you, the SEC, is proposing ‘semi-annual’ reporting, cutting those certified filings to twice a year. Half the jail risk for shady CEOs. Double the risk for our savings.

Cynthia of

Cynthia's Awesome Massage
featured @New Life Massage 918-743-1232
By appointment only

Leave a review

Cynthia Hogeman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cynthia Hogeman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need to keep track of all of our investments. More reports keep the market open and keep us informed.

I have been investing for about 45 years and can’t imagine going without the information.

Keep quarterly reports!!!!!

Cynthia S. Hogeman

Cynthia Kinavey — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cynthia Kinavey Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm Cynthia Kinavey, retired registered nurse of 45 years. I have my money invested and believe we need to keep the transparency intact.
San Rafael, California 94903.

Cynthia L Rubino — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia L Rubino Do not reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners (shareholders). Less information rarely creates better-informed owners (investors). Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it.

Cynthia McMurdo — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia McMurdo Please do not reduce required reporting to the SEC.

Cynthia Miller — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Miller Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Reporting should not be done twice a year. Should be far more often!

Cynthia Miller — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Miller Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep quarterly reports!!!
It's my money and they work for me.
so do you!!!

Cynthia Orsak — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cynthia Orsak Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Cynthia Orsak Lvn this matters to me because I have been working 57 years and I don't want my retirement funds stolen.

Cynthia Prockette — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Prockette Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I am absolutely against ending quarterly reporting!! We have enough corruption with this Administration!! This is totally UNACCEPTABLE!
Every investor who relies on this information has a right to be advised quarterly so we, and our financial institutions can make sound investment decisions! DO NOT END QUARTERLY REPORTING!!!

Cynthia Ruppel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Ruppel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stay with the quarterly reporting, don't give them a reason to defraud their investors. If they keep pushing for twice a year then change it to every month they'd have to sign as I believe they are not wanting their investors to know what they are doing!

Cynthia Sherburn — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cynthia Sherburn Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am Cynthia J Sherburn, Retired Attorney. I read the SEC quarterly reports and have used them for many years to make investment decisions. SEC quarterly reports keep investors like me on top of changes in these companies, and it's important to me that I receive this information more than twice a year! That 6 months is long enough for fraud to be perpetrated without any investors being aware. Companies traded on the various stock exchanges want investor money. The least they can do is give us investors the quarterly reporting information about their companies so that we can determine whether their companies are worthy of our financial investment. Surely this is financially worthwhile to the companies! Please continue the SEC quarterly reporting requirement.

Sent from my Galaxy

CYNTHIA WALKER — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: CYNTHIA WALKER Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Cindy Walker and I am a teacher.

Americans deserve to see quarterly reports - do NOT change this. It has been this way all my life and should remain this way. Changing it would only benefit insiders and the average American investor would lose. This is a TERRIBLE idea.

Cindy Walker

This message originated from Currituck County Schools. All e-mail correspondence to and from this address is subject to the North Carolina Public Records Law as defined under N.C.G.S. §132.1, which may result in monitoring and disclosure to third parties, including law enforcement and the media.

Cynthia Wargo — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Cynthia Wargo Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting. The way the system is set up is to be focused on short term profits so eliminating two reports a year will only contribute to the retail investor having less visibility into a company. I wish companies could be focused on long term viability but then we wouldn’t be living in a capitalist society.

Sent from my iPhone

Cynthia Wemhoff — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Wemhoff Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There is nothing better to keep this quarterly accountability. This is needed.

Cynthia Wisehart — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Cynthia Wisehart Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why do we, the people, have to pay, and to experience greater risk, just because corporations are lazy, or don't want to disclose.... In other words, want to avoid quarterly filings.
I was an accountant. I know what a pain it is. But I also know how valuable it is. Keep the quarterly filings!
Take care of the people for once! We are more numerous than the few oligarchs and corporations who just don't want to do the work to keep things above board.

Cynthia Wisehart CHt, CLC, CHHC

Business email: fallingawakecoaching@gmail.com

https://www.facebook.com/fallingawakecoaching/

CONFIDENTIALITY NOTICE: This communication and any accompanying document(s) are confidential and privileged. They are intended for the sole use of the addressee. If you receive this transmission in error, you are advised that any disclosure, copying, distribution, or the taking of any action in reliance upon the communication is strictly prohibited.

Cyprian Pesce — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Cyprian Pesce Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Who doesn't want to know what their hard-earned money is doing…no going dark, for any reason, without informing folks with a stake in the market, especially not for a 6 month period!

Sent from my iPhone

Cyriac Jacob — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Cyriac Jacob At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

D Edwards The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D Edwards I don't support the Semiannual Reporting proposal. Plain and simple, investors have the right to be INFORMED investors. Limiting their ability to two reports a year is reducing transparency in a world where MORE transparency is clearly needed. Thank you!

D Henderson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: D Henderson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I resent your proposal to eliminate Quarterly Reporting. We, the citizens of this country, do not have access to Govt Usual Insider Trading. Wake up! We understand Govt corruption. DO NOT ELIMINATE QUARTERLY REPORTING.

D Leary — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: D Leary Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting makes all CEO aware of their responsibilities and accountable for their actions at all times!

D Lowery — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: D Lowery Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 You MUST keep quarterly filings. There is NO upside to change to bi- yearly, except to allow for more wiggle- room, more cheating & hiding..CEO's have to be held to account for investors , and consumers. This is a really ill- considered move that serves no one. Thank you for your consideration, Deb Lowery, owner of micro business, "Stitchcrafter."

D M — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: D M Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities this would be criminal it's like having your own business and not knowing how it's doing

---

D Max Bruce — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: D Max Bruce Motley Fool has brought it to my attention that SEC rules are trying to be changed to require only 2 reports per year on financial aspects of companies reporting through the SEC. I am against this as it will take away the little transparency of reports, we already have by doing them 4 times a year. I believe we need them more times a year than four. Monthly reports would provide way more transparency for investors like me. At the least, leave the current state of SEC reports as they are and nothing less. Technology has made it easier to do reporting 4 times a year with less cost of providing the reports to investors. As a matter of fact, reports can be provided monthly as low a cost as Quarterly before we had the technology, we have today.

D Myntti — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: D Myntti Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reports

Darla

D Porter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: D Porter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep this reporting quarterly. That is best for investors and corporations.

Thank you!

Sent from my iPhone

D S — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: D S Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is essential that we keep quarterly reporting. Many different lines of work have good check and balances. Why should we make less checks and balances for something that has been embroiled in scandal before so we made a law to have quarterly reporting. That doesn't make any sense, and makes me think it's a push from crooks wanting to do shady things. Please do your job with integrity.

D. Sirrine
Retail Manager

D Semo Cimochowicz — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: D Semo Cimochowicz Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 WTF, just kill us already. Destroy a third of our savings. People will be jumping . No one outside the top 10% have 2/3 to lose. That's why the majority of us don't gamble. Is it the 100th anniversary of the Great Depression that you are trying to recreate? Seriously?

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

D Sturch — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: D Sturch Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The reasoning behind changing to quarterly reporting has not changed! If anything, it’s more important now. Do NOT change this, please!

Sent from my iPhone

D. LEE K. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: D. LEE K. Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Some of the SEC must be guilty of it, or they wouldn't be trying to change it.

---

d.f dammer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: d.f dammer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Bull *.... as tech creates access and response / compliance is effective and efficient/ plant your flag for those who seek value and security / knowledge.
Thx.don73

Dahlía Sourlas — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: “No” to Bi-Annual Reporting From: Dahlía Sourlas Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hi, My name is Migdalia Acevedo and I support quarterly reporting. Quarterly reporting is the standard for all things that matter: financial reporting, hospital reporting, business reporting, government reporting, etc.

Every interaction ive ever had with reporting mechanisms have relied on a quarterly reporting model. There's a reason for this. Three months is long enough to see the impact but short enough to intervene and change gears when things are going awry.

Our government is increasingly doing away with the checks and balances that protect the most vulnerable. Our finances are just too important to stray away from a quarterly reporting model to a bi-annual one. Too many things can go wrong with less oversight. Less is not more when it comes to the monitoring of money, assets, the stockmarket, basically anything that can impact someones standard of living, health and/or safety. These are not the things we should be reducing oversight of.

We need that quarterly reporting timeframe to ensure that problems are identified before they become insurmountable. We need that quarterly reporting timeframe to keep us on course. Let us not move backwards but forward.

Our confidence in the systems that are supposed to protect us is already fractured; our sense of security at its greatest low. Please do not add to that by reducing oversight of our financial systems and markets, thank you.

Daire T Clifford — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daire T Clifford Six months is a long time to wait and see how my company, which I have a shareholding in, is doing. People will also lose more jobs if only reporting results biannually,

---

Dakota Drake The Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dakota Drake Reducing reporting from 4 times to 2 times a year does nothing but reduce information provided to regular people. We as regular people need all the information we can get, not less. Investing requires information. Do not allow for deregulation to happen, its good for nobody but the 1% who have things to hide. There is nothing wrong with more transparency and information. Thank you.

Dale Abramson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dale Abramson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quaterly!!!!!

Dale Absher — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dale Absher As a business owner myself, I do understand the work required in frequent reporting. However, I also understand its value and the necessity in maintaining clear, frequent and accurate communication with my clients and other owners. Communication is the key to developing strong lasting relationships. The lack of or infrequent communication is often the foundation of many problems. With that said, I do not support less frequent reporting by companies. I think quarterly is fair and sufficient. A company that is functioning properly. Should have the infrastructure to generate numerous reports with just a few key strokes. The application of artificial intelligence makes this even easier. As a consumer/owner of these companies, I strongly support quarterly reporting. Anything last can bring instability and uncertainty to their business and the markets as a whole. Thank you!

---

dale bonnell sr — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: dale bonnell sr Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 if you let them, some will take advantage of the opportunity, everyone knows that

---

Dale E Alspach — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dale E Alspach Many companies experience frequent fluctuations due to rapid changes in competition as well as supply and demand. Quarterly reporting does impose a burden but the companies are likely generating similar materials for internal use. For investors in the volatile markets of today this level of reporting can provide important information for evaluating decisions. Keep the current system.

Dale Griffin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dale Griffin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Are you pocketing big money for this secrecy twist? Absolutely, 💯 % no. Honestly I prefer monthly! Keep it quartly. Dale Griffin.
Retired.
I need ALL my retirement funds.

Dale Jackson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dale Jackson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I prefer quarterly reporting.

Dale E. Jackson, BA

1080 Talus Drive
Sequim, Wa 98382
916-207-2589

Dale Litzenberg The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dale Litzenberg To Whom It May Concern: As an investor, I am deeply concerned about proposal S7-2026-15 on Semiannual Reporting. These reports are the only opportunity I, as a part owner of a public company, am able to understand what is happening within the companies I buy through share purchases. This transparency is critical to understanding the direction and health of the company. With modern accounting software and AI, generating these reports is quickly becoming less and less of a burden for companies. If the concern is that CEO's chase quarterly results rather than long-term goals, then other then other changes or regulations are more appropriate than reducing transparency. I urge you to not adopt this change and maintain transparency for the owners of public companies. Thanks for your consideration.

---

dale parks — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: dale parks Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No more criminal network allowed those involved must be held accountable with complete transparency and investigate for any crimes

---

Dale riggst — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dale riggst Please uphold the semi-annual reporting standards for publicly traded companies. Thank you Dale Riggs

---

Dale Semler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dale Semler Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency is crucial for ALL businesses. This proposal is absolutely unacceptable. Accountability matters.

Dale Semler
Volunteer Experience Program Manager

Sent from my iPhone

Dallas C. Kennedy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dallas C. Kennedy I'm writing in favor of saving the required quarterly 10-Q disclosure for public companies. Individual and institutional investors have been fooled and fleeced in the past by lack of transparency (think of Enron or Tyco or Theranos). US financial markets are among the most trusted in the world -- and the most trusted among the large ones -- in part because of our disclosure rules. Reduced transparency runs against the interests of investors and the soundness of the financial system generally, opening more opportunities for malfeasance and insider trading. In the age of electronic records and AI, the saved costs would be minor in any case. Save quarterly reporting! Thank you.

Dalton Hazlet — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Dalton Hazlet Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is the MINIMUM we should be doing.

Sent from my iPhone

DAMON HALL — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: DAMON HALL Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 With all the dirty politics. Best we keep it to quarterly. Doing this now is in very poor taste and can emit the appearance of shady dealings. Keep

It legit

Sent from my iPhone

Damon Ruemmele — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Damon Ruemmele Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Damon Ruemmele and I am a bartender in Las Vegas, NV. I am writing to express disapproval for moving to semi-annual reporting. We should be equipped with more information and not moving the other direction. This would be detrimental to the average investor and allow companies to delay negative reports. Please don't adopt this proposal.

Thank you,
Damon Ruemmele

Dan Burns — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan Burns please keep it the same. why are they suggesting this? To reduce oversight and hide things, I suspect. Please don't allow that!!!

Dan DeBoest — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dan DeBoest Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 If this blatantly immoral ruling passes, it will be challenged in court and all of you will be put on display as a showcase of fools beholden to cash bribes.

Sent from my iPhone

Dan DeRoner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan DeRoner Please do not reduce reporting from quarterly to semi-annually. Maintain current transperancy. We live, unfortunately, in a world rife with fraud. Keep investors informed as possible. Past relaxation of consumer safeguards have been damaging. Do not repeat dangerous history. Thank you.

Dan Finkle Retired — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan Finkle Less transparency is helpful to no one other than people trying to game the system. This semi-annual reporting is a terrible idea and the people who proposed it should be removed from their positions and allowed only to open doors for guests.

Dan Fryling — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dan Fryling Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is absolutely absurd.

This would make investing even more difficult do not do this.

Dan H — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan H I am against this as it will increase volatility. Quarterly reports provide investors with important and standardized information needed to make informed decisions.

Dan Kegley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dan Kegley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a retiree relying on investments for my income, I respectfully ask that the quarterly signature requirement of CEOs be maintained. It was obviously good policy when implemented and it is good policy now whose need is not diminishing with the passage of time.

Thank you.

Dan Kegley

Dan Lee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Dan Lee Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Keep Quarterly Reports. How foolish you would be to do away with it. You are actively encouraging corruption!
Do your job to protect investors.
Thanks.

Dan McClean The Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan McClean Less reporting is risky for investors like me. Openness and frequent disclosure is the best cure for corporate misconduct.

Dan McCormack — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan McCormack More information creates better-informed owners. Stop trying to screw Main Street investors.

Dan McGrew — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan McGrew I have been a stock invester for over 65 years and most of that time the visabilty that an invester had was poor. Today things are different and quarterly reporting is an important aspect of that theme. Don't change what works. I am 91.

Dan O — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan O To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I write as an individual investor to oppose the proposal to allow companies to replace quarterly reports on Form 10-Q with semiannual reports on new Form 10-S. Quarterly reporting protects ordinary shareholders. Cutting interim disclosure in half doubles the information gap between insiders, who know how the business is performing in real time, and the individual investors who don't. That gap is precisely where volatility, mispricing, and mistrust take hold. The Commission would be accepting a concrete, measurable cost — less transparency for the people with the least access to information — and it should be certain the offsetting benefit is real before doing so. It isn't. The central justification for less frequent reporting is that it will curb corporate short-termism, but the evidence doesn't support that claim. The CFA Institute Research Foundation studied this exact change in the United Kingdom, where mandatory quarterly reporting was eliminated, and found no measurable effect on corporate investment. What changed was the quality of the information environment: less analyst coverage and weaker disclosure for the firms that scaled back. If the Commission's goal is longer-term corporate behavior, reporting cadence is the wrong lever. The actual drivers of short-termism — executive compensation cycles and incentive misalignment — are untouched by this proposal. The proposal's optional design does not cure this problem; it concentrates it. The companies most likely to opt out are smaller, less-covered businesses that already operate with the least independent scrutiny — exactly the issuers where more frequent reporting does the most work. Making them harder to monitor makes them harder to own with confidence. This moves in the opposite direction from Regulation FD and the decades of policy aimed at leveling the informational playing field between insiders and the investing public. It is worth asking what problem this actually solves. As one comment letter to this docket put it, the entire S&P 500 files a 10-Q every quarter and the index sits at record highs — "if quarterly reporting is crushing American capitalism, American capitalism is hiding it well." I urge the Commission to retain the quarterly reporting requirement. Respectfully submitted, Dan O West Chester, PA

Dan Olabuenaga — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Dan Olabuenaga Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Isn’t it like the trump administration to pardon felons for their own benefit? How much are these jailed felons bribing the convicted felon to get out of jail ??? Why are we bending (ignoring) the laws in the books that have kept this country as the beacon of justice and democracy???

Sent from my iPad

Dan Ponce — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Dan Ponce Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I feel that quarterly reporting is the minimum that should be required of publicly-trading companies, realizing that anything more frequent could be too much of a burden on those companies. It is important to small investors, like myself, to have this frequent visibility so that we can make good decisions.
Dan Ponce.

Dan Ricketts retired — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan Ricketts I personally feel this is a terrible idea. As a retired investor I follow my positions closely. Only getting feed back form the companies invested in 2x per year is not enough to properly evaluated the direction of my holdings. It has worked fine this way for years why change now. We need more transparency not less!

Dan S. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dan S. Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Absolutely no changes should be made. Keep the process open to the public and investors.

Dan Sameulson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dan Sameulson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 You need to keep the quarterly reporting rule in effect.

Dan Schnurr CPA CA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dan Schnurr Reducing reporting from quarterly to anything less frequent reduces corporate accountability, reduces corporate transparency, restricts shareholder knowledge and increases shareholder risk for which they have no control. It will also increase the risk of fraud, further damaging shareholder confidence. Any reduction in reporting frequency is wrong and dangerous.

Dan Smelter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Dan Smelter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
The mission of the security and exchange commission is to protect investors, maintain fair, orderly, and efficient markets, and facilitate capital formation. This proposal reduces transparency and available information, which hurts investors in many ways. This reduced reporting allows fraud to go on longer before it could be stopped. Furthermore, in reducing the available information to the public directly affects the efficiency of the markets. Decisions should be made with facts and information. This proposal reduces the information available to make decisions and leaves the investor worse off.

Dana Ament — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Dana Ament Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Transparency matters. Do not stop quarterly reporting. We need to continue to shine the light on what is happening in the businesses we invest in. Individuals need to be able to level the playing field by having a fair stock market.
Do not stop the requirement for quarterly reporting. We depend on this information to plan our savings and retirement futures.

Dana Beezley-Kwasnicka — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dana Beezley-Kwasnicka Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reports provide important data for me. Do not stop posting them.

Dana Beezley Kwasnicka
dbkwas@gmail.com

Dana Bonica — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dana Bonica Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Have we not learned from the economic debacle of 2007-2008? It took us 8 years to recover from the mess created by wall street due to the too relaxed rules on investing. We should be strengthening and enforcing laws that make big corporations MORE accountable, not less. Letting them skip this step in transparency will only lead to more corruption and chaos. L. Bonica, retired small business owner and long term owner/operator of 9 affordable housing units (under $1,000 a month rent .)

Dana Cloudine — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dana Cloudine Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please don't give away more of the money we work so hard for. The company ceo and billionaire board members don't need more ways to fleece us. All we ask for is an equal opportunity. Thank you, Dana Cloudine

DCloud9@Comcast.net

Dana Cloudine — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dana Cloudine Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please don't give away more of the money we work so hard for. The company ceo and billionaire board members don't need more ways to fleece us. All we ask for is an equal opportunity. Thank you, Dana Cloudine

DCloud9@Comcast.net

Dana Culver — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dana Culver Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dana Culver, Domestic Engineer
I worry about my girls going into the workforce. I'm raising an artist (cake decorator/maker) who will be experiencing all the aspects of doing business in this day and age.
It is disastrous for the middle class startup Enterprise to be kept in the dark for 6 months at a time. 3-month Windows for transparency would help new businesses adjust their options if need be. It makes more sense for everyone.

Dana Bailey Culver
562.338.3171 mobile

Dana Gage — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Dana Gage Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is unacceptable.To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

Dana Hughes — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dana Hughes Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Are we really going to let companies become more crooked?!

Sent from my iPhone

Dana Mooney — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dana Mooney Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need to know what's going quarterly, which was done to IMPROVE reporting and the consequences of lack of up-to-date public notifications. How can you possibly think this is better? Worthwhile? Oh, of course it is, for the companies trying to hide their losses and failures.
We the people are more important than companies that are trying to hide issues and profit off their own losses and failures.

Dana J. Mooney
Retired Government CFO

Daniel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Don't return financial fraud to a more common occurrence!! No return to Erin like fraud!

D. German

Daniel Caponigri — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Caponigri As an active shareholder in many companies, I disapprove of changing the reporting requirements from four times per year down to two. I glean too much information from these reports in deciding whether to sell or buy more.

Daniel Cobb, Jr. The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Cobb, Jr. I am opposed to changing the reporting requirements from quarterly reporting. Investor transparency is so important in this country, and seeing developments and results each quarter is important to individual retail investors. Thank you, Daniel Cobb

---

Daniel DeLau Certified Public Accountant — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel DeLau Moving to only providing information semi-annually would not provide investors with information they need to make decisions. My preference would be for all public companies to continue to report information quarterly.

Daniel Donahoe — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Donahoe Please keep regulations as they are and escape the purge after this administration is done trying to remove all safeguards from consumers. This time will end and we hope to get America back on track, not lost to greed and a lack of transparency. We need good people. Thank you.

Daniel Fenner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Fenner We need the same level of transparency we've had.

Daniel Fox — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Fox Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 DO NOT get rid of the Quarterly reporting. CEO's have the ability to move massive amounts of money around, as has happened too many times in the past. So much so that they can manipulate the money to their benefit, regardless of the company's policies, etc. CEOs have inside knowledge of their company's overall finances, just as a person who is the caregiver/family member for an elder has. Even in the case of a family member getting access to another's finances, the temptation to do something that "no one will notice" is just too strong.

As was the case in countless CEOs going to jail in the past. They should be in jail. Take ENRON for instance, the CEO was able to manipulate finances so much that those employees in his own company finance section weren't even aware of everything going on.

To change things now, back to the older ways of doing things is letting the current CEOs know that even if they get caught it's no big deal, just business. But somehow, thousands are always hurt financially due to the less than honest CEOs out there. And they are there, just waiting for this. Why not steal a few hundred million, put fifty million in an offshore bank and even if you get caught, you could offer to pay back some, but even if they do a little time and can never be a CEO again, they will be better off financially than 99% of Americans. Shoot, they'll do a year or two in jail, maybe even get out early for good behavior then disappear with the money to Cancun and retire.

Any CEO who steals or manipulates money to take away from those less fortunate, should never be allowed to own anything again in their life, and they should spend a year in jail for every thousand dollars they stole. Problem is the rich protect the rich.

We see it every day now in this country and if you allow this, you are encouraging them to steal.

As a retired Army officer, and as with everyone i speak with, we have seen the change in this country in the past few years. This is just another "help the rich get richer" scheme.

This is something that shouldn't ever be considered. Why would you change this other than to let them know you are OK with them eventually stealing. Because they will. Especially if there are no real consequences. Change this and you are directly responsible for their actions afterwards. I understand this administration is doing everything they can to make life easier for billionaires and millionaires, but this is criminal to even think of in my book.

Daniel Gambino — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Daniel Gambino Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly report is a must do! Accountability cuts criminal activity.

Sent from my iPhone

Daniel Gioglio Analyst — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Gioglio Leave the reporting requirements as is. Transparency is a good thing.

Daniel Hargis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Daniel Hargis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Make it monthly reporting 100% of online sales are fraudulent or inflated already. Even the Addams family filed quarterly as in no new business till next quarter

Sent from my iPhone

Daniel Haun — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Haun To whom it may concern: I would like to encourage you to not allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that’s a mistake! It is better for investors to be more informed than less so when making and holding an investment. Thanks for your consideration. Sincerely, Daniel Haun

---

Daniel Hilscher Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Hilscher We need continuation of business Quarterly Reports

---

Daniel Hoffacker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Hoffacker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Securities and Exchange Commission: We now live in a age of information, I fail to understand why companies do not want to be transparent with their finances to investors. Yes us working American's who work hard to make ends meet. Do not strangle us financially by taking away information that should be publicly available to individual investors

---

Daniel Hope III The Motley Fool & Retired Professor University of Georgia — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Hope III Corporations are claiming they can save money by reducing the amount of information they provide to the people who actually own them, individual stock holders. As an owner I do not agree. It seems the money saved, if any, will go to pay CEOs and other officers more money, whether they deserve it or not. It also would provide corporations, who the Supreme Court claims are individuals, with more money to control politicians through PACs in order to control the government. I am against reducing the number of reports public companies are required to provide to the people who actually own them.

Daniel Kandell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Kandell Reducing the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two times a year would only create LESS transparency and MORE uncertainty and volatility in the markets. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Companies must be held accountable to their owners by issuing these reports on a quarterly basis, thereby providing the owners with an accurate landscape and future trajectory of their company. Please do not pass this amendment.

Daniel L Gendler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel L Gendler Semiannual reporting means less transparency, and less-informed stockholders. Greater uncertainty, a more volatile stock market. None of that is good.

Daniel Lee Vyenielo NVDA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Lee Vyenielo With reduced reporting there will be less transparency which doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Do not reduce the reporting frequency. Less information available will lead to a less perfect market. I respectfully request that this proposal is dropped.

Daniel Lilly — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Lilly Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting needs to stay quarterly reporting! Too many problem have been uncovered to do any less. The quarterly reports, should actually be monthly.

Sent from my iPhone

Daniel McCave — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Daniel McCave Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 4 signatures are needed. Stop helping your friends stay out of jail. We see what you are doing.

Daniel Montez — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Daniel Montez Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop playing into big corporations. Companies need to disclose quarterly for investor protection.

Daniel P. Sodergren — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel P. Sodergren Ignorance is not bliss. Quarterly reports make sense to an investor and gives a better understanding of what the investment is doing.

Daniel Patten — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Patten We have a right to four times a year fair disclosure.

Daniel Paul Rohde — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Paul Rohde My name is Daniel Rohde, 700 Caledonia ct, Florence SC 29501. As a personal investor data along with accurate data in a timely manner with sufficient frequency. We need quarterly reporting to continue in order to do analysis and determine trends in a timely manner.

Daniel Phillips None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Phillips The Motley Fool Community

---

Daniel Raj — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Daniel Raj Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why change things when not broken? Keep the status quo.

Sent from my iPhone

Daniel Raulli — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Daniel Raulli Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hello my name is Dan Raulli. I am a general manager for an aviation services provider. I work in an industry comprised of companies aiming to cut costs and raise profits by any means.

Removing the requirement for quarterly reporting will allow these companies to pull the hood even farther over the public’s eye. The facts around bi-annual reporting show historic detriment to the general public investor.

Please vote to keep quarterly reporting a mandatory requirement.

Sent from my iPhone

Daniel Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Daniel Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reports. We need protective transparency.

Daniel Sullivan Physician — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Sullivan Dear Committee, Please do not reduce the reporting requirements for public companies. I have been an individual investor for 20 years. These reports are critically important for individual investors to stay updated and continue to understand and evaluate the companies they invest in. The more secrecy there is in investing the less advantage there is to the public investors. This could increase wealth disparities and harm the individual investor. Please consider this when making your decision about this reporting requirement . Yours, A concerned citizen

---

Daniel T. Dahlgren — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel T. Dahlgren Keep quarterly transparency for accountability and best balance of business financial transparency with beauracracy. Less frequent communication promotes misleading information for investors undermining capital allocation efficiency.

Daniel Wolf The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Daniel Wolf I DO NOT SUPPORT BI-ANNUAL INVESTMENT REPORTS! Quarterly reports are necessary for informed decisions and I wish to be fully informed. The use of AI will make reporting easier, not harder so the idea that bi-annual reports will save money is defendable.

Danielle Graham — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Danielle Graham Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
DO U CARE AT ALL ABOUT REGULAR HARD WORKING AMERICANS? Got it. Just the corporate oligarchy matters. We see clearly.

Danielle Guido — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Danielle Guido Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'm absolutely against moving to semi-annual reporting and see no valid reason why there should be less frequent reporting. Three months is already a lot of, and enough, time between reports and the public needs to stay informed. We already have a problem with insider trading on Capitol hill and don't need to increase the knowledge gap between the public and the privileged. My name is Danielle and while I don't work in finance nor handle my own trades, it is extremely important to me that my financial advisor stay informed, as well as the general public, because everyone should be operating with the same information as soon as possible.

Danielle Guido
Baltimore, MD

Danish rizwi Danish rizwi — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Danish rizwi Danish rizwi Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Danish Ali rizvi Pakistan Panjab Ali purr chttha

---

Danish rizwi Danish rizwi — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Danish rizwi Danish rizwi Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Danish Ali rizvi Pakistan Panjab Ali purr chttha +923287767372

Danny Finnegan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Danny Finnegan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is nothing but approved fraud. There is absolutely no legitimate business reason for changing to a twice yearly reporting model. There is no upside to this.

Danny Gentile — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Danny Gentile Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Daniel Gentile, and I work in healthcare. A lack of transparency is never ever a good thing, especially now as regulations are so much more lax. We need to know what is happening more regularly than every six months.

Danny Lee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Danny Lee After looking into this semi annual reporting issue, it seems concerning. I would prefer to keep communication four times a year. The less communication sounds like a less desirable situation with room for more issues build up.

Danny Sullivan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Danny Sullivan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency and frequency of updated data is important for making sound financial moves for the small business and individuals with lessor investment means. *Danny Sullivan / Retired Teacher located at 1919 South Gaines , Little Rock, Arkansas 72206

Sent from my iPhone

Dannye R Williams — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dannye R Williams It is my opinion that reducing required corporate reporting from 4 times a year to 2 is not in my (a stock holders) best interest. This will only reduce transparency and certainty about the status of a company that I partially own is. If anything I believe reporting requirements should be increased not decreased!

Dante Caravaggio, EON Resources, EONR CEO EONR — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dante Caravaggio, EON Resources, EONR Subject: Support for File No. S7-2026-15 (Semiannual Reporting) To: Paul S. Atkins, Chairman, and Commissioners of the Securities and Exchange Commission Dear Chairman Atkins and Commissioners: I am writing to express my strong support for the Commission's proposed rule amendments to permit public companies to elect semiannual reporting in lieu of quarterly reporting (File No. S7-2026-15). Providing companies with regulatory flexibility to move away from the rigid 90-day reporting cycle will fundamentally improve capital market efficiency and encourage sustainable, long-term value creation. • Combating Destructive Short-Termism: The current quarterly reporting model forces corporate executives to focus excessively on meeting short-term earnings expectations. This constant pressure frequently leads to short-sighted management decisions, such as delaying vital research and development (R&D) or altering operational strategies just to appease Wall Street consensus. A semiannual cadence allows management to focus on strategic execution and business health rather than artificial, 90-day milestones. • Alleviating Regulatory Disincentives for Going Public: The compliance costs and continuous distraction of producing three Form 10-Qs every year have made public listing an increasingly unattractive proposition for growing firms. This has resulted in a shrinking pool of public assets, depriving everyday retail investors of high-growth opportunities. Optionality will restore balance and incentivize companies to list on public exchanges. • Significant Administrative Relief for Smaller Issuers: While massive enterprises have automated compliance systems, the resource drain of quarterly filings represents a severe operational bottleneck for smaller public firms. This rule allows companies to redirect scarce capital from redundant administrative disclosures directly back into productive investments, such as product development and employee retention. • Alignment with Global Best Practices: Prominent international jurisdictions, including major markets in Europe, have successfully utilized semiannual interim frameworks without sacrificing market stability. Embracing this conditional optionality modernizes U.S. capital markets and respects the maturity of companies with strong internal governance. I commend the Commission for pursuing this modernization effort and urge the swift adoption of the proposed rule. Respectfully submitted, Dante Caravaggio, EONR Thank you for working on ways we (public companies) can reduce costs. This is especially important for small public companies where we are struggling to grow and survive. This allows us to focus on growth rather than paying fees to auditors. Thank you!!

Daphne Pickren — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Daphne Pickren Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Daphne Pickren, Retired. Please keep quartet reporting. Too much can happen in today’s market to delay reporting.

Sent from my iPhone

Daria Rountree — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Daria Rountree Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hello,
My name is Daria and I'm a Director. I invest to balance my income for off seasons. Not reporting quarterly would heavily impact my ability to properly see how companies are doing to make an educated decision into whether or not I should invest in them. I would stop investing if I couldn't see what I was investing in.

Darin Cooper — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darin Cooper As a stockholder with significant stakes in many publicly traded companies, I oppose any reduction in the current level of required reporting. As an owner, I expect regular and frequent updates on the businesses I invest my future into. Anything less than currently required would leave investors unsure about their money and likely lead to increased anxiety and less money invested in our stock markets which negatively impacts both companies and their investors. Regards, Darin Cooper

---

Darinka Torres-Gambini — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Darinka Torres-Gambini Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Darinka Torres, and I am a Workers' Compensation Examiner with the New York State Workers' Compensation Board in New York City.

I support maintaining quarterly reporting requirements because investors deserve timely, accurate, and consistent information about the companies in which they invest. Regular reporting promotes transparency, accountability, and confidence in our financial markets.

As an individual investor and member of the public, I believe access to current financial information is essential for making informed decisions. Reducing the frequency of reporting could make it more difficult for investors to identify problems early, evaluate company performance, and hold corporate leadership accountable.

Quarterly reporting helps ensure that all investors—not just large institutions—have access to important information on a regular basis. Strong transparency requirements contribute to fairer and more efficient markets.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Darinka Torres
Workers' Compensation Examiner
New York City, New York

Sent from my iPhone

Darla Becker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Darla Becker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

Please do not remove quarterly corporate reporting! It provides critical information for retirement account participants. We can't afford to have our retirement funds endangered. Most of us are not rich and cannot afford to lose any of our very hard earned savings for a time that we are most vulnerable.
Thank you.

Darla Turner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Darla Turner Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Darla Turner, Texas. I may not understand all of what i see in the quarterly report, but I understand that bottom dollar amount and I like seeing it quarterly. As an investor it is my right to see it at the least quarterly

---

Darla Vincent — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Darla Vincent Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting to help keep the playing field honest and accountable for everyone. Older people rely on their retirement savings accounts to live and eat and care for themselves. Darla Vincent - retired American ❤️🤍💙🕊️🇺🇸🟫

Sent from my iPhone

Darla Wilson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Darla Wilson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please don’t change the frequency of reporting.

Sent from my iPhone

Darleen Whiting-Rogers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darleen Whiting-Rogers The proposal you currently have on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two is a crucial mistake. Investing is ownership, and as an investor I deserve regular, transparent communication from that business, especially now that I am retired. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and myself which is critical in keeping me apprised of my financial position. I want and need to see those quarterly reports for my own piece of mind for transparency of where my investments are at. Please, please, please, as a retired consumer, I respectfully request you reconsider this change and leave the required four reports as is, as I do not believe it is in the best interest of investors to make such a change. Your re-evaluation of this matter will be appreciated. Please don't let consumers down - investing plays a powerful part in the success of a business. Don't take transparency away from us. Thank you.

Darlene Drake — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Darlene Drake Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Darlene Drake SAHM. We have as much right as the elites to make informed financial decisions and control our finances!!!

Get Outlook for iOS

Darlene Perry — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Darlene Perry Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is a blatant attempt to assist CEOs in pilfering the coffers of their companies. It will give them additional time to hide the money before their next audit. Keep the reports quarterly.
Darlene Perry RN

Darlene Perry — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Darlene Perry Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is a blatant attempt to assist CEOs in pilfering the coffers of their companies. It will give them additional time to hid the money before their next audit. Keep the reports quarterly.
Darlene Perry RN

Darlene Price — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Darlene Price Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Isn't there enough money fraud in this country

Darlene Woodworth — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Darlene Woodworth Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It seems to me that these restrictions were put in place for good reasons... We are not your slaves that you can continue to take advantage of. Corporate Corruption, & Government Corruption go hand in hand. Monopolies like those of John D Rockefeller's. His oil industry taught us that they are designed for their own greedy pockets, & not for the good of the people who work for them. Stand up and do the Right Thing. Honesty goes far, when doing the job of helping your employees to be able to afford their lives, & the lives of their families

---

Darline Garippo — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Darline Garippo Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
NO
Why allow big business interests to harm the common man. This action will increase the wealth gap.

Darrel Greer None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darrel Greer While I agree that quarterly reporting is burdensome for any business, I find individual investors, financial analysts, and corporate money managers among others rely on these reports to make serious investment decisions—not speculative nor whimsical. These reports are complicated and boring reading for most of us, but they do offer regular incite not available elsewhere. I would welcome trimester reporting; however, semiannual reporting simply adds too much investment risk.

Darrell Butler federal law enforcement — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darrell Butler While I understand the desire to make things easier for public companies, those same public companies do NOT have a good track record of being good stewards. Applications like Robin Hood have radically changed the nature of investing with even an E-4 in the military becoming an active shareholder in companies. Big business however, continues to largely ignore the new investor and remain locked at protecting the interest of large investors to the detriment of all the others involved, re. ERON ! While your proposal has lofty language about stimulating economic activity, how many companies have collapsed while lying to regulators and left the employees to now become a public burden? Companies that decide to "go public" should embrace the burden that comes with the privileged use of "other peoples money". Giving greedy corporations the "option" (wink, wink) to file less is the same as eliminating the quarterly requirement. The savings are minuscule, and the cost is more than proportional to their growth. I am all about smaller government, but this measure creates too great a possibility of allowing greedy corporations to make public burdens of their former employees while the robber barons laugh all the way to their off shore banks!

Darrell P — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Darrell P Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Ridiculous. What is the SEC trying to hide?

Sent from my iPad

Darrell Thompson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Darrell Thompson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dear SEC,

I need quarterly updates to keep my own finances and my mother’s finances under control to properly organize and pay for her home care.

Darrell Thompson
Curidin@earthlink.net
Retired

Support your local pipe and drum band.
NCSU Pipes and Drums!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Darren Boarnet — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darren Boarnet As an share holder of public companies, I am an owner. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business, and the employees hired to run that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies, their owners,, and the CEO who works for all the owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is quickly becoming debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed and potentially more reactive to information when it is received. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. With semi annual reportin all owners would get updates from the managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. We'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. The only people served are the managers who are "inconvenienced" by informing thier owners. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. That is human reaction when you change the rules of the game.

Darren Curtis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darren Curtis No semi-annual, keep it to quarterly. Thank you.

Darren Jones — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darren Jones I believe reducing the reporting from quarterly to semi-annually would greatly reduce the transparency given to individual investors and prevent us from having the information needed to be able to make informed investing decisions.

Darren Leggett — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darren Leggett I support quarterly reporting by publicly traded companies especially with today's technical landscape being ever faster changing. We need frequent information more than ever. Things change in days and weeks nowadays. Info provided every 6 months would be obsolete by the time it got to investors. Thank You . Respectfully Submitted!

Darrin McLimans — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Darrin McLimans Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Make them continue signing 4 times a year

Sent from my iPhone

Darryl Bowen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darryl Bowen Good day. I would like to keep this brief. I am strongly opposed to the rule change being considered whereby companies would no longer report quarterly. Respectfully, this is a mistake. I am employed by a subsidiary of a top defense contractor as well as being a shareholder. I follow the published quarterly reports closely. For my devision and the company overall. It helps me maintain scope within my sphere as well as the industry as a whole. There is too much useful information in these filings that could be partially, if not totally, lost in all of the extra “noise” in a proposed semiannual report. This is also a huge disservice to investors and I believe these sentiments would be echoed far and wide by most shareholders. Thank you for your time

---

Darryl Carson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darryl Carson Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Darryl Conliffe — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Darryl Conliffe Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting requirement. Now is not the time for reduced oversight.

Darryl Dassing — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Darryl Dassing Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Ansyon Dassing. Retired front line manager. Keep reporting requirements quarterly. Transparency is economic power!

Darryl Fernandez The Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darryl Fernandez I consider that investors need full transparency and regular quarterly reporting. I am not in favour of reducing the nunber of reports to twice a year.

Darwin Li — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Darwin Li It is much better for investor transparency to maintain current filing standards. Investors are part owners and deserve to know what is going on. Being publicly listed is associated with the need to liaise with investors and information must flow to them.

Daryl Cleveland — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Daryl Cleveland Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 SEC keep quarterly reporting for any public company on stock market.

DARYL PORTER — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: DARYL PORTER I think changing reporting to 2 x a week will be bad for investors.

DAUDDY BAHAR — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: DAUDDY BAHAR Please keep as it is. No change, thank you

---

Daun — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Daun Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quit trying to manipulate the people for the oligarchs to profit!!!
- Daun Kilpatrick
A concerned citizen

Dave and Nicole — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dave and Nicole Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting! You will do a disservice to the citizens of the United States if you change it to anything less! You are responsible to ensure the everyday investor has the information they need. You need to be stronger against those who get and act on insider information too! Do your jobs for the 98% as much as you do for the insiders or become an assistant for those who are part of the corruption that is ubiquitous now in the U.S.

In frustration,
Nicole Alleva-Dickey
(a former holder of the Series 7 and 63 licenses)

Dave Appenzeller — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dave Appenzeller I believe that this is an awful idea. As a company shareholder in publicly traded companies, I want more insight, not less. Reporting only 2x/year will lead to more market volatility and uncertainty. When information finally does get reported, the market is likely to react more strongly to any surprises, putting individual / retail investors at higher risk. I'm not even sure this idea saves company time and effort as they need their own financials every quarter to drive their business decisions anyway. Please do not approve the semiannual reporting rule.

Dave Bleyer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Dave Bleyer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
As a retail investor, I rely on publicly available quarterly reports to make decisions. There is already too much information hidden/hard to find from the public. These are publicly traded companies and there needs to be as much transparency as possible for the public that is investing in them.

Dave Brooks Retired Finance Executive — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dave Brooks Do not decrease reporting requirements for publicly traded companies.

Dave Chaney — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Dave Chaney Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
As a recent retiree, I now live off the investments I've built over my lifetime. As a stock shareholder it's crucial that I stay informed about the inner workings of these businesses. Scaling back to 6-month reporting won't make much difference to large, institutional investors who have access to detailed, behind-the-scenes reports, but it introduces major risk to small investors like myself. Don't do this.

Dave Christman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dave Christman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It should be even more frequent than that!

Dave Cole — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Dave Cole Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 David Cole , Retired, Lake Forest California. Please keep quarterly reporting. Companies have so many automated ways now to keep track of their business numbers it seems silly to not report quarterly. Delayed reporting of down turns and late addressing of problems only make the situation worse. CEOs will continue to want information daily , weekly and monthly so having them report to shareholders and regulators quarterly is not a difficult ask.

Sent from my iPhone

Dave Dunnigan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dave Dunnigan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 With Corruption at an all-time high this is a terrible idea for a law and I don't approve! When Rick Scott can be elected to the Senate, but was CEO for a Florida-based healthcare company the was guilty of the Nation's Largest Medicare Fraud and should have been personally charged.
David Dunnigan

Dave Eliason — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dave Eliason Reducing the number of company reports is NOT a good idea. I want more information from my companies, NOT less. Simply put, This is a dumb idea, like most of this administration's activities.

Dave Fischer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Dave Fischer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities

and Exchange Commission:
The new SEC proposal that would end quarterly reporting is bad for individual investors. It goes against fairness. Letting public companies go dark would be good for insiders who have access — and bad news for everyday investors. You don't have to be Warren Buffett to know that sunshine & transparency matters for honesty whereas darkness begets fraud, cheating and abuse. This should be a no-brainer.

Dave Hales The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dave Hales My wife and I strongly oppose this. As citizens and investors, we believe that quarterly reporting is essential to positive communication, trust, and transparency. Less frequent reporting keeps the public in the dark, thus diminishing open communication and transparency while increasing frustration and volatility.

Dave Hatz Retired Financial Advisor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dave Hatz Please keep quarterly reporting. While there may be slight cost savings by going to semi annual reporting, the loss of more timely information for investors is a far greater societal risk. Problems and enforcement issues over the years always center around lack of complete disclosure/information rather than efforts that reduce investor information. This proposal goes against all the years of open, transparent information that the industry prides itself on.

Dave Katrein — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dave Katrein My family entire life savings is invested in publicly traded companies which is relied on for a comfortable lifestyle in retirement. I am an intentional investor in the select businesses that I count on to sustain my financial well being. Being able to have regular transparent communication on how the businesses are doing is important so I can continue to understand potential risks to make informed decisions. With the exponential advancements in technology and AI, providing communication to the owners of a company on a quarterly basis should become increasingly easier, not harder. Don’t let companies become less accountable to the shareholders! Thank you.

Dave Kuzmiak — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dave Kuzmiak Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Reported quarterly there’s no excuse to go backwards again and repeat the same problems we had

---

Dave Mannion — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dave Mannion Public company reports should not be reduced from four times per year to two. At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. The reduction in costs, if any, would be minimal in an age of AI and increasingly efficient reporting tools. Less information does not create better-informed owners/investors. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Please do not reduce reporting requirements. Thank you for the opportunity to provide my comments. Best, Dave Mannion

---

Dave McKee none, retired — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dave McKee Investors need more timely information, not less.

Dave McKillop — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dave McKillop Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Don't undercut our ability to keep you responsible for quarterly reporting. No free rides anymore!😡
Dave McKillop, Retired Teamster

---

dave mclouth — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: dave mclouth Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The CEO's should be signing off on their reports quarterly. It makes no sense to do it any other way. David McLouth retired IT manager. It makes my investments safer.

Dave Moore The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dave Moore As a part owner of the companies whose stocks I own, I know that quarterly sales and earnings reports are mandatory to make good decisions. Thank you.

Dave Slotter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dave Slotter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We should maintain quarterly reporting to keep transparency into business operations.

Dave Smith Business Owner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dave Smith In a time when transparency and information is most important, I think reducing the number of times a publicly held is to report is a poor idea. Accountability is a healthy thing. Thank you for the chance to comment.

Dave Thatcher — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dave Thatcher In an open market, MORE INFORMATION is always preferable to less.

Dave Tredinnick Retired Senior Executive — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dave Tredinnick Quarterly reporting although onerous is required to insure investors have current accurate data to help guide their investment decisions.

Dave Ziegler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dave Ziegler Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Didn't work then won't work now. Are you really that stupid???

David — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is stupid. Why would you want less reporting!

Sent from my iPhone

David — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: David Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 “No” to returning to the past!

David — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Public-company reports should not be reduced from four to two. We need to remain informed

---

David — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Consumers need to have more knowledge about their business ownership, not less.

David Adamson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: David Adamson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am a retired educator in CT and am very concerned by the SEc proposal to end quarterly reporting requirements. This is a major issue and a potential disaster in the making if the quarterly reporting requirements are dropped in favor of semiannual reporting. It is opening a door to more frequent fraud and potential market manipulations and perhaps even eventual crashes and market losses for many investors. I know if this passes, I will limit my future investment funds and change to other more secure investments due to a concern that semi annual reports will increase the chance that corporate financial information will be will be withheld for longer and thus will be less transparent and with the opportunity for misinformation and perhaps mistaken?/fraudulent?/purposely misleading? 8-K filings will increase. *All this change does is add a NEW LARGER LOOPHOLE that will let those less reputable people in positions of influence at various corporations game the system for 3 months longer, for their own advantage, by hiding illegal actions or financial information that would otherwise have to be disclosed earlier in a quarterly report or would have been uncovered in said quarterly report at the 3 month interval rather than perhaps being hidden for the 3 additional months until a semiannual report might turn the information up. Fraud and insider trading (corporate and gov't) are two issues that have been long-standing problems connected to corporations and to the stock market and stock trading. Quarterly reporting helps make certain there is transparency and requires CEO/CFO signatures stating the report is factual with penalties that would apply for knowingly untrue statements. So every 3 months investors know that they have corporate FACTS to base their investment decisions on. Making it every 6 months means less accountability and less transparency and a greater chance that company financial information can remain hidden from both the public and perhaps even people within the corporation itself for a longer time, allowing for fraud to continue for at least 3 additional months if not more. *K financial statements are NOT official 'filings' but are only seen as 'furnished' information without any accountability or liability in case it contains false statements. It is not audited by any outside individual/group so basically it is financial corporate information that MIGHT BE ACCURATE OR IT MIGHT NOT BE ACCURATE! The K8 might contain accurate financial information OR it may contain incomplete financial information, knowingly partially false, or misleading financial information or it may have knowingly completely false and misleading financial information . BUT NO ONE WILL KNOW WHICH IT IS BECAUSE THERE IS NO INDEPENDENT AUDITOR REVIEW AND SHIELD THE DOCUMENT'S CREATORS FROM LIABILITY. You are left with a document of financial information from someone who says "trust me" that the information is accurate but if it turns out not to be then is not there is no recourse and no penalty against the company or the people who created the corporate misinformation. Only an idiot would invest in something when they have no facts that can be proven about the financial stability past earnings or current performance of the investment opportunity at the corporation.  Increasing the time between certified corporate filings and in that extra 3 month interim, increasing the investors' reliance on 8-K financial statements which have less accountability and may not be accurate means one's investments are more of a gamble based on 'trust' and less of an accurate reading and analysis of corporate reports since outsiders will need to wait the 3 extra months for the semiannual report to determine where the actual financial status of the corporation stands and whether to invest or not.. * Please keep Required Quarterly Reporting to maintain the protections for the investors and NOT bow to the corporation or those who might advocate for and find ways to use that longer 6 month time frame to commit corporate fraud as has occurred too often in our past, often at an astounding level as occurred at Enron and others over the years! Don't increase the chance for fraud especially at a time when AI is already bringing so many potential new changes to the marketplace making investing even more complex and prone to rapid change/adjustment. Thank you, David Adamson

---

David Adamson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: David Adamson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
I am concerned by the SEC proposal to end quarterly reporting requirements. This is a major issue and a potential disaster in the making if the quarterly reporting requirements are dropped in favor of semiannual reporting. It is opening a door to more frequent fraud and potential market manipulations and perhaps even eventual crashes and market losses for many investors. I know if this passes, I will limit my future investment funds and change to other more secure investments due to a concern that semi annual reports will increase the chance that corporate financial information will be will be withheld for longer and thus will be less transparent and with the opportunity for misinformation and perhaps mistaken?/fraudulent?/purposely misleading? 8-K filings will increase. *All this change does is add a NEW LARGER LOOPHOLE OF 3 ADDITIONAL MONTHS that will let those 'less reputable' people in positions of influence at various corporations game the system for 3 months longer, for their own advantage, by hiding potentially illegal actions or concerning critical financial information that would otherwise have to be disclosed earlier in a quarterly report and/or would have been uncovered in said quarterly report at the 3 month interval - rather than perhaps being hidden for the 3 additional months until a semiannual report might turn the information up. Fraud and insider trading (corporate and gov't officials) are two issues that have been long-standing problems connected to corporations and to the stock market and stock trading. REQUIRED Quarterly reporting (with the essential liability/consequences as are currently in effect) helps make certain there is more transparency and requires CEO/CFO signatures stating the report is factual with penalties that would apply for knowingly untrue statements. So every 3 months investors know that they have corporate FACTS to base their investment decisions on. Making it every 6 months means less accountability and less transparency and a greater chance that company financial information can remain hidden from both the public and perhaps even people within the corporation itself for a longer time, allowing for fraud to continue for at least 3 additional months if not more. *K financial statements are NOT official 'filings' but are only seen as 'furnished' information without any accountability or liability in case it contains false statements. It is not audited by any outside individual/group so basically it is financial corporate information that MIGHT BE ACCURATE OR IT MIGHT NOT BE ACCURATE! The 8-Kmight contain accurate financial information OR it may contain incomplete financial information, knowingly partially false, or misleading financial information or it may have knowingly completely false and misleading financial information . BUT NO ONE WILL KNOW WHICH IT IS BECAUSE THERE IS NO INDEPENDENT AUDITOR REVIEW AND SHIELD THE DOCUMENT'S CREATORS FROM LIABILITY. You are left with a document of financial information from someone who says "trust me" that the information is accurate but if it turns out not to be then is not there is no recourse and no penalty against the company or the people who created the corporate misinformation. Only an idiot would invest in something when they have no facts that can be proven about the financial stability past earnings or current performance of the investment opportunity at the corporation.  Increasing the time between certified corporate filings and in that extra 3 month interim, increasing the investors' reliance on 8-K financial statements which have less accountability and may not be accurate means one's investments are more of a gamble based on 'trust' and less of an accurate reading and analysis of corporate reports since outsiders will need to wait the 3 extra months for the semiannual report to determine where the actual financial status of the corporation stands and whether to invest or not.. * Please keep Required Quarterly Reporting to maintain the protections for the investors and NOT bow to the corporation or those who might advocate for and find ways to use that longer 6 month time frame to commit corporate fraud as has occurred too often in our past, often at an astounding level as occurred at Enron and others over the years! Don't increase the chance for fraud especially at a time when AI is already bringing so many potential new changes to the marketplace making investing even more complex and prone to rapid change/adjustment. Thus 3 month required reporting is even more important and helpful to the small individual investors like myself, since we don't have a team of financial accountants to vet a corporation on site and pore over corporate books like large investment firms do. Please keep Quarterly Reporting and help us so our investment decisions can continue to be based on the required more frequent and accurate quarterly reports and so we can remain both better informed and better protected from potential fraud/misleading 8-K information at a corporate level. Thank you.

David Adamson Retired teacher — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Adamson Reducing the timing and frequency of public corporate reporting requirements from quarterly to bi-annually is both a short-sighted and dangerous policy decision. It only makes EVERYONE LESS INFORMED about the current corporate situation. The less information people have about the corporate earning, predictions, expenses, etc., the LESS likely they are to be able to ACCURATELY evaluate a company’s current & future value and expectations for success and the risks to the company’s future. It makes investing in any company or industry much more of a gamble based on slightly older data, and less of a decision based on the most current performance, data and fact-based projections. This is especially true in this NEW era of rapidly increasing use of and dependence on AI and AI’s increased impact in unexpectedly influencing more rapid changes in corporate expectations, plans, layoffs, earnings, projections, and overall decisions. AI may upend expectations for not only single smaller companies but also an entire industry in months, so reducing corporate reporting makes even LESS sense now and increases the risk to ALL investors that a sudden unexpected advance and/or change in what AI is suddenly capable of, and how that or other world events can suddenly change a company's outlook - either limiting OR improving a corporation's potential earnings which under this proposal might then might not be reported for 3 additional months before the impact has had a massive unexpected impact that might have been more obvious IF the corporate reporting was available quarterly rather than biannually. Thus the investors (part owners) of the corporation would potentially be left in the dark for 3 months longer than under current reporting requirements Two issues cited for this proposal have been the 'cost savings' and 'time-savings' of having to produce only two (biannual) reports a year versus 4 (quarterly) reports a year. The argument that it may save what is in reality a pretty negligible amount of money and time that is spent on preparing and distributing the quarterly reports is equally short-sighted. And perhaps it may well turn out that preparing 2 larger reports each covering 6 months of longer term projections, expenses, profits, etc. might be more challenging to explain if the longer 6 month period of time includes sudden unexpected changes, something that having two consecutive 3 month data & explanations could have explained more easily given a perhaps changing economic environment or corporate decision-making strategy necessitated by AI or other events that were not easily or obviously able to be anticipated. While hindsight may be said to be 20/20, foresight is in large part determined by the amount and breadth of valid information available to those making predictions and decisions. MORE overall information and MORE FREQUENT CURRENT information is ALWAYS MORE HELPFUL in evaluating ANYTHING. There is a good reason why the large investment firms do so much research and examine the books from top to bottom BEFORE making sizable investments or before buying stock in specific companies. No company seeking investment funds would ever say "We would prefer you wait 3 more months and then we will provide you with our biannual (6 month) company financial report and then we will open our books . . because it saves us a little bit of time and money now AND we don't want people to make decisions on shorter term 3 month projections/information and perhaps 'over-react' to what may potentially be short term corporate projections that were not borne out or what we have ASSUMED to be only short-term issues that will be resolved within the longer 6 month reporting date . well, that certainly wouldn't lead to much confidence in the company and I doubt anyone would go ahead with the investment based on the OFFER to be given LESS information LESS frequently about the company's current & future status. There is an argument that removing the 3 month reports could lessen the potential knee-jerk reactions by /impacts on investors to shorter term unexpected world or industry events . (think COVID's impact on the stock market) and that is certainly true . . but it is also equally true in that case that then corporate insiders and/or those with access to the impact of those unexpected events such as those in government, or related industries that also needn't report for the now (if approved) additional 3 month period) will now have an even LONGER period of time ((potentially 3 additional months) to use that information themselves while the public is kept unaware. The scales are tipped even further away from full transparency and toward limiting information access to the general public. That is not what any system that is supposedly open and above board should be promoting and advocating for. More information and greater accuracy and increased frequency is always preferred over less information, less accuracy and decreased frequency! To put it all in another context with an example most people can relate to . . if you went to your doctor for a medical annual physical and he said your current age and lifestyle warranted evaluating your risk for skin cancer so you took the recommended 'test' which was a body scan. If they took a small sample of skin to test because it appeared a little different from your skin on other parts of your body but it wasn't necessarily indicative of cancer or even of any problem at all . but was taken just as a skin sample to test and as long as no unexpected results were alarming or indicated a skin problem, it would be used to provide a baseline of your skin's condition in that area for future reference in case of future change in your skin. Would you like the results of the test provided in 3 months or 6 months? And if the results were fine with no cancer detected, but the doctor said because it still looked unusual s/he wanted to monitor it - just in case changes might occur down the road. Would you find 3 month checkups to be as reassuring as 6 month checkups . by which time a small change or issue could be indicative of a larger problem or issue? Or would you err on the side of caution and get 3 month check-ups as long as the doctor had concerns about the area/issue? I would suggest and bet you might decide to err on the side of caution . a slightly more (2) inconvenient number of visits per year to be checked and a slightly higher amount of a co-pay to be sure any potential problem was caught before it became a crisis! My conclusion is that the current 'Quarterly Reporting Requirement is safer and wiser for ALL concerned (corporations and investors) and poses less risk to our economic stability over time. I am submitting this as both an individual long time investor, a Motley Fool Community Member.

David Albertson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: David Albertson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposed rule change (File No. S7-2026-15) that would reduce financial reporting frequency for public companies from quarterly to every six months. In today's hyper-accelerated financial markets, where dynamics shift instantly due to algorithms and rapid news cycles, slowing down disclosures is completely counterproductive. A six-month reporting gap creates a dangerous information vacuum, leaving everyday retail investors flying blind while corporate insiders and institutional firms maintain their data advantages. To preserve fair, orderly, and transparent markets, the SEC must reject this proposal and protect our timely access to critical investment data by maintaining the current quarterly reporting framework.

David B. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David B. Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am an individual investor and less transparency puts us all at risk!

David Beattie, marketing consultant.

Sent via a mo-bile dee-vice.

David Barkemeyer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: David Barkemeyer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
We need more accountability for ceos and corporations not less. Fewer guardrails does boboyany good.

David Bennhoff None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Bennhoff Quarterly reports are essential for a healthy and transparent market!!!

David berg None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David berg It's ridiculous to think that public companies would not report to their shareholders more than twice a year. Industrial separate to know what's going on with companies they invest in. Changes are made new products are delivered. Investors have a right to know at least four times a year. Having own business, I can't imagine having reports from my staff only twice a year to figure out what was going on. Please do not change the current reporting requirements of publicly owned companies Thank you

---

David Berry — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: David Berry Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 David Berry, Retired, WV
Keep up the pressure! We have to get our contry running right!

---

david boyer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: david boyer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 David Boyer, Technology Program Manager, Reston, VA. Please keep the reporting from companies quarterly. It is important for consumers to have disclosure and visibility into companies they are investing in. Quarterly reporting helps consumers. If there was an option for monthly reporting, I would support it. Semi-Annual reporting allows Companies to bury their bad news for half a year, which could cost consumers more money. Please keep the quarterly reporting.

David Bressler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Bressler Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is David Bressler. I work as a Network Engineer supporting VA Healthcare operations serving our country's veterans. I have a 100% service connected disability myself and am terminally ill as such. I have worked hard all my life to provide for my family with investments making a significant portion of that planning. In order to make informed decisions regarding such investments quarterly statements play a very significant role towards making decisions. The idea to remove quarterly reports is ill founded and will harm investors. The SEC has a duty to protect the public's interest. Shielding corporations from transparency violates this mandate. Families such as mine are dependent on this information to best arrange financial matters in planning for retirement and building long term assets. I want to be clear, moving to semiannual reports vs. quarterly is a disservice to the public your agency is there to protect. Do not modify the quarterly report structure but if you decide to make a modification, that modification should in fact provide even deeper analysis and transparency in the same quarterly report. Today's modern computing environment removes the excuse of burden from the corporations. There are not teams of accountants sitting at desks with ledgers and adding machines - it's all automated and inspected via machine logic and now, AI. Do not remove quarterly report requirements.

Get Outlook for iOS

DAVID BRIGGS — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: DAVID BRIGGS Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Public companies need more transparency, not less! The SEC needs to give their head and shake and leave quarterly reporting in place!

~Dave

Sent via Dave's iPad on Verizon

David Cadena Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Cadena I am for the continual reporting of companies on a quarterly basis. I am against reducing reporting to twice a year by companies.

David Chostner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Chostner Less information is not a good idea for holders of public companies. It’s not a hardship for companies to issue qtr. reports.

David Clow — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Clow Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting supports in fact and theory the commitment to transparency that every investor requires from their investments. There is no need to change that.

David Coffey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Coffey As an investor it assists me to know as much information as possible to make viable choices. Restricting the data that myself and others need to half of what is now accepted can only have negative consequences.

David Comden Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Comden Proposed Semiannual Reporting Rule change: Regarding the proposed change to make publicly traded companies report less frequently, I think it a bad idea. Transparency is in short supply and reducing the number of reports required will lead to less public infromation, more bad investments, investor distrust and a less robust stock exchange. Investors need guardrails and quarterly reporting is one that is important. Thank you. David Comden

---

David Conrad Vice President - engineering, Komatsu — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Conrad Ridiculous how the SEC doesn't even do their current job, but wants to do less promoting more corruption.

David Cook — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Cook Publicly traded companies should not be allowed to reduce the number public-company reports to just two per year.

David Copeland Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Copeland This would be a great error. We need to keep things the way there with reporting. Keep things to every quarter. An effective business keeps track daily on certain matters

---

David Coronado — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Coronado We, as shareholders, should be made aware of what's going on with Our shares at least quarterly, not semi annually.

David Cunningham Private Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Cunningham Since when is "Less Information" better for investors. Why are we even considering this idea. Makes one suspicious of underlying benefits for someone…but not investors!

David Curtis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Curtis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reports. My wife and I depend on this income.

Sent from my iPhone

David D Flossie — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David D Flossie "Comments Attch.

David D Selmon National Society of Tax Professionals, National Association of Tax Practitioners, Texas Association of Financial and Tax Specialists — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David D Selmon Reducing the amount of information and the frequency of that information will be a disservice to the very peoples who the SEC is committed to protecting. Less information and frequency reporting that information made available to accommodate a reporting entity does not protect the investing public, as has been proven time and again throughout the history of the markets. With the advent of technology, there should be no need to deter public information due to associated costs. Please consider exactly who it is that you, the SEC, are protecting from unscrupulous behaviors. I still remember Enron, among others. Thank you for allowing me this opportunity to share with you an ordinary citizen's perspective. Have a Blessed Day.

David Daniels — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Daniels I understand that a proposal is now on the table to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public company reports from four times a year to two. I think that’s a mistake! Investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. In an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter-to-quarter; however, short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient; it makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day, you'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about their businesses (through their stock ownership). Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty; it increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. And that doesn't benefit the stock market at all!

David Daube — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Daube Reporting four times per year is a minimum - investors must have accurate knowledge to make informed decisions.

David Delgrosso Software Engineer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Delgrosso I oppose the proposal to allow public companies to reduce periodic reporting from quarterly to semiannual reporting. As an individual investor and shareholder, I rely on timely quarterly reports to make informed decisions, monitor company performance, and assess risk. Reducing mandatory reporting from four times per year to two would decrease transparency, widen the information gap between ordinary investors and sophisticated market participants, and make it harder for shareholders to identify problems before they become more serious. While I understand the desire to reduce compliance burdens, public companies receive significant benefits from access to public capital markets. Regular, reliable disclosure is part of the bargain. Quarterly reporting helps maintain investor confidence, market efficiency, and accountability. For these reasons, I urge the Commission not to adopt the proposal and to preserve quarterly reporting requirements for public companies. Respectfully submitted.

David Dickinson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Dickinson Please don’t. We need to be informed investors. I might understand this proposal in the 1930s, but AI will make it so much easier to report.

David Disbrow — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Disbrow The SEC needs to maintain quarterly Form 10-Q filings for reasons not limited to the following: 10-Q Provides Continuous Transparency: The 10-Q acts as a vital pulse monitor. It allows stakeholders to track earnings trends, revenue growth, and debt accumulation without facing a half year-long blind spot. 10-Q Provides Early Warning Signs: Regular quarterly filings provide the context necessary to catch operational or regulatory developments, shifts in working capital, and new legal risks as the year progresses. This allows investors to react to early warning signs rather than suffering catastrophic losses down the road. 10-Q Provides Standardized Comparisons: While companies might still report quarterly earnings via press releases or Form 8-Ks if the 10-Q mandate were lifted, these alternative formats lack uniform, standardized disclosures. The 10-Q forces comparability, allowing investors to perform accurate "apples-to-apples" analysis between competing businesses. 10-Q Provides Management Accountability: Form 10-Q requires the inclusion of the Management's Discussion and Analysis (MD&A) section. This compels leadership to explain what caused specific financial shifts and whether favorable conditions are sustainable. 10-Q Provides Legal Protections and Certifications: Quarterly filings carry significant legal weight. They require the CEO and CFO to sign Sarbanes-Oxley (SOX) certifications that verify the accuracy of the financial statements and note any material weaknesses in internal controls. This framework significantly limits securities fraud. 10-Q Provides Data Availability for Analysts/Investors: Equity research professionals and institutional investors rely heavily on the granular, structured data to regularly update their valuation metrics, preventing extreme forecasting lags. Please oppose Rule S7-2026-15 and maintain 10-Q company quarterly reporting. Investors need and require more transparency, not less.

David Dorson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Quarterly reporting From: David Dorson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly reporting. More transparency not less. Let's not leave loopholes for billionaires!

Thanks!
Dave

David Dunn — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Dunn Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep the quarterly reporting so that we can make better decisions with our money and our investments! Thank you.

Sent from my iPhone

David Fielding ABA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Fielding Reducing the number of reports per year is an absolute disaster and I object strenuously to this plan.

David Friedman Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Friedman We need More info not less!!!!!

David Garrison — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Garrison Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly is important Do not modify.

David Gatewood — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Gatewood As an owner/investor in many publicly-traded companies, I believe in transparency for the operations of these companies. Although there are many datapoints which can be challenging to report Every quarter (e.g., details on labor law and manufacturing safety compliance), I believe financial and operational fundamentals that contribute to typical buying/selling shareholder decisions and action must continue to be gathered and reported on a quarterly basis. Please, do not cut the transparency of reporting in half! Many owners, like myself, make significant financial decisions daily on the data we receive and are able to find. Quarterly reports as essential milestones for aligning that research.

David Gilbertson Retired — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Gilbertson This is a bad idea and will keep investors in the dark for half the year. A decision like this will limit the number of companies that I will be willing to invest in.

David Gleason — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Gleason Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is important in helping keep reporting honest and to help keep the general public's confidence in investing and in the SEC. We already have a landslide of public concern over government and institutional accountability. Do not let this become another step on the path to kleptocracy.
David Gleason
Retired Attorney

David Gonzalez Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Gonzalez I do not agree to lessen institution reporting from 4 to twice a year. Please keep at four.

David Graham — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Graham Reducing reporting requirements to twice per annum is unwise as well as unfair to investors and shareholders. Anything that makes Company reporting more opaque just makes fraud easier so why would any regulatory body enable that ?

DAVID GRANDT — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: DAVID GRANDT Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Government responsibility is too protect the people, not too protect corporate greed. Let punishment fit the crime, keep quarterly reports. Thank you, David Grandt, Grandt Sales, inc. President.

David Greess N/A — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Greess Although I want the public companies (in my portfolio) to save money and have the stocks go up this is not a good plan. Most of these companies can afford to have people (or AI) to do these reports. The downside is potentially too traumatic to (especially) individual investors. Somehow, although it is illegal, the professionals, know when there is a problem while us individuals only learn by the Quarterly Reports or some huge calamity that hits the news (usually something illegal, underhanded, immoral or downright criminal). To go to semi annual reporting would be another hurdle for the individual investor to overcome against the big boys

---

David Griffith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Griffith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 In today's fast-changing market, quarterly reporting is a necessity to prevent fraud and provide transparency to investors. Keep the quarterly reporting requirements.

Sent from my iPhone

David Haar None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Haar Quarterly reporting is valuable and important. Don't go to semiannual reporting. I was an executive at a public company (retired now) and based on personal experience I feel more not less visibility and transparency are in everyone's interests. Companies that want the benefits of being "public" should be obligated to keep owners/investors informed. Those that want less scrutiny and visibility can choose to be private. Only dishonest players will benefit from less transparency.

David Hackney — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Hackney Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 David Hackney, US Citizen and Retired. We've worked our entire lives and trusted the investments we had to make since pensions are gone. Keep the regulation as is - allowing Corporations to go dark only benefits poor behavior.

Sent from my iPad

David Hackney Retired Petroleum Engineer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Hackney I am opposed to allowing a reduction in the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. Quarterly reports are needed.

David Hall — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Hall Less frequent reporting means less informed investors which leads to poor decisions.

David Hannan The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Hannan I am opposed to the change from quarterly to semi-annual reports. Investors deserve timely information on the performance of companies they own in order to make informed decisions. The proposed reduction in transparency of corporate performance will increase market volatility to the detriment of individual investors.

David Hardgrave — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Hardgrave Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is a bad move for the American consumer , for sake of which I am in opposition. Reduced transparency is never a good thing for accountability. These companies represent mature investment for the American people and that investment should be protected from all types of financial impropriety by our government, specifically in this case, the SEC.

I urge you to not change this rule and keep reporting quarterly.

Respectfully submitted,

David Hardgrave
IT Project Manager, State of Alabama
Deatsville, Alabama

David Haseley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Haseley I believe that it would be a huge mistake to allow companies to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. If this proposed rule passes, then investors would receive half as many official updates about the stocks they own. I believe that less transparency would result in increased uncertainty and increased volatility.

David Hershan Bachelor of Law (honours) / Account & Finance. Previously head of growth for Shell Energy in APAC — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Hershan I am global technology investor, predominantly focused on listed equities. For 8 years, I have been 95% weighted towards US equities due to transparency for investors around quarterly reporting. Australia has 6 monthly reporting and I tend to steer clear of this. Taiwan has monthly revenue reported for investors. Moving to 6 monthly reporting would be a backward step for US equities, especially given that the world's largest private tech businesses are now going through IPOs (SpaceX, Anthropic, OpenAI) and are doing this on the basis that they need to report quarterly and this isn't deterring them. The USA is still the epicenter of global innovation and this hasn't been adversely affected by quarterly reporting.

David Hoffman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Hoffman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Make it monthly!!

Bare minimum is quarterly!!!

David House — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David House I am not in favor of changing public company reporting to semi annual from the current quarterly process that's in place. Investors should have quarterly reported financial results and complete and regular transparency.

David Huffman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: David Huffman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Every one of these kinds if restriction came about following a scandal and its crime. It is predictable that rolling then back will encourage the same kind of malfeasance that inspired their creation.

David Hull — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Hull Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 @ Well that is a bit too much, we don't even have to drop the soap to get screwed! Who is the architect of this corporate strategy and what backing do they have in D.C. ? CAN we just lock them up now or do we have to wait for another financial collapse orchestrated by some Harvard boys club scum bag who won't be affected in the least?

David Hutchison-Bird — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Hutchison-Bird Regular updates to investors, especially non-institutional investors, is the life-blood to ensure sound decisions are made. I do not understand why, especially in the age of AI, reporting requirements would be reduced, surely they could in fact be increased without creating additional work? The argument that quarterly reporting encourages short term management thinking would only be true if the company were fraudulent and attempting to create headlines with false statements to artificially inflate their market value. Regular, quarterly reporting forces the company to be thoughtful, consistent and truthful and allows investors to compare trends. Bi-annual reporting risks the opposite.

David J Conklin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David J Conklin Have the corps use the same numbers for the SEC, taxes and investors.

DAVID J GIRARD Retired, private investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: DAVID J GIRARD I feel completely confident that receiving more information is better than receiving less. Large companies reporting on a quarterly basis can hardly be considered burdensome, when most modern firms can generate a trial close with the push of a button. I could understand how smaller firms might have a valid concern about quarterly reporting, so some consideration for their special needs might be appropriate (under xx million revenue, bi-yearly reporting or some other rules?) Please do not relax the requirement on larger firms to report quarterly. DJG

David J Roth Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David J Roth Please be advised, I am opposed to proposed rules that decrease reporting requirements to semi-annual timeframe, rather than the current quarterly schedule. Thank you

---

David Jackson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Jackson At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn't debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Imagine owning a business and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. It would still run every day. You'd just know far less about how it was doing. That's effectively what's being proposed here. Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

David Johnson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Johnson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is David Johnson Keep the quarterly report please because it needs to be this way. Don't go back in time this way is working…

Sent from my iPhone

David Joslin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Joslin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As an individual investor in more than a dozen companies, I need to know how well the management is running their businesses ! In addition, analysts and fund managers also need this information on a quarterly basis !

David W. Joslin
Adjunct Professor

David Judy The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Judy I and my family oppose any change to the reporting by companies and the requirement of quarterly filings with the SEC by publicly traded companies as violative of ownership rights of share holders and public scrutiny of financial information of companies of which we are share holders. Please do not allow a reduction of reporting requirements from quarterly to bi-annually. Thank you.

David K Garry Chartered Accountants Australia and New Zealand — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David K Garry Investors need to be reasonably informed on how the companies they invest in are performing and operating. The existing Quarterly reporting goes part way to keeping investors reasonably informed. Investors use their knowledge of the company to make decisions on whether to increase or reduce an investment in a company. If the reporting goes to half yearly then the information available to the investor and their ability to sensibly manage their investments and minimise the risks they are taking with their hard earned savings is jeopardised. As a finance professsional with a lifetime of experience I can honestly state that producing and filing an official report quartely is no more onerous than doing so half yearly, in fact it may be more efficient and proficient to produce quarterly than half yearly due to personal human work and time and technology systems and processes. I strongly request that the Quarterly reporting regime is upheld and not changed to half yearly. Improved frequency of reporting increases the quality of the overall reporting framework as it brings more focus onto reporting and of course businesses cannot operate efficiently without good internal reporting, as a parallel the market of listed investments has this same need for information to operate efficiently and effectively.

David K. Z. Harris — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David K. Z. Harris Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Corporate shenanigans and bad decisions are happening far too often in recent years. I don’t want to give them more room to try while giving us (the investors, the taxpayers) less visibility. You should be making decisions that help us not be cheated. (And the felon-in-chief shouldn’t be pardoning some of the biggest cheaters and fraudsters!)

Sent from my iPhone

David Kaufman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Kaufman I think this proposal is a poor idea. Decreasing communication with the shareholders, who are the owners, of a company is not a good idea. It increases the likelihood of a surprise, which can lead to greater volatility. Regular, transparent reporting is best - decreasing from quarterly to semi-annually reduces that transparency. I don't think this proposal will create a longer term view on the part of company management - I think it will just change from a quarterly focus to a semi-annual focus. As a result, I encourage the SEC to NOT move this proposal forward.

David Kelly — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Kelly I am against any proposal that reduces the amount of information I receive regarding the companies that I own shares in

---

David Kenney — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Kenney Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The kind of data investors need is needed often as possible to make correct decisions. Make no change.

David Kerzner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Kerzner I am writing to oppose the proposed rule that would allow companies to reduce their public reporting from quarterly to semiannual. Investing is, at its core, ownership. When I own shares in a company, I am a part-owner of that business. As an owner, I believe I am entitled to regular, transparent communication about how my business is performing. Cutting official updates in half weakens that fundamental relationship between companies and the people who own them. I understand that some argue quarterly reporting creates short-term pressure on management. But short-termism is a function of how market participants react to information — not of the information itself. Reducing disclosure doesn't make investors more patient. It makes them less informed. And less-informed owners don't make better decisions; they make noisier ones, often reacting more sharply when information finally does arrive after a long silence. The argument that fewer reports reduce costs is also increasingly thin in an era of AI-assisted disclosure and efficient filing tools. The operational cost of transparency has never been lower. Consider what this proposal actually means in practice: companies will continue operating every single day. Products will launch. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will evolve. Under this proposal, shareholders would receive only half as many official windows into all of that activity. Uncertainty doesn't disappear — it accumulates, and then arrives all at once. Less transparency does not reduce volatility. It stores it up. I urge the Commission to preserve the current quarterly reporting standard. Individual investors deserve timely, regular communication from the companies they own. Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

David Korf — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: David Korf Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 How can you possibly in sound mind even think of cutting in half. Have you received something under the table to propose this

Sent from my iPhone

David Korf — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: David Korf Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Leave quarterly reporting, a much stronger requirement

Sent from my iPhone

David Kotschessa — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Kotschessa As an individual investor and a member of The Motley Fool Community, I strongly oppose the proposal to reduce public-company reporting from quarterly to semiannually. When we invest, we take ownership in a business, and owners fundamentally rely on regular, consistent communication to make informed decisions. While I acknowledge the argument that quarterly reporting might add pressure on companies and contribute to short-term market volatility, burying that data does not cure short-termism; it simply leaves investors in the dark. The value of transparency far outweighs these concerns. Less frequent reporting will only increase uncertainty and ultimately lead to sharper, more volatile market reactions when information is finally released. Please prioritize investor awareness and maintain the current quarterly reporting requirements.

David Kutner NMLS — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Kutner We are opposed to the Semiannual Reporting rule as we feel this will decrease transparency of financial status.

David L Hendricks — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David L Hendricks I prefer quarterly reports, the more information the better to inform investment decisions. I do not want to find out about a problem 90 days after the fact!

David L Hofmockel Private Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David L Hofmockel I disagree with this proposal that would allow companies to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. It just makes everyone less informed. Under this proposal, investors would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency increases uncertainty. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater. Instead, let's move toward greater stability, and increased prosperity for everyone.

David Langford — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: SEC proposal S7-26-15 From: David Langford Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I believe that biannual reporting is not in the best interests of investors. Quarterly reporting should be retained. Monthly reporting would be best in clearing out dishonest companies. Should the SEC approve biannual reporting, I believe the SEC should be investigated for potential fraud and possible acceptance of bribes/influence peddling.

Retired in Texas

Sent from my iPhone

David Lapp — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Lapp Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There is no benefit to me, and possibly great harm to many investors!

Sent from my iPad

DAVID LARSON — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: DAVID LARSON Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 David E Larson, Wichita, KS. The only direction you should be moving to is bi-monthly or even monthly! Making it fewer times per year only encourages the Companies and CEOs to cheat during times when they don't need to file.

Sent from my T-Mobile 5G Device
Get Outlook for Android

David Levesque — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: David Levesque Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 David Levesque-Nashua NH. Quarterly reporting needs to remain. The entire investment system will slow and due to less transparency will cause everyone to either gain much slower, or die to not knowing the actual quarterly facts, know when to get out. The government is already screwing us with social security Ponzi Scheme being reduced as of 2032 and we will need this for our retirements to be liveable.

David Lowe — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Lowe Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I'll invest elsewhere and less. People's reactions will substantially drop the market. This proposal is insane.

David Lowe Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Lowe The current 4 public-company reports a year should stand firm. Reducing this amount diminishes transparency and the opportunity for the lay investor to keep abreast of changes within a company. I think it is a mistake to move to just 2 reports a year. I understand that companies are probably saying this would reduce costs and provide more savings, but in today's world with AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

David Lusson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Lusson This is a very very poor proposal. It suggests to investors that they should have less information to make informed investing decisions. It encourages the investing public to treat the stock market as a lottery, or some other form of gambling. It also lends itself to more and more insider trading. This is a terrible proposal meant to punish the small investor

---

David M Lewis Novelist, retired business owner for 45 years. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David M Lewis As a business owner, I recall chafing from time to time over the irrelevant "Six Degrees of Separation from South Africa" statements I had to fill out in the 1980s, and I resonated to the character in "Office Space" spending half of each working day putting approved cover sheets on his TPS Reports. You're going too far in the other direction now, and if this becomes the new "voluntary" standard, I can only ask my financial advisor to shift my investments to corporations who keep me apprised every 90 days.

David M Smith General Counsel, EON Resources Inc. [NYSE American - EONR] — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David M Smith Dear Chairman Atkins and Commissioners: I am writing to express my strong support for the Commission's proposed rule amendments to permit public companies to elect semiannual reporting in lieu of quarterly reporting (File No. S7-2026-15). Providing companies with regulatory flexibility to move away from the rigid 90-day reporting cycle will fundamentally improve capital market efficiency and encourage sustainable, long-term value creation. • Combating Destructive Short-Termism: The current quarterly reporting model forces corporate executives to focus excessively on meeting short-term earnings expectations. This constant pressure frequently leads to short-sighted management decisions, such as delaying vital research and development (R&D) or altering operational strategies just to appease Wall Street consensus. A semiannual cadence allows management to focus on strategic execution and business health rather than artificial, 90-day milestones. • Alleviating Regulatory Disincentives for Going Public: The compliance costs and continuous distraction of producing three Form 10-Qs every year have made public listing an increasingly unattractive proposition for growing firms. This has resulted in a shrinking pool of public assets, depriving everyday retail investors of high-growth opportunities. Optionality will restore balance and incentivize companies to list on public exchanges. • Significant Administrative Relief for Smaller Issuers: While massive enterprises have automated compliance systems, the resource drain of quarterly filings represents a severe operational bottleneck for smaller public firms. This rule allows companies to redirect scarce capital from redundant administrative disclosures directly back into productive investments, such as product development and employee retention. • Alignment with Global Best Practices: Prominent international jurisdictions, including major markets in Europe, have successfully utilized semiannual interim frameworks without sacrificing market stability. Embracing this conditional optionality modernizes U.S. capital markets and respects the maturity of companies with strong internal governance. I commend the Commission for pursuing this modernization effort and urge the swift adoption of the proposed rule.

David M Smith Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David M Smith Subject: Support for File No. S7-2026-15 (Semiannual Reporting) To: Paul S. Atkins, Chairman, and Commissioners of the Securities and Exchange Commission Dear Chairman Atkins and Commissioners: I am writing to express my strong support for the Commission's proposed rule amendments to permit public companies to elect semiannual reporting in lieu of quarterly reporting (File No. S7-2026-15). Providing companies with regulatory flexibility to move away from the rigid 90-day reporting cycle will fundamentally improve capital market efficiency and encourage sustainable, long-term value creation. • Combating Destructive Short-Termism: The current quarterly reporting model forces corporate executives to focus excessively on meeting short-term earnings expectations. This constant pressure frequently leads to short-sighted management decisions, such as delaying vital research and development (R&D) or altering operational strategies just to appease Wall Street consensus. A semiannual cadence allows management to focus on strategic execution and business health rather than artificial, 90-day milestones. • Alleviating Regulatory Disincentives for Going Public: The compliance costs and continuous distraction of producing three Form 10-Qs every year have made public listing an increasingly unattractive proposition for growing firms. This has resulted in a shrinking pool of public assets, depriving everyday retail investors of high-growth opportunities. Optionality will restore balance and incentivize companies to list on public exchanges. • Significant Administrative Relief for Smaller Issuers: While massive enterprises have automated compliance systems, the resource drain of quarterly filings represents a severe operational bottleneck for smaller public firms. This rule allows companies to redirect scarce capital from redundant administrative disclosures directly back into productive investments, such as product development and employee retention. • Alignment with Global Best Practices: Prominent international jurisdictions, including major markets in Europe, have successfully utilized semiannual interim frameworks without sacrificing market stability. Embracing this conditional optionality modernizes U.S. capital markets and respects the maturity of companies with strong internal governance. I commend the Commission for pursuing this modernization effort and urge the swift adoption of the proposed rule. Respectfully submitted, David M. Smith

---

David M Waltz — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David M Waltz Investors need current information. Please keep reporting four times per year.

David Matthews — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Matthews I strongly object to the issue of changing Public Company Reporting from four times yearly to two times yearly. I have investments in many publicly traded companies and adjust my investments after receiving their filings quarterly. In the age of computers there is no reason companies cannot EASILY keep investors informed of the health of their business. The public trusts YOU to make sure we are informed!! Please take this job seriously for the people you represent. Regards, David Matthews

---

David McBrayer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: David McBrayer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reports quarterly. It's our money. We hold the SEC accountable to not allowing those over our money to have less oversight.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

David McLeod — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David McLeod Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is David McLeod. I strongly urge Congress to leave this at quarterly reporting!

David Mepham — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Mepham As an investor it is important to have regular timely updates, and reducing this requirement dilutes the information available to investors and will reduce the amount of small investors: something that the government wants to increase. Only mushrooms and rhubarb thrive in darkness.

David Miers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Miers Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 David Miers - Retired. Quarterly reporting has existed for over 50 years. Why change it? What is the reason for this? Is this just another way to stack the deck? Does this country really need another way to reward the rich and * over the little guy? What is the end game? What has the middle class of the country done that is so egregious that it needs to be penalized with every decision this government makes?

David Minich — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Minich Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It's a bad rule. Unfair to small investors.

David Minich N.A. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Minich It's a bad rule. Unfair to individual investors.

David Morse — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Morse I am an investor in stocks and funds. I think that it is not only prudent to continue the current practice of quarterly reporting by public companies, but also necessary to protect the millions of individual investors like me. We need to understand the state of the business for individual investments and quarterly reports are currently the best way (only way?) to do this. This is especially important as changes in technology and the business environment come faster and faster. Please consider this view and how to continue to protect the individual investors.

David Moser None retired — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Moser In order to have transparency with investments, it is imperative that all shareholders for all companies, be given an earnings report "quarterly," just as it is being done I 2026. Two times a year is unacceptable! Respectfully, David S Moser

---

David Moss None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Moss I do not agree to reducing reporting requirements. Not only does less reporting lead to less transparency and increased uncertainty regarding investment/ownership, statements regarding the burden and expense of reporting are unfounded. Technology, if anything , has enabled significant efficiencies in reporting capabilities.

David Moutner Retired — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Moutner As an individual investor, one of my main sources of information about a company is their reporting of revenue, expenses, margin, etc. Getting this information on a quarterly basis is already limited, going to semi annual reporting will further obscure trends and company performance due to market changes which happen at an accelerate pace compared to the past. Going to semi-annual reporting will also make it more difficult to discern seasonal changes which might be affecting company performance. The argument that this unburdens companies from the over regulation of reporting seems weak in an environment where virtually all companies today are fully automated in this regard and producing quarterly reports requires minimal effort beyond what their accounting systems already provide on a regular basis. Please don't deprive investors, especially individual investors, of important data used to make their investment decisions.

David Mullis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Mullis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do not change reporting if anything make it sooner monthly. Got to have some way to even the score with the insider trading that goes on in congress.

Sent from my iPhone

David N Kwiecinski Former Certified Financial Planner. Certified Public Accountant, retired. Small investor. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David N Kwiecinski I am very concerned about the negative ramifications of reducing the required public company reports from four times a year to only twice a year. This is NOT in the best interests of the public! It is particularly not in the best interests of investors, and particularly for small non-institutional investors who rely on these reports to make informed decisions about their investments. Imagine owning a business and only being brought up to speed every six months. How confident would you be that whoever you left in charge was steering the business in the right direction? Would you trust your investment in that business? Come on, folks! If we are serious about making America great again... if we are truly putting America first... how can we possibly think that less information is better information? Can we pare down the requirements? Make them more user (i.e. investor) friendly? Less regulatory nonsense? I'm sure you understand my point. How does this help the public? Thank you for your attention to this matter.

David N. Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David N. Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it at three months!

David N. Smith
dasmithaus@gmail.com
Tel. 512-203-2374

DAVID OXHANDLER — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: DAVID OXHANDLER Less information is never desirable. Folks who own any fraction of a business, but don't participate on a daily basis require as much detail as possible to make informed decisions. Im my humble opinion earnings reports should be required monthly and even weekly. With the advent of AI that should be a simple and efficient method of keeping stock holders up to date and full informed. The only reason to offer less info would be to shield management from active share holder's participation and total disclosure.

David P Farmer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David P Farmer Someone has to watch out for us regular investors. This coountry needs to stop protecting the billionaires that get all the inside information. With the oil trades scandal, insider politician trading… us regular people just keep getting left in the dark.

David Paeper — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Paeper I strongly encourage the SEC to NOT support the current proposal to allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. As a private investor in America's companies, I believe that greater transparency and more frequent reporting is critical to the safety of my investments. Less information about company finances and business direction is never a good thing from an investment point of view; more information will continue to allow investors and the public to keep an appropriate pulse on the companies where their money is invested. Thank you for your consideration.

David Parker Individual investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Parker This proposal now on the table will allow companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Some argue that fewer reports would reduce costs. Maybe. Although in an age of AI and increasingly efficient disclosure tools, even that point is debatable. Others argue it would ease the pressure to manage quarter to quarter. But short-termism comes from how people react to information, not from the information itself. Taking the reports away doesn't make anyone more patient. It just makes everyone less informed. What isn’t debatable is that less information rarely creates better-informed owners.

David Parsons — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Parsons Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Jodi Parsons Agent
Clients need to know what is going on with their accounts. If we are held accountable. They should be also.

David Phillips — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: David Phillips Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reports quarterly. It's good business. It's reasonable. It helps enforce accountability and creates public trust.

David Plager Motley Fool investor community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Plager I am writing AGAINST the semi-annual reporting rule. Giving investors LESS information on the companies they invest in is counter productive, makes investors less informed and will increase uncertainty and volatility in markets. There is no reasonable counter argument except that companies want to be lazy with less transparency and less accountability. Thanks you

---

David Portwood — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Portwood Less information and communication is never a good approach.

David Powell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Powell I have strong objections to lowering the amount of required information sharing. I understand the idea is to reduce cost and the quarterly focus. Automation is dramatically lowering costs for many processes including reporting. If the company does not disclose issues more frequently, the market and investors are likely going to be more cautious and punishing of bad new. This sounds like a horrible idea. Perhaps we should consider monthly reporting at a minimum. So many other systems are being automated and moving to a constant delivery model. That would be ideal.

David Price — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: David Price Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Continue requiring QUARTERLY reporting! I'm retired. I'm counting on my "nest egg" to carry me through. I rely on the Social Security (which I paid into my whole working life), but provides mere subsistence and is also under attack. Do not return us to the dark ages of publicly owned businesses operating behind increasingly closed doors! Maintain Quarterly Reporting! David Price, Tacoma, WA.

-dp

DAVID R GUINNUP — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: DAVID R GUINNUP Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I support quarterly reporting and CEO Signatures for transparency, early detection, and accountability. Given what CEOs are paid (compared to most workers in the company are paid), they should be responsible for the accuracy of the reports. The public as well as investors deserve reports at least each quarter.

Sent from my iPhone

David R. Forbes The Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David R. Forbes Please maintain 4x per year reporting requirements. Less reporting equals more opportunity for misrepresentation. Thank you.

David R. Onaka — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David R. Onaka I am a military retiree and senior citizen. I actively manage my own retirement portfolio including investing in stocks and options. I depend on business quarterly reports to make informed decisions on my investments which provide the funds I need for daily living expenses. Please do NOT allow this change to business reporting requirements.

David Ray — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Ray Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Let us have at least one guardrail against greedy corporations. Is that too much to ask.

David Rehmeyer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Rehmeyer As an informed investor, to reduce clarity on business information from 4x/year to 2x/year allows companies to obfuscate their business successes or setbacks with disinformation. I emphatically and strongly oppose the idea of reducing the reporting requirement. We need more clarity on corporate activities not less. Transparency in business guides corporate operations to ethical standards and practices. This transparency is achieved through essential reporting on a quarterly basis.

David Renaud CFO — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Renaud Periodic public reporting allows more transparency for the investing public. Less transparency will create more volatility. The current reporting schedule allows investors to better understand companies and make more rational decisions.

David Roche — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: David Roche Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This has worked! Keep the quarterly reports active, and available for accountability!
David Roche
Old Forge, Pa.

David Rohwer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Rohwer I do not support allowing companies to elect to reduce the number of public-company reports from four times a year to just two. I think that’s a mistake!

David ROlandelli MOtley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David ROlandelli I cant imagine anyone managing a business with only 2 reports annually. Qtrly reports are a minimum to keep folks informed on how the business is doing anything else is being less than transparent thank you

---

David Rosky — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Rosky Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting requirement in place. All corporations need oversight, and one of the best mechanisms is the quarterly reporting for public transparency. - David R. Rosky

---

David Ross — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Ross Keep quarterly reports. Quarterly reports provide investors with more transparency. Investors are given timely access to information. It is easier for me to make an informed decision if the information is more current.

David Rossiter Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Rossiter I am very concerned about the proposal to cut in half the reports required of a public company. As an owner of said companies, I deserve to know the state of the business more than twice per year. Transparency is critical in an era where lack of transparency is already a problem. Please don't allow public companies to withhold critical information from their owners for longer than the current rules allow.

DAVID RUSNAK — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: DAVID RUSNAK Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We as investors must require 4 times a year to keep the arrows straight. A 1000% no vote for me.

Sent via the Samsung Galaxy S23 5G, an AT&T 5G smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

David Schneebeck Private investor — Jun 23, 2026 Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Schneebeck I think changing public companies amount of reporting under the Regulator Fair Disclosure (from to 2) is a big mistake. One of the procedures I apply is to check a companies recent Disclosures. For me to see if they're on the pathway on which I'd like. Reporting twice yearly affords too much time between reports.

David Schut — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Schut Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It's essential. Individual small investors already operate at a great disadvantage to large ones. Don't make it even more unfair. David Schut, retired attorney

Sent from AT&T Yahoo Mail on Android

David Serrano — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Serrano Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 David Serrano, DJ. Quarterly reporting is important to me because it provides timely, transparent information that helps me make informed investment decisions. Receiving financial updates every three months allows me to evaluate a company's performance, identify emerging risks or opportunities before they become larger issues, and determine whether management is effectively executing its strategy. More frequent reporting also promotes accountability, reduces the information gap between corporate insiders and investors, and helps ensure that stock prices reflect current business conditions rather than outdated data. As an investor, I rely on regular, accurate disclosures to monitor my investments, assess risk, and make decisions based on current facts rather than waiting six months for critical financial information.

David Serrano
321-297-4402
DJDavidSerrano@gmail.com

David Sherman Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Sherman Any reduction in frequency of reporting is a bad idea. It is not an investor-friendly move. The frequency of disclosure under current rules is vital for transparency, accountability, and investor protection, especially in our time of accelerating movement and change. I am a member of the Motley Fool community, and I endorse the Fool's position on this matter.

David Snyder — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Snyder Dear Secretary, I am a retail investor nearing retirement, and I am writing to strongly oppose proposed rule S7-2026-15. Transitioning from quarterly to semiannual reporting will directly harm investors in my demographic. As a near-retiree, my primary financial goal is capital preservation. Unlike younger investors, I do not have a 20- or 30-year time horizon to recover from a sudden corporate collapse or severe mismanagement. Quarterly Form 10-Q filings are my primary defense mechanism. They provide the timely transparency I need to spot operational declines and reallocate my hard-earned savings before catastrophic damage occurs. A six-month information vacuum is far too long. If a company experiences a severe downturn at the start of a half-year period, retail investors like myself will be left completely in the dark for 180 days. By the time the semiannual report is finally released, the damage to my retirement portfolio could be irreversible, permanently altering my standard of living in retirement. Furthermore, this rule widens the information gap between Wall Street and Main Street. Institutional investors have the resources to track alternative data or maintain direct access to corporate executives during a six-month blackout. Retail investors nearing retirement rely strictly on public disclosures to make prudent, agile decisions. I urge the Commission to reject this proposal and maintain the quarterly reporting standard that protects vulnerable retail portfolios. David J. Snyder

---

David Spradlin none — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Spradlin As an investor I need as much current info about a company as possible, not less. Going to just twice a year, allows companies to keep me in the dark about red flags (like losing money or too leveraged) which may make me lose more money in my investment should I elect to sell than I otherwise would. With certain information I may elect to sell sooner, before it loses more money than I would have without that information. More information is always better to make decisions. Why change it if it isn't broke.

David Stanford — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Stanford Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Do something meaningful like investigate insider trading of our elected officials not reducing information available to common citizens.

David Stebenne, Individual Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Stebenne, Individual Investor This seems to be a ridiculous proposal. I need more accurate information as a business owner, not less. I need more timely information as a business owner, not less. Costs of procuring information are going to $0 with all the technology we have, yet timely, accurate and insightful information is more valuable than ever. The proposal to reduce quarterly corporate reporting will only serve to obscure important information from the investing public, and increase the opportunity for insiders to profit under the cloak of darkness. Please do not take away any of the reporting requirements now in place. We need timely, accurate, fair and honest transparency.

---

david strout — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: david strout Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 They had no problem what they did to our society and need to continue subjecting to legal action

---

David Sweeney — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Sweeney Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I need quarterly reports for my retirement funds. Please do the right thing and keep reporting requirements as the are.

David Tan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Tan this is terrible - we need more transparency, not less!

David Taylor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Taylor Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is LESS transparency not more. You are putting trillions of dollars of savings at risk by allowing corporations to hide malfeasance.

Best Regards,
David Taylor

David Traslavina — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Traslavina Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 David Traslavina, semi-retired.

Transparency is what keeps those responsible behaving in the interests of investors. It requires those responsible to be impartial, fair, & equitable. Therefore transparency is like Justice. "Justice delayed is justice Denied". Quarterly Reports do not seem burdensome on publicly traded companies with almost unlimited resources. Six Month Reports portend to be just another way for the wealthy to acquire more wealth at the expense of small investors. KEEP Quarterly Reports.

David Traslavina — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: David Traslavina Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 David Traslavina, semi-retired. Transparency is what keeps those responsible behaving in the interests of investors. It requires those responsible to be impartial, fair, & equitable. Therefore transparency is like Justice. "Justice delayed is justice Denied". Quarterly Reports do not seem burdensome on publicly traded companies with almost unlimited resources. Six Month Reports portend to be just another way for the wealthy to acquire more wealth at the expense of small investors. KEEP Quarterly Reports.

David Turner Retired investigator — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Turner It is very simple I own a piece of the company when I own stock. If you owned a small company and your employees wanted to tell you that they thought it was a good idea to reduce the timeliness of the information about what is going on in the company, would you say oh yeah great idea? No, instead you would review what that employee was doing in his job. This proposal is a “tail wagging the dog”proposal. Who’s money is it anyway!

David Utoft — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Utoft I believe, like many other “Fools” that the current regulations with regard to reporting should remain as they are.

David Valko — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: David Valko Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
The choice to reduce reporting to less than quarterly will be abused with time. This can only benefit those who wish to use insider knowledge to abuse the system. The costs associated with quarterly reporting are not substantial enough to even consider this option, its ludicrous. I am opposed to this lax approach that can only harm small investors.

David van Reenen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David van Reenen Please do not allow companies to report semi annually.

David Van Vooren — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Van Vooren I would like to see the quarterly reporting requirement remain in force.

David Vance — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Vance As individual investors we rely on company transparency. It is not acceptable to only receive insight into the companies we own every six months. I strongly recommend against changing public company reporting rules from quarterly reports to every six months.

David Vandersteen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Vandersteen Writing to strongly support QUARTERLY rather than semi-annual reporting. It is imperative that we, the investors, have up to date accurate information to assess our investments. changing to semi-annual updates diminishes our fund of knowledge and our ability to adapt to market changes.

David Vaughn — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Vaughn As an individual investor I would be disappointed to receive information about my investments less frequently. In this age of AI I don't see any significant savings to companies filing less and I believe that allowing six months between reports would probably cause more violent swings in price. More public information as frequently as possible is simply more valuable especially to those with limited access otherwise. Please continue quarterly reporting.

DAVID VERDUCCI — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: DAVID VERDUCCI Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it the way it is!

Sent from my iPhone

David Wall Retired — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Wall Please keep public reporting at 4 times per year.

David Watson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Watson Less frequency in reporting only reduces the information stock owners get. It changes nothing about how the business is run. With all the automation available to gather data today I can't believe less frequent reporting i.e. quarterly to semiannual would significantly affect costs for the business in question. Thank you.

David Weihausen The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Weihausen Decreasing the reporting requirements from 4 times a year to 2 is a horrible idea. Investors need more information, not less. Lessening the requirement to 2 times a year deprives investors of the information they need to make informed, intelligent decisions. The notion that this idea would reduce cost to companies is marginal at best. With AI and digital applications available today, cost for providing the data to investors is negligible and the savings would be even less, all while giving company management the opportunity to avoid responsibility for their decisions for longer periods of time. This increases the risk to shareholders. The only group gaining an advantage with this proposal is company management at the detriment of investors and shareholders.

David White — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David White Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 David White , I am a Nurse of 43 years. In what world would it make sense to go bi annual.

Sent from my iPhone

David Withers — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Withers I believe that companies should report financial information, such as earnings, four times a year. It would keep investors better informed, thanks, Dave Withers

---

David Wixom — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: David Wixom Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The quarterly report promotes honesty, honesty mean a healthier economy for our nation.

David Zawislak — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: David Zawislak Keep the reporting quarterly.

Davis Kramer, DJK Trade Solutions, llc. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Davis Kramer, DJK Trade Solutions, llc. I strongly oppose the Securities and Exchange Commission’s proposed rule Semiannual Reporting (File No. S7-2026-15). This proposal allows public companies to switch from mandatory quarterly filings on Form 10-Q to optional semiannual disclosures on a new Form 10-S . Replacing a standard that has reliably served the U.S. market since 1970 with a six-month reporting interval will severely harm investors. A lengthy information gap directly undermines market efficiency. Retail and institutional investors alike rely heavily on timely, standardized financial data to determine a company's underlying strength. Furthermore, delaying disclosures to a biannual schedule will fuel severe market volatility when material changes in corporate performance are finally made public . For more than 50 years, quarterly transparency has been the bedrock of public market stability and investor protection. I strongly urge the Commission to reject this proposal and maintain the mandatory Form 10-Q reporting framework.

Dawid Schalk Jansen van Vuuren — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dawid Schalk Jansen van Vuuren I believe that quarterly earnings reports provide stock owners with essential information needed to make informed decisions regarding valuation and ownership. Therefore, I do not support the newly proposed bill.

Dawn — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dawn Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is disingenuous in order to assist billionaires and secret trading.
Keep current SEC reporting guidelines

Dawn Campbell

Dawn Barrick — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Dawn Barrick Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need accountability from our CEO'S.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Dawn E Jordan Influencing Healthcare, LLC — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dawn E Jordan My expertise is communication in healthcare, where less is never more. I am not in favor of reducing the burden of communication with stakeholders of publically held companies.

Dawn Elza — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dawn Elza Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dawn Elza IT Security Consultant

Please refrain from altering the quarterly reporting requirement. We need this information so we can make informed decisions. Thank you

---

Dawn Gartin The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dawn Gartin Please do not reduce the reports required. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty.

Dawn Gottschalk — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dawn Gottschalk Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is another way to screw the American citizen. Keeping us blind of our financial stability.

Sent from my iPhone

Dawn Hinojosa — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dawn Hinojosa Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please don't allow more secrecy. Quarterly reporting is vital and fair. Anything less, is NOT.

Sent from my iPhone

Dawn Lewis King — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dawn Lewis King Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Your job is to protect the general public from all harm Including financial. Keeping it quarterly is an important law to help protect us. We appreciate your support on this bill.

Thank you in advance,
Dawn King from Florida.

Dawn Lewis King

Dawn McCoy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Dawn McCoy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: I have worked 35 years to build a portfolio that can foster a decent retirement. With rising inflation and the vicissitudes of daily life as an older person, I must keep my earnings invested to keep up.

Do not BLINDFOLD me and others who have trusted that our leaders and key businesses will be transparent as light so can have survive our futures. Do not let the oligarchs win and the common people be swept off to wallow in a dark corner. With my many years following the stock market, we know this too well: a 6-month blackout will let fraud fester while the wealthy have the inside scoop. We deserve to keep the current window openon what is happening to the companies representing our retirement and investment funds. HEAR OUR VOICE.

Dawn Meifwrt N/A — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dawn Meifwrt Absolute no to the change. We must have transparency for the financial decision making process of investors.

Dawn Sagaser — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Dawn Sagaser Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
My husband and I have recently retired, and have most of the money we saved over 40+ years invested in the stock market. We are dismayed to learn you want to decrease reporting from quarterly to bi-annual. That would be a move in the wrong direction, with less accountability and putting retirees like us at greater financial risk.
Charles and Dawn Sagaser

Dawn Ward — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dawn Ward Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting works great. If it's not broke don't fix it.

Dawn Weber — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dawn Weber Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Information is a key metric for fund managers. Continue to send quarterly.

Dawn Weber

Dawn Wylie — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Dawn Wylie Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly!! Says Dawn Wylie. Don’t mess with things that aren’t broken!

Sent from my iPhone

DD Zalepa — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: DD Zalepa Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly reporting. Things change so fast 6 mos cannot keep up with the changes that occur. Moving to six months is irresponsible in a society that's moving so fast in all other ways.
Donna Zalepa

DEA KELLY — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: DEA KELLY Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The only way to assure reality on the numbers is to keep CLOSE to the numbers. Too many opportunities in extensions.

Deadra Morrison — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deadra Morrison Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reports keep people on their toes and obeying the law. Start cutting back and before long they won't be reporting more than once a year. No changes, period.

Deadra Morrison — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Deadra Morrison Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The whole purpose of the law is to insure people, especially those in positions of power, are held accountable. That needs to be forever. Not temporarily.

Dean Barlow — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dean Barlow A reduction in reporting by a publicly held corporation will greatly impede my ability to analyze and evaluate the corporation's performance properly.

Dean Cho — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dean Cho Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly disclosing! Favor more disclosure, not less, to protect the investing public from unscrupulous insiders.

Dean Haskell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dean Haskell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a former stock analyst, and investor quarterly reports are vital to keep information flowing in a rapidly changing world. Keep it QUARTERLY!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Dean Hernandez — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dean Hernandez Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I oppose File No. S7-2026-15. Quarterly reporting gives everyday investors timely, consistent information and helps keep the markets fair. Reducing that transparency would make it harder for the public to evaluate companies on equal footing.

Dean Hunt — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dean Hunt As a shareholder of various companies, and to maintain the proper cadence of information and transparency, I want to ensure that public-companies maintain the 4x per year reporting cycle and structure just the way it is today. I do not want this reduced to 2x per year.

Dean McDaniel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Dean McDaniel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please leave the reporting quarterly. We have enough economic issues at present to deal with. A change in reporting is not going too help.

Sent from my iPhone

Dean Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dean Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dean Smith, retired Fire Fighter. Unregulated capitalism only works for corporations and billionaires. I am neither. The SEC has the reigns, please hold onto them and Keep it Quartly.

Deana Caldwell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Deana Caldwell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No. Please do not do this.

DeAna stanley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: DeAna stanley I want to continue to be informed of everything pertaining to my investments! I insist on transparency with regards to my investments/ companies where my investments are held.

Deane Billings — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deane Billings Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 If they want it bi annually then do it monthly !!!

Deanna — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deanna As an investor I would like to view more than 2 reports a year from the companies I am investing in. The Motley Fool Community.

Deanna Estep — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deanna Estep Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The SEC is corrupt. I believe the SEC should be dismantled and reorganized. I also believe that the board should be made up of citizens that have absolutely no stake in the stock market.

Deb Bigwood — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Deb Bigwood Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This proposed change reeks of insider corruption to the detriment of the average American. Keep Quartely reporting.

Thank you.

Deb Crowley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Deb Crowley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Deb Crowley. Palm Coast, FL. Keep Quarterly reporting. History doesn't lie.

Deb Dennis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Deb Dennis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting should be mandatory. Work for the citizens, not solely for the corrupt rich.

Deb Ernst — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Deb Ernst Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
It is imperative that quarterly reporting be maintained. I am a retail investor who is retired. Quarterly reports allow me to make timely decisions regarding my retirement accounts to insure financial stability.

Deb Grosse — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Deb Grosse Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly earnings! Calculating the current value of my investments with semi-annual reporting, my investments could drop 38.2%!! Us Baby Boomers are most likely the biggest majority of personal investors, and we don’t have enough life years left to recoup that size of a loss. Quarterly reporting must stay in place!
Deb Grosse, Retired, Iowa

Deb Kraft — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Deb Kraft Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it!!!!!! For the people!!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Deb McLeod — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Deb McLeod Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
What is the purpose of taking away the minute transparency the small investor has. With companys having to report quartly makes sense unless they have something to hide. Please look it over carefully and evaulate the intentions of this chsnge.
Thanks

Deb Simon Stock Owner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deb Simon Stop this now!

Deb Wiles — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deb Wiles Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Deb. Retired teacher. This sounds like a way to grift more money for the billionaires, and a way to keep the rest of us in the poor house. Another shady way to screw the have nots, which is most of us.

Debbi Slavin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debbi Slavin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need transparency with these companies and our investing! They have our money and we need to see what is happening with it- minimally every quarter -- how about monthly?!

Regards,
Debora Sprague-Slavin
Debbi Slavin

Debbie Anderson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debbie Anderson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I have to live in my meager investments the rest of my life. I need to know what is happening with them. Do not allow the reporting to go to 6 months.

Debbie C — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Debbie C Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Ok, how about us citizens hide all our earnings....uummmm. Get real people. Alot can happen, buried and hidden in 6 months. How much kickback are you all getting?

---

debbie celadondesigns.com — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: debbie celadondesigns.com Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There has always been fraud. Don’t make it easier. The companies don’t need the little bit of savings. There is already a lot of scepticism around government and companies

Get Outlook for iOS

Debbie Edwards — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debbie Edwards Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need accountability from the large companies that make the large dividends. We need to know their every move as soon as possible as our funds are NOT BOTTOMLESS. We need to know when our accounts are tanking and when they are flourishing. Investors have time to save themselves from losing everything, we don't have that luxury. Our pensions are only a drop in the bucket.
Debbie Edwards
Retired State Worker
redbonztou@yahoo.com

Debbie Flower — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debbie Flower Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Debbie Flower, Retired
Absolutely keep quarterly reporting. Safeguards are unfortunately necessary to hold corruption down.

Debbie Frew — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Debbie Frew Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Absolutely not, at this time and age of computers information needs to be kept up to the minute .

Sent from my iPhone

Debbie Guest — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Debbie Guest Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 A change to semi-annual reporting is detrimental to investors, especially seniors. Decisions about where to invest and when to change/adjust portfolios must have more frequent data in order to make informed decisions and to protect their retirement savings. Ongoing education and current data are critical especially with the projected failure of social security. The change would seem to increase fiduciary liability.

Debbie Howell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Debbie Howell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

Stop before it starts no need for 6 month blackouts, we deserve more transparency not less

---

Debbie Mills — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Debbie Mills Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
It is extremely important to us that the companies we invest in provide Quarterly financial reports. We have a right to know that our dollars are being invested wisely and appropriately. Quarterly financial reports lessen the likelihood of corporate malfeasance and malpractice.

Debbie Plott — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Debbie Plott Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This is outrageous. This will affect you in hiding your actions and not do your jobs.

Debbie Ramsay — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Debbie Ramsay Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 In these times of greed and corruption, transparency is vital. It helps reassure investors and builds trust and loyalty. My husband and I are both retired now and our investments are very important to us and ensure we are able to pay our bills and enjoy this time in our lives after working so hard to get here.
Deborah Ramsay

Sent from my iPhone

Debbie Reback — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Debbie Reback Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 PLEASE DO NOT REVERT TO SEMI-ANNUAL REPORTING. Any action that appears to harm small businesses and the middle class is simply another method for enriching the upper class. Stop harming the hard earned savings of the middle and lower classes, especially in today's economy. If you take away such a significant portion of my savings, it would force me back into the workplace. It is a change that is not necessary and would be very harmful to many people.
Debra Reback, Retired
Tarpon Springs, Florida

Debbie Rowledge — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debbie Rowledge Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I believe it should remain quarterly. I demand accountable because I just don't trust you

---

debbie vanslate — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: debbie vanslate Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Joe Putich, retired, market investor since 1976. Qtr reporting is the report card for individual investors, timely investing requires an informed market investor. Would you drive your car without a gas gauge. Maintain qtr reporting.

Get Outlook for Android

Debbie Wolf — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debbie Wolf Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Longer gaps create unfair advantage for corporate insiders. I rely on my quarterly reports to make good decisions

---

Debi Hernandez — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Debi Hernandez Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The SEC's proposed semi-annual reporting for corporations is unacceptable. This hurts the small investors. As 70 year old retiree, I depend on quarterly reporting to ensure I'm maximizing my returns since Social Security may not be there some day! Don't do this. Debra Hernandez - Retiree.

Deborah Attardo — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deborah Attardo Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep the reports to 4 times a year, as has proven to be what is needed. No one ever does what they should unless supervised. Especially private and public entities. Thank you Deborah Attardo

Sent from my iPad

Deborah Brooks — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deborah Brooks Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It is ridiculous to think the public should be removed from the knowledge of the everyday stock market activity on a daily and quarterly basis. It’s nothing short of criminal. Don’t make the mistake you’re trying to make. You will lose.

Sent from my iPhone

Deborah Caldwell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deborah Caldwell Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 With all the corporate shenanigans and laws benefiting corporations we need not hide anything more. Our whole retirement could be at stake. Our pension is funded by investments that could much more easily go
'haywire' under the new rules. Please, for the sake of the little people do not let this happen.

Deborah Caldwell

Deborah Catacosinos — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Deborah Catacosinos Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 from D. Catacosinos please keep the quarterly reports, and these uncertain tim hi es it is so important to stay informed

Deborah Cohen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Cohen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
More oversight!!! Not less. We need to protect our people... there was a reason a New Deal was needed decades past.

Deborah Corlis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Deborah Corlis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Accountability!
We need it from you. And YOU NEED US!

Sent from my iPhone

Deborah Femat — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deborah Femat Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Deborah Ford Femat, retired Architect. Having been involved in multi-million dollar projects that involved numerous owners, consultants, contractors, & sub-contractors, I know the necessity of catching a mistake as early as possible in order to prevent calamitous ramifications later. As in our democracy, all parties are interdependent; all will feel catastrophic, costly effects without regular, professional, knowledgeable, dedicated interactions, reviews, and comments.

Regards,
Deborah Ford Femat
3306 Stardust Dr.
Austin, Tx. 78757
737-296-9533

Deborah Femat — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Re: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deborah Femat Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Postscript: Remember the hanging hotel pedestrian bridge in Kansas City that collapsed killing numerous people?
The shop drawings were not reviewed properly due to a project rush…. In other words, the review process failed.

Deborah Ford Femat, Emeritus Architect

> On Jun 23, 2026, at 9:49 AM, Deborah Femat <deborah.femat@g.austincc.edu> wrote:
>
> Deborah Ford Femat, retired Architect. Having been involved in multi-million dollar projects that involved numerous owners, consultants, contractors, & sub-contractors, I know the necessity of catching a mistake as early as possible in order to prevent calamitous ramifications later. As in our democracy, all parties are interdependent; all will feel catastrophic, costly effects without regular, professional, knowledgeable, dedicated interactions, reviews, and comments.
>
> Regards,
> Deborah Ford Femat
> 3306 Stardust Dr.
> Austin, Tx. 78757
> 737-296-9533
>
>

Deborah Goorey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Goorey Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: Stop doin what Trump says! You need to do what the American people say. This new change in reporting is bad.
Do your job without TRUMP involved. He needs removed from office!!

Deborah Halter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deborah Halter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 America needs true accountability and honor. Let's not build in holes to weaken being accountable and strong. True leaders aren't afraid of being seen doing the right thing. There is enough distrust in America, let's not create more.

Deborah Halter
LTC (RET.) U.S. Army

Deborah Haught — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Deborah Haught Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 NO!

Sent from my iPhone

Deborah Ingraham — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Ingraham Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dear SEC Staff:

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this important proposal. I oppose any changes to the current quarterly financial reporting requirements. I am requesting that your agency rules continue to require quarterly reporting to maintain accountability in our financial system.

When rules such as these are loosened, investors suffer and a financial crisis inevitably follows as we have seen in the past. Six months is too long to wait to discover that our investments are at risk. For these reasons, I urge you to resist requests to loosen the quarterly reporting rules.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,

Deborah Ingraham
Attorney at Law
Chicago, Illinois

Deborah J Rainville — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah J Rainville I am opposed to proposed Rule S7-2026-15. Imagine owning a business your retirement depends on, and getting updates from your managers only twice a year. That's effectively what's being proposed by Rule S7-2026-15 . Companies will continue operating every day. Products will be launched. Customers will be won and lost. Strategies will succeed and fail. Yet under this proposal, owners would receive only half as many official updates about the businesses they own. Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater; because of this, Rule S7-2026-15 is a wrong choice for the SEC.

Deborah Jones — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Jones I want the rule to remain as it is with quarterly reporting, full transparency

---

Deborah Levitov — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Deborah Levitov Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The quartet reportedly should be kept in place. These CEOs should be held accountable. It has obviously worked and cutting these reports in half can only benefit the CEOs and reduce transparency.

Deborah Levitov

Sent from my iPhone

Deborah Mailander — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Mailander Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
As I am preparing to retire, and am dependent on the private markets for much of my retirement savings, I strongly oppose reducing reporting requirements for corporations that are publicly traded.

As shareholder, quarterly reporting to the public is fair, reasonable, and provides accountability. Me and my investment managers, like many others, assess market strength on a frquent basis. Reducing reporting to only twice a year, or reducing the scope of reporting harms my interests and unfairly tilts power over the markets toward the corporations, not the people investing in them.

Deborah Major — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Major Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Companies need to report quarterly and the ceos need to put their name on the dotted line to certify the truthfulness of their financial statements. Dodging and lying is becoming normal in our society which is shameful.

Deborah Major
Bloomington, IN

Deborah Martini — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Martini At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners. Please keep the public-company quarterly reporting as is.

Deborah McNeill — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deborah McNeill Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly reports. The transparency is vital to keeping trust in the U. S. financial markets.
Deborah McNeill

Deborah Olmstead — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deborah Olmstead Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The SEC should continue to require & keep quarterly reports. We already know the dangers of losing this form of accountability.

Sent from my iPhone

Deborah Parker — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Parker Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Ending quarterly reporting is a perfect example of a terrible idea. You should be ashamed. Knowledge is power, and you're taking away the power of investors, wothout whom the market becomes worthless. Quarterly is infrequent enough, but we are accustomed to it. Anything less is blindfolding us all. NO. Don't you dare.
I have been invested in the market since I took my first professional position, and will not have you tamper with the system as it exists, flawed and top-heavy as it is, with known avenues for fraud, most commonly perpetrated by insiders for their private gain, and/or to gain influence over the people in what is supposed to be OUR government.

Who do you think you work for? It should be all of us Americans, and nothing less than that.

Deborah Pfeifer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Deborah Pfeifer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Just more privilege BS. Let the free market be free.

Sent from my iPhone

Deborah Rhoads — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Deborah Rhoads Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We must have full and transparent quarterly reporting for all publicly traded businesses!

Sent from my iPad

Deborah Roy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deborah Roy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Deborah Roy, RN, you have my money to make a living and I should be able to see what you are doing with it. You should transparent as anyone there is. You are the biggest gambler other than the government I know

Sent from my iPhone

Deborah Scearce-Miles — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Deborah Scearce-Miles Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There needs to be more accountability, not less. This disastrous SEC proposal will inevitably bring on another massive economic downturn that will eventually "Trickle Up" to the bottom line of the top investors.
D. Miles, Program Manager/COO

Deborah Sitarski — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deborah Sitarski Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please retain quarterly reporting. As a widow who is also a stakeholder and tax payer, I oppose cutting reporting by half. A mere two times a year doesn’t favor me, it favors folks like ENRON.

PLEASE Remember the ENRON fiasco.

Deb

Deborah Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reports where they are now! Don't change anything at all. Keep all people honest to others! Don't fix if it's not broken! As a private client, I've tried hard to keep an emergency fund for family emergency's. Please don't take my hard work savings away from me! Deborah Smith, Retired caregiver, Dayton, Nevada

Sent from my iPad

Deborah Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reports where they are now! Don't change anything at all. Keep all people honest to others! Don't fix if it's not broken! As a public investor, I've tried hard to keep an emergency fund for family emergency's. Please don't take my hard work savings away from me! Deborah Smith, Retired caregiver, Dayton, Nevada

Sent from my iPad

Deborah Stenger — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Stenger Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
We need to not change quarterly reports.

Deborah Stoll — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Deborah Stoll Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quarterly signatures signing off on their business. Stop corruption in these United States. We the people are tired of this garbage now hold all these business owners and controllers responsible for everything!

Sent from my iPhone

Deborah Thomas Motley Fool member — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Thomas Do not allow company semi-annual reporting to take effect.

Deborah Thorne — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Thorne Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
we do not want any changes to the quarterly reports on the exchange! This is outrageous and unfair and hurts small business ! Do not allow this!

Deborah West — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Deborah West Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Deborah West, Flight Attendant, Dallas,TX
This should not be allowed' happen! Companies should report quarterly!!
Americans work hard for their money & investments. If allowing Companies to only report twice a year has already in the past shown investors will lose their money then it should stay as it is now with them Reporting Quarterly

Sent from my iPhone

Deborah Williams Retired individual — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deborah Williams Please continue to report quarterly. I am soon to be 80. I need it reported MORE often, not Less!

Debra — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Debra Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 History shows us that this move could be disastrous for most, if not all investors. Please do not tamper with the current system. It's obvious that it is working well. Thank you!

Debra S. Brown
Investor
Richmond, IN

Sent from my iPhone

Debra Allen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debra Allen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Can't this administration even PRETEND to care about anyone other than the biggest people in any business?

Debra Batey — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Debra Batey Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Let's protect the employees from there pension being ripped off

Sent from my iPhone

Debra Beck — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Debra Beck Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We are not big investors. Much of our retirement savings, however, depends on us knowing how to invest. As seniors, we have the right to know the facts — quarterly.

Sent from my iPad

Debra Blanchard — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Debra Blanchard Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 So much corruption, it's disgusting!! CEOs MUST be held accountable on a quarterly basis! They're pocketing way too much money playing slippery slope!!

Debra A. Blanchard

Debra Breeden — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Debra Breeden Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Why break something that has a proven record of working? In this day and age, we need more accountability not less. Don't let unethical politicians and business heads make changes that allow them to conceal crooked practices. Stand up for the general public and KEEP IT QUARTERLY!

Sent from my iPhone

Debra Davis — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Debra Davis Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Companies need to continue to report quarterly. History has shown reporting twice a year leads to fraud and hurts investors. For the protection of investors quarterly reporting should continue

---

Debra Doonan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debra Doonan Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Debra Doonan. I work for an anesthesia group doing all Medical billing and coding as well as patient interaction and contract negotiations. I believe keeping quarterly reporting for financial information is very important. Quarterly allows for more transparent business practices. Changing it could hide important Financial indicators. I do not want my investments to be compromised to save large corporations from providing Financial information.

Get Outlook for Android

Debra Dubberly — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debra Dubberly Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I rely on quarterly reports to keep me informed and updated on the company's progress and failures!! Plus it is very important to keep companies honest and above board.

Sent from my iPhone

Debra Glett — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debra Glett Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Debra Glett, medical staff, we do not have pension plans any more, being able to choose our own investments and track them accurately and efficiently is essential. We will consider moving less money into stocks and stock funds if we cannot get accurate quarterly information. Will stick with Treasury and bonds more. You will drive people out of the market.

Debra Glett — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debra Glett Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Debra Glett, medical staff, we do not have pension plans any more, being able to choose our own investments and track them accurately and efficiently is essential. We will consider moving less money into stocks and stock funds if we cannot get accurate quarterly information.

Debra Harrah — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Debra Harrah Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It works for me just fine how it is. Stop trying to fix what isn't broken for your benefit and to my detriment Debra Harrah, retired citizen, I keep getting financially screwed by changes

Sent from my iPhone

Debra Hart Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Debra Hart I do not believe reducing public reporting to twice a year serves the investor community at all. Information is power and people should have frequent, regular communication from organizations where they choose to invest their harder dollars.

Debra Kaylor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debra Kaylor Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As an investor, I implore that reporting remain quarterly without change.

Sent from my iPhone

Debra Palmquist — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Debra Palmquist Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep mandatory reporting quarterly. My name is Debra Palmquist, my job title is Chief Manager of the Palmquist Living Trust, and I am responsible for its assets.

Sincerely,

Debra Palmquist

Debra Perfili — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Debra Perfili Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep them in jail!

Debra Riddel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debra Riddel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We are retired and need to live on our investments. We cannot afford to lose one third or one half of our carefully accumulated nest egg.
Thomas Riddel
Small business owner

Debra Sheets — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debra Sheets Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Good business practices review accounts and make decisions. I do that monthly!

Debra Sheets — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debra Sheets Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Good business practices review accounts and make decisions.

Debra Sunday — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Debra Sunday Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 A lot can go wrong in six months—things like failed product launches, rising debt, lawsuits, or losing customers. Right now, companies have to share this kind of information every three months. The new rule would let them wait up to six months before telling anyone. That gives insiders plenty of time to quietly sell their shares (maybe to you or your ETF) before the bad news causes the stock to drop.

Look at big scams like Enron, WorldCom, Madoff, and what happened in 2008. These were all made worse because of unclear and delayed financial reports. Quarterly reports don’t stop fraud completely, but they make it harder for companies to hide problems for too long. What if Enron only had to report twice a year?

Keeping reports every three months helps protect investors by making sure important information gets out quickly.

Debra Wilson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Debra Wilson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the Quarterly Reporting!

Declan Cannon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Declan Cannon Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners and less information rarely creates better-informed owners. Less transparency doesn’t eliminate uncertainty. It increases it.

Declan Cummins The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Declan Cummins At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

---

dedefarmgirl — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: dedefarmgirl Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stop with all of the B>S> Leave it quarterly

---

Dee Bee — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dee Bee Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I would even like to have monthly reporting. Six months at a time is not nearly enough. If it ain't broke don't fix it.

Dee Dee Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dee Dee Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 More transparency is needed not less. Keep these financials quarterly please!
Diana Smith, MSA, RD

Sent from my iPhone

Dee Erb — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Dee Erb Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I oppose S7-2026-15. As a retired person with a limited income, it's important for me to receive quarterly statements to make wise financial decisions.
Dee Erb
Retired

Get Outlook for iOS

Dee Harth — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dee Harth Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep large companies accountable by keeping the reporting quarterly!

Dee Harth — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dee Harth Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Desiree and I am disabled... I believe the SEC should Keep large companies accountable by keeping the reporting quarterly! Why should they get a break, and what do they have to hide???

Dee Hopper — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Dee Hopper Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep It Quarterly! Knowledge for maintaining investments helps the little guy.
Dee Hopper, Retired, Burlington, KY

Sent from my iPhone

Dee Klausman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dee Klausman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dear SEC:

Please continue to protect investors. Keep the rule the way it is. Quarterly reporting is more transparent and provides some accountability which we, as investors, deserve. Protect those who need it most.

Sincerely,
Deardee Klausman

Dee McCown — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dee McCown Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I do not agree with changing from quarterly reporting for corporations. Keep it how it is.
Deirdre McCown. Retired.

Sent from my iPhone

Dee Meyer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dee Meyer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dear SEC,

Please reconsider maintaining Quarterly Reporting. It is so very obvious that the proposed change is an underhanded move - please reconsider if you don't want to be remembered for corruption and poor judgement. America's investors, large and small are counting on you to do the right thing!!!

- D. Meyer, Retired I.T.

Deena Brannon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Deena Brannon Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Changing from quarterly reporting to annual reporting would be reckless. I could not trust any company who operated this way!

Deena Eshom — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deena Eshom We need to stay informed, not less informed

---

Deepak Arulkannan — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Deepak Arulkannan I worry that reduced transparency will make it hard for individual investors like me to make good investing decisions. Today, retail investors are able to compete with institutional investors because of data democracy and I worry this takes us back in time and is favorable for corporations and institutional investors only.

---

deesma — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: deesma Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting. Watchful eyes means less chance for corruption.

Sent from my Galaxy

Deidre Hardison — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Deidre Hardison Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Thank you for sharing this information. Keep up the great work.

Deirdre Ketcham — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Deirdre Ketcham Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:

keep companies CEO accountable do not change the rules for quarterly reports.

---

del ericson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: del ericson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reports. They are the window into the publicly held companies and are the first sign things are going good or bad or just follow the trend in a company that folks have invested in. Not everyone can attend the corporate meetings to ask questions of the corporate management. The quarterly reports keep investors informed and corporations honest.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Delana Austin Retired Business owner — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Delana Austin Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the SEC's proposed rule changes under S7-2026-15. I am writing to express my opposition to the proposal as currently drafted. While I support strong and transparent markets, I believe these changes would create more harm than benefit for investors like me. From my perspective, the rule introduces unnecessary complexity and compliance burdens that will fall disproportionately on smaller firms and individual investors. Instead of improving market integrity, the proposal risks reducing access, increasing costs, and narrowing the range of investment options available to people who rely on these markets for long-term financial security. Several definitions and reporting requirements in the proposal are overly broad and unclear. As an investor, I am concerned that this ambiguity will lead to inconsistent interpretations, excessive filings, and operational strain—none of which improve transparency in a meaningful way. Disclosures should help investors make informed decisions, not overwhelm them with technical or duplicative information that obscures what truly matters. I am also concerned about the practical feasibility of implementing these changes. The proposal underestimates the time, systems, and resources required for firms to comply. A rushed or overly rigid implementation timeline would create disruption without delivering proportional benefits. For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to reconsider the scope of the proposal, refine the definitions and reporting thresholds, and reassess whether the intended goals can be achieved through less burdensome and more targeted measures. Thank you for considering my perspective.

Delia San Pedro — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Delia San Pedro Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
The Americans need be informed consistently informed SEC quarterly reports, obviously for the fact that information is education so we are concerned citizens!

Delia San Pedro — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Delia San Pedro Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Just shows that all government agencies under this administration is corrupting our democratic system of checks and balances and favoring big corporations who bribe trump and the repugnants to loosen regulations which would boost their profits at the expense of American consumer protection!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Delia Tuleja — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Delia Tuleja Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Delia Tuleja, Retired Administrator

Where money is involved, more oversight is needed, not less. As a retiree, I've worked a lifetime to save for this time period in my life. I want to see quarterly reports continue simply for peace of mind.

Sent from my iPhone

Delilah H. Scott — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Delilah H. Scott Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Entonces must not happen again. I know lots of paperwork, but the accountabilityis still there.

Delilah H. Scott
Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Della — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Della Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Oh Hell no. I want prison time for insider trading. No aiding and abetting. It's illegal

Get Outlook for iOS

Della Matthews — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Della Matthews Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Need to keep our eyes on each of our investments and not let government mess with these accounts. People depend on their investments to survive not to feed the beasts. Keep the quarterly reports.

Sent from my iPhone

Demetrius Sifniades Retired IT guy, active investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Demetrius Sifniades Moving from quarterly to semi-annual reporting is a terrible idea. We investors count on that information to make informed decisions. Public companies need to stay accountable to shareholders, and not hide information.

Demian Barrett — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Demian Barrett Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Removing the responsibility from public companies of having to provide Quarterly reports to its investors and the public at large is misguided and wrong.
Requirements that force a public company to divulge information that otherwise might remain hidden or delayed is the minimum needed to keep the owners/board honest.
For the SEC to remove an established and utilized investment tool from both public company that publishes it and the investor who reads it is inconsistent with its purpose.
Respectfully, cancel this inappropriate and misguided action of canceling the requirement of quartely reports. This rule is an essential reflection of the world most trusted and respected investment market- The US Stock market.

Respectfully

Demian Barrett

Dena Eady Vice President of Training, ADE Incorporated — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dena Eady I strongly oppose any proposal that would reduce the number of required annual or periodic reports that public companies must provide to investors. Transparency is essential for healthy capital markets and informed investment decisions. Individual investors, retirement savers, and institutional investors all depend on timely and accurate financial disclosures to evaluate a company's performance, risks, and future prospects. Reducing reporting requirements would limit access to critical information and weaken investor confidence in U.S. markets. If Americans are encouraged to invest in and become owners of public companies, they must have the information necessary to make informed decisions. Transparency is not a burden—it is a fundamental requirement of fair and efficient markets. As a member of the Motley Fool community, I believe strong disclosure standards protect investors and help maintain trust in our financial system. I do not support reducing reporting requirements and urge the Commission to preserve robust transparency standards for all public companies.

Dena Wise — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dena Wise Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is for everyone, it seems like stabbing yourself in the back, no one will have any ability to see where problems or work to fix them. It will cause not just non profit and individuals issues but could cause a domino effect of failures.

Dena M Wise

"For most of history Anonymous was a woman - Virginia Woolf

Denis Ferguson — Jun 23, 2026

Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Denis Ferguson I do not support the reduction from 4 times a year to twice a year for companies to report back to shareholders. I feel that this decrease in reporting would lead to some companies hiding their under-performance for longer. The reporting process allows companies to scrutinise exactly what they are doing and with current processes and computer programs to help it need not be a lengthy or onerous task. I therefore recommend keeping the quarterly reporting process.

Denise — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Denise Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Regarding SEC quarterly reports, I have 2 words - Healthsouth & Enron!

I was robbed of my retirement by Healthsouth. Please do not allow less reporting. It opens the door for even less transparency.

That only benefits the companies, especially those with something to hide.

Denise LeCroy
1980 Rex Lake Rd
Leeds, AL. 35094

Denise A. Retter — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Denise A. Retter Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a retired teacher, I depend on quarterly reports to ensure the health of my investments. Transparency is essential to good faith investments and guards against theft. Please don't change to annual only, quarterly is important for planning and portfolio management.

Ms. DENISE A RETTER

Sent from my Verizon, Samsung Galaxy smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

Denise Box — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Denise Box Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I watched the Enron debacle, seeing many friends suffer as a result of corporate greed. We cannot allow that to happen again to those who have so much more to lose.

Sent from my iPhone

Denise Campbell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Denise Campbell Quarterly fillings are a significant indicator for the small investor. Bi-annual reporting hinders the ability of non-institutional investor to determine the quality of an investment and the trajectory of thevstock.

Denise Chamberlin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Denise Chamberlin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Are you serious?! Disability people have to report and if their money is off even a little bit they are penalized. So they must survive in crumbs and you want to let the rich ass jerks cheat us ?! I'm sick of this mess, I hope those that vote for this end up in the same position and get hammered.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Denise Chamberlin — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Denise Chamberlin Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission: knock the bull off. If people who are disabled have to report constantly, why shouldn't the rich jerks that are trying to cheat the rest of America not have to as well. Making loopholes for them is sorry. We are watching and we are voting.

Denise Dion — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Quarterly Reporting Must be adhered to From: Denise Dion Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dear SEC:
You are the only organization between CEO's (Enron) and the individual stock holders- we depend on the SEC to monitor these corporate financials and investigate funny business. Of course, there is always the possibility you are in Trump's pocket and considering these changes per his instructions. The general public is so being screwed by this administration's grifting and blatant corruption. We need fire walls and the SEC is part of that layering as is Consumer Protection Agency which was saved by a judge who recently ruled against Trump administration dissolving that agency. We are not all sheeple out here and we do have the ability to think critically. I hope the SEC does the right thing.
Dr Denise Dion
ddion@unm.edu

Get Outlook for iOS

Denise Ferguson The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Denise Ferguson Reducing reporting from 4 times to 2 times a year will not benefit investors at all. It will only benefit reporting corporations in ways that permit them to hide critical information from investors at critical times. Six months between reports is too long. Three months provide better and necessary transparency. Do not change the reporting period.

Denise Florio — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Denise Florio Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 D Florio

---

Denise G. The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Denise G. Please don't change the existing reporting requirements - Less transparency doesn't eliminate uncertainty. It increases it. And when information finally does arrive, the surprises are likely to be bigger, the reactions sharper, and the volatility greater.

Denise Gordon — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Denise Gordon Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please support quarterly reports to keep democracy and corporate responsibility alive.

Denise Harburg-Johnson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Denise Harburg-Johnson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I Please keep quarterly reporting- transparency is very important to us small investors who have no insider info!!

Sent from my iPhone

Denise Haynes — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Denise Haynes Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Public companies have an obligation to the public to remain open at all times in regards to their internal/external workings and earnings. When things get hidden during a timeframe it looks like there is something to hide. As a U.S. citizen I have more confidence in companies that are transparent. Keep it Quarterly!

Denise Hoff — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Denise Hoff Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 There must to be a formal quarterly accounting of everything by all businesses by all CEOs especially with all the available avenues to find businesses being fraudulent.
The quarter accounting and sign off by CEO's should be mandatory and no one in our government should be manipulating this action.

Sent from my iPhone

Denise howe — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Denise howe Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Denise Howe
Do not make this change

Denise Johnson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Denise Johnson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Denise Johnson Finance Director
Please keep quarterly reporting requirements for all companies. We have the right to have access to financial information to make informed decisions.

Denise Kern — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Denise Kern Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 As a retired individual invested in the stock market it is important to keep things transparent as possible. Technology has accelerated the speed data can be collected and financial transactions thus quarterly reporting should not be a problem. It seems moving to semi annual reports will not protect investors but insider traders and the board of companies.

Sent from my iPhone

Denise Knuth — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Denise Knuth Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep things the way they are. We the American people are getting screwed over enough. We want to know exactly what you're doing.

---

denise kwong — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: denise kwong Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission
Quarterly reports are valuable to analysts and retail investors to ascertain how a company is performing. This enable to hide malfeasance and leaves investors in the dark till problems surface. We need more transparency not less.

---

denise lacy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: denise lacy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 They should do it monthly! Sick and tired of Americans being robbed and footing the bill!

Denise Lacy

Denise LeAnn Taylor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Denise LeAnn Taylor This proposal codifies graft and inside trading. We the tax payers and those of us who worked hard to afford to invest should not be forced to fly blind while Washington, its Lobbyists and the heads of companies take advantage of opacity in the market.

Denise Long The Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Denise Long Please do not weaken a consumer ability to stay informed on how the companies we invest in are doing. Maintain the current quarterly report requirement.

Denise Martinez — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Denise Martinez Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Hello,
I am writing in support of keeping the quarterly reports to maintain transparency and the protection, recommendations and actions that are needed to ensure fiscal accountability.
Thank you,
Denise Martinez
Massachusetts

Denise Patesel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Denise Patesel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep It Quarterly! Transparency is fully required. Six months is too long without oversight. Denise Patesel

---

Denise Peterson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Denise Peterson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need transparency, the manipulation of the voters has gone on too long. And this we know has been structured by the Republican party who will cheat and lie to get the results they want.

Denise Poole none — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Denise Poole Do not allow the companies to report less often. AI makes this much more simple now, and the investors of those companies deserve to be updated in a timely manner to make infomed decisions. You are just inviting ways to manipulate the system.

Denise Russell — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Denise Russell Quarterly reporting is essential to maintain transparency for investors and accountability for companies. Reducing reporting requirements to save companies some money or reduce pressure to manage quarter to quarter are ridiculous excuses to change reporting requirements. Investors need transparency, and increasing the timeframe between reporting would create more volatility, including possible shock announcements long after they should have been disclosed.

Denise S — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Denise S Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I am writing to express my strong support for maintaining the current practice of providing quarterly reports. There is no compelling reason to change the existing system, and as the saying goes, "if it ain't broke, don't fix it."

As a retiree, I rely on this information to monitor and protect my finances. Consistent reporting is essential for my financial security.

Best regards,

Denise Spreen, retired RN

Denise Silverberg — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Denise Silverberg Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Denise Silverberg, Rockville MD. I'm a retired. My life savings is invested in companies that will change their reporting frequency in immediate response to your decision; it won't be optional regardless of how you word it. My ability to live independently based on wise investments will be jeopardized, dare I say threatened, by this change in reporting frequency. I understand this is only one input to my advisers' investment decisions on my behalf. But it is a crucial input. If you make this change, I will need to redirect my advisers away from such companies. My portfolio is substantial. You will have harmed these companies. Retain quarterly reporting, abandon this decision.

Denise Sipola — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Denise Sipola Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need to keep quarterly reporting!
Thank you,
Denise Sipola
Sent from my iPhone

Denita Clausi — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Denita Clausi Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep quarterly reporting. I do not want to get reporting every 6 months. Why not do it in real time like every thing else? I voted for complete transparency yet banks are holding my deposit money longer. Keeping investors in the dark longer will not benefit me. So who benefits-- the billionaires? I recently closed my business, Clinical Alternatives,P.C. and Investment Alternatives, INC. Please listen to the people as that is your job after all. Denita Clausi

---

Dennis Barry Paget — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Barry Paget As a remote investor in the US market I think reports should be quarterly. Each company report adds to my understanding of the markets whether I hold that stock or not.

Dennis Brandt — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Brandt I am against reducing the reporting requirements.

Thank you.

Dennis Clark Motley Fool Community — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Clark Please do not switch from quarterly reporting to semiannual. Investors need to have regular feedback on corporate performance - transparency is critical. This is what it takes to be a publicly traded company.

Dennis Edwards — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dennis Edwards Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency is the best corruption disinfectant and dissuades misleading or fraudulent performance data influencing BUY, HOLD, or SELL decisions on Wall Street. Having worked as an engineer in a west coast startup in the 90s, I've seen first hand the corporate sales decisions that put an unethical thumb on the scale of stock valuations like "shipped product" for the quarter landing in cargo containers in the back lot. As onerous as the quarterly accounting of accurate and sometimes repetitive quarterly sales/performance reports, if you are a publicly traded company, that is simply the cost of doing business. Otherwise, stay a privately held company and good luck with acquiring bank and venture capital for growth and expansion.
Keep It Quarterly…

Sent from my iPad

Dennis Haddix — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Haddix Keep the current policy of four reports per year.

Dennis Holmes Retired / small business — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Holmes I am effectively retired, with my investments now providing my primary source of income. I make my investment decisions based on public information and require quality accurate information in order to make those decisions. I don't evaluate my own personal financial activities only once or twice a year. How am I supposed to make good decisions based on such infrequent reports about activities made by others? Please KEEP the requirement for quarterly reporting. If there are things that can be done to make reporting MORE transparent, please consider those as well.

Dennis Keibler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dennis Keibler Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 For the sake of this country, please, keep more frequent reporting!

Dennis Lemar NA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Lemar I stand against the choice of reducing the number of annual reporting periods from four to two. This proposal could harm all investors by increasing the time between reporting cycles.

Dennis Loy — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dennis Loy Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Please keep accountability quarterly. We work better that way.
Rev. Dennis Loy

Rev. Dennis Loy

“Another world is not only possible, she is on her way. On a quiet day, I can hear her breathing.” Arundhati Roy

---

Dennis McConville — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis McConville In an age where CFOs and CEOs require data to facilitate decision-making today which may impact outcomes in the future, moving to Semiannual reporting puts investors at a disadvantage, denying them readily available data with which to inform their decision making. Companies don't knock their financial reports together in a few days, it's an on-going process of collating data as sales and investment figures are available to the number crunchers. Changing the reporting regulation does not affect their bottom line one iota but disadvantages especially the smaller investors. Please leave it as is.

Dennis Mcgarry — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dennis Mcgarry Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly or more often.

Dennis Mitchell NONE — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Mitchell Thanks for the information and opportunity for this input.

Dennis Owen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dennis Owen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I don’t have time to research my investments 24/7. I rely of quarterly reports as a main source of information.

Please consider the average investor not the millionaire, billionaire, and trillionaire class

Sincerely

Dennis M Owen

Karen C Seaton
1425 Kriedeman Dr
Stoughton, WI. 53589
608-516-6150

Sent from my iPhone

Dennis Peters — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Peters Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Dennis Peters , Warren Pa. Retired. Corruption runs high in large companies , who knows what is getting hidden. It is in the best interest & fairness to all workers & retired people that these companies are held accountable. Keep the quarterly reviews.

Sent from my I phone

Dennis Real Estate — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Investors deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners

---

Dennis Senko — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Senko Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 If quarterly reporting is an inconvenience, too bad. If individuals and corporations would police themselves, we would not need laws. Unfortunately, that does not happen. Keep the quarterly reporting!

Dennis Shirlen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Dennis Shirlen Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it the way it is and quit trying to shaft the American stockholders!

Dennis Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Smith I don't support going to a twice a year financial reporting for public companies. I think the business environment is changing too fast and companies need to be communicating to their stockholders how they are going to address the changes. Keep the quarterly reporting structure.

Dennis Toth — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dennis Toth Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No, this will cause harm to many small investors. We need protection from corporate back room moves.

Dennis Toth
Investor

Dennis Tribble The Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dennis Tribble I believe that the reduction in reporting frequency will result in harm to the fiscal transparency on which I, as an investor, depend.

Dennis Werkmeister — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Dennis Werkmeister Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Leave the current reporting requirements in place. Mire important as regulations are lisening

Sent from my iPhone

Derek Gibbons, JD/MBA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Derek Gibbons, JD/MBA Consumer protections are the cornerstone to wealth creation and capital preservation. In my short time as a trader/investor, the steep learning curve was exclusively the result of my lack of knowledge of bad actors within the finance world. Removing those protections can only help those who wish to advance their bad aims which ultimately is net negative for us honest investors. Please reconsider.

Derek Green — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Derek Green At its heart, investing is ownership. When you own a piece of a business, you deserve regular, transparent communication from that business. Reducing reporting requirements weakens the connection between companies and their owners.

Derek Pedersen — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Derek Pedersen I do not condone the move to bi-annual public reports from the current total of four. As an investor of publicly traded companies these reports are critical in understanding the inner workings and performance trajectory, including the ability to track seasonal nuances that a broader reporting period would not present as readily.

Derek Phillips — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Derek Phillips Please do not reduce the requirement for public companies to report results to less than four times per year. Investors should have access to quarterly results in order to make more informed decisions with their money.

Desiree Smith — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Desiree Smith Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Desiree

Smith I am a Sr. Specialist in surveillance/compliance for a credit card company. My husband and I have been investing 40 years for retirement. Moving the reporting from quarterly to semi annually will affect how we make portfolio decisions. This is a very poor move and will increase the likelihood of fraud. Do not change quarterly reporting to the SEC!!!!

Sent from my iPhone

Destiny Beard — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Destiny Beard Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Destinee Beard, this matters to me because the cost is not worth the savings. Where this has already been implemented, it is not doing well. Already we have lack of transparency why would we create an opportunity for more.

Sent from my iPhone

Destiny Couter Financial Professional at Money Mavens — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Destiny Couter As someone who recently passed my Series 65 licensing exam, the historical patterns in securities legislation are fresh on my mind. Time and time again, we have seen bad actors exploiting loose regulations and loopholes, from early speculators in the 1920s-30s to narcos and terrorists in the modern era. In the age of information, reporting guidelines should, if anything, require more data, not less. Loosening reporting guidelines would only invite corporate exploitation, putting undue risk on individual investors. When deciding where to invest their hard-earned dollars, investors should have access to recent information in order to make an informed choice. Companies large enough to be publicly traded are certainly already producing quarterly internal reports. It is not too much to ask to prepare public-facing versions of these reports, especially given today's technology. Semi-annual reporting would only reduce retail investor confidence, which is already shaken by current volatility. Thank you for your consideration.

Devery Galloway — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Devery Galloway All corporations trading on the exchanges should continue filing quarterly earnings/loss reports!!! To go to semiannual report filings reduces transparency puts all investors at risk and more volatility in the market!!!

Devin Elmer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Devin Elmer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the reports quarterly. We have enough fraud already.

Sent from my iPhone

Devin Hruszko — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Devin Hruszko Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep things quarterly, we need not follow Britain into the depths of poverty but instead need to do the opposite with the same energy that won the American Revolution.

Sent from my iPhone

Devra K White — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Devra K White Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the QUARTERLY REPORTING in PLACE! Im retired now, but my family members will most assuredly be forced to count on their Retirement Savings in their Senior Citizen Days. Devra White

Sent from AT&T Yahoo Mail on Android

Devrin Batiste Sr. — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Devrin Batiste Sr. Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Devrin Batiste. I am a fitness trainer and a day trader and its very important to keep quarterly reporting so that we day traders can continue to make informed decisions about our trades.

Sent from my Galaxy

DeWayne Sims — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: DeWayne Sims Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Decreasing the frequency of reporting requirements hinders the individual investor ability to respond to negative or positive financial data and how a company plans to address issues. Individual investors are already at a large disadvantage. This change will only magnifies this disadvantage.

Dhulani — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Dhulani I believe in maintaining the current reporting standards which allow for an adequate external view of a Company's activities which also allows the public and financial sectors to make informed decisions on their investments.

Di Binder — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Di Binder Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep quartet companies reporting- I want as much transparency as possible! Taking it to every six months is criminal!! This would encourage even more insider trading at the expense of the little guy!!

Diane Binder and Ron Schmidt

Sent from my iPhone

Di Rhodie — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Di Rhodie Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 SEC I want to keep the reports Quarterly. We are being fleeced by our government in everything they take away from the citizens of United States. Having reports quarterly, would hopefully hold SEC accountable for any mistakes or any illegal activity. Quit screwing over the folks that are already trying to keep their heads above water! No more corporate greed!

Diallo Stevens — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diallo Stevens I do not support reduced reporting. Being a shareholder is being an owner. Owners of any business deserve full clarity on the businesses they own. Reducing the reporting requirements allows significant risk. Reducing them by 50% is extremely risky. Thank you

---

Diana — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Diana Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Just another way to rip off the people of this country. Do we need a class action lawsuit? We're ready if needed.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Diana Bauder — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diana Bauder The market is risky as it is, especially for us small retail investors. After Enron and many other giant failures that cost the average investor a lot of money. Transparency is of the utmost importance.

Diana Britton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Diana Britton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 No. The SEC must continue to report quarterly so the system cannot be corrupted to circumvent * Olin’s r the benefit of only some.

Sent from Gmail Mobile

Diana Butchko, a Motley Fool Investor — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diana Butchko, a Motley Fool Investor Please keep the current requirements for companies to post quarterly progress for investors to review. Cutting it down to two per year makes it easier for the companies but less transparent for stockholders. It was already decided upon in the past, let's keep it this way. There are enough companies that try to hide issues from stock holders. Don't make it easier for these unscrupulous actions to take place.

Diana Cincinello — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diana Cincinello As long term investors for our retirement, children, and grandchildren interests such has higher education, housing, and sound financial decisions; we want to continue having timely information about companies we are investing in. Quarterly reports let us know the health of our investments. My husband and I were business owners until his retirement. It's the frequency of monthly, quarterly, and yearly reports that provides crucial timely information and accountability. The SEC needs to keep quarterly reports in place.

Diana Fogleman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diana Fogleman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Diana Fogleman, retired teacher and tax professional: I am against this as it does not give investors like myself timely information needed to invest, re-balance or withhold. It is my money to deal with, and quarterly reporting would not allow me the opportunity to do so in a beneficial manner

---

Diana Fraley — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diana Fraley Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It should be done monthly not 4 times a year!!! Transparency is necessary!!!!

Diana Jennings — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Diana Jennings Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Thus isn’t right. That should not be allowed at all. I think I might sell all my stock if it does happen. That total is 984 million right now. I have other places that would make better money anyway. I’m just letting them know if they go dark they can keep their stock. The markets overseas are better by far.

Get Outlook for iOS

---

diana Johnson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: diana Johnson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it as is.

Diana Ledford — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Diana Ledford Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep it Quarterly.

DIANA PORTER — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: DIANA PORTER Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Do not change the quarterly reporting! Step up the work a d put more of them in jail!

---

diana quaranto — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: diana quaranto Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 The average American is forced to report their income, if self emploted, quarterly. Why do companies find the need to go dark? Does it allow time to hide their income. or skim of the top. or review taxable loop holes? Stand accountable!!!!

Diana Reilly, member of Motley Fool Private investor, Motley Fool — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diana Reilly, member of Motley Fool I do not believe public company reporting should be reduced to twice/year.

Diana Schowalter Accounting — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diana Schowalter I am concerned with semi-annual reporting versus quarterly. I have been on both sides of the reporting. Although, I hated the pressure of the quarterly reporting, justifying so much, the stockholders have the right to know how the business is performing and if there is a downward turn. I know there is information going out on a monthly basis (at least in the past), but it is not the same. However, I hate the short-term focus on the quarterly earnings. Strategy takes time, business should be long-term focused but address immediate hardships such as tariffs, inflation, economy, etc. I left the public sector because of the short-term pressures. I believe in performing for the long haul. You will need to make investments for long-term success.

Diana Scott — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Diana Scott Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Transparency and accountability are crucial and necessary for investors. Anxiety is is high enough for an investor without being in the dark for 6 months.

Sent from my iPhone

Diana Spencer — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diana Spencer Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Stay transparent, no darkness, keep the reporting in the light!!!

Diana Wallace — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Diana Wallace Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Maintain transparency and keep quarterly reporting!

Diane Crater — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Diane Crater Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We need to know the truth and they need to report it. Giving them more opportunity for fraud is not the direction we should be going.

Keep it at quarterly reporting!

Diane Crater

Diane Daniel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diane Daniel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep Quarterly reporting!

Diane Daniel Keep Quarterly reporting! — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diane Daniel Keep it

Diane Donaldson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diane Donaldson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 You are pathetic or maybe it's just pure arrogance to think that the truth wouldn't come out. More money for the rich and the public with Investments gets robbed. Typical elitists thievery. You all have been exposed again. when will you realize there are people out there watching you and they expose you every chance they get. Find a backbone you know this is wrong get rid of this bill. Join the side of honesty and integrity

---

Diane Droste — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Diane Droste Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Diane Droste, Systems Analyst, self-employed. This return to semi-annual reporting migjht slightly benefit the most wealthy and large corporations, but it would seriously disadvantage the small investor. It would promote fraud and insider trading by reducing transparency, and make the US a less reliable place to make investments in.

Diane Gage — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diane Gage Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 KEEP IT QUARTERLY!!
Diane Gage, Retired Self Employed Antique Jewelry Art Appraiser.
My stock dividends are a huge part of my monthly financial income/ support.
Reducing quarterly updates could be devastating. Stock holders watch the markets DAILY…we need up to date accountability. Why would the SEC GIVE CORPORATE A GIFT like this ?????

Protect us and keep the quarterly reporting in place.

Best,Diane

Diane Galante — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diane Galante Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Seriously STOP encouraging bull * do the job we pay you for - every quarter

Sent from my iPad

Diane Goldfarb — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Diane Goldfarb Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We have worked hard, invested in our country and are retired. Do not change the rules to steal our investments.

Diane Goldfarb, age 65 in Ohio

DIANE GRUMBINE — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: DIANE GRUMBINE Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 It has been played out in real life many times already, lack of oversight encourages corruption. Who is it that would like to get rid of quarterly reporting? The answer is the same people who will take advantage. We already know what will happen if quarterly reporting is removed as a guardrail to greed & corruption. There is a very good reason to pay attention to history. If I were to lose my retirement savings, through no fault of my own, to an unscrupulous greedy scheme it would ruin the rest of my life. Protection of the people is the point of having government. There is a rampant corruption epidemic in the American government happening in plain sight. Taking away this quarterly reporting guardrail now makes no sense unless your goal is to cheat & steal. History has played it out over and over. People with access to large sums of other people's money need oversight to stay honest. Thanks for using good commonsense and retain quarterly reporting.
Diane Grumbine, retired RN from Palmyra PA

Diane Gulbrand — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Diane Gulbrand Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Diane Gulbrand, Retired Nurse Practitioner.
Please continue quarterly reporting so that I can follow my investments closely. This is the least they can do if they are handling my money. Thank you!

Sent from my U.S.Cellular© Smartphone
Get Outlook for Android

Diane Holland — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diane Holland Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Businesses need to submit their quarterly Treasury Tax and Loan payments. Why not their quarterly reporting?

---

diane hudzik — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: diane hudzik Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Gve me a break. This country needs to organize and stop ALL sending. We must come together ! And show our power though unity against these money grubbers.

---

diane hudzik — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: diane hudzik Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Gve me a break. This country needs to organize and stop ALL sending. We must come together !

Diane Joan Loncar None — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: File No. S7-2026-15 From: Diane Joan Loncar Reports should be quarterly.

DIane Jolly — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: DIane Jolly Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Absolutely jerp quartrrly reporting no excuses with all the computers and instant transaction!!!!

Regards Diane Travis 2143690990 office

Diane Kessler — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diane Kessler Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting keeps information available to investors - and the public - that they need to assess companies' performance and integrity. Without it, a "public" company might as well be "private". It ought to be something required for a company to public. I want to know what companies my money is invested in are doing with it, and I think twice a year is not enough.
Diane Kessler Retired

Diane Liepins — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diane Liepins Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting helps me to evaluate companies and their performance in order to better invest my retirement funds. If the reporting moves to semiannually businesses may shield poor performance that could inform my decisions. I see no reason or benefit to the PUBLIC in making a change from current practices. All of the companies are currently submitting quarterly.
Diane Liepins, Retired

Sent from my iPad

Diane Lipson — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Diane Lipson Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 I have almost lost faith in the SEC entirely. That seems bad. The SEC needs to do its job, despite the political climate. If this passes, the free market will strangle.

Sent from my iPhone

Diane Liska — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diane Liska Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting and executive confirmation of financial reporting on a quarterly basis. These accountability measures protect organizations from corruption which leads to very significant consequences to investors and employees. Having worked for a company with a few people who were corrupt, these measures were critical to ensuring these bad players couldn't get away with bringing the whole, 100+ year old company down.

Diane Liska

Diane Manning — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diane Manning Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 This would be very bad for the economy and for common folks. The room for eras is huge. Just another way to rob the poor.

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Diane Manning — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Diane Manning Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities and Exchange Commission:
Please keep quarterly reports. We need to see what's going on with our investment. This is a good plan and has been successful. To change it would not be smart. Transparency is crucial. Otherwise fraud will inbound and a real mess will happen.

---

diane masi — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: diane masi Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 You should keep quarterly reporting because it protects everyone's financial well being.
Diane Masi concerned investor

Diane Morton — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 From: Diane Morton Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Keep the quarterly reporting. It keeps everyone honest and it makes my bookkeeping easier. There is NO REASON under the sun to change the report requirements. They are working just fine for all of us who are not in power.

Sent from my iPhone

---

diane nepomnick — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: diane nepomnick Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 What you're trying to do is give big investors/insiders an advantage over smaller investors who don't have the same access. That is lazy and wrong. You already have the numbers, so publish them for all to see. Its not really saving time, and as a public company, we have the right to know

Sent from my iPad

Diane Peters — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diane Peters Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Quarterly reporting is valuable when it's used as a tool for truth, accountability, and course correction rather than pressure or performance theater. For small and mid-sized businesses like mine, consistent reporting creates rhythm — it forces us to pause, evaluate what's working, and make adjustments before small issues become expensive ones. It also builds trust with lenders, partners, and the people who rely on us.

As someone who leads a commercial cleaning company in Connecticut, I see firsthand how quarterly reporting protects both the business and the people behind it. It keeps our operations transparent, our finances disciplined, and our long-term goals aligned with reality. Stewardship matters, and reporting is part of that stewardship.

Diane F. PetersOwner, JCHI CleaningPresident,
Dpeters@jchicleaning.com

Community Board: Why it matters to me: Quarterly reporting keeps my business healthy, my team supported, and my decisions grounded in facts rather than assumptions.

Sent from my iPhone

---

diane pittman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: diane pittman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 TRANSPARENCY !!!

---

diane ribble — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: diane ribble Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 You better keep quarterly reporting you go dark -you go away for good!! the Trump admin will replace you-& erase you

---

Diane Rose — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: My view on Rule S7-2026-15 From: Diane Rose Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 To the Securities

and Exchange Commission:

The new SEC proposal would end quarterly reporting. Letting public companies go dark would be good for insiders who have access — and bad for everyday investors like me, my portfolio, savings and retirement investments are at stake!

Diane Sampsel — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: Comment on S7-2026-15 From: Diane Sampsel Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 We absolutely need quarterly reports. We are trusting in the latest financial information to help grow our investments. Don't make it harder than it already is!

Diane Seider — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Diane Seider Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Diane Seider and I reside in Saint Charles, MO. I am retired and want to keep quarterly reporting so I can best track my investments.

Sincerely,
Diane Seider

Diane Shaw — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: Diane Shaw Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Diane Cooper Shaw
Client Service Specialist
We need to keep EVERYONE accountable. There were very serious events that made this reporting schedule necessary. We need to keep it as is.....people will cheat...they need to be caught sooner than later.

Diane Cooper Shaw
410-499-6657

Diane Sherman — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diane Sherman Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 My name is Diane Sherman, retired, and I definitely want the SEC to continue companies reporting quarterly statements and not switch to semi annually. Apart from possible fraudulent activity, the real reason is the pace of the stock market and changes in it and companies that happpen monthly, let alone after every six months. We deserve accurate up to date reports in which to base our investment decisions. Keep the reporting at three months.

Sent from my iPhone

DIANE SILVA — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comment From: DIANE SILVA Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 Retain quarterly reporting at a minimum! Or, increase to monthly reporting. Decreasing visibility only increases opportunity for cheating and fraud! Good Lord, don't decrease visibility and allow more crooks like Bernie Mafoff steal our investments! Honest people lose !! Thank you!
D. Silva

Yahoo Mail: Search, Organize, Conquer

Diane Soderstrom — Jun 23, 2026
Subject: S7-2026-15 Comments From: Diane Soderstrom Affiliation: Jun. 23, 2026 After living through Enron
Need more accountability NOT LESS

Diane Sollberger — Jun 23, 2026
